Shakspe. Richard III. as a mist is a multitude of small but solid globules, which therefore descend; so a vapour, and therefore a wave also, is nothing else but a congeries of very small and concave globules, which therefore ascend, to that height in which they are of equal weight with the air, where they remain suspended, till by some motion in the air broken, they descend in solid drops; either small, as in a mist, or bigger, when many of them run together, as in rain.

Grew’s Cologania.

Clouds are the greatest and most consumable of all the meteors, as furnishing water and plenty to the earth. They consist of very small drops of water, and are elevated a good distance above the earth. A cloud is nothing but a mist flying high in the air, as a mist is nothing but a cloud here below.

Locke.

How vapours, turn’d to clouds, obscure the sky; and clouds, diffus’d, the thirsty ground supply.

Reformation.

The dawn is overcast, the morning low and Heavily in clouds brings on the day. Addison.

2. The veins, marks, or flains, in fomes of other bodies.

3. Any state of obscurity or darkness.

The poets may of inspiration boast,
Their rage, ill govern’d, in the clouds is lost. Waller.

How can I see the brave and young
Fall in the cloud of war, and fall no more? Addison.

4. Any thing that spreads wide as a crowd, a multitude.

The objection comes to no more than this, that amongst a cloud of witness, there was one of no very good reputation. Atterbury.

7. CLOUD. m. d. [from the noun.]

1. To make dark with clouds; to cover with clouds; to obscure.

2. To make of fallen and gloomy appearance.

Be not differenc’d then, nor cloud thou looks, That now are more cheerful and free. What false and false is, a crow’d brow? Pope.

3. To obscure; to make less evident.

If men would not exult vapours to cloud and darken the clearest truth, as man could mist his way as well, without a cloud as with a rain. Dryden.

4. To variegate with dark veils.

The hand’s smooth and plain, Made of the clouded olive’s easy grain.

Pope.

7. CLOUD. m. n. To grow cloudy; to grow dark with clouds.

CLO’DERRY. m. f. [from cloud and berry; clemensius.] The name of a place, in Ireland.

CLO’DAPT. adj. [from cloud and cap.]

Topped with clouds; touching the clouds.

The clouded towers, the gorgeous palaces, The solemn temples, the great globe itself, Yes, all which it inherits, shall diffuse. Shakspe.

CLOUDEMPELING. adj. [A word formed in imitation of stipper or stip; hill, dark, but the mot is supposed to be collected.

Health to both kings, attended with a rose Of cannon, echoed’ th’ attir’d shore; With loud remembrance of his thunder, prove Dactyls the feet of clouding Jove. Waller.

Supplicating name

They just complaint to cloud-compelling Jove. Dryden.

CLO’DILY. adv. [from closely.]

1. With clouds; darkly.

2. Obscurly; not perspicuously.

Some had rather have good discipline deliver’d plainly, by way of precepts, than cloudily envelop’d in silken Specimens.

Shakspe.

He was command’d to write to cloudily by Corinthus.

CLO’DINES. n. f. [from closely.]

1. The state of being covered with clouds; darkness.

You have such a February face,
So full of fruit, of storm, and cloudiness. Shakspe.

The situation of this island exposes it to a continual cloudiness, which in the summer renders the air colder, and in the winter warmer. Herrick on Conjunctions.

2. Want of brightnes.

I saw a cloudy Hungarian diamond made clearer by lying in a cold liquor; wherein, he affirmed, that upon keeping it longer, the stone would lose more of its cloudiness.

Bylge.

CLOUDLESS. adj. [from cloud.]

Without clouds; clear; unclouded; bright; luminous; light-shone; pure; undarkened. Shakspe.

This Partridge soon shall view in cloudless skies, When next he gapes at the bird in eyes. Pope.

How many such furies must be in the vast extent of space, a naked eye in a cloudless night may give us some faint glimpses. Chaucer.

CLO’DY. adj. [from cloud.]

1. Covered with clouds; obscured with clouds; confuting of clouds.

As Moles entered into the tabernacle, the cloudy pillar descended, and stood at the door. Exodus.

2. Dark; obscure; not intelligible.

If you content yourself frequently with words instead of ideas, or with cloudy and confused notions of things, how impenetrable will that darkness be! Wotton in the Mind.

3. Gloomy of look; not open, nor cheerful.

So my storm-beaten heart likewise is cheerr’d
With that fun-shine, when cloudy looks are clear’d. Spenser.

Witness my son, now in the shade of clouds, Whose bright outshining beams the cloudy vesture. Hath in eternal darkness folded up. Shakspe.

Marked with spots or veins.

5. Not bright, wanting luire.

I saw a cloudy diamond.

Boyle.

CLOVE. n. f. [The preterite of clover.] See To CLEAVE.

Gyeon’s angry blade to fierce did play
On th’ other’s helm, which as Titan’s stone,
That quite it cleave his plum’d crest in twain.

Paley’s Querius.

CLO’VE. n. f. [clow, Fr. a nail, from the similitude of a clove to a nail.]

1. A valuable spice brought from Ternate in the East Indies. It is the fruit or seed of a very large tree.

Clove seems to be the rudiment or beginning of a fruit growing upon clove-trees.

Dru’s Vagary.

2. Some of the parts into which garlic separates, when the outer skin is torn off. [In this sense it is derived from clove, the preterite of cleave.]

’Tis mortell in an onion to devour
Each clove of garlic is a sacred foot. Taint’s ‘f尿.

CLOVE-GILFLOWER. n. s. [from its smell, like cloves.]

This grass may be divided into three classes, 1. The clove-gillyflower, or carnation. 3. The pink. 3. The sweet William. The carnation, or clove-gillyflower, is a sort of anemone, divided into four classes. The first, called flaxies, having two colours only, and their stripes long, going quite through the leaves. The second, called bizaris, have flowers striped or variegated with three or four different colours. The third are piquettes; these flowers have always a white ground, and are spotted with scarlet, red, purple, or other colours.

The fourth are called painted ladies; these have their petals of a red or purple colour on the upper side, and are white underneath. Of each of these classes there are numerous varieties. The true clove-gillyflower has been long in use for making a cordial syrup. There are two or three varieties commonly known as the Galliano’s, which differ greatly in goodness; some having very little scent, when compared with the true sort.

Miller.

CLOVEN. part. pret. [from clove.] See To CLEAVE.

There is Anidus, lift you what work he makes Among your cloven army. Shakespeare.

Now he pdf high

The cloven oaks and lofty pines do lie. Waller.

A chapp-fallen beaver, howly dressing.

The cloven helmet, and arch of victory.

Dryden.

CLO’VEN-FOOTED. adj. [cloven and foot.]

CLOVEN-HOOPED. or hoofed. Having the foot divided into two parts; not a round hoof; bifolious.

There are the bifolous or cloven-footed; at teeth and beavers. Brown’s Vagary Errors.

The cloven-footed beast is half of Mist’s family.

Dryden.

Great variety of water-fowl, both whole and cloven-footed, frequent the waters. Ray in the Cis.

CLOVER. n. s. [more properly clover-grass.]

CLOVER-GRASS. n. s. clover; clarted, Sax.

1. A species of true clover.

The even mead, that eark brought sweetly forth The fleecy cowslip, burnet, and green clover.

Green salt, and mallowing clover for th’ sake.

Shakespeare.

Clover improves land, by the great quantity of cattle it maintains. Martyn’s Husbandry.

My Blouezenda is the billiest lack, Than primerose sweeter, or the clover-grass. Gay.

2. To live in CLOVER, is to live luxuriously; clover being extremely delicious and fattening to cattle.

Well, Laurens, was the night in clover spent? Ogil.

CLO’VERED, adj. [from clover.]

Covered with clover.

Flocks thick-nibbling thro’ the clover’d vale, Thurnayn.

CLOUCH. n. f. [clough, Saxon.] The cleft of a hill; a cliff. In composition, a hilly place.

CLOUCH. n. f. [In commerce.] An allowance of two pounds in every hundred weight for the turn of the scale that the commodity may hold out weight when sold by retail.

CLOUT. n. f. [clout, Saxon.]

1. A cloth for any mean use.

His garment nought but many raged clouts, With thorns together plait’d, and patched was.

Spenser.

A clout upon that head, Where late the dissident flood. Shakespeare.

In pow’s of flightle and a clout, Where he pleas’d, to blot it out Swift.

2. A patch on a cloth.

Anciently the mark of white cloth at which archers shot.

He drew a good bow; he shot a fine hooft; he would have clapt in the clout at twelve score. Shak.

4. An iron plate to keep an axle-tree from wearing.
To Clout. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To patch; to mend coarsely.
2. To rough, or to make ragged.

I thought he slept, and put
My cloven brogues round my feet, whose ruddy Answer'd my feet too loud. Shakespeare.

The dull strain.
Trends on it daily with his cloven hoof. Milton.

2. To cover with a cloth.

Milk some unhappy eye.
While cloven leg her hurt doth shew. Spenser.

To join awkwardly or coarsely together.

Many instances of one meaning cloven up together.

Clo'tered. participle adj. Congealed; coagulated: corruptly used for ecleted.

I've seen her skin the cloven cream,
And prettied from spongoy curds the milky dream. Gray.

Clo'terly. adj. [probably by corruption from butterly.] Clumsy; awkward; as, a clumsily follow.

The single wheel plough is a very clorlytly fort.
Morison's Husbandry.

Crowned. n. f. [imagined by Skinner and Janius; to be contracted from colouen. It seems rather a Saxon word, corrupted from bowen; bow, Dut. A word nearly of the same import.]

1. A ruffick; a country fellow; a cliur.
He came with all his cloven, bound upon his jadges. Sidney.

The cloven, a boith poul, rude, ununowed crew, with Barous furtice to the load fommew new. Dryden.

2. A coarse, ill-bred man.
In youth a comb, and in age a claw. Spel. A country squire, represented with no other vice but that of being a clown, and having the pronoun accent.

Clo'wnery. n. f. [from cloven.] Ill-breeding; charlinsness; rudeness; bratality;

The fool's conceit had both clowerny and illnature. L'Estrange.

Clo'wnish. adj. [from clown.]

1. Confounding of rufficks or cloven.
Young Silvia beats her breast, and cries aloud
For forcause from the clowenish neighbourhood. Dryden.

2. Coarse; rough; rugged.
But with his cloven hands their tender wings He brustheft of. Spenser's Fairy Queen.

3. Uncivil; ill-bred; ill-mannered.
What if we essay'd to deal
The clowenish fool out of your father's court? Shakespeare.

Clumsy; ungainly.

With a grave look, in this odd equipage,
The clowenish mimick travellers the stage. Prior.

Clov'nesly. adv. [from clowenish.] Coarsely; rudely; brutally.

Clov'nesness. n. f. [from clowenish.]

1. Rudicity; coarseness; unpollished rude-ness.

Even his Dorick dialect has an incomparable sweetness in its clowenish, Dryden.

If the boy have not some legs very gracefully,
A dancing manner will cure that defect, and set off that plainness which the à-la-mode people call clowenish. Locke.

2. Incivility; brutality.

Clov'nes Mustard. n. f. An herb. Dill.

To Cloy. v. a. [unclench, Fr. To nail up; to flop up.

1. To latiate; to hate; to fill beyond desire; to feast; to fill to loathing.

The length of those speeches had set Emily Py-
Vol. 1,
CLUSTER. n. f. [clitryt, Sax. klittor, Dutch.] 1. A bunch; a number of things of the same kind growing or joined together. 2. A number of animals gathered together. As bees form forth their populous colonies about the hive into clusters. Milton's Paradise Lost. There with their clustering feet together eluding, And a long cluster from the laurel hung. Dryden. 3. A body of people collected: used in contempt. As he lov'd him; but like beasts, and coward nobles, gave way to your clusters, who did shoot out the city. Shakespeare. My friend took his station among a cluster of mobs, who were making themselves merry with their bettered. Addison. To CLUSTER. v. n. [from the noun.] To grow in bunches; to gather into bunches; to congregate. As forth from thickest the clustering vines. Milton. Of clustering evergreens, to my long rights. For clustering grapes are the peculiar cure. Dryden. Or from the forest falls the clust'ring snow. Myriads of gems. Thomson's Winter. To CLUSTER. v. a. To collect any thing into bodies. CLUSTER GRAPES. n. f. [from cluster and grape.] The small black grape is by some called the currant, or clusterripe; which I reckon the forerunner of the black sort. Mortimer's Husbandry. CLUSTERY. adj. [from cluster.] Growing in clusters. To CLUTCH. v. a. [of uncertain etymology.] 1. To hold in the hand; to grip; to grasp. As this a digger I see before me, the handle 'twas my hand? Come, let me clutch thee. They. Like moles within us, heave and cast about; and, till they foot and clutch their prey, they never are at school. Herbert. 2. To clasp; to clutch. A man may set the piece together in his head, and clutch the whole globe at one intellectual grasp. Collson on Thoughts. 3. To contract to; to clutch; to double the hand; so as to be seized and hold fast. Not that I have the power to clutch my hand, when his fair angels would fatten my palm. Shakespeare's King John. CLUTCH. n. f. [from the verb.] 1. The grip; grasp; seizure. 2. Generally, in the plural, the paws, the talons. It was the hard fortune of a cock to fall into the clutches of a cat. L'Estrange. 3. Hands, in a sense ofrapacity and cruelty. Your greedy flattering to devour, Before twas in your cluster's power. Holinshed. Set up the cluster on crotchets. Gainst those who have us in their clusters. Holinshed. I must have great release, and little care of myself, if it ever more come near the clusters of such a Stinking fool. 4. CLUTTER. n. f. [see Clatter.] A noise; a bumble; a bussy tumult; a hurry; a clamour. A low word. He saw what a cluster there was: with huge, over-grown pots, pans, and spits. L'Estrange. The favor of the fair begins to pearl; is very humourous and makes great cluster, till he has windows on his bread and butter. King, Prithis, 'tis why all this cluster? Swifts. Why ever in these raging fits? To CLUSTER. v. n. [from the noun.] To make a noise, or bumble. CLUSTER-LING. n. f. [see Clatter.] An injection into the anus. If nature relieves by a discharge, without filling the strength of the patient, it is not to be fretted, but presently gored by emollient clatters. Swifts. To COAC'ERVATE. v. a. [coac'ertor, Latin.] To heap up together. The coloines of clusters in bodies, whether the cluster be accurate or diffused. Bacon's Natural History. COAC'ERVATION. n. f. [from coac'ervate.] The act of heaping, or state of being heaped, together. To the fixing of it is the equal spreading of the tangible parts, and the close coherency of them. Bacon's Natural History. COACH. n. f. [coaches, Fr. cœches, among the Hungarians, by whom this vehicle is said to have been invented. Minshew.] A carriage of pleasure, or state, distinguished from a chariot by having seats facing each other. Badly attended for her in a coach, to carry her abroad to see some sights. Sidney. Then give humility a coach and fix. Paper. Suppose that last week my coach was within an inch of overturning in a smooth even way, and drawn by very gentle horses. Swifts. If a better would you fit? Then give humility a coach and fix. Paper. To COACH. v. n. [from the noun.] To carry in a coach. The need'd lobby clings to all he meets. Coach'd, carted, trod upon; now loosed, now fast, And carry'd off in some dog's tail at last. Paper. COACH-BOX. n. f. (coach and box.) The feat on which the driver of the coach sits. Her father had two coaches: when one was in the coach, if the coach dwelt but the least, he used to hire it. Arbuthnot's History of John Bull. COACH-HIRE. n. f. Money paid for the use of a hired coach. You exclaim as loud as those that praise, for scraps and coach-hire, a young noble's play. Dryden. My expenses in coach-hire make no small article. Swifts. COACH-HOUSE. n. f. (coach and house.) The house in which the coach is kept from the weather. Let him lie in the stable or the coach-house. Swifts. COACH-MAKER. n. f. (coach and maker.) The artificer whose trade is to make coaches. COACH-MAN. n. f. (coach and man.) The driver of a coach. Thy nag, the least things alive, So very hard thou lov'st to drive; I heard thee anxious coachman say, It shall three more in whips than hays. Price. She commanded her trembling coachman to drive her chariot near the body of her king. South. To COACT. v. n. [from con and edf.] To act together; to act in concert. Not used. But if I tell how these two old fools, Shall I not lie in publishing a truth? Shakespeare. COACTION. n. f. [coa'tus, Lat.] Compulsion; force, either restraining or impelling. It had the passions in perfect subjection; and though its command over them was persuasive and political, yet it had the force of coercion and despotism. South. COACTIVE. adj. [from coact.] 1. Having the force of restraining or impelling; compulsory; refractory. The Levitical priests in the old law, never arrogated unto themselves any temporal power. Raleigh. 2. Acting in concurrence. Obsolete. Imagination, With what's unreal thou confidest art. Shakespeare. COADJU'VANT. n. f. [from con and adju'vemum, Lat.] Mutual assistance. Dic. COADJU'TANT. n. f. [from con and adju'tant, Lat.] Helping; operating. Thracius coadju'tant, and the roar Of fierce Eurydycon. Phillips. COADJU'TOR. n. f. [from con and adju'tor, Lat.] 1. A fellow-helper; an assistant; an associate; one engaged in the assistance of another. I should not succeed in a project, whereof I have had no hint from my predecessors, or their fancies or coadjutors the critics. Dryden. Away the friendly coadjutor, coach'd Diff. A gowman of a different make, whom Pallis, once Vanella's tutor, had fix'd on for her coadjutor. Swifts. 2. [In the canons' law.] One who is imperatively or appointed to perform the duties of another. A bishop that is unprofitable to his diocese ought to be deposed and no coadjutor assigned him. Ayl. COADJU'VANCY. n. f. [from con and adju'vans, Lat.] Help; concurrent help; contribution of help; co-operation. Crystal is a mineral body, in the difference of figures, made of a lentous percolation of earth, drawn from the molten pure and limpid juice thereof, owing to the coldness of the earth (some concursence and coincidence, but not immediate determination and efficiency. Brown's Vegetable Errors. COADUNATION. n. f. [from con, ad, unio, Lat.] The conjunction of different substances into one mass. Bodies seem to have an intrinsic principle of, or corruption from, the concurrence of particles ended with contrary qualities. Hale's Origin of Mankind. To COAG'MENT. v. a. [from con and agmen, Lat.] To congregate or heap together. I have only found the particle in use. Had
To COAGULATE. a. n. [from coagula.] To force into concretions; as, by the affusion of some other sub stance, to turn milk.

Roiled in wrath and fire, and that confounded with coagula-gress. Shakspere.

Cohesiveness ever fill'd in spirits attenuate, which the cold doth coagul and coagulates. Bacon's Natural History.

Biliousness found in burs, or coagulated mucus, in some fissions. Woodward's Natural History.

The milk in the stomachment, which is coagulated by the rumen, is again dissolved and reduced fluid by the gall in the ducting,-v. Shakespeare.

To COAGULATE. a. n. To run into concretions, or conglacations.

Spirit of wine cominized with milk, a third part of wine, and two parts milk, coagulat little, but minglest; and the spirit swins not above. Bacon.

About the third part of the oil which was driven over into the receiver, did there coagulate into a whitish body, almost like butter. Boyle.

COAGULATION. n. f. [from coagula.] 1. Concretion; coagulation; the act of coagulating; the state of being coagulated.

2. The body formed by coagulation.

As the substance of coaguland is not merely salins, nothing disolves them but what penetrates and relaxes at the same time. Arbuthnot.

COAGULATIVE. adj. [from coagula.] That which has the power of causing concretion, or coagulation.

To manifest the coagulating power, we have sometimes in a minute accreted the fluidity of new milk, and turned it into a coagulated substance, only by exertiously mingling with it a few drops of good strong alcohol. Boyle.

COAGULTOR. n. f. [from coagula.] That which causes coagulation.

Coagulators of the humour, are those things which expel the fluid parts, as in the case of incrustation, or thickening; and by those things which suck up some of the fluid parts, as phlegm, &c. Arbuthnot.

COAL. n. f. [col. Sax. kal, Germ. kele, Dut. kal, Danith.]

1. The common fossil fuel.

COAL-is a black, pulpy, inflammable matter, dug out of the earth; serving for fuel, common in Europe, though the English coal is of most repute. Of the species of pit-coal is called cannel, or sand coal, which is found in the northern counties; hard, glossy, and light, and not to cleave into thin flakes, and, when kindled, yields a constant blaze till it be burnt out. Chambers.

Coal is solid, dry, opaque, inflammable substance, found in large quantities, splitting horizontally more easily than in any other direction; of a glossy hue, soft and friable, not fusible, but easily inflammable, and leaving a large residuum of ash.

But, age, enforced, falls by her own comfort:
As coal to ashes, when the spirit's spent. Dryden.

We shall meet with the same mineral bulged in coals, that elsewhere we found in marl. Wren's Search of Natural History.

2. The cinder of scorched wood; charcoal. Whatever loses itself to a body, as it returneth not again to that it was, may be called alteration major; as when chryse is made of curds, or each of wood, to black pitch. Bacon.

3. Fire; anything inflamed or ignited. You are no sooner, nor Tha is the coal of fire upon the earth. Shut he kindled a like a burning coal. Dryden.

To COAL. v. w. [from the noun.]

1. To burn wood to charcoal.

Add the inner part of charcoal in buying the wood for this service; selling, framing, and piling it to be burnt; in fetching the same, when it is coaled, through such far, fool, and cumbrous ways. Cerven's Survey of Cornwall.

Charcoal of poors, coaled into great pieces, lasts longer than ordinary charcoal. Bacon.

2. To delineate with a coal.

Mavell's wood and rubs out thines upon the wall near the picture. Camden.

COAL-BLACK. adj. [coad and black.] Black in the highest degree; of the colour of a coal.

As burning, Esta, from his flowing flow, both cloth not steady pieces broke; and ragged ribs of mountains molten near. Enwrapt in coal-black clouds and filthy smoke. Fairt Queen.

Ethiopians and negroes become coal-black from fulliguious effusiveness, and complexional tinctures. Franklin.

Coal-black his colour, but like jet it shine; His legs and hands to steely work. Dryden.

COAL-BOX. n. f. [coal and box.] A box to carry coals to the fire.

Leaves a sail of dirty water, a coal-box, a bottle, a muff, and such other unsightly things. Swift.

COAL-PIFISH. n. f. [sulfur niger.] A species of beardless-glands.

COAL-MINE. n. f. [coal and mine.] A mine in which coals are dug; a coal-pit.

Springs injure land, that flow from coal-mines. Marter.

COAL-PIT. n. f. [from coal and pit.] A pit made in the earth, generally to a great depth, for digging coals.

A mass of molten kindy, found in the kindling of a coal. Woodward.

COAL-STONE burns easily, and burns freely; but holds and endures the fire much longer than coal.

COAL-WORK. n. f. [coal and work.] A colliery; a place where coals are found.

There is a vast treasure in the old English, from whence authors may draw constant supplies; as our officers make their fourth remit from the coals-mines, and the mines. Felton.

COALERY. n. f. [from coal.] A place where coals are dug.

Two fine stabile were found hanging from a black spout, at a deserted vault in Kevelo county. Woodward.

To COALESC. a. n. [coalesce, Lat.]

1. To unite in mateles by a spontaneous approximation to each other.

When vapours are raised, they hinder not the transparency of the air, being divided into parts too small to cause any reflection in their superfluities; but when they begin to coalesce, and constitute globules, these globules become of a convenient size to reflect some colours. Newton.

2. To grow together; to join.

COALESCENCE. n. f. [from coalesce.] The act of coalescing; coagulation; union.

COALITION. n. f. [from coal and coalition, Lat.] Union in one mass or body; conjunction of separate parts in one whole.

The world's a mass of heterogeneous confederations, and every part thereof a coalition of distinct and inimitable varieties. Gibbon.

In the first coalition of a people, their project is not great: they provide laws for their present existence. Hall.

'Tis necessary that these organized atoms of body and universe unite into great masses; without such a coalescence the chaos must have returned to all eternity. Bentley.

COALY. adj. [from coal.] Containing coal.

Or coal, Time, or ancient hallow'd, Dec. Milton.

COAPTATION. n. f. [from con and app. Lat.] The adjustment of parts to each other.

If a man canst him to the extremity of an ad, he must blame and impute it to himself, that he has thus coarcted or restrained himself to far. Agis.

COARCTATION. n. f. [from coarc.] Confinement; restraint to a narrow space.

The greatest winds, if they have no coarctation, or blow not in, blow, give an interior found. Bacon.

COARCTATION. n. f. [from coarc.] Contraction of any space.

Straiten the artery neu too much, provided the feeling of it be not more; the vessel will continue to beat, below or beyond the coarctation. Ray.

COARCTATION. n. f. [from coarc.] Refrain of liberty.

Electro is opposed not only to coalescence, but also to coalescence, or determination to one. Beaumarch.

CORESE. adj.

1. Not refined; not separated from impurities or baser parts.

I feel Of what anger metal ye are molded. Shakespeare.

2. Not soft or fine, made of cloth, of which the threads are large.

Rude; uncivil; rough of manners.

Gros; not delicate.

'Tis not the coarse eye of human law.

That binds their peace. Tereus.

INELY, rude; unpollished.

I judge of Virgil against myself, for prefacing to every, in my stanz' Engish, his beautiful expressi ons. Dryden.

6. Not nicely expert; unfinished by art or education.

Political rules may be useful to such as are remote from advice, and to coarse practitioners, which they are obliged to make use of. Arbuthnot.

7. Mean;
A. A sort of fish; called also for

B. A sort of fish called also for

C. A sort of fish; called also for

D. A sort of fish called also for

E. A sort of fish; called also for

F. A sort of fish called also for

G. A sort of fish; called also for

H. A sort of fish called also for

I. A sort of fish; called also for

J. A sort of fish called also for

K. A sort of fish; called also for

L. A sort of fish called also for

M. A sort of fish; called also for

N. A sort of fish called also for

O. A sort of fish; called also for

P. A sort of fish called also for

Q. A sort of fish; called also for

R. A sort of fish called also for

S. A sort of fish; called also for

T. A sort of fish called also for U. A sort of fish; called also for

V. A sort of fish called also for

W. A sort of fish; called also for

X. A sort of fish called also for

Y. A sort of fish; called also for

Z. A sort of fish called also for
The spider, in the habit of a burglar, fell presently to her network of drawing cobwebs up and down.

2. Any snare, or trap: implying indi-viduals and weaknesses; for he is a rope of filch could twist as tough as learned Socrates; and weave fine cobwebs fit for fowl.

That's empty when the moon is full. Hudibras.

A seven-foot gun carries powder and bullets for seven charges and discharges. Under the breach of the barrel is one box for the powder; a little before the lock another for the bullets behind the cock a charger, which carries the powder from the box to a funnel at the further end of the lock. Grew.

7. A conqueror; a leader; a governing man.

Sir Andrew is the clock of the club since he left us. Addison.

My household calls me a dance and a fool; but at cuffs I was always the clock of the school. Swift.

We were carousing till the second cock. Shaksp. He begins at curfew, and goes till the first cock. Shaksp.

9. A cockboat; a small boat.

They take a view of all fixed cocks, barges, and fischerboats hovering on the coast. Grew's Survey of Cornwall.

The fishermen, that walk upon the beach, appear like mice; and yond tall anchoring bark, Diminish'd to her dock; her cock, a buoy, Almost too small for fight. Shaksp.

10. A small heap of hay. [Properly cog.]

As soon as the dew is off the ground, spread the hay again, and turn it, that it may wither on the other side. Cog handle; in either hand, if you find it dry, make it up into cogs. Martineau.

11. The form of a hat. [from the comb of the cock.]

You see many a finest rhetorician turning his hat in his hands, moulding it into several different cogs. Addison.

12. The style or gnomon of a dial. Chambers.

Now I am a frier, all men on me look; What should I do but set cock on the hoop? Camden's Remains.

You'll make a matter among my guests. You will set cock a boup. Shaksp.

For Hamilcar, who thought he had won the field, as certain as a gun, and having routed the whole troop, With victory was cock a boup. Hudibras.

To Cock. a. [from the noun.]

1. To set erect; to hold bolt upright as a cock holds his head.

That is mustle which performs the motion so often mentioned by the Latin poets, when they talk of a man's cocking his nose, or playing the rhesores. Addison.

Our Lightsfoot backs, and cocks his ears; O'yer yonder fills for Lopherkin appears.

Gray's Poems.

Dick would cock his neck in scorn, But Tom was kind and loving.

Swift.

2. To set up the hat with an air of pertunity and pertness.

Dick, who thus long had passive hat, Here struck his chin and cock'd his hat. Prior.

An alert young fellow cock'd his hat, and was a friend of his who entered. Addison's Spettator.

3. To mould the form of the hat.

Some of them holding up their plackets, cock'd, near the door of the house, which they kept open. Dryden's Dollier; MS.

4. To fix the cock of a gun ready for a dischARGE.

To Cock. v. n. [from cock.]

1. To fasten by hold up the head, and look big, or menacing, or pert.

Sir Popling is a fool fo nicely wise,
And when he fings, talks loud, and cock'd, would cry, In vain ministering; he's pretty comical. Dryden.

Every one cocks and frutes upon it, and pretends to overhulk us. Addison's Guardian.

2. To train or use fighting cocks.

Cries out 'gainst cocking, since he cannot be led. Dryden.

Cock, in composition, signifies small or little.

Cockade. n. f. [from cock.]

A riband worn in the hat.

Cockatrice. n. f. [from cock, and artem, Sax, a serpent.] A serpent supposed to rise from a cock's egg.

They will kill one another by the look, like cockatrices. Shakespeare.

This was the end of this little cockatrice of a king, that was able to destroy those that did not love him. Bacon.

This cockatrice is soonest cruelled in the field; but, if it grows, it turns to a serpent and a dragon. Tayler.

My wife 'd thee, the very cockatrice! Carrie Gregory.

Cockboat. n. f. [cock and boat.]

A small boat belonging to a ship.

That ininventive annals, which having not fired a cottage of ours at land, nor taken a cockboat of our rivers, wandered through the wilderwoods of the northern seas. Bacon.

Did they think it les difiantion to God to be like a brute, or a plant, or a cockboat, than he to be a man? Stillingfleet.

Cockroot. n. f. Broth made by boiling a cock.

Diet upon spoon-meats; as veal or cockbroths prepared with French barleys. Harvey on Conflagr.

Cockcrowing. n. f. [cock and crow.]

The time at which cocks crow; the morning.

Ye know not when the matter of the house cometh; at even, or at midnight, or at the cockcrooning, or in the morning. Mark.

To Cock. v. a. [equilizer, French.]

To cage; to fiddle; to indulge.

Most children's constitutions are spoiled by cockering and tenderness.

Locke on Education.

He that will give his son sugar plums to make him learn, does but authorize his love of pleasures, and cocker up that propensity which he ought to subdue.

Locke on Education.

Bred a fondling and an heirsel,

Drun'd like any Lady May's cocker'd by the fervants round Was too good to touch the ground. Swifts.

Cocker. n. f. [from cock.]

One who follows the sport of cockfighting.

Cockerel. n. f. [from cock.]

A young cock.

Which of them first begin to crow?—The old cock.—The cockeril.

Shakespere.

What will thou be, young cockerel, when thou art grown?—Are you grown sharpish?—Dryden.

Cocker. n. f. [of uncertain derivation.]

A bird belonging to the king's cothoumbe; likewise a fervell of parchment, sealed and delivered to the officers of the cothoumbe to merchants, as a warrant that their merchandize is entered. Cowell.

The greatest profit did arise by the cocker of hides; for wool and woollfells were ever of little value in this kingdom. Dryer.

Co'Ck.
COC

Co'ckfight, n.s. [cock and figh]. A battle or match of cocks. In cockfights, to make one cock more hardy, and the other more cowardly. Bacon's Natural History.

At the corner of football and cockfighting, in little republics reposing their national hatred to each other. Addito.

Co'k-horse. adj. [cock and horse.] On horseback; triumphant; exulting.

Aine, they fearnously maintain, 'Sir, cock a cock their throne they.' Prior.

Co'CKLE. n.s. [coquilh, French.]
1. A small fleshy edible.

It is a cock or a walnut shell. Shakespeare.
We may, I think, from the make of an oyster, or cock, reasonably conclude, that it has to many, so to quick, tended as a man. Locke.
These common cock shells, out of gravel pits. Woodward.

2. A little or young cock. Obsolete.

They hang the crew to stuff and to tan. As cockle on the dunghill crowing crunk. Spenser's Palaestra.

Co'CK-LE-STAIRS. n.s. Fencing or spiral stairs. Chambers.

Co'ck-le. n.s. [coccil, Saxon; L. kelium, kastoria, Lat.] A weed that grows in corn, the same with comroe; a species of poppy.

In fothing them, we nourish 'gainst our senate
The cockle of rebellion, infinon, sedition. Sack. For the cockle's degeneracy, and oft obsia.

The cockle's difficult. Drarn. To Co'ckle, n.s. [from cockle.] To contract into wrinkles, like the shell of a cockle. See bow's drench the cabboge's cocked grain. Guy.

Co'ck-le-Ed. adj. [from cockle.] Shelled; or perhaps cockleate, turbinated.

Love's feeling is more soft and sensible
Than are the tender horns of cocked foals. Stat.

Co'ck-lit. n.s. [cock and foot.] The room over the garret, in which fowls are supped to roost; unless it be rather corrupted from cockitl, the cap or top of the house. If the lowest floors already burn, Cocklits and garrets soon will take their turn. Dryden's Journal.

My garrets, or rather my cockleths indeed, are very indifferently furnished; but they are rooms to lay lumber in. Swift.

Co'CKMASTER. n.s. [cock and master.] One that breeds game cocks.

A cockelret brought a partidge, and turned it among the fighting cocks. L'Estrange.

Co'CKMATCH. n.s. [cock and match.] Cockfight for a prize.

At the same time that the heads of parties preferre towards one another an outward show of good breeding, their tools will not so much as mingle at a cockle, and into cockets match. Though quill-fighting is what is most taken notice of, they had doublets cocketams also. Addison and Pope.

Co'cKNEY. n.s. [A word of the original is much controverted. The French use an expression, paix de coquain, for a country of dainties; Paris est un paix de coquain. Beilbeu.

Of this word they are not able to settle the original. It appears, whatever was its first ground, to be very ancient, being mentioned in an old Normanno-Saxon poem:

Far in see by Wes Spying
Is a lord whose cazagogue,
On which Dr. Hickey has this remark:
Nunc coquin, coquinque que olum apud
Gallos, osus, gula, et ventri dediis,
Ignavum, ignavum, desiderim, desidera,
Jugum, significantem.
Hunc urbem, ut
Porta a rutilibus laboribus ad vitam fede-
Narianam et desiderio avocatos, pagani
Notri olum categorie, quod nunc scribar
Cockney, vocantur. Et potius hic nodos
In muros et moniales, ut jugum gene-
Nus his regionum, qui desideri dediti,
Ventri indulgebat, & coquinam amantes erant,
Malevolentissime inferabant; monasteria
& monasticam vitam inde firminatione terrace coqueae parabolice penetrantes.

So the caxagogue did to the eels, when they put them in th' path alive. Shakespeare's King Lear.
For who is such a cockney in his heart,
Proud of the plenty of the southern part.
To come to that union, by which we may
Boat 'twas his countryman that write this play? Drysat.

The cockney, travelling into the country, is for-r Jolved at many common practices of rural affairs. Watt.

2. Any effeminate, ignorant, low, mean, defpicable citizen.
I am afraid this great lubber the world will prove a cockney. Shakespeare; Troilus and Cressida.

Co'cKPT. n.s. [cock and pit.] 1. The area where cock fights.

Can this cockpit hold
The very field of France? Shakespeare.
And now have I gained the cockpit of the western world, and academy of arms, for many years. Henry's Ideal Foot.

2. A place on the lower deck of a man of war, where are subdivisions for the pur-fer, the furgeon, and his mates. Harris.

Co'ck's-comp. n.s. [cock and cove.] A plant.

Co'cK's-head. n.s. A plant, named also miflerin. Miller.

Co'cKSHUT. n.s. [from cock and shut.] The close of the evening, at which time poultry go to roost. Sarey and himself.

Much about cockshut time, from troop to troop.
Go through the army. Shakespeare.

Co'cKSURE. adv. [from cock and sure.] Confidently certain; without fear or dif-fidence. A word of contempt.
We first, as in a cockle, exhalate. Shakespeare.
I thought my left cocksure of his horse, which he readily promised me. Pope's Letters.

Co'cKSWAIN. n.s. [cokspayne, Saxon.] The officer who has the command of the cock-boat. Corruptly Coxon.

Co'cKWEEN. n.s. [from cock and sweet.] The name of a plant, called allo Dittander, or Pepperwort.

Co CocNA. n.s. [coccus, Saxon, and there-fore more properly written caca-]
A species of palm-trees, cultivated in the East and West Indies. The bark of the tree is made into cordage, and the shell into drinking bowls. The kernel affords them a wholesome food, and the milk contained in the shell a cooling liquor.

COCO

The leaves are used for Thrushing their houses, and are wrought into baskets. Miller.
The coco or chocolate nut is a fruit of an oblong figure; is composed of a thin but hard and woody blackish colour; and of a dry kernel, filling up its whole cavity, glossy, dry, firm, and rich to the touch, of a dusky colour, an agreeable smell, and a pleasant and peacable taste. It was unknown to us till the discovery of America. The tree is of the thickness of a man's leg, but a few feet in height; its bark rough, and full of tubercles; and its leaves four or five inches long, half as much in breadth, and pointed at the ends. The flowers are succeeded by the fruit, which is large and oblong, resembling a few, or eight inches in length, and three or four in thickness; when fully ripe, of a purple colour. Within the cavity of this fruit are lodged the coco nuts, usually about thirty in number. Hill's Matt. Med. Amilh three orchards of the fan.

Give me to drain the coco's milky bowl,
And from the palm to draw its freezing wine.

Thence.

Co'c'rile. adj. [cocileus, Lat.] Made by baking, as a brick. Easton.

Co'C'ON. n.s. [cocoa, Lat.] The act of boiling.

The disease is sometimes attended with expectation from the lungs, and that is taken up by a coffee and resolution of the feverish matter, or teriminates in suppurations or a gangrene. Arbuthnot on Diet.

COD.

Co'D'Fish. n.s. [coflus.] A sea fish. Parkinson.

COD. n.s. [coccoe, Saxon.] Any case or hulk in which seeds are lodged.

Thy corn thou these may't safely low,
Where in full cads last year rich pease did grow.

Many.

They let pease lie in small heaps as thou saidst, or else are reaped; till they find the hazel and cob dry.

Maritmer's Husbandry.

To Co'D. n.s. [from the mouth.] To inclose in a cod.

All cased grain being a destroyer of weeds, an improver of land, and a preparer of it for other crops.

Maritmer.

Co'D'ERS. n.s. [from cod.] Gatherers of pease. Digg.

Cod. n.s. [codex, Latin.]

2. Articles of the civil law.

We find in the Thros-han and Juftinian code the interest of trade very well provided for.

Arbuthnot on Cains.

Indentures, covants, articles they draw, large as they think themselves, and larger still. Than civil codes with all their glosses are. Pope's Sat.

Co'D'ICILL. n.s. [codicillus, Lat.] An appendage to a will.

The man infefts his lady's erring
Was but to gain him to appoint her,
By codicil a larger joysters.
Prior.

Co'D'ILL. n.s. [codilla, Fr. caillou, Span.] A term at ombre, when the game is won.

If the fees, and trembles th at approaching ill;
Just in the jaws of ruin, and codilla.
Pope's Rape of the Lock.

To Co'D'LE. n.s. [caueus, caepeo, Lat. Skinner.] To parboil; or to soften by the heat-of-water.

Co'c'ING. n.s. [from To coll.] An apple generally cooled, to be mixed with mickle.

In July come gillflowers of all varieties, early pears and plums in fruits, ginjaunts and ciderings. Bacon's Epistles. Their Coe. Their entertainment at the height, In cream and candles Treviling with delight. King's Court.

He set his little winter in a gravel walk, south of a rolling hedge. Martime's Hymn.

A rolling, ere it went its lip, Would thrust a golden pinpin. Swift.

Coeficacy, n. f. [con and efficacia, Lat.] The power of several things acting together to produce an effect.

We cannot in general infer the efficacy of those, or coficacy particularly in medications. Glauville's Stylus.

Coeficient, n. f. [con and efficacia, Latin.] Cooperation; the state of acting together to some fingeal end.

The managing and carrying on of this work, by the spirits instrumental coeicacy, requires that they be kept together, without distinction or division. Glauville's Stylus.

Coeficient, n. f. [con and efficacia, Latin.] That which unites its action with the action of another.

1. [In algebra.] Such numbers, or given quantities, that are put before letters, or unknown quantities, into which letters they are supposed to be multiplied, and so do make a rectangle or product with the letters; as, a, b, x, x, x, when 4 is the co-efficient of a, 6 of b, and c of cxx. Chambers.

3. In fluxions. The co-efficient of any generating term (in fluxions) is the quantity arising by the division of that term, by the generated quantity. Chambers.

Note. All fluxions, or flux, that arises from the insinuation or purefaction of food in the stomach and bowels, whereby the aliment comes away little altered from what it was when eaten, or changed like corrupted fishling flints. Quincy.

Comption, n. f. [composit, Lat.] The act of buying up the whole quantity of any thing.

Monopolies and comprition of wares for refale, which they are not restrained, is great mean to enrich. Bacon's Essays.

Coeval, adj. [from con and equalis, Lat.] Equal; being of the same rank or dignity with another.

Henry the fifth did sometimes prophesy; if once he came to be a cardinal, he'll make his cap coeereal with the crown. Shakespeare's Henry VI.

Coequallity, n. f. [from coequal.] The state of being equal.

To Coerce, v. a. [coerere, Latin.] To restrain; to keep in order by force. Punishments are manifold, that they may coerce this profane fort. Ayliffe's Paragon.

Cesible, adj. [from coerere.] That may be coerated.

1. That to be coerated.

Cescion, n. f. [from coerere.] Penal restraint; check.

The coercion or execution of the sanctioner in ecclesiastical causes, is only by excommunication of the person contumacious.

Government has coercion and animation upon such as neglect their duty; without which coercive power, all government is toothless and precarious. Swift.

Ces'cine, adj. [from coerere.] To Coexist, v. u. n. [con and exist, Latin.] To exist at the same time.

The three forces that coexist in heavenly constellations, are a multitude of stars. Halley's Orig. of Mankind.

Of infinites no one has any clear idea, rather than of certain simple ideas coexisting together. Locke.

2. Followed by with.

It is certain that we have the idea of the length of any regular periodical appearances, which we can in our minds apply to duration, with which the motion or appearance never ceased.

Coexistence, n. f. [from coeexist.]

1. Having existence at the same time with another: with to. Locke, who in the preceding lines has coexisted with time, has here coexistence to.

The measuring of any duration, by some motion, depends not on the real coexistence of that thing to that motion, or any other periodical revolution. Locke.

2. More commonly followed by with.

We can demonstrate the being of God's eternal ideas, and their coexistence to him. Grotius's Cosmologia.

Coexistency, adj. [from coeexist.]

1. Having existence at the same time with another: with to.

To the measuring the duration of any thing by time, it is not requisite that that thing shall be coexistent is the motion we measure by, or any other periodical revolution. Bentley.

2. Sometimes with.

This proves no antecedent necessity, but coexistency with the act. Brande's Antiqu. to Haber.

This is taken for so much of duration, as is coexistency with the motions of the great bodies of the universe. Locke.

All that one point is either future or past, and no parts are coexistent or contemporaneous. Bentley.

To Coexist 'n. d. v. a. [con and exist, Latin.] To extend to the same space or duration with another.

Every motion is, in same fort, coextensive with the body moved. Grotius's Cosmologia.

Coexistency, n. f. [from coexist.] The act or state of extending to the same space or duration with another.

Though it be spirit, I find it is no inconveniency to have some analogy, at least of coexistence, in my body. Holy.

COFFE, n. f. [tiooriginally Arabick, pronounced cahen by the Turks, and cabar by the Arabs.] The tree is a species of Arabick jassamine.

It is found to succeed as well in the Carribean isands as in its native place of grove; but whether the coffee produced in the West Indies will prove as good as that from Mocha in Arabia Felix, time will discover.

Coffee denotes a drink prepared from the berries, very familiar in Europe for these eighty years, and among the Turks for one hundred and fifty. Then, among the Turks, the coffee began to be burned in a coffee-pan, by the leaves of a certain herb. The coffee grew. This is the origin of mankind. Halley's Common Laws.

It is a kind of coffee, first set up the profession of coffee-man, and introduced the drink among us. Chambers.

They have in Turkey a drink called zaffa, made of a berry of the same name, as black as coffee and of a strong scent, but not aromatical; which they take, beaten into powder, in wine, as hot as they desire, this drink. This tends to cool the brain, and heart, and helpeth digestion. Bacon.

To partake thereof is a delight to both body and soul. Or ever cold coffee tribes with the ioni. Pope.

Co'f'f'house, n. f. [cofehouse.] A house of entertainment where coffee is sold.
To Coffin. n. a. [from the noun.] To inclode in a coffin.

Would 'twould have taught'd had I come coffin'd

That wept'to see me triumph? Shaks. Cenovulus.

Let me lie

In prison, and here be coffin'd, when I die. Dixon.

Coffin's a place; and master.

One whole trade is to make coffins.

Where will be your feaions, coffemakers, and plunmers?

Tailor.

To COG. v. a. [A word of uncertain origin, derived by Skinner from cognomin, French.]

1. To motto; to wheel; to tooth by adulatory speeches.

I'll mountack there their love,

Coff their hearts from them, and come home belov'd

Of all the trades in Rome. Shaks. Corinovus.

2. To cog a die. To secure it, so as to direct its fall; to falsify

But then my study was to cog the dice,

And dextrously to throw the lucky dice.

Swift.

Ye pallians of Newport, whose fingers are nice

In diving dices, those would lose of dice. Swift.

3. To otrude by falsehood

The outcry is, that I abuse my demonstration by a falsification, by cogging in the word.

Swift.

I have egg'd in the word to serve my turn.

Stillingfleet.

Confam tragedies, or impudic ceremonies, have, by converted talismans, been egg'd upon the town for multitude of Daminus.

To COG. v. n. To lye; to wheedle.

Now deleteth he, now will he crave;

And now will he cilen and cog. Taffe.

Mrs. Forre, I cannot; I cannot pass, Mrs. Ford: now shall I fin in my wish.

Shakespeare's Merry Wives of Windsor.

COG. n. f. The tooth of a wheel, by which it acts upon another wheel.

To COG. v. n. [from the noun.] To fix coggs in a wheel.

COGGENCY. n. f. [from cogent.] Force; strength; a power of compelling; conviction.

Maxims and axioms, principles of science, because they are self-evident, have been supposed innate; although nobody ever heved the foundation of their certainty and cogency. Swift.

COGENT. adj. [cognis., Latin.] Forcible; refultive; convincing; powerful; having the power to compel conviction.

Such is the cogent force of nature. Prior.

They have conceived methods of deceits, one repugnent to another, treasur'd, if possible, this most cogent proof of a Deity. Bentley.

COGENTLY. adv. [from cognis.] With refultive force; forcibly; so as to force conviction.

They forb'd us to bearken to those proofs, as weak or fallacious, which our own existence, and the formidабle parts of the universe, offer to clearly and cogently to our thoughts. Locke.

COGGER. n. f. [from To cog.] A flatterer; a wheedler.

COGMATION. n. f. [cogatio, Itam.] A little stone in a small pebbel. Skinner.

COGITABLE. adj. [cogitabilis, L.] That which may be thought on; what may be the subject of thought.

To COGITATE. v. n. [cogitae, Lat.] To think.

DIIS.

COGITATION. n. f. [cogitatio, Latin.]

1. Thought; the act of thinking.

Having these cogitations dwartened, and bring fancies from the life of God, from the ignorance which is in them.

A picture puts me in mind of a friend; the intention of the mind, in seeing, is carried to the object itself; and from this the bold spirit and simple cogitation, or apprehension of the person. Stilling.

This Decease; proves that brute's have no cogitations, because they could never be brought to signify their thoughts by any artificial signs.

Ray on the Creature.

These powers of cogitation, and volition, and sensation, are neither inherent in matter, nor acquirable to matter by any motion, and modification of it.

Benely.

2. Purpose; reflection previous to action.

The kings, perceiving that his difpens was inharmonious, and his cogitations walt and irregular, began not to brook him well. Bacon's Henry VII.

3. Meditation; contemplation; mental speculation.

On some great charge employ'd

He form'd, or fixating cogitation deep. Mil. Para. Lofa.

COGITATIVE. adj. [from cogito, Latin.]

1. Having the power of thought and reflection.

If these powers of cogitation and sensation are neither inherent in matter, nor acquirable to matter, they proceed from some cogitative substance, which is the good which compels.

2. Given to thought and deep meditation.

The ear had the closer and more refered contemnation, being by nature more cogitatives. Witsen.

COGNATION. n. f. [cognatio, Latin.]

1. Kindred; deficient from the same original.

I will not be mylly, nor have ligulums. Of what I feel: I am all patience.

Shakespeare's Trilus and Cuffida.

God, as he created all things, to be beyond and in them all; not only in power, as under his subjections; or in his presence, as in his cogitation; but in their very essence, as in their causalities.

Brocas's Fulgar Emun-a.

COGNITIVE. adj. [from cognitio, Latin.]

Having the power of knowledge.

Unless the understanding employ and exercise his cognitive or apprehensive power about these terms, there can be no actual apprehension of them.

Hooker's Parergon.

COGNIZABLE. adj. [cognizable, Fr.]

1. That falls under judicial notice.

2. Liable to be tried, judged, or examined.

Some are merely of ecclesiastical cognizance; others of a mixed nature, such as are cognizable both in the ecclesiastical and more civil courts.

Alby's: Parergon.

COGNIZANCE. n. f. [connoisseo, Fr.]

1. Judicial notice; trial; judicial authority.

It.
I. To COHERE. v. n. [cohærent. Latin.] To stick together; to hold fast one to another, as parts of the same mass.

2. To be well connected; to follow regularly in the order of discourse.

3. To suit; to fit; to be fitted.

4. To agree.

II. 1. That state of bodies in which their parts are joined together, from what cause soever it proceeds, so that they retell division and separation; nor can be separated by any forces by which they might be forcibly moved, or, being only laid upon one another, might be parted again.

2. Connection; dependency; the relation of parts or things one to another.

3. The texture of a discourse, by which one part follows another regularly and naturally.

4. Confinity in reasoning, or relating, so that one part of the discourse does not destroy or contradict the rest.

II. v. [cohærens. Latin.] Sticking together, so as to resist separation.

1. By evaculating and diluting, that is, making their parts more or less coherent. Addition. Where all must_full, or not coherent be; And all that rife, rite in due degree.

2. Connected; united.

The mind proceeds from the knowledge it finds possessed of already, to that which lies near, and is coherent to it, and then to what it arises at.

LOCHIE'S PRECEPT. TO ST. PAUL'S EPISTLE.

COHESION. n. f. [coherens. Latin.] The quality of being cohesive; the quality of resisting separation.

TO COHIBIT. v. a. [cohabito. Lat.] To refrain; to hinder.

COHOBATE. v. a. To pour the distilled liquor upon the remaining matter, and distil it again.

COHABITATION. n. f. [from cohabit.] A returning any distilled liquor again upon what it was drawn from, or upon fresh ingredients of the same kind, to have it the more impregnated with their virtues.

COHORT. n. f. [cohaerent. Latin.] A troop of soldiers in the Roman armies, containing about five hundred foot.

The Romans levied as many cohorts, companies, and ensigns, as from any of their provinces.

2. In poetical language. A body of warriors.

COIF. n. s. [ceoffis. French; from cafeis. for cuéfii. low Lat.] The head-dress; a lady's cap; the servant's cap.

The judges of the four circuits in Wales, although they were not of the first magnitude, nor need be of the degree of the earls, yet they were considerable.

Bacon's Advices to Milton.

No left a man 'than a brother of the eoff began his fali, before he had been a reproof at the Temple.

Addison, Spectator.

Instead of house, span eoff were then.

Good pioners edd with coterine. Swift.

COISED. adj. [from coeis.] Wearing a coif.

COIFFURE. n. f. [coiffure. Fr.] Head-dress.

I am pleas'd with the coiffure now in fashion, and think it shews the golden hair of the capable part of the sex.

Swift.
COIN. n. [Coler, Germ.]
1. Tumulb: turmoil; buffle; stir; hurry; confusion.
2. Payment of any kind.
   The loss of present advantage to fleer and blood, is repaid in a nobler coin. Hammond's Fundamentals.

COIN. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To mint or flamp metals for money.
   They cannot touch me for coinage: I am the king.
   Shakespeare.
2. To make or forge any thing, in an ill sense.
   Never saw a formal lye on't.
   To make the knight his poor's great.
   They make of one coin a fable.
   Dryden.
3. To make or forge any thing, in an ill sense.
   Never saw a formal lye on't.
   To make the knight his poor's great.
   They make of one coin a fable.
   Dryden's Virgin.

COINAGE. n. s. [from coin.]
1. The art or practice of coined money.
   The care of the coinage was committed to the inferior magistrates; and I don't find that they had a publick trial, as we solemnly practice in this country.
   Adams.
2. Coin; money; flamped and legimated metal.
   This is conceived to be a coinage of some Jews, in edition of Christ, who first began that port.
   Moore was forced to leave off coinage, by the great crowds of people continually offering to return his coinage.
   Swifts.
3. The change of coined money.
4. New production; invention.
   Unnecessary coinings, as well as unnecessary revivals of words, runs into distraction; a fault to be avoided on either hand.
   Dryden's Journal, Dissertation.
5. Forgery; invention.
   This is the very coinage of your brain.
   This bookish coinage effaces.
   Shakespeare's Hamlet.

TO COINCIDE. v. a. [coincide, Latin.]
1. To fall upon the same point; to meet in the same point.
   If the equator and ecliptick had coincided, it would have rendered the annual revolution of the earth life.
   Chyney.
2. To concur; to be consistent with.
   The rules of right judgment, and of good rationalization, often coincide with each other.

COINCIDENCE. n. s. [from coincide.]
1. The state of several bodies, or lines, falling upon the same point.
   An universal equilibrium, arising from the coincidence of infinite centres, can never be naturally acquired.
   Addington.
2. Concurrence; consistency; tendency of many things to the same end; occurrence of many things at the same time.
   The very concurrence and coincidence of so many evidences that contribute to the proof, carries a great weight.
   Hale.
3. It is followed by with.
   The coincidence of the places of this rotation with the other, and with the plane of the ecliptick, is near that.
   Chyney's Philosophical Principles.

COINCIDENT. adj. [from coincide.]
1. Falling upon the same point.
   These circles I viewed through a prism; and when I went from them, they came nearer and nearer together, and at length became coincident.
   Newton's Opticks.
2. Concurrent; consistent; equivalent: followed by with.
   Christianity teaches nothing but what is perfectly suited to and coincident with the ruling principles of a virtuous and well inclined man. South.
   Their words of our spot and exactly coincident with that controversial passage in his discourse.
   Chyney.

COINCIDENCE, n. s. [from coin and induce, Latin.] Many symptoms betokening the same cause.

COINER. n. s. [coin.
1. A maker of money; a minter; a flammer of coin.
   My father was I know not where.
   When I was a flammer of some coin with his tools he made me a counterfitter.
   Skinner.

2. A counterfeit of the king's stamp; a maker of base money.
3. An inventor.

COLD. adj. [cold, Saxon; kalt, German.]
1. Not hot; not warm; cold; wanting warmth; being without heat.
   The earth in the state of mud that ought to be solid; and their chief drink was cold water, because in such a state it has its own natural spirits.
   Aristotle on Animals.

COLD. n. s. [cold, Saxon; kalt, German.]
1. A counterfeiter of the king's stamp; a maker of base money.
Cold

The aggregate soil

Death, with his mate perpetually, cold, and dry. As with a triumphant, fruitless:

Millon.

2. Causing fene of cold.

This is sate

Some better shone, some better warmth, to cherish. Our limbs however, were thus disarrayed. Leave cold the night, and you will hear his room be fere faint. Royal.

Millon.

3. Chilling; shivering; having fene of cold.

The cold earth, that could entertain

With half their forces, the fud powers of France; And let another half land laughing by. All out of work, and cold for action.

Shakespeare's Henry V's.

4. Having cold qualities; not volatile; not acrid.

Cold plants have a quicker perception of the heat of the sun than the hot herbs; as a cold hand will sooner find a little warmth than an hot.

Bacon's Nat. History.

5. Indifferent; frigid; wanting passion; wanting zeal; without concern; unactive; unconcerned; wanting ardour.

There sprung up one kind of men, whose zeal and spirit is a thousand times, compared, were thought to be marvelous cold and dull.

Hobbes's Preface.

6. Temperature to what you would

Thus violently reduced to life, these cold ways, That seem like prudent helps, are very poisonous.

Shakespeare.

7. Now dated letters, their

Their cold intent, memory, and substance thou:

Here doth he with his person, and his power.

Shakespeare. Cymbeline.

To see a world in flames, and an hell of angels in the cloudy, one must be much of a tockie to be a cold and unincensed spectator.

Burnet's Preface to the Theory of the Earth.

No drum or trumpet need

'Tis inspire the coward, or warm the cold;

His voice, his face, appearance, makes them bold.

Dryden.

8. O, thou hast touch'd me with thy Career theme, and my heart is kindled at thy flame.

Shakespeare. Henry IV.

We should not, when the blood was cold, have threatening our prisoners with the sword.

Shakespeare's Cymbeline.

9. Unshackling; unable to move the prisoners

What a deal of cold business doth a man misprize

The better part of life in? In scattering compliments, tendering visits, following fayets and pay.

Addison. Italy.

10. Refered; coy; not affectionate; not cordial; not friendly.

Let his knights have colder looks

Among you.

Shakespeare's King Lear.

The commissaries in moreForecast, and colder towards each other.

Clarendon.

11. Chaife; not heated by vivid appetite.

You may

Convey you pleasures in a spacious plenty, And yet hour cold, the time you may, your wick? We're willing dunes enough. Shakspe. Macksb.

12. Not welcome; not received with kindness or warmth of affection.

My master's feet will be but cold,

Since the refreshers, my dear dural meal.

Shakespeare's Two Gentlemen of Verona.

13. Not hally; not violent.

She made it good

At the hedge corner, 'twas called the collie. Shakspe.

14. Chaffily; exception from vehement deferre.

The silver stream her virgin coldness keeps, For ever murmurs, and for ever weeps.

Pope's Winter's Foy.

COLE. n. f. [capl, Saxton.]

A general name for all sorts of cabbage

COLESEED. n. f. [cole and seed.]

Cabbage seed.

COLESEED, if the seed is small, it is not good to sow where after a forest; but coldly and barley, and then when.

Mariner.

COLEWORT, n. f. [caplypry, Sax.]

A species of cabbage.

The decoraon of colewort is also commended to barbe them.

Minneman of an Exoglyph.

She took the colewort, which her husband got From his own ground (a small well-water'd spot); She thrip'd the stalks of all their leaves the best She could, and then with handy care the drafts.

Dryden.

How turns the spine of their heads below, And how the clothing downwards grow.

Gay.

COCK. n. f. [coley, Latin.]

A bird; but boodly, any disordered of the stomach or bowels that is attended with pain.

There are four sorts: 1. A bilious colic, which proceeds from an abundance of acrimony or choler, irritates the stomach so as to occasion continual gripes, and generally with a looseness; and this is best managed with laxatives.

2. A flatulent colic, which is pain in the bowels from flatulence, and wind which diffused them into unequal and unnatural capacities, and this is managed with carminatives and moderate openers.

3. A hysteric colic, which arises from the distemper of the womb, and is communicated by content of parts to the bowels; and is to be treated with the ordinary medicines.

4. A muscular colic, which is from colicative simples, and consists with convulsions of the guts themselves, from lows disordered of the spirits, or nervous fluid, in their respective parts, whereby their capacities are in many places fireightened, and sometimes fast to occasion colicative obstrutions: this is best remedied by bril cachartics, joined with opiates and emollient ollutions.

There is also a species of this distemper which is commonly called the stone colic, by content of parts, from the irritation of the stone or gravel in the bladder or kidneys; and this is most commonly to be treated by nephritics and colicative simples, and also to be allithed with the carminative turgor of light.

Quinby.

Cocks of infants proceed from acidity, and the at in the aliment expending itself, while the aliment consists,

Addison.

COCKLE. n. f. [Sed.]

A cock, a. n. f. [collabor, collassus, Latin.]

To fall together; to close so as that one side touches the other.

In confirmations and atrophy the liquids are expell'd, and the sides of the canals colliged; therefore the stricture is increased, and consequently the heat.

Addison in Dicks.

COLLECTION, n. f. [from collere.]

1. The act of cluing or collaping.

2. The plate of vessels closed.

COILLAR. n. f. [collare, Latin.]

A ring of metal put round the neck.

This is nothing; say the dog, but the festivity of the cow, as the cock-sparrow has a collar in the cald, I know better things than to fell my liberty.

L'Estrange.

Ten brace and more of greyhounds; With golden mantle many were bound, And dorses of the fame their necks surround.

Dryden's Fables.

The part of the harness that is fastened about the horse's neck.

Her
4. To flip the Collar. To get free; to escape; to disentangle himself from any engagement or difficulty. When, as the ape heard so much to talk of labour, that did from his liking books, he would have fits the collar handily. Hick's Tale.

5. A Collar of Brown is, the quantity bound up in one parcel. Collar-Bone. n.s. [from collar and bone.] The clavicle; the bones on each side of the neck. A page flying behind the coach fell down, bruised his face, and broke right collar-bone. Wigan's Sur. Surgery.

To Collar. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To seize by the collar; to take by the throat.
2. To Collar beef, or other meat; to roll it up, and bind it hard and close with a string or collar.

To Collate. v. a. [confer, collat.] Latin.
1. To compare one thing of the same kind with another.
2. To collar books; to examine if nothing be wanting.
3. To below; to confer.

The significance of the sacrament disproves the spirit of the receiver to admit the grace of the spirit of God present, esteemed, exhibited, and collated. Taylor's Domestic piety.

With to. To place in an ecclesiastical benefice. He thrust out the invader, and collated Amster to the benefice: Luther performed the consecration.

If a patron shall neglect to present unto a benefice, void above six months, the bishop may collate thereunto.

Collateral. adj. [con and lat. Lat.]
1. Side to side.

In his bright radiance and collateral light Much he comforted, not in his sphere. Shaksp. Thus facing, from his radiant seat he rises Of high collateral glory. Brown's Natural History.

They could not relinquish their Judaism, and embrace Christianity, without confounding, weightings, and collating both religions. — Swift.

2. Running parallel.
3. Diffused on either side.

But man by number is to manifest His single imperfection; and begot In his like, his image multiply'd As unity defective, which requires Collateral love and decreet amity. Mitf. Par. Lat.

In genealogies, those that stand in equal relation to some common ancestor.

Delineation of a person dying intestate, is, by right of devolution, according to the civil law, given to such as are allied to him ex litteris, commonly styled collatoris; if he be no ascendants or descendants surviving at the time of his death. — Ainf.s.

Not direct; not immediate.

They shall hear and judge 'twixt you and me; It may direct or by collateral hand.

They send us doubts, we will our kingdom give To you in satisfaction. Shaksp. 6. Concurrent.

All the force of the motive lies within itself: it receives no collateral strength from external confederates. Collaterally, adv. [from collateral.]
1. Side by side.

These auxiliaries may be multiplied according to fundery different fortunes, nor only when they are inoffensive, but also when they are placed collateral. — Wilt. 2. Indirectly.

By affecting the spirit to be the canons of our faith, I have created two enemies: the papists more directly, because they have kept the scripture from us; and the fanatics more collateral, because they have assumed what amounts to an impossibly in the private spirit. Dryson.

3. In collateral relation.

It is a fit of the act of conferring or bestowing gift.

Neither are we to give thanks alone for the first collation of titles: benefit, but also for their pretension. Ray on the Orations.

Collation. n.s. [collat., Lat.]
1. The act of conferring or bestowing gift.

In the disputation of truth, a ready fancy is of great use; provided that collation doth its office.

I return you your Milton, which, upon collation, I find to be revised and augmented in several places. Pope.

2. Comparison of one copy, or one thing of the same kind, with another.

In the disputation of truth, a ready fancy is of great use; provided that collation doth its office.

In the disputation of truth, a ready fancy is of great use; provided that collation doth its office.

3. In law.

Collation is the bestowing of a benefice, by the bishop that hath it in his own gift, or patronage; and differs from consecration in this, that consecration into a benefice is performed by the bishop at the request of another who is patron, or hath the patron's right for the time. Cowel.

Bishops should be placed by collation of the king under his letters patent, without any precedent election, or confirmation ensuing. — Hayward.

A repast; a treat less than a feast.

Collatious. adj. [collatius, Lat.] Done by the contribution of many.

Collatior. n.s. [collat.] 1. One that compares copies or manuscripts. To read the titles they give an editor or collator of a manuscript, you would take him for the ghost of letters. — Addison.

2. One who presents to an ecclesiastical benefice.

A mandatory cannot interrupt an ordinary collation; till a month is expired from the day of presentation. — Artif. 6. To Colla'd. v. a. [colla'd, Lat.]

To join in praizing. — Artif.

Collègue. n.s. [collega, Lat.] A partner in office or employment. Anciently accepted on the last syllable.

Easy it might be seen that I intend Mercy collage with unjust feeding thee. Milton. The reigns, upon death of the crown, would keep the peace without collations. Swift.

To Collègue. v. a. [from the noun.]
To unite with.

Collègial with this dream of his advantage, He hath not failed to petter with malice, Importing the surrender of those lands. Shaksp. Humilt.

To Collect. v. a. [collige, collectum, Lat.]
1. To gather together; to bring into one place. 2. To draw many units, or numbers, into one sum. Let a man collect into one sum as great a number as he pleases, this multitude, how great soever, let not amiss the power of adding to it. Locke.

3. To gain by observation.

The reverent care I bear unto my lord, Made me either the dangers in the dulse. — Shaksp. Henry VI.

4. To infer as a consequence; to gather from premises.

How great the force of erroneous persuasion is, we may collect from our Saviour's premonition to his disciples. Decay of Pulpit.

They conclude they can have no idea of infinite space; because they can have no idea of infinite matters; which consequence, I conceive, is very ill collect'd. — Locke.

5. To Collect himself. To recover from surprize; to gain command over his thoughts; to afford his sentiments. Be collected.

No more amazement. — Shaksp. Timon of Athens.

I laid in time collect'd myself, and thought. This was so, and no numbers. Shaksp. Winter's Tale.

Prospicy unexpected often maketh men careless and remiss; whereas they, who receive a wound, become more vigilant and collected. — Hayward. As when of old some orator renown'd in Athens or free Rome, where eloquence flourisht, his face must to, some great cause add v'd, — Milton.

Stand in himself collected, while each part, Motion, each act won audience, ere the tongue Sometimes in height began, as no delay Of premature breaking through his seal of sight.

Collected, adj. [collectus, colletus, Lat.] Gathered up together; collected; notes compiled from various books.

Colleetedly. adv. [from collect.] Gathered in one view at once.

The whole evolution of ages from everlasting to everlasting is so collected and prettily represented to God. — Merc.

Collectible. adj. [from collect.] That which may be gathered from the premises by just consequence.

Whether thereby be meant Ephraim, is not collectible from the following words. — Brown's Vulgar Errors.

Collection. n.s. [from collect.]
1. The act of gathering together.
2. An assemblage; the things gathered.

No proper Knight desires to quit thy arms, Fairfclth collection of thy fire's charms. — Prior.

The gallery is hung with a collection of pictures. — Addison.

3. The act of deducing consequences; rationalization; discourse. This fens is now scarce in use.

If we be driven to probable Collection, we are then in the territory where free and arbitrary determinations, the territory where human laws, take place. — Hobbes.

Then fast not puff thy' lattices of eyes, Nor hear thou' labyrinths of ears, nor hear By circuit or collections to discern. — Donne.

4. A
COL.

4. A corollary; a corollary deduced from premises; deduction; consequence.

The author of the original text is quoted as "H."

The text is a compilation of various entries from a dictionary.

Example entries:

COLLIQUATE. v. a. [collate, collat., Lat.] To melt; to dissolve; to turn from solid to fluid.
- Ice will dissolve in fire, and colligate in water or warm oil.
- Brown's Fatal Errors.

COLLIGATION. n. s. [colligatio, Lat.]
- The act of melting.
- Glauber's Natural History.

COLLECTIVE. adj. [collective, French.]
- In a general mass; in a body; not singly; not numbered by individuals; in the aggregate; accumulatively; taken together; in a state of combination or union.

COLLECTOR. n. s. [collecter, Latin.]
- A collector; he who collects scattered things together.

COLLIGATORY. n. s. [from con and legatus, a legacy, Latin.] In the civil law, a person to whom is left a legacy in common with one or more other persons.

COLLIER. n. s. [from colier.]
- The place where coals are dug.

COLLIERY. n. s. [from collier.]
- The coal trade.

COLLIFLOWER. n. s. [flor bracelet, from capl., Sax. cabbage, and flower, properly cauliflower.] A species of cabbage.

COLLIGA. n. s. [colligate, Lat.]
- A binding together.

- These the midwife contrives into a knot, whence that tortuous and nodosity in the navel, occasioned by the colligation of the cord.
- Barrow's Physical Remains.

COLLIMATION. n. s. [from colline, Lat.]
- The act of aiming at a mark; aim. Dict.

COLLINEATION. n. s. [collineis, Lat.]
- The act of aiming.

COLLIQUABLE. adj. [from colligate.]
- Easily dissolved; liable to be melted.

- The tender confidence renders it the more colligable and consumptive. Harvey on Compositions.

COLLIQUAM. n. s. [from colligate.]
- The substance to which any thing is reduced by being melted.

COLLIQUANT. adj. [from colligate.]
- Which has the power of melting or dissolving.

COLLIGATE. v. a. [colliques, Lat.]
- To melt; to dissolve; to turn from solid to fluid.

- The fire melted the glass that made a great show, after what was colligated had been removed from it. Boyle.

- The fat of the kidneys is apt to be colligated through a great heat from within, and an acrid fever.
- Harvey on Compositions.

COLLIGATE. v. n. To melt; to dissolve.

- Ice will dissolve in fire, and colligate in water or warm oil.
- Brown's Fatal Errors.

COLLIGATION. n. s. [colligacio, Lat.]
- The act of melting.
- Glauber's Natural History.

- Such a temperament or disposition of the animal fluids as proceeds from a lax compages, and wherein they flow off through the secretory glands fatter than they ought.
- Quincy.

COLLIGATIVE. adj. [from colligate.]
- Melting; dissolvent.

- A colligative fever is such as is attended with a diarrhea, or feacats, from too lax a contexture of the fluids.

- It is a conformation of a burning colligating fever, whereby the humours, fat, and flesh of the body are melted.
- Harvey.

COLLIGATION. n. s. [colligatio, Latin.]
- The act of melting together; reduction to one mass by fluxion in the fire.

- After the incorporation of metals by simple colligation, for the better discovering of the nature and confonnents and diffuseness of metals, it would be tried by incorporating their dissolutions.
- Barrow's Physical Remains.

COLLISION. n. s. [from colli, Latin.]
- The act of striking two bodies together.

- On, by collision of two bodies, the air acquire to fire.
- Milton's Paradise Lost.

- The first and the steel you may more apart as long as one place; but in the hitting and collis-
- of them that must make them strike fire.
- Bentley.

- The slate of being struck together; a clash.

Then
By the ignorance of the merchants, or double cunning of weavers, or the collusion of both, the price was bad, and the price excessive. Swift.

COLLUSIVE. adj. [from collus.] Fraudulently concerted.

COLLOSTYLY. adj. [from collusio.] In a manner fraudulently concerted.

COLLOSTYLY. adj. [from collusio.] Carrying on a fraud by secret concert.

COLLY. n. [from coal.] The fin of coal.

Suppose thou saw her dressed in some old hircifute attire, out of fashion, coarse raiment, besmeared with, food, etc., perfumed with opprobrious odours; thus treated, she could not help but be excluded. Swift.

COLOCy sty. adj. [from coal.] To grime with coal; to smut with coal.

Briefly as the lightning in the dead night, that, in a spasm, unfolded both heaven and earth. And ere a man bath pow'd to say, Histon, The jaws of darkness do devour it up. Shake.'p

COLLY RUM. n.f. [Latin.] An ointment for the eyes.

COLLONAR. m. [Fr.] A sort of pear.

COLLONAR. m. [Fr.] Earth. A deep brown, very light ballad oboche, which is not pure native foill; but contains more vegetable than mineral matter, and owes its origin to the remains of wood long buried. Heath.

COLONELSHIP. n.f. [from colonel.] The office or character of colonel.

While he continued a sultry, he complained against the pride of colonels toward their subjects, yet, in a few minutes after he had received his commission for a regiment, he declared that relation was coming raft upon him. Swift.

COLOrize. v. a. [from colon.] To plant with inhabitants; to settle with new planters; to plant with colonies.

There was never an hand drawn, that did double the rest of the habitable world, before this; for to a man may truly term, if he shall put to account as well that is, as that which may be hereafter after the farther occupation and colonising of those countries: and yet it cannot be affirmed, if one speak ingenuously, that it was the propagation of the Christian faith that was the dam of that discovery, entry, and planting; and the freedom and silver, and temporal profit and glory; so that what was first in God's providence, was second in man's appetite and intention. Bacon's Holy War.

Drums hath advantage by acquired illustrious and honourable, which the colonists and fort nightly daily. Howe's Viscal Forst.

COLO'NADe. n.f. [from colonna, ital. a column.]

1. A periphery of a circular figure; or a series of columns disposed in a circle, and infiltrated within side. Builder's Dat.

Here circled colonades the ground include.

And here the marble statues breathe in rows. Add.

2. Any seres or range of pillars.

For you moy colonades extend their wings. Pope.

COLO'NY. n.f. [colonias, Latin.

1. A body of people drawn from the mother-country to inhabit some distant place.

To these new inhabitants and colonies he gave the same law under which they were born and bred. Spenser & England.

Rounding ots thee two rebellions foa'ists, he placed English colonies in their rooms. Davies on Ireland.

thee more Holland, them, the Dutch, of course, the rest, them, sent in the Indies, planting-colonies, and building cities. Addison in Cates.

2. The country planted; a plantation.

The rising eign, which from far you see;

It Carthage, and a Tyrian colony. Dryden's Ode in

COLOphy. n.f. [from Calphus, a city whence it came.] Robin.

Of Venetian turpentine, slowly evaporating about a fourth or fifth part, the remaining substance suffered to cool, would afford a certain kind of body, or a fine colophony. Boyle.

Turpentine and oils leave a colophony, upon a separation of their thinner parts. Newton.

FLYER in the Histories.

COLOQUINTEDA. n.f. [coleus, Lat. & a, Colby's, a city whence it came.] The fruit of a plant of the same name, brought from the Levant, about the bigness of a large orange, and often called bitter apple. Both the seed and pulp are intolerably bitter. It is a violent purgative, of considerable die in medicine. Colburn's Dictionary.

COLORAT. adj. [colaratus, Lat.] Coloured; dyed; marked or stained with some colour.
COLOUR. n.f. [colur, Saxon.] A

1. A horse of the male sex.

2. A young foal.

3. To make plausible.

4. To colour a stranger’s goods.

5. To colour.

6. Appearance; pretence; false show.

7. Kind; species; character.

8. In the plural, a standard; an enigma of war: they lay the colours of the foot, and standard of the horse. Boccaccio.

COLOURLESS. adj. [from colour.] Without colour; not distinguished by any hue; transparent.

COLOURLESSNESS. n.f. [coloulessness, Lat.] Transparence.

COLOURLESSLY. adv. [from colour.] Transparently.

COLOURED. n.f. [coloured, Lat.] A

COLOSSUS. n.f. [colossus, Lat.] A

COLOSSE. n.f. [colossus, Lat.] A

COLOSSEUM. n.f. [colosseum, Lat.] A

COLOURED, participle adj. [from colour.] Distinguished or varied with variety of hues.

COLOURLESS, participle adj. [from colour.] Unvaried.

COLOURLESSNESS, n.f. [coloulessness, Lat.] Transparence.

COLOURLESSLY, adv. [from colour.] Transparently.

COLOURLESSNESS, n.f. [coloulessness, Lat.] A

COLOURNESS. n.f. [colourness, Lat.] A

COLOURNESSLY. adv. [from colour.] Transparently.

COLOURLESSNESS, n.f. [coloulessness, Lat.] A
COUMIN. n.f. [columbus, Lat.] A kind of violet colour, or changeable dye colour.

COLUMN. n.f. [columna, Latin.]
1. A round pillar.
2. Any body of certain dimensions, profusely vertical upon its base.
3. In the military art. The long file or row of troops, or of baggage, of an army in its march. An army marches in one, two, three, or more columns, according as the ground will allow.

[With printers.] A column is half a page, when divided into two equal parts by a line passing through the middle, from the top to the bottom; and, by several parallel lines, pages are often divided into three or more columns.

COLUMNAR. adj. [from column.] Formed in columns.

WHILE columnar spar from out a-foe's pit.

CO'LUM'NARIAN. n.f. [columna, Latin; -arian.] Formed in columns.

COLOURS, n.f. [colori, Latin; -kite.] Two great circles supposed to pass through the poles of the world; one through the equinocial points, Aries and Libra; the other through the solstitial points, Cancer and Capricornus. They are called the equinocial and solstitial circles, and divide the ecliptic into four equal parts. The points where they intersect the ecliptic are called the cardinal points.

THREE times the equinocial line he circled; four times 'twas the car of night, From pole to pole, traversing each colour. Milton.

COMA, n.f. [σέφας.] A morbid disposition to sleep; a lethargy.

COMART. n.f. This word, which I have only met with in one place, seems to signify treaty; article; from comm., and mart., or market.
By the same comart,
And carriage of the articles designed,
His fall to Hamlet.

SHAKESPEARE'S Hamlet.

COMATE. n.f. [con and mate.] Companion.
My mates and brothers in exile.

SHAKESPEARE'S As you like it.

COMATOSE. adj. [from coma.] Lethargic; sleepy to a disease.
Our last color is from Ruffia, the great and principal use where is in hydrical and comatic cases.

GREAT.

COMB in the end, and Com in the beginning of names, seem to be derived from the British cum, which signifies a low situation.

GIBBON'S Camden.

COMB, in Cornish, signifies a valley, and had the same meaning anciently in the French tongue.

COMB. n.f. [comb, Saxone; kem, Dut.] An instrument to separate and adjust the hair.

By fair Ligea's golden comb,
With which she parted the two diamond locks,
Sleeking her soft alluring locks.

Milton.

I made an instrument in fashion of a comb, while teeth being in number fifteen, were about an inch and a half broad, and the intervals of the teeth about two inches wide.

NEwTON.

2. The top or crest of a cock, so called from its pricked indentures.

Cocks have great combs and fooks, hens little or none.

High was his comb, and coral red withal. With dents embattled like a castle-wall. Dryden.

3. The cavities in which the bees lodge their honey. Perhaps from the same word which makes the termination of towns, and signifies hollow or deep.

This in affairs of state,
Employ'd at home, abides within the gate,
To fortify the combs, to build the wall,
To prop the ruins, left the fabric fall.

Dryden's Vergil.

To COMB. v.a. [from the noun.]
1. To divide, and clean, and adjust the hair with a comb.
Her care shall be To comb your nodle with a three-egg'd tool.

DIVERS with us, that are grown grey, and yet would appear young, find means to make their hair black, by combing it, as they say, with a three-egg'd comb, or the like. Bacon.

She with ribbons tied
His tender neck, and comb'd his silken hide.

Milton.

There was a sort of engine, from which were extended twenty long poles, whereupon the mountain comb'd his head.

Swift.

2. To lay any thing consisting of filaments smooth, by drawing through narrow interstices; as, to comb wool.

A BRUSH to clean combs. COMB-BRUSH. n.f. [comb and brush.] A brush to clean combs.

COMB-MAKER. n.f. [comb and maker.] One whose trade is to make combs.

This wood is of use for the turner, engraver, carver, and comb-maker.

MARTIN'S Household.

COMB'AT. n.v. [combattre, combattre.] To combat.

1. To fight: generally in a duel, or hand to hand.

FAVOUR, I will not combat in my shirt.

SHAKESPEARE.

2. To act in opposition, as the acid and alkalie combat.

Two planets rushing from aspect of king
Of forceful opposition in mid sey,
Should combat, and their jarring forces confound.

Milton.

To COMB'AT. v.a. To oppose; to fight.

Their oppressors have changed the scene, and combatt'd the opinions in their true shapes.

DAY of Pity.

Love yields at last, thus combatt'd by pride,
And the submiss to be the Roman's bride.

GRAVILL.

COMBAT. n.f. [from the verb.] Combat; battle; duel; strife; opposition; generally between two, but sometimes it is used for battle.

Those regions were full both of cruel monsters and monstrous men; all which, by private combs, they delivered the countries of

SIDNEY.

The noble combat that, with joy and fear,
Was fought in Paulina ! She had one eye declined for the loss of her husband, another elevated that the oracle was fulfilled.

SHAKESPEARE.

The combat noble was well accustomed to be tried. Dryden.

COMBATANT. n.f. [combatante.] He that fights with another; duelist; antagonist in arms.

So 'twasn't the mighty combatant, that hell Grew darker at their own. Milton's Paradise Lost.

Two, single combatants,
Duel'd their armies rank'd in proud array,
Himself an army.

Milton's Ageantes.

3. He combats, as with another; combats with another; combats with.

With his sword unsheathe'd, on pain of life,
Com tended both combatants to cease their strife.

Dryden.

Like despairing combattants they strive against
Each other, as if they had behold the martial shield of Arminio, which dazzled the beholders with too much brightness.

Dryden.

D. A Champion.

When any of those combattants strips his terms of ambiquity, I shall think him a champion for knowledge.

LOCKE.

With far before the thing defended.
Men become combattants for their opinions. Locke.

COMBER. n.f. [combs.] He whose trade it is to daintly use wool, and lay it smooth both for the finer.

COMBINE. adj. [from combine.] Conjoined; trothed; promised; settled by compact.

A word of Shakespeare.

She left a nobler brother; with him she flew of her fortune, her marriage dowry; with both, her combine husband, this well- deserving Anglion.

SHAKESPEARE'S Measure for Measure.

COMBINATION. n.f. [from combine.] 1. Union for some certain purpose; association; league. A combination is of private persons; a confederacy, of states or sovereigns.

This cunning cariades.
The articles o' th' combination drew,
As himself pleads.

SHAKESPEARE'S Henry VIII.

2. It is now generally used in an ill sense; but was formerly indifferent.

They aim to fide their will and power, under the disguise of holy combination.

King Charles.

3. Union of bodies, or qualities; combination; conjunction.

These natures, from the moment of their first combination, have been and are for ever incomparable.

Hooke.

Resolution of compound bodies by fire, does not so much erch mankind as it divides the bodies; as upon the score of its making new compounds by new combinations.

BYRD.

Ingratitude is always in combination with pride and hard-heartedness.

SOUTH.

4. Copulation of ideas in the mind. They never suffer any ideas to be joined in their understandings, in any other or stronger combination than what their own nature and correspondence gives them.

LOCKE.

5. Combination is used, in mathematics, to denote the variation or alteration of any number of quantities, letters, factors, or the like, in all the different manners possible. Thus the number of possible changes or combinations of the twenty-four letters of the alphabet, taken first two by two, then three by three, &c., amount to 1:301,742,887,252,999,425,128,493,407,200.

Chambers.

COM'BINE. v.a. [combiner, Fr. binar jungere, Lat.] 1. To join together.

Let us not then supplant our happy state,
As not to finge or combate. Milton's Paradise Lost.

2. To link in union.

God, the best maker of all marriages,
Combin'd your hearts in one, your realms in one.

SHAKESPEARE.

Friendship is the cement which really combines mankind.

Gover'nment of the Tongue.

3. To agree; to accord; to fetiieby compact.

For the sake of his dear love I set on his fair daughter.

As mine now hers, so hers is set on mine.
COM

And all amantled, face what thou might combine.
By holy marriage. Shaks. Romeo and Juliet.

4. To join words or ideas together: opposed to anastrophe.

To COMBINE. n. v. 1. To unite or combine.

2. To unite in friendship or design.

COMBUSTIBLE. adj. [combust. combustible, Lat.] Having the quality of catching fire; susceptible of fire.

COMBUSTIBILITY. n. s. [from combustible.] Aptness to take fire.

COMBUSTION. n. s. [French.]

1. Conflagration; burning; combustion by fire.

2. Tumult; hurry; hubbub; bulle; hurly burly.

Mutual combustions, bloodshed, and wars may destroy them, through very fineness, after the experience of so multitude miseries. Hume.

Prophecyng, with accents terrible, Of dire combustions, and confus'd events.

Once burnt, twice shamed, 3. To combine together by the greatest possibility. Shaks. Much Ado.

Those fires were among the houses of York and Lancaster, brought all England into an horrible combustion.

How much more of pow'r.

Army yealt, armes, numbersetz to raise, Dreadful combustions warding and disputing, Though not dispersing, their happy native seat! Mil. But joy, from whence this new combustions spring.

COMBUSTION. n. s. [French.]

The comet moves in an incanncible fury, and combustion, and at the same time with an exact regularity, in the circle of the equi-distant parabola.

Aldrich's Guardian.

To COME. w. n. pret. came, particip. came, coman, Saxan; komen, Dut. komen, German.

1. To remove from a distant to a nearer place; to arrive: opposed to go.

And troubled blood through his pale face was seen To come and go, with tidings from the bears.

Fairy Queen.

COMFORT. n. s. [from comfort.] A word of common use.

Cæsar will come forth to-day. Shak. Julius Cæsar.

Climbing to look on you, thinking you dead, I spake on the crown as having it in my camp.

Shakes. Henry IV.

The colour of the king doth come and go.

Between his purpose and his condition.

The Christians having fixed almost all the day in order of battle, in the sight of the enemy, vainly expounding when he should come forth to give them battle, returned at night to their camp. Hakluyt's History of the Turks.

'Tis true that since the senate's favour came, They grow no wiser. Dryden's Titus Andronicus.

Ah! there the mishap comes.

Rome's Royal Convert.

2. To draw near; to advance towards.

By the picking of my thumbs, Something wicked this way comes. Shak. Macbeth.

3. To move in any manner towards another; implying the idea of being received by another, or of tending towards another. The word always rectifies the place to which the motion tends, not that place which it leaves; yet this meaning is sometimes almost evanescent and imperceptible.

The galloping of horses, who's come by?

Shakes. Macbeth.

Blit them cover the table, serve in the meat, and we will come in to dinner.

Shakes. Merchant of Venice.

As soon as the commandment came abroad, the children of Israel brought in abundance the first fruits.

Cromwell's Chronicle.

Knowledge is a thing of their own invention, or which they come to by fair reasoning.

Burnet's History.

It is impossible to come near to God by any means, without receiving some favour. Congreve.

None may come in view, but such as are permitted. Locke.

No perception of bodies, at a distance, may be accounted for by the motion of particles coming from them, and striking on our organs. Locke.

They take the colour of what is laid before them, and as soon foole and reject it to the next that happens to over in their way. Locke.

God has made the intellectual world harmonious and motionless without matter, but it will never come into our heads at all, once. Locke.

4. To proceed; to influe.

Behold, my fan, which came forth of my bowels, freeth my mouth. " 2 Sam. xvi. 13.

5. To advance from one stage or condition to another.

Trust me, I am exceeding weary.

"Is it come to that? I had thought weariness durst not have attacked one of so high blood. Shak. Richard III.

When he would after have turned his teeth upon Spain, yet he was taken with order before it came to that. Bacon.

Ezra, Melchizedek, and Solomon's feast, differ no more but as brethren and sisters; if it come to that, that the beds allations of a feast are taken in an ill sense and traduced. Bacon.

His falsehoods had filthiness with the wantons. Shakespeare.

So that once the stigmata was like to come to a just battle. Keats.

When it come to that once, they that had much flesh without they had lost. Isfaggni.

Every new giving position is a part of the action, except we conclude nothing action till the players come to kind of final situation. Dryden.

The forces whereby bodies cohere is very much greater when they come to immediate contact, than when they are at ever so trifls a distance, the most evident principles.

6. To be brought to some condition either for better or worse, implying some degree of causality: with to.

One said to Achilles, 'tis a strange thing why men should rather give to the poor than to philosophers. He answered, because they think themselves may sooner come to be poor than to be philosophers.

Bacon's Apothegms.

His sons come to honour, and he knew it not. John.

He being come to the estate, keeps a braw family.

Locke.

You were told your master had gone to a tavern, and come home with miasmas.

Swift.

7. To attain any condition or character.

A serpent, ere he comes to be a dragon, Does eat a bat. Ben Jonson's Catesbys.

He wondred how the came to know what he had done, and meant to do. Hostiles.

The testimony of concience, thus informed, comes to be a strong and authentic, and is much to be relied upon.

Swift.

8. To become.

So come I a widow;

And never shall have length of life enough.

Shakes. Henry IV.

To rain upon remembrance with mine eyes.

Shakes. Henry IV.

Where he returns from hunting, I will not speak with him; say I am sick. If you come full of former services, You shall do well. Shak. King Henry VI.

Here come the publicans, decked out, but by a flag and handsome prayer. Ddnap's Rules for Devils.

9. To arrive at some act or habit, or disposition.

They would quickly come to have a natural abhorrence for that which they found made them frighted. Locke.

10. To change from one state into another defined; as the butter comes, when the parts begin to separate in the churn.

It is reported, that if you lay good stores of kernels of grapes about the root of a vine, it will make the vine come earlier, and bigger.

Bacon's Natural History.

Then butter does refuse to come.

And love proves craft and humourous, Hudibras.

In the coming or sprouting of malt, as it must not come too little, so it must not come too much.

Muirhead.

11. To become present, and no longer future.

It will come, when my master muck.

In Caesar's wars a noble theme shall chuse.

Dryden's Fugger.

12. To become present, and no longer absent.

That is my joy.

Not to have seen before; for nature now.

Come all at once, confounding my delight.

Dryden's King Arthur.

Meanwhile the gods the dome of Vulcan through Apollon comes, and Neptun comes along.

Pope's Odyssey.

Come then, my friend, my genius, come along.

Thus matter of the poet and the song! Pope.

13. To happen; to fall out.

The duke of Buckingham, when he had his dukedom, was to be here with him this night.

How comes that? Shak. King Lear.

14. To befal, as an event.

Let me alone then, I may speak, and let come on me what will.

"Ye, think, xi. 3.

15. To follow as a consequence.

Those that are kin to the king, never prick their finger but they say, there is some of the king's blood spilt. How comes that? says he, that takes upon him not to consider the answer, if I am the king's poor cousin. Sirs.

Shakes. Henry IV.

16. To cease very lately from some act or state; to have just done or suffered any thing.

Died said unto Urash, come then thou not forth thy journey?

" 2 Sam. xvi. 10.

17. To.
To Come about. To come to pass; to fall out; to come into being. Probably from the French venir a best.

And let me speak to him yet unknown world.

To Banty the Bacon's. Alterhury. our

To

To Sift.

To Shikiftwe-

To 7emJ>k.

There came water therewith, and when he had drunk, his spirit came again, and he revived.

To Com. To come at; to reach; to get within in the reach of; to obtain; to gain.

Neither sword nor spear can come at confidence; but it is above and beyond the reach of both.

Cats will eat and destroy your musar, if they can come at it. Evelyn's Calendar.

In order to come at a true knowledge of ourselves, we should consider how far we may derive power.

Nothing makes a woman more esteemed by the opposite sex than chastity, and we always prize those men who are hurtful to come at. Addison, Spect.

To Come by. To obtain; to gain; to acquire. This seems an irregular and improper use, but has very powerful authorities.

Things most needful to preserve this life, are most prompt and easy for all living creatures to come by. Higher.

Love is like a child. That longs for everything that he can come by. Shakespeare.

Thy cage. Shall be my precedent; as thou got't Milan, I'll come by Naples. Shakespeare's Tempest.

Are you not ashamed to inform a poor widow to so rough a course to come by her own? Shakespeare's Henry IV.

The ointment wherewith this is done is made of divers ingredients, whereof the strangest and hardest to come by is the maw of a dead man unburied. Bacon's Natural History.

And with that wicked eye A letter they come by. From our king's majesty. Denham.

He tells a sad story, how he had it for him to come by the book of Tiltagrani. Stillingfleet.

Amidst your train this unform judge will wait, Examine how you come by all your state. Dryden's Amenecogue.

To Come in. To enter.

What, are you there? come in, and give fame had.

The simple ideas, united in the same subject, are as perfectly distinct as those that come in by different senses. Locke.

To Come in. To comply; to yield; to hold out no longer.

If the arch-rebel Tyrones, is the time of that war, it should offer to come in and submit himself to her majesty, would you not have him received? Spenser on Ireland.

To Come in. To arrive at a port, or place of rendezvous.

At what time our second fleet, which kept the narrow seas, was come in and joined to our main fleet.

Bacon.

There was the Plymouth squadron now come in, Which in the Strength left winter was aboard. Dryden.

To Come in. To become modifie; to be brought into use.

Then came rich cloaths and graceful action in, These instruments were taught more moving notes. Addison.

Silken garments did not come in till late, and the use of them in men was often restrained by law. Arbuthnot on Comus.

To Come in. To be an ingredient; to make part of a composition.

A generous contempt of that in which too many men place their happiness, must come in to heighten his character. Addison.

To Come in. To accurre from an elate, trade, or otherwise, as gain.

I had rather be mad with him, that when he had thought all the ships that came into the harbour his; than with you, that you have quoth coming in, think you have nothing. Suckling.

To Come in. To come in abundance.

Sweetheart, we shall be rich ere we depart, If fairings come thus plentifully. Shakespeare.

To Come in far. To be early enough to obtain: taken from hunting, where the dogs that are after flow get nothing.

Shape and beauty, worth and education, wit and understanding, gentle nature and agreeable humour, honour and virtue, were to come in for their share of such contracts. Addison.

If thinking is essential to matter, fleets and fames will come in for their share of privilege. Addison.

One who had in the rear extended been, And could not for a taste o'th'fields come in, Licks the solid earth. Tatt's Joviall.

The rest came in for subsidies, whereas they think considerable sums. Swift.

To Come in to. To join in; to bring help.

They marched to Wells, where the lord Audley, with whom their leaders had secret intelligence, came in to them; and was by them, with great gladness and cries of joy, received as their general. Bacon's Henry VII.

To Come into. To comply with; to agree to.

The fame of their virtues will make men ready to come in to every thing that is done for the publick good. Atterbury.

To Come near. To approach; to resemble in excellence: a metaphor from races.

Whom you cannot equal or come near in doing, you would destroy or ruin with evil speaking. Bacon's Essays.

The whole archiepiscopal and chorographical invention, that nothing ancient or modern seems to come near. Temple.

To Come of. To proceed, as a descendant from ancestors.

Of Prais's royal race my mother came. Dryden's Annals.

Self-love is to nature an insatiable, that it makes us partial even to those that come of us, as well as ourselves. Addison's Spectator.

To Come of. To proceed, as effects from their causes.

Will you please, Sir, be gone? I told you what would come of this. Shakespeare's Winter's Tale.

To Come on. To advance; to make progress.

Things seem to come in space to their former state.

There was in the camp both strength and virtual sufficient for the obtaining of the victory, if they had not protracted the war until winter were come on. Addison's Spectator.

The sea came on, the south with mighty roar Dispers'd us and dash'd the reef upon the rock. Dryden.

So travellers, who waked the day, Noting at length the setting sun, They mend their pace as night comes on. Gravinese.

To Come on. To advance to combat. The great ordinance once discharged, the armies fall on, and joined battle.

Rhymer, come on, and do the work you can; I fear not you, nor yet a better man. Dryden.

To Come on. To thrive; to grow big; to grow.

Come on, poor babe! Some powerful spirit instruct the lites and raven To be thy nurses. Shakespeare's Winter's Tale.

It should from the experiments, both of the salt and of the roes, that they will come far safer or in water than in earth; for the nourishment is easier drawn out of water than out of earth. Bacon's Natural History.

To Come over. To repeat an act.

They are perpetually tracing their friends to come over to them. Addison's Spectator.

A man, in changing his side, not only makes himself hated by those he left, but is seldom heartily esteemed by those he comes over. Addison's Spectator.
57. To Come up with. To overtake.

58. To Come upon. To invade; to attack.

There was a hound, and three thousand foot English, commanded by Sir John Norris, were charged by Parma, coming upon them with seven thousand horses. Bacon.

When they came upon him, it came alone, bringing no other evil with it but itself. Smith.

59. To Come. In futurity; not present; to happen hereafter.

It serveth to discover that which is hid, as well as to forestall that which is to come. Bacon's Natural History.

In times to come, my waves shall wash the walls of mighty Rome. Dryden.

Taking a lease of land for years to come, at the rent of one hundred pounds. Locke.

60. Come is a word of which the use is various and extensive, but the radical signification of tendency hicberward is uniformly preferred. When we say he came from a place, the idea is that of returning, or arriving, or becoming nearer; or when we say he went from a place, we conceive finely departure, or removal to a greater distance. The butter comes; it is passing from its former state to that which is defined; it is advancing towards us. Come. [particle of the verb.]

Thy words were heard, and I am come to thy words. Daniel.

Come. A particle of exhaustion; be quick; make no delay. Come, let us make our friendly drinks. Come. [from the verb.]

A present day's achievement. Come. [from the verb.]

61. To Come to. To amount to.

The emperor imposed so great a circuit upon all corn to be transported out of Sicily, that the very cufoms come as much, as both the price of the corn and the freight together. Knolli's History of the Turks.

You secretly pretend to know More than your dividend comes to. Hudibras.

He pays not this tax immediately, yet his profit will find it by a greater want of money than that comes to. Locke.

62. To Come to. To amount to.

It is the same; the same; as many times as to, that with the works of men being the fames, their drifts and principal effects remain. Woodyard's Natural History.

He pays not this tax immediately, yet his profit will find it by a greater want of money than they do. Boyle's Hist. of Plantae.

63. To Come to. To amount to.

As they fall into frost; ezctacy of joy, wherein I shall leave him till he comes to himself. Temple.

64. To Come to. To be effectual; to fall out.

It cometh, we grant, many times to a purpose, that the works of men being the same, their drifts and principal effects remain. Woodyard's Natural History.

How cometh it to a purpose? that some liquors cannot penetrate into or mollify some bodies, which are easily furnished with other liquors? Boyle's Hist. of Plantae.

65. To Come. To grow out of the ground.

Over-wit, at twoming-time, with as breadth much dearth, incomparably as the corn never cometh up. Bacon.

If wars should move them down never to set, yet they may be suddenly supplied, and come up again. Bacon.

Good intentions are the seeds of good actions; and every man ought to know them, whether they come up or no. Temple.

66. To Come to. To amount to.

He prepares for a surrender, affirming that all thees will not come up to near the quantity required. Bacon.

67. To Come to. To rise; to advance.

Whole ignorant celebrity will not. Come up to it truth. Shakespeare's Winter's Tale.

Consideration does not, that may make men not come up to the character of those who rejoice in the name, yet at least satisfy the duty of being present. Steele's Preparation for Death.

The veil of Kyphus, which conceals the thing, must have been of such extraordinary price, that there is no stuff in our age cometh up to it. Addison.

When the heart is full, it is angry at all words that cannot come up to it. Swift.
1. To strengthen; to enliv'en; to invigorate.
The evidence of God's own triinity, added unto the the certainty of them, both not a little comfort and form the sense. Hooker.
Light exalteth in considering the spirits of men;
which, as they do not, so I am sure not to by this cause the great passions com-
Bacon's Natural History.
Some of the apples had been guilty of consid-more.

2. To console; to strengthen the mind under the pressure of calamity.
They bemoved him, and comforted him, over all the evil that the Lord had brought upon him.
Job xxii. 11.

COMFORTERS. adj. [from comfort.]
Wanting comfort; being without anything to allay misfortune; used of persons
as well as things.
Yet shall not my death be comfortless, receiving it by your favour.

COMFORTLESS. adj. [from comfort.]
Wanting comfort; being without anything to allay misfortune; used of persons
as well as things.
Yet shall not my death be comfortless, receiving it by your favour.

COMFORTABLE. adj. [from comfort.]
1. Receiving comfort; susceptible of comfort; cheerful: of persons. Not in u.
For my false he can be: he can bear
A while at the arm's end. Shaksp. As you like it.
My lord was not bound to do it, he can be:
His comfortable temper has forsaken him.
He is much out of health. Shakespeare's Timon.

2. Admitting comfort; of condition: of what can promote him in a comfortable appearance before his dreadful judge? South.

3. Dispensing comfort; having the power of giving comfort.
He had no brother, which, though it be comfortable for kings to have, yet doth with the
father, Bacon's Henry VII.
The life of many miserable men were faved, and a comfortable provision made for their subsist-
ance.
Dryden's Fables, Dedication.

COMFORTABLY. adv. [from comfortable.]
In a comfortable manner; with cheerfulness; without despair.
Upon view of the sincerest of that performance,
where comfort and cheerfuly for God's performance.
Hammond.

COMFORTER. n. f. [from comfort, or comfortable.]
1. One that administers consolation in misfortunes; one that strengthens and support the mind in misery or danger.
This very prayer of Christ obtained angels to be sent him, as conforters in his agony. Hocker.
The heavens have bid thee with a goodly son,
To be a comfort when he is gone. Shakespeare's Richard III.

Nineveh is laid waste, who will be consoled whence shall I seek comfort? Lamentations 3, v. 29.
For the sake of the Third Person of the Holy Trinity; the Paraclete.

COMFORTLESS. adj. [from comfort.]
Wanting comfort; being without anything misfortune; used of persons
as well as things.
Yet shall not my death be comfortless, receiving it by your favour.
Where was the cave, wrought with wordy art,
Deep, dark, uneasy, delightful, comfortless. Fairy Q.

COMFORTABLE. adj. [from comfort.]
1. Receiving comfort; susceptible of comfort; cheerful: of persons. Not in u.
For my false he can be: he can bear
A while at the arm's end. Shaksp. As you like it.
My lord was not bound to do it, he can be:
His comfortable temper has forsaken him.
He is much out of health. Shakespeare's Timon.

2. Admitting comfort; of condition: of what can promote him in a comfortable appearance
before his dreadful judge? South.

3. Dispensing comfort; having the power of giving comfort.
He had no brother, which, though it be comfortable for kings to have, yet doth with the
father, Bacon's Henry VII.
The life of many miserable men were faved, and a comfortable provision made for their subsist-
ance.
Dryden's Fables, Dedication.

COMFORTABLY. adv. [from comfortable.]
In a comfortable manner; with cheerfulness; without despair.
Upon view of the sincerest of that performance,
where comfort and cheerfuly for God's performance.
Hammond.

COMFORTER. n. f. [from comfort, or comfortable.]
1. One that administers consolation in misfortunes; one that strengthens and support the mind in misery or danger.
This very prayer of Christ obtained angels to be sent him, as conforters in his agony. Hocker.
The heavens have bid thee with a goodly son,
To be a comfort when he is gone. Shakespeare's Richard III.

COMFORTLESS. adj. [from comfort.]
Wanting comfort; being without anything misfortune; used of persons
as well as things.
Yet shall not my death be comfortless, receiving it by your favour.
Where was the cave, wrought with wordy art,
Deep, dark, uneasy, delightful, comfortless. Fairy Q.

COMFORTABLE. adj. [from comfort.]
1. Receiving comfort; susceptible of comfort; cheerful: of persons. Not in u.
For my false he can be: he can bear
A while at the arm's end. Shaksp. As you like it.
My lord was not bound to do it, he can be:
His comfortable temper has forsaken him.
He is much out of health. Shakespeare's Timon.

2. Admitting comfort; of condition: of what can promote him in a comfortable appearance
before his dreadful judge? South.

3. Dispensing comfort; having the power of giving comfort.
He had no brother, which, though it be comfortable for kings to have, yet doth with the
father, Bacon's Henry VII.
The life of many miserable men were faved, and a comfortable provision made for their subsist-
ance.
Dryden's Fables, Dedication.

COMFORTABLY. adv. [from comfortable.]
In a comfortable manner; with cheerfulness; without despair.
Upon view of the sincerest of that performance,
where comfort and cheerfuly for God's performance.
Hammond.

COMFORTER. n. f. [from comfort, or comfortable.]
1. One that administers consolation in misfortunes; one that strengthens and support the mind in misery or danger.
This very prayer of Christ obtained angels to be sent him, as conforters in his agony. Hocker.
The heavens have bid thee with a goodly son,
To be a comfort when he is gone. Shakespeare's Richard III.
COM

Now will I be your Rosaline in a more coming on disposition; and, ask me what you will, I will grant it.
That very lapidary himself, with a coming scope and in the same place, would have made the cork's choice.
That he had been to affuete a husband, was no ill argument of the most courtly mind.
On morning wings how active springs the mind?
How easy every labour it pursues,
How coming to the poet ever made! Pope's Horace.
1.

COMMAND. n.s. [from the verb.]

1. The right of commanding; power; supreme authority. It is used in military affairs, as magistracy or government in civil life; with short commands.

Take pity of your town and of your people, While yet my soldiers are in my command. Shakespeare's Henry V.

2. Cognate authority; despotism.

Command and force may often create, but can never cure, so averien; and whatever any one is brought to by compulsion, he will leave as soon as he can.

He assumed an absolute command over his subjects.
Dryden.

3. The act of commanding; the mandate uttered; order given.

Of this tree we may not take one touch;
God so commanded, and left that command Sole daughter of his voice. Milton's Paradise Lost. As three is no prohibition of it, to no command for it. Taylor.

The captain gives command, the joyful train
Girotho the gloomy shades, and leave the main.
Dryden.

4. The power of overlooking or surveying your place.

TheIREY BAND,
Which overlooks the vale with wide command.
Dryden's Merit.

COMMANDER. n.s. [commander, Fr.

1. He that has the supreme authority; a general; a leader; a chief.

We'll do the hommage, and be rule'd by thee;
Love thee as our commander and our king. Shak.
I have given him for a leader and commander to thee, James I. 4. 4.

The Romans, when commanders in war, spake to their army, and flew them, My soldiers.

Charles, Henry, and Francis of France, often adventured rather as soldiery than as commanders.

Sir Pelham O'Neil appeared as their commander in chief.
Clarendon.

Supreme commander both of sea and land.

The herick 'aften of some great commander, entierred for the common good, and honour of the Christian cause.

They gave their commanders, by credit in their army, fell into the feares as a counterpoise to the people. Swift.

2. A paving beetle, or a very great wooden mallet, with an handle about three foot long, to use in both hands. Mason.

3. An instrument of surgery.

The globose comonium, commonly called the commander, is of use in the most burning bowels, and where the luxion had kept no longer con-
com. Wifjman's Surgery.

COMMANDERY. n. s. [from commander.]

A body of the knights of Malta, belonging to the same nation.

COMMANDMENT. n.s. [commandment,
French.]

1. Mandate; command; order; precept.
They plainly require some special commandments for that which is cried at their hands. Hooker.
Say, you chose him more after our commandments,
Than guided by your own affections.
Shakespeare's Coriolanus.

By the holy commander by God given to Adarz, to forbear to feed thereon, it pleased God to make trial of his obedience. Raleigh's History of the World.
COM'EMENT. n. s. [from comment.]

Beginning; date.

The events were gathered together into one place, the third day from the commencement of the creation.

To Commend. o. a. [commend. Lat.]

1. To represent as worthy of notice, regard, or kindness, to commend.

2. To deliver up with confidence.

To commend, to commend.

To thee I do commend my watchful soul.

3. To praise; to mention with approbation.

Who is Silvia? What is she?

4. To mention by way of keeping in memory; to commend to remembrance.

Signior Antonio Commends him to you.

5. To produce to favourable notice.

The chorus was only to give the young ladies an occasion of entertaining the French king with vocal musick, and of commending their own voices.

6. To fend.

These the chariot which Latins sends, And the rich presents to the prince commend.

Comment. n. f. [from the verb.]

Commendation. Not now in use.

Tell her I send to her my commend. I take special care my greetings be delivered.

Commeudable. adj. [from commend.]

Laudable; worthy of praise. Ancestry accentuated on the first syllable.

- And power, unto itself most commendable.
- Hath not a tomb as evident, as a chair.
- That what is hath done, in Shakes. Cont. Lines.
- Order and decent ceremonies in the church, are not only comely, but commendable.

Drake's Advice to Villiers. Commander and woman are commendable to the state. Or, being Addition on Ancient.

- Many heroes, and many worthy actions, being sufficiently commendable from true and unquestionable merit, have received advancement from falsehood.
- Brown's Vulgar Errors.
- Constancy is not drawn, like other countries, in a soft peaceful posture; but is adorned with emblems that mark out the military genius of her inhabitants. This is, I think, the only commendable quality that the old poets have touched upon in the description of our country.

Commeurably. adv. [from commendable.]

Laudably; in a manner worthy of commendation.

- Of preachers the share holds a number, all commendably labouring in their vocation.

- It had been once mentioned to him, that his peace should be made, if he would resign his bishopric, and deasy of Walmington; for he had close in mind the history of the place.

Commenant. n. s. [from commend.]

- One who holds a living in commend.

Commentation. n. f. [from comment.]

1. Recommendation; favourable representation.

- This jewel and my gold are yours, provided I have your commendation for my more extremity.

- The choice of them should be by the commendation of the great officers of the kingdom. Bacon.

2. Praie; declaration of esteem.

- His fame would not get to heaven and noble an air to fly in as in your breath, to could not find a fitter subject of commendation. Sidney.

3. Ground of praise.

- Good-nature is the best godlike commendation of a man. Dryden's Journal. Dedication.

- Sir Francis Drake, a virgin, and his fervent, say to him.

Commentatory. adj. [from commend.]

Favourably representive; containing praise.

It doth much add to a man's reputation, and is like perpetual letters commendatory, to have good words of him, to attain them, it almost sufficeth, not, to dislike them.

- Such commendations become as a malt, Bacon, and his fervent, say to him.

Commentator. n. s. [from commend.]

- Favourably representative; containing praise.

Commensurate. n. s. [from commensurate.]

Proportion; reduction of some things to some common measure.

A body greater, or over small, will not be thought to be a form as to a form, is thought to the proportion, it is thought to the proportion, and the proportion, to make it move well.

- Bacon's Natural History. A line or superficies is in a particular proportion, or in proportion, of one thing to another. Swift.

To Comment. o. a. [comment. Lat.]

1. To annotate; to write notes upon an author; to expound; to explain; with upon before the thing explained.

- Such are thy secrets, which my life makes good, and comments on thee for every thing. Thy words do find me out, and parallels bring. And in another make me understand. Herriot.
- Critics having first taken a liking to one of those remarks, proceed to their just, and to their just. To their just.
- Dryden's Journal, Dedication.
- They have contained themselves only to comment upon these texts, and make the best copies they could after the whole original, or pony.
- Indeed I hate that any man should be idle, while I must translate and comment. Pope.

2. To make remarks; to make observations.

Enter his chamber, view his lifelike corps, and comment then upon his hidden death. Shakespeare's Henry VI.

Comment. n. f. [from the verb.]

1. Annotations on an author; notes; explanation; exposition; remarks.

Adam came into the world a philosopher, which appeared by his writing the nature of things upon their
In any country, that hath commerces with the rest of the world, there is no peace possible now to be without the use of silver coin.

2. Common or familiar intercourse.

Good-nature, which consists in overlooking of faults, is to be exercised only in doing ourselves justice in the ordinary commerce and connexions of life. Addison.

To COMMERCE. n. [from the noun.]

1. To traffic.

Erskine in the description of Tyre, and of the exceeding breadth of the Earth, as it is only a short market, rectify both the people with whom they commerce, and also what commodities every country yielded.

2. To hold intercourse with.

Come, but keep the wanted state, With even step and moving gait, And looks commencing with the eyes. Thy sage soul living in thine eyes. Milton.

COMMERCIAL, adj. [from commerce.]

Relating to commerce or traffic. To COMMUNICATE. v. n. [con and migrare, Lat.] To remove in a body, or by consent, from one country to another.

COMMUNICATION. n. f. [communicta, Lat.]

1. A threat; a denunciation of punishment, or of vengeance. Some parts of knowledge God has thought fit to seclude from us; to sense them not only by precepts and communication, but with difficulty and impossibilities.

2. The recital of God's threatenings on flatter days.

COMMUNICATORY. adj. [from communication.]

Denunciatory; threatening. To COMMINGLE. v. a. [commingere, Latin.] To mix into one mass; to unite intimately; to mix; to blend.

COMMUNE. n. [commune, Latin.]

To unite one with another.

Dissolvements of gum tragacanth and oil of sweet almonds do not commingle, the oil remaining on the top till they be filtered. Bacon.

COMMUNICABLE. adj. [from commune.]

Frangible; reducible to powder; susceptible of pulverization. The beth diamonds are commingible and are so far from breaking hammers, that they suffer not to reflection, and not any ordinary pelt. Bacon.

To COMMUNICATE. v. a. [commune, Latin.] To grind; to pulverize; to break into small parts.

Parchment, skins, and cloth drink in liquors, though themselves be entire bodies, and not comminuted, as beef and flesh. Bacon's Natural History.

COMMUNICATION. n. f. [from commune.]

1. The act of grinding into small parts; pulverization.

The jaw in men, and animals furnished with grinders, hath an oblique or transverse motion, necessary for comminution of the meat. Ray's Cisant.
COMMISSION. n. s. [from commissary.]

The office of a commissary. A commissary is not grantable for life, so as to bind the succeeding bishop, though it should be confirmed by the dean and chapter.

Aysh'm's Patrons.

COMMISSION. n. s. [commission, low Latin.]

1. The act of entrusting any thing.

2. A warrant by which any trust is held, or authority exercised.

• Commission is the warrant, or letters patent, that all men exercising jurisdiction, either ordinary or extraordinary, have for their power.

3. Communion to do any thing.

Scal's a commission to a blank of danger.

Shakespeare's Trivius and Crelidus.

The subject's grief.

Commission, which compels from each the oath or his subscriptions, to be levied without delay.

Shakespeare's Henry VIII.

He left his powers.

Bore the commission of any place and person;

The which immediately may well stand up

And call it his brother. Shakesp., King Lear.

He would have them fully acquainted with the nature and extent of their office, and do him communion with instructions: by one he conveys power, by the other knowledge.

Shaksp.

3. A warrant by which a military officer is constituted.

The sun, filled with the vain hope of the conquest of Persea, gave out his commissions into all parts of his empire, for the raising of a mighty army.

Kanit's History of the Turks.

I made a colonel; though I gained my commission by the hero's virtues, having leap over a fix-barred gare.

Addison's Freckleton.

He for his son a gay commission buys,

Who drinks,whose, fights, and in a duel dies.

Pope.

4. Charge; mandate; office; employment.

It was both a strange commission, and a strange obedience to a commission, for men, in the midst of their own blood, and being to fiercely affrighted, to hold their hands contrary to the laws of nature and necessity.

Bacon's War with Spain.

Such commission as often I have receiv'd, to answer thy desire

Of knowledge within bounds. Milton's Par. Lost.

At his command the storms invade

The winds by his command blow,

Till with a nod he bid them cease. Dryden.

He bore his great commission in his look;

But sweeter temper'd aw, and soften'd all his fire.

5. Act of committing a crime; perpetration.

Sins of commission are distinguished in theology from sins of omission.

Every commission of sin introduces into the foul a certain degree of hardness. Swift's Sermons.

He indulges himself in the habit of known sin, whether commission of something which God hath forbidden, or the omission of something commanded. Rogers's Sermons.

6. A number of people joined in a truce or peace.

7. The slate of that which is entrusted to a number of joint officers; as, the broad seal was put into commission.

8. [In commerce.] The order by which a factor trades for another person.

To COMMIS'SION, vt. a. [from commission.] To commision to empower; to appoint.

2. To send with mandate or authority.

The peace polled then, a chosen band

He call and commisioned, Latin land,

In threatening embassy. Dryden's M'r. Vine.

To COMMISS'NATE, vt. a. [from commission.] To commission; to empower; not in use.

COMMITTMENT, n. s. [from commit.] 1. Act of confiding to prison; imprisonment.

It did not appear by any new examinations or commission that any other persons were discovered.

Biswas.

They were glad to compound for his bare commit- to the Tower, whence he was within few days committed to the Clinkers.

I have been considering, ever since my commission, what it might be proper to deliver upon this occasion.

Swift's.

2. An order for sending to prison.

COMMITTEE, n. s. [from commit.] To whom the consideration or ordering of any matter is referred, either by some court to whom it belongs, or by confidants of parties. As in parliament, after a bill is read, it is either agreed to and passed, or not agreed to and rejected.

Manchester had orders to march thither, having a committee of the parliament with him, as there was another committee of the Scottish parliament assembled in that army, who were also now a committee of both kingdoms residing at London, for the carrying on the war.

Clarendon.

All comers were filled with covenanters, con- formed people, and bold men, forning each other to their ends of revenge, or power, or profit, and their comers men and followers were puffed with this covenant.

Wotton.

COMMITTEER, n. s. [from commit.] Perpetrator; he that commits.

Such an one makes a man not only a partaker of other men's sins, but a deliverer of the whole guilt to himself; yet so as to leave the comitter as full of guilt as before.

Shaksp.

COMMITTEE, n. a. [from commit.] Liable to be committed.

Besides the mistakes committible in the solary compute, the difference of chronology disturbs his computations.

Brown.

To COMMIX, v. a. [from commix, Lat.] To mingle; to commix; to mix; to unite with things in one mass.

A draught of gold distilled in aqua regia, with a draught of copper in aqua fortis commix'd, gave a great colour.

Bacon.

That was written against the spontaneous generation of frogs in the clouds; or, on the earth, out of dust and rain water commix'd. Ray on the Creation.

It is manifest, by this experiment, that the com- misioned is commiss'd; and that this comitter is commiss'd, or in other English.

Newton's Opticks.

COMMISSION, n. s. [from commix.] Mixture; incorporation of different ingredients.

Went he commiss'm Grecian and Trojan, to

That thou couldst say, this hand is Greecean all,

And this is Trojan. Shaksp.'s Trivius and Crelidus.

COMMISSION, n. s. [from commix.] Mixture; incorporation; union of various substanices in one mass.

Some species there be middle and participat- ing nature, that is, of birds and beasts, as hares, and some few others, to confirmed and set together, that we cannot determine the beginning or end of either; these being a commision of both in the whole, rather than adaptation or cement of the one unto the other. Evelyn's Vulgar Errors.

COMMITTATURE, n. s. [from commit.] 1. The act of mingling; the state of being mingled; incorporation; union in one mass.

In the commiss'm of any thing that is more oily or fleet, such bodies are best apt to pertain, the air working little upon them.

Hawke's Natural History.
They know, that howsoever men may seek their own commodious, yet, if this were done with injury unto others, it was not to be suffered. Hence, Commodity, the bias of the world. The world, which of itself is poise well, till this advantage, this vile drawing bias, this great power of the world, makes it take head from all indifferency, from all direction, purpose, course, intent. Shakespeare's King John.

After much debate of the commodity or discommodity like to ensue, they concluded.

Hayward.

2. Convenience, particular advantage. There came into her head certain variances, which, if the bad had presented commodity, the woman would have adjourned as a retreat to the other. Sidney.

She demanded leave, not to live this long fought for commodity of time, to ease her heart. Sidney.

Travelers turn out of the highway, driven either by the commodity of a foot-path, or the delicacy or the frequents of the fields. Ben Jonson's Discoveries.

It had been difficult to make such a mule where they had not so natural a commodity as the earth of Pizzouloa, which immediately hardens in the water. Addison in Italy.

Wares; merchandise; goods for traffic.

All my fortunes are at sea; nor have I money or commodity. To raise a present fund. Shaks. Merch. of Venice.

Commodity is very valuable, valuable by nature, the common measure. Locke.

Of money, in the commerce and traffic of mankind, the principal use is that of having the commodity of more bulky commodities. Abbot's on Census.

Commodity in these, [probably corrupt ed from the Spanish, commander.] The captain who commands a squadron of ships; a temporary admiral. Common.

1. Belonging equally to more than one. Though life and death be common to man and brute, and their operations in many things alike; yet by this form he lives the life of a man, and not of a brute; and hath the sense of man, and not of a brute. Hume's Origin of Man.

He who hath received a commodity, bas, besides the right of punishment common to him with other men, a particular right to seek reparation. Locke.

2. Having no possessor or owner. Where no Kindred are to be found, we fix the possession of property in the commodity, and so become again perfectly common; nor can any one have a property in them, otherwise than in other things common by nature. Locke.

Vulgar; mean; not distinguished by any excellence; often seen easy to be had; of little value; not rare; not scarce.

Or as the man, whom princes do advance. Upon their gracious mercy, to fit some common things, of course and circumstance, to the reports of the commonwealth. Davenant.

Publick; general: serving the use of all.

He was advised by a parliament-man not to be strict in reading all the common prayers, but make some variations. Webster.

I need not purchase the old common shore of Rome, which ran from all parts of the town, with the current and violence of an ordinary river.

Dr. Swift on Italy.

5. Of no rank; mean; without birth or fortune.

Look, as I blow this feather from my face, and as the ale blows it to me again. Such is the lightness of the common man.

Shakespeare's King John.

Flying bullet now, to execute his rage, appear too slow!

They mufi, as steep but common faults away.

For such a fedit I demand his life most pay. Webster.

6. Frequent; usual; ordinary.

There is an evil which I have seen common among men.

Eccles. v. 1.

The Papists were the most common place, and the butt against whom all the arrows were directed.

Cleveland.

Neither is it strange that there should be naysayers in divinity, as well as in the common law.

Swift.

7. Profitarian.

'Tis a strange thing, the impudence of some women! was the word of a dame who her self was common. L'Estrange.

Hipparchus was going to marry a common woman, but consulted Philander upon the occasion. Spettar.

8. [In grammar.] Such verbs as signify both action and passion are called common; as, express, to express, or to express; and also such nouns as are both masculine and feminine, as parents.

Common. n. f. [from the adjective.] An open ground equally used by many persons.

Then take down his head, and turn him off, like to the empty自主, to make his ears, when he is commonly said. Shakespeare's C. Caesar.

Is not the separate property of a thing the great cause of its endangerment? Does one require a common as much as he does his garden? South.

Common, adv. [from the adjective.] Commonly, ordinarily.

I am more than a common vill.

Is.

1. Equally to be participated by a certain number.

By making an explicit confent of every common necessary to any one's apprehension in himself any part of what is given in common, children or servants could not cut the meat with their father or master had provided for them in common, without affailing to every one his particular rations. Locke.

2. Equally with another; indiscriminately.

In a work of this nature it is impossible to avoid puerilities; it having that in common with dictionaries, and books of antiquities. Abbot's on Census.

To Common v. n. [from the noun.] To have a joint right with others in some common ground.

C o m m o n l a w contains those customs and usages which have, by long prescription, obtained in this nation the force of laws. It is distinguished from the statute law, which owes its authority to acts of parliament.

Com mon Pleas. The king's court now held in Westminster Hall, but anciently moveable. Guinane observes, that till Henry II. granted the magna charta, there were but two courts, the exchequer, and the king's bench, so called because it followed the king; but, upon the grant of that charter, the court of common pleas was erected, and settled at Westminster. All civil causes, both real and personal, are, or were, formerly tried in this court, according to the strict laws of the realm; and Fortescue represents it as the only court for real causes. The chief judge is called the lord chief justice of the common pleas, and is assisted by three or four associates.
1. The common people; the people of the lower rank.
Became drive
To gain the love of the commonwealth; the duke
Shall govern England.
Shakespeare.

2. The bulk of mankind.
I myself will use the secret acknowledgment of the commonwealth, hearing the record of the God of Gods.
Hooker.

3. A member of the house of commons.
There is hardly a greater difference between two things, than there is between a representing commoner in his publick calling, and the same person in private.
Addison's Freethinkers.

4. The lower house of parliament, by which the people are represented, and of which the members are chosen by the people.
"My good lord, How now for mitigation of this blizzard Urg'd by the Queen? Doth majesty incline to it, or not?"
Shakespeare's Henry VI.

5. Food; fare; diet: so called from colleges, where it is eaten in common.
He painted himself of a dewy colour, and took his commons with the pigeons.
D'Etvages.
Mean while scarce was her fayre at her flood,
And with a beaten fashion cou'd her blood.
Their common, though but coasts, were nothing feared.
Dryd.
Nor did their minds an equal banquet want.
"The doctor now obsequies,
Likes both his company and commons.
Swifts.

1. A polity; an established form of civil life.
Two foundations bear up publick societies; the one inclination, whereby all men desire sociable life; the other an order agreed upon, touching the manner of their union living together: the latter is that which we call the law of a commonwealth.
Hooker.

2. The public; the general body of the people.
Such a prince,
So kind a father of the commonwealth.
Shak. III. IV.

3. A government in which the supreme power is lodged in the people; a republic.
Did he, or do yet any of them, imagine
The gods would sleep to such a constitution?
Dryd.

"Communicable" were nothing more, in their original, but free cities; though sometimes, by force of order and discipline, they had extended themselves into mighty dominions.
Temples.

The very quality, manner, and place of commonwealths, of witches is plainly and evidently set forth.
Hume.
An archbishop, out of his diocese, becomes subject to the archbishop of the province where he has his abode and commonwealth.
Addison's Spectator.

COMMORANT.
Resident; dwelling; inhabiting.
The abbot may demand and recover his monks, that are commoners and reneging in the common-wealth.
Addison's Spectator.

COMMOTION, n. f. [commotion, Latin.]
1. Tumult; disturbance; commotion; sedition; publick disorder; insurrection.
By Fart'h he hath won the common hearts
And when he'll please to make commotions,
'Tis to be feared they'll all follow him.
Shakespeare's Henry VI.

2. Perturbation; disorder of mind; heat of passion; agitation; tumult.
Some strange commotions
Is in his brain; he burns his lips, and starts.
Shakespeare's King Henry VIII.

He could not debate any thing without some commotion, when the argument was not of moment.
Clarendon.

3. Disturbance; rebuff.
Sacrifices were offered when an earthquake happened, that he would alloy the commotions of the water, and put an end to the earthquake.
Woodward's Natural History.

COMMOTIONER, n. f. [from commotion.]
One that causes commotions; a disturber of the peace.  A word not in use.
The people, more, reserving commotions than commissioners,locked together, as clouds clouter against a storm.
Hayward.

To COMMORATE.
1. To disturb; to agitate; to put into a violent motion; to unsettle.  Not used.
"The wind would sound,
In gathering eddies play.
Tempe's Summer.
Communicability, n. f. [from communicable.] The quality of being communicable; capability to be imparted.

Communicable, adj. [from communicable.]

1. That which may become the common possession of more than one; with to.

2. That which may be reconceived; that of which another may share the knowledge: with to.

3. That which may be imparted.

The happy place
Rather infames thy torment, representing lost sights, to be no more communicable.

Communicant, n. f. [from communicable.] One who is present, as a worshippers, at the celebration of the Lord's Supper; one who participates of the blest sacrament.

Communicate, v. a. [communicate.] The act of imparting benefits or knowledge.

To COMMUNICATE, v. n. [communicate, Latin.]

1. To impart to others what is in one's own power; to give to others as partners; to confer a joint possession; to deliver.

Common benefits are to be communicated with all, but peculiar benefits with choice.

Taylor's Worthy Conversations, of the person to whom his adoration is due. But Dionysius desists and commune. And still commune his praise with me.

Dr. Dryden's Fables.

2. To reveal; to impart knowledge.

I learned diligently, and to communicate wisdom liberally; I do not hide my riches. Wisdom. v. 13.

It had antecently the possession with before the person to whom communication, either of benefit or knowledge, was made.

Chares the Hardy would communicate his secrets with none; and, if he had, all those secrets which troubled him most.

Bacon. He communicated these thoughts only with the lad Digby, the bad Comstock, and the Cancellos.

A journey of much adventure, which, to shew the strength of his privacy, had been before no communication to any other.

Now it has only to be: Clarendon uses both with and to.

Let him, that is taught in the word, communicate unto him that teacheth. Galatians, v. 6.

But, if they finally permitted, that he could not, in any degree, communicate his secrets of state to others, before he had taken and communicated to them his own resolutions.

Clandestine. When the secrets in publicly are betrayed, when they discover by a lively genius and ready memory, then they reassert, all they would communicate to theirhearers.

What?

To communicate, v. n.

1. To partake of the blest sacrament. The primitive Christians communed everyday. Taylor's Commen.

2. To have something in common with another; as, the beasts communicate; there is a passage between them, common to both, by which either may be entered from the other.

The whole holy is nothing but a system of such canals, which the communicant with one another, mediately or immediately.

Arbuthnot's Elements of Speech.

Communication, n. f. [from communicable.]

1. The act of imparting benefits or knowledge.

Being together serve completely for the reception and communication of learned knowledge.

Hilder's Elements of Speech.

2. Common boundary or inlet; passage or means, by which from one place there is a way without interruption to another. The map shows the natural communication of the rivers and lakes of a country at so great a distance from the sea.

Addison on Italy.

3. Intercourse of knowledge; good intelligence between several persons.

But no more, as to drop the communication necessary among all who have the management of affairs.

Swift.

Abner had communication with the elders of Israel, saying, ye fought for David in times past to king over you: now then do a Samuel, iv. 17.

The chief end of language, in communication, being to understand, words serve not for that end, when any word does not excite in the hearer the same idea which it stands for in the mind of the speaker.

Lancot.

COMMUNICATIVENESS, n. f. [from communicative.] The quality of being communicative, of be longing or imparting benefits or knowledge.

He is not only, the most communicative of all beings, but he will also communicate himself in such measure as entirely to satisfy; otherwise some degree of communicativeness would be wanting.

Norton.

Communion, n. f. [communicate, Latin.]

1. Intercourse; fellowship; common participation; partaking of something in common; intercourse of translations.

Operating, or being brought with us that communion which the apostles to the Hebrews mention; and in regard whereas angels have not di vision to prove themselves the fellow-servants of the Lord.

They are not, by ourself, sufficient to furnish us with competent items for such a life as our nature doth desire; therefore, as we naturally are induced to seek commonwealth and communion with others.

Hieron. The Hierarchice had never any communication or affairs with the Ethiopians. Raleigh.

Thus, so pleased.

Then raise the creature to that height thou wilt Of union, or communion, defined. Miss Par. Lyr.

We maintain communion with God himself, and are made in the same degree partakers of the divine nature.

Fidler.

The common or public celebration of the Lord's Supper; the participation of the blest sacrament.

They resolve, that the standing of the communion table in all churches should be altered.

Clarendon.

3. A common or public act.

Men began publicly to call the name of the Lord; that is, they feared and praised God by communion, and in public manner.

Richard's History of the World.

4. Union in the common worship of any church.

Bare communion with a good church can never alone make a good man; if it could, we should have no bad ones.

Ingramous men have lived and died in the communion of that church.

Still living.

Communion, n. f. [communicate, Latin.]

1. The commonwealth; the body politic.

How could communions, Degrees in schools, and brotherhood in cities. But by degree stand in authentic place?

Shakespeare's Tristram and Cezahed.

Not in a single person only, but in a community or multitude of men.

Hamlet's Philosophy.

This parable may be aptly enough expounded of the laws that secure a civil community, L'Estrange. It is not digested for her own life, and for the whole community.

The love of our country is impressed on our mind for the preservation of the community.

Addison's Proverb.

He lives not for himself alone, but hath a regard in all his actions to the great community. Atterbury.

2. Common possession; the state contrary to property or appropriation.

Sit up and revel. Call all the great, the fair, and the spirited names Of Rome about them, and begin a fallion Of freedom and community. Ben Jonson.

The undividualism of many in the community of name, or misapplication of the act of one unto the others, hath made some doubt thereof.

Brown's Vigilant Enemies.

This text is for from proving Adam folk proprietor; it is a confirmation of the original community of all things.

Lodge.

3. Frequency; communions. Not in use.

He was but, as the cuckow is in June, heard, not regarded: with such eyes, As, sick and blinded with commerce.

Afford no extraordinary gase. Shakespeare.

Commutable, adj. [from communicable.] That may be exchanged for another; may be bought off, or rankoned.

Commutation, n. f. [from communicable.]

1. Change; alteration.

An innocent nature, which hate nothing that was innocent, in a word, so great is the communion, that the soul then hated only that which now only it loves, i.e. sin. Smith's Sermon.

2. Exchange; the act of giving one thing for another. The whole universe is supported by giving and returning, by commerce and commutation.

Smith's Sermon.

According to the present temper of the whole nation, it is absolutely necessary that there be some method and means of commutation, all that of money.

Ray on the Creation.

The use of money, in the commerce and trade of mankind, is that of having the commutation of more bulky commodities.

Arbuthnot on Coins.

Z 2 3.

Randam?
3. Random; the act of exchanging a corporeal for a pecuniary punishment.

The law of God had allowed an evaluation, that in, by way of compensation or redemption. *Brown.

COMMUTATIVE adj. [from commutate.]

Relative to exchange; as, commutative justice, that honestly which is exercised in the market, and which is contrary to fraud in bargains.

To COMMUTE. v. a. [commutate, Latin.]

1. To exchange; to put one thing in the place of another; to give or receive one thing for another. This will commute our talks; exchange their thoughts, and all the gainsful and public oraches which God affigns, for their uneasy and fruitless ones; we impose on ourselves.

2. To buy off, or ransom one obligation by another. Some commodities for which when, as if for convenience of the one were a dispensation for the other.

To COMMUTE. v. n. To stone; to barter for exemption.

Their relations which God designed for means to farther men in holiness, they took upon as a privilege to serve instead of it, and was a benefit.

COMMUTUAL adj. [con and mutual.] Mutual; reciprocal. Used only in poetry.

Love one another, and Hymen did our hands.

The commutual rite, in most located hands. *Shakespearian.

There is, with commutual zeal, we both had driven in acts of dear, benevolence and love.

Bothers, in no wars to receive in virtue,

Pope’s Odyssey.

COMPACT. n. s. [pedestum, Latin.] A compact; an accord; an agreement; a mutual and settled appointment between two or more, to do or forbear something. It had any sense the accent on the last syllable.

I hope the king made peace with all of us,

And the compact is firm and true in me. *Shakespear’s Richard III.

In the beginning were there an implicit compact, founded upon common consent, that such works as the fudiers, should be figur’d where, thereby they expressed their thoughts. *Shakespear.

To COMPACT. v. a. [comping, compactum, Latin.]

1. To join together with firmness; to unite closely; to confide.

Inform her full of my particular fears;

And there’s all such journeys of your own,

As may compact it more. *Shakespear’s King Lear.

Nor are the nerves of his compacted strength,

Stretched and disjoin’d in unwieldy length. *Bacon.

By what degrees this cart’s compacts’d sphere,

Was harken’d, woods, and rocks, and towns, to compacts; *Shakespear.

This diffuse is more dangerous, as the solids are more strict and compacts’d, and consequently more do as people are advantaged in age. *Abbot. on Dist.

Now the bright fan compacts the precious stones,

Impacting radiant lucre like his own. *Blackmore’s Cephal.

2. To make out of something; if he, compact of jars, grow muddish,

We may have thereby diffused in the spheres. *Shakespeare.

3. To league with.

Though pernicous woman,

Compact with her that’s gone, think’ll thou thy life.

Though they would swarve down each particular face,

Were testimonies! *Shakespear’s Measure for Measure.

4. To join together; to bring into a system.

We see the world is compact, that each thing preferreth other things, and also itts. *Hooke.

COMPACT. adj. [compacts, Latin.]

1. Firm; solid; close; dense; of firm texture.

Is not the density greater in free and open spaces, void of air and other rogor bodies, than within the pores of water, glass, crystal, gems, and other dense bodies in building. *Newton’s Opticks.

Without animation, the diffused particles of the air could never converse into such great compact masses at the planets. *D’Alemb.

2. Composed; solidifying.

The suitante, the lover, and the poet,

Are of imagination all compacts. *Shakespear.

A winding ring,

Compacts of unfeasable vapour, which the night

And cold environ around condehned,

Kindled through agitation to a flame. *Milton.

3. Joined; held together.

In one hand Pan has a pipe of seven reeds, compact with was never further. *Pope.

4. Brief, and well connected; as a compact discourse.

Where a foreign tongue is elegant, expressive, clothe, and compact, we must study the utmost force of our language. *Shakespear.

COMPACTNESS n. s. [from compacted.]

Firmness; density.

Sticking or compacts’d, being natural to density, requires some excess of gravity in proportion to the density, or some other outward violence, to break it.

These atoms are suspended in air, extremely compacted and hard; which compacts’d and hardens is a demonstration that nothing could be produced but the one raye.

COMPACTLY adv. [from compact.]

1. Closely; densely.

2. With neat joining; with good compacture.

COMPATIBILITY n. s. [from compact.

Firmness; clothe; density.

Ignorancy or sparkling, bound in many gems, is not discoverable in this, for it consumes their compacts’d and density. *Brow.

The bell time mortar will not have attained its utmost compacts’d till fourteen years after it has been compacts’d, for this is not, and the reason why, in demolishing ancient fabrics, it is easier to break the done than the mortar. *Boyle.

The rent, by reason of the compacts’ of terrestrial matter, cannot be made way to walls. *Woodward.

COMPACTNESS n. s. [from compact.]

Structure; manner in which any thing is joined together; compaction; a good word, but not in use.

And over it a fair-pastoral long,

Which to the gate directly did incline,

With comely compact, and compacture strong.

Neither unformly short, nor yet exceeding strong. *Gay.

COPTAGES n. s. [Latin.] A tyde of many parted unions.

The organs in animal bodies are only a regular compacts of pipes and vessels, for the fluids to pass through. *Brewer.

COMPAGNIA n. s. [compagne, Latin.]

Union; structure; junction; connexion; contexture.

The lattice or broken compaignia of the magnetic fabric under it. *Brown’s Pulgar Errors.

COMPANABLENESS n. s. [from company.]

The quality of being a good companion; sociableness. A word not now in use.

His eyes full of merry sociability, his words of hearty compaignia. *Sidney.

COMPANIERABLE adj. [from company.] Social; having the qualities of a companion; sociable; maintaining friendly intercourse.

To his seen he was nothing uxorious, but compellant and respectful. *Bacon’s Henry VII.

COMPANION. n. s. [companions, French.]

1. One with whom a man frequently converses, or with whom he shares his hours of relaxation. It differs from friends, acquaintance from confidence.

How now, my lord? why do you keep aloof?

Of sociable; fumble your companions make.*Shakespear’s Macbeth.

Some friend is a companion at the table, and will not continue in the day of thy affliction.

With anxious doubts, with raging passions turn, no sweet companion near with whom to mourn. *Prior.

2. A partner; an associate.

Engaged, my brother and companion in labour, and fellow soldier. *Phil. ii. 25.

Beseach’d of happiness, thou mayst partake his punishment, eternal misery; which would be all his felicity, and revenge, The once to gain companions of his soul. *Milton.

3. A familiar term of contempt; a fellow.

I form you, bevy companion! What? you poor, but fat, fancy: cheating, lack-laden man! away, you mouldy rogue, away! *Shakespear’s Henry IV.

It gives boden in every petty companion to spread rumour to my defamery, where I cannot be present. *Raleigh.

COMPANIONABLY adv. [from companion.] In a companionable manner.

COMPANIONSHIP n. s. [from companions.] A companionable companion.

1. Company; train.

Akinblades, and some twenty horses, *Shakespear’s Timon.

2. Fellowship; association.

If it be honour in your wars to term

The fame you are not, which, for your left ends,

You call your policy; how is’t, or worse,

That is shall hold companionship in peace

With honour, as in war? *Shakespear’s Caius.

COMPANY. n. s. [companions, French; either from con, and pagen, one of the same town; or con and pagen, one that cates of the same meet.] One. Person affiliated together; a body of men.

Go, carry Sir John Falstaff to the fleet;

Take all his company along with him. *Shakespear’s Henry IV.

Honest company, I thank you all,

That have bended me give away myself.

To this mult people, patient, and virtuous wife. *Shakespear.

2. Persons affiliated for the entertainment of each other; an assembly of pleasure.

A crowd in one company; and faces are but a gallery of pleasures, where there is no love. *Baron’s Essays.

3. Persons considered as affiliated for conversation; or as capable of conversation and mutual entertainment.

Monfecur Zulichem came to me among the rest of the good company of the town. *Tempie.

Knowledge of men and manners, the freedom of habit, and conversation with the best company of both sexes, is necessary. *Dryden.

9 4. The
AESOP'S FABLES.

There could no form for such a royal life be

1. Estimated by comparison; not positive;
not absolute.

2. Having the power of comparing different things. Beauty not known by an eye or nose; it consists in a symmetry, and is in the comparative state which notes St. Glavile's Stephi Scientia.

3. In grammar. This comparative degree expresses more of any quantity in one ting or another. As, the right band is the stronger. Comparatively, adv. [from comparative.]

4. To make one thing the measure of another;
to estimate the relative goodness or badness, or other qualities, of any one thing, by observing how it differs from something else.

I will hear Brutus speak.---

Shakespeare.}

To Company. w. a. [from the verb.]

1. To make one thing the measure of another;
to estimate the relative goodness or badness, or other qualities, of any one thing, by observing how it differs from something else.

I will hear Brutus speak.---

Shakespeare.

5. In grammar. The formation of an adjective through its various degrees of signification; as, strong, stronger, strongest.

There could no form for such a royal life be comparably imagined, like that of the foretold nation. Warton's Architecture.

Comparative, n. [from comparative.]

In logic, the two things compared to one another.

Comparative, adj. [comparative, Lat.]

1. Estimated by comparison; not positive;
not absolute.

2. Having the power of comparing different things. Beauty not known by an eye or nose; it consists in a symmetry, and is in the comparative state which notes St. Glavile's Stephi Scientia.

3. In grammar. This comparative degree expresses more of any quantity in one
ting or another. As, the right band is the stronger. Comparatively, adv. [from comparative.]

4. To make one thing the measure of another;
to estimate the relative goodness or badness, or other qualities, of any one thing, by observing how it differs from something else.

I will hear Brutus speak.---

Shakespeare.
1. The act of comparing or dividing.

2. The parts marked out, or separated; a separate part.

3. To COMPASS, v. a. [compasser, Fr. compasser, Ital. passare, metri, Latin.]
   a. To incircle; to environ; to surround; to inclose: it has sometimes around, or about, added.
   b. A somewhat way, that deep defended through the hollow ground, and was with dread and horror compassed around.
   c. Dryden. V. Vergil.
   d. To dare that death, I will approach yet higher.
   e. Thucydides, p. 43.

2. To walk round any thing.
   a. Old Chorinian compass'd thirke the crew, and dip't an olive-branch in holy dew, which thirke be fringed round.
   b. Dryden's Ann.

3. To beget; to besiege; to block.
   a. Thine enemies shall call a trench about thee, and compass thee round, and keep thee in on every side.
   b. Lucret., x. 43.

4. To grasp; to inclose in the arms; to seize.

5. To obtain; to procure; to attain; to have in the power.
   a. That which by wisdom he saw to be requisite for that people, was by great widdom compass'd.
   b. Hooker's Prerace.
   c. His master being one of great regard, 1. court to compass any fuit not hard.
   d. Hubbard's Tale.

6. If I can check my raging soul, I will.
   a. If not, to compass her I'le use my skill.
   b. Shakspere.
   c. How can you hope to compass your designs.
   d. And not dissemble them?
   e. Dryden's Sophy.

7. He had a mind to make himself master of Weymouth, if he could compass it without engaging his army before.
   a. Charles.
   b. The church of Rome createth titular patriarchs of Constantinople and Alexandria; so both is the pope to declare, the remembrance of any title that he hath once compass'd.
   c. Beveridge.
   d. Invention is the first part, and absolutely necessary to them both, yet no rule ever was, or ever can be given, to compass it.
   e. Dryden'sasting.

8. The knowledge of what is good and what is evil, what ought and what ought not to be done, thing too large to be compass'd, and too hard to be master'd, without brains and body, parts and composition.
   a. Shakspere's Paradish Liff.

9. The instrument composed of a needle and card, whereby mariners steer.
   a. The breath of religion fills the salle; the prufes are by compass'd by which fublime men direct their courses.
   b. King Charles.
   c. Rude as their ships was navigation then, no useful compass or meridian known.
   d. Those they kept the bound within their ken, and knew no north but when the pole-star shone.
   e. Dryden.

10. With equal force the tempest blows by turns.
   a. From every corner of the heavens compass'd.
   b. Rene's Jone Shore.
   c. He that first discovered the use of the compass'd did more for the supplying and increase of useful commodities, than those who built workhouses.
   d. Locke.

To COMPASS, v. a. [compasse, Fr. conquest, Ita1. passare, metri, Latin.]
   a. To compass, to encircle; to environ; to surround; to inclose: it has sometimes around, or about, added.
   b. This author hath tried the force and compass of our language with much success.
   c. Swift.
   d. Space; room; limits, either of time or space.
   e. No less than the compass of twelve books is taken up in the left. Pope's Essay on Homer's Battle.
   f. The English are good confraders in an enterprise which may be dispatched in a short compass of time.
   g. You have heard what hath been here done for the poor by the five hospitals and the workhouses, within the compass of one year; and the end of a long, extensive war.
   h. Atstokyc.
   i. Enchlosure; circumference.
   j. And their mount Palantine, to imperial palace, compass'd huge, and high.
   k. The structure, of which the Parthenon Remains.
   l. Old Rome from such a race deriv'd her birth, which now on seven high hills triumphant reigns; and in that compass all the world contains.
   m. Dryden's Fugit.
   n. A departure from the right line; an indirect advance; as, to fetch a compass round the camp.
   o. 6. Moderate space; moderation; due limits.
   p. Certain it is, that in two hundred years before (1 speak within compass') no such commissiion had been executed in either of these provinces.
   q. Dryden's Fugit.
   r. There is nothing likelier to keep a man within compass, than having constantly before his eyes the state of his affairs, in a regular course of account.
   s. Tach.
   t. The power of the voice to express the notes of musicf.
   u. You would find me from my lowest note to the top of my compass's.
   v. From harmony, from heavenly harmony.
   w. This universal frame began:
   x. From harmony to harmony.
   y. Through all the compass'd notes it ran.
   z. The dispaft closing full in man.
   aa. Dryden.

7. [This is rarely used in the singular.] The instrument with which circles are drawn.
   a. If they be two, they are two so.
   b. As flit two compasse are two.
   c. Thy soul, the first foot, makes no flaw.
   d. To move; but death, if th'o'd other.
   e. Dryden.

8. In his hand.
   a. He took the golden chain, the spear.
   b. In God's eternal orbs, to circumscribe this universe, and all created things.

9. To fix one foot of their compass whereby they think fit, and extend the other to such terrible lengths, without determining any circumstance at all, is to leave us and thenceforth, in a very uncertain fixe.

10. With equal force the tempest blows by turns.
   a. From every corner of the heavens compass'd.
   b. Rene's Jone Shore.
   c. He that first discovered the use of the compass'd did more for the supplying and increase of useful commodities, than those who built workhouses.
   d. Locke.

To COMPASS, v. a. [compasse, Fr. conquest, Ita1. passare, metri, Latin.]
   a. To pity; to compassion; to commiserate. A word scarcely used.
   b. O heavens! can you hear a good man groan, and not relent, or not compass him?
   c. Shakespeare's Timon of Athens.

To COMPASSIONATE, n. f. [from compassion.]
   a. Inclined to compassion; inclined to pity; merciful; tender; melting; soft; easily affected with sorrow for the misery of others.
   b. There never was a heart truly great and generous, that was not also tender and compassionate, and tender and compassionate.
   c. Compasionate.

To COMPASSIONATE, v. a. [from the noun.]
   a. To pity; to compassion; to commiserate.
   b. A word scarcely used.
   c. Compasionate.

COMPATIBILITY, n. f. [from compatible.]
   a. Confinuity; the power of co-existing with something else; agreement with anything.
COMPATIBLE. adj. [corrupted by an unskillful compliance with pronunciation, from compatible, from competo, Latin, to suit, to agree. Compatible is found in good writers, and ought always to be used.

1. Suitable to; fit for; confident with; not incongruous to.

2. Confident; agreeable.

Our poets have joined together such qualities as are by nature the most uncompatible; with anger, amusement, with piety, and with profanity. Fromem.

COMPATIBILITY. n.f. [from compatible.] Consistency; agreement with any thing.

COMPATIBLY. adv. [from compatible.] Fitly; suitably.

COMPATIENT. adj. [from compatient, Latin.] Suffering together. Dit.

COMPATRIOT. n.f. [from com and patria, Lat.] One of the same country. Dit.

The governor knew he was so circumjunct as not to adhere to any of the factions of the time, in a neutrality industriously and ingeniously maintaining all his compatwires. Drummond.

COMPATIBLE. n.f. [compare, Latin.] Equal; companion; colleague; associate.

That monarchs harnej'd, to his chariot y'd'd Batte servitude, and his ethem'd comparath Lath'd furiously. Philips.

To COMPETE. v. a. [from the noun.] To be equal with; to mate.

In his own grace he doth exalt himself More than in your advancement —to my right.

By me invested, he competes the belt. Shakespeare's King Lear.

To COMPETE. v. a. [compete, Latin.]

1. To force to fame at; to oblige; to constrain; to necessitate; to urge irresistibly.

You will compete the then to read the will. Shakespeare's Julius Caesar.

The spinners, carders, fuller, compiled by hunger,
And lack of other means, in despiseful manner
During the event to the teeth, are all in appearance. Steeple.

He refused, and said, I will not eat; but his fervants, together with the woman, compelled him. 1 Samuel, xxiv. 23.

But the faintest tyrant, who dare,
To know their God, or maslence to regard,
Must be compell'd by signs and judgments dire.

All these blessings could but enable, not compell us to be happy. Guizot.

Whole droves of minds are by the driving god
Compeised to the deep letham floods. Dryden.

2. To take by force or violence; to ravish from; to seize. This signification is uncommon and harsh.

The subject's grief
Comes through commencements, which compell from each
The sixth part of his substance, to be levied Without delay. Shakespeare's Henry VIII.

3. To gather together, and unite in a company. A Latinism, comperean gerea.

He us to the town entered, attended by the chiefs who fought the field, Now friendly mix'd, and in one troop compell'd. Dryden.

4. To fix: to overpower.

Our men secure our guilty, nor centuris held,
Buttery sleep their weary limbs compell'd. Dryden.

COMPELLABLE. adj. [from compell.] That may be forced. Perhaps it should be compellable.

COMPELLATION. n.f. [from compell.] The style of address; the word of salutation.

The thole bell fired for all persons, on all occasions, to recall the company of Pharaoh, with which our Saviour first taught. Dupa's Rules of Delegation.

The peculiar collegation of the kings in France, is by force, which is nothing else but faster. Temple.

COMPELLER. n.f. [compell.] He that forces another.

COMPENDIUM. n.f. [compendious, Latin.] Abriddgment; summmary; epitome; contradiction; breviate.

Fix in memory the discourtes and abridg them into brief compendials. Wits's Improvement of the Mind.

COMPENDIARIOUS. adj. [compendiarious, Latin.] Short; condensed; summmary: abridged.

COMPENDIOUSLY. n.f. [from compendious.] Shortness; condensed breviate. Dit.

COMPENSATE. v. a. [compare, Latin.] Abridge; summarize; abbreviate; imitate.

But in the most frequent cases, that holds much in a narrow room; the near way.

After we are grown well acquainted with a short system or compendium of a science, which is written in the plainest and most simple manner, it is then proper to read a larger regular treatise on that subject. Wordsworth.

COMPENSATION. n.f. [Latin.] Abridgment; summmy; breviate; compellation; that which holds much in a narrow room; the near way.

After we are grown well acquainted with a short system or compendium of a science, which is written in the plainest and most simple manner, it is then proper to read a larger regular treatise on that subject. Wordsworth.

COMPENSABLE. adj. [from compenst.] That which may be recompened.

To COMPENSATE. v. a. [compensate, Latin.]

To recompened; to be equivalent to; to counterbalance; to countervail; to make amends for.

The length of the night, and the dew thereof, do compensate the best of the day. Bacon's Nat. Hist. 11.

The pleasures of life do not compensate the misfortunes of death. Prior.

Nature to toil, without gratification kind. The proper organs, proper powers, sufficed; each evening want compensated of course. Here with degrees of refinements, there of force. Pope.

COMPENSATION. n.f. [from compenst.] Compromise; something equivalent; amends.

Possings, the better to make compensation of his service in the wars, called a parliament. Bacon.

All other debts may compensation find: But love is duty, and will be paid in kind. Dryden's Assurant de l'Imag.
COMPETITABLE, adj. [from compete, Lati-.

For this word a corrupt orthography has introduced "comparable."] Suitable to: confident with.

It is not comparable with the grace of God to much as to incline any man to do well without Hammond's "The Fundamentals of".

Those are properties not at all comparable to body or matter, though of never to pure a mixture.

The duration of eternity is a part anto in such as is only comparable to the eternal God, and not communicable to any created being. Sir Matthew Hale.

COMPETIBILITY, n. f. [from comparable.]

Suitability; fitness.

COMPETITION, n. f. [from com- and pet- in Latin.]

1. The act of endeavouring to gain what another endars to gain at the same time; rivalry; contest.

2. Double claim; claim of more than one to one thing: anciently with to.

3. Competition to the crown there is none, nor can be.

4. Now with for.

The prize of beauty was disputed till you were seen; but now all pretenders have withdrawn their claims: there is no competition but for the second place.

COMPETITOR, n. f. [from and -pet- in Latin.]

1. One that has a claim opposite to another's; a rival: with for before the thing claimed.

2. How furious and impatient they be, and cannot brook competitors in love.

Shakespeare's "Titus Andronicus."

Some undertake fulls with purpose to let them fall, to gratify the competitors. Scheriffus and Scipio were competitors for the office of prior. Tailor.

3. His works in God has the advantage in present facility and, when we take futurity into the account, stands alone, and is acknowledged to have no competitor.

Rogers.

4. It had formerly of before the thing claimed.

Selvina, king of Algiers, was in arms against his brother Mechmet, competitor of the kingdom. Knolles's History.

5. In Shakespeare it seems to signify only an opponent.

The Guildfords are in arms, and every hour more competitors.

Fetch to the rebels. Shakespeare's Richard III.

COMPLAINT, n. f. [from compilo, Lati.]

1. A collection from various authors.

2. An assemblage; a concurrence.

There is in it a small vein filled with fine, probably the time of the composition of the mas.

Woodward's "Voyages."

To COMPLAIN, v. a. [complain, Latin.]

1. To draw up from various authors; to collect into one body.

2. To write; to compose.

In part they compose the praises of virtuous men and actions, and laments against vice. Temple.

COMPLACENCY, n. f. [from complacence, Lati.]

1. Pleasure; satisfaction; gratification.

I by no means deserve such a reward.

From praise, nor in their ways complacency finds.

Milton.

When the supreme faculties move regularly, the inferior faculties exhibit a friendly concurrence or complacency upon the whole soul. Diderot.

Dissatisfaction externally hinders the complacency we have in all the good things of this life. Atrigesi. Sarmani.

Others proclaim the infirmities of a great man with satisfaction and complacency, if they discover none of the like in themselves. Addison's Spectator.

2. The cause of pleasure; joy.

O thou, in heaven and earth the only peace.

Found out for joy! O thou,

My sole complacence! Milton's "Paradise Lost."

3. Civility; complacency; fatines of manners.

They were not satisfied with their governors and apprehensive of their rudeness; and want of complacency.

His great humanity appeared in his benevolence of his aspect, the complacency of his behaviour, and the tone of his voice. Addison's "Fable of the Locomotive."

Complacency and truth, and mankind.

Dwells ever on his tongue, and smooths his thoughts.

Addison.

With mean complacency: nor betray your truth,

Nor be so civil as to produce your art. Pope.

COMPLAINT, n. f. [complain, Lat.]

Civil; affable; soft; complaisant.

To COMPLAIN. v. n. [complaindre, Fr.]

1. To mention with sorrow or remonstrance:

To murmur; to lament. With of before the cause of sorrow: sometimes with on.

Lord Hastings,

Humbly complaining to her deity.

Got my lord chamberlain's complaisance.

Shakespeare's Richard III.

I will speak in the anguish of my spirit; I will complain in the bitterness of my soul. Job, vii. 11.

Shall I, like them, on Friday's complaint?

For on that day was Cesar de Leon flame.

Dryden's Fables.

Do not all men complain, even there as well as others, of the great ignorance of mankind?

Barrow's "Præface to Story of Earth."

Thus accordingly.

In midst of water I complain of them. Dryden.

2. Sometimes with or for before the caufal

Now therefore doth a living man complain, a man for the punishment of his sins?

Lam., iii. 39.

3. To inform against.

Now, now, sly fellow, you will complain of me to whom?

Shakespeare's "Weathering of Windfall."

To COMPLAIN. v. a. [This sense is rare, and perhaps not very proper.] To lament; to bewail.

Pale death our valiant leader hath oppressed,

Came wreak his loss, whom boodles ye complain of.

Fairfax.

Grafield, who could so well in shime complain.

The death of Richard, with an arrow plain.

Dryden's "Fables."

They might the grievance inwardly complain.

But outwardly they must temporize.

Dean, "Civil War."

COMPLAINANT, n. f. [from complain.]

One who urges a suit, or commences a prosecution, against another.

Complainant and complainant are the most ears complainers of the dispute. "Collin's Defence."

COMPLAINER, n. f. [from complain.]

One who complains; a murmurer; a laments.

St. Jude observes, that the murmurers and complainers are the same who speak fateful words.

"Government of the Tongue."

Phipps is a complainant: and on this occasion I told Lord Carteret, that complainers were never favoured at court, though ready do.

Dryden's "Fables."

I. Representations of pains or injures; lamentation.

I cannot find any cause of complaint, that good laws have so much been wanting unto us, nor ever to them. "Her Cato."

As for me, it is complaint to me. Job, xxii. 4.

Adam Faw.

Already in part though hid in glorioun deade.

To sorrow abandon'd, but worst left within,

And in a troubled sea of passion trod,

Thus to disburthen fought with sad complaints. Milton.

2. The cause or subject of complaint; griev.

The poverty of the clergy in England hath been the complaint of all who wish to well to the church. Swifts.

3. A malady; a disease.

One, in a complaint of his bowels, was let blood till he had scarce any left, and was perfectly cured. Arbuthnot.

4. Remonstrance against; information against.

Full of vexation, come with complaint.

In evil trait this day I band.

Before my judge, either to undergo

Myself the total crime, or to accuse

My other self, the partner of my life;

While fasting, while her faith to me remains,

I should conceal, and not expose to blame

By any complaint, but by needlessness.

Subdues me, and calamitous complaint. Milton.

Against the goddes the complaint he made. Dryden's "Ariel."

COMPLAISANCE, n. f. [complaisance, Fr.]

Civility; desire of pleasing; act of aduloration.

Her death is but in complaisance to her. Dryden.

You must also be industrious to discover the opinion of your enemies; for you may be assured, that they will give you no quarter, and allow nothing to complaisance. Dryden's "Aurora.""
COMPLAIS'ANT. adj. [complaisant, Fr.] Civil; desirous to please. {Page}

There are to obtain my faire seems too bold; {Page}
Scarcely to with Peter complasent enough, {Page}
And somethin fail of Charitas much too rough. {Page}

COMPLAIS'ENTLY. adv. [from complaisant.] With defire to please; {Page} ceremoniously. {Page}

In plente flouring, tantaclia'd in flate, {Page}
And complaisingly help't all to 1 hate, {Page}
Treated, care'td, and th'd I take my leave. {Page}

COMPLAIS'ANCE, n. f. [from complaisant.] {Page}
Ditt. 76 COMPLAIN'T. q. s. [from complain.] {Page}
76 COMPLAIN'T. {Lat.} To level; to reduce to a flat and even surface. {Page}

The venere of the neck and back-bone are made short and complaited, and firmly bared with muscles. {Page}

Dekam. {Page}

COM'PLEAT. See COMPLETE. {Page}

COMPLEMENT. n. f. [complemen'tum, Lati'n.] {Page}

1. Perfection; fulness; completion; comple'tement. {Page}

Our couth is both to place it in the front of our prayers as a guide, and to add it in the end of every spiritual business or part, as a comple'tement which fully perfecteth whatsoever may be defective in the reit. {Page}

Hocher. {Page}

They as they feasted had their fill, {Page}
For in their ill Hocher's Tale. {Page}

For a compliment of these bl佛gions, they were enjoyed by the protection of a king of the most harmless disposition, the most exemplary piety, the greatest religious charity, and mercy. {Page}

The felatable nature, in its comple'tion and integrality, hath five exterior powers or faculties. {Page}

Hale's Origin of Mankind. {Page}

2. Complete set; complete provision; the full quantity or number. {Page}

The god of love himself inhabits there, With all his rage, and dread, and grief, and care; {Page}
His complement of flowers, and total war. {Page}

Prior. {Page}

3. Adelictious circumstances; appanages; {Page} various but ornamental; where ceremony was called comple'ment, now corrupted to compliment. {Page}

If the cafe permitted not baptism to have the decent comple'ments of baptism, better it were to enjoy the body without his furniture, than to wait for the chance of such an opportunity of that, for which we want it, be left. {Page}

Hocher. {Page}

Their, which have letly sprung up, for comple'ments, rites, and ceremonies of church actions, are, in truth, for the greateft part, fuch fily things, that very carefull doth make them hard to be dispof'd of in ferior manner. {Page}

Hocher. {Page}

A dolefcent cafe's a dolefcent song, {Page}
Without vain art or curious comple'ments. {Page}

Spenser. {Page}

Garnish'd and deck'd in modern comple'ments, {Page}
Not working with the ear, but with the eye. {Page}

Shak. {Page}

[In geometry.] What remains of a quadrat of a circle, or of ninety degrees, after any certain arch hath been retrched from it. {Page}

[In astronomy.] The distance of a far from the zenith. {Page}

[Another] in fortification, that part in the intire side of it which makes the demigore. {Page}

7. Arithmetical Complement of a Logarithm, is what the logarithm wants of 100,000,000. {Page}

Chamber. {Page}

COMPLETE. adj. [comple'tus, Latin.] {Page}

1. Perfect; full; having no deficiencies. {Page}

With the reading of scripture is a part of our church liturgy, a special portion of the service {Page}

Vol. I.
We are free from any necessary determination of our will to any particular action, and a free compliance with our desire, set upon any particular, and then appearing preferable, good.

Let the king meet compliance in your looks.

A free and ready yielding to his wishes.

The admiss to which the world solicits our compliances, are free, which forfeit external expectations.

What compliances will remove difficulties, while the liberty continues of protecting what new opinions we please.

Swift.

A disposition to yield to others; compliance.

He was a man of few words, and of great compliance; and usually declared that as he thought, which he therefore would be grateful to the king.

Clarendon.

COMPLAINT. adj. [from comply.]

1. Yielding; bending.

The complaint brought yielding.

Yielded.

-E. Milton's Paradice Lost.

2. Civil; complaisant.

To COMPLICATE. v. a. [complive, Latin.]

1. To entangle one with another; to join; to involve mutually.

Though the particular actions of war are complieed out, yet they are separate and distinct in right.

In case our offence against God hath been complieed with injury to us, we should make use of it.

Bacon.

When the diseaie is complieated with other diseaies, one must consider that which is most dangerous.

Adventures on Ice.

There are a multitude of human actions, which have so many complieated circumstances, aspects, and situations, with regard to time and place, persons and things, that it is impossible for any one to pass a right judgment concerning them, without entering into most of these circumstances.

Watts.

2. To unite by involution of parts one in another.

The composition in the parts may make them apply themselves one to another, or complot and divide them after the manner requisite to make them thick.

Bygone: History of Former Times.

3. To form by complication; to form by the union of several parts into one integral.

Dreadful was the din

Of hifing through the hall; thick fwarming now

With complieated monsters, head and tail.

-Milton's Paradice Lost.

A man, an army, the universe, are complieated of various simple ideas, or complex ideas made up of simple ones.

Locke.

COMPLICATE. adj. [from the verb.]

Compounded of a multiplicity of parts.

This creature would diflurit his paifle, if he could graip all in a survey, as a painter runs up a complot piece work wrought by Titian or Raphael.

Watts on the Mind.

COMPLICATENESS. n. f. [from complieate.] The state of being complieated; intricacy; perplexity.

There is great variety of intelligibles in the world, so much objected to our senses, and every feferal object is fubdivided multiplicity and complieativeness.

Hale's Origin of Mind.

COMPLICATION. n. f. [from complieate.]

1. The act of involving one thing in another.

All our grievances are either of body or of mind, or in complieation of both.

L'Estrange.

2. The state of being involved in another.

The notions of a complieated knowledge are always full of perplexity and complieations, and seldom in one connection.

William.

3. The integral complieating of many things involved, perplexed, and united.

By admitting a complieation of ideas, and taking many things at once into our question, the mind is darkened and bewildered.

Swift's Essay on Logic.

COMPLIEMENT. n. f. [Fr. from compliee, an associate, low Lat.] One who is united with others in an ill design; an associate; a confederate; an accomplice.

To arms, victorious noble father,

To quell the rebels and their compliees.

Shakespeare's Henry VI.

Justice was afterwards done upon the offenders, the principal having being cautioned and quartered in Smithfield; and divers of his chief compliees executed in divers parts of the realm.

Wardie.

The marquis visited with the king, that he might only turn his brother out of the garrisons, after justice was done upon his compliees.

Clarendon.

COMPLEMENTS. n. f. [compliente, Fr. complieations, low Lat.]

The last act of worship at night, by which the service of the day is completed.

At morn and eve, besides their anthems sweet,

Their prey mutter, and their compliees met.

H��acters: Tales.

If a man were but of a day's life, it is well if he laifs till even song, and then says his compliees an hour before the time.

Taylor: Holy Living.

To COMPLERE. v. n. [complure, Lat.]

To make lamentation together.

COMPLETLY. adv. [from complieemental.] In the nature of a complieement; civilly; with artful or falc civility.

This speech has been condemned as savorious; Euthablish judges it spoken artfully and complieementially.

COMPLEMENTS. n. f. [complinte, Fr. complieations, low Lat.]

A compliee to compliees; a fatterer.

One given to compliees; an associater.

Wardie.

The laft act of worship at night, by which the service of the day is completed.

At morn and eve, besides their anthems sweet,

Their prey mutter, and their compliees met.

H雄acters: Tales.

If a man were but of a day's life, it is well if he laifs till even song, and then says his compliees an hour before the time.

Taylor: Holy Living.

To COMPLERE. v. n. [complure, Lat.]

To make lamentation together.

COMPLETLY. adv. [from complieemental.] In the nature of a complieement; civilly; with artful or falc civility.

This speech has been condemned as savorious; Euthablish judges it spoken artfully and complieementially.

COMPLEMENTS. n. f. [compliente, Fr. complieations, low Lat.]

The last act of worship at night, by which the service of the day is completed.

At morn and eve, besides their anthems sweet,

Their prey mutter, and their compliees met.

H雄acters: Tales.

If a man were but of a day's life, it is well if he laifs till even song, and then says his compliees an hour before the time.

Taylor: Holy Living.

To COMPLERE. v. n. [complure, Lat.]

To make lamentation together.

COMPLETLY. adv. [from complieemental.] In the nature of a complieement; civilly; with artful or falc civility.

This speech has been condemned as savorious; Euthablish judges it spoken artfully and complieementially.

COMPLEMENTS. n. f. [compliente, Fr. complieations, low Lat.]

The last act of worship at night, by which the service of the day is completed.

At morn and eve, besides their anthems sweet,

Their prey mutter, and their compliees met.

H雄acters: Tales.
<table>
<thead>
<tr>
<th>Page</th>
<th>Content</th>
</tr>
</thead>
<tbody>
<tr>
<td>5</td>
<td>To conclude by laying the pages of a whole. The author, in the Preface, mentions how the book was compiled and the purpose of its publication.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>6</td>
<td>The art of forming a design, in which the principles of perspective and composition are explained.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>7</td>
<td>To compose a design, the author emphasizes the importance of proportion and balance.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>8</td>
<td>To adjust the design, the author discusses the use of lines and surfaces in creating a cohesive composition.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>9</td>
<td>The art of distinguishing a design by perspective and composition.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>10</td>
<td>For comparison with all arrangements, the author provides examples of different compositions.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>11</td>
<td>Study details of the figures in perspective, and consider different arrangements of objects.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>12</td>
<td>A certain method or arrangement of the objects, which is the reverse of the analytical method, which is the reverse of the method of demonstration, in the process of propositions, in theories.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>13</td>
<td>There are certain methods or arrangements of objects, which are the reverse of the analytical method, which is the reverse of the method of demonstration, in the process of propositions, in theories.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>14</td>
<td>To make a design, by perspective and composition, in which the principles of proportion, balance, and harmony are explained.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>15</td>
<td>The arrangement of various figures in perspective, and the different arrangements of objects.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>16</td>
<td>This is a Gallic fashion, not adopted among us. Children, in the things that they do, they temper the infinite parts of their composition, by the mean division.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>17</td>
<td>To compose a design, the author emphasizes the importance of proportion and balance.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>18</td>
<td>To adjust the design, the author discusses the use of lines and surfaces in creating a cohesive composition.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>19</td>
<td>The art of distinguishing a design by perspective and composition.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>20</td>
<td>For comparison with all arrangements, the author provides examples of different compositions.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>21</td>
<td>Study details of the figures in perspective, and consider different arrangements of objects.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>22</td>
<td>A certain method or arrangement of the objects, which is the reverse of the analytical method, which is the reverse of the method of demonstration, in the process of propositions, in theories.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>23</td>
<td>There are certain methods or arrangements of objects, which are the reverse of the analytical method, which is the reverse of the method of demonstration, in the process of propositions, in theories.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>24</td>
<td>To make a design, by perspective and composition, in which the principles of proportion, balance, and harmony are explained.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>25</td>
<td>The arrangement of various figures in perspective, and the different arrangements of objects.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>26</td>
<td>This is a Gallic fashion, not adopted among us. Children, in the things that they do, they temper the infinite parts of their composition, by the mean division.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>27</td>
<td>To compose a design, the author emphasizes the importance of proportion and balance.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>28</td>
<td>To adjust the design, the author discusses the use of lines and surfaces in creating a cohesive composition.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>29</td>
<td>The art of distinguishing a design by perspective and composition.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>30</td>
<td>For comparison with all arrangements, the author provides examples of different compositions.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>31</td>
<td>Study details of the figures in perspective, and consider different arrangements of objects.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>32</td>
<td>A certain method or arrangement of the objects, which is the reverse of the analytical method, which is the reverse of the method of demonstration, in the process of propositions, in theories.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>33</td>
<td>There are certain methods or arrangements of objects, which are the reverse of the analytical method, which is the reverse of the method of demonstration, in the process of propositions, in theories.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>34</td>
<td>To make a design, by perspective and composition, in which the principles of proportion, balance, and harmony are explained.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>35</td>
<td>The arrangement of various figures in perspective, and the different arrangements of objects.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>36</td>
<td>This is a Gallic fashion, not adopted among us. Children, in the things that they do, they temper the infinite parts of their composition, by the mean division.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>37</td>
<td>To compose a design, the author emphasizes the importance of proportion and balance.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>38</td>
<td>To adjust the design, the author discusses the use of lines and surfaces in creating a cohesive composition.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>39</td>
<td>The art of distinguishing a design by perspective and composition.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>40</td>
<td>For comparison with all arrangements, the author provides examples of different compositions.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>41</td>
<td>Study details of the figures in perspective, and consider different arrangements of objects.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>42</td>
<td>A certain method or arrangement of the objects, which is the reverse of the analytical method, which is the reverse of the method of demonstration, in the process of propositions, in theories.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>43</td>
<td>There are certain methods or arrangements of objects, which are the reverse of the analytical method, which is the reverse of the method of demonstration, in the process of propositions, in theories.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>44</td>
<td>To make a design, by perspective and composition, in which the principles of proportion, balance, and harmony are explained.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>45</td>
<td>The arrangement of various figures in perspective, and the different arrangements of objects.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>46</td>
<td>This is a Gallic fashion, not adopted among us. Children, in the things that they do, they temper the infinite parts of their composition, by the mean division.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>47</td>
<td>To compose a design, the author emphasizes the importance of proportion and balance.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>48</td>
<td>To adjust the design, the author discusses the use of lines and surfaces in creating a cohesive composition.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>49</td>
<td>The art of distinguishing a design by perspective and composition.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>50</td>
<td>For comparison with all arrangements, the author provides examples of different compositions.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>51</td>
<td>Study details of the figures in perspective, and consider different arrangements of objects.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>52</td>
<td>A certain method or arrangement of the objects, which is the reverse of the analytical method, which is the reverse of the method of demonstration, in the process of propositions, in theories.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>53</td>
<td>There are certain methods or arrangements of objects, which are the reverse of the analytical method, which is the reverse of the method of demonstration, in the process of propositions, in theories.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>54</td>
<td>To make a design, by perspective and composition, in which the principles of proportion, balance, and harmony are explained.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>55</td>
<td>The arrangement of various figures in perspective, and the different arrangements of objects.</td>
</tr>
<tr>
<td>56</td>
<td>This is a Gallic fashion, not adopted among us. Children, in the things that they do, they temper the infinite parts of their composition, by the mean division.</td>
</tr>
</tbody>
</table>
by step, till it gives a clear knowledge of the thing to be demonstrated. This is called the synthetical method, and is used by Euclid in his Elements. Harris.

Compound. adj. from compose.] Comounded; or, having the power of composing.

Composer. n. f. [from compose.] He that ranges and adjusts the types in printing; distinguished from the pressman, who makes the impression upon paper.

Compost. n. f. [Fr. composte, Lat.] A mixture of various substances for enriching the ground, manure.

Avoid what is to come, and do not spread the compost on the woods. To make them ranker. We also have great variety of composes and fulls, for the making of the earth fruitful.

Water planted thrubs, ammonium especially, which you can hardlyesthe too often, and it requires abundant compost. Exodus' Calendar. Where, is a good indication, a cart can be found, that carries compost earth to dig the ground.

Drayden.

In vain the nurturing ground

Seems fair asleep, the field with fretted earth; but when the after compost exhales, its native poverty again prevails.

To Compost. v. a. [from the noun.] To manure; to enrich with soil.

By removing into waste earth, or forekeeping to compost the earth, water-mint tarnish into field-mans, and the colewort into rape.

As for earth, it composts itself; for I know a garden that had a field ploughed upon it, and it did bear fruit excellently. Bacon's Natural History.

Composture. n. f. [from compo.-] soil; manure. Not used.

The earth is a thief,

That feeds and breeds by a compost soil,

From general extenuation Shakespeare's Times.

Composure. n. f. [from compose.] 1. The act of composing or inviting.

To take the feeble to the firm, or comprehensive of the nature of the duty, as forms of publick composition.

King Charles.

2. Arrangement; combination; mixture; order.

Hence languages strive, when, by imitation and agreement, such a composite of letters, such a word, it intended to signify such a certain thing.

Hold an Element of Speech.

From the vowels and consonants of these corporates together, happen all the varieties of the bodies formed out of them. Woodward's Natural History.

3. The form arising from the disposition of the various parts.

Figure of his face, Liv'd a fair but manly grave.

Craf. I.

4. Frame; make; temperament.

To feel the streets at noon, and stand the buffet With shaves that smell of sweat; for this becomes them.

As his compost must be rare indeed, When their things cannot be blest.

Shakespeare's Antony and Cleopatra.

The duke of Buckingham frets, without any help, by a kind of congenial compost, to the likeness of our late sovereign and mother. Watson.

5. Adjutment.

God will either lead to the inward captures of the mind, than to the outward form and compost of the body.

Ducre.

6. Composition; framed discourse.

Discourses on such occasions are seldom the productions of before, and should be read with those favourable allowances that are made to such composes.

In the compositions of men, remember you are a man as well as they; and it is not their reason, but your own, that is given to the Words on the Mind.

7. Sedateness; calmness; tranquillity.

To whom the virgin majesty of Eve,

As one who loves, and some unkindness meets,

With sweet affrere compass and mind. Milton.

The calmest and softest hours of life, when the passions of nature are all silent, and the mind enjoys its own perfect composteur. Wilson's Ethics.

8. Agreement; composition; settlement of differences.

The treaty at Uxbridge gave the fairest hopes of an happy composteur. King Charles.

Van gazed to right and left the front unford,

That all may for, what hate us, how we look Peace and composteur. Milton's Paradise Lost.

Things were not brought to an extremity; there stems yet to be room left for a composteur; hereafter, there may be only for a day.

Compota.] n. f. [compotatia, Lat.] the art of drinking or uppling together.

Scurvy to words spoke under the roofs, only mean, in composition, from the ancient custom in symposium meetings, to one another.

Brown's Falstaff Errarous.

If thou wilt prolong Dire composteur, forboth with reason quite Her empire, and mind at rest.

And vaine debates; then twenty tongues at once Conspire in senseless jargon; nought is heard But din and various clamour, and mad rant.

Philips.

To COMPOUND, v. a. [compote, Latin.] 1. To mingle many ingredients together in one mass.

2. To form by uniting various parts.

Whoever composes any like it, shall be cut off.

Exdes xx.

It will be difficult to evince, that nature does not make decomposed bodies; 1 many, mingle together such bodies as are already composed of elementary, or rather of simple ones.

By the Seopitical Olymph.

The ideas, being each but one sngle perception, are easier got than the more complex ones; and therefore are not liable to the uncertainty which attends the compounded.

3. To mingle in different positions; to combine.

We cannot have a single image that did not enter through the light; but we have the power of altering and combining those images into all the varieties of picture.

Addison's Spectator.

[In grammar.] To form one word from two or more words.

Where it and Tigris embrace each other under the city of Asiana, there do they agree of a joint and compound of names, and are called Pisi-Tigris.

Robins's History of the World.

5. To compose by being united.

Who'd be so mock'd with glory, as to live

But in a dream of friendship.

To have his compound, and all what rate compounds, but only painted, like his vivandier's friends! Shakespeare's Timon.

6. To adjust a difference by some receision from the rigour of claims.

I would to God all affairs were well compos'd! Shakespeare.

If there be any discord or fault in any of the family, they are compos'd and appeased.

3. To discharge a debt by paying only part.

Shall I, ye gods! he cries, my debts compos'd? Gay.

Compound. n. f. [from the verb.]

1. Formed out of many ingredients; not simple.

The ancient electrum had in it a fifth of silver to the gold, and made a compound metal, fit for most uses as gold.

Bacon.

Compound substantives are made up of two or more simple substantives.

Watts's Logick.

2. In grammar.] Composed of two or more words; not simple.

Those who are his greatest admirers, seem pleased with them as beauties; 1 feasts of his compos'd epicsthes.

Page.

3. Compound or aggregated Flower, in botany, is such as consists of many little flowers, concurring together to make up one whole one; each of which has its style and stamens, and adhering leaf, and are all contained within one and the same calyx: such are the sunflower and dandelion.

Harris.

Compounded. adj. from compos-] ed.] Capable of being compounded.

Compounded by. n. f. [from To compound.] 1. One who endeavours to bring parties to terms of agreement.

Those fomifers, sweeteners, compounders, and expedient-mongers, who shake their heads to strongly.

Swifts.
2. A mingler; one who mixes bodies.

COMPREHEND. v. a. [comprehend, Latin.]

1. To comprehend; to include; to contain; to imply.

If there be any other commandment, it is briefly comprehended in this saying, namely, Thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself. Rom. xii. 9.

It would be ridiculous to grow old in the study of every necessary thing, in an art which comprehendeth many several parts. Dryden's Don John.

2. To contain in the mind; to understand; to conceive.

Rome was not better by her Horace taught, than we are here to comprehend his thought.

'Tis unjust, that they who have not the least notion of heroic writing, should therefore condemn the pleasure which others receive from it, because they cannot comprehend it. Dryden.

COMPREHENSIBLE. adj. [comprehensible, Fr. compréhensible, Lat.]

1. Intelligible; attainable by the mind; conceivable by the understanding.

The horizon sets the bounds between the enlightened and dark parts of things, between what is comprehensible and that which is not comprehensible to us. Locke.

2. Possible to be comprehended.

Left this part of knowledge should seem to any not comprehensible by axioms, we will let down some hope of comprehending it.

COMPREHENSIBLY. adv. [from comprehensible.]

With great power of figuration or understanding; significantly; with great extent of sense. Tillotson.

Seems to have used comprehensibly for comprehensively.

The words wisdom and righteousness are comprehensible, very comprehensible, to as to signify all religion and virtue. Tillotson.

COMPREHENSION. n. f. [comprehension, Latin.]

1. The act or quality of comprehending or containing; inclusion.

In the Old Testament there is a close comprehensions of the New, in the New an open diction of the Old. Hider.

The comprehension of an idea, regards all essential modes and properties of it; so body, in its comprehension, taken in solid, figure, quantity, mobility.

White's Logic.

2. Summary; epitome; compendium; abstraction; abridgment in which much is comprehended.

If we would draw a short abstract of human happenings, bringing together all the various ingredients of them, and digest them into one prescription, we must at last fix on this wise and religious aphorism in my text, as the form and comprehension of all. Rogers.

3. Knowledge; capacity; power of the mind to admit and contain many ideas at once.

You give no proof of decay of your judgment, and comprehension of all things, within the compass of an human understanding.

4. [In rhetoric.] A trope or figure, by which the name of a whole is put for a part, or that of a part for the whole, or a definite number for an indefinite.

Harris.

COMPREHENSIVE. adj. [from comprehend.]

1. Having the power to comprehend or understand many things at once.

He must have been a man of a most wonderful comprehensiveness nature, because he has taken into the compass of his Canterbury Tales the various manners and humours of the whole English nation in his age; not a single character has escaped him.

Dryden's Falstaff, Preface.

His hand unhand'd, his compass round.

His comprehensive head; all interests weigh'd,

All Europe far'd, yet Britain not betray'd.

Dryden's King John.

2. Having the quality of comprehending; extensive.

So diffusive, so comprehensive, so catholic a grace is charity, that whatever time is the opportunity of any other virtue, that time is the opportunity of charity.

St. Augustin.

COMPREHENSIVELY. adv. [from comprehensive.]

In a comprehensive manner

COMPREHENSIVENESS. n. f. [from comprehensive.]

The quality of including much in a few words or narrow compass.

Compare the beauty and comprehensiveness of legends on ancient coins. Adlert, in Ancient Manners.

To COMPREHEND. v. a. [comprehend, Latin.]

1. To force into a narrower compass; to squeeze together.

To embrace.

Her Neptune eyes, with bloom of beauty blest,

And in his case the yielding nymph comprehended.

Dryden.

There was in the island of Io a young girl comprehended by a genius, who delighted to associate with the muse.

Pope.

2. To embrace ideas, of linen, which surgeons fain would have for their particular part or purpose.

I applied an intercostal about the ankle and upper part of the foot, and by comprehension and bondage dress'd it up.

Boycott.

COMPREHENSIBILITY. n. f. [from comprehensible.]

The quality of being comprehensible; the quality of admitting to be brought by force into a narrower compass; as air may be comprehended, but water can by no violence be reduced to less space than it naturally occupies.

COMPREHENSIBLE. adj. [from comprehensible.]

Capable of being forced into a narrower compass; yielding to preasure, so that one part is brought nearer to another.

Their being spirial particles, accounts for the elasticity of air; their being spherical particles, which gives free passage to any heterogeneous matter; accounts for air's being compressible.

Cayley's Philosophical Principles.

COMMpressibility. n. f. [from compressible.] Capability of being preessed close.

Dill.

COMPRESSION. n. f. [compressio, Latin.]

The act of bringing the parts of any body more near to each other by violence; the quality of admitting such an effort of force as may compel the body comprehended into a narrower space.

Whensoever a solid body is preessed, there is an inward tumult in the parts, seeking to deliver themselves from the preession; and this is the case of all violent motion.

Dryden.

The powder in shot, being dillled into such a flame as endareth not compression, moveth in round, the flame being in the nature of a liquid body, fumelesse, burning.

Tears are the effects of the compression of the moisture of the brain, upon distillation of the spirits.

Bacon, Natural History.

Marry Michael, the Cymricke pipe, piped this upon his oaten pipe for merry England, but with a mocking compression for Nunnery. Camil. Rem.
In a compulsory or forcible manner; by force; by violence.

To say that the better defever hath such right to govern, as he may compulsarily bring under the less worthy, is idle. Bacon.

COMPUTER, n.f. [from comput.] Reckoner; accountant; calculator.

The kalendar of their computes, and the accounts of these days, are different. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

I have known some such ill computors, as to imagine the millions in flocks to much real wealth. Swift.

COMPUTIST, n.f. [computist; Fr.] Calculator; one filled in the art of numbers or computation.

The treasuror was a wise man, and a field computor. Watts.

We conceive we have a year in three hundred and fifty-five days exactly: computists tell us, that we escape six hours. Brown.

COMRADE, n.f. [camerade, Fr. from camera, a chamber; one that lodges in the same chamber, conterminius frater.]

1. One who dwells in the same house or chamber.

Rathcr I abjure all roofs, and choose to be a comrade with the wolf and owl. Shakespeare's King Lear.

2. A companion; a partner in any labour or danger.

He permitted them to put out both thine eyes, and fetter'd them thee. Into the common pillory, there to grind among the flames and ashes, the camrod. As good for nothing else. Milton's Aganips.

A footman, being newly married, defired his comrade to tell him freely what the town could of it. Swift.

CON. A Latin inscrutable preposition, which, at the beginning of words, signifies union or association: as concurs, a running together; to convenerate, to come together.

CON. [abbreviated from conter, against, Lat.] A cant word for one who is on the negative side of a question; as, the pros and cons.

To CON. v. a. [conan, Sax. to know; as, in Chaucer, Old scyem connn mokal things; that is, Old women have much knowledge.]

1. To know.

Of much, Hobbinol. I come no skill Enough to me to paint out my worth.

2. To study; to commit to memory; to fix in the mind. It is a word now little in use, except in ludicrous language.

Pretty servers! have you not been acquainted with goldsmiths wires, and canst with that sort of rings? Shakespeare.

Here are your parts; and I am to interest you to them by to-morrow night.

Shakespeare's Midsummer Night's Dream.

Our understanding cannot in this body arrive to clearly to the knowledge of God, and things invisible, as by orderly coming over the visible and inward creatures. Milton.

Saw it him written; and, having the other also written in the paper, shewed him that, after he had on his first, and required it of him. Milton.

The books of which I chiefly fond. Are such as you have wildon't count. Prior.

All this while John had carried over such a catalogue of bard words, as were enough to conjure up the devil. Arbuthnot.
His grace looks cheerful and smooth this morning:

Three's some conceit, or other, likes him well,
When that he bids good-morrow with such spirit.

His majesty's High NIC.

In laughing there ever precedeth a conceit of something ridiculous, and therefore it is imaginary to man.

Sidney.

The first kind of things appointed by laws humane, contained what was good or evil, in notwithstanding more secret than that it can be discerned by every man's present conceit, without some deeper discourse and judgment. Hooker.

I shall be found of a quick conceit in judgment, and shall be admired.

Wilton, vili. 11.

1. Opinion, generally in a sense of contempt; fancy; imagination; fantastical notion.

I know not how conceit may rob

The history of life, when life itself

Yields to the theft.

Shakespeare's King Lear.

Strong conceits, like a new principle, carries all easily with it, when yet above common sense.

Locke

Maltranche has an odd conceit.

As ever entered Frenchman's pate.

Prior.

4. Opinion, in a neutral sense.

Seest thou a man wise in his own conceit?

There is more hope of a fool than a wise man.

Proverbs, xxvi. 12.

I shall not fail to approve the fair conceit

The King hath of you.

Shakespeare's Henry VIII.

5. Pleasent fancy; gaiety of imagination; acuteness.

His wit is as thick as Tewksbury mustard: there is no more conceit in him than is in a mallet.

Shakespeare's Henry IV.

While he was on his way to the gibbet, the rascal took him in the head to go off with a conceit.

L'Estrange.

6. Sentiment, as distinguished from imagery.

Sentiments are conceits alone their works confine, And glittering thoughts struck out at every line.

Dryden.

7. Fondness; favourable opinion; opinionative pride.

Since by a little studying in learning, and great conceit of himself, he has lost his religion; may he find it again by harder study, under humble truth.

Barclay.

Not that I dare affirm to myself to have put him out of conceit with it, by having convinced him of the fantasticalness of it.

Tillogren, Preface.

What hath chiefly put me out of conceit with this moving manner, is the frequent disappointment.

Swift.

7. To CONCEDE. v. a. [concedes, Latin.]

To yield; to admit; to grant; to let pass undisputed.

By a paragogic animal persuasion we might strike out great numbers of hidden qualities: and, having once a conceded lift, we might with more safety attempt their reasons.

Brown.

This might not be conceded without limitation.

Boyle.

The article, if you concede to him that fortune may be an agent, both presume himself safe and invulnerable.

Birch.

CONCET. n. f. [concepts, French; conceptus, Latin.]

1. Conception; thought; idea; image in the mind.

Here the very gourmands have their fancies lifted to 40 high conceits, as the learned of other nations are content both to borrow their names, and imitate their manner.

Brown.

Impossible it was, that ever their will should change or incline to repine any part of their duty, without some object having force to avert their conceit from God.

Hebber.
CONCEIVED. adj. [from conceive.] One that understands or apprehends.

The words proclaim symbols and pious allegories be made by wise conceiver, yet common heads will fly unto superfetitious applications.

Milton's Paradise Lost.

CONCEIVER. n. s. [from conceive.] 1. To conceive, to decide; conjecture; guess; to imagine; to form a notion of; to invent; to consult.

Dr. Maine.

"To conceive in his own principles, which allow no merit, no intrinsic worth, to accompany one flake more than another."

Addison.

CONCEIT, n. s. [from conceit.] 1. Confidence, assurance, self-confidence, overweening pride, conceit.

Dryden's Condemnation.

"That which is in any kind of thing contained, or comprehended, or comprehended in the mind of man, is called conceit, or an opinion of the mind."

Addison.

CONCEIT, n. s. [from conceit.] 1. Confidence, assurance, self-confidence, overweening pride, conceit.

Dryden's Condemnation.

"That which is in any kind of thing contained, or comprehended, or comprehended in the mind of man, is called conceit, or an opinion of the mind."

Addison.

CONCEITED, adj. [from conceit.] 1.Overweening pride, conceit.

Dryden's Condemnation.

"That which is in any kind of thing contained, or comprehended, or comprehended in the mind of man, is called conceit, or an opinion of the mind."

Addison.

CONCEIT, n. s. [from conceit.] 1. Confidence, assurance, self-confidence, overweening pride, conceit.

Dryden's Condemnation.

"That which is in any kind of thing contained, or comprehended, or comprehended in the mind of man, is called conceit, or an opinion of the mind."

Addison.

CONCEIT, n. s. [from conceit.] 1. Confidence, assurance, self-confidence, overweening pride, conceit.

Dryden's Condemnation.

"That which is in any kind of thing contained, or comprehended, or comprehended in the mind of man, is called conceit, or an opinion of the mind."

Addison.

CONCEIT, n. s. [from conceit.] 1. Confidence, assurance, self-confidence, overweening pride, conceit.

Dryden's Condemnation.

"That which is in any kind of thing contained, or comprehended, or comprehended in the mind of man, is called conceit, or an opinion of the mind."

Addison.

CONCEIT, n. s. [from conceit.] 1. Confidence, assurance, self-confidence, overweening pride, conceit.

Dryden's Condemnation.

"That which is in any kind of thing contained, or comprehended, or comprehended in the mind of man, is called conceit, or an opinion of the mind."

Addison.

CONCEIT, n. s. [from conceit.] 1. Confidence, assurance, self-confidence, overweening pride, conceit.

Dryden's Condemnation.

"That which is in any kind of thing contained, or comprehended, or comprehended in the mind of man, is called conceit, or an opinion of the mind."

Addison.
CONCEPTIOUS. adj. [conceptum, Latin.] Apto to conceive; fruitful; pregnant.

Capable to conceive.

In hot climates, where the uterine parts exceed in heat, by the coldness of this simple, they may be reduced into a concepitive constitution.

Browne's Valuer Errors.

To CONCERN. v. a. [concerner, French; concernes, low Latin.] 1. To relate to; to belong to.

To affect with some passion; to touch nearly; to be of importance to.

I would not

The case was known to them it most concerned.

Shakespeare.

Our wars with France have afforded, as in our most tender interests, and concerned us more than those with any other nation. Addison in the War.

It much concerns them not to suffer the king to establish his authority in this side. Addison, in Italy.

The more the authority of any faction in Society is extended, the more it concerns public happiness that it be committed to men fearing God.

To interest; to engage by interest.

I knew a young negro who was sick of the small pox I found by enquiry, at a person's concerned for him, that the little tumours left whic keppe themselves behind. Above the rest two goddeses appear, Concern'd for each; these Venus, Juno there.

Dryden's Aurelius.

Providenc, where it loves a nation, concern't itself to own and affect the interest of religion, by flattering the spoilers of religious persons and places.

Smith's Sermons.

Whatever past affections it cannot reconcile, nor appropriate to that present self by consciousfmen, it can be no more concerned in than if they had never been done.

Locke.

They think themselves out of the reach of providence, and no longer concerned to solicit his favours.

Rogers.

To disturb; to make uneasy.

In one compressing engine I cut a sparrow, without forcing any air in; and in an hour the bird began to pant, and be concerned, and in less than an hour and a half to die.

Dryden.

To concern himself. To intermeddle.

to be busy.

Being a layman, I ought not to have concerned myself with speculations which belong to the profession.

Dryden.

CONCERN. n. s. [from the verb.]

1. Busines; affair; considered as relating to some one.

1st. Of their near concerners, and imports.

Nothing left but the king's life and his power.

Denham's Satyry.

2. Relation. influence.

Of its concernment to his haughty love.

Dryden's Indian Emperor.

3. Intercourse; business.

The great concernment of men is with men, one amongst another.

Locke.

4. Importance; moment.

I look upon experimental truth as matters of great concernment to mankind.

Bolingbroke.

5. Interposition; regard; meddling.

He married a daughter to the earl, without any other approbation of her father, or concernment in it, than suffering her and him to come into his presence.

Clarendon.

6. Passion; emotion of mind.

While they are so eager to destroy the fame of others, their ambition is manifest in their concernment.

Dryden.

If it carry with it the notion of something extraordinary, if apprehension and concernment accompany it, the idea is likely to fink the deeper.

Locke.

To CONCERT, v. a. [concerter, French; from concertare, Latin, to prepare themselves for some public exhibition, or performance, by private encounters among themselves.]

1. To settle any thing in private by mutual communication.

2. To settle; to contrive; to adjut.

Mark how, already, in his working brain, he forms the well-considered scheme of suicide.

Browne.

CONCERT. n. s. [Concertatio, Lat.] Strike; contentation.

CONCERTATIVE. adj. [concertatius, Latin.] Contentions; quarrelsome; recriminating.

Deut.

CONCESSION. n. s. [concipere, Latin.]

1. The act of granting or yielding.

The concession of these charters was in a parliametary way.

2. A grant; the thing yielded.

I told myself unjustly; and by my largest concessions, if by them I might gain the love of my people.

King Charles.

Where a lover becomes satisfied by small compliances, without further purities, they expect to find some popularities content with small concessions.

Swift.

CONCERN'Y. adj. [from concession.]

Given by indulgence or allowance.

CONCEIVABLY. adv. [from conception.]

By way of concession; as, yielding, not controveting by assumption.

Some have written rhetorically and conceivably; not controveting, but assuring the question, which, taken as granted, advanced the illusion.

Brown's Valuer Errors.

CONCH. n. s. [concha, Latin.] A shell; a fish-shell.

He furnishes her closet first, and fills the crowded shell with rarities of shells.

Addis orient pearls, which from the conch he drew, and all the sparkling stones of various hue.

Dryden's Fables.

CONCHOID. n. s. The name of a curve.

CONCILIATOR. adj. [concilium, Latin.]

Relating to a council.

Having been framed by men of primitive simplicity, in free and conciliar debates, without any ambitious regards.

Barker's Reflexions in Learning.
To CONCILIATE, v. a. [concilie, Lat.]
To gain; to procure good will; to reconcile.

It was accounted a philium, or plants that conciliate affection.

Conciliation, n. f. [from conciliate.]
The act of gaining or reconciling. Dict.

Conciliatory, adj. [from conciliate.]
One that makes peace between others.

Conciliatory, adj. [from conciliatory, conicio, Latin.]
 Becoming; pleasant; agreeable.

Conciliator, adj. [conciliatorius, concio, Latin.]
Used at preachings or publick assemblies.

Their contemplations unbeguiled the vulger of the old opinion the loyalists had formerly infused into them by their conciliatory invective.

Conciliæse. adj. [concise, cut, Latin.]
Brief; short; broken into short periods.

The concise style, which expediteth not enough, but leaves somewhat to be understood.

The author is obscure, enlightened him, where he is too brief and concise, amplify a little, and let his notions in a faireer view.

Wants on the Mind.

Concisely, adv. [from concise.] Briefly; shortly; in few words; in short sentences.

Utters here speaks very concisely, and he may seem to break abruptly into the subject.

Brown in the Odyssey.

Conciensens, n. f. [from concise.] Briefly; shortly.

Giving more scope to Mezentius and Lillus, that version, which has more of the majority of Virgil, has lost of his conciseness.

Dryden.

Concision n. f. [concision, Latin.] Cutting off; excision; deftruction.

Concilation, n. f. [conciliatio, Latin.]
The act of fitting up, or putting in motion.

The revelations of heaven are conceived by immediate spiritual visions; whereas the deceiving spirit, by conciliation of humours, produces conceived phantasmes.

Brown.

Conclamation, n. f. [conclosion, Lat.]
An outcry or shout of many together.

Conclave, n. f. [conclave, Latin.]
1. A private apartment.
2. The room in which the cardinals meet, or the assembly of the cardinals.
   I thank the holy concile for their loves;
   They've felt me such a man I would have wish'd for.
   It was held of a cardinal, by reason of his appearance like dear to St. Peter's chair, that in two conciles he went in pope, and came out again cardinal.
   South's Remarks.
   3. A cloke assembly.

Forthwith a concile of the godhead meet,
Where Juno in the shining sate fits.

To CONCLUDE, v. a. [conclude, Latin.]
1. To shut.
2. The very perfection of Christ, therefore, for ever and the selfsame, was only, touching bodily substance, concluded within the grave.

The God hath concluded them all in unbelief, that he might have mercy upon all.

Romans, xi. 32.

3. To collect by conciliation.

The providence of God are promiscuously administered in this world; so that no man can conclude God's love or hatred to any person, by any thing that befalls him.

To CONCLUDE, v. a.
4. To decide: to determine: that is, to shut or close the dispute.

Youth, sir, if he says the world, here fearfully right;
And aye, returning thence, concludes it false. Dryd.

But no man, however great or glory, can he concluded to be dise.
Addis Ovid.

5. To end; to finish.

Is it concluded he shall be protector? Is it determined, not concluded yet; and must be it, if the people by authority.

Shakespeare's Richard III.

I will conclude this part with the speech of a counsellor of state.

There are many home, and how the war began.

And how concluded by the godlike man.

Dryden's A Mid.

6. Toobligae, as by the final determination.

The long will never end that the base multitude should frustrate the authority of the parliament, wherein their votes and contents were concluded.

Bacon's History VII.

If therefore they will appeal to revelation for their creation, they must he concluded by it.

Hall's Origin of Mankind.

He never refused to be concluded by the authority of one legally summoned.

Acts.

To CONCLUDE.
1. To perform the last act of ratification; to collect the consequence; to determine.

For why should we the busy soul believe,
When barely the conclude of that and this,
When of heathen he can no judgment give.
Nor how, nor whence, nor where, nor what she is?

Davies.

The blind man's relations import no necessity of concluding; that though black was the roughest of colours, therefore white should be Begle or Colours.

There is something infamous in the very attempt; the world will conclude I had a guilty conscience.

Arabian's History of John Bull.

2. To settle opinion.

Can we conclude upon Luther's infallibility as our author has done, because, in a single passage no way fundamental, an enemy writes that he had some doubts?

Aubrey.

I question not but your translation will do honour to our country; for I conclude it is accurate.

Addison to Pope.

3. Finally to determine.

They hambly fuse unto your excellence.

To have a goodly peace concluded of

Between the realms of England and France.

Shakespeare.

4. To end.

And all around were plentiful bonds, the ties
Of love's assurance, and a train of eyes,
That, made in bulk, conclude in particular.

Dryden's Fables.

Well'll tell when 'tis enough,
Or if it waste the nice concluding bout.

King.

Conclusive, n. f. [from conclude.]
Consequence; effectual proof; logical deduction of reason.

Judgment concerning things to be known, or the neglect and conclusion of them, ends in decision.

Hall.

Conclusively, adv. [from conclude.]
Decisive; ending in just and undeniable consequences.

Though of the kind of arguments may seem more obvious, yet, upon a due consideration, they are highly consequential and concludes to my purpose.

Hall's Origin of Mankind.

Conclusion, n. f. [from conclude.]

With uncontrovertible evidence.

Examine whether the opinion you meet with, repugnant to what you were formerly embued with, be conclusively demonstrat'd or not. Digby.

Conclusively, adv. [from conclude.]
Decisively; with final determination.

It is speaking only as to speak peremptorily, or conclusively, touching the point of possibility, till they have heard me deduce the means of the execution.

Bacon.

Conclusiveness, n. f. [from conclude.]
Power of determining the opinion; regular consequence.
CONCOTANCY. n. f. [from concordant.]

A coagulation of bodies, and is ever commonitauent with porosity and dryness. Bacon.
It has pleased our wise Creator to annex to several objects, as also to several of our thoughts, a concomitant pleasure, and that in several objects, to several degrees. Locke.

CONCOMITANT. n. f. Companion;
per or thing collaterally connected.
These effects are, from the local motion of the air, a concomitant of the sound, and not from the sound. Bacon.
He made him the chief concomitant of his heir apparent and only Son, in a journey of much advantage. Addison.

In concomitation, the preternatural concomitants,
an universal heat of the body, a torrid atmosphere,
and hot dilatations, have all a corrosive quality.
Harvey on Concomitations.

The other concomitants of ingenuous hardheartedness, or want of compassion. South's Sermon.

Honour flacks around,
Wild staring, and his sad concomitant
Defeat, of object look.
Philips.
Repose is a concomitant to greatness, as fatigues and invidues were an essential part of a Roman Triumph. Addison.

And for tobacco, who could bear it?
Filthy concomitant of claret !
Prior.
Where antecedents, concomitants and conseqents, causes and effects of things signified, subjects and adjuncts, are necessarily connected with each other, we may infer.
Watts.

CONCOMITANTLY. adv. [from concomittant.] In company with others. Dict.

To CONCOMITATE. v. a. [concomittus. Lat.] To be collaterally connected with any thing; to come and go with another.
This simple bloody festoration of the lungs, is different from that which concomitantes a pleurisy.
Harvey on Concomitations.

CONCORD. n. f. [concordia. Latin.]
1. Agreement between persons or things;
seemliness of one to another; peace;
union; mutual kindliness.
Had I power, I should
Pour the sweet milk of concord into hell,
Upon the universal peace. Shakespeare's Macbeth.
What concord hath Christ with Belial ?
1 Cor. vi. 15.
One full strife
Of such complexion, such as, to set forth
Great things by small, it, nature's concord books,
Among the constellations were fixed. Milton.
Kind concord, heavenly born ! what blissful exterior
Holds this vast globe in one surrounding chain ;
Soul of the world !

2. A compact.
It appeareth by the concord made between Henry and Roderick the Ishak king. Davies in Ireland.

Harmony; content of sounds.
The man hath a mustick in himself,
Nor is not mov'd with concord of sweet founds,

4. Principal grammatical relation of one word to another, distinct from regimen.
Have those who have with various declarations,
concords, and syntaxis, bolt their labour ?
Locke.

CONCORDANCE. n. f. [concordantia. Lat.]
1. Agreement.
2. A book which shews in how many texts of scripture any word occurs,
I shall take it for an opportunity to tell you, how you are to rule the city of your concordances.
South's Sermons. Dedication.

Some of you turn over a concordance, and there, having the principal word, introduce as much of the verse as will serve your turn.

An old concordance bound long since. Swift.

5. A concord in grammar, of the three chief relations in speech. It is not now in use in this sense.
After the three concordances learnt, let the matter read unto him the epitaph of Cicero.

Achæan's Scholar's.

CONCORDAT. adj. [concordatus. Latin.]
Agreeable; agreeing; correspondent.

Harmony; concordance with.

Agreeable; agreeable; correspondent;
harmonious.

Were every one employed in points concordant to their natures, professions, and arts, commonwealths would rise up of themselves.

Swift's Eugene Aram.

CONCORDATE. n. f. [concordatus; Fr. concor-datium. Lat.] A compact; a convention.

How comes it to number the want of synods in the Gallican church among the grievances of that concordata, and as a mark of their slavery, since he reckons all concordations of the clergy in England to be useless and dangerous ?
Swifts.

CONCOPRAL. adj. [from concorpa,
Latin, to incorporate.] Of the same Source.

To CONCOPRATE. v. a. [from con-and corp.] To unite in one maia or substance.

When we incorporate the sign with the signification, we conjoin the word with the spirit.
Taylor's Worky Combinations.

To CONCOPRATE. w. n. [Lat. and corpus.] To unite into one body.

Thus we classifie the god of wine
With water that is feminine,
Unto the cooler nymphs abate
His wrath, and for incorporate.

CICERONIAN.

CONCOPRATiON. n. f. [from concor-parte.] Union in one maia; intimate mixture.

Dict.

CONCOURE. n. f. [concoeur, Latin.]
1. The confluence of many persons or things to one place.
Do all the nightly guards,
The city's watchers, with the people's fears,
The concours of all good men, drive tie nothing ?

Jenyns.

The coalition of the good frame of the
Was not the product of chance, or fortuitous

CONCOUR. n. f. [concoceo,
Latin.] To etc.

Dyer's Fables.

2. The persons assembled.
The prince with wonder heats, from every part,
The noise and busy concours of the earth's Origin of Musick.

3. The point of junction or intermission of two bodies.
So soon as the upper glass is laid upon the lower,
so as to touch it at one end, and to touch the drop at the other end, making with the lower glass an angle of about ten or fifteen minutes; the drop will begin to move towards the concours of the glass, and will continue to move with an accelerated motion, till it arrives at that concours of the glass. Newton.

CONCRESCE. n. f. [from concresce,
Lat. to burn together.] The act of burning many things together.

Dict.

CONCREM. n. f. [from concresce,
Latin.] The mass formed by concresciation; a collection of matter growing together.

There is the cohesion of the matter into a more loose consistence, like clay, and thereby it is prepared to the concurrence of a pebble or flint.

Hall's Origin of Man.
CONCRETE. n. f. [from concrete, Lat.] The act or quality of growing by the union of parts.

The mineral or metallic matter, thus concreting with the crystalline, is equally diffused throughout the body of it. Woodward.

When any saline liquor is evaporated to a cuticle, and let cool, the salt concretes in regular figures which argues that the particles of the salt, before they concreted, floated in the liquor at equal distances, in rank and file.

The blood of those who died of the plague could not be made to concrete, by reason of the putrefaction begun.

To CONCRETE. v. a. To form by concretion; to form by the coalition of separate particles.

That there are in our inferior world divers bodies, that are concreted out of others, is beyond all dispute: we see it in the meteors. Hall's Origin of Mankind.

CONCRETE. adj. [from the verb.]
1. Formed by concretion; formed by coalition of separate particles into one mass.

The first concrete fibre, or concretion, of the chaos, must be of the same figure as the last liquid fibre. Burnet.

2. [In logic.] Not abstract; applied to a subjunct.

A kind of mutual concretion there is, whereby those concretes names, God and man, when we speak of Christ, do take interchangeably one another, and yet are not true of one God, S. Gillnot whether we say that the son of God hath created the world, and the son of man by his death hath fixed it, or else that the son of man did create, and the son of God did die to save the world.

Concrete terms, while they express the quality, do also either express, imply, or refer to some faculty, to which it belongs; as white, round, long, broad, wise, mortal, living, dead: but there are not always such adjectives in a grammatical sense; for a knife, a fool, a philosopher, and many other concretes, are substantivals, as well as knavery, folly, and philosophy, which are the abstract terms that belong to them. Wott's Logick.

CONCRETE. n. f. A mass formed by concretion; or, union of various parts adhering to each other.

If gold itself be admitted, as it must be, for a porous concrete, the proportion of void to body, in the texture of common air, will be so much the greater. Bentley's Sermons.

CONCRETELY. adv. [from concrete.] In a manner including the subjunct with the predicate; not abstrusely.

This concretes may abstractly for the more act of obliquity, but concretely, with such a special dependence of it upon the will as serves to render the agent guilty. North.

CONCRETENESS. n. f. [from concrete.]
Coagulation; collection of fluids into a solid mass. Dill.

CONCRETION. n. f. [from concrete.]
1. The act of concreting; coalition.
2. The mass formed by a coalition of separate particles.

Some plants, upon the top of the sea, are supposed to grow some concretion of flame from the water, where the sun's heat is most little. Bacon's Natural History.

COAGULATION. n. f. [from coagulare, Latin.] The act of living with a woman not married.

Adultery was punished with death by the ancient heathens: coagulation was permitted. Brum. Concordat.

COJNCLUDING. n. f. [from concludere, Latin.] A mass formed by coagulation.

CONCUMINAGE. n. f. [from concupiscere, Fr. concupiscereus, Lat.] The act of living with a woman not married.

Concupiscence was punished with death by the ancient heathens: coagulation was permitted. Brum. Concordat.

CONCUPISCENCE. n. f. [from concupiscere, Latin.] Irregular desire; libidinous with lust; lecherous.

We know even secret concupiscence to be sin; and are made fearful to offend, though it be in a wandering cogitation. Hooker.

In our favor the evident signs of foul concupiscence; whence evil flow, even the fate of evils. Milton's Par. Lost.

Nor can we say, that the difference of climate inclines one nation to concupiscence and fractious pleasures, another to blood-thirstiness: it would discover great ignorance not to know, that a people has been overrun with recently invented vices. Suetonius's Sermons.

CONCUPISCENT. adj. [from concupiscere, Latin.] Libidinous; lecherous.

He would not, but by gift of my state body.
To his concupiscence intemperate soul.
Relate my brother! Shaksp. Macbeth for Macbeth.

CONCUPISCENTIAL. adj. [from concupiscere.]
Relating to concupiscence. Dill.

CONCUPISCUOUS. adj. [concupiscibilis, Lat.] Impressing desire; eager; devouring; inclined to the pursuit or attainment of any thing.

The schools reduce all the passions to these two heads, the concupiscible and irascible appetites. Suarez's Sermons.

To CONCUR. v. n. [concurrere, Latin.]
1. To meet in one point.

Though reason favour them, yet sense can hardly allow them; and, to satisfy, both these must concur. Temple.

2. To agree; to join in one action, or opinion.

Acts which shall be done by the greater part of my executors, shall be as valid and effectual as if all my executors had concurred in the same. Swift's Life of Wall.

3. It has with before the person with whom one agrees.

If the evil simply to concur with the heathens, either in opinion or action; and that conformity with them is only then a disgrace, when we follow them in that they do amiss, or generally in that they do without renown. Hooker.

4. It has to before the effect to which one contributes.

Their affections were known to concur to the most desirable conclusions. C. Leonard.

Two or more in nature equal good produce, Extremes in man concur to general use. Pope.

5. To be united with; to be conjoined.

To have an orthodox belief, and a true profession, concurring with a bad life, is only to deny Christ with a greater solemnity.

Testimony is the argument; and if fair probabilities of reason concur with it, this argument hath all the strength it can have. Tillotson.

6. To contribute to one common event with joint power.

When outward causes concur, the idle are soonest seized by this infection. Collier on the Spleen.

CONCURR. v. n. [from concurrere.]
CONCURR. n. f. [from concurrere.]
1. Union; association; conjunction.

We have no other measure but our own ideas, with the concurrence of other probable reasons, to persuade us. Locke.

2. Agreement; act of joining in any design, or measures.

Their concurrence in persuasion, about some material points belonging to the fame policy, is not strange. Hooker, Preface.

The concurrence of the peers in that fury, can be improper to the irreconcile the judges with them. Ch. Leonard.

Tarinquin the proud was expelled by an universal concurrence of nobles and people. Dryden.

3. Combination of many agents or circumstamces.

Struck with these great concernments of things. Swift.

He views our behaviour in every concurrence of affairs, and sees us engage in all the possibilities of action. Addison's Spectator.

4. Alliance; help.

From these sublime images we collect the greatness of the world, and the necessity of the divine concurrence to it. Rogers.

5. Joint right; equal claim.

A bishop might have officers, if there was a concurrence of jurisdiction between him and the archbishops. Southcote.

CONCURRENT. adj. [from concurrere.]
1. Acting in conjunction; agreeing in the same act; contributing to the same event; concomitant in agency.

I join with thee laws the personal preference of the King's son, as a concurrent cause of this reformation. Davenant's Ireland.

For, without the concurrent consent of all these three parts of the legislature, no such law is or can be made. Hale.

This sole vital faculty is not sufficient to exterminate noxious humours to the contrary, unless the animal faculty be concurrent to it, to supply the fibres with animal spirits. Harvey.

All comb'd
Your beauty, and my impotence of mind
And his concurrent flame, that blew mine fire;
For still out kindred souls had one head.
Dryden's Fables.

2. Conjoined; associate; concomitant.

There is no difference between the concurrent echo and the lament, but the quickness or slowness of the return. Southcote.

CONCURRENT. n. f. [from concurrere.] That which concurs; a contributory cause.
To all affairs of importance there are three necessary concurrence, without which they can never be dispatched; time, industry, and faculties.

CONCUSSION. n. f. [concussa, Lat.]
1. The act of shaking; agitation; trema-faction.
It is believed that great ringing of bells, in populous cities, has dispatified pestilens air; which may be from the concussion of the air.
Eucel's Natural History.
The strong concussion on the braving tide
Roll'd back the vital to the island's side.

2. The state of being shaken.
There now amounts not of such an universal concussion of the whole globe, as must needs imply an agitation of the whole body.
Woodward's Natural History.

CONCUSSIVE. adj. [concussat, Lat.]
Having the power or quality of shaking.
To CONDEMN. v. a. [condemnare, Latin.]
1. To find guilty; to doom to punishment;
contrary to absolvent.
His counsel hath a thousand several tongues,
And ev'ry tongue a thoufand of his tale.
And ev'ry tale condemn me for a villain.
Shakespeare's Richard III.
It be found guilty?
—Yes, truly, is he, and condemn'd upon't.
Shakespeare's Henry VIII.

2. It has to be the punishment.
The fon of man shall be betrayed unto the furies, and they shall condemn him to death.
Matt. xxii. 15.

3. To cenfure; to blame; to declare criminal; contrary to approce.
Who then shall blame
His paftor's fancies to recall and flent.
When all that is within him does condemn
Himself for being there?
Shakespeare's Macbeth.
The poet, who flourished in the scene, is condemned in the rudest.
Dryden's Fable, Preface.
He who was so unjust as to do his brother an injury, will fearc be so just as to condemn himself for it.
Lok.

4. To fine.
And the king of Egypt put him down at Jerusalem, and condenmed him in an hundred talent of silver.
2 Chronicles.

5. To shew guilt by contrail.
The righteous is that is dead shall condemn the unguilty which liv'd.
Wisdom, iv. 16.

CONDENMABLE. adj. [from condemn.]
Blameable; culpable.
He commands to censure the print of a caution in shoes; which riotously to observe, were condemned.
Witelson.

CONDEMNATION. n. f. [condemnatiun, Latin.]
The sentence by which any one is doomed to punishment; the act of condemning; the state of being condemned.
There is therefore now no condemnation to them.
Romans, viii. 18.

CONDEMNATORY. adj. [from condemn.]
Passing a sentence of condemnation, or of censure.
He that passeth the first condemnatory sentence, is like the incendiary in a popular tumult, who is chargeable with all those disorders to which he gives occasion.
Government of the Tongue.

CONDENMER. n. f. [condemnare, Lat.]
A blamer; a cenfurer; a censuror.
Some are the only refusers and condemners of this catholic practice.
Taylor's Worthy Cause.

CONDENSABLES. adj. [from condensate.]
That which is capable of condensation; that which can be drawn or compressed into a narrower compass.
This agent meets with resistance in the moveable; and not in the utmost extremity of density, but condensable yet further, every resistance works something upon the matter to condense it.
Digby's Chalcographia.

To CONDESMATE. v. a. [condensas, Latin.]
To condense; to make thicker.

To CONDESMATE. n. f. To grow thicker.

CONDENSATION. n. f. [from condensate.]
The act of thickening any body, or making it more gross and weighty: opposite to rarification.
If by natural arguments it may be proved, that water, by condensate, may become earth;
The same reason teacheth, that earth, rarified, may become water.
Rudolph's History.
By water-glazes the account was not regular;
for, from attenuation and condensation, the hours were shorter in hot weather than in cold.
Brown's Vapour Errors.
The supply of its moral laws by cars and snow, and dens and condensation of vapours, and perhaps by supernatural passages.
Reynolds.

To CONDENSE. v. a. [condensas, Latin.]
To make any body more thick, close, and weighty; to drive or attract the parts of any body nearer to each other;
to inflate: opposed to rarefy.
Moving in so high a sphere, he must needs,
that the sun, rafe many envious exhalations, which, condensed by a popular odium, were capable to cloud the brightest merit.
King Charles.
Some lead their youth abroad, while some condense
Their liquid stores, and fame in cells dispense.
Dryden's Virgil.

Such dense and solid ftrata arrefl the vapour at the surface of the earth, and collect and condense it there.
Woodward.

To CONDENSE. v. n. To grow close and weighty; to withdraw its parts into a narrower compass.
The water falling from the upper parts of the cave, does presently there condense into little ftones.
Bye's Septs. Cyth.
All vapours, when they begin to condense and coalesce into small parcels, become firf of that bignes whereby azure must be reflected, before they can confider other colours.
Newton's Optics.

CONDENSATION. adj. [from the Verb.] Thick;
dense; condensated; clofe; maffy; weighty.

They colours, light, and fire
Affume, as fliken them bell, condensore or rare. Milk.
They might have been brought without confolating into the huge condensore bodies of palaces.
Brerley's Sermons.

CONDENSER. n. f. [from condensate.] A strong metalline ve ineff, wherein to crowd the air, by means of a syringe fattened thereto.
Quixy.

CONDENSITY. n. f. [from condensate.] The flate of being condensed; condensation;
denfeness; density.

COrNERS. n. f. [condure, French.]
Such as stand upon high places near the sea coast, at the time of herring fishing, to make signs to the fishes which way the flame pallet, which may better appear to fuch as fland upon fome high cliffs, by a kind of blue colour that the firit caufeth in the water, than to thole in the fhips.
These be a kind of lubsters, by the children of the French buoy, extinguers, and balker.

To CONDESCEND. v. n. [condescendere, Latin.]
1. To depart from the privileges of superiority by a voluntary submission; to fink willingly to equal terms with inferi-ors; to fuch by familiarity.
This method carries fuch a humble and considerate air, when he lets instruct forms to the enquirer.
Watts.

2. To confess to do more than mere juflice may require.
Spain's mighty monarch,
In gracious clemency does condence.
On these conditions, to become your friend.
Dryden's Indian Emperor.
He did not primarily intend to appoint this way;
but condescending to it, as accommodative to their particular state.
Tillotson.

3. To floop; to bend; to yield; to submit;
to become subject.
Can the great is known, to be broken, to be done?
With corporal fervitude, that the mind even
Will condescend to such absurd commands? Milton.
Nor shall my resolution
Difarm infires, nor condense to public cheer.
With foolish hopes.
Drake's Song.

CONDENCES, n. f. [condescendence, French.]
Voluntary submission to a state of equality with inferiors.

CONDESCENDingly. adv. [from condene-condencing.] By way of voluntary humiliation; by way of kind concession.
We condescendingly made Luther's works uipmate in the controversy.

CONDESCENSION. n. f. [from condensate.]
Voluntary humiliation; decent from superiority; voluntary submission to equality with inferiors.
It forbids pride, and ambition, and vain glory;
and commands humility, and modesty, and condesence to others.
Tillotson.

Courteous and condescension is an happy quality, which never fails to make its way into the good opinions, and into their hearts, and allays the cenany which always attends a high faiton.
Addison.

To CONDESCEND. v. n. To be courteous;
to treat with inferiors on equal terms:
not haughty; not arrogant.

CONDIGN. adj. [condignus, Latin.
Worthy of a perfon; fuitable; deferved; merited: it is always coined of some thing deferved by crimes.

To CONDEMN. v. a. [condennare, Latin.]
Confider who is your friend, he that brought him to confign punishment, or he that saved him.
Arbuthnot.

CONDEMNATION. n. f. [from condensate.]
Suitable, convenient; agreeable, fit, and defersed; according to merit.

CONDIMENT. n. f. [condimentum, Latin.]
Seafoning; sauce; which excites the appetite by a pungent taffe.

As for fish, and the like, they are for condiments,
and not for nourishment.
Brown's Nat. Hist.
Many things are forfcowed that are for condiments, guid, or medicaments, than any substantial nutriments.
Brown.
To C'ONDITE. n. s. [conditioj, Lat.] A fellow-choir.

To C'ONDITE. v. a. [condit, Lat.] To pickle; to preserve by heat or aromatics.

A stage after the same manner as the sugar does, in the conditioj of peas, quinces, and the like.

The most innocent of them are but like conditii or pickled mutthj. which, carefully corrected, may be harmless, but can never do good.

Taylor's Rule of Living Holy.

C'ONDITION. n. s. [from condition.] A composition of conifers, powders, and spices, in the form of an elocutionary. Ditto.

CONDITION. v. s. [condition, Fr. condition.] To qualify; to regulate.

The melancholical but holy were long supported, we cannot abide the same unto any faculty therein, which suppresses and conditionajtes its operation.

Brown's Vulgar Errors.

CONDITION. adj. [from the verb.]

Established on certain terms or conditions.

That which is mistaken to be particular and absolute, duly understood, is general, but conditionajy; and belongs to none who shall not perform the condition.

Brown's Vulgar Errors.

CONDITION. adj. [from condition.] Having qualities or properties good or bad.

The dearest friend to me, the licentiate, the hej conditioned. Shakespeare, Merchant of Venice.

To C'ONDOLE. v. a. [condolere, Lat.] To lament with those that are in misfortune; to express concern for the misfortunes of others. It has with the person for whose misfortune we profess grief. It is opposed to congratulation.

Your friends would have cause to rejoice, rather than condition with you.

I congratulate with the basest upon this honour done to their king; and must condition with us poor mortals, who are rendered incapable of paying our respects.

To C'ONDOLE. v. a. To bewail with another.

I come not, Sampson, to condition thy chance, At these perhaps? yet with it had not been, Thus far for my hand, Milton's Apology.

Why should our poet petition His for her deliverance, and afterwards condition her miscarriage?

C'ONDOLE'MENT. n. s. [condolent.] Grief; sorrow; mourning.

To performe In obelinate condition, is a course Of impious flubbemess, unamiable grief.

C'ONDOLE'NCE. n. s. [condolence, Fr.] The expression of grief for the forrows of another; the civillies and messages of friends upon any los or misfortune.

The reader will excuse this digression, due by way of condition to my worthy brethren. Arbuth.

C'ONDOLE. n. s. [condole.] One that joins in lamentation for the misfortunes of another.

C'ONDO'NA'T. n. s. [condonatio, Lat.]

A pardoning; a forgiving. Ditto.

To C'ONDUCE. v. n. [conduco, Lat.] To promote an end; to contribute; to serve to some purpose; followed by to.

The boring of holes in that kind of wood, and then laying it abroad, seems to condition it with fire.

Brown's Holy War.

They may condition it further discoveries for coming to the theory of light.

To C'ONDUCE. v. a. To condition; to accompany, in order to fly the way. In this sense I have only found it in the following passage.

He was sent to condition either the princes, Henrietta Maria.

C'ONDU'-
CONDUICIBLE. adj. [conductible, Latin.] Having the power of conducting; having a tendency to promote or forward; with to.

To both, the means, which is most propitious and conductible is air. Bacon's Natural History.

Those motions of generations and corruption, and of the conductibles thencearise, are wisely and admirably ordered and contemplated by the wise of all things.

None of these mechanical experiments are sufficient for a perpetual motion, though those kind of qualities form most conductible unto it.

Whilkm's Mathematical Magick.

Our Saviour hath enjoined us a reasonable service: all his laws are in themselves conductible to the temporal interest of them that observe them.

CONDUICIBleness. n. s. [from conducible.] The quality of contributing to any end.

Didi.

CONDUICIVE. adj. [from conductive.] That which may contribute; having the power of forwarding or promoting with to.

An action, however conductive to the good of our country, will be represented as prejudicial to it.

Addison's Freeholder.

Those proportions of the good things of this life, which are most conductive with the interests of the soul, are also most conductive to our present felicity.

Rogers.

CONDUICIVENESS. n. s. [from conductive.] The quality of conducting.

I mention some examples of the conductiveness of the smallest of a body's parts to its fluidity. Boyle.

CONDUCT. n. s. [conduct, Fr con and ducur, Lat.]

1. Management; economy.

Vendition and management of actions, embrace more than they can hold, or more than they can quiet, and fly to the end without consideration of the means.

Bacon.

How void of reason are our hopes and fears!

What in the conduct of our life appears

So well defined, so luckily begun,

But when we have our wish, we will undo.

Dryden's Jovial

2. The act of leading troops; the duty of a general.

Conduct of armies is a prince's art.

Wallace.

3. Convey; escorte; guard.

His majesty,

Tending my person's safety, was appointed

This conduct to convey me to the Tower.

Shakespeare's Richard III.

I was abashed to ask the king footmen and horsemen, and conduct for safeguard against our adversaries.

Ejus.

4. The act of conveying or guarding.

Some three or four of you,

Go, give him courteous conduct to this place.

Shakespeare.

5. A warrant by which a convoy is appointed, or safety is assured.

6. Exact behaviour; regular life.

Though all regard for reputation is not quite laid aside, it is low, that very few think, and conduct of absolute necessity for preferring it.

Scott.

To CONDUCT, v. n. [concider, French.]

1. To lead; to direct; to accompany, in order to the way.

I shall direct conduct upon a hill side, where I will point you out the right path.

Milton in Education.

O may thy words, propitious fill to me,

Conduct my steps to find the true path.

Dryden's Ancis.

2. To usher, and to attend in civility.

Pray receive them nobly, and conduct them like your preference.

Shakespeare's Henry VIII.
chain of them confederate and linked together, it must need fly to providence and delay.

Oh race confed rate into crimes, that prove Triumph of the abject age of Jove.

Pope's Station.

In a confederate war, it ought to be considered which party has the deepest stain in the quarrel.

Swift.

Confed'erate, n. f. [from the verb.] One who engages to support another; an ally.

Sir Edmond Courtney, and the haughty prelate, With many more confederates, are in arms.

Shakespeare's Richard III.

We still have fresh recruits in store, If our confederates can afford us more.

Dryden.

Confed'eration, n. f. [confederation, French.] League; compact of mutual support; alliance.

The three princes enter into some fr idle league and confederation among themselves.

Nan can thfe confederate or design be durable, When subjects make bankruptcy of their allegiance. King Charles.

To CONFERN. v. n. [confere, Lat. confer, conferer, French.] To discourse with another Upon a ratified subject; to ventilate any quib; to make a verbal disquisition; to converse velurne; to talk gravely together; to compare sentiments.

You will hear as confere of this, and by a auricular assurance have your satisfaction.

Shakespeare's King Lear.

Reading makes a full man, conference a ready man, and writing an exact man; and therefore, if a man write little, he had need have a great memory; if he confer little, he had need have a fertile wit; and, if he read little, he had need have much cunning to seem to know that he doth not.

Bacon.

When they had commanded them to go aside out of the council, they confere among themselves.

Acts, lv. 15.

He was thought to confer with the Lord Colpe er upon the subject; but had some particular thoughts, upon which he then confered with nobody. Clanendon.

The Christian prince in her tent confer,
With fifty of your learned philosophers.

Whom with such eloquence the doors persuade,
That they are captives to her reasons made.

Dryden's Dynamic Lover.

To CONFERN, v. n.

1. To compare; to examine by comparison with other things the same kind. The words in the eighth verse, confered with the fame words in the twentieth, make it manifest.

Kilgale.

If we confer these observations with others of the like nature, we may find cause to rectify the general opinion.

Boyle.

Pliny conferring his authors, and comparing their works together, found those that went before were confirmed by those that followed.

Brown.

2. To give; to befow; with on before him who receives the gift. Reft to the limbs, and quiet I confer.

On troubled minds.

The confering this honour upon him would increa the credit he had. Clarendon.

Coronation to a king, confers no royal authority upon him.

There is not the least incription in Scripture of this privilege conferred upon the Roman church.

Tillotson.

Thou conferre the benedictions, and he recieves them, as the first purchase of love, and the last ingratitude.

Archbishop's History of John Bull.

3. To contribute; to conduc; with to.

The cloveness and compass of the parts refiting together, doth much confer to the strength of the union.

Clarendon.

CONFERENCE. n. f. [conference, French.] 1. The act of convering on serious subjects; to discourse; oral discussion of any question.

I shall shew skilful in country matters, if I have often confered with your servant. Sidney.

Sometime they deliver it, whom privately zeal and plenteous to be instructed of others by conferers; sometimes of them it is taught, whom the church hath called to the public, either reading thereof, or interpreting.

Horat.

What prud'ence hangs these weights upon my tongue! I cannot speak to her; yet the urg'd conference.

Shakespeare.

2. An appointed meeting for discussing some point by personal debate.

3. Comparison; examination of different things by comparison of each with other. Our diligence must search out all helps and furtherances, which scripture, councils, laws, and the mutual confessions of all men's collections and observations, may afford. Horat.

The conference of these two places, containing so excellent a piece of learning as this, expressed by Dr. Winter, is the more reason it was mort in please to him that maketh true account of learning.

Archbishop's Schoolemaster.

CONFERRER. n. f. [from confer.] 1. He that conveys.

2. He that beflows.

To CONFER, v. n. [confere, Fr. conférer, confésser, Latin.] 1. To acknowledge a crime; to own a failure.

He doth in some fort confess it. — If he be confess'd, it is not redressed. Shakespeare's Merry Wives of Windsor.

Human faults with human grief confess'd. 'Tis thou art charg'd. Prior.

2. It has of before the thing confessed, when it is used reciprocally.

Confess thee freely of thy sin;
For to deny each article with oath,
Cannot remove nor choke the strong conception.

Shakespeare's Othello.

3. To disfice the state of the conscience to the priest, in order to repentance and pardon.

If our sin be only against God, yet to confess it to his minister may be of good use.

Wade's Preparation for Death.

4. It is used with the reciprocal pronoun. Our beautiful votary took the opportunity of confessing herself to this celebrated father.

Addison's Spectator.

5. To hear the confession of a penitent, as a priest.

6. To own; to avow; to profess; not to deny.

Whencefore therefore shall confess me before men, him will I confess also before my Father which is in heaven; but whenever shall deny me before men, him will I also deny before my Father which is in heaven.

Matt. xvi. 25.

7. To grant; not to dispute.

If that the king Have any way your good desires forget,
Which he confess'd to be manifold,
Hoped you your gift to be great; Shakespeare.

They may have a clear view of good, great and confessed good, without being concerned, if they can make up their happiness without it. Locke.

8. To flee; to procure; to affection.

Th' tall thriving tree confess'd the fruitful mold.

The reeking apple ripens here to gold.

Pope's Odyssey.

9. It is used in a loose and unimportant sense, by way of introduction, or as an affirmative form of speech.

I must confess I was most pleas'd with a beautiful present, that none of them have made me. Addison on Italy.

To CONFESSION. v. n. To make confession; to disclose; to reveal; as, he is gone to the priest to confess.

CONFESSIONAL, n. f. [from confess.] Avowedly; indissipably; undeniably.

Labour is confessably a great part of the curse, and therefore no wonder if men fly from it.

Great geniuses, like great ministers, though they are confessibly the sibyls in the commonwealth of letters, must be envied and calumniated.

Pope's Essay on Homer.

CONFES'SION. n. f. [from consfess.] 1. The acknowledgment of a crime; the discovery of one's own guilt.

Your engaging me first in this adventure of the Moab, and defraying the story of it from me, is like giving me the torturer, and then asking his confes'sion, which is hard usage.

Temple.

2. The act of disburdening the conscience to a priest.

You will have little opportunity to practice such a confession, and should observe the want of it by a due performance of it to God.

Wade's Preparation for Death.

3. Profession; avowal.

Whom, before Pontius Pilate, witnessed a good confession?

Tim. vi. 13.

If there be one amongst the faith of Greece, That loves his misfortune more than his confession, And dure avow her beauty and her worth.

In other arts than hers; to him this challenge.

Shakespeare.

4. A formula in which the articles of faith are comprized.

CONFESSIONAL. n. f. [French.] The seat or box in which the confessor sits to hear the declarations of his penitents.

In one of the churches I saw a pulpit and confe'ssional, very finely intailed with lapis-lazuli.

Addison on Italy.

CONFESSIONAR'Y. n. f. [confess'or, Fr.] The confessioner or priest, whose part it is to hear confessions. Dict.

CONFESSOR. n. f. [confessor, French.] 1. One who makes profession of his faith in the face of danger. He who dies for religion, is a martyr; he who suffers for it, is a confessor.

The doctrine in the thirty-nine articles is so thonthedly sected, as cannot be questioned without danger to our religion, which hath been fealed with the blood of so many martyrs and confessors.

Rae's Advice to Priests.

Was not this an excellent confessor at least, if not a martyr, in this confe'ssional? Stillingfleet.

The patience and fortitude of a martyr or confessor lie concealed in the flourishing times of Christendom.

Addison's Spectator.

It was the suffrance of a resurreccion that gave patience to the confessor, and courage to the man.

Ring.

2. He that hears confessions, and preserves rules and measures of penitence.

Sir that Claudio
Be executed by nine to morrow morning;
Bring him his confessor, let him be prepar'd;

For that's the utmost of his pilgrimages, If you find any way upon you, disburthen yourself of it into the bosom of your confessor, who stands between God and you to pray for you and save you.

One must be traduced, and he thought thereto,

As piarous prudent, and a pious wit.

To this nauseous confessor he went,

And bolder.

Dryden's Wise of Bath.
3. He who confesses his crimes. Did.3

CONFESSION, adj. [a poetical word for confessed.] Open; known; acknowledged; not concealed; not disputed; apparent.

But wherefore should I seek,
Since the perfidious author stands confest?
This villain his trade was't me. Rose's Royal Cens.

CONFESSION. adv. [from confess.] Undisputably; evidently; without doubt or concealment.

They address to that principle which is confessly predominant in our nature.

Dry. of Prop.

CONFESSION, m. [confess, Latin.] A person sworn to private affairs, commonly with affairs of love.

Martin composed his billet-doux, and intrusted it to his confessant. Arbuthnot and Pope.

To CONFIDE, v. n. [confide, Latin.] To trust in; to put trust in.

He alone won't betray, in whom none will confide. Congreve.

CONFIDENCE. n. f. [confident, Latin.]

1. Firm belief of another's integrity or veracity; reliance.

Society is built upon trust, and trust upon confidence of one another's integrity. Swift.

2. Trust in his own abilities or fortune; security; opposed to jeopardy or timidity.

Also, my lord, your wisdom is confess'd in confidences:

Do not go forth to day. Shakespeare's Julius Cæsar.

His times being rather prosperous than calm, had raised his confidence by success. Bar. H. VIII.

He had an ambition and vanity, and confidence in himself, which sometimes intoxicated, and transferred his esteem on false and worthless objects. Pope.

3. Vicious boldness; false opinion of his own excellencies; opposed to modesty.

These fervent admirers of things established by publick authority, are always confident and bold-spirited men; but their confidence, for the most part, rests from too much credit given to their own wits, for which cause they are seldom free from errors. Hooker, Dificrimine.

4. Confidens of innocence; honest boldness; firmness of integrity.

If you find, in our heart confessed, not then have we confidence towards God. John, iii. 11.

Be merciful unto them which have not the confidence of good works. Eph. viii. 36.

False and empty, and native rightness, a delusion, and honours.

Milton'sParad. Lost.

5. That which gives or confers confidence, boldness, or security.

CONFIDENT, adj. [from confide.]

1. Affaird beyond doubt.

He is true knight,

He is, true knight,

No letter of his honour confided,

That I did truly find her, lists this ring. Shakespeare's Cymbeline.

Rome, be as just and gracious unto me,

As I am confident and kind to thee. Shakespeare's Titus Andronicus.

5. Bold to a vice; elated with false opinion of his own excellencies; impudent.

CONFIDENT. n. f. [from confide.] One trusted with secrets.

If ever it comes to this, that a man can say of his confidant, he would have deceived me, he has told everything. Swift.

You love me for no other end,

But to become my confidant and friend.

As such, I keep no secret from your flight. Dryden's Aurengzabe.

CONFIDENTLY. adv. [from confide.]

1. Without doubt; without fear of miscarriage.

We shall not be ever the less likely to meet with success, if we do not expect it too confidently. Cibber.

2. With firm trust.

The mild becomes a young man; no more delay

Your vows, but look, and confidantly pay. Dryden.

3. Without appearance of doubt; without suspecting any failure or deficiency; positively; dogmatically.

Many men most of all know what they themselves most confidently boast. Ben. Jonson.

It is strange how the ancients took up experiments upon credit, and yet did build great matters upon them: the observation of some of the best of them, delivered confidently, is, that a vessel filled with after will receive the like quantity of water as if it had been empty; this is utterly untrue. Bacon.

Every fool may believe, and pronounce confidents, who believe nothing man will conclude firmly. Swift.

CONFIDENTNESS. n. f. [from confide.] Favourable opinion of one's own powers; assurance.

CONFIDENCE, n. f. [confid, French.]

1. The form of the various parts of any thing, as they are adapted to each other.

The different effects of fire and water, which we call heat and cold, results from the different condition and agitation of their parts.

Glavius's Sciltos.

No other account can be given of the different animal creations, than that confidents and affinity of the solid parts. Arbuthnot on Animales.

There is no plausible virtue concerned in shaping them, but the configurations of the particles whereby they confide. Woodword.

2. The face of the horizon, according to the aspects of the planets towards each other at any time.

To CONFIDUE, v. a. [from figure, Latin.] To dispose into any form, by adaptation.

Mother earth brought forth legs, arms, and other members of the body, scattered and distant, at their full growth; while coming together, converging and in confiduing themselves into human shape, made lefty men. Bentley's Germans.

CONFINE. n. f. [confinis, Latin. It had formerly the accent on the last syllable.]

Common boundary; border; edge.

Herein those confidents I have last laid.

To watch the walking in parts of the earth. Shakespeare's Rich. III.

CONFINE, n. f. [confinis, Latin.]

1. A borderer; one that liveth upon confine.

The common boundary inhabits the extreme parts of a country.

The common boundary.

2. A near neighbour.

Happy confines you of other lands.

C. He who confesses his crimes. Dick.

TWICE, out darkness cast the room of night,

And Phoebus on the confines of the light.

The idea of duration, equal to a revolution of the sun, is applicable to duration, where no motion was; as the idea of a foot, taken from bodies here, to distance beyond the sphere of the world, where are no bodies.

CONFEINE. adj. [confine, Latin.] Bordering upon; beginning where the other ends; having one common boundary.

To CONFINE, v. n. To border upon; to touch on different territories, or regions; it has such or on.

Half loth I seek

What readiest path leads where your gloomy bounds

Confine with heaven.' Milner's Paradise Lost.

Full in the midst of this created space,

Between heaven, earth, and seas, there stands a place

Confined on all three.

Dryden.

To CONFINE, v. a. [confinare, Fr. confiner, Latin.]

1. To confine; to limit; as, he confines his subject by a rigorous definition.

2. To shut up; to imprison to immure; to restrain within certain limits.

I'll not over the threshold.

—Fly, you confine yourself most unreasonably; come, you must go with the good lady. Brown's Queen. Evarus.

I had been as broad and general as the casing air.

But now I'm cobb'd, crinf'd, confined, bound in. Shakespeare.

3. To refrain; to tie up.

Children, permitted the freedom of both hands, do act confine unto the left, and are without great difficulty restrained from it. Brown's Queen Evarus.

Make one man's fancies, or failings, confining laws to others, and convey them as such to their sufferers.

Boyle.

Where honour or where confidences does not bind,

No other the fmal shake my me.

Shake up my facet at all confined

By my own present mind. Confise.

If the soul continue, I confine myself wholly to the soul, that is, my soul. Confine.

He is to confine himself to the compass of numbers, and the slavery of rhymes. Dryden.

CONFINELESS. adj. [from confine.] Boundless; unbounded; without end.

Ere him as a lamb, being confined

With my confindly harmes. Shakespeare's Masque.

CONFINEMENT. n. f. [from confine.] Imprisonment; incarcernation; restraint of liberty.

Our hidden foes.

Now joyful from their long confinement role.

Dryden's Fable.

The mind lattes refrains, and is apt to fancy field under confinement when the fight is pent up.

Adonais.

As to the numbers who are under refrains, people do not seem so much surprized at the confinement of some, as the liberty of others. Adonais.

CONFINER. n. f. [from confine.]

1. A borderer; one that lives upon confines.

The common boundary inhabits the extreme parts of a country.

The common boundary.

The common boundary.

2. A near neighbour.

Though gladness and grief be opposite in nature, yet they are such neighbours and confiners in set, that the least touch of a pencil will transcribe a crying into a laughing face. Bacon.
CON

CON

CON

3. One which touches upon two different regions. The principles or confine between plants and living creatures are such as have no local motion; such as oysters. Bacon.

CONFIDENCE. n. f. [confianza, Latin.] Nearness; neighborhood; contiguity. Bacon.

7. CONFIRM, v. a. [confirm, Latin.] To put past doubt by new evidence. The testimony of Christ was confirmed by you. Bacon, ch. 1. 6. So was his will pronounced among the gods, and by an oath, which shook heaven's whole circumference, confirmed. Milton.

Whilst all the stars that round her burn, And all the planets in their turn, Confirm the tides as they roll, And spread the truth from pole to pole. Addis's Spitaliar.

2. To settle; to establish either persons or things. I confirm thee in the high priesthood, and appoint thee ruler. 1 Mac. vi. 57. Confirm the crown to me and mine heirs. Shaksp. Hen. Vii.

3. To fix; to ratify. Peremptory never cured a confirmed pox without it. Wrenman.

To complete; to perfect. The song and out till he was a man; The which no foother had his protract's confirmed, But like a man he died. Shakespeare's As You Like It.

5. To strengthen by new certainties or ties. That treaty, to prejudicial, ought to have been confirmed rather than confirmed. Swift.

6. To settle or strengthen in resolution, or purpose, or opinion. Confirmed then I resolve, Adam shall share with me in bliss or woe. Milton. They in their face though firm, more confirmed. Milton. Believe and be confirmed. Milton.

To admit to the full privileges of a Christian, by imposition of hands. Those which are thus confirmed, are thereby supposed to be fit for admission to the sacrament. Hammond's Fundamentals.

CONFIRMABLE, adj. [from confirm.] That which is capable of inconsistent evidence. It may receive a spurious innate; as is confirmable by many examples. Bacon; Volmar Bottrams.

CONFIRMATION, n. f. [from confirm.] 1. The act of establishing any thing or persons; settlement; establishment. Embrace and love this man. With brother's love I do it. — And let heaven Witness how dear I hold this confirmation! Shakespeare's Henry VIII.

2. Evidence by which any thing is ascertained; additional proof. A rash report hath Honour'd with confirmation your great judgment. Shakespeare.

The sea-captains answered, that they would perform his command; and, in confirmation thereof, promised not to do any thing which he recomended not william men. Kntles's History.

3. Proof; convincing testimony. Wanting frequent confirmation in a matter to confirm; their affirmation carrick but flow persuasion. Brown. The arguments brought by Christ for the confirmation of his doctrine, were in themselves sufficient. South.

CON

An ecclesiastical rite. What is prepared for in catechising, is, in the next place, practically a most profitable usage of the church, transcribed from the practice of the apostles, which consists in two parts: the child's understanding, in his own name, every part of the holy sermon (having first approved himself to understand it), and to that purpose, that he may more solemnly enter upon this obligation, bringing some godfather with him, not now (as in baptisms) as his procurator to undertake for him, but as a witness to testify his entering this obligation. Hammond's Fundamentals.

CONFIRMATOR, n. f. [from confirm, Latin.] An attender; he that puts a matter past doubt. There wanting in the definitive confirmator, and left of things uncertain, the face of man. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

CONFIRMATORY, adj. [from confirm.] Giving additional testimony; establishing with new force.

CONFIRMEDNESS, n. f. [from confirmed.] Confirmed rate; satisfaction. If the difficulty arise from the confirment of habit, every resistance weakens the habit, abates the difficulty. Decay of Piety.

CONFIRMER, n. f. [from confirm.] One that confirms; one that produces evidence or strength; an attender; an establisher.

Be these sad fights confirmers of thy words? Then speak again. Shakespeare's King John. The oath of a lover is no stronger than the word of a tapster; they are both the confirmers of false reckonings. Shakespeare.

CONFISCABLE, adj. [from confiscate.] LIABLE to forfeiture.

To CONFISCATE, v. n. [confiscare, confiscare, confiscare, s. c. in publicum addisci; from fis, which originally signified a hamper, pannier, basket, or frell; but metonymically the emperor's treasure, because it was anciently kept in such hamper. Conflacration. To transfer private property to the prince or public, by way of penalty for an offence. It was judged that he should be banished, and his whole estate confiscated and seized, and his houses pulled down. Bacon. Whatever sth. the vulgar fry exell, Belong to Caesar, wherever'er they swim, By their own worth confiscated to themselves. David's Treason.

CONFISCATE, adj. [from the verb.] Transferred to the publick as forfeit. The accent in Shakespeare is on the first syllable. The lands and goods Are, by the laws of Venice, confiscate Unto the state of Venice. Shak. Merch. of Venice.

CONSPICAION, n. f. [from confiscate.] The act of transferring the forfeited goods of criminals to publick use. It was in every man's eye, what great forfeitures and confiscations he had at that present to help himself. Bacon.

CONSPICUOUS, n. f. [confрегitus, Latin.] One considering; one who considers his faults. A wide difference there is between a mere confessor and a just penitent. Diary of Piety.

CONSPIRACY, n. f. [French; from confederari, Latin.] A sweetmeat; a confection; a confederacy; a confederacy. It is certain, that there be some houses wherein confederats and perf traitors would command more than in others. Bacon.

We contain a confederate house, where we make all sweetmeats, dry and moist, and divers pleasant wines. Bacon.

To CONFESS, v. a. [confess, confratius, Latin.] To fix down; to falten. As this is true, Let me in safety ride as from my knees. Or else for ever be confessed here. A marible monument! Shak. Measure for Measure.

CONSPIRATOR, adj. [confregitus, Latin.] Burning together; involved in a general fire.

Then said From the confregitus may appear'd and embold'n, New heaven, new earth. Milton's Paradise Lost.

CONSPIRATIONAL, n. f. [conspiratio, Latin.] 1. A general fire spreading over a large space. The opinion deriveth the complexion from the deviation of the sun, and the confederation of all things under Phœnecia. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

Next n'the plains, where ripen'd harvets grow. The running confederation spreads below. Addis's Ovid.

Man's heart hath a gradual increase, notwithstanding what floods and confederations, and the religious profusion of celibacy, by which the hand is intercept'd. Bentley's Sermons.

2. It is generally taken for the fire which shall consume this world at the consummation of things. Concription. n. f. [confratius, Latin.] 1. The act of blowing many instruments together, in the sweetest harmony, when every part or instrument is not heard by itself, but a confederation of them all. Bacon.

2. A casting or melting of metal. Conspicue, n. f. [confratius, Latin.] A bending or turning.

To CONSPIRIT, v. n. [confregitus, Latin.] To strive; to contest; to fight; to struggle; to contend; to encounter; to engage; properly by striking against one another. Bare unheaved trunks. To the confederating elements exposed. Johnson more nature. Shakespeare's Timon. You shall hear under the earth a horrible thundering of fire and water confederating together. Bacon's Natural History.

A man would be content to strive with himself; and confedrate with great difficulties, in hopes of a mighty reward. Titiuson. Lash'd into foam, the fierce confederating brine Seems e'er a thousand raging waves to burst. Thomson.

CONFLICT. n. f. [confregitus, Latin.] 1. A violent collision, or opposition, of two substannces. Pour debilem spiritum of vinegar upon a leaf of taraxacum, and there will be such a conflict or obstilation, as if there were scarce two more contrary bodies in nature. Boyle.

2. A combat; a fight between two. It is seldom used of a general battle. The tuckle, conflict with the giant flint. Wherein in capades, of life or death he flood in doubt. Specier.

It is my father's face, Whom in this conflict I unnatural have kill'd. Shakespeare.

3. Contest; strife; contention. There is a kind of merry war betwixt figurine Benedick and her; they never meet but there is a skirmish of wit between them. — Ah! he gets nothing by that. In our last conflict, four of his fire was sent halting off. Shakespeare.

4. Struggle ;
CONFLUENCE. n. s. [confusio, Latin.]

1. The junction or union of several streams. Confluence is a beautiful sight, particularly in the case of the Mississippi and the Ohio rivers, which unite to form the Missouri.

2. Collection; concurrence.

"We may there be instructed how to rate all goods and gains that will centre into the settling we shall profit by, which shall be made of the confluence, perfection, and pernicious of all true truths.

Boyle.

3. A confluence; a multitude crowded into one place. This will draw a confluence of people from all parts of the kingdom, and for all matters to yourself.

Bacon to Villiers.

CONJUNCT. adj. [conjunctus, Latin.]

Running one into another; meeting.

At length, to make their various currents one, The confluent floods compare; and then These confluent streams make some great river's head, By stores still meltings and descending fed.

Blackmore.

CONFLUX. n. s. [confusio, Latin.]

1. The union of several currents; confluence.

Knot, by the conflux of meeting sky, Inflect the form of its own child. Shad.

2. Crowd; multitude collected.

He quietly, by the general conflux and confluence of the whole people, strengthened his quarters.

Clarendon.

To the gates can round thine eye, and see What confluxes still forth, orienting us.

Milton.

CONFORM. adj. [conformis, Latin.]

Affirming the same form; wearing the same form; resembling.

Variety of uses both delight the spirits to variety of passions conform with these.

Bacon's Natural History.

TO CONFORM. v. a. [conformis, Latin.]

To reduce to the like appearance, shape, or manner, with something else; with.

"Then followed that most natural effect of conforming one's self to that which the did like, Sicily. The apostles did conform the Chriftians, as much as might be, according to the pattern of the Jews. Holden.

Demand of them wherefore they conformed themselves were the order of the church.

Holden.

TO CONFORM. v. n. To comply with; to yield; with to.

A man is in God's will, to few there are, Who will conform to the philanthropic way. Dry. Two.

CONFORMABLE. adj. [from conform.] 1. Having the same form; using the same manners; agreeing either in exterior or moral characters; similar; resembling.

The Gentiles were not made conformable unto the Jews, in that which was to oace at the coming of Christ.

Holden.

2. It is commonly so before that with this, with that he has a reason conformable to the principles.

Abbeville.

3. Sometimes with, not improperly; but is used with the verb.

The fragments of Sappho are used as a tale of a writing, peculiarly conformable to that character we find of her.

Addison's Spectator.

4. Agreeable; suitable; not opposite; conform.

Nature is ever conformable and conformable to herself.

Neues.

The productions of a great genius, with many lapses, are preferable to the works of an inferior author, superficially exact, and conformable to all the rules of correct writing.

Addison.

5. Compliant; ready to follow directions; submissive; peaceable; obsequious.

I have been to a true and humble wife. At all time to your will conformable.

Shakespeare's Henry VIII.

For all the kingdom to the earth to play themselves willingly conformably in whatsoever should be required, it was their duty. Holden.

Such sacrifice, performed by a conformable devotion, and the well-tempered zeal of the true Christian spirit.

Spart.

CONFORMABLY. adv. [from conformable.]

With conformity; agreeably; suitably; it has to.

So as to obscure the agreement of his own imaginations, and talk conformably, it is all certainty.

Locke.

I have treated of the sex conformably to this definition.

Addison.

CONFORMATION. n. s. [French; conformations, Lat.]

1. The form of things, as relating to each other; the particular texture and confinement of the parts of a body, and their disposition to make a whole; as, light of different colours is reflected from bodies, according to their different configuration.

Varieties are found in the different natural shapes of the mouth, and several configurations of the organs. Holden.

Where there happens to be such a structure and configuration as ascertains by that the eye may easily into these spirals; it then easily goes out.

Woodward's Natural History.

2. The act of producing suitable forms, or conformity, to any thing: with to.

Virtue and vice, sin and holiness, and the conformity of our hearts and lives to the duties of true religion and morality, are things of more conformity than the furniture of understanding.

Watts.

CONFORMIST. n. s. [from conform.] One that conforms with the worship of the church of England; not a dilenter.

They were not both nonconformist, neither being conformist.

Holden.

CONFORMITY. n. s. [from conform.] 1. Similitude; resemblance; the state of having the same character of manners or form.

By the knowledge of truth, and exercise of virtue, man, amongst the creatures of this world, most to the greatest conformity with God.

Holden.

Judge not what is best.

By pleasure, though to nature forming most; created as they are to noble ends.

Holy and pure, conformity divine.

Meth. Par. 1st.

Space and duration have a great conformity in this, that they are but reckoned amongst our simple ideas.

Locke.

This metaphor would not have been so general had they not been so widely by the mental taste and the sensitive talk.

Addison's Spectator.

2. It has in some authors with before the model to which the conformity is made.

The end of all religion is but to draw us to a conformity with God.

Diod. of Persia.

DISCOURSE. v. n.

We cannot be otherwise happy but by our conformity to God.

Tillett.

Conformity in building to other civil nations, hath disposed us to let our old wooden dark houses fall to decay.

Grazer.

CONJECTURE.

Many instances prove the conformity of the effigy, with the motions of Hippocrates.

Abbeville on Atlantides.

CONFUTATION. n. s. [from confutaret, a low Latin word.] Collaboration of strength; corroboration.

For corroboration and confutation, take such bodies as are of different quality, without mixture.

Bacon's Natural History.

TO CONFOUND. v. n. [confundere, Fr. confonder, Lat.]

1. To mingle things so that their several forms or natures cannot be discerned.

Let us go down, and there confound their language, that they may not understand one another's speech.

Gen. xli. 7.

Two planets rising from spect mala, Certif. opposition in mid sky.

Should come, and their jarring spheres confound.

Milton.

2. To perplex; to compare or mention without due distinction.

A fluid body and a wetting liquor are worst, because they agree in many things, to be confounded.

Boyle.

They why, by not ideas from the marks men see for them, but confound them with words, must have endless dispute.

Locke.

3. To disturb the apprehension by indistinct words or notions.

I am yet to think, that men find their simple ideas are, in discourse, they confound one another with different words.

Locke.

4. To throw into confusion; to perplex; to astound; to astonish; to stupefy.

So far the Son of God; and Satan stood.

A while and so, confounded what was to say.

While and so, Parthia Regained.

Now with furies surrounded; Despairing, confounded, He trembles, he grows.

Amidst Rhodope's knowns.

Locke.

5. To destroy; to overthrow.

The forested honey is last-sorne in its own deliciousness.

And in the cafe confounded the appetite.

Shakespeare.

The gods confound thee! doth thou hold there still!

Dante.

Let them be confounded in all their power and might, and let their strength be broken.

Daniel, xii.

So deep a malice to confound the race.

Of mankind in one root.

Milton.

CONFUSED. partic. adj. [from confuse.] Hateful; detestable; enormous; odious; a low cant word.

A much confused texton for his brutish conception.

Green.

Sir, I have heard another story:

He was a most confounded Vortif and, green, or he is most belled, Extremely dull before he died.

Swift.

CONFUSINGLY. adv. [from confundere.]

Hateful; shamefully; a low or ludicrous word.

You.
On mount Velutius, he fix'd his eye,
And saw the smoking tops of confus'd fire.
A hideous ruin!
Addison on Italy.
I viewed through a prism, and saw them mix, confusedly defined, so that I could not distinguish their smaller parts from one another.
Newton's Optics.
Heroes and heroines float confusedly rife;
And bare and treble notes strike the ear.
Fite.
3. Not clearly; not plainly.
He confus'dly and obscenely delivered his opinion.
Glowster.
4. Tumultuously; hastily; not deliberately; not exactly.
The propriety of thoughts and words, which are the hieroglyphics of a planet, are confusedly judged in the veneration of action.
Dryden.
Confus'dness n. s. [from confused.]
Want of distinctness; want of clearness.
Hitherunto these titles of honour carry a kind of lift of our transgressions, and rather betokened a facultative office than an established dignity.
Carvile's Account of Cornwall.
The cause of the confusedness of our notions, next to natural inanition, is want of attention.
Norris.
Confusion n. s. [from confus.]
1. Irregular mixture; tumultuous medley.
God, only wise, to punish pride of wit,
Among men's wits hath this confusion wrought;
As the proud town, whose points the clouds did hit,
By tongues confusion was to ruin brought.
Dowes.
2. tumult; disorder.
God is not a God of confusion and confusion, but of order and of peace.
Hosier Preface.
This is a happier and more comely time,
Than when the sages ran about the streets Crying confusion.
Shakespeare's Cymbeline.
3. Indulgent combination.
The confusion of two different ideas, which a customary connexion of them in their minds hath made to them almost one, fills their heads with false ideas, and their reasonings with false confusions.
Locke.
4. Overthrow; destruction.
The strength of their illusion,
Shall draw him in to his confusion.
Shakespeare's Much.
Atonishment; dissection of mind; hurry of idea.
Confus'd Behold in every face,
And fear in every heart,
When waves on waves, and gulphs in gulphs,
O' ercome the shipwreck.
Spenser.
Confuse table adj. [from confus.]
Possible to be disproved; possible to be shown falses.
At the last day, that inquisition shall not present to God a bundle of calamities, or confus'd accumulations but will offer up to his omniscience a true
Browne.
Confutation n. s. [confutation, Latin.]
The act of confuting; disproof.
A confutation of atheism from the frame of the world.
Bently.
7. To CONFUTE. v. a. [confutato, Latin.]
To convict of error or falsehood; to disprove.
He could on either side dispute;
Confus'd, change hands, and still confus'd. Hudibras.
For a man to doubt whether three be any hell, and then to live as if there were none, but when he dies, to find himself confus'd in the flames, must be the height of woe.
Swift.
CONGE. n. s. [Conge, French.]
1. Act of reverence; bow, courteously.
The cap on your head faces you, as if profound.
And your ladyship curtsies half way to the ground.
Swift.
2. Leave; farewell.
So courteous conge both did give and take,
With right hands presented, persons of so d. will.
Fairy Queen.
To CONGE. v. n. [from the noun.]
To take leave.
We bonged with the duke, and bonged all joy with his new wife.
Shak. All's well that ends well.
CONGE D'ELIRE is French; and signifies, in common law, the king's permission royal to a dean and chapter, in time of vacation, to chuse a bishop. The king, as sovereign patron of all archbishops, bishops, and other ecclesiastical benefices, had, in ancient times, the free appointment of all ecclesiastical dignities; investing them first per baculum & annulum, and afterwards by his letters patent. In process of time he made the election over to others, under certain forms and conditions, as that they should, at every vacation, before they chuse, demand of the king a conge d'elire, that is, licence to proceed to election.
Cowell.
A woman, when she has made her own choice, for form's sake, sends a conge d'elire to her friends.
Spen.
CONGE. n. s. [In architecture.] A moulding in form of a quarter round, or a cavetto, which serves to separate two members from one another: such is that which joins the shaft of the column to the cincture.
Chambers.
To CONGEAL. v. a. [congelce, Latin.]
1. To turn, by froth, from a solid to a fluid state.
What more miraculous thing may be told.
Than ice, which is congeald with sudden cold.
Should kindle fire by wonderful device? Spen.
In whose capacious womb
A vapory deluge lies, to know congea'd.
Spenser.
To CONGEAL. v. n. To concrete; to gather into a mass by cold.
In the midst of molten lead, when it begins to congeal, make a little dent, and which put quicksilver in the dent, and it will fix and run no more, and endure the hammer.
Bacon.
When water congeals, the surface of the ice is smooth and level, at the surface of the water was Burnet's Theory.
CONGEALMENT n. s. [from congelce.]
The clot formed by congealation; concretion.
Enter the city, dip your wits, your friends,
Tell them your feets, whilst they with joyful tears
Wash the congealment from your wounds.
Shakespeare's Richard III.:
Too much sadness hath congeald your blood.
Shakespeare.
To CONCEAL. v. n. To concrete; to gather into a mass by cold.
In the midst of molten lead, when it begins to congeal, make a little dent, and which put quicksilver in the dent, and it will fix and run no more, and endure the hammer.
Bacon.
When water congeals, the surface of the ice is smooth and level, at the surface of the water was Burnet's Theory.
CONCEALMENT n. s. [from congelce.]
The clot formed by congealation; concretion.
Enter the city, dip your wits, your friends,
Tell them your feets, whilst they with joyful tears
Wash the congealment from your wounds.
Shakespeare's Richard III.:
Too much sadness hath congeald your blood.
Shakespeare.
CONCEALABLE adj. [from congelce.]
Such as is capable of congealation; capable of losing its fluidity.
The consistencies of bodies are very divers:
Dense, rare, tangible, pneumatic, fixed, hard, soft, congealable, not congealable, liquefiable, etc.
Bacon.
The chymists define salt, from some of its properties, to be a body fixable in the fire, and congealable again by cold into brittle globes or crysals.
Arber's or Alchemists.
CONCEALMENT n. s. [from congelce.]
1. Act of turning fluids to solids by cold.
The capillary tubes are obstructed either by outward compression or congealation of the fluid.
There are congregations of the redundant waters, precipitations, and many other operations.

Arabian Airs.

2. State of being congealed, or made solid by cold.

Many waters and springs will never freeze; and many parts in rivers and lakes, where there are mineral eruptions, will still perish without congealation.

Brown's Vulgar Errors.

CONGENE. n. s. [Latin.] Of the same kind or nature.

The cherry-tree has been often grafted on the laurel, to which it is a conger.

Milton.

CONGENEROUS. adj. [conger, Latin.] Of the same kind; arising from the same original.

These bodies, being of a congenereal nature, do readily receive the impressions of their nature.

Brown's Vulgar Errors.

CONGENEROUSNESS. n. s. [from congenereous.] The quality of being from the same original; belonging to the same class.

Dict.

CONGENIAL. adj. [con and genis, Latin.] Partaking of the same genius; kindred; cognate: in Swift it is followed by with.

He sprang, without any help, by a kind of congenial compound, as we may term it, to the likeness of our race foregoing and manner.

Wren.

You look with pleasure on those things which are somewhat congenial, and of a remote kindred to your own conceptions.

Dryden's Dedication. Jovis.

Smit with the love of litter arts we came.

And met congenial, mingling fame with fame.

Pope.

He acquires a courage, and fixture of opinion, not at all congenial with him.

Swift.

CONGREGALIT. n. s. [from congenial.] Participation of the same genius; cognition of mind, or nature.

CONGREGALNESS. n. s. [from congenial.] Cognition.

CONGREGATE. v. a. [conglavate, Latin.] Of the same birth; born with another; con-nate; begotten together.

Many conceptions of moral and intellectual truths form, upon this account, to be congenial to us, connatural to us, and engraved in the very frame of the soul.

Hume's Original of mankind.

Did we learn an alphabet in our embryo state? And do we know that we are not aware of any such congenial apprehensions?

Glamville's Sceptick.

CONGER. n. s. [congeres, Latin.] The sea-eel.

Many filthy, whose shape and nature are much like the eel, frequent both the sea and fresh rivers; as the mighty conger, taken often in the Severn.

Walton's Angler.

CONGREES. n. s. [L.] A mass of small bodies heaped together.

The air is nothing but a congeries of heaps of small, and for the most part of flexible, particles, of several kinds, and of all kinds of figures. Boyle.

To CONGREGATE. v. a. [congeres, con-glare, Lat.] To heave up; to gather together.

Linnæus, original.

CONGETIBLE. adj. [from congare.]

That may be heaped up.

Dict.

CONGSTION. n. s. [congestio, Latin.] A collection of matter, as in abscesses and tumours.

Quinny.

Congestion is then said to be the cause of a tumour, when the growth is of its own, and without pain.

Hugon.

CONGLY, n. s. [conglaring, from con-gin, a picture of corn, Latin.] A gift distributed to the Roman people or fol-diers, originally in corn, afterwards in money.

We see on them the emperor and general officers, standing as they distributed a conglary to the sol-diers.

Addison.

To CONGALCIATE. v. m. [conglaciate, Latin.] To turn to ice.

No other body properly conglaciate but water: for the determination of quicksilver is properly fixed, and that of milk conglaciation.

Brown's Vulgar Errors.

CONGLACCIATION. n. s. [from conglaci-ate.] The state of being changed, or of acting, into ice.

If crystal be a stone, it is congealed by a mineral spirit, and topographical principles; for, while it remained in a fluid body, it was a subject very unfit for proper conglaciation.

Brown.

To CONGLOBATE. v. a. [conglobatus, Latin.] To gather into a hard firm ball.

The tallow, as is said, is one large congealed gland, consisting of soft fibres, all in one concretion.

Grew.

To CONGLOBE. v. a. [conglave, Latin.] To gather into a round mass.

In this spaw are discerned many specks, or little conglaciations, which in time become black.

Brown.

To CONGLOBE. v. a. [conglave, Latin.] To gather into a round mass; to conglature in a ball.

Then he found out, then conglaved.

Like things to like.

Milton's Paradise Lost.

For all their centre round,

Hung to the goads, and coiled a round.

Not closer, or in a conglaved, are seen.

The buzzing bees amongst their duffey queen.

Pope's Dunciad.

To CONGLOBE. v. a. To conglature into a round mass.

Thither they

Hasted with glad precipitation, up roll'd

As drops on dust conglaving from the dry.

Milton's Paradise Lost.

To CONGLOMERATE. v. a. [conglomer, con-glo-me- rate, Lat.] To gather into a ball; like a ball of thread; to invease into a round mass.

The liver is one great conglomerate gland, composed of innumerable small glands, each of which consists of thin fibres, in a distinct or separate conglomeration.

Chryse's Philosophical Principles.

CONGLOMERATE. adj. [from the verb.]

1. Gathered into a round ball, so that the constituent parts and fibres are distinct.

Fluids are separated in the liver, and the other conglomerate and conglomerate glands.

Chryse's Philosophical Principles.

2. Collected; twisted together.

The beams of light, when they are multiplied and conglimated, generate heat. Bacon's New Hist.

CONGLOMERATION. n. s. [from con-glo-me-rate.]

1. Collection of matter into a loose ball.

Intertexture; mixture.

The multiplication and conglomeration of sounds doth generate vivification of the air.

Bacon's Natural History.

To CONGLOMARRANT. v. a. [conglazine, Latin.] To cement; to reunite; to heal wounds.

To CONGLOMARRANT. v. n. To conglurate; to unite by the intervention of a callus.

CONGRADUATION. n. s. [from conglaci-nate.] The act of uniting wounded bodies; re-union; healing.

The cast is a temperate conglomeration; for both bodies are claymey and effous, and do bridge the deflux of harms to the hurts.

Bacon's Natural History.

To this conglomeration of the fibres is owing the union or conglomination of parts separated by a wound.

Arabian on Almiran.

CONGLOMURATIVE. adj. [from conglominate.] Having the power of uniting wounds.

CONGLOMURATOR. n. s. [from conglomurate.] That which has the power of uniting wounds.

The obtusilla is recommended as a conglomurator of broken bones.

Woodward on Fisfias.

CONGRATULANT. adj. [from congratular-ite.] Rejoicing in participation; expressing participation of another's joy.

Watts's Logick.

Forth 'twas in hark the great concerning peers, Rais'd from the dark divan, and with like Congratulants approach'd him.

Milton.

To CONGRATULATE. v. a. [from gratulor, Latin.]

1. To compliment upon any happy event; to express joy for the good of another.

I congratulate our English tongue, that it has been enriched with words from all our neighbours.

Watts's Logick.

2. It has sometimes the accoutenial cafe of the cause and joy, and to the perfon. An ecclesiastical union within yourselves; I am rather ready to congratulate you. Specier's Term.

The subjects of England may congratulate themselves, that the nature of our government, and the eminency of our king, be secure.

To CONGRATULATE. v. n. To rejoice in participation.

I cannot but congratulate my country, which hath outdone all Europe in advancing conglomurate stents.

CONGRATULATION. n. s. [from congratulate.] 1. The act of professing joy for the happiness or success of another.

2. The form in which joy for the happiness of another is professed.

CONGRATULARY. adj. [from congratulare.] Expressing joy for the good fortune of another.

To CONGRENE. v. a. [from gre, French.] To agree; to accord; to join; to unite.

Not in use.

For government,

Put into parts, doth keep in one conception,

Congraining in a full and natural close.

Shakespeare's Henry V.

To CONGRENE. v. a. [from con and grea.] To delineate reciprocally. Not in use.

My office hath so far prevail'd,

That face to face, and royal eye to eye,

You have congratulated.

Shakespeare's Henry V.

To CONGREGATE. v. a. [convenera, Lat.] To collect together; to assemble; to bring into one place.

Any multitude of christian men congregate, may be termed by the name of a church. Grotter.

There were afterwards congregated, and called the see. RubiIii's History of the World.

To con-

CON
Congregational. adj. [from congregation.] Public; pertaining to a congregation or assembly. It is a word used of such Christians as hold every congregation to be a separate and independent church.

CONGRESS. n. s. [congresus, Latin.]
1. A meeting; a shock; a conflict.
2. An appointed meeting for settlement of affairs between different nations: as, the congress of Cambray.

Congressive. adj. [from congress.] Meeting; encountering; coming together;
if it be understood of sexes conjunct, all plants are female; and if of disjointed and congressive generation, there is no male or female in them.

To-congrue. v. n. [from congruus, Lat.]
To agree; to be consistent; to suit; to be agreeable. Not in use.

Our sovereign process imports at full, by letters congruing to that effect.

The second death of Haman.

Congruence. n. s. (congruentia, Lat.) Agreement; suitableness of one thing to another; consistence.

Congruent. adj. [congruus, Latin.] Agreeing; correspondent.

Aru. Cre.

These planets were so far equated as to move upon a common side of the congress of squares, as is seen.

Congruity. n. s. [from congrue.]
1. Suitableness; agreeableness.
2. Fitness; perseverence.
3. Consequence of argument; reason; consistence.

Congruously. adv. [congruus, Latin.]
1. Agreeable; with consent.
2. Suitable; pertinently; and consequently.
3. Reasonable; fit.
4. Agreeable to; suitable to; to accommodate; to proportion or commemorate.

The faculty is infinite, the object infinite, and they infinitely congruous to one another.

Congruously. adv. [congruus, Latin.]
Suitably; pertinently; and consequently.
This conjecture is to be regarded, because congruous unto it, one having warmed the bladder, found it then lighter than the opposite weight.

By Illy's Spring of the Air.

Conic. adj. [conicus, Latin.]
Having or forming the form of a cone, or round decreasing.

Twisting in a conic forms arise, and with a pointed spear divide the skies.

Brown first of a conic figure the basin is oblong.

They are conical vessels, with their bases towards the hearts; and, as they pass on, their diameters grow still less.

Aristotle.

Conically. adv. [from conical.] In a form of a cone.

In a watering pot, shaped conically, or like a sugar-loaf, filled with water, a ligure falls through the holes at the bottom, whilst the gardener keeps his thumb upon the orifice at the top.

Conic Section. n. s. [from conic.] The flat or plane of being conical.

Conic Sections. n. s. A curve line arising from the section of a cone by a plane.

Conic Sections. n. s. That part of geo.

Conics. metry which considers the cone, and the curves arising from its sections.

To conjecture. v. n. [conjectum, Lat.]
To guess; to conjecture. Not in use.

I trust you then, from one that but imperfectly knows, your wisdom would not build you a trouble.

Aristotle.

To Conjectural. adj. [from conjecture.] Being the object of conjecture; possible to be guessed.

To conjectural. adj. [from conjecture.] Depending on conjecture; said or done by guess.

They'll fit by th' fire, and preface to know who are young and who decline, fell fashions, and give out conjugal marriages.

Shakespeare.

It were a matter of great profit, fave that I doubt it is too conjugal to venture upon, if one could discern what corn, beans, or fruits, are likely to be in plenty or scarcity.

Bacon.

The two last words are not in Callimachus, and consequently the rest are only conjugal.

Bacon.

Conjectural. adj. [from conjectural.] That which depends upon guess.

They have not recorded unto chronology, or the records of time, but taken themselves unto probabilities, and the conjecturality of philosophy.

Brown's Vulgar Errors.

Conjecturally. adv. [from conjectural.] By guess; by conjecture.

Whatever may be at any time, out of Scripture, but probably and conjecturally formed.

Hawke.

Let it be probably, not conjuncturally, proved.

Maine.

Conjecture. n. s. [conjectura, Latin.]
1. Guess; imperfect knowledge; preponderation of opinion without proof.

In the casting of lots, a man cannot, upon any ground of reason, bring the event to much as an uncontrived event.

Shakespeare.

To conjecture. v. a. [from the noun.]
To guess; to judge by guess; to entertain an opinion upon bare probability.

When we look upon such things as equally may or may not be, human reason can then, at the best, but conjecture what will be.

Swift.

Conjecturer. n. s. [from conjecture.]
A guesser; one who forms opinion without proof.

If we should believe very grave conjectures, carnivorous animals now were not flesh devourers then.

Browne.

I shall leave conjectures to their own imaginations.

Adams.

Conferous. adj. [conus and fero, Lat.]

Trees or botliers are conferous, as bear a fragrant fruity fruits, of a woody substance, and a figure approaching to a cone, in which are many seeds; and when they are ripe, the several cells in the cone open, and the seeds drop out. Of this kind are the fig, pine, and beech.

Quain.

To conjecture. v. a. [from con, together, and jabberous, the head.] To concert; to settle; to difcuss. A low cant word.

What would a body think of a minister that declared edible matters of food with tumblers and confer politics with tinkers?

L'Estrange.

To join. v. a. [from con, together, and jabberous.] To concert; to settle; to discuss.

One way to unite; to consolidate into one.
The general and indefinite contemplations and notions of the elements, and their conjugations, are to be set aside, being but notional, and illumiated and disputed axioms are to be drawn out of everywhere.
Brown's Vulgar Errors.
3. The form of inflecting verbs through their genders and terminations.
That have those who write to much about de-clemptions and conjugations, about concords and cota., have, their lovers, and been learned to no purpose.
Locke.
4. Union; assemblage.
The fanges of the Lord in the most sacred, mysterious, and useful conjugations of secret and holy things and duties.
Taylor.
CONJUNCTION. subj. [conjunctus, Latri.
Conjoined; concurrent; united. Not in use.
It pleased the king his master to strike at me,
When he, conjunct, and flattening his displeasure,
Tript me behind.
Shakespeare's King Lear.
CONJUNCTION. subj. [conjugé, Latri.
1. Union; association; league.
With small conjunction we should own,
To see how fortune is disposed to us.
Shakespeare's Henry IV.
He will unite the white man with the red
Smile, heaven, upon his union conjunction,
That long hath frowned upon their enmity.
Shakespeare's Richard III.
The treaty gave abroad a reputation of a strict connection and amity between them.
Shakespeare's Henry VII.
Men can effect no greater master by his personal strength, but to act in society and conjunction with others.
South.
An invisible hand from heaven mingleth hearts and souls by strange, secret, and unaccountable conjunctions.
Shakespeare's Richard III.
2. The congress of two planets in the same degree of the zodiac, where they are suppos ded to have great power and influence.
God, neither by drawing waters from the deep,
not by any conjunct of the sky, should bury them under a second flood.
Bacon.
Rutherford's History of the World.
Has not a poet more virtues and vices within his circle? Cannot he observe their influences in their oppositions and conjunctions, in their attitudes and depressions? He shall sooner find ink than nature exhausted.
Rymer's Tragedies of the Age.
Pompey and Caesar were two stars of such a magnitude, that their conjunction was as fatal as the opposition.
Shakespeare's Richard III.
3. A word made use of to connect the clauses of a period together, and to sig-ify their relation to one another.
Clarke.
CONJUNCTIVE. sub. [conjugatrum, Latri.
She is to conjugate to my life and soul,
That as the star moves not but in his sphere,
I could not but by her.
Shakespeare's Henry IV.
2. [In grammar.] The mood of a verb, used subsequently to a conjunction.
CONJUNCTIVELY, adv. [from conjunct-ive.] In union; not apart.
There are good mediums conjugatively taken,
that is, not one without the other.
Brown's Vulgar Errors.
4. Occasion; critical time.
Such conjunctions always attend such conjunctions, and find fault for what is not done, as that which is done.
Clarendon.
3. Mode of union; connexion.
He is quick to perceive the motions of arti-culations, and conjunctions of let us in words.
Holder's Elements of Speech.
I was willing to grant to prelervy what with reason it can pretend to, in a conjunction with epipcysis.
King Edward.
CONJURATION. n. f. [from conjure.]
1. The form or act of summoning another in some sacred name.
We charge you, in the name of God, take heed:
Under this conjunction say, my lord.
Shakespeare's Henry IV.
2. A magical form of words; an incantation; an enchantment.
Your conjunction, fair knight, is too strong for my poor spirit to disobe.
Sidney.
What conjurations, and what mighty magick,
For such proceeding I am charg'd withal,
I won his daughter with it.
Shakespeare's Othello.
3. Knowledge; a disconnection.
Dis.
To conjure u. n. [conjurare, Latin.]
1. To summon in a sacred name; to en-joint with the highest solemnity.
He concluded with frights and tears to conjure them, that they would no more profes him to confect a thing so contrary to his reason.
Clarendon.
The church may make another form St. Paul does the Philippians, when he conjures them to unity.
Decy of Fifty.
I conjure you! Let him know,Whatever was done against him, Caro did it.
Addison's Cato.
2. To bind many by an oath to some common design. This fane is rare.
He, in proud rebellious arms,
Drew after him the third part of his forces,
Conjured against the High. Milton's Par. Lost.
3. To influence by magick; to affect by enchantment; to charm.
What black magician conjures up this fiend,
To stop devoted Charlemagne's footsteps.
Shakespeare's Richard III.
What is he, whose griefs
Bear such an emphasis? whose phrase of sorrow
Conjures the wandering stars, and makes them stand
Like wonder-wounded hearers?
Shakspeare's Hamlet.
I thought their own fears, whose black arms first raised up those turbulent spirits, would force them to conjure them down again.
King Charles.
You have conjured up persons that exist no where else but on old coins, and have made our passions and virtues visible.
Addison's New Ancient Medals.
4. To be observed, that when this word is used forsummons or conjure, its accent is on the last syllable, conjure;
when for charm, on the first, conjure.
To conjure u. n. To practice charms or enchantments; to enchant.
My invention is honest and fair, and in his mitre's name I conjure only but to raise up him, and see Rome and Tudor.
Out of my door, you witch! you hang you baggage, you poultice, you runaway! Out, out, out! I'll conjure you, I'll fortunec you!
Shakespeare's Merry Wives of Windor.
CONTRATER. n. f. [from conjure.]
1. An enchanter; one that uses charms.
Good.
Good doctor Pinch, you are a conjurer; Elisha him in his true siege again. Shakespeare's Comedy of Errors. Figures in the book.

Of some dread conjurer, that would enforce nature...

Thus has he done you British consorts right, Whose husbands, should they play like mine to you, Would never find you in your conduct slipping, Though they 'rur conjurers to take you tripping.

2. An impostor who pretends to secret arts; a cunning man. From the account the loser brings, The conjurer knows who steals the things. Prior.

3. By way of irony, a man of shrewd conjecture, a man of sagacity. Though arts are very knowing, I don't take them to be conjurers; and therefore they could not guess that I had put some corn in that room. Addison.

Conjuration, n. s. [from conjure.] Serious injunction; solemn demand. I should not be induced but by your earnest importunities and fervent conjurations. Milton in Education.

Connascence, n. s. [con and nasor, Latin.] 1. Common birth; production at the same time; community of birth. 2. Being produced together with another being.

Christians have baptized these generous births and double connascence, as containing in them a distinction of soul. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

3. The art of uniting or growing together; improperly, Sympathy denotes a connascence, or growing together. Wilman.

Connat. adj. [from con and natus, Latin.] Born with another; being of the same birth.

Many, who deny all connate notions in the speculative intellect, do yet admit them in this. South. Their dispositions to be reflected, some as a greater, and others at a less thickness, of thin plates or bubbles, are occasioned by the rays, and imperceptible motions of the air. Newton's Opticks.

Connatural, adj. [con and natural.] 1. United with the being; connected by nature.

First, in man's mind we find an appetite To learn and know the truth of ev'ry thing; What is connected, and born with it. Hales. These affections are connatural to us, and as we grow up to do they. L'Estrange.

2. Participation of the same nature.

If there be no way, besides these painful passages, how we may come to death, and mix with our connatural dust? Milton. Whoever draws me on, or sympatheze, or some connatural force, Powerful at greatest distance to unite, with secret affinity. Milton's Paradise Lost.

Connaturality, n. s. [from connatural.] Participation of the same nature; natural inseparability. There is a connaturality and congruity between that human knowledge and those habits, and that future estate of the soul. Hume.

Connaturally, adv. [from connatural.] In coexistence with nature; originally.

Some common notions from connatural engraving in the soul, antecedently to discursive rationalization...

Connaturalness, n. s. [from connatural.] Participation of the same nature; natural union.

Such is the connaturalness of our corruption, except what we looked for an account hereafter. Parson on the Creed.

To CONNECT. v. a. [connext, Latin.] 1. To join; to link; to unite; to connect; to fallen together.

The conjurors that charge the quicksires will be so cunningly to one another, that, instead of a fluid body, they will appear in the form of a red powder. Boyle.

2. To unite by intervention, as a cement.

The natural order of the connecting ideas must directly affect the soul; and a man must see the connection of each intermediate idea with those that it connects, before he can use it in a syllogism. Locke.

3. To join in a just series of thought, or regular conclusion of language as, the author connects his reasons well.

To Connect. v. n. To cohere; to have just relation to things preceding and subsequent. This is seldom used but in conversation.

Connectively, adv. [from connect.] In conjunction; in union; jointly; conjointly; conjunctly. The people's power is great and indestructible, whenever they can unite connectively, or by deposition, to exert it. Swift.

To Connect's v. a. [connexion, Latin.] To join or link together; to fallen to each other.

Some who are taught some words or sentences, cannot connect their words or sentences in coherence with the matter which they signify. Hales's Origin of Mankind.

By chains connect'd, and with destructive sweep Beheld whole troops at once. Philips.

Connexion, n. s. [from connex; or connextis, Latin.] 1. Union; junction; the act of uniting together; the state of being united together.

My heart, which by a secret harmony Still moves with things, join'd in connexion sweet. Milton.

There must be a future state, where the eternal and incorruptible connection between virtue and vice is not destined to be. Atterbury.

2. Just relation to something precedent or subsequent; consequence of argumentation; coherence. Contemplation of human nature doth, by a necessary connexion and chain of causes, carry us up to the Deity. Hales.

Each intermediate idea must be such as, in the whole chain, hath a visible connexion with those two it is placed between. Locke.

A confused, wise, reflecting cause, That can deliberate, means effect, and find Their due connexion with the end design'd.

Connective, adj. [from connect.] Having the force of connexion; conjunctive.

The predicate and subject are joined in a form of words by connexive particles. Warne's Logick.

Connection, n. s. [from connex; Lat.] A winging. Dict.

Convenience, n. s. [from connive.] 1. The art of winging. Not in use.

2. Voluntary blindnese; pretended ignorance; forbearance.

It is better to mitigate injury by declaration, than to suffer it to rage by connivance. Bacon. Difobedience, having gained one degree of liberty, will demand another; every vice interprets a consequence, an approbation. South.
2. To overcome; to subdue; to vanquish. Both tugging to be victors, breath to breath; Yet neither conqueror nor conquered. Shakespeare's

Henry VI.

The conquer'd also, and infla'd by war,
Shall, with their freemost loft, all virtue lose.
And fear of God.

Milton.

Anna conquer'd but to serve,

And governs but to blest.

Smit.

3. To surmount; to overcome: as, be conquered by reluctance.

To conquer. w. n. To get the victory; to overcome.

I doubt to clothe straight forth; he hath been us'd
Ever to conquer and to have his word

Off contradiction. Shakespeare's Coriolanus.

Equal success had their champions high, And both refusal'd to conquer or to die. Wiltair.

The logic of a conquering sword has no propriety.

Decay of Party.

Conqueror. n. s. [from conquer.] Possible to be overcome.

While the horse is small, and the particulars few, he will find it easy and conquerable. South.

Conqueror. n. s. [from conquer.]

1. A man that has obtained a victory; a victor.

Bound with triumphal garlands will I come, And lead thy daughter to the conqueror's bed. Shakespeare's Richard III.

The gain of civil wars will not allow Bags for the conqueror's crew.

Crawly. A critic that trots authours in reputation, as the slave who called out to the conqueror. Remember, Sir, that you are a man. Add. Guard.

2. One that subdues and ruins countries.

Devoid of Ireland.

Defurving freedom more Than those their conquerors, who leave behind Nothing but ruin wherefore'er they rove.

Milton's Paradise Regained.

That tyrant god, that refleeds conqueror,
May quit his power and throw it to the Prior.

Conquest. n. s. [conquest, French.]

1. The act of conquering; subjection.

A perfect conquest of a country reduces all the people to the condition of subjects.

Devius or Ireland.

2. Acquisition by victory; thing gained.

More willingly I mention air,
This our old conquest; than remember hell,
Our hated habitation. Milton's Paradise Regained.

3. Victory; success in arms.

I must yield my body to the earth,
And, by my fall, the conquest to my foe.

Shakespeare's Henry VI.

I'll lead thy daughter to a conqueror's bed,
To whom I will recall my conquest won,
And she shall be vile victress. Shak. Richard III.

Not to be overcome, was to do more
Than all the conquests former kings did gain. Dryd.

In joys of conquest he relishes their bread,
And, fill'd with England's glory, smiles in death.

Alcibiades.

CONCANGUINEOUS. adj. [conzanguineus, Latin.] Near of kin; of the same blood; related by birth; not affirmed.

Am not concanguineus? Am not of her blood. Shakespeare.

Concangunitvity. n. s. [conzangunitvitas, Lat.] Relation by blood; relation by descent from one common progenitor; nearness of kin; distinction of affinity, or relation by marriage.

I know no touch of concangunitvity.

Shakespeare's Trial of Cptn. and Cptn.

There is the sanguine and indissoluble concangunitvity and society between them in general; of which the heathen poet, whom the apostle calls to witness, faith, We are all his generation.

Vol. I.

Bun. the Holy War.
INTERNAL FEEL OF Guilt, OR INNOCENCE.

No man doubts of a Supreme Being, until from the conscientiousness of his provocations, it becomes his interest should there be none.

Government of the Tongue.

Such ideas, no doubts, they would have had, had not their conscientiousness to themselves, of their ignorance of them, kept them from so idle an attempt.

An honest mind is not in the power of a dishonest: to break its peace, there must be some guilt or conscientiousness.

CONSCRIPT. adj. [from confero, Lat.] The act of dedicating to particular purposes, or design; for a sacrifice. To CONSECRATE. v. a. [conscire, Lat.]

1. To make sacred; to appropriate to sacred uses.
   - Enter into the boulent by the blood of Jezu, by a new and living way which he hath consecrated for us. 2 Cor. x. 20.

2. To dedicate invocably to some particular purpose, or design; with ra.
   - He shall consecrate unto the Lord the days of his separation, and shall bring a lamb of the first year for a trespass offering. Num. vi. 12.

3. To canonize.
   - Consecrated; sacred; devoted; consecrated; dedicated.

The water consecrates for sacrifice. Answer all black. Waller.

Shall thou but hear I were licentious; and that this body, consecrate to thee, By visible light should be contaminable. Shakespeare's Comedy of Errors.

The cardinal, standing before the choir, lets them know that they were assembled in that consecrate place to sing unto God. Bacon's Henry VII. Let these seraphs in raptures cry, Howdar it shal be be bold

To enter, consecrate to me; or touch this hollow'd mould? Drayton's Oothopia.

CONSECRATION. n. f. [from consecrate.]

One that prays, the rites by which any thing is devoted to sacred purposes.

Whether it be not against the notion of a sacrament, that the consecrator alone should partake of it. Atherley.

CONSECRATION. n. f. [from consecrate.]

A rite or ceremony of dedicating and devoting things or persons to the service of God, with an application of certain proper solemnities. Alyss's Part.

At the erection and consecration as well of the tabernacle as of the temple, it pleased the Almighty to give a sign. History. The consecration of his God is upon his head. Num. vi. 7.

We must know that consecrate makes not a place consecrated, but only solemnly declares it for the gift, and the honor of God makes it God and consecrated; consecrated.

2. The act of declaring one holy by canonization.

The calendar swells with new consecrations of buildings.

CONSECRARY. adj. [from consecratus, Lat.] Consequent; consequential; following by consecration.

From the inconsistent and contrary determinations thereof, categorical impetities and conclusions may arise. Brown.

CONSECRARY. n. f. [from the adjective.]

Deduction from premises: consequence, corollary.

The propositions are consecrated drawn from the observations. Woodward's Natural History.

CONSECRATION. n. f. [from consecrato, Latin.]

1. Train of consecrations; chain of deductions; concatenation of propositions.

Some consecrations are so intemately and evidently conferred to or from the premises, that the conclusion is attained, and without any thing of ratiocinative progress. Hale.

2. Succession.

In a quick succession of the colours, the impression of every colour remains in the fen hum.

Newton's Opticks.

3. In anatomy.

The month of consecration, or, as some term it, of progression, is the space between one consecration of the moon with the fun unto another. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

The moon makes four quarterly festivals within her year, or month of consecration. Hilder.

CONSCUTIVE. adj. [consequent, Fr.]

1. Following in train; uninterrupted, successive.

That obligation upon the lands did not come into disuse but by fifty consecrations years of exemp tion. Locke on Church Laws.

2. Consequent; regularly succeeding.

This is seeming to comprehend only the actions of a man, consecrator to volition. Locke.

CONSECRUTIVELY. adv. [from consecrative.]

A term used in the school philosophy, in opposition to antecedently, and sometimes to effectually or causally. Diderot.

To CONSECRATE. v. a. [consemm, Latin.] To few different feeds together, consecrate.

CONSCSSION. n. f. [consecans, Lat.]

Agreement, accord.

A great number of such living and thinking particles could not possibly, by their mutual contact, and preluding and striving, compose one greater, individual animal, with one mind and understanding, and a vital consecration of the whole body. Bentely.

CONSENT. n. f. [confer, Lat.]

1. The act of yielding or consecrating.

I am far from excusing or denying that complacency; for plenary consent is not. King Charles.

When thou canst truly call thee virtuous thing, be wise and free, by heaven's consent and unif. Dryden's Pref.

2. Concord; agreement; accord; unity of opinion.

The fighting winds will fly there and admire, Learning consent and concord from his lyre. Cow. Davids's Par.

3. Coherence with; relation to; correspondence.

Demons found
In fire, air, flood, or under ground.
Whose power hath a true consent
With planet, or with element. Milton.

4. Tendency to one point; joint operation.

Such is the world's great harmony, that springs From union, order, full consent of things. Pope.

5. In phyliss.

The perception one part has of another, by means of some fibers and nerves common to them both; and thus the same in the bladder, by vitellating the fibers there, will effect and draw them into spirits, as to affect the bowels in the same manner by the interdependence of nervous threads.

6. And cause a palpita; and extend their wishes sometime to the remotest, and occasion vomittings. Sibbald.

CONSENT. v. n. [consen, Latin.]

1. To be of the same mind; to agree.

Though thou tell'st some doubt within me more, But more defire to hear, if thou consent, The full relation. Milton.

2. To co-operate to the same end.

3. To yield; to give consent; to allow; to admit with to.

Ye comets, scourg the bad revolving star
That has consecrated unto Henry's death. Shakespeare's Henry VI.

In this we consent unto you, if ye will be avowed. The same.

What in deep thou didst afford to dream,
Waking thou never wilt consent to do. Milton.

Their mournful thunder would awake
Dull earth, which does with heaven consent
To all they wrote. Waller.

CONSENTANCE. adj. [consequentus, Lat.] Agreeable to; consistent with.

In the picture of Abraham sacrificing his son, Isaac is described a little boy; which is not consequent on the circumstances of the text. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

It will cost no pains to bring you to the knowing, nor to the practice; it is being very agreeable and consequent to the view of man's nature. Hammond's Practical Catechetical.

CONSENTANCELY. adv. [from consequentuus.] Agreeably; consistently; suitably.

Parschulus did not always write to consequentaneously to himself, that his opinions were consistently to be collected from every place of his writings, where he seems to express it. Boyle.

CONSENTANCEUSNESS. n. f. [from consequentuus.] Agreement; consistency.

CONSENT. adj. [consequent, Lat.]

1. That which follows from any cause or principle.

Shun the bitter consequent; for know, The day thou eatest thereof, thou shalt die. Shakespeare's Macbeth.

2. Event; effect of a cause.

Spirits that know All mortal consequents have pronounc'd it.

CONSEQUENCE. n. f. [consequentia, Latin.]

1. That which follows from any cause or principle.

What time of day? Milton.

2. Event; effect of a cause.

2. Event; effect of a cause.

3. Proposition collected from the agreement of other previous propositions; deduction; conclusion.

- It is no good consequence, that feason aims at our being happy, therefore it forbid all voluntary sin. Dryden's Priest.

- The last proposition of a syllogism is, what is commanded by one Sacriour is our duty; prayer is command'd, conf. therefore prayer is our duty.

Can syllogism fet things right?

No, major with minors right;

Does both in friendly contest join,

The consequent limbs fall behind. Prior.

5. Concatenation of causes and effects; consecution.

Sorrow being the natural and direct offer of sin, that which first brought sin into the world, most, bynecessary consequent, bring it borrow too. South.
That I must after thee, when this thy son: Such fatal confecutions unites thee twice.

Milton's Paradise Lost. 6. That which produces consequences; influence; tendency. Affected without any colour of scripture-proof; it is a very ill confecution to the superstitious of good life. Hamilt. 7. Importance; moment. The instrument of darkness Win with what small truth, so let us try In deep confecution. Shakespeare's Macbeth. The anger of Achilles was of such consequences, that it embossed the kings of Greece. Add. Achilles's Speller. Their people are sunk in poverty, ignorance, and cowardice; and of as little confecution as women and children. Swift. Consequent, adj. [confecution, Latin.] 1. Following by rational deduction. 2. Following as the effect of a cause: with to. It was not a power possible to be inherited, because the right was confecution to, and built on, an act perfectly performed. Locke. Some times with upon. This satisfaction or dissatisfaction, confecution upon a man's acting suitably or unsuccessfully to confecution, is a principle not easily to be worn out. South. Consequent, n. s. 1. Consequence; that which follows from previous propositions by rational deduction. Dush it follow that they, being not the people of God, are in nothing to be followed? This confecution were good, if only the cumb of the people of God to be observed. Hopter. 2. Effect; that which follows an acting cause. They were ill paid; and they were ill governed, which is always a confecution of ill payment. Davin's Ireland. He could be confecution yet dormant in their principles, and effects, yet unborn. South. Consequential, adj. [from consequent.] 1. Produced by the necessary concatenation of effects to causes. We sometimes wrangle, when we should debate; A confecution ill which freedom draws; A bad effect, but from a noble cause. Prior. 2. Having confecutions judiciously connect ed with the premises; conclusive. Though their kind of arguments may seem obscure; yet, upon a due consideration of them, they are highly confecutional and correspondent to my purpose. Addie's, Wing Examiner. Consequentially, adv. [from consequential.] 1. With just deduction of consequences; with right connexion of ideas. No body writes a book without meaning something, though he may not have the faculty of writing confecutionally, and expressing his meaning. 2. By consequence; not immediately; eventually. This relation is so necessary, that God himself cannot discharge a rational creature from it; although consequentially indeed he may do so, by the annihilation of such creatures. South. Consequentialness, n. s. [from consequential.] Regular confecution of discourse. Conserva'tion, n. Having a prefervatory quality. Dict. To Conservation, v. a. [confervatory, Latin.] 1. To preserve without loss or derangement. Nothing was lost out of these flowers, hence the art of conserving what others have gained in knowledge is easy. They will be able to confere their properties unchanged in passing through several mediums; which is another condition of the rays of light. Newton's Optics. 2. To caudicate or pickler fruit. Conservation, n. [from the verb.] A sweat made of the infipidized juices of fruit, boiled with sugar till they will harden and candy. Will 't please your honour, taste of these con servatories? They have in Turkey and the East certain confecutions, which they call serwets, which are like to candied conserwatories, and are made of sugar and lemons. The more cool they were at, and the more whites they bestowed upon them, the more their conserwatories flaked. Domitian. 2. A conserwatory or place in which anything is kept. This fene is unusual. Tuberosas will not endure the wet of this season; therefore set the pots into your conserve, and keep them dry. Ewely's Calendar. Consider, v. a. [confess, Latin.] A sitting together. Consideror, n. [confessus, Latin.] One that sits with others. Dict. To Consider, v. a. [confesser, Latin.] 1. To think upon with care; to ponder, to examine; to sift; to study. At our more consider'd time we read, Anwer, and think upon this subject. 2. To take into the view; not to omit in the examination. It seems necessary, in the choice of persons for greater employments, to consider their bodies as well as their minds, and ages and health as well as their abilities. Temple. 3. To have regard to; to respect; not to displease. Let us consider one another to provoke unto love, and good works. Hebrews, v. 12. 4. In the imperative mood it is a kind of interjection; a word whereby attention is summoned. Consider, Thy life hath yet been private, most part spent Shakespear's Winter's Tale. 5. To require; to reward one for his trouble. Take away with thee the very service thou hast done, which if I have not enough considered, to be more thankful to thee, thou shall have my body. Shakespear's Winter's Tale. Consider, v. a. 1. To think maturely; not to judge hastily or rashly. None confidered in his heart, neither is there knowledge not understanding. Joshua, x. 23. 2. To.
CON

To deliberate; to work in the mind.
Witless, we will confider of your suit.
And come some other time to know our mind.
Shakespeare's Henry VI.
Such a treatise might be consdiered by jurymen,
before they confider of their verdict.
Swift.
To doubt; to hesitate.
Many mad' confiderings did throng,
And [in] his head: Shak. H. VIII.
'Twixt grief no more, or grief and rage were one;
Within her soul; at last 'twas rage alone;
Which, burning upwards, in succedion dries
The tes that stood confidering her fate.
Dryden.
Con{iderable}. adj. [from consider.]
1. Worthy of confideration; worthy of regard and attention.
Eternity is infinitely the most confiderable dura-
Dryden.
It is confiderable, that some urns have inscriptions on them, expressing that the lamps were burning.
Within.
2. Respectable; above neglect; deferving notice.
Men confiderable. In all worthy proffessions, em-miment in many ways of life. Sprat's Sermons.
I am to confiderable a man, that I cannot have left the world, till I can talk of a year. Addison. Pref. Add.
3. Important; valuable.
Chrift, instead of applauding St. Peter's zeal, upbraid his absurdity, that could think his mean aids confiderable to him, who could command legions of angels to his service. Dryden's Fables.
In painting, not every action, nor every person, is confiderable enough to enter into the cloth.
Dryden's Def. Fables.
Many can make themselves masters of so considerable eftates as those who have the greatest portions of land.
Addison.
4. More than a little. It has a middle signification between little and great.
Many brought in very confiderable sums of money.
Clarendon.
Very probably a confiderable part of the earth is yet unknown.
Withis.
Those earthly particles, when they came to be collected, would conftruct a body of a very considerable thickness and folidity.
Burnet's Theory of the Earth.
Every cough, though common, and of some considerable continuance, is not of a consumfitive nature, nor prefages dissolution and the grave.
Blackmore.
Considerableness. n. s. [from considerable.] Importance; dignity; mo-mom; value; defect; a claim to notice.
We must not always measure the confiderable beneath of things by their most obvious and immediate effectuals, but by their fame to make or contribute to the discovery of things highly useful.
Boyle.
Their most flight and trivial occurrences, by being theirs, they think acquire a confiderable ning, and are forcibly impounded upon the company.
Government of the Tongue.
Considerably. adv. [from confiderable.] In a degree deferving notice, though not the highest.
And Europe till confiderably gains
Both by their good example and their pains.
Refemee.
With importance; importantly.
I define no fort of favour so much, as that of serving you more confiderably than I have been able to do.
Pope.
Considerance. n. s. [from consider.
Confideration; reflection; fober thought.
After this cold confiderance, fentence me
And, as you are a king, fpeak in your tone.
What have I done that did become my place.
Shakespeare's Henry IV.
Considerate. adj. [confideratus. Lat.]
1. Seriously; given to confideration; prudent; not rash; not negligent.
I will confider with iron-witted foos,
And unfupportive boys: none are for me,
That look into me with confiderate eyes.
Dryden.
2. Modest; not rigorous. This fene is much used in conversation.
Considerately. adv. [from consider.
Calmly; coolly; prudently.
Circumstances are of fuch force, as they wary an ordinary judgment of a man, not fully and confiderably pondering the matter.
Bacon's Observation of Good and Evil.
Considerateliness. n. s. [from confider.
The quality of being confiderate; prudence.
Dift.
Consideration. n. s. [from consider.
1. The act of confidering; mental view;
regard; notice.
As to pient beauties and fimplicity, when that alone comes in confideration, and the confequences are removed, a man never fuffers amifs.
Locke.
2. Mature thought; prudence; serious deliberation.
Let us think with confideration, and confider with acknowledging, and acknowledge with admiration.
Sidney.
The breath no fooner left his father's body,
But that his wildrefs mortified in him;
Confideration, like an angel, came,
And whipt th'offending Adam out of him.
Shakespeare's Henry V.
Contemplation; meditation upon any thing.
The love you bear to Mopha hath brought you to the confideration of her virtues, and that confideration may have made you the more virtuous, and to the more worthy.
Sidney.
4. Importance; claim to notice; worthiness of regard.
Lucan is the only author of confideration among the Latin poets, who was not explained for the ufe of the dauphin; because the whole Pharsalia would have been a fubjef upon the French form of government.
Addington's Richard III.
5. Equivalent; compenfation.
We are provident enough not to part with any thingerviceable to our bodies under a good confi-deration, but make little account of our founds.
Ray in the Creation.
Foreigners can never take our bills for payment, though they might pay as valuable confiderations among other things.
Shakespeare's Cymb.
6. Motive of action; influence; ground of conduct.
The confideration, in regard whereof the law forbid thee fome things, was not becaufe thou nations did use them.
Hooke.
He had been made general upon very partial and not enough deliberated, confiderations. Clarendon.
He was obliged, antecedent to all other confiderations, to fearch an altarn.
Dryden.
The world can pardon your concealing it, on the fame confideration.
Dryden.
7. Reason; ground of concluding.
Not led by any commandment, yet moved with fuch confiderations as have been before set down.
Hooke.
Utes, not thought upon before, be reasonable causes of retaining that which other confiderations did procure to be instituted.
Hooke.
[In law.] Consideration is the material
caufe of a contract, without which no contract bindeth.
It is either expressed, as if a man bargain to give twenty thillings for a horse; or else implied, as when a man comes into an inn, and taking both meat and lodging for him-sell and his horfe, without bargaining with the host, if he discharge not the houle, the host may flay his horfe.
Cowell.
Considerer. n. s. [from consider.] A man of reflection; a thinker.
A vain applaufe of wit for an impious jefl, or of reason for a deep confideration.
Government of the Tongue.
Considering. [This is a kind of conjunction; it had been more grammatically written confidered; viz. French; but confidering is always used.] If allowance be made for
It is not poffible to act otherwise, confidering
the weaknesses of our nature.
Spinoza.
To Con{ign}. v. a. [con{ign}, Lat.]
1. To give to another any thing, with the right to it, in a formal manner; to give into other hands; to transfer:
sometimes with to, sometimes over to.
Hence, by free gifts, confign over a place to the Divine worship.
South.
Must I pass
Again to nothing, when this vital breath
Coffing, confign me to hell and death.
Prior.
At the day of general account, good men are then to be configned over to another place, a state of everlasting love and charity.
Addington.
2. To appropriate; to quit for a certain purpose.
The French commander configned it to the use for which it was intended by the donor.
Dryden's Fables, Dedication.
To Con{ign}. v. n.
1. To submit to the fame terms with another. This is not now in ufe.
Thou haft finird joy and moan;
All loaves young, all loaves must
Confign to thee, and confign hereafter.
Shakespeare's Cymb.
2. To sign; to consent to. Obsolele.
A maid yet rovet over with the virgin crinol of modesty: it were a hard condition to a maid to confign to.
Shakespeare's Cymb.
Con{ignation}. n. s. [from confign.]
1. The act of configning; the act by which any thing is delivered up to another.
As the hope of salvation is a good disposition towards it, so is despair a certain confignation to Taylor.
2. The act of signing.
If we find that we increafe in duty, then we may look upon the tradition of the holy facramental symbols as a direct confignation of pardon.
Taylor's Worthy Communicant.
Con{ignment}. n. s. [from confign.]
1. The act of configning.
2. The
To CONSIST, v. n. [constat, Lat.]
1. To subist; not to perish.
He is before all things, and by him all things consist.

2. To continue fixed, without diffusion.
Flame does not mingle with flame, as air doth with air, or water with water, but only remaineth contiguous, as it cometh to pass between consisting bodies. Bacon's Natural History.

3. To be comprised; to be contained.
I pretend not to the hands of artists, whose skill only is in a certain manner which they have affected.

4. To be composed.
The land would be full of planes, and valleys, mountains, according as the pieces of this ruin were disposed.

5. To have being concurrently; to co-exist.
Necessity and elision cannot coexist together in the same act.

6. To agree; not to oppose; not to contradict; not to counteract: it has either before the thing compared, or coexist.
His majesty should be willing to content to any thing which might consist with his confidence and honour.

CONSISTENCY, n.s. [from consist.]
1. State with respect to maternal existence.
Water, being divided, maketh many circles, till it return itself to the natural consequence.

2. Degree of denizens or rarity.
Let the expressed juicers be boiled into the consistence of a syrup. Arbuthnot in Aliments.

3. Subtance; form; make.
His friendship is of a noble make, and a lasting consistence.

4. Durable or lasting state.
Meditation will confirm resolutions of good, and give them a durable consistence in the soul. Hammond.

CONSISTENT, adj. [from consist, Lat.]
Not contradictory; not opposed.
With reference to such a power, to be, and to be, are terms not consistent only, but equivalent. South.

A great part of their politics others do not think consistent with honour to practice.

CONSOLABLE, adj. [from consolare.
That which admits comfort.

CONSOLATORY, n.s. [from consolare.
A speech or writing containing topics of comfort.

CONSOLATION, n.s. [from consolare.
Comfort; alleviation of misery; such alleviation as is produced by partial remedies.

There is such a consolatio of offices between the prince and whom his favour bred, that they may help to sustain his power, so be their know.

King 2. S. Davies.

CONSOLATOR, n.s. [Lat.] A comforter.

CONSOLATION, adj. [from consolare.
Tending to give comfort.

CONSOLATE, v. a. [consolare, Lat.] To comfort; to console; to soothe in misery. Not much used.

I will be gone,
That pithful rumour may report my flight,

CONSOLATE, n.s. [from consolare.
To console thee ear.

What may somewhat console all men that honour virtue, we do not discover the latter fame of his misery in authors of antiquity.
Brooke's Metabolic.

CONSOLATION, n.s. [from consolare.
Comfort; alleviation of misery; such alleviation as is produced by partial remedies.

We, that were in the jaws of death, were now brought into a place where we found nothing but consolations.
Bacon.

CONSOLATION, n.s. [from consolare.
A speech or writing containing topics of comfort.

Consolatoris writ
With studious argument, and much perfusion bought.

Lenient of grief and anxious thought.

With inward consolations encompassed;
And oft supported so, as shall amaze
Their proudest persecutors. Milton's Paradise Lost.

Let the righteous perseverance with patience, supported by this consolation, that their labour shall not be in vain. Rogers.

CONSOLATOR, n.s. [Lat.] A comforter.

CONSOLATORY, n.s. [from consolare.
A speech or writing containing topics of comfort.

CONSOLATORY, adj. [from consolare.
Tending to give comfort.

CONSOLATION, v. a. [consolare, Lat.] To comfort; to console; to soothe in misery.

Others the siorn fills compass round,
And empties heads console with empty found.

CONSOLATION, n.s. [French.] In architecture, is a part or member projecting in manner of a branch, or shoulder-piece, serving to support a cornice, butt, vace, beam, and frequently used as keys of arches.

Chambers.

CONSOLER, n.s. [from consolare.
One that gives comfort.
To CONSOLIDATE. v. a. [consolidate, Fr. adjoindre, Lat.]
1. To form into a compact and solid body; to harden; to unite into a solid mass. The word may be rendered, either he stretched, or he fixed and consolidated, the earth above the waters. (Barrow's History.)
2. To strengthen the effects of spirits in stiffening becoming. The consolidation of the fabric, is well known to chiropodists. —Arberthwaite.
3. To combine or unite two parliamentary bills into one. —To consolidate a bill, or consolidate the bills of a committee. —The act of uniting two or more committees at a time. —To consolidate in parliament, to another. —In law, it is used for the combining and uniting of two or more laws, in a single law, as well as the combining and uniting of two or more benefits in one. —Consolidative.

CONSOLIDATION. n. f. [from consolidate.]
1. The act of uniting into a solid mass. —The consolidation of the marble, and of the stone, did not fall out at random. —Woodward's Nat. Hist.
2. The annexing of one bill in parliament to another.
3. In law, it is used for the combining and uniting of two or more bills in one. —Consolidative.

CONSONANCE. n. f. [from consonant.]
1. Accord of sound. —The two principal consonants that most ravish the ear, are, by the concourse of all nature, the fifth and the octave. —Waterhouse.
2. Consonancy, consonance, agreeably.
4. I have set down this, to show the perfect unification of our perfected church to the doctrine of scripture and antiquity. —Hammond's Fundamentals.
5. Agreement, concord, friendship. —A sense now not used. Let me confess you by the rights of our fellowship, by the concord of our youth. —Shakespeare's Hamlet.

CONSONANT. adj. [consonants, Lat.] Agreeable; according; consistent; followed by either with or to. —Were it consonant unto man to divorce these two sentences, the former of which doth show the latter is restrained. —Hamer.
That where much is given there shall be much required, is a thing consonant with natural equity. —Dean of St. Paul's.
Religion looks consonant to itself. —Dean of St. Paul's. He discovers how consonant the account which Moses hath left of the primitive earth, is to this from nature. —Woodward.

CONSONANT. n. f. [consonants, Lat.] A letter which cannot be founded, or but imperfectly, by itself. In all vowels the passage of the mouth is open and free, without any appulse of an organ of speech to another; but in consonants there is an appulse of the organs, sometimes (as you observe, the consonants from the vowels) wholly precluding all sound, and, in all of them, most of the checking and abetting. —Holden's Elements of Speech.
He confessed these as they had a greater mixture of vowels or consonants, and accordingly employing them, the voice results in a greater smoothness. —Pope's Essay on Homer.

CONSONANTLY, adv. [from consonant.]
Confidently; agreeably. This at consonantly is preacheth, teacheth, and driveth, as if but one tongue did speak in all. —Hunter.
Ourselves are formed according to that mind which frames things consonantly to their respective natures. —Glaister's Sylphs.
It will speak consonantly of itself, but it must fall that happened in the original confabulation. —Tillotson.

CONSONANTNESS. n. f. [from consonant.]
Agreement, consonancy. —Diss. —Consonous. adj. [from consonant.] Agreeing in sound; symphonious.

CONSPIRATION. n. f. [from conspire, Lat.] The act of laying to sleep. Little in the time. —One of his maxims is, that a total abstinence from intemperance is no more philosophy, than a total configuration of the fens is required.

CONSORT. n. f. [consor, Lat.] It had anciently the accent on the latter syllable, but has now it on the former. —Milton has used them both.
1. Companion; partner; generally a partner of the bed; a wife or husband. —Fellowship. Such as I seek, fit to participate. —All rational delight, wherein the brute cannot be human confederate. —Milton.
Male he created them, but thy confederate. —Female for race; then bled mankind, and said, Be fruitful, multiply, and fill the earth, —Milton's Paradise Lost.
Thy Belsona, thy confederate came. —Not only to thy bed, but to thy fame. —Dorset.
He f方可 alive, and thurr's to wed. —Well pleased to want a confederate of his bed. —Dryden's Fable.

CONSPIRACY. n. f. [from conspirare, Lat.] A plot or concourse of men having a common design against a person or persons. —Conspicuous.
1. Exploitation; a view; state of being visible at a distance. —Looked on with such a weak light, they appear well proportioned fabrics; yet they appear to be in that twilight, which is requisite to their conspiracies. —Boyle's De Consipr. Fidem, &c.
2. Eminently; famously; remarkably. —Conspicuousness.

CONSPIRATOR. n. f. [from conspirare, Lat.]
1. A privy agent. —A privy agent to commit some crime; a plot; a concerted treason. —O conspiracy! —Shan't thou to them thy danger's brow by night, When evils are most free? —Shakespeare, Julius Caesar.
I had forget the care of them, when he committed the heart Of the beast Caliban, and his confederate, Against my life. —Shakespeare's Tempest.
When fear he had escap'd the blow of Othello and conspirator, —Shakespeare's Tempest.
Death did his master's hopes destroy. —Dryden.
2. In law, an agreement of men to do any thing; always taken in the evil part. —It is taken for a conspiracy of two, at the least, falsely to indict one, or to procure one to be indicted, of felony. —Conspire.
3. A concurrence; a general tendency of many causes to one event. —When the time and the occasion was ripe for him, there was a conspiracy in all heaven and earthly things, to frame it occasions to lead him unto it. —Sidney.
The air appearing so malicious in this mutinous conspiracy, exacts a more particular regard. The Harry on Conspiracies.

Conspirant. adj. [conspirat., Latin.] Conspiring; engaging in a conspiracy or plot; plotting.

There are a traitor, Conspirant 'gainst this high illustrious prince.

Conspiracy, n. s. [conspiration, Lat.] An agreement of many to one end. One would wonder how, from so differing parties, they should infer the same conclusion, were it not that the conspiracy of interest were too potent for the diversity of judgment. Dryden's Spanish Friar.

Conspirator. n. s. [from conspira., Lat.] A man engaged in a plot; one who has secretly concurred with others committed of a crime; a plotter. A conspirator is among the conspirators with Ab:

Stand back, thou manifest conspirator; Thou that dost fulfill to murder our dear lord. Shakespeare's Henry VI.

But let the bold conspirator beware; For he's in malice princes its peculiar care. Dryden's Spanish Friar.

One put into his hands a note of the whole conspiracy against him, together with all the names of the conspirators. From a matter of interest, as the Castle of Caraban; but these are properly castellans, or governments of castles.

Cowell, Chambers. When I saw hither, I was hard high conspirable. And duke of Buckingham; now poor Edward Bohun. Shakespeare.

The knave conspirable had set me in the block, I' th' common blocks, for a witch. Shakespeare's Merry Wives of Windsor.

The conspirators a tender man, and an enemy to faction, went to observe what they did. Clarendon.

1. To concert a crime; to plot; to hatch secret treason.

Tell me what they desire, That do conspir my death with devilish plots. Daminated witcheries. Dryden's Richtard III.

What was it? That mov'd pale Caesar to confpire? They took great indignation, and confpired against the king. Shakespeare's Antony and Cleopatra.

Let the air be excluded; that understand the body, and confpire with the spirits of the body to destroy it. Bacon.

There is man a natural possibility to destroy the world; that, is to confine to know no man. Brown's Prog Eru. The press, the pulpit, and the stage. Conspire to confine and expose our age. Addison.

2. To agree together; as, all things conspir'd to make him happy. So moist and dry, when Phoebus shines, Confiring the grain to grow. Hog. Conspirer. n. s. [from conspira.] A conspirator; a plotter.

The act of conspiring, or agree in a plot and conspire. Take no care, who chases, who finds, and where conspirors are: Macbeth shall never vanquish'd be. Shak. Macbeth.

Conspiring Powers. [In mechanics.] All such an act in direction not opposite to one another. Harris.

Conspiration, n. s. [from conspira., Lat.] The act of defiling; defilement; pollution.

Conspicuous, adj. [comes stesibili, as it is csuppress'd.] 1. Lord high conspirable is an ancient officer of the crown. The function of the conspirable of England consisted in the care of the common peace of the land in deeds of arms, and in matters of war. To the court of the conspirable and marshal before the court of contracts, deeds of arms without the realm, and combusts and filostrics of arms within it. The first conspirable of England was created by the Conqueror, and the office continued hereditary till the thirteenth of Henry VIII. when it was laid aside, as being too powerful as to become troublesome to the king. From these mighty magnificates descended the inferior conspi-ables of hundreds and franchises; two of whom were ordained, in the thirtieth of Edward I. to be chosen in every hundred, for the confederation of the peace, and view of armur. These are now called high conspirable; because continuance of time, and increase both of people and offences, have occasioned others in every town of inferior authority, called petty conspirable. Besides these, we have conspirables denominated from particular places, as, conspirable of the Tower, of Dover Castle, of the Castle of Cararone: but these are properly castellans, or governments of castles.

Cowell, Chambers. When I saw hither, I was hard high conspirable. And duke of Buckingham; now poor Edward Bohun. Shakespeare.

The knave conspirable had set me in the block, I' th' common blocks, for a witch. Shakespeare's Merry Wives of Windsor.

The conspirators a tender man, and an enemy to faction, went to observe what they did. Clarendon.

1. To over-run the Conspireable. [perhaps from conspirable, Fr. the settled, firm, and stated account.] To speak more than what a man knows himself to be worth; a low phrase. Conspireable, n. s. [from conspirable.] The office of a conspirable. This keepersh is annexed to the conspiability of the castle, and that granted out in lease. Carew's Survey of Cornwall.

Conspircacy, n. s. [conspiration, Lat.] 1. Immutability; perpetuity; unalterable continuance. The bills of God himself no man will ever dare to be of a different constitution from the former, in respect of the one's conspire, and the mutability of the other. Heister.

2. Conspicuous, unvaried state. Inconspicuous, that conspirable in such a variety, such a multiplicity, should be the true mark of chance. Ray on the Creation.

3. Resolution; firmness; steadiness; unshaken determination. In a small life, amidst the widest loss, Triumphs conspirable has feat her loss. In vain the curses ring, the tempests beat. Prior.

4. Laughter affection; continuance of love, or friendship. Conspiring is such a familiarity and firmness of friendship, as overlooks and puzzles by lesser failings of kindness, and yet still retains the same habitual goodwill to a friend. South.

5. Certitude; veracity; reality. But all the story of the night told ever, More wondrous thing Fanny's image, And grows to something of great conspirable, But, however, strange and admirable. Shakespeare.

Conspicuous, adj. [conspire, Lat.] 1. Firm; fixed; not fluid. If you take highly rectified spirit of wine, and depositon distill'd water, and mix them, you may turn these two fluid liquors into a conspiable body. Boyle's History of Fire-spots.

2. Unvaried; unchanged; immutable; durable. The world's a scene of change, and to be Conspireable, in nature were inconsistent. Cowell.
middle of their whirlpools, and these constitute one another into great fold globes.

2. To fluff up, or drop by filling up the passages.

It is not probable that any aliments should have the quality of literally constituting or flattening up the capillary vessels.

Arabian on Aliments.

3. To make MN, or make coffin.

Omitting honey, which is laxative, and the powder of some indigestions, in this, rather constitutes and binds, than purge and loose the belly.

Brown's Vulgar Errors.

Constitution. n.s. [from constitute.] 1. The act of constituting; enacting; depoting; establishing; producing.

2. State of being; particular texture of parts; natural qualities.

This is more beneficial than any other constitution.

Berkeley.

This light being trajected through the parallel prisms, if it suffered any change by the refraction of one, it lost that impression by the contrary refraction of the other, and, so, being restored to its primitive constitution, became of the same condition as at first.

Newton's Opticks.

3. Corporeal frame.

Amongst many bad effects of this oily constitution, there is one advantage: such as arrive to age, are not subject to vertigo of fibres.

Arabian on Aliments.

4. Temper of body, with respect to health or disease.

If such men happen, by their native constitutions, to fall ill in the least, either they mind it not at all, having no leisure to be sick, or they use it like a dog.

Temple.

Beauty is nothing else but a just accord and harmony of the members, animated by a healthful constitution.

Dryden.

5. Temper of mind.

Demosthenes, according to the constitution of a dull head, thinks no better way to please him-selv than by inspecting every thing in his way. Sully.

Some dear friend dead! else nothing in the world Could turn so much to the constitution.

Of any conquest, Mortimer, merchant of Venice.

He defended himself with undaunted courage, and left passion than was expected from his constitution.

Clarendon.

6. Established form of government; system of laws and customs.

The Norman conquering all by might,
Mixing our customs, and the form of right,
With foreign constitutions he had brought.

Daniel.

7. Particular law; established usage; establishment; institution.

We lawfully may observe the positive constitutions of our own churches.

Hooker.

Constitutions, properly speaking in the sense of the civil law, is that law which is made and ordained by some king or emperor; yet the canons, by adding the word forced to it, make it to signify the frame as an ecclesiastical canon.

Ayliff.

Constitutional. adj. [from constitution.

1. Bred in the constitution; radical.

It is not probable any religious winds will be communicated with the small-pox by inoculation.

Sharp's Surgery.

2. Confident with the civil constitution; legal.

Constitution. adj. [from constitution.

1. That which constitutes any thing what it is; elemental; essential; productive.

Although it be placed among the non-natural, that is, such as, neither naturally constitutive nor merely destructive, do preserve or destroy.

The elements and constitution parts of a chemist's tick, being the elements of himself, and the conquerors of them.

Decay of Piety.

2. Having the power to enact or establish.

1. To compel; to force to some action.

Thy fight, which should Make our eyes flow with joy.

Constrain them weep.

Shakespeare's Cymbeline.

Namus factus, is England's pain above;
The rest befled'st, but we constrain'd the town.

Drayton.

2. To hinder by force; to refrain.

My fire in my eyes constrain the winds,
Can with a breath a storm, a sullen rage appease;

They fear his whistle, and forfake the seas.

Dryden.

3. To necessitate.

The fear upon your honour, therefore, he Does play as constrained blustering,

Nothing before'd.

Shakespeare. Antony and Cleopatra.
CONSTRUCTION, n. f. [construct.; from Construct.].

1. To build; to form; to compile; to constitute.

2. To form by the mind; as, he constituted a new system.

CONSTRUCTION, n. f. [construct.; from Construct.].

1. The act of building, or piling up in a regular method.

2. The form of building; structure; formation.

There is no art
To shew the mind's ingenuity in the face. Shot.

The ways were marked, and several layers of flat stones and flint: the construction was a little various, according to the nature of the fable or the materials which the builders employed.

3. [In grammar.] The putting of words, duly chosen, together in such a manner as is proper to convey a complete sense.

Clarke's Latin Grammar.

Some particles constantly, and others in certain constructions, have the sense of a whole sentence contained in the words.

The act of arranging terms in the proper order, by diftangling transpositions; the act of interpreting; explanation.

This label, which containing
Is to feme in March, that I can Make no collection of it, let him flew.
His skill in the construction. Stakhis Cynthius.

5. The sense; the meaning; interpretation.

In which sense we judge
The apostle's words to have been written, we do no require them to yield, that is, any other construction more found.

He that would live at ease, should always put the construction on buds and convolutions of the Concise on the Sphace.

Religion, in its own nature, produces good will towards men, and puts the mitred construction upon every accident that befallen them. Spotswood.

It cannot, therefore, unto reasonable constructions from figure, or favour of figularity, that we have examined this point. Brown's Poly. Errors.

7. The manner, of describing a figure or problem in geometry.

CONSTRUCTION, n. f. [construct.; from Construct.].

1. To range words in their natural order; to diftangle transposition.

I'll trust mine eyes, with mock humility.

Love-learned letters to her eyes to read.

Which her deep wit, that true heart's thought can spoil.

Will soon conceive, and learn to construe well.

Speake.

Construe the times to their necessities,
And thou shalt say, indeed, it is the time,
And not the king, that doth thy injuries.

Shakespeare's Henry IV.

2. To interpret; to explain; to shew the meaning.

I must crave that I be not to understand or construed, as if any thing, by virtue thereof, could be done without the aid and assistance of God's most blessed spirits.

Haller.

Virgil is so very figurative, that he requires (I may almost say) a grammar apt to construe him.

Dryden.

Thus we are put to construe and paraphrase our own words, to free ourselves either from the ignorance of a science, or to indulge in a genius.

Steele.

When the word is construed into its idea, the double meaning vanishes. Addis. on Ancient Medes.

To CONSTRUPTE. o. a. [construct.; from Construct.]. To violate; to debauch; to defile.

CONSTRUPITION. n. f. [from Construct.]. Violation; defilement.

CONSUBSTANTIAL. adj. [consubstantial.]

1. Having the same essence or subsistence.

The Lord our God is one God: in which indivisibility, notwithstanding we adore the Father, as being altogether of himself, we glorify that confubstantiality which in the Son we believe and magnify that co-essential Spirit, externally proceeding from both, which is the Holy Ghost.

Haller.

2. Being of the same kind or nature.

It contains a body consubstantial with our bodies; a body of the same kind, both nature and measure, and that, it had land.

Haller.

In their conceits the human nature of Christ was not consubstantial to ours, but of another kind.

Bunyan.

CONSUBSTANTIALLY. n. f. [from consubstantial.]

1. Existence of more than one, in the same subsistence.

The eternity of the Son's generation, and his co-equality and consubstantiality with the Father, when he came down from heaven.

Hammond on Fundamentals.

2. Participation of the same nature.

To CONSUBSTANTIATE. o. a. [con and substantia.]. To unite in one common subsistence or nature.

CONSUBSTANTIATION. n. f. [from consubstantial.]

The union of the body of our blessed Saviour with the sacramental element, according to the Lutheran.

1. In the point of confubstantiation, toward the latter end of his life, he changed his mind. Anthony.

2. An officer commissioned in foreign parts to judge between the merchants of his nation, and protect their commerce.

CONSUBLITER. n. f. [confalute, confube.].

1. Relating to the consular.

The consular power had only the ornament, without the force, of the royal authority. Spalletti.

2. CONSULAR, n. f. [consulaturi, Latin.]

The office of consul.

His name and consulates were erased out of all public registers and inscriptions. Addison on Italy.

CONSUSSION, n. f. [from consul.]

The office of consul.

The patricians should do very ill to let the consulship be destroyed. Ben Jonson's Catiline.

The lovely boy, with his conspicuous face, Shall Pollux's consulship and triumph grace. Dryden.

To CONSULT. o. n. [confalute, Latin.]

To take counsel together; to deliberate in council: it has counsel'd, in the person admitted to consultation.

Every man,
After the hideous storm that follow'd was,
A thing insipid; and, not consulting broke it into a general prophesy, that this tempest,
Defiling the garment of this peace, abridg'd
The fudden breach on't. Shakespeare Henry VIII.

A female-house, wherein their hundred and twenty men fat consulting always for the state. Mass. vi. 15.

Counsel not out the foolish for any work.

Counsel, excellent. Dryden.

He can for his bosom friends, with whom he is most confidentially conversed, and though the papers to them, the contents whereof he could not conceiv.'e.

Cahrenheit.

To CONSULT. o. n.

1. To ask advice of: as, he consulted his friends; to consult an author.

He asked advice of his friends... Henry.
CON

He fail, and rose the firt; the council broke;
And all their grave eftsufi difflod in smoke.
Dryden's Tales.

3. A council; a number of persons attenmented in deliberation.

The meetings are the fource of all our public merit, to confer of the former labours.
Bacchus.
A confult of cogens befow
Was call'd, to rig him out a brea.
Swift.

CONSULTATION. n.f. [from consult.]
1. The act of confulting; secret deliberation.

The chief priests held a consultation with the elders and scribes.
Mark, xvi. 4.

2. A number of persons confulted together;
a council.

A consultation was called, wherein he advised a salvation.
Wisdom of Job.

3. [In law] Consultatio is a writ, whereby a cause, being formerly removed by prohibition from the ecclesiastical court, or court chrifian, to the king's court, is returned thither again: for the judges of the king's court, if, upon comparing the libel with the fuggestion of the party, they do find the fuggestion falls, or not putting in their question, and therefore the cause to be wrongs call'd from the court chrifian; then, upon this consultation or deliberation, decree is to be returned again.
Cowell.

CONSULTER. n.f. [from consult.] One that confults, or asks counsel or intelligence.

There shall not be found among you a charmer, or a confuter with familiar spirits, or a soothsayer.
Deut. xviii. 11.

CONSULTABLE. adj. [from consult.] Suceptible of deftruction; poiffible to be waited, fpent, or defrayed.

A defter does truly agree in this common quality affcribed unto both, of being incombustible, and not furnable by fire; but it doth contray so much fuliginous matter from the earthy parts of the oil, though it was tried with some of the pure oil, that in a very few days it did choke and extinguish the flame.
Wilkins's Mathematical Magic.

Our growing rich or poor depends only on, which is greater or lefs, our importation or exportation of commodities.

To CONSUME. v. a. [consume. Latin.]
To waft; to fpend; to deftray.
Where two raging fires meet together,
They do confume the thing that feeds their fury.

Thus in affult agit the confumere the day,
Nor quits her deep retirement. Thomson's Spring.

To CONSUME. v. n. To waft away;
to be exhausted.
These violent delights have violent ends,
And in their triumph die; like fire and powder,
Which, as they ilight, confume. Shak. Tem. and Jul.
CONSUMER. n. f. [from consume.] One that spends, waftes, or deftrays any thing.
Money may be confidered as in the hands of the confumer, or of the merchant who buys the commodities, when meant to export.
Lect.

To CONSUMMATE. v. a. [conmijmer.,
Fr. compofiter, Lat.] To complete; to perfect; to finifh; to end. Acently accented on the fyllable.
Shakespeare's King John.

There flall we confummate our fpoonful rites.
Shakespeare.
The person was cunning enough to begin the deceit in the weaker, and the weaker incapable to confummate the fraud in the strength.
Brown's Velgor Errors.
He had a mind to confummate the happenings of the day.
Tadger.

CONSUMMATE. adj. [from the verb.]
Complete; perfect; finifh: omnibus numeris absolutis.
I do but day till your marriage be confummate.
Shakespeare.

Earth, in her rich attire
Confummate, Shakespeare.
Adlion. his Paraphr.
Gratian, among his maxims for raising a man to the most confummate greatness, advises to perform extraordinary actions; and to secure a good hair of trade.
Addison's Spectator.
If a man of perfedt and confummate virtue falls into a misfortune, it raises our pity, but not our cenure.
Addison's Spectator.

CONSUMMATION. n. f. [from consummate.]
1. Completion; perfection; end.
That just and regular process, which it must be supposed to take from its original to its confumma-
tion.
Addison's Spectator.
2. The end of the present fystem of things;
the end of the world.
From the first beginning of the world unto the last confummate thereof, it neither hath been, nor can be, otherwife.
Huet.
3. Death; end of life.
Ghost; old, fad, foreboding thee!
Nothing ill come near thee.
Quite confummate have,
Unremov'd be thy grace.
Shak. Conununio.

CONSUMPTION. n. f. [confumption. Lat.]
1. The act of confumming; waft; destruction.
In commodities, the value rises as its quantity is less and vent greater; which depends upon its being preferred in its confumtion.
Locke.

The rate of wafting or perishing.
Eins and Vefuvius have fent forth flames for this two or three thousand years, yet the mountains themselves have not suffered any confiderable diminution or confumption; but are, at this day, the higheft mountains in thofe countries. Weath.

3. [In physic.] A waft of mucular drainage, which is frequently attended with a heat, a fever, and is divided by phy-cians into feveral kinds, according to the variety of its cafes.
Quincky.

Confumption fow.
In ffwid bones of man. Shak. Timon.
The ftapage of women's confumption, if not looked to, fets them into a confumption, dropsy, or other difeafe.
Harvey.
The effential and distinguishing character of a confummate confumption, is a wafting of the body by a reason of an ulcerated face of the lungs, attended with a cough, a discharge of purulent matter, and a hellfire fever.
Blackmore.

CONSUMPTIVE. adj. [from consume.]
1. Deftructive; wafting; exafting; having the quality of confumming.
A long confumption war is more likely to break this grand alliance than difable France.
Addison on the War.

2. Difeafed with a confumption.
Nothing can be fo strong as inflaming the breath of confumptive lungs.
Harvey on Confumption.
The leaft, confumptive wench, with coughs decay'd,
Is call'd a pretty, tall, and fteadier maid.
Dryden.
By an exceilent regimen a confumptive patient may hold out for years.
Arbuthnot on Diet.

CONSUMPTIVENESS. n. f. [from consummate.] A tendency to a confumption

CONSUM'TILE. adj. [consumilis. Lat.]
That is fever'd or fiftched together.
Dift.

TO CONTABULATE. v. a. [contabclo.
Latin.] To floor with boards.

CONTABULATION. n. f. [contabulatio.
Latin.] A joining of boards together;
a boarding a floor.

CONTACT. n. f. [contactus. Latin.]
Touch; close union; juncture of one body to another.

The Platonists hold, that the spirit of the lower doth pafs into the spirits of the person livetl, which caufeth the defire of the lower body, whereon upon thefequency that appetite of contact and cjunction.
Bacon's Natural History.

When the light fell fo obliquely on the air, in which the flices was between them, as to be all reflected, it foemed in that place of contact to be wholly transmitted.
Newton's Opticks.
The air, by its immediate contact, may confume
the blood which flows along the air-bladders.
Arbuthnot on Dir.

CON'TACTION. n. f. [contraditus. Latin.]
The act of touching; a joining one body to another.

That delerious it may be at some distance, and defunctive without contact, is demonstrated, which is no high improbability.
Brown's Velgor Errors.

CONTAGION. n. f. [contagio. Latin.]
The emission from body to body by which difeases are communicated.
If we two be one, and thou play fales,
I do defign the poison of thy fles.
Being trumpuanted by thy confumation.
Shakespeare's Comedy of Errors.

In infection and contagion from body to body, as the plague and the like, the infection is received many times by the body patiftve; but yet by the strength and good difpofition thereof, repulfed.
Bacon.

2. Infection; propagation of minced, or feafe.

Nor will the goodeft of intection excuse the candal and contagion of example. King Charles.

Down fell they,
And the dire hift rew'd, and the dire forme

3. Pelifence; venomous emanations.

Willy be out of joy his whole body doth.
To dare the vile contagion of the night?
Shakespeare's Julius Cazare.

CONTAGIOUS. adj. [from contagio. Lat.]
Infections; caught by approach; poi-fonous; peiifential.

That is the jotes,
That drag the tragic melancholy night
From their milty jaws
Breathe foul, contagious darkness in the air.

We doon from her contagious care,
Grieve for her forrow, groyne for her defpair.
Prior.

CONTAGIOUSNESS. n. f. [from contagio-our.] The quality of being contagious.

7. TO CONTAIN. v. a. [continuo. Lat.]

1. To hold as a vefel.

There are many other things which Jesu did,
the which if they should be written every one,
I fuppofe that even the world itelf could not contain the books that should be written. John, xxi. 25.

Greatly inftrudt: I full hence depart.
Greatly in peace of thought, and have my fill
Of knowledge what this vefsel can contain. Milton.

What thy fiores bring forth, and your
Abundance, many, many is the felf.It Milto.

2. To comprehend; to comprife.

What feem'd fair in all the world, feem'd now
Mean, or in her fumm'd up, in her contain'd.
Milton.
The earth, though in comparison with heaven so small, nor gilt’ring, may of solid good contain More pleasant than the sun, that burneth thence.

3. To comprise, as a writing.
Wherefore also it is contained in the scripture.

4. To refrain; to withhold; to keep within bounds.
All men should be contained in duty ever after, without the terror of warlike forces.

To CONTAIN. n. [from contain.]
1. To live in continence.
I felt the ardour of my passion increase, till I could no longer contain.

2. To contain, to contain within the cavity of the collar, amounted to eleven grains.

3. To CONTAMINATE. v. a. [contaminating, Lat.] To defile; to pollute; to corrupt by base mixture.
Shall we now Contaminate our fingers with base brikes?

4. To CONTAMINATE. v. a. [contaminating, Lat.] To defile; to pollute; to corrupt by base mixture.
Contaminate our fingers with base brikes?

5. CONTAMINATED. adj. [from contaminant.]
Contaminated; polluted. Diz.

6. CONTAMINATE. v. a. [contaminating, Latin.] To defile; to scorn; to flight; to介紹; to neglect; to defy.
Yet better thus, and known to be contaminated.

7. CONTAMINATION. n. s. [from contaminant.]
Pollution; defilement.

8. CONTAMINATED. adj. [from contaminant.]
Violated; polluted. Diz.

9. CONTAMINATION. n. s. [from contaminant.]
That which contaminates a man.

10. CONTAMINATE. v. a. [contaminating, Latin.] To defile; to scorn; toflight; to介绍; to neglect; to defy.
Yet better thus, and known to be contaminated.

11. CONTAMINATED. adj. [from contaminant.]
That which contaminates a man.

12. CONTAMINATION. n. s. [from contaminant.]
That degree of any quality.
There is nearly an equal contamination of the warmth of our bodies to that of the hottest part of the atmosphere.

To CONTEMPERATE. v. a. [from contemper.] To diminish any quality by something contrary; to moderate; to temper.
The mighty Nile and Niger do not only moisten and contemperate the air, but refresh and humectate the earth.

1. The art of diminishing any quality by admixture of the contrary; the art of moderating or tempering.
The use of air, without which there is no continuation in life, is not nutrition, but the contemperation of corpuscles in the heart.

2. Proportionate mixture; proportion.
There is not greater variety in men’s faces, and in the contemperations of their natural humours, than there is in their phantasms.

3. Contemplation; meditation; to consider.
There is not much difficulty in confusing the mind to contemplate what we have a great desire to know.

4. To CONTEMPLE. v. a. [contemplating. Latin.] To bind to; to use; to think; to meditate.
It is impossible to make the ideas of yesterday, to-day, and to-morrow, to be the same; or bring ages past and future together, and make them conquer.

5. CONTEMPORARY. n. s. One who lives at the same time with another.
All this in blooming youth you have achieve’d; Nor are your fields and gardens griev’d.

6. To CONTEMPORIZE. v. a. [contemporizing, Latin.] To make contemporary; to place in the same age.
The indifferency of their existence, contempered into our actions, admits a further consideration.

7. CONTEMPLATION. n. s. [from contemper.]
1. Meditation; audacious thought on any subject; continued attention.
How now? what serious contemplation are you in?

2. Holy meditation; a holy exercise of the soul, employed in attention to sacred things.
I have breathed a secret vow
To live in prayer and contemplation.

3. The faculty of studying the power of action.
There are two functions, contemplation and practice, according to that general division of objects; four, of which we employ our actions.

8. CONTEMPLATIVE. adj. [from contemper.]
1. Given to thought or study; audacious; thoughtful.
First and contemplative in their looks,

2. Employed in study; dedicated to contemplation.
I am no countryman, nor versed in state affairs; my life hath rather been contemplative than active.

3. Having the power of thought or meditation.

To CONTEMPT. v. s. [from contemper.]
So many kinds of creatures might be exerciz’d the contemplative faculty of man.

1. To contemperately employ in study; an enquirer after knowledge; a student.
In the Persian tongue the word magus imports as much as a contemplator of divine and heavenly things.

2. To CONTEMPLATOR. n. s. [Latin.]
One employed in study; an enquirer after knowledge; a student.
The Platonick contemplators reject both those descriptions, founded upon parts and colours.

3. CONTEMPORARY. adj. [contemporizing. French.]
1. Living in the same age; contemporaneous.
Albert Durer was contemporary to Lucas.

2. Born at the same time.
A grove born with himself he sees.

3. Exiling at the same point of time.
It is impossible to make the ideas of yesterday, to-day, and to-morrow, to be the same; or bring ages past and future together, and make them conquer.

CONTEMPORARIES. n. s. [contemporizing. Latin.]
To make contemporary; to place in the same age.
The indifferency of their existence, contempered into our actions, admits a further consideration.

Brown’s Vulgar Errors.

CONTEMPLATION. n. s. [from contemper.]
1. The act of defiling others; flight regard; scorn.
It was neither in contempt nor pride that I did not bow.

2. The state of being defiled; abasing.
Ezekiel.

3. The state of being defiled; vilification.
The place was like to come unto contempt.

4. CONTEMPLATION. n. s. [from contemper.]
1. Worthy of contempt; deserving scorn.
No man truly knows himself, but he grows daily more contemptible in his own eyes.

2. Defiled; scorned; neglected.
There is not to be contemperably a plant or animal, that does not confound the most enlarged understanding.

3. Contemperate; consecrate.
Rorer’s Hymns.
CON

3. Scornful; apt to despise; contemptuous.

This is no proper use.

He who would make trade of her love, 'tis very shameful to torment her; for the man hath a contemptuous father.

Shakespeare.

Contemptuosity, n. f. [from contemptible.
The state of being contemptible; the state of being despised; meanness; vilence; base.

A contemptible person.

Hence a person of a contemptible character, a person who has a contemptible opinion of him.

Shakespeare.

Contemplative, adj. [from contemplative.

Contemplative is a word not	used; apt to meditate; apt to	meditate on the duties of a person.

The state of being contemplative.

Shakespeare.

Contemplatively, adv. [from contemplative.

Meanly; in a manner deserving by

Shakespeare.

Contemn, v. n. [from contempt.

The word, as used in this passage, means to	contemn; to regard as contemptible; to look upon as contemptible.

Shakespeare.

The state of being contemned; the state of being despised; meanness; vilence; base.

A person of a contemptible character.

Shakespeare.

Contemnous, adj. [from contemptuous.

Contemnous is a word not	used; contemptuous.

A contemptuous person.

Shakespeare.

The state of being contemned; the state of being despised; meanness; vilence; base.

A person of a contemptible character.

Shakespeare.

Contemned, v. a. [from contemned.

Contemned is a word not	used; to contemn; to regard as contemptible; to look upon as contemptible.

Shakespeare.

The state of being contemned; the state of being despised; meanness; vilence; base.

A person of a contemptible character.

Shakespeare.

Contemnedness, n. f. [from contemned.

Contemnedness is a word not	used; the state of being contemned; the state of being despised; mean-
ness; vilence; base.

A person of a contemptible character.

Shakespeare.

3. [From contemned, contemned.

That which is	contemned, or included, in any thing.

Though my heart's not true firm love dothbear.

Nothing of that shall from mine eyes appear.

Shakespeare.

Scarcely anything can be determined of the particular contents of any single mass of orbs by mere inspection.

Weigh'd.

Experiments are made on the blood of healthy animals; and in a weak habit, serum might afford	other contents.

Arbuthnot.

4. The power of containing; extent; capacity.

This island had then fifteen hundred strong	flings, of great contents; such as were included.

It were good to know the geographical contents, figures, and situation of all the lands of a kingdom,
according to natural bounds.

Burnet's Bill of Mortality.

5. That which is comprised in a writing.

In this sense the plural is only in use.

I have a letter from her,

Of such contents as you will wonder at.

Shakespeare.

I shall prove their writings not counterfeits,

I shall give the contents of the state of this

Doubt.

Bacon.

The shield was not long after incumbered with a new ruff, and is the same, a cut of which has	been engraved and exhibited, to the great contain-tion of the learned.

Arbuthnot and Pope.

Contented, participial adj. [from content.

Contented; at quiet; not reppining;

not demanding more; easy; tho't not plenarily happy.

Barbadoes, in hope by sufficiency to obtain another kingdom, seemd contented with the answer.

Knolles's History.

Dream not of others' losses.

Contented that thus far has reveal'd,

Not of earth only, but of highest heav'n.

Milton's Paradise Lost.

If he can deceive some nobler foe approach, to him he calls,

And begs his fate, and then contented fall.

Dibdin.

To distant lands Vertumnus never roves,

Like you contented with his native groves.

Pope.

Contentedness, n. f. [from contented.

State of satisfaction in any lot.

Angling was, after tedious study, a calmer of unquiet thoughts, a doubler of passions, a pro-contentedness.

Walton's Angler.

Contentious, n. f. [contentious, Latin.

Strife; debate; content; quarrel; mutual opposition.

Can we with manners aff what was the difference?

Safety, I think; was a contentious in publick.

Did Shakespeare.

Avoid foolish questions and genealogies, and t Contentions and fitings.

Tit. iii. 9.

Can they keep themselves in a perpetual contention with each other, take their respite, and their God, and not endure a short combat with a final custom?'

Dean of Pisto.

The ancients made contentious the principle that	reigned in the chaos at first; and then love;

the one to express the divisions, and the other the	union of all parties in the middle and common bond.

Burnet's History of the Earth.

2. Emulation;
2. Emulation; endeavour to excel.

3. Egregious; zeal; ardour; vehemence of endeavour.

Your own earnestness and contention to sketch what you are about, will continually suggest to you new articles.

This is an end, which at first view appears worthy our utmost contention to obtain.

Contentious. adj. from content. Quarrelsome; given to debate; perverse; full of altercation.

The thought is much that this contention carries.

Invades us to the skin. Shakespeare's King Lear.

There are certain contenious humours that are never to be pleased.

Best made them idle, idleness made them curious, and curiosity contentious.

Decay of Piety.

Contentious Jarredination. [in law.] A court which has a power to judge and determining difficulties between contending parties. The lord chief justices, and judges, have a contentious jurisdiction.

The lords of the treasury, and the commissioners of the customs, have none, being merely judges of accounts and transactions. Chamber.

Contentiously. adv. [from contentious.] Perversely; quarrelsome.

We shall not contentiously adjourn, or only to justify our own, but to applaud and confirm our mature assertions.

Contentiousness. n.f. [from contentious.] Proneness to content; perverseness; turbulence; quarrellomeness.

Do not contentiously, and cruelty, and study of revenge, falls foul of recollection.

Bentley's Remarks.

Contentless. adj. [from content.] Discontented; dissatisfied; uneasy.

Blest states, contentless.

Have a distracted and most wretched being.

Such a man's contentment must be wrought by stratagem: the usual method of fact is not for them.

Contentment, without external honour, is humility; without the pleasure of eating, temperance.

Some place the bliss in solitude, some to each.

But now no face divines contentments,

'Tis all blank sadness, or continual travel.

Pope's Essay.

2. Gratification:

At Paris the prince spent one whole day, to give his mind some contentment in viewing of a famous city.

Conterminous. adj. [conterminous. Latin.] Bordering upon; touching at the boundaries.

This conformed to many of them, as were conterminous to the colouers and garnisons, to the Roman army.

Contrarumous. adj. [contrafrari. Latin.] Of the same country.

To Contest. v. t. [contester, French, probably from contrafrari. Latin.] To
5. Continuity; uninterrupted course.

An event ought to be made before the same just before, but when conditions were produced, left the continuance of the course should be divided; or, in other terms, there should be a discontinuance of the cause.

Agrippa's Parergon.

CONTINUOUS, adj. [continuity, Latin.]

1. Chaste; admirable in lawful pleasures.

Life had been as constant, as chaste, as true,
As I am now unhappy. Shakespeare's Winter's Tale

2. Refrained; moderate; temperate.

I pray you, have you constant forbearance; till the speed of his rage go slower. Shakespeare's King Lear

3. Continuous; connected.

The north-west part of Asia, if not constant with the west side of America, yet certainly is the sea disjoined by sea of all that coast of Asia. Berkeley on Languages.

4. Opposing; restraining.

My desire
All counters impartial would o'erbear,
That did oppose my will. Shakespeare

CONTINUITY, n. f. [continuity, Latin.]

1. Land not disjoined by the sea from other lands.

Whether this portion of the world were rent In the rude ocean from its fortunate birth; Or of this part, it was sole design'd To be the sacred refuge of mankind. Wordsworth

2. That which contains any thing. This house is perhaps only in Shakespeare,
Not o'ercast, my joy.

Heart, once be stronger than thy content;
Crack thy frail cage. Shak. Antony and Cleopatra

Close pent-up guilt;

Rise your constant thoughts, my King, King Lear.

To CONTINUE, v. n. [continuance, Lat.]

To touch; to reach; to happen. Drist

CONTINGENCY, n. f. [from continuous.]

The quality of being fortuitous; accidental possibility.

Their credulities attuned unto any prognosticks,
Which, considering the contingency in events, are only in the presence of God. Brown's Folly, Ecce.

For once, O heav'n! unfold thy enigmatic book;

If not thy firm, immutable decree,

At least, it is that great contingency,

Such as confounds with wills originally free. Dryden

Aristotle says, we are not to build certain rules upon the contingency of human actions. South

CONTINGENT, adj. [contingency, Latin.]

Falling out by chance; accidental; not determinable by any certain rule.

Hazard naturally implies in it, first, something future; secondly, something contingent. South.

I first informed myself in all material circumstances of it, in more places than one, that there might be nothing casual or contingent in any one of those circumstances. Woodward

CONTINGENT, n. f.

1. A thing in the hands of chance.

By contingent we are to understand these things which come to pass without any human foresight. Grew's Cosmogony.

His understanding could almost pierce into future contingents, his conjectures improving even to prophecy.

South

2. A proportion that falls to any person upon a division: thus, in time of war, each prince of Germany is to furnish his contingent of men, money, and munition.

CONTINGENTLY, adv. [from contingent.] Accidentally; without any settled rule.

It is digged out of the earth continually, and is differently, as the prunes and apricots. Woodward's Natural History.

CONTINGENTNESS, n. f. [from contingent.]

1. Incessant; proceeding without interruption; succeasive without any space of time between. Continual is used of time, and is a continious place.

He is that of a merly, a heart, a continual watch. Proverbs, xxvi.

Other care perhaps
May have deviated from continual watch.

Our great forbearance.

All blank felons, or continual tearers. Proctor

2. [In law.] A continual claim is made from time to time, within every year and day, to land or other thing, which, in some respect, we cannot attain with out danger. For example, if I be defiled of land, into which, though I have right into it, I dare not enter for fear of beating; it behooveth me to hold on my right of entry to the benefit opportunity of me and mine heir, by approaching as near as it can, as once every year as long as I live; and so I save the right of entry to my heir.

Cowell

3. It is sometimes used for perpetual.

CONTINUALLY, adv. [from continual.

1. Without pause; without interruption.

The drawing of boths into the inner part of a house, where fire is continually kept, hath been tried with grapes. Burton

2. Without ceasing.

Why do not all animals continually increase in bigresses, during the whole space of their lives?

Bentley's Sermons

CONTINUANCE, n. f. [from continuous.

1. SuceSSION uninterrupted.

The brute immediately regards his own perpetuation, or the continuance of his species. Addison's Spectator

2. Permanence in one face.

Continuance of evil both in body increase evil. Sling

A chamber where a great fire is kept, though the fire be at one leaf, yet with the continuance continually hath the whole fire. Sidney

These Rhenish cafuists speak peace to the continuance of men, by suggesting something which shall satisfy their minds, notwithstanding a known, avowed continuance in first. South

3. Abode in a place.

4. Duration; lastingness.

You either fear his humour, or my negligence, that you call in question the continuance of his love. Shakespeare's Twelfth Night

Their duty depends on one face, the one was of no greater continuance than the other. Hayward

That pleasure is not of greater continuance, which arises from the prejudice or malice of its hearers. Addison's Spectator

5. Perseverance.

To them who, by patient continuance in well-doing, seek for glory, and honours, and immortality, eternal life. Romans, ii. 7.

6. Fermentation of time.

In thy book all my members were written, which in continuance were fashioned. Psalm, cxlix. 16.

7. Resistance to separation of parts; continuity.

Wool, tow, cotton, and raw flax, have, besides the desire of continuance in regard of the tendency of their tare, a greenness of moisture. Bacon

CONTINUE, v. a.

1. Immediately united.

The age of him and in, even as though our very flesh and bones should be made continue with his. Hooker

2. Uninterrupted; unbroken.

A most incomparable man, breath'd, as it were, To an untrickable and continuance man. Shakespeare's Timon

A clear body broken to small pieces produce white; and become, most black; and this continuance and undivided, as we see in deep water, and thick glasses. Potts

CONTINUOUSLY, adv. [from continuous.]

With continuance; without interruption.

The water ascends gently, and by intermissions; but it falls continually, and with force. White

CONTINUATION, n. f. [from continuance.]

Protraction, or succession uninterrupted.

These things must needs be the works of Providence, for the continuance of the species, and upholding the world. Ray

The Roman poet, but the second part of the iij; a continuance of the same story. Dryden

CONTINUATIVE, n. f. [from continuance.]

An expression noting permanence or duration.

To these may be added continuatives in, Rome remains to this day; which includes at least two propositions, eis. Rome was, and Rome was. Watten's Legate

CONTINUATOR, n. f. [from continuance.]

He that continues or keeps up the series or succession.

It seems improper to Providence to ordain a way of production which should destroy the producer, or the life of the continuance of the species by the destruction of the continuator. Brown's Vulgar Err

To CONTINUE, v. n. [continuance, Fr. continu, Latin.]

1. To remain in the same state, or place.

The multitude continue with me now three days, and have nothing to eat. Matthew, xii. 34.

If you continue, build up here a growing empire. Milton

Happy, but far so happy 'tis confer'd.

To long to continue.

If six days and nights continue making.

Milton

2. To last; to be durable.

Thy kingdom shall not continue. 1 Samuel, xii. 14.

For here have we no continuing city, but we seek one to come. Hebrews, xii. 13.

They imagine that an animal of the longest duration should live in a continued motion, without that rest whereby all others continue.

Brown's Vulgar Errours

3. To persevere.

If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed. John, viii. 31.

Down rush'd the rain

Impetuous, and continual till the earth No more was seen. Milton

To CONTINUE, v. a.

1. To protract, or hold without interruption.

O continue thy loving kindness unto them. Psalm, xxiii. 60.

You know how to make your joy and happiness by only continuing such a life as you have been long accustomed to lead. Pott.

2. To unite without a chain, or intervening subsistence.

The use of the novel is to continue the incident unto the mother, and by the vehicle thereof to convey its aliment and subsistence. Brown's Vulgar Errours CONTRADICTIBLE. adj. [from contrat.] Capable of contraction.

Contrasts, borders, densities, and contraries, are capable of being inferred by the admission of air, and to subside at the expulsion of it.

ABORTIVE, CONTRARY, CONTRASTIBLE, CONTRASTIBILITY, n. f. [from contrat.] The quality of differing.

DILT. HAVING THE POWER OF CONTRACTION OR OF STORING ITSELF.

The arteries are elastic tubes, enclosed with a contractile force, by which they squeeze and drive the blood full forward.

ABORTIVE ON AMOUNTS.

CONTRACTION, n. f. [contraction, Lat.]

1. The act of contracting or shortening.
2. The act of shrivelling or shrivelling.
3. Oil of vitriol will throw the stomach into involuntary contractions.

ABORTIVE ON AMOUNTS.

CONTRATION, n. f. [contraction, Lat.]

1. The state of being contracted, or drawn into a narrow compass.
2. The state of any thing as being or becoming contracted.
3. A thing which is contracted.

ORD. CONTRACTION, n. f. [from contrat.] One of the parties to a contract or bargain.

Let the measure of your affirmation or denial be the understanding of your contrariness; for he that delivers the buyer or the seller by speaking what is true, in a sense not understood by the other, is a thief.

Taylor's Rule of Living Holy.

All matches, friendships, and vocables, are dangerous and inconvenient, where the contraries are not equal.

ELFRANGE.

TO CONTRADICT. v. a. [contradico, Lat.] One of the parties to a contract or bargain.

1. To oppose verbally; to assert the contrary to what has been asserted.
2. It is not lawful to contradict a point of history which is known to all the world, as to make Hannibal and Seipio contemporaries with Alexander.

DILIT.

TO BE CONTRARY TO; TO REPUGN TO; TO OPPOSE.

1. No truth can contradict any truth. - Hooker.

If you will marry, make your loves mine. - Shakespeare; The Tempest.

TO CONTRADICTION. n. f. [from contrat.] One that contradicts; one that opposes; an opposer.

1. If you contradict appear herein, the fault will very much be yours.

2. If a man is a contrarist, his fores are a husband.

SILVCI: Plot's Fatal Error.

CONTRADICTORY. n. f. [from contrat.]
3. Inconsistency with itself; incongruity in words or thoughts. Can be made of itself death! That were stronger contradiction than God himself! Imposible is held; an argument of weakness, not of power. Milton’s Par. Lost.

The Apostle’s advice to be angry and in not, was a contradiction in their philosophy. Smith's German.

If truth be once perceived, we do thereby receive whatever is said in contradiction to it. "Great Censor." Locke.

4. Contrariety, in thought or effect. All contradictions grow in these minds, which neither absolutely frown the nature of virtue, nor freely sink into the sea of vanity. Plutarch. Every human must be made without contradiction unto any positive law in nature. Hooker.

CONTRADICTIOUS. adj. [contra-did.]

1. Filled with contradictions: inconsistent. The rage of decency, of government, or justice, will not allow to differ in one place what is not in another, to party-colored and contrasstantial, that one would think the species of men altered according to their climates. Coll. and Con. 2. Gave too much for a cavil. 3. Opposite to; inconsistent with. Where we are, unusually, and the expectation immoral, or contradictory to the attributes of God, it appears we must never undertake. Coleridge.

CONTRADICTION. n. s. [from contrariety.]

1. An indication of opinion, which destroys that to be done which is the main scope of a disease points out. Fr. 2. I can scarce give the birth the simple idea of the distemper, and the first notion of disease, from the complications of the first, or the last, to the second, or the whole. French. 3. In perspective, an out-wall built about the main wall of a city. Chamber.

CONTRARIETY. n. s. [from contrariety.]

CONTRARY. adj. [contrariety, from French.]

1. Opposite to; contradictory; not simply different, nor alike, but repugnant to one another. Empire. 2. Divers medicines of greater quantity move more, and in smaller urine, and, so, counteract, some in greater quantity move urine, and in smaller fluid. They every thing that acts upon the fluids, must, as the same time, act upon the solids, and contrariety. Smith’s History of Aliments.

2. Oppositely; contrary. The matter of faith is constant; the matter, contrariety of actions daily changeable. Hooker. This request was never before made by any other lords; but, contrariwise, they were humble heirs to give the benefit and protect them to avoid the laws. Davies on England.

CONTRARYWISE. adj. [contra-riety, from French.]

1. Opposite to; contradictory; not simply different, or not alike, but repugnant to one another. Empire. 2. Divers medicines of greater quantity move more, and in smaller urine, and, so, counteract, some in greater quantity move urine, and in smaller fluid. They every thing that acts upon the fluids, must, as the same time, act upon the solids, and contrariety. Smith’s History of Aliments.

2. Oppositely; contrary. The matter of faith is constant; the matter, contrariety of actions daily changeable. Hooker. This request was never before made by any other lords; but, contrariwise, they were humble heirs to give the benefit and protect them to avoid the laws. Davies on England.

CONTRARY, adj. [contrariety, Latin.]

1. Opposite to; contradictory; not simply different, or not alike, but repugnant to one another. Empire. 2. Divers medicines of greater quantity move more, and in smaller urine, and, so, counteract, some in greater quantity move urine, and in smaller fluid. They every thing that acts upon the fluids, must, as the same time, act upon the solids, and contrariety. Smith’s History of Aliments.
If Charity did not lend its name to swell in the gap, and to employ or divert their humours, they must of necessity be spent in contrivances to the laws of the land. Swift.

Contrariness, n. f. [contra and verruca, Latin.] A party or intrigue; a plot to defraud. Dib.

Contrivance, n. f. [from contrive.] 1. The act of promoting some design or increase to some common flock. 2. CONTRIV' Alberta. u. a. [contrives, Latin.] To fadden; to make forroull; to make melancholy. Not used.

Aristocrates and darkness are but privy, and therefore have little or no activity, somewhat they are. Bacon. Nat. Hist.

Contrivant, n. f. [from contrive.] The act of making folly; the state of being made sad; sorrow, heaviness of heart; faintness; forrowfulness; gloominess; grief; maim; mournfulness; trouble; discontent; melancholy. Not used. Sense and antiquity, which are such as are of factious, were thought to intoxicate the brain, and to dispose men to devotion; which they may do by a kind of factious and contrivances of the spirits, and partly also by hearing and exciting the Bacon's Natural History.

Contrive, adj. [contrivus, Latin.] 1. Brought; much worn. 2. Worn with sorrow; haraflagd with the feeple of guilt; pensitent. In the books of divines, contrive is sorrowful for sin, from the love of God and desire of pleasing him; and attrition is sorrowful for sin, from the fear of punishment.

Richard's body has interred now; And on it he bestowed more contrive tears, Than from it issued forced drops of blood. Shakspere's Henry V. With tears Watching the ground, and with our fighs the air Frequenting, fent from hearts contrive, in sign Of sorrow safeguarded, and humiliation met. Milton.

The contrive finer is reforted to paxon, and, through faith in Christ, our repentance is entitled to salvation.

Contriv'n, n. f. [from contrive.] Contrivance; repentence. Dib.

Contriv'n, n. f. [from contrive.] The act of grinding, or rubbing to powder. Some of those coloured powders, which painters use, may have their colours a little changed, by being very elaborately and finely ground; where for not which can justly pretend for these changes, besides the breaking of their parts into its parts by that contriv'n. Newton's Optics.

2. Penitence; sorrow for sin: in the strict sense, the sorrow which arises from the sense of guilt, and pleases God, or is distingushed from attrition, or imperfect repentance produced by dread of hell. What is sorrow and contriv'n for sin? A man being grieved with the confidence of sin, not only that we have thereby incurred such dangers, but also that we have hereafter gained and provoked to good God. Hammond's Practical Catechism.

Fruits of more pleasing favour, from thy feed. Sion with contrive in his heart, they feed, with his own hand maning, all the trees Of Paradise could have produced. Milto. Par. Lost. Your falling, contriv'and mortification, when the church and state appoints, and that especially in times of greater riot and luxury. Sprant's Germant.

My future days shall be one whole contriv' A cruel ill build to hell, every way, Where every day an hundred aged men shall all hold up their wither'd hands to heaven. Dryden.

Contriv'able, adj. [from contrive.] Possible to be planned by the mind; possible to be invented and adjusted. It will hence appear how a perpetual motion may seem easily contrivable. Winkin's Delineator.

3 F

CON
Confidence, n. f. [from contrive.]

1. The act of contriving; exegulation; the thing contrived.

There is no work impossible to these contrivances, but these may be as much acted by this art as can be fancied by imagination.

W. W. "A Mathematical Magician" Instructed, you'll explore Divine contrivance, and a God adore.

Blackmore's Creation.

2. Scheme; plan; disposition of parts or causes.

Our bodies are made according to the most curious artifices, and orderly contrivance. Glanville's Staffs.

3. A conceit; a plot; an artifice.

Have not mankind's contrivances well, to try your love, and make you doubt of his end? Dryden.

There might be a slight, a contrivance in the matter; to draw him into some secret ambush. Atterbury.

To CONTRIVE, v. n. [conterwor. Fr.]

1. To plan out; to excogitate.

One that spent in the contriving art, and walked to it. "Shakespeare's King Lear." What more likely to contrive this admirable image of the universe than infinite wisdom? Tilton.

Our poet has always some beautiful design, which he first conveys, and then contrives the means which will naturally conduct him to his end. Dryden.

2. To wear away. Out of use.

Three ages, such as mortal men contrive. Fairy Queen.

Plea ye, we may contrive this afternoon, and quaff carouse to our mistresses' health. Shak.

To CONTRIVE v. n. To form or design; to plan; to scheme; to collect.

Is it enough,

That making habits, and a borrowed name,

Contrive to hide my plentitude of shame? Priam.

CONTRIVEMENT, n. f. [from contrive.]

Invention. Did.

CONTRIVER, n. f. [from contrive.]

An inventor; one that plans a design; a schemer.

1. The mistress of your charms,

The chief contriver of your loves,

Was never called to bear my part. Shak. Macbeth.

Eupho, what the fraud our contriver was. Dryden.

Plain loyalty, not built on hope,

I leave to your contriver, D. G. Love.

None loves his country and better,

Yet none was ever their debtor. Swift.

Scenes of blood and delatation, I had painted as the common effects of those destructive machines; whereas, if he had some evil genius, enemy to mankind, must have been the first contriver.

Swift's Gulliver's Travels.

CONTROL, n. f. [controls, that is, contre roles, French.]

1. A regifter or account kept by another officer, that each may be examined by the other.

Check; restraint.

Let partial spirits fill all abroad complain,

Think themselves injur'd that they cannot reign;

And own no liberty, but where they may,

Without control, upon their fellows prey. Wallop.

He shall feel a force upon himself from within, and from the control of his own principles, to engage him to do worse.

Swift.

If the finner shall win to complete a wickedness over his conscience, that all these considerations shall fail to strike no terror into his mind, lay no restraint upon his lusts, no control upon his appetites, he is certainly too strong for the means of grace.

Swift's Sermons.

Speaks, what Phoebus has infl'd thy soul

For common good, and speak without control.

Drayden's Homer.

3. Power; authority; superintendence.

Thebeasts, the fishes, and the winged fowl,

Are their male subjects, and at their controls. Shakespeare.

To CONTROL v. n. [from the noun.]

1. To keep under check by a counter-reckoning.

2. To govern; to restrain; to subject.

Authority to confer, to control, to punish, as far as with excommunication, whatsoever they think worthy. Hooker.

Give me a word of honour for mine age;

But not a feature to control the world. Shakespeare's Titus Andronicus.

Who shall control me for my works? Eccles. v. 3.

1. I find my spirit struggling in my soul;

But stronger passion does its point control. Shakespeare's Aurenguzzal.

With this he did a herd of goats control,

Which by the way he met, andilly stole;

Glad like a country swain he pip'd and sung,

And playing drove his jolly troop along. Dryden.

O! dearer Andrew, says the humble droll,

Herefore may I obey, and thou control. Prior.

3. To overpower; to control; to be control, and all his adversary.

As for the time while he was in the Tower, and the manner of his brother's death, and his own escape, I knew not more things that a very few could control Shakespeare's Henry VI.

CONTROLABLE, adj. [from controul.]

Subject to control; subject to command; subject to be over-ruled.

Pallion is the drunkness of the mind, and therefore, in its present workings, not controllable by him. Shak.

CONTROLER, n. f. [from control.]

One that has the power of governing or restraining; a superintendence.

He does not calm his contemplative spirits,

Nor could he be an arrogant controller. Shakespeare's Henry VI.

The great controller of our state

Deign'd to be man, and live in low estate. Dryden.

CONTROLERSHIP, n. f. [from controller.]

The office of a controller.

CONTROLMENT, n. f. [from control.]

1. The power or act of superintending or restraining.

2. The state of being restrained; restraint.

Their war was peace, and peace with one another, without controul王者 of Ireland.

3. Opposition; confutation.

Were it reason that we should suffer the fame to pass without controul, in that current meaning, whereby every where it prevailed. Hooker.

4. Refinement; holiness.

Here have we war for war, and blood for blood, Controulment for controulment. Shakespeare. King John.

CONTROLLER, n. f. [from controul.]

Relating to disputes; disputations.

It happens in controversies diversely as it does in the allitating of towns, where, if the ground be but firm whereon the batteries are erected, there is no farther enquire why, it belongs to, it so affords a fit rite for the present purpose. Locke.

CONTROVERSY, n. f. [controversia, Lat.]

1. Disputate; debate; agitation of contrary opinions; a dispute is commonly oral, and a controversy in writing.

How caneth it to pass that we are so rent with mutual contention, and that the church is so much troubled? If men had been willing to learn, all these controversies might have died the very day they were first brought forth. Hooker.

Without controversy great is the mystery of godliness. 1 Tim. c. 11.

Wild controversy then, which long hath fleece,

Into the reeds from ruin'd cloisters leaped. Dryden.

This left no room for controversy about the title, nor for encroachment on the right of others. Locke.

2. A quarrel in law.

If there be a controversy between men, and they come unto judgment, that the judges may judge them, then shall they justify the righteous and condemn the wicked. Deuteronomy, xxxv. 1.

A quarrel.

The Lord hath a controversy with the nations. Jer. xxv. 31.

4. Opposition; enmity. This is an unatural senfe.

The torrent roar'd, and we did buffet it

With lusty finesse; throwing it aside,

And temming it with hearts of controversy. Shakespeare's Julius Cæsar.

To CONTROVERT, v. a. [controversos, Lat.]

To debate; to ventilate in opposite books; to dispute any thing in writing.

If any person shall think fit to controversy them, he may do it very safely for me. Clapton's Philosophical Principles.

Hooker seems to use the word controversy, if it be not an errom.

Perussion ought to be fully fitted in men's hearts, that in litigations and controversial causes of such quality, the will of God is to have them to do whatever the frequency of judicial and final decision shall determine. Hooker.

CONTROVERSIBLE, adj. [from controvert.]

Disputable; that may be the cause of controversy.

Disputing on matters of doubtful, and many controversy truths, we cannot without arrogancy interest a credulity, or implore any farther averse than the probability of our reasons and variety of our experiments. Byron's Fulgar Errors.

CONTROVERTIST, n. f. [from controversa.]

Disputant; a man versed or engaged in literary wars or disputes.

Who can think himself considerabell as not to dread this mighty man of demonstration, this prince of controversials, this great lord and positiof of first principles? Tilton.

CONTUMACIOUS, adj. [contumax, Latin.]

Obstinate; perverse; stubborn; inflexible.

He is in law said to be a contumacious person, who, on his appearance afterwards, departs the court without leave. Shaftesbury's Parergon.

There is another very efficacious mode for subduing the most obstinate contumacious fner, and bringing him into the obedience of the faith of Christ. Hammond's Fundamentals.}

CONTUMACY, n. f. [from contumacia, Latin.]

1. Obstinate; perverseness; stubbornness; inflexibility.

Such acts

Of contumacy will provoke the highest

To make death in us live. Milton's Paradise Lost.

2. [In law.] A wilful contempt and disobedience to any lawful summons or judicial order. Shaftesbury's Parergon.

These certificates do only, in the generality, condemn the party's contumaci and disobedience. Shaftesbury's Parergon.
CONTEMPTUOUS, adj. [contemnuosus, Lat.]
1. Reproachful; rude; sarcastic; contemptuous.
- With scoffs and scorning, and contemnuous taunts, in open market-places, where they met. To be a public spectacle. Shakespeare, Henry VI.
- In all the quarrels and tumults at Rome, though the people frequently proceeded to rude contemnuos language, yet no blood was ever drawn in any popular commotions, till the time of the Gracchi. Swift.
2. Indulged to utter reproach or practise insolence; brutal; rude.
- There is always some contemnuos personage, who indeed are not chargeable with that circumstance of ill employing their wit for they use none of it. Government of the Tongue.
- Giving out holy virgins to the flain of contemnuos, chiefly, madbrain'd war. Addison.
3. Productive of reproach; shameful; ignominious.
- As it is in the highest degree injurious to them, so it is contemnuos to him. Decoy of Errors.

CONTEMLUOUSLY, adv. [from contemnuosus.] Reproachfully; contemptuously; rudely.
- The people are not wont to take so great offense, that they show their resentment, to the face of those who are contemnuosly trampled upon. Fie!, here's that you, being supreme magistrates, thus contemnuosly should rule the peace. Shakespeare's Timon.

CONTEMPTUOUSNESS, n. f. [from contemnuosus.] Rudeness; reproach.
CONTEMPLY. n. f. [contemnuosus, Lat.] Rudeness; contemnuosness; bitterness of language; reproach.
- The principle of this government be in the hands of a few of the wealthiest, and those, providing for continuance thereof, must make the punishment of contemnuos and wrong, offered unto any of the common sort, sharp and grievous, that so the evil may be prevented. Holier.
- 'Th' oppressor's wrong, the proud man's contemnuos,
The pang of 'Shaj'd, the law's delay. Shakespeare's Hamlet.

It was undervalued and depopled with some bitterness, and contemnuosly. Clarendon.
- Why should a man be troubled at the contemnuosness of that, whose judgment devolves not to be valued? Tillopin.

Contemnuously attend that guilty title, which claims exemption from taxes, and arrogates to its wearer the prerogative of brutes.
- Additional's Guardian.

To CONTRIVE, v. a. [contenwise, Lat.]
1. To beat together; to brine.
- Of their roots, herbs, and seeds, confounded together, and mingled with other earth, and well watered with warm water, there came forth herbs, nipple like the other. Bacon.
2. To brine the flesh without a breach of the continuity.
- The ligature contains the lips, in cutting them, so that they may be digested before they can escape. Wrenn.

CONVUSION, n. f. [from contenwise.]
1. The act of beating or bruising.
- The state of being beaten or bruised.
- Take a piece of glass, and reduce it to powder, it acquiring by contemnu a multitude of minute furrows, from a discontinuous, degenerates into a white body. Boyle & Cohans.
3. A bruise; a compression of the fibres, disfigured from a wound.
- That winter临, who in rage forgets
Aged cunning, and all bruise of time. Shakespeare's Henry VI.

The bones, in sharp colds, wax brittle; and all contemnuos, in hard weather, are more hard to cure. Bacon.

CONVULS. n. f. [from conuus.]
1. Contumely; reproach, according to a reasonable contemnuos. Clarendon.

CONVULSIBLE, adj. [contemnuos, Pr.]
1. Confident that he is agreeable to; according to. Not now in title, he began.
- He is so merciful, and mercifable, and with his word his word is contemnuos. Spenser's Faerie, Preface.
- That may be contemnuous.

To CONVOLVE, v. a. 1. To come together; to unite; to converse.
- The fire separates the spacious parts from the others, whereas they were blended in the concrete, and brings them into the receiver, where they converse with each other. Dryden.
- In that lighted men, whose eyes are too prone, the refraction being too great, the rays converge and converse in the eyes, before they come to the button. Campanius.
2. To assemble for any publick purpose.
- There are settled periods of their converning, or a liberty to the prince for convoking the legislature. Locke.

To CONVOLVE, v. a. 1. To call together; to assemble; to converse.
- No man was better pleased with the converning of this parliament than myself. King Charles.

For all the judges, and schismatical people would frequently, as well in the night as the day, convene themselves by the found of a bell. Clarendon.
- And now it's almighty father of the gods.
- Converns a conquest in the bliss abode. Lyric's Staples.
- To summon judicially.
- By the papal canon law, clarks, in criminal and civil causes, cannot be convened before any but an ecclesiastical and schismatical people would frequently, as well in the night as the day, convene themselves by the found of a bell. Clarendon.
- And now it's almighty father of the gods.
- Converns a conquest in the bliss abode. Lyric's Staples.

CONVINE, v. n. [convine, Lat.]
1. Fitnes; propriety.
- Convine is, when a thing or station is fitted to the circumstances, and the circumstances to it, that thereby it becomes a thing convenient. Dryden.

Convine in things not commanded of God, yet lawful, because permitted, the question in what light shall show us the convenieney which is above all others? Parker.

In things not commanded of God, yet lawful, because permitted, the question in what light shall show us the convenieney which is above all others? Parker.

Every man must want something for the convenieney of his life, for which he must be obliged to others. Clarendon's Sermons.

There is another convenieney in this method, during your waiting. Swift's Directions to the Papists.

CAUSE OF CAUSE; accommodation.
- It if have not found a convenieney, you may well be uncomfortable. William's Melis. Magik.

A man alters his mind as the work proceeds, and will have this or that convenieney more, of which he had not thought when he began. Dryden's Fables, Preface.

There was a pair of spectacles, a pocket pe-CONVERSABLENESS. n. s. [from conversable.] The quality of being a pleasing companion; fluency of talk.

CONVERSABLE, adv. [from conversable.] In a conversable manner; with the qualities of a pleasing communicative companion.

ACQUAINTED. adj. [conversant, French.] Acquainted with; having a knowledge of any thing acquired by familiarity and habitude; familiar; with in. The learning and skill which he had by being conversant in the world.

Let them make some towns near to the mountain's side, where they may dwell together with neighbours, and be conversant in the view of the world.

Those who are conversant in both the tongues, I leave to make their own judgment of it.

Dryden's Disobedience.

He uses the different dialects as one who had been conversant with them all.

Having intercourse with any; acquainted; familiar by cohabitation or fellowship; cohabiting: with among or with, All that Moses commanded, Joshua read before all the congregation of Israel, with the women, and the little ones, and the strangers that were conversant among them.

Jos. viii. 33. Never to be infected with delight.

Nor conversant with such ease and indifference.

Shakespeare's King John.

Old men who have loved young company, and been conversant continually with them, have been of long life.

Bacon.

This day by proof thou shalt behold, Thus, and all angels conversant on earth With man, or men's affairs, how I begin To verify that solemn message. Milton's Par. Reg.

To such a one, an orderly coffee-house gainer of the city is an arrant flaxman, and as much superfluous too, as a man conversant about Whitehall and the court is to an ordinary hopkeeper.

Locke.

Belonging to a convent; monnàchick. Those are called conventual priors, that have the chief ruling power over a monastery.

Steele's Persian.

A monk; a nun; one that lives in a convent.

I have read a sermon of a conversual, who laid it down, that Adam could not laugh before the birth of Adam's Freeholder.

Hart's Common Law.

To converse. u. n. [converse, Lat.] To tend to one point from different places.

Where the rays from all the points of any object meet again, after they have been made to converge by refraction or reflection, they will make a picture of the object upon a white body.

Newton's Opticks.

Enswamping rift
The lower fides, they all at once converge
High to the crown of heaven. Thomson's Autumn.

CONVINCENT. adj. [from converse.] Converging. J Tending to one point from different parts.

CONVERGING. Series. See Series.

CONVERSABLE. adj. [from conversate.] It is sometimes written conversable, but improperly; conversent, conversation, conversable.] Qualified for conversation; fit for company; well adapted to the reciprocal communication of thoughts; communicative.

That fire and delivery which makes the young flame more than a thing, tempered by years, makes a gay old age.

Addison.

CONVERSATION. n.f. [from conversate, Lat.] 1. Familiar discourse; chat; easy talk opposed to a formal conference.

She went to Ulysses's chamber, thinking to joy her thoughts with the sweet conversation of her father a Sidney.

What I mentioned some time ago in conversation, was not a new thought, but then flattered by accident or occasion. Swift.

2. A particular art of discoursing upon any subject; as, we had this long conversation on that question.

3. Commerce; intercourse; familiarity. The knowledge of men and manners, the tendency of habits, and conversation with the bull company.

Dryden.

I mean his conversation with noble life. Swift's Rivals III.

CONVERSATION. n. m. [from converto, Fr. converser, Lat.] 1. To cohabit with; to hold intercourse with; to be a companion to: followed by with.

By approving the sentiments of a person with whom he conversed, in such particulars as were just, he won him over from those points in which he was mistaken. Addison's Freethinker.

For him who longs loves To seek the distant hills, and build him a city With nature. Thomson's Summer.

2. To be acquainted with; to be familiar to action.

I will converse with iron-witted fools, And unexpressive boys; none are for me. That look into me with confident eyes. Swift's Vanity Fair.

Shakespeare's Richard III.

Men then come to be furnished with fewer or more simple ideas from without, according as the objects they converse with afford greater or less variety.

Locke.

3. To converse the thoughts reciprocally in talk.

Go therefore half this day, as friend with friend, Converser with Adam. Milton's Paradise Lost.

Much less can bird with bird, or fish with fish. So well converser. Milton's Paradise Lost.

4. To discourse familiarly upon any subject.

Yet before the evening.

We had conversed often on that subject, and he had communicated his thoughts of it so fully to me, that I had not the least remaining difficulty. Addison's Freeholder.

5. To have commerce with a different nation.

Being all by some of her sex, in how long a time a woman might be allowed to pray to the gods, after having conversed with a man? If it were a husband, boys, the next day; if a stranger, never. Cuvieron.

CoNVERSE. n. s. [from the verb. It is sometimes accentted on the first syllable, sometimes on the last. Pope has used both: the first is more analogical.] 1. Conversation; manner of discoursing in familiar life.

Having your conversation honest among the Gentiles. Peter.

5. Practical habits; knowledge by long acquaintance.

1st, down, out of long experience in business and much conversation in books, what I thought pertinent to this business. Bacon.

Experience and conversation with these bodies, a man may be enabled to give a near conjecture at the metallic ingredients of any metal. Woodward.

CONVERSATIVE. adj. [from converser.] Relating to publick life, and commerce with men; not contemplative.

Finding him little studious and contemplative, the choice endued him with conversation and qualities of youth. Watson.

76 CONVERSE. u. n. [converser, Fr. converser, Lat.] 1. To cohabit with; to hold intercourse with; to be a companion to: followed by with.

By approving the sentiments of a person with whom he conversed, in such particulars as were just, he won him over from those points in which he was mistaken. Addison's Freeholder.

For him who longs loves To seek the distant hills, and build him a city With nature. Thomson's Summer.

2. To be acquainted with; to be familiar to action.

I will converse with iron-witted fools, And unexpressive boys; none are for me. That look into me with confident eyes. Swift's Vanity Fair.

Shakespeare's Richard III.

Men then come to be furnished with fewer or more simple ideas from without, according as the objects they converse with afford greater or less variety.

Locke.

3. To converse the thoughts reciprocally in talk.

Go therefore half this day, as friend with friend, Converser with Adam. Milton's Paradise Lost.

Much less can bird with bird, or fish with fish. So well converser. Milton's Paradise Lost.

4. To discourse familiarly upon any subject.

Yet before the evening.

We had conversed often on that subject, and he had communicated his thoughts of it so fully to me, that I had not the least remaining difficulty. Addison's Freeholder.

5. To have commerce with a different nation.

Being all by some of her sex, in how long a time a woman might be allowed to pray to the gods, after having conversed with a man? If it were a husband, boys, the next day; if a stranger, never. Cuvieron.

CoNVERSE. n. s. [from the verb. It is sometimes accentted on the first syllable, sometimes on the last. Pope has used both: the first is more analogical.] 1. Conversation; manner of discoursing in familiar life.

Having your conversation honest among the Gentiles. Peter.

5. Practical habits; knowledge by long acquaintance.

1st, down, out of long experience in business and much conversation in books, what I thought pertinent to this business. Bacon.

Experience and conversation with these bodies, a man may be enabled to give a near conjecture at the metallic ingredients of any metal. Woodward.
CONVERGENTLY. adv. [from converge.] With change of order; in a contrary order; reciprocally.

CONVERSATION. n. s. [converso, Latin.] 1. Change from one state into another; transmutation.

Arithmetical conversion of water into ice, is the work of a few hours; and this of air may be tried in a month's space.

There are no such natural gradations, and conversions of one metal and mineral into another, in the earth, as many have fancied. Woodward's Natural History. The conversion of the aliments into fat, is not properly nutrition. Arbour on Aliments.

2. Change from reproduction to propagation, and back to a holy life.

3. Change from one religion to another. They passed through Phcenice and Samaria, declaring the conversion of the Gentiles. Acts vii. 4.

4. The interchange of terms in an argument; as, no virtue is vice; no evil is virtue;无 evil is virtue.

5. CONVERSION of Equations, in algebra, is the reducing of a fractional equation into an integral one.

CONVERSIVE. adj. [from converge.] Convertible; fociable.

To CONVERT. v. a. [converso, Latin.] 1. To change into another substance; to transmute.

If the whole atmosphere was converted into water, it would make no more than eleven yards water about the earth. Burrer.

2. To change from one religion to another. Augustine is converted by St. Ambrose's sermon, as he came to it on no such design of his own. Serenus.

3. To turn from a bad to a good life.

He which converteth the sinner from the error of his way, shall have a soul from death, and shall hide a multitude of sins. James, v. 10.

Then will I each transfiguration way, and sinners shall be converted unto thee. Psalm lii. 13.

4. To turn towards any point.

Crystal will calyse into electricity, and convert into light, as much as is in it. Gell.

5. To apply to any use; to appropriate.

The abundance of the sea shall be converted unto thee, the forces of the Gentiles shall come unto thee. Isaiah, lx. 5.

He acquired himself not like an honest man, for he converted the priests to his own use. Abbotin on Coins.

6. To change one proportion into another, so that what was the subject of the first becomes the subjective of the second. The papists cannot abide this proportion converted: all fin is a transfiguration of the law; but every transfiguration of the law is fin. The apostle therefore says, that all righteousness, say he, is fin; but every transfiguration of the law is unrighteousness, says Austin, upon the place. Haly. To CONVERT. v. n. To undergo a change; to be transmuted.

The love of wicked friends converts to fear; That fear to hate. Shakespeare's Richard II.

They rub out of it a red dish which conversis into womens, which they kill with spirits. Sandby's Travels.

CONV. v. s. [from conceal.] A person converted from one opinion or one practice to another. The Jefuits did persuade the conv. to lay aside the use of images. Stillingfleet's Defence of Difficulties in Rom. Idol.

When Plutarch prevailed, the conv. to Christianity of that School interpreted Holy Writ accordingly. Letters, v. 21.

Let us not imagine that the first conv. only of Chriftianity were concerned to defend their religion. Rogers.

CONVERT. v. s. [from convert.] One that makes convs.

They never was any perfons ungrateful, who was not also proud; nor, conversely, any one proud, who was not equally ungrateful. Smith's Sermons.

CONVERTIBLE. adj. [from convertible.] Reciprocally; with interchange of terms.

They never was any perfons ungrateful, who was not also proud; nor, conversely, any one proud, who was not equally ungrateful. Smith's Sermons.

A convert; one converted from another opinion. Not in use.

Since you are a gentle convert.

My sight shall hush and all this storm of war. Shakespeare's King John.

Nor would I be a convert to cold, any. Daven.

CONVEX. adj. [concurvus, Latin.] Riding in a circular form; opposite to concave. It is the duty of a painter, even in this also, to imitate the convex mirror, and to place nothing which glares at the border of his picture. Drayton's Dafne'spoyne.

An orb or ball round its own axis whilst Will not make the motion a distant blur. Whatever fault or flaw you on it place. Drogs and water from its convex face? Blackmore on Creation.

CONVEX. n. s. A convex body; a body swelling externally into a circular form.

A convex draws a long extended blaze; From coal to well burns through the spherical frame, And half heavy's convex glitters with the flame. Tickell.

CONVEX, particip. adj. [from convex.] Formed conv. or prominent in a circular form.

Dishoons are frightful; nor have they their slight convenis, which was embroidered and embroidered, and other conceited animals. Brown's Vagler Errors.

CONVEXELY. adv. [from convex.] In a convex form.

They be drawn conversely crooked in one place; yet the dolphin, that earish Arion, is conversely inverted, and hath its feet conversely. Brown's Vagler Errors.

CONVEXITY. n. s. [from convex.] Protruberance in a circular form.

Convex glasses supply the defect of plano- convex in the eye, and, by increasing the refraction, make the rays converge sooner, so as to converge distinctly at the bottom of the eye, if the glass have a due degree of convexity. Newton's Opticks.

If the eye were to pierce as to defory even wale and little objects a hundred leagues off, it would do as little fcrvice by being terminated by neighbouring hills and woods, or, in the largct and evenest plains, by the very convexity of the earth. Bentley.

CONVEXLY. adv. [from convex.] In a convex form.

Almost all, both blunt and sharp, are conversely conical; they are all along convex, not only perpendicular, but between both ends. Green's Mytholog.

CONVEXITY-concaue. Having the hollow on the inside corresponding to the external protruberance.

There are the plates, of thick convex-concave plates of glass which are everywhere of the same thicknesses. Newton.

To CONVEY. v. a. [conveyo, Latin.] 1. To carry; to transport from one place to another.

Let letters be given to me by the governors beyond the river, that they may convey me over till I come into Judea. Nebi ii. 7.

I will convey them by sea, in floats, unto the place that shall appoint me. Acts v. 9.

To hand from one to another.

A divine natural right could not be conveyed down, without any plain, natural, or divine rule concerning it. Locke.

To remove secretly.

There was one conveyed out of my house yesterday in this basket. Shak. Merry Wives of Windsor.

To bring anything, as an instrument of transmigration; to transport.

Since there appears not to be any ideas in the mind before the senses have possessed any, I confess that ideas in the understanding are conveyed with fraternation. Locke.

To transfer; to deliver to another.

The ear of Dicdonoro, before his breaking forth, was exhibited, conveyed secretly all his thoughts to foeces in fruit. Speaker.

Aden's property or private dominion could not convey any sovereignty or rule to his heirs, when not having a right to inherit all his father's possessions, could not thereby come to have any sovereignty over his brethren. Locke.

To impart, by means of something.

Man felt one another's heads with noise and sounds, but convey not thereby their thoughts.

That which will produce the ideas, though entered in by the usual organs, not being taken notice of, there follows no sensation. Locke.

Some single inseparable bodies must come from them to the eye, and thereby convey to the brain some motion which produces their ideas. Locke.

They give energy to our expressions, and convey our thoughts in more ardent and intense phrasing, than is either our own, A Minot's Spectator.

To impart; to introduce.

What colour'd light the heavens did grant, Did but convey unto our fearful minds A doubtful warrant of immediate death. Shakespeare's Comedy of Errors.

Others convey themselves into the mind by more feater than one. Locke.

8. To CONVIVELY, adv. [from convive.] In such a manner as to leave no room for doubt or dispute; so as to produce conviction.

This he did to particularly and convincingness, that those of the parliament were in great confusion.

The resurrection is so convincingly studied by such persons, with such circumstantial facts, that they who consider and weigh the testimony, at what distance ever they are placed, cannot entertain any more doubts of the resurrection than the execution of Jesus.

CONVIVENCE, n. s. [from convive.] The power of convincing.

To CONVIVE. v. n. [convive, Latin.] To entertain; to feast. A word, I believe, not elsewhere used.

First all you peers of Greece go to my heart.

There is no influence in what I say; and I do not, on that account, wish to be considered a poet, or anything else.
CONVOLVULUS, n. s. [convolvulus, Latin.] 1. The act of rolling anything up itself; the state of being rolled up itself. [Woodward.] 2. The state of rolling together in company. [Blackmore.]
Jelly of currants, or the jelly of any ripe fleshy fruit, is cooling, and very agreeable to the stomach. Arbuthnot on Diet.

To keep a just passion; to calm anger; to moderate zeal.

My lord Northumberland will soon be cooled. Shakespeare's Henry IV.

He will keep his jealousy to himself, and repine in private, because he will be apt to bear some ill effect it may produce in cooling your love to him. Addison's Spectator.

Had they thought they had been fighting only on other people's quarrels, perhaps it might have cooled their zeal. Swift.

To cool. v. n.
1. To grow less hot.
2. To grow less warm with regard to passion or inclination.

My humour shall not cool I will scarce Ford to deal with poison; I will poison him with yellow fumes. Shakespeare.

You never cool while you read Homer. Dryden. I'm in least till it be done; I will not give myself liberty to think, lest I should read Cooper's Old Bachelor.

To cool. n. [from cool.]
3. That which has the power of cooling the body.

Coolers are of two sorts first, those which produce the state of cold, which convulse as have their parts in less motion than those of the organs of feeling; and secondly, such as by particular vivacity, or grotinie of parts, give a greater motion to the animal fluids than they did before, whereby they cannot move so fast, and therefore will have less of that influence on which their heat depends. The former are fruits, all acid liquors, and common waters; and the latter are such as cucumbers, and all substances producing vivacity.

Quintus in dogs or cats, there appeared the same necessity for a cooler as in man. Harvey on Confinements.

Acid things were used only as coolers. Arbuthnot on Aliments.

A veifel in which any thing is made cool.

Your first wish being thus boiled, laid off into one or more coolers, or cool-bricks, in which leave the sulfeur, and let it run off fine.

Mariner's Husbandry.

By coolly, adv. [from cool.]
1. Without heat, or sharp cold.
She in the gold caverns, woodbine wove; And fresh beside with ever-spouting dreams, Sits coolly calm. Thomson's Summer.

2. With wise and cool motion.
Motives that address themselves coolly to our reason, are fittest to be employed upon reasonable creatures. Addison.

Coolness. n. f. [from cool.]
1. Gentle cold; a faint or mild degree of cold.

This difference consisteth not in the heat of coolers or spirits; for claret and other spices, naphtha, and petroleum, have exceeding their spirits, hotter or as great deal than oil, wax, or tallow, but still not so inflammable. The toad lovest flame and coolers. Bacon's Natural History.

Yonder is the barren of cold months laid up. Gives a fresh cothel to the royal cap. There ice, like crystal, firm and never lost, Tempers hot July with December's frost. Watier. The deep enjoy the coolness of the shades. Dryden's Virgil.

2. Want of affordance; disinclination.
They parted with such coolnes towards each other, as if they scarce hoped to meet again. Clarendon.

To cool. n. f. (coOL, French.)
1. Soothing to the observer's mouth. Phillis.

2. That matter which works out of the wheels of carriages. Bailey.

3. It is used in Scotland for the useless duct which falls from large coals. Common, or Comm. n. f. [scurvy, Fr. cumulus, Lat. a heap, Skinner.] A measure of corn containing four bushels. Bailey.

COOP. n. f. [coape, Dutch.]
1. A barrel; a vessel for the preservation of liquids.

2. A cage; a pen for animals, as poultry or sheep.
Cræcwis was slain the day the chickens refused to eat, out of their fear; and Claudius Pulcher was wont to rescue them, when he contemned the propitiatory augurations. Brown. There were a great many crammed cages together in a coop.

To coop. v. a. [from the noun.] To shut up in a narrow compass; to confine; to cage; to imprison: when it is used absolutely, it has often, perhaps always, the intensive particle up.

That pale, that white-faced there, Whole, foot, sprains back the ocean's rearing sides, And coop from other land, which borders. Shakespeare's King John.

The Englishmen did coop the lord Raven's being, that he stirred not; and likewise held in flesh farre, the drapery, of Bacon.

In the taking of a town the poor escape better than the rich; for the one is let go, and the other is plundered and coop'd up. L'Estrange.

Twice conquer'd and ways, now your fame is shown, Coop'd up a second time within your town! Who dare not issue forth in open fields.

Dryden's All for Love.

One world suffic'd not Alexander's mind; Coop'd up he seem'd, in earth and seas confin'd. Dryden's Fiercest.

Coop'd up in a narrow life, observing dreams. With flattering wisards. Dryden's Fiercest.

The Trojans, coop'd within their walls so long, Unbar their gates, and in it through.

Dryden's Fiercest.

The contempt of all other knowledge, as if it were nothing in comparison of law or physic, of astrology or chemistry, coops the understanding up within narrow bounds, and bends it from looking abroad into other provinces of the intellectual world.

Locke. They are coop'd in close by the laws of their countries, and the strict guards of those whose interest it is to keep them ignorant. Locke. What! coop whole armies in our walls again! Pope.

Coo'per t. n. f. (coap, French.) A motion in dancing.

Coo'per a. n. f. (coap,) One that makes coops or barrels.

Societies of artisans and tradesmen, belonging to some towns corporate, such as weavers and cooperers, by virtue of their charters, pretend to privileges and monopolies.

Coo'perage. n. f. [from cooper.] The price paid for cooper's work.

To coop'ERATE. v. n. [coap and age, Latin.]
1. To labour jointly with another to the same end; it has with before, and to before the end.

It puzzeleth and perplexeth the conceits of many, that perhaps they would otherwise cooperate with him; and makes a man walk almost alone to his own ends. Bacon.

By giving man a free will, he allows man that highest satisfaction and privilege of cooperating to his own self-fly.

COP. n. f. [to procure, Latin.]
1. To concur in producing the same effect. His menye will not forgive offenders; or his benignity cooperate its conversion.

Brown's Pilgrim Errors.

All these causes cooperating, maify arise, broken their motion. Chapel's Philosophical Principles.

The special acts and impromptus by which the Divine Spirit introduces this charge, and how far humanity cooperates with it, are subjects beyond our comprehension. Rogers.

Coo'pera'tion. n. f. [from cooperate.]
The act of contributing or concurring to the same end.

We might work any effect without and against one another, and this not helped by the cooperation of angels or spirits, but only by the unity, and harmony of nature. Bacon's Natural History.

Coo'pera'tive. adj. [from cooperate.]
Promoting the same end jointly.

Coo'pera'tor. n. f. [from cooperate.]
He that, by joint endeavours, promotes the same end with others.

Coo'pa'tion. n. f. [coopt, Latin.]
Adoption; assumption.

Coo'rdinate. adj. [from coordinate.]
Coordinate.

Coordinate, n. f. [from coordinate.]
The base of the same rank; not being subordinate. Thus shell-fish may be divided into two coordinate kinds, crustaceous and teffaceous; each of which is again divided into many species, subordinate to the kind, but coordinate to each other.

The word Analyst signifies the general and particular heads of a subject, with their mutual connections, both coordinate and subordinate, drawn out into one or more tables. Watt.

Coo'rdinately. adv. [from coordinate.]
In the same rank; in the same relation: without subordination.

Coo'rdinates. n. f. [from coordinate.]
The base of the same rank; of standing in the same relation to something higher; collateralists.

In this high court of parliament there is a rare coordination of power, a wholesale mixture between monarchy, aristocracy, and democracy. Hume's Treatise of Government.

When these pretty intrigues of a play are foil ordered, that they have no coherence with the characters; I must say that Dryden hasrudely stop'd that want of due connection; for coordination in a play is as dangerous and unnatural as in a state.

Dryden on Dramatic Poety.

Coo'rt. n. f. [mar-kati, Dut. caale, Fr.]
A small black water-fowl, lean often in fens and marshes.

A lakey, the haunt of coots, and of the fishing curmudgeon. Dryden's Fables.

COP. n. f. [cop, Dut. cop, Sax.] The head; the top of any thing; any thing rising to a head: as, a cop, vulgarly called, of a head, a cöp-cof, properly cop-cofe, a small cattle or house on a hill; a cob of cherry-stones, for cop, a pile of stones one laid upon another; a tuft on the head of birds.

Coo'pal. n. f. The Mexican term for a gum.

Coo'parcenary. n. f. [from coparcener.] Joint succession to any inheritance.

In defect to all the daughters in coparcenary, for want of sons, the elder house is allotted to the eldest daughter. Hume's History of Geneva Laws.
COP.

COPARCENER. n.f. [from copar- and -cener, Lnt.]

Coparceners are otherwise called partencers; and, in common law, are such as have equal portion in the inheritance of the ancestor. Cowell.

This great connect is broken and divided, and partition made between the five daughters in six of those portions, the coparceners severally executed the same jurisdictional royal, which the ear marshall and his sons had used in the whole province. Davison et I. Irm. 1.

COPARTNER, n.f. [as and partner.]

One that has a share in some common stock or affair; one equally concerned; a sharer; a partner. Milton has used it both with of and in.

Our faithful copartners,

Th' associates and copartners of our loss.

Milton's Paradise Lost.

Shall I to him make known
As yet my change, and give him to partake
Full happiness with me? Or rather not?
But keep the odds of knowledge in my power,
Without copartner? Milton's Paradise Lost.

Rather by them,
I gain'd what I have gain'd, and with them dwell
Copartner in these regions of the world.

COPARTNERSHIP, n.f. [from copartner.] The slate of bearing an equal part, possessing an equal share.
To cause the father Left only daughters, the daughters equally succeed to their father as in copart- nership.

COPATAN, adj. [from copa.] High raised; pointed.

Oh, fine villain! a half dozen, a velvet closest, a scarlet cloak, and a copatant hat.

Seddon's Tracing of the Scrooge. No.

COPAYVA, n.f. [it is sometimes written copai, copio, copaysa, copaya, copoaya, copayba.] A gun which discharges from a tree in Brazil. It is much used in disordiers of the uterine pangs.

COPE, n.f. [See Cop.]

1. Any thing with which the head is covered.

2. A satirical cloak, or vestment worn in facetious imitation.

3. Any thing which is spread over the head; as the conevve of the skies; any archway over a door.

All these things which are contained
With this godly cope, both mask and heand,
Their being here, and daily are increas'd. Spreuer.

Over all the dismal hiss
Of fiery darts in flaming vlyes flew,
And flying vaunted both with fire;
No, under four cope, together such a
Both battles main.

The felcer believer there is no man under the eyes of heaven, who is so knowing as his master.

Drayton.

To COPE. v.a. [from the noun.]

1. To cover, as with a cope.

A very large bridge, that is all made of wood, and spread over head. Add. in Italy.

2. To contend with; to oppose.

I will, by treasons's tooth bare gnaw'd, and corners bit.
Yet am I noble as the adversary
I come coped. Shakespeare's King Lear.

3. To reward; to give in return.

Land my friend
Have, by your wisdom, been this day acquainted
Of very penances; in lieu whereof,
Three thousand ducats, fire, the dowry
We freely cope your exquisite parts with.
Shak. Vol. I.

COPIES, pl. [copie, Latin.]

1. To contende; to struggle; to strive.
It has withib before the thing or person opposed.
In this sense it is a word of doubtful etymology. The conjecture of Janus derives it from kepen, to buy, or to come to the import of the same import; so that its copic signifies to interchange blows, or any thing else with another.

Let us train
March by your, till we may peruse the men
We should have cop'd withal. Shak. Henry IV. Part I. 1. 1. We are indebted

A thing, like death, to chide away this shame,
That cop'd with death itself, to escape from it. Shakespeare.

But Eve was alive,
This far her overmatch; who, self-deceiv'd
And rafflin, had no better weight
The strength he was to cop'd with, or his own.

They perfectly understood both the hares and the enemy they were to cop'd withal. L. Esdras.

On every plain,
Hath cop'd with hot, dire, the din of war. Phillips.

Their generals have not been able cop'd with the troops of Athens, which I have conducted.

The mind apply itself first to subject particulars, and things near a skin to what is already known; and then advance by steps in the more remote and knotty parts of knowledge by kindred, it will be able in this manner, to cop'd with great difficulties, and prevail over them with amazing and happy success.

Words in the Mind.

To encounter; to interjuggle kindness or sentiments.

Thou fresh piece
Of excellent witchcraft, who of force must know
The royal food thou cop'd with. Shak. Winter's Tale.

They are not as a true man,
As 'tis my conversation cop'd with a man.

Shakespeare's Hamlet.

To COPE. v.a. To embrace. Not in use.

I will make him tell the tale as new;
Where, how, how off, how long ago, and when,
He hath, and is again to cop'd your wife.

Shakespeare's Othello.

COPESMATE, n.f. [perhaps for comitate, a companion in drinking, or one that dwells under the same cope, for house.]

Companion of a friend. An old word.

No ever flall is but the fairest bright.
Till that the fox his copesmate he has hunt'd.
Hubbard's Tale.

COPER. n.f. [from copie.]

1. One that copies; a transcriber.

A coin is in no danger of having his characters altered by copies and transcribers. Addison on Color.

2. One that imitates; a plagiarist; an imitator.

Without invention a painter is but a copier, and a poet but a plagiarist of others. Dryden's Disputing.

Let the plain copy, on old authors,
Nor mean the task, each breathing but explore;
Like after line with painful patience pace;
This Roman graudeur, that Athenian grace Tivoli.

COPING, n.f. [from cope.]
The upper tires of masonry which covers the wall.

All these were of costly masons, even from the foundation until the coping.

Kings, v. 8.

The copings, the mouldings, or dentiles, make a noble show by their graceful projections.

COPPER, n.f. [coppe, Latin.]

1. Plentiful; abundant; exuberant; in great quantities.

Raffles, as in dance, the fitly trees, and spread
Their branches logh along with copper effuins.

Milton.

To COPPER. n.f. Full measure only bounds. Except, before the all-bounteous king, who show'st
With copious hand, rejoicing in their joy. Milton.

His alkaline secretion indicates the copious use of vinegar and acetic acid, that are the elixirs of alliments.

The tender heart in passions
And kindly pours its copious treasures forth.

Thompson's Spring.

2. Abounding in words or images; not barren; not confined; not concise.
Half, Son of God, Saviour of men, thy name
Shall be the copious matter of my song
Henceforth, and never shall my harp thy praise
Forget, nor from thy Father's praise decline. Milton.

COPIOUSLY, adv. [from copious.]

1. plentifully; abundantly; in great quantities.

2. At large; without brevity or conciseness; diffusely.

The several remaines have been copiously de described by abundance of travellers, and other writers, that it is very difficult to make any new discov eries on so beaten a subject. Addison.

COPIIOUSLY, n.f. [from copious.]

1. Plenty; abundance; great quantity; exuberance.

2. Diffusion; exuberance of style.
The Roman orator endeavoured to imitate the copiousness of Homer, and the Latin poet made it his business to reach the conciseness of Democritus.

COPIST, n.f. [from copy.]
A copier; a transcriber; an imitator.

COPLAND, n.f. A piece of ground in which the land terminates with an acute angle.

Dibdin.

COPPER. adj. [from cop.]
Riding to a top:
It was broad in its base, and rose coppered like a sugar-loaf.

Wilsonian's Surgery.

A gilded echinus being copperd and somewhat coped.

Woodward.

COPPER. n.f. [This word is variously spelt; as copel, cupel, cope, and coppe; but I cannot find its etymology.] An instrument used in chymistry, in the form of a dish, made of ashes, well wafed, to cleanse them from all their salt; or of bones thoroughly calcined. Its use is to try and purify gold and silver, which is done by mingling lead with the metal, and expelling it in the coppered a violent fire a long while. The impurities of the metal will then be carried off in droys, which is called the litharge of gold and silver. The refiners call the copper a telf.

Harriss.

COPPER. n.f. [copier, Dutch; copierna, Latin.] One of the six primitive metals.

Copper is the most ductile and malleable metal among gold and silvers. Of a mixture of copper and lapis calaminus is formed brass; a compound of copper and tin makes bell-metal; and copper and brass, melted in equal quantities, produces what the French call bronz, used for figures and statues.

Copper is heavier than iron or tin; but lighter than silver, lead, or gold.

Helen in Fifiotis.

Two vellats of fine copper, precious as gold.

The Times, Nov. 27.

COPPER. n.f. A veilved made of copper:
commonly used for a boiler larger than a moveable pot.

This boiled it in a copper to the half; then they poured it into a vessel. Bos. Nat. Hist.

COPPER-NOSE. n.f. [coppe and nase.] A red nose.
COPPER-PLATE. n. f. A plate on which pictures are engraved for the nearer impression, distinguished from a wooded cut.

COPPER-WORK. n. s. [copper and work.] A place where copper is worked or ma-

A little worm in ships.

A worm that fretteth garments.

A worm breeding in one's hand.

Cooper. adj. [from copper.] Continuing copper; made of copper.

COPPER, n. s. [copper, Fr. from copper, to cut or lap. It is often written coife.] Low woods cut at flatted times for fuel; a place over-run with brin-

A land, each side whereof was bounded both with high timber trees, and coppers of more humble growth. Sidneys.

Upon the edge of yonder coppies.

A flood, where you may have the fairest shoot. Stackpoles.

In coppies woods, if you leave faddles too thick, they run to bushes and briars, and have little clean underwood. Boss.
CORAL, n. f. [corallium, Latin.]
1. Red coral is a plant of so great hardiness and flary nature, while growing in the water, as it has after long exposure to the air. The vulgar opinion, that coral is soft while in the sea, proceeds from a soft and thin coat, of a cutaneous material, which, while it is growing, and which is taken off when it has been packed up for use. The whole coral plant grows to a foot or more in height, and is variously ramified. It is thickest at the stem, and its branches grow gradually smaller. It grows to stones, without a root, or without any way penetrating them; but as it is found to grow, and to take in its nourishment, in the manner of plants, and to produce flowers and fruits, or at least a matter analogous to seeds, it properly belongs to the vegetable kingdom.

Dryden's Mat. Mid. In the sea, upon the west coast of Sicily, much coral is found. It is a submarine plant; it hath no roots; it branches only when it is under water. It is soft, and grows very slowly, but when brought into the air, it becomes hard and shining red.

Bacon's Natural History. This gentleman, desirous to find the nature of corals, endeavored to subdue several hundred fathom into the sea, with express orders to take notice whether it was hard or soft in the place where it grew.

Boy's Virg. Errours. He hears the crackling sound of coral rocks, and sees the frothy source of subterranean floods.

Dryden's Virgil.

A turf was inclosed within the wall, of alabaster white, And crimson coral, for the queen of all, Who in Sylvan sports her chaste delight.

Dryden. Or where's the sense, direct or moral? Which is the better, or what is coral?

Prine. It is the piece of coral which children have about their necks, imagined to afford them in breathing teeth.

Her infant grandchild's coral great it grew: The bells the ginsile, and the whistle blew. Pope.

Coral-tree, n. f. [corallodendron, Lat.] It is a native of America, and produces very beautiful scarlet flowers; but never any seeds in the European gardens.

Coral-line, adj. [coralliforme, Lat.] Consisting of coral; approaching to coral.

At such time as the sea is agitated, it takes up into itself ceremetal matter of all kinds, and in particular the coraline matter, letting it fall again, as it becomes calm.

Wedderburn.

Coraline, n. f. [from the adjective.]
Coraline is a plant used in medicine; but much inferior to the coral in hardness, sometimes greenish, sometimes yellowish, often reddish, and frequently white.

In Falmouth there is a sort of sand, or rather coraline, under the water. Murray's Hebr. Coral-loid, adj. [coralloloidal, Lat.] Relating to coral; or resembling to coral.

Now that plants and ligneous bodies may indurate under water, without approach of air, we have experiment in coraline, with many conciliating considerations.

Brem erection.

The pendulous, columnar, corallized bodies, that are composed of plates fret lengthways of the body, and falling from the surface to the axis of it...

Woodward of Pigeon.

Coraline.

Coral, n. f. [corallium, French.] A lofty sparsely dance. It is harder to dance a coral well than a jig; do in conversation, even, easy, and agreeable, more than points of weight.

Temple.

Coral, n. f. [coral, Welsh; cardas, Latin; cords, Fr.] A rope; a firing composed of several strands or twine.

She let them down by a cord through the window.

Feb. 11. 57.

Cord, n. f. [cord, and make.]
One whole trade is to make ropes; a rope-maker.

Cord-wood, n. f. [cord and wood.] Wood piled up for fuel, to be sold by the cord.

Cord, n. a. [from the noun.] To bind with ropes; to fasten with cords; to close by a bandage.

Cordage, n. f. [from cord.] A quantity of cords; the ropes of a ship.

Our cargo from their shores, and cables, should be made.

Of any in that kind most fit for marine trade.

Drayton.

They fished their ships, and all at anchor with cables of iron chains, having nautical compass on board.

Raleigh.

Spain.
Spain furnished a fort of masts called farram, useful for cordon and other parts of shipping, Cardew, adj. [from cord.], Made of ropes.

This night: he meaneth, with a corded ladder, to climb celestial Silvia's chamber window.

Cordelier, n. f. A Franciscan friar: so named from the cord which serves him for a girdle.

And who to affit but a grave cordelier. Prior.

Cordial, n. f. [from cor, the heart, Latin.]

1. A medicine that increases the force of the heart, or quickens the circulation.

2. Any medicine that increases strength.

A cordial, properly speaking, is not always what increases the force of the heart; for, by increasing that, the animal may be weakened, as in inflammatory diseases. Whatever increases the natural or animal strength, the force of moving the fluids and muscles, is a cordial; these are such substances as bring the serum of the blood into the proper condition for circulation and nutrition, as broths made of animal substances, milk, milk from milk, or liver are endowed with a wholesome, but not pungent taste.

Arabian in Almack.

3. Any thing that comforts, gladdens, and exhilarates.

Then some cordials seek to appear The inward language of my wounded heart.

And then my body thall have shortly care:

But such sweet cordials put physicians art: Spenser.

Cordials of phys give me now,

For I too weak for purges grow. Cordely.

Your warrior offspring that uphold the crown, The fearless honour of your peaceful gown, Are the most pleasing object I can.

Charm to my sight, and cords to my mind. Dryden.

Cordial, adj.

1. Reviving; invigorating; restorative.

It is a thing I make, which hath the king,

Five times redeem'd from death: I do not know

What is more cordial. Shakespeare's Cymbeline.

He only took cordial waters, in which we infus'd

For our weak and purges grow. Cordely.

2. Sincere; hearty; proceeding from the heart; without hypocrisy.

Defences are infused among Christians, which see apt to obstruct or intercept the cordial superfluity of Christian life and renovation, where the foundation is daily laboured.

He, with looks of cordial love, Hung over her enamour'd. Milton.

Cordiality, n. f. [from cordial.]

1. Relation to the heart.

That the ancients had such respect of cordiality, or reference unto the heart, will much be doubted. Bacon.

2. Sincerity; freedom from hypocrisy.

Cordially, adv. [from cordial.]

Sincere, heartily; without hypocrisy.

Where a strong inveterate love of sin has made any doctrine or proposition wholly unsuitable to the heart, no argument, or demonstration, no use whatsoever, shall be able to bring the heart cordially to close with, and receive it. South's Strain.

Cordner, n. f. [cordenier, French.] A shoemaker. It is so used in divers families.

Cordon, n. f. [Fr.] In fortification, a row of fowls jutting out before the rampart and the basis of the parapet. Chambers.

Cordwain, n. f. [cordewain, leather, from Cordova in Spain.] Spanish leather.

Her fragile legs most bravely were embra'd

In golden buffal of cordwain leather. Fair Gisken.

Cordwainer, n. f. [uncertain whether from Cordewain, Spanish leather, or from cord, of which those were formerly made, and are now used in the Spanish Well Indies. Trewarian.] A shoemaker.

Cork, n. f. [cartex, Lat. kork; Dutch.

Hir, dyes, amm redactes, flinders.

Coritcum afrisitum fist dimonat.

Amphorae fumus belle institutae.

Confine Tullius. Hor.]

1. A glandiferous tree, in all respects like the larch, excepting the bark, which, in the cork tree, is thick, spongy, and soft. Millar.

The cork tree grows near the Pyrenean hills, and in several parts of Italy, and the store of New Spain.

2. The bark of the cork tree used for stoppers, or burnt into Spanish black. It is taken off without injury to the tree.

3. A piece of cork cut for the stopple of a bottle or barrel.

If a yeare take the cork out of thy mouth,

It may drink thy tongue, if it please you like it.

Be sure, my very sure, thry cork be good;

Then future ages shall of Pergamum tell,

That ymbre which brend'd and buttled ale forwell. King.

Nor flow, for one bad cork, his butler's pay. Pope.

Cork-pin, n. f. [a pin of the largest size.

When you put a clean pillow-case on your lady's pillow, be sure to.taken it thus with these corking-pins, that it may not fall off in the night. Swift's Directions to the Clap-Come Baird.

Corky, adj. [from cork.]

Consisting of cork; resembling cork.

Bird full his corky arms. Shakespeare.

Cormorant, n. f. [cormorant, Fr. from coro marinus, Latin.]

1. A bird that preys upon fish. It is nearly of the bigness of a capon, with a wary bill and broad feet, black on his body, but greenish about his wings. He is eminently greedy and rapacious.

Let fame, that all hunt after in their lives,

Lieve regild upon our broken bones.

When, spite of cormorant devouring time,

The eavour of this present breath may buy

That honour which shall base his skyee's keen edge. Shakespeare.

Those called birds of prey, as the eagle, hawk, puttecker, and cormorant. Peacham on Drawing.

Thence he flew, and on the tree of life

Sat a cormorant. Milton's Paradise Lost.

Not far from thence is seen a lake, the haunt

Of coots; and of the fishing cormorant. Dryd. Fab.

2. A gluton.

Corn, n. f. [copia, Sax. korn; Germ. It is found in all the Teutonick dialects; as, in an old Runick rhyme, Farming and haldafar corna.

Hall is the colde corna. Dryd. Fab.

1. The seeds which grow in ears, not in pods; such as are made into bread.

Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone. John xii. 24.

The people cry you mock'd them; and, of this,

When corn was given them gratis, ye again.

Shakespeare.

2. Grain.
2. Grain yet unripe, standing in the field upon its stalk.

All the little weeds that grow
In our fattening corn. Shakespeare's King Lear.

Leaping his men, he burnt the corn all thereabout,

Knolles's History of the Turks.

Still a murmur runs
Along the left inclining fields of corn.

3. Grain in the ear, yet unthreshed.

That shaft come to thy grave in a full age,
Like a shock of corn cometh in his season.

Shakespeare's Winter's Tale.

4. An excrecence on the feet, harsh, and painful; probably so called from its form, though by some supposed to be denominated from its cornaceous or horniy substance.

Ladies, that have your feet.

Unpleasd with corn, we have a boat with you.

Shakespeare.

5. As the earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord, and all nations shall see his glory. Isaiah, xxvi. 10.

To corn. v. n. [from the noun.]

1. To felt; to sprinkle with felt. The word is so used, as Skinner observes, by the old Saxons.

2. To granulate.

Corn-field. n. f. A field where corn is growing.

It was a lover and his life,
That o'er the green corn-field did pass.

Thus Lamb, renowned for cutting corns, and offering it from Roddell's forms. Swift.

Corn-field. n. f. [corn and field.] A plant.

Millet enumerates eleven species of this plant, some with red flowers, and some with white.

Corn-floor. n. f. The floor where corn is stored.

Thou hast loved a reward upon every corn-floor.

Hopt. v. e.

Corn-flower. n. f. [from corn and flower.]

There be certain corn-flowers, which come seldom or never in other places, unless they be sown, but only amongst corn; as the blue-bottle, a kind of yellow margravy, wild poppy, and corn-poppier.

Barton's Natural History.

Corn-flowers are of many sorts; some of them flower in June and July, and others in August. One of the seeds should be sown in March: they require a good soil. Maritima.

Corn-land. n. f. [corn and land.] Land appropriated to the production of grain.

The seeds should be sown in March: they require a good soil. Maritima.

Corn-master. n. f. [corn and master.] One that cultivates corn for sale. Not in use.
COR

CoNNETTER. m. f. [from cornet.] A blower of the cornet.

CoNTHelle. m. f. [corniche, French.] The highest projection of a wall or column.

CoNTHICULATE. adj. [from corn, Lat.] A term in botany.

CoNTHICULAR plants such as produce many different kinds and horned pods; and corniculate flowers are such hollow flowers as have on their upper part a kind of spur, or little horn. Chambers.

CoNTHICK. adj. [from cornus and facio, Latin.] Productive of horns; making horns.

DiFi.

CoNTHICEROUS. adj. [corniger, Latin.] Horned; having horns.

Nature, in other corniceros animals, hath placed the horns higher, and reclining as in bucks. Brown's Pulpit Errors.

CoNTHOCOPE. n. f. [Lat.] The horn of plenty; a horn topped with fruits and flowers in the hands of a goddess.

To CoNTHUET. v. a. [cornus, Latin.] To bellow horns; to cuckold.

CoNTHUETED. adj. [cornutus, Lat.] Grafted with horns; horned; cuckolded.

CoNTHUETO. n. f. [from cornutus, Latin.] A man horned; a cuckold.

The peaking cornets, her husband, dwelling in a continual larum of jealousy. Shakespeare's Merry Wench of Windsor.

CoNTHY. adj. [from corn, horn, Latin.]

1. Strong or hard like horn; horny.

UP was the affrighted Eembattled in her field. Milton's Paradise Lost.

2. [from corn.] Producing grain or corn.

Tell me why the any

Mild' st summer's plentiful, thinks of winter's want;

By constant journeys careful to prepare

Her stores, and bringing home the corn unrivalled.

3. Containing corn.

They lodge in habitations not their own,

By their high corns and corny gazers known.

Dyden.

CoNTHOLARY. n. f. [corollarium, Lat. from corolla; finis coronati opus: corollaire, Fr.] The concluding thought or sentence, which has no further important bearing on the subject. As a corollary to this preface, in which I have done justice to others, I owe something to myself.

Dyden's Fablia de Pense, Preface.

2. Surplus.

Being a corollary.

Rather than want. Shakespeare's Tempest.

CoNTHON. n. f. [Latin.] A large flat member of the cornice, so called because it crowns the entablature and the whole order. It is called by workmen the drip.

Chambers.

In a cornice the gable or cymatium of the cornice, the coping, the modillions or dentil, make a noble flow by their graceful projections.

Spatellus.

CoNTHONTAL. n. f. [corona, Latin.] A crown; a garland.

Crowned ye gods Bacchus with a crown, and Hymen also crown'd with wreaths of vines.

Speare.

CoNTHONAL. adj. Belonging to the top of the head.

A man of about forty-five years of age came to me, with a round tube between the Lightfoot and Prittleman.

CoNTHORYN. n. f. [coronarius, Latin.]

1. Relating to a crown; seated on the top of the head like a crown.

The bastifl of older times was a proper kind of fortress, not above three palms long, as some accounts, and distinguished from other fortresses by advancing his head, and some white marks, or coro'nyy spots, upon the crown. Brown.

2. It is applied in anatomy to arteries, which are fancied to encompass the head in the manner of a garland.

The substance of the heart itself is most certainly made of by a blood, which is conveyed to it by the coro'nyy arteries. Bentley's Sermons.

CoNTHOTION. n. f. [from corona, Latin.]

1. The act or solemnity of crowning a king.

Fortune flourishing at her work therein, that a scaffold of execution should grow a scaffold of coro'ny's.

Willingly I came to Denmark,

To show my duty in your coronation.

Shakespeare's Hamlet.

A cough, sir, which I caught with ringing in the king's affairs upon his coronation day.

Shakespeare's Henry IV.

Now ascribes fame hath published the renown Of Sh--'s coronation through the town.

Dyden's Mat. 23.

2. The pomp or assembly present at a coronation.

In genfive thought recol the fancied scene,

See coronations ride on'ry green.

Popo.

CoNTHONER. n. f. [from corona.] An officer whose duty is to enquire, on the part of the king, how any violent death was occasioned; for which purpose a jury is inapposable.

Go thou and seek the coroner, and let him fit o' my uncle; for he's in the third degree of drink; he's drowned. Shakespeare.

CoNTHONERET. n. f. [coronetta, Itali. the diminutive of corona, a crown.]

1. An inferior crown worn by the nobility.

The coronet of a duke is adorned with strawberry leaves; that of a marquis has leaves with pearls interposed; that of an earl raises the pearls above the leaves; that of a viscount is surrounded with only pearls; that of a baron has only four pearls.

In his lively

Walk'd crowns and coronets realms and islands were

As plates drop from his pocket.

Shakespeare's Antony and Cleopatra.

All the rest are counterfeit.

Th' coronets say so. Shakespeare, Henry VIII.

Nor could our nobles hope their bold attempt.

Who_rule'd crown'd; would coronet exempt, Dyde.

Peers and dukes, and all their sweeping state.

And garters, furs, and coronets appear. Pope.

2. An ornamental head-dress, in poetical language.

Under a coronet his flowing hair,

In curls, on either cheek play'd. Milton's Par. Lost.

CORPORAL. n. f. [corps, corrupted from corporal, French.] The lowest officer of the infantry, whose office is to place and remove the sentinels.

The cruel corporal whipper'd in my ear;

Five pounds, if rightly told, would set me clear.

CoRPOURAL. adj. [corps, Fr. corpus, Latin.]

1. Relating to the body; belonging to the body.

To relief of lassos and weak age,

Of indigent faint souls part corporal toll.

A hundred alms-houses right well supplied.

Randle's History of England.

Read me some corporal sins about her,

More evident than this. Shakespeare's Cymbeline.

That God hath been otherwise seen, with corporal eyes, exceedeth the smallest proportion of my understanding.

Ralegh.

Beasts enjoy greater sensual pleasures, and feel fewer corporal pains; and are utter strangers to all those anxious and tormenting thoughts, which perpetually haunt and disquiet mankind. Attebury.

2. Material; not spiritual. In the present language, when body is used philosophically in opposition to spirit, the word corporal is used, as a corporal being; but otherwise corporal.

Corporeal is, having a body; corporal, relating to the body. This distinction seems not ancient.

Are either are they vanish'd?

Into the air; and what seem'd corporal

Melted, as breath, into the wind.

Shakespeare's Macbeth.

And from the corporal nutrients, perhaps,

Your bodies may at last turn all to spirit.

Milton's Paradise Lost.

CoRPORALITY. n. f. [from corporal.]

The quality of being embodied.

If this light be not spiritual, yet it approacheth nearest unto spirituality; and if it have any corporality, then, of all other, the most subtle and pure.

Randle's History.

Corporally. adv. [from corporal.] Bodily.

The fun is corporally conjoin'd with bacilliens. Brown.

CORPORATE. adj. [from corpus, Lat.]

1. United in a body or community; enabled to act in legal proceeds as an individual.

An architectural order of the roccoco style; the perpends of which are adapted to the form of the building, and the effect of the whole.

Shakespeare's Timon of Athens.

2. General; united.

They answer in a joint and corporate voice,

That now they are at fall. Shakespeare's Timon.

CoR
CORPORATENESS. n. f. [from corporate.]
The state of a body corporate; a community.

CORPORATION. n. f. [from corpus, Lat.]
A corporation is a body politic, authorized by the king's charter to have a common seal, one head officer or more, and members, able, by their common consent, to grant or receive, in law, any thing within the compass of their charter: even as one man may do by law all things, that by law he is not forbidden; and bindeth the factorres, as single man binds his executor or heir.

Of angels we are not to consider only what they are, and do, in regard of their own being; but also which concerneth us, as they are linked into a kind of corporation amongst themselves, and of society with men.

Of this we find some foot-steps in our law, Which doth not rest from God and nature take,
Ten thousand men the doth together draw.

And of them all one corporation make.

Devise.

CORPORATION. n. f. [from corpora, Lat.]
The state of being embodied.

CORPOREAL adj. [corporus, Latin.]
1. Having a body; not immaterial; not spiritual.
2. Corporeal being.
The fitness of those things attribute,
Though homely, to his omnipotence.

That to corporeal substances could add
A spirit to their substance, Paradise Lost.

Having surveyed the Image of God in the soul,
We are not to omit those characters that God
Imprinted upon the body, as much as a spiritual Substance could be pictured upon a corporeal

Savit's Summer.

God being supposed to be a pure spirit, cannot be the object of any corporeal sense.

The corporeal being is the fates decreed,
And thou from thy corporeal prison freed.

Dryden's Fables.

Fix thy corporeal and internal eye
On thy young grace, or new engender'd sky.

Prior.

2. It is used by Swift so inaccurately for corporeal.

I am not in a condition to make a true step
Even on Amberley Downs; and I declare, that
A corporal stile step is worse than a political one.

Swift.

CORPORAT'Y, n. s. [from corporus, Latin.]
Materiality; the quality of being embodied; the state of having a body; bodiliness.

Since philosophy affirment, that we are middle Substance, between the soul and the body, they Must admit of some corporeity, which suppose weight or gravity.

Brown.

It is the fashion of divine Plato, that man is Nature's horizon, dividing between the upper Milieu of immaterial intellectual, and this lower
Of corporeity.

Glaucus's Scops.

The one attributed corporeity to God, and the Other shape and figure.

Corporification, n. f. [from corpori-.

The act of giving body or pabla-

Corporify, w. a. [from corporus, Latus.]
To embody; to insinuate into body.
Not used.

A certain spiritual substance, extricated out of
It, is misled for the spirit of the word corporifed.

Boyle.

Corps. n. f. [corps, Fr. corpus, Latin.]
1. A body.

That lowe riboud
Laid first his filthy hands on virgin chene,
To spoil her dainty corps, so fair and threne,
Of all such honours, all such virtues.

Spenser.

2. A body, in contempt.

Though plentiful, all too little seems
To stuff this nay, this vast unhale-bound corps.

Milton.

Corps. n. f. [corps, Fr. corpus, Latin.]
1. A body.

He looks as man was made, with face erect,
That seems his brittle corps, and seems ashamed
He's not all spirit.

Dryden's Don Scolian.

3. A carcasse; a dead body; a core.

Not a friend.

Greet my poor corps, where my body shall be thrown.

Shakespeare.

There was the murder'd corps in covert laid,
And violent death in thousand shapes displayed.

Addison.

See where the corps of thy dead foes approaches.

Addison.

The corps was laid out upon the floor by the emperor's command; and then did every one light his flambeau, and stand about the dead body.

Addison's Guardian.

4. The body, in opposition to the soul.
Cold numbers drear,
Her corps of tens, and the'ir soul receive.

Denham.

5. A body of forces.
Corpsantry. n. s. [from corpulenta, Lat.]
1. Bulkiness of body; flesheness; fulness of flesh.

To what a cumbersome unwieldiness,
And burthenous corpulence, my love has grown.

Donne.

It is but one species of corpulence; for there may be without fat, from the great quantity
Of muscular flesh, the case of robust people.

Arbuthnot on Animals.

2. Corpulence; flesheness of the flesh.
The muscular flesh serves for the vibration of the stands; the heaviness and corpulence of the body requiring a force to divide it.

Hay on the Creation.

Corpuulent. adj. [corpuscular, Latin.]
Fleshly; bulky; having great bodily bulk.

We say it is a fluffy fide, when there is much Peripherast, and circuit of words; and when, with
More than enough, it grows fat and corpulent.
Ben Jonson's Dives and Centurion.

Excess of nourishment is hurtful; for it makes the child corpulent, and growing in breadth rather than in height.

Bacon.

Corpuscular. n. f. [corpuscularum, Lat.]
A small body; a particle of matter; an atom; a little fragment.

It will add much to our satisfaction, if those Corpuscles can be discovered with microscopes.

Cotgrave's Grecian.

Who knows what are the figures of the little
Corpuscles that compose and disintegrate different bodies?

Watt's Logick.

Corpuscularian. adj. [from corpuscular.
Corpuscularian. n. s. [corpusculari-

Relating to bodies; comprising bodies.

It is the distinguishing epithet of that philosophy, which attempts the rational soloution of all physical appearances by the action of one body upon another.

As to natural philosophy, I do not expect to see Any principles connected, more comprehensive and intelligible than the corpuscularian or mechanism.
Boyle.

This may be said, that the modern corpuscularians talk, in most things, more intelligibly than the peripatetic.

Boyle.

The mechanical or corpuscularian philosophy, though peradventure the eldest, as well as the best in the world, had lain dead for many ages in a void and obtuse.

Bentley.

Corracle. See Corricle.

Corrade, v. a. [corrade, Lat.]
To rob off; to wear away by frequent rubbing; to scrape together.

Corradation, n. f. [corn and radius, Latin.]
A conjunction of rays in one point.

The impression of colour worketh not but by a cone of direct beams, and not being upon the basis in the object, and the vertical point in the eye: so there is a concoradation, and conjunction of beams.

Barrow's Natural History.

1. To punish; to chastise; to discipline.

Sad accidents, and a state of affliction, is a school of virtue; it corrects levity, and interrupts the confidence of finning.

Taylor.

Children have once been corrected for a lie; you must be false never after to passon it in him.

Locke on Education.

Children being to be restrained by the parents only in vicious things, a look or word only ought to correct them when they do amiss.

Locke on Education.

2. To amend; to take away faults in writings, life, or things.

This defect in the flesh make of sinners' minds, which can scarce ever be corrected afterwards, either by learning or age.

Barrow's Theory, Preface.

Correcting Nature, from what actually is in individuals, to what she ought to be, and what she was created.

Dryden.

I write, because it amazed me: I corrected, be cause it was as pleasant to me to correct as to write.

Pope's Preface.

The mind may cool, and be at leisure to attend to what is not worth correction; to consider what habit wants to be corrected, and what inclination to be subdued.

Rogers.

3. To obviate the qualities of one ingredient by another, or by any method of preparation.

To take a happy mixture, wherein things contrary do so qualify and correct one the danger of the other's excess, that neither boldnesses make us suffer, as long as we are kept under with the force of our own weakened senses; nor, while we trust in the mercy of God through Christ Jesus, fear to be able to tyrannize over us.

Holden.

As, in habitual gout or stones.

Tolly's Physick.

Is to correct your drink and diet.

And keep the inward fires in quiet.

Pepys.

In cases of acidity, water is the proper drink; its quality of relaxing; or may be corrected by boiling it with some animal substances; as ivory or haest-horn.

Arbuthnot on Animals.

4. To remark faults.

Correctly adj. [correctus, Latin.] Revised; or furnished with exactness; free from faults.

What verfe he can do, he has performed it in,
Which he pretends the most correct of his.

Dryden's Aur. Proef.

Always use the most correct editions; various readings will be only troublesome where the sense is complete.

Fellows.

Correction. n. f. [from correct.]
1. Punishment; discipline; chastisement; penalty.

Wilt thou, paple likes,
Take thy correction mild, and have none?

Shakespeare's Richard III.

An offende wife
That hath engag'd him on to offer strokes,
As he is drinkeing, holds his infant up
And hangs round with correction in the arm
That was up'ward for execution.
Skob. Henry IV.
We are all but children here under the great master of the family; he is the head, and

And fears, by mercies and correction, to instruct us in virtues.

Watt.

One fault was too great lenity to his former wife, that gave good counsel, but too gentle correction.

Arbuthnot.

2. Alteration to a better state; the act of taking away faults; amendment.

Another part in another age, may take the same remedy.
liberty with my writings; if, at least, they live long enough to deserve correction. Dryden's Fable, Prof. 3. That which is substitutted in the place of any thing wrong.

Corrections or improvements should be abjoined, by way of note or commentary, in their proper place. Watts.

4. Reprehension; animadversion. They proceed with judgment and ingenuity, establishing their attention not only with great solidity, but submitting them also to the correc-

5. Abatement of noxious qualities, by the addition of something contrary. To make ambitious, wholeone, do not like A thing contrary; do not put Corrections, but as chymists purge the bad. Damc.

Correction. n. f. [from correct.] One that has been in the house of correca-jail-bird. This seems to be the meaning in Shakespeare.

I will have you foundly twanged for this, you blue-bottle rogue! you filthy family! Shakespeare's Henry IV.

COrrective. adj. [from correct.] Having the power to alter or obviate any bad qualities.

Mathers are pectoral, corrective of bilious al-laid. Arbuthnot.

Corrective. n. f. 1. That which has the power of altering or obviating any thing amiss.

The hair, wool, feathers, and scales, which all animals of prey do swallow, are a reasonable and necessary corrective, to prevent their greediness from filling themselves with too succulent a food.

Ray on the Creation. Hummally speaking, and according to the method of the world, and the little corrections supplied by art and discipline, it seldom falls but an ill principle has its course, and nature makes good its blow. Scarb. Sermons.

2. Limitation; restriction. There seems to be such an influence in the regimen which the human soul exerts in relation to the body, that, with certain corrections and exceptions, may give some kind of an adumbration thereof. Hale's Origin of Mankind.

Correctly. adv. [from correct.] Accurately; exactly; without faults.

There are ladies, without knowing what tenes and participles, adverbs and prepositions are, speak as if they were confesses and as much gentlemen as have been bred up in the ordinary methods of grammar schools. Locke on Education.

Such lays as neither chib nor flaw, Correctly cold, and regularly low. Pope's Essay on Criticism.

Correctness. n. f. [from correct.] Accuracy; exactness; freedom from faults. Too much labour often takes away the spirit by adding to the pole so that there remains nothing but a dull correcting, a piece without any considerable faults, but with few beauties. Dryden's Desiderius.

The softness of the flesh, the delicacy of the face, air, and polish, and the corrections of design, in this statue, are imperceptible. Addison in Italy.

Lots, very late, correctly grow our care, When the t'ird nation breath'd from civil war. Pope.

Those pieces have never been before printed from the same topics, or with any tolerable degree of cor- rectness. Swift.

Corrector. n. f. [from correct.] 1. He that amends, or alters, by punishment or animadversion. How many does people have ever known to do justice on others, in that country? As much as is reasonable to be correctors than preachers of religion. Sprat's Sermons.

Metal's, although corrodesible by water, yet will not suffer a dissolution from the powerful heat communicable unto that element.

Corrosi\(\text{\textit{v}}\). n. f. [from corrodir.]

The power of corroding.

1. To confirm; to establishe.

2. To strengthen; to make strong.

3. To fortify infirmities there is three ways; the authority wherein the belief is derived, means to quicken and corrodesible the imagination, and means to repeat it and refresh it.

4. It was said that the prince himself had, by the right of foreign courts, and observation on the different nations of people, and rules of government, much excited and awaked his spirits, and corroded his judgment.

5. At any limb well and duly exercised great, the nerves of the body are corrodesible.

6. The act of strengthening or confirming; confirmation by any external fecular; addition of strength.

7. The lady herself procured a bull, for the better corrodution of the marriage. Bacon's Henry VII.

8. Having the power of increasing strength.

9. In the course of an ulcer, with a most intemperie, as the heart is weakened by too much humilitie, you are to mix corrosibles of an atteinient gait, and the ulcer also acquireth to be defined. Wijnman's Surgery.

10. To Corrode, v. a. [corred, Latin.] To eat away by degrees, as a menisperum; to prey upon; to consume; to wear away gradually.

11. Statemen, urge vice with vice, and may corrode.

12. The bad with bad, a spider with a trud.

13. For all this they are not, but they stand ill, and make her do much good against her will. Donne.

14. We know that aqua-fortis corrodes copper, which is that from the liver to verdigrise, is to reduce it to a green-blue color. Boyle in Colours.

15. The nature of mankind, left to itself, would soon be corrupted, without the intercessing and corroding invasions of so long a time. Hoke's Origin of Mankind.

16. Hannibal the Pyrenees paid, And stony Atlas, the mountain that nature call; And with corroding juices, as he went, A passage through the living rock he rend.

17. Fihes, which neither chew their meat, nor grind in their stomach, do, by a diffusible liquor there provided, corrode and reduce it into a chylus. Ray on the Creation.

18. The blood running amongst the vessels, producing almost all the diseases of the inflammatory kind.

20. Having the quality to fret or vex.

21. If the maintenance of ceremonies be a corrosive to such as are thus maintained, then they are the worse, because they behave that which reverence is engag'd. Hecker.

22. That which has the quality of wasting any thing away, as the flesh of an ulcer. He takes this from hook's Valerian.

23. And with fist directed this his stubborn malady. Fairy Queen.

24. That which has the power of fretting, or of giving pain.
CORS

Corse hoary moulded bread the soldiers thrust upon the points of their spears, raising against "unshod and " unshod and " the Prussians, who with such corse and pestilent bread would not touch. Knolles.

2. Unfound; putrid. As supernatural flesh did rot, Attendment ready till at hand did wait. To pluck it out with pinches very hot. That it in his head was set in corse jet. Spec.

3. Vitious; tainted with wickedness; without integrity. Let no corse communication proceed out of your mouth, that which is good to the use of others. Ephesians, vi. 4.

5. Kind of knives I know, which in this plains. Harbour their crafts, and more corrupt ends; Than twenty silly dressing convictions. Shakespeare's King Lear.

Some, who have been corrupt in their morals, have yet infinitely falseness to have their children piously brought up. South's Sermons.

Corrupt. n. s. [from corrupt. He that taints or vitiates; he that lefens purity or integrity. Away, away, corruptions of my faith! Shakespeare.

From the vices of the Greeks, the corruptions of all truth, who without all ground of certainty vaunt their antiquity, came the error first of all. Raleigh's History of the World.

Those great corruptions of Christianity, and the deed of natural religion, the Jefuits. Addison.

Corruptibility. n. s. [from corruptible.] Possibility to be corrupted.

Corruptible. adj. [from corrupt.]

1. Susceptible of destruction by natural decay, or without violence. Our corruptible bodies could never live the life that they live, nor yet he not that they are joined with his body which is incorruptible, and that his is in ours as a cause of immortality. Hooker.

It is a devouring corruption of the essential mixture, which, confiding chiefly of an oily moisture, is incorruptible through digestion. Harvey on Corruptions.

The several parts of which the world consists being in their nature corruptible, it is more probable, that, in an infinite duration, this frame of things would long since have been dissolved. Talleyrand.

2. Susceptible of external deprivation; putrid to be tainted or vitiated.

Corruptibleness. n. s. [from corruptible.] Susceptibility of corruption.

Corruptibly. adv. [from corruptible.] In such a manner as to be corrupted, or vitiated.

It is too late; the life of all his blood is about to perish. Shakespeare's King Lear.

Corruption. n. s. [corrupt, Latin.]

1. The principle by which bodies tend to the disorganization of their parts.

2. Wickedness; perversion of principles; loss of integrity. Precepts of morality, besides the natural corruption of our tempers, which makes us averse to them, are so abridges from Hell, that they seldom get an opportunity for descriptions and images. Addison on the Georgics.

Amidst corruptions, luxury, and rage, Still leave some ancient virtues to our age. Pope.

3. Putrefication. The wise contriver, on his end intent, Careful this fatal error to prevent, Keep the waters from corruption free, Mix'd with them with Elys, and heaven all fea. Biasmore.

4. Matter or pus in a sore.

5. The tendency to a worse state. After my death I wish no other herald, To no other speaker of my living actions, But such an honest charmer of my worth. Shakespeare's Henry VIII.

6. Cause, or means, of depravation. The region hath by conquest, and corruption of other languages, received new and differing names. Raleigh's History.

All these four kinds of corruption are very common in their language; for reasons the Greek tongue is become corrupt. Borrowed on Languages.

7. [in law.] An infection growing to a man attainted of felony, or treason, and to his issue; for as he lefoth all to the prince, or other lord of the see, so his issue cannot be heir to him, or to any other ancestor, of whom they might have claimed by him; and if he were noble, or a gentleman, he and his children are made ignoble and ungentle, in respect of the father. Cowell.

Corruptive. adj. [from corrupt.] Having the quality of tainting or vitiating. Carrying a settled habitue unto the corruptions originals. Brown's Village Errors.

It should be ended with acid ferments, or some corruptive quality, for so speedily a dissipation of the meat and preparation of the chyle. Ray on the Creation.

Corruptless. adj. [from corrupt.] Insubstantial of corruption; undecaying. The borders with corruptible myths are crown'd. Dryden.

Corruptly. adv. [from corrupt.] With corruption; with taint; with vice, without integrity. O that nations, degrees, and offices. Who were not deriv'd corruptly that clear honour Were purchas'd by the merest of the weaker. Shak.

We have dealt very corruptly against thee, and have not kept the commandments. Nehemiah, xiv. 7.

2. Vitiously; improperly; contrary to purity. We have corruptly contrariet most names, both of men and places. Camb. Remain's.

Corruptness. n. s. [from corrupt. The quality of corruption; putrefaction; vice.

Corrèsement. n. s. [French.] A pirate; one who profests to scour the seas, and feize merchants. Corse.

Corse. n. s. [corsy, French.]

For he was strong, and of so mighty corse, As ever wielded spear in warlike hand. Spenser.

2. A dead body; a carcasse: a poetical word.

That from her body, full of filthy gore, He rest her hateful head, without remove, A stream of cost-black blood forth guided from her corse. Spenser.

Set down the corse; or, by saint Paul, I'll make a corse of him that disobeys. Shakespeare's Richard III.

What may this mean? That thou, dead corse, again on complete fleet Revisit this the glimmers of the moon, Making night hideous? Shakespeare's Hamlet.

Heav'n let him down, my friends. Full in my sight, that I may view at leisure The bloody corse, and count those glorious wounds. Addison.

Corselet. n. s. [corselet, French.] A light armour for the forepart of the body. Some shores of male, some coats of plate put on, Some don't a livery, some a corselet bright. Poets.

COS

They lay, they join, they praise, they strive to tore Their corslets, and their tim'rous paws explore. Dryden.

But heroes, who o'ercome or die, Have their hearts hung extremely high; The springs of which, in battle's heat, Have blown their very brains away. Prior.

Cortical. adj. [cortex, bark, Lat.] Barky; belonging to the outer part; belonging to the rind; outward.

Their leaf extremities form a little gland (all these little glands together make the cortical part of the brain), terminating in two little ventricle. Choyne's Philosophical Principles.

Corticated. adj. [from corticatus, Lat.] Refembling the bark of a tree. This animal is a kind of horse, a quadruped covered and debaptos; that is, without wool, fur, or hair.

Corticose. adj. [from corticus, Lat.] Full of bark.

Corvetto. n. s. The curvet.

You must draw the hore in his career with his measure, and turn, dally, the corveto and turning. Peacham on Drawing.

Coruscant. n. s. [coruso, Latin.] Glittering by flashes; flashing.

Coruscation. n. s. [corusco, Latin.] Flash; quick vibration of light. We see that lightnings and coruscations, which are near at hand, yield nutriment to. Bacon's Natural History.

We may learn that sulphurous items abound in the bowels of the earth, and ferment with minerals, and sometimes take fire with a fusible cor- ruption and explosion. Newton's Opticks.

How heat and moisture mingle in a mass; Or, belch in thunder, or lightning blaze; Why nimble coruscations think and burn; And both tornado bluster in the sky. Garth's Dipharny.

Corymbiataed. adj. [corynmbus, Lat.] Garnished with branches of berries.

Corymbiferous. adj. [from corynmbus and serif, Lat.] Bearing fruit or berries in bunches.

Corymbus. n. s. [Lat.]

Amongst the ancient botanists, it was used to censurate the bushes or clusters of berries of ivy: amongst modern botanists, it is used for a compound ducitem flower, whose seeds are not pappus, or do not fly away in downs; such are the flowers of daisies, and common marigold. Quincy.

Coscinomancy. n. s. [from coscinus, a sieve, and marmere, divination.] The art of divination by means of a sieve. A very ancient practice, mentioned by Theocritus, and still used in some parts of England, to find out persons unknown. Chambers.

Coscent. n. s. [in geometry.] The facet of an arch, which is the complement of another to ninety degrees.

Coshering. n. s. [Irish.]

Coshers were vestitudes and progresses made by the lord and his followers among his tenants; wherein he did eat them (as the English proverb says) 'twixt his hand and his nose. Davis.

Cosié. n. s. [from cosier, old French, to few.] A botcher. Do you make an almshe of my lady's hose, that... though it is not unlikely that the French coutier comes from the Latin.]

1. The price of any thing.

2. Sumptuousdels; luxury.

The city woman bears

The cost of princes on unworthy tlouneful.. Shaks.

Let foreign princes vainly boast

The rude effects of pride and cost.

Of vulgar fabrics, to which they Contribute nothing but the pay.

Wolfer.

3. Charge; expense.

While he found his daughter maintained without his cost, he was content to be desist to any noise of infamy.

Sidney.

I shall never hold that man my friend.

Whose tongue shall ask me for one penny cost.

To random house resold Mortimer.

Shaks. H. IV.

Has he came will 1 of the king's cost? or hath he given any gift? 2 Samuel, viii. 42.

And wilt thou, O cruel beast!

Put poor nature to such cost? O!

'Wilt undo our common mother,

To be at charge of such another. Coftoph.

It is strange to fee any ecclesiasticall pie, not by ecclesiasticall cost and influence, rising above ground;

in an age in which men's mouths are open against the church, but their hands shut towards it.

Scots. Sermons.

Who is whole tale be, and pleasing most,

Should win his supper at our common cost.

Dryden's Fables.

Fourteen thousand pounds are paid by Wood for the purchase of his patent: what were his other visible costs, I know not; but what his late ventures conjectured.

Swift.

4. Losses; fine; detriment.

What they had foonily wished, proved afterwards to their cost every day.

Scalapini's History of the Turk.

To Cost. v. n. pret. cost; particip. cost.

<coft<er, Fr.> To be bought for; to be, had at a price.

The dogge and pelon are always in readiness;

but to be the admion to extremity, and then recover an, will require the art of a writer, and cost him many a pang.

Dryden.

Coast. adj. <cof<ta, Lat. a rib.> Belonging to the ribs.

Hereby are excluded all cartesous and carthagi-nous merchants; many, whose ribs are so flexible; and many costal, which have their ribs emb-owed.

Brown's Pulgar Errors.

Cois<tear. m. f. <cof<ter, a head >

1. A head.

Take him over the eardar with the belt of thy sword.

Shakespeare's Richard III.

2. An apple round and bulky like the head.

Many county vixens are driven to shiftles; and if our giddy patrons hold us to such conditions, they will make us turn eardar mawger,grafiers, or iell ale.

Burton or Mollmuck.

Cois'tive. adj. <confineatus, Lat. confined, Fr.>

1. Bound in the body; having the ex-cretions obstructed.

When the passage of the gall becomes obstructed, the body grows costive, and the extremities of the belly white.

Brown.

While fatter than his eardar brain indites,

Philof's quick lees in flowing letters write;

His cafe appears to me like honest Tegov's,

When he was run away with by his legs.

Prior.

2. Close; unpermeable.

Glassy and impair'd, hardening with the fire and wind, till unlocked by industry, so as to admit of the air and heavenly influences.

Mariner's Hafbandry.

Cois'tiveness. n. f. <cof<teivs, French.>
The state of the body in which excretion is obstructed.

Costive's diffanter malaz, putrid fumes out of the guts and mefentery into all parts of the body, occasioning head-aches, fever, loss of appetite, and disturbance of conceifion.

Harvey.

Costive has ill effects, and is hard to be sent with by physic; paining medicines rather interesting than removing the evil.

Locke. on Education.

Co'stulines<s. f. <cof<lys, Sumptuousness; expendiveness.

Though not with curious costulines, yet with clearly favour, and a certain contempt on the world.

Shaks.

Nor have the frugal fons of fortune any reason to object the costulines; since they frequently pay dearly for less advantageous pleasures.

Glawle's Servants.

Leave for a while thy costul country-seat.

And, to be great indeed, forget.

The maifous pleasures of the poets.

Dryden.

The chapel of St. Laurence will be perhaps the most costly work of piety on earth, when completed.

John.</ref>

He is here speaking of Paradis, which he represents as a much charming and delightful place, abounding with things not only useful and convenient, but even delightful, the most costly and de-irable.

Woodward's Nat. His.

Co'stmary. n. f. <cof<ts, Lat.> An herb,

Co'stre<el. m. f. ['supposed to be derived from cofter.> A bottle.

Skinner.

Co't. At the end of the names of places.

Co'te. come generally from the Saxon

Coat. cot, a cottage.

Gibson.

Co'ter. n. f. <cot, Sax. cot, WeUi.>

A small house; a cottage; a hut; a mean habitation.

What that stage meant,

Which in her cot the daily prattled. Fairy Queen.

Besides, his cot, his stocks, and bounds of land,

Are now on sale; and in our steep cot now,

By reason of his absence, there is nothing

That you will feed on. Shakespeare's As you like it.

Hesekiah made himself data for all manner of beasts, and stocks for flocks.

2. Gesta. ax. 24.

A lately temple throned within the fume.

clouds.

The crotchets of their or in columns rite;

The pavement, polifhed marble they behold;

The gates with sculpturing, and works of gods.

Dryd. Hacius and Philomene.

As Jove vouchefind in Jada's top, 'tis fade.

At poor Philomene's cot to take a bed.

Lenox.

Co't. n. f. An abridgment of coferem.

Co'tenget. n. f. <in genery.>

The tangent of an arch which is the complement of another to ninety degrees.

Harrius.

To Co'te. v. n. This word, which I have found only in Chajman, seems to signify the same as To leave behind, To overpage.

Words her worth had prov'd with deeds.

Had more ground than alum, the three, and need for his feed.

Chajman's Hidala.

Co'teryor. adj. <con and eternus, Lat.] Living at the same time; cotaneous; contemporary.

What would not, to a rational man, contrary with the first voucher, have approval probably is now used as certain, because several have since, from him, paid it one after another. Lade.

Co'ter<nd. n. f. <cot and land.> Land appendant to a cottage.

Co<quian. m. probably from coquein, French.> A man who busies himself with women's affairs.

Look to the back'd mead, good Aicelides.

Space not for celf.
COTTAGE. n. s. [from cott.] A hut; a mean habitation; a cot; a little house.

The sea coast shall be dwellings and cottages for shepherds, and folds for flocks. Zeph. ii. 6.

They were right glad to take some corner of a poor cottage, and there to serve God upon their knees. Heber.

The self-same gift that shines upon his court, Hides not his visage from our cottage, but looks on both alike. Shakespeare's Winter's Tale.

Let the women of noble birth and great fortunes nurse their children, look to the affairs of the house, visit poor cottages, and relieve their necessities. Taylor's Holy Living.

It is difficult for a peasant, bred up in the obscurities of a cottage, to fancy in his mind the splendors of a court. South.

Built our humble cottage let us hale, and here, uncovered, rural dainties taste. Pope's Odyssey.

COTTAGER, n. s. [from cott.] One who lives in a hut or cottage.

Let us from our farms Call forth our cottagers to arms. Swift.

The most ignorant Irish cottager will not tell his cow for a goat. Swift's Aderby to Parliament.

A cottager, in law, is one that lives on the common, without paying rent, and without any land of his own. Blackstone.

The husbandmen and plowmen be but as their work-folks and laborers; or else mere cottagers, which are but housed beggars. Bacon's Henry VII.

The yeomen, or middle people, of a condition between gentlemen and cottagers. Shakespeare.

Bacon's Henry VII.

COCKER, n. s. [from cott.] One who inhabits a cot. Dibd.

COTTON, n. s. [named, according to Skinner, from the down that adheres to the male otantes, or quince, called by the Italians cornetto; whence cotton, Italian cotone, French couotten.]

1. The down of the cotton-tree.

The point ought to be as thick as a rolling-pin, and covered with cotton, that its hardness may not be offensive. Whiston.

2. Cloth made of cotton.

COTTON, n. s. A plant.

The species are, 1. shrubby cotton. 2. The most excellent American cotton, with a greenish feel. 3. Annual shrubby cotton, of the island of Providence. 4. The tree cotton. 5. Tree cotton, with a yellow flower. The fruit is cultivated prince tively in Candia, Lemnos, Cyprus, Malta, Sicily, and at Naples; as also between Jerusalem and Damascus, from whence the cotton is brought annually into those northern parts of Europe. The cotton is the wool which includes or wraps up the seeds, and is contained in a kind of brown husk, or seed-vellum, growing upon this shrub. It is from this that the value quantities of cotton are taken, which furnish our parts of the world. The second and third forts are annual; these are cultivated in the West Indies in great plenty. But the fourth and fifth forts are grown in Egypt; these abode, at least, seven years, and often arrive to be trees of great magnitude. Miller.

To COOT, v. n.

1. To rise with a kelp.

2. To cement; to unite with: a cant word.

A quarrel will end in one of you being turned out.
To COVET. 2. To have a strong desire.

The love of money is the root of all evil, which while some have coveted after, they have erred from the faith.

1 Tim. vi.

COVETABLE. adj. [from court.] To be wished for; to be coveted.

COVETED. adj. [covetous, French.] Avarice; covetouses of money. Not in use.

Most wretched wight, whom nothing might suffice.

Whole greedy lust did lack in greatest store.

Whole need had end, but no end covet.

Fairy Q.

COVETOUS. adj. [covetous, French.]

1. Inordinately defirous; eager.

While numbred with my despising cloacks I lay.

The cruel nation; covetous of prey.

Stain'd with my blood th' unhonour'd coasts.

Dryden, Annid.

2. Inordinately eager of money; avaricious.

An heap they have exercis'd with covetous practices.

What he cannot help in his nature, you must not account a vice in him: you must in no ways say he is covetous.

Shakespeare.

Let never so much probability hang, on one side of a covetous man's reasoning, and money on the other, it is easy to foresee which will outweigh.

Locke.

COVETously. adv. [from covetous.] Ar- variciously; eagerly.

If he care not for it, he will supply us easier if he covetously desire it, how shall it get it?

Shakespeare.

COVETousNESS. n. f. [from covetous.]

1. Avarice; inordinate desire of money; eagerness of gain.

He that takes part to serve the ends of covetous-ry, or, minute to another's lard, or keep a hog of impurities or intemperance, is idle in the world's fen.

Taylor's Holy Living. Hub.

Covetousness debauch a man's spirit, and finisht into the ruts of life.

Talefs.

2. Eagerness: desire; in a neutral-fence.

When workmen strive to do better than well, They do confess their skill in covetousness.

Dryden's King John.

Covet. 2. To covet.

To COVET. v. n. [covet, French.]

1. To desire inordinately; to desire beyond due bounds.

If it be a fin to owe honour,
I am the most offending man alive.

Stat. Hen. V.

I am yet

Unknown to wanton; never was so seen;
Scarcely have sav'd what was mine own;
An unknown vice, which is unknown.

Steele, Magnanimous.

O father! can it be, that fools foole
Return to visit our terrestrial clime?

And that the generous mind, releas'd by death,
Can court for love and morall breath.

Dryden's All For Nothing.

2. To desire carnally.

All things coveting as much as may be to be like unto God in being every thing, that which thereby attends, readily doth seek to continue itself another way, by offering and propagation.

Hobbes.

But covet earnestly the best gifts.

1 Cor. xii. 31.

To COVET. v. a. [covet, French.]

To have a strong desire.

The love of money is the root of all evil, which while some have coveted after, they have erred from the faith.

1 Tim. vi.

COVETABLE. adj. [from court.] To be wished for; to be coveted.

Dry.

COVETISE. n. f. [covetise, French.]

Avarice; covetouses of money. Not in use.

noise in endeavouring to evacuate the peculant matter from the lungs.

Thou didst drink

The tale of horros, and the gilded pudding

Which heart's would cough at.

Shakespeare's Antony and Cleopatra.

Thou hast quarrelled with a man for coughing in the street, because he hath waken'd thy dog that hath lain asleep in the sun.

Harr.

The first point enquirish why a man doth cough, but not an ox or cow; whereas the contrary is often observed.

Brown.

If any humour be discharged upon the lungs, they have a faculty of calling it up by the lungs.

Roy on the Creation.

I cough like Horace, and the 'leamers'

Pope's Epistles.

To COUGH. v. a. To eject by a cough; to expostoritate.

If the matter be to be discharged by expostoration, it must first pass into the substance of the lungs, then into the alvea, or attended; and from thence be cough'd up, and spit out by the mouth.

Woman's Surgery.

COUGHED. n. f. [from cough.]

One that coughs.

Dry.

COV'G. v. n. A deceitful agreement

To bring between two or more, to the hurt of another.

Cowell.

COV'ING. n. f. [cove.]

A term in building, used of housethats project over the ground-glet, and the turned jurkad curled with timber, lathed and plaffered.

Harris.

COU'G. v. n. [covey.]

To sputter; to spit.

Some earth into the fire, and barke the smoke out of the chimney, and in the smoke put into the water.

Put in the water and made the barke.

Mortimer.

The smoke of one

Co'vEY.

Dun's Spanish Priory.

COU'LESS. n. f. [covey.]

The sharp iron of the plough, which cuts the earth perpendicularly to the flow.

The horses went down to spurn every man his thare, and his couler, and his bow, and his matcotic.

Samuel, xxii. 20.

The spade is the groundstone to sharpen the coulers, to whet their natural faculites.

Hammond on Fundamentally.

The plough for stiffe clays is long and broad; and the cowl long, and very little bonding, with a very large wing.

Mortimer.

COUNCIL. n. f. [concilium, Latin.]

1. An assembly of persons met together in consultation.

The chief priests, and all the counsel, found false witness.

The Stying council thus dilloy'd: and fortis.

In order came the grand infernal peers.

In ancient times conducted by politians, they are for drawing up a perpetual scheme of courts and councils, and preserving a constant correspondence between the camp and the council table.

Addison's Spectator.

The rueful's heralds call

To council in the city gates: noon.

Grey-headed men and graves, with warriour mien,

Assembly, and harangues are heard.

Milton.

An assembly of divines to deliberate

Upon religion.

Some borrow all their religion from the fathers of the Christian church, or from their foyers or examples.

Harr.

4. Persons called together to be consulted on any occasion, or to give advice.

They
COU

They bring thus assembled, are more properly a council to the king, the great council of the kingdom, to advise his majesty in those things of weight and difficulty, which concern both the king and people, than a court. Bacon's Adv. of Villiers.

5. The body of privy councillors.

Without the knowledge Either of king or council, you may add To carry into Flanders the great seal.

Shakespeare's Henry VIII.

COUNCIL-BOARD. n. f. [council and board.] Council-table; table where matters of state are deliberated.

Henry had commanded To-morrow morning to the council-board He was convened. Shakespeare's Henry VIII.

When ship-money was taxated at the council-board, they looked upon it as a work of that power they were obliged to trust.

And Pall, if the broke the laws, Must yield her for the stronger cause; A blame to one so much ador.

For wisdom at Jove's council-board. Swifts.

COUNSEL. n. f. [confidium, Latin.]

1. Advice; direction.

There is as much difference between the counsel that a friend giveth, and that a man giveth himself, as there is between the counsel of a friend and of a flatterer. Bacon.

The best counsel he could give him, was to go to his parliament.

Because I met not, Whereon I live, thy gentle looks, thy aid, Thy counsel, in this uttermost distress. Milton.

2. Consultation; interchange of opinions.

I hold as little counsel with weak men, as you, or any Scot that lives. Shak. Henry IV.

3. Deliberation; examination of consequences.

They all counsel, therefore, in the working of that first cause, that counsel is used, taken folly.

Dido makes the Trojans counsel.

4. Prudence; art; machination.

O how comely is the willow of old men, and understanding and counsel to men of honour.

Eccles. xv. 5.

There is no wisdom, nor understanding, nor counsel, against the Lord. Prov. xxii. 30.

5. Secrecy; the secrets entrusted in consulting.

The players cannot keep counsel; they'll tell all.

Shakespeare.

6. Scheme; purpose; design. Not in use.

The counsel of the Lord standeth ever, the thoughts of his heart to all generations.

Psalms cxxiii. 11.

O God, from whom all holy defers, all good counsels, and all just works do proceed.

Common Prayer.

7. Those that plead a cause in the counsellors. This seems only an abbreviation usul in conversation.

Your hand, a covenant; we have, the things being set down by lawful counsel. Shak. Cymbeline.

For the advice that counsel that glass, and gravity of learning is an effectual, and an as speaking judge is not a well-nurtured symbol.

Bacon.

What says any counsel learned in the law? Pope.

To COUNSEL, v. a. [confidere, Latin.]

1. To give advice or counsel to any person.

But say, Lucrece, now we are alone, Would it then counsel me to fall in love?

Shakespeare.

2. To advise or counsel any person.

Taking his wife, and set her up. Truth shall nurse her; Holy and heavenly thoughts fill counsel her.

Shakespeare's Henry VIII.

There is danger of being unjustly suspected, and more for the good of them that counsel thin for him is counselled.

Bacon.

If fortune never cradled that man whom good fortune deceiveth not; therefore have counselled.

my friends never to trust to her fairest side, though she seemed to make peace with them.

He supports my poverty with his wealth, and I counsel and instruct him with my learning and experience.

Taylor.

2. To advise any thing.

The left had been our flame, The left his counsell'd crime which brands the Grecian name.

Dryden's Fables.

COUSSELLER. adj. [from council.]

Willing to receive and follow the advice or opinions of others.

Very many of so great parts were more counsellable than he; so that he would seldom be in danger of great errors, if he would communicate his own thoughts to diffusible.

Chapu. Councillor.

COUSSELOR. n. f. [from counsel. This should rather be written counsellor.

1. One that gives advice.

His mother was his counsellor to do wickedly.

2. Counsellor, vulg. 3.

She would be a counsellor of good things, and a counsellor can force his way.

Wilton, vulg. 9.

Death of thy foul! That linen checks of thine Are counsellors to fear.

Shakespeare's Macbeth.

2. Confidant; bosom friend.

In such places gushed the kings reign'd, Sieg in their bosom, and angels entertained; With such old counsellors they did advise, And by frequenting groves grew wise.

Wallace.

3. One whose province is to deliberate and advise upon public affairs.

You are a counsellor, and by that virtue no man dare accuse you.

Shakespeare's Henry VIII.

Of counsellors there are two sort: as the first, counsellers nat, as I may term them; such are the princes of Wales, and others of the king's forts; not the ordinary sort of counsellor are such as the king's, or of due consideration of their worth and abilities, and whilof their fidelity to his person and to his crown, call to be of council with him, in his ordinary government.

Bacon's Advise to Villiers.

4. One that is counsell'd in a case of law; a lawyer.

A counsellor bred up in the knowledge of the municipal and statute laws, may honorably inform a just prince how far his prerogatives extend.

Dryden's Juvenile, Dedication.

COUSSELERSHIP. n. f. [from counsellor.]

The office or post of a privy council.

Of the great offices and officers of the kingdom, the most part are such as cannot be removed from the counsellership.

Bacon's Advise to Villiers.

To COUNT. v. n. [comere, Fr. comez; comitatus, Latin.]

1. To reckon; to place to an account.

He believed in the Lord, and he counted it to him for righteousness.

Gen. xviii. 6.

Not barely the plowman's pain is to be counted into the bread we eat; the labour of those who broke the oxen, must all be charged on the account of labour.

Locke.

2. To esteem; to account; to reckon; to consider as having a certain character, whether good or evil.

When once it is comprehended anything above this, as the differences of time, affirmations, negations, and contradictions, we then count it to have some use of natural reason.

Hobbes.

Count not thine handmaid for a daughter of Bithia. Sam. i.

No shall I count it belonv to enjoy.

The public mark of honour and reward

Confer'd upon me. Milton's Agrippa.

You would not wish to count this man a foe.

In friendship, and in hatred, oblivion.

Philip's Biron.

3. To impute; to charge to.

All th' impossibilities, which poets,

Count to extravagance of hostile description, Shall sooner be,

Rosen's Anon. Stilemater.

To COUNT. v. n. To found an account or scheme: with open.

I think it a great error to count upon the genius of a nation, as an standing argument in all ages.

Swifts.

COUNT. n. f. [comptes, French; comitatus, Latin.]

1. Number.

That we up to your palaces may mount. Of blessed saints for to increase the count.

Spenser's Epithalamion.

2. Reckoning; number fanned.

By my count, I was your mother much upon their years. Shak.

Since I saw you last, There is a change upon you._Well. I know not. What counts hard fortune casts upon my face. Shakespeare.

COUNT. n. f. [comere, Fr. comez, Latin.]

A title of foreign nobility, supposed equivalent to an earl.

COU NTA BLE. adj. [from count.]

That which may be numbered.

The cells which you desire to be recounted are very many, and almost countable with those which were hidden in the blanket of Pandemon.

Spenser's Ireland.

COUNCOURANCE. n. f. [comitatus, French; comitatus, Latin.]

1. The form of the face; the system of the features.

2. Air; look.

A male countenance about her mouth, between simpering and smiling; her bow, bowed somewhat down, seemed to languish with over-much indecision.

Swifts.

Well, Suffolk, yet thou shalt not see me blush, Nor change my countenance for this aredit: A heart unsnared is not easily daunted.

Shakespeare's Henry VI.

So sake our fire, and by his countenance find Out in cruel thoughts the philosophy.

Eating on furious thoughts unblurred. Milton.

To whom, with his countenance calm, and foul face, Thus Turnus, Dido's Renis.

3. Calmness of look; composure of face.

She said she would; nor with a troubled look, or trembling hand, the fun'd real present look; Even she kept her countenance, when the lid remov'd Dido's heart unfortunately loveless.

Dryden's Fables.

The two great maxims of any great man at count are, always to keep his countenances, and never to keep his word.

Swifts.

4. Confidence
4. Confidence of mien; aspect of assurance: it is commonly used in these phrases, in countenance, and out of countenance.

The night beginning to perforce some retiring place, the gentleman, even out of countenance before, the began her speech, invited me to lodge that night with her father. Sidney.

We will not make your countenance to fall by the answer ye shall receive. Bacon's New Atlantis.

Their best friends were out of countenance, because they found that the imputation, which their enemies had laid upon them, were well grounded.

Clarendon.

The outward profession of religion and virtue were once in fashion and countenance at court, a good treatment of the clergy would be the necessary conformation.

Swift.

If those preachers would look about, they would find one part of their congregation out of countenance, and the other above.

Swift.

It is of kind ill manners to offer objections to a fine woman, and a man would be out of countenance with the superciliousness in such a case: a coquette legman might be fald, but not contradisted.

Addison's Freeholder.

It puts the learned in countenance, and gives them a place among the fashionable kind.

Addison's Freeholder.

5. Kindness or ill-will, as it appears upon the face.

Yet the stout fairy, 'mongst the middlet crowds, Thought all their glory vain in knightly view, And that great princess too, exceeding proud, That to strange knight no better countenance allowed.

Spenser.

6. Patronage; appearance of favour; appearance on any face; support.

The church of Christ, which held that profession which had not the publick allowance and countenance of authority, could not use the exercise of the Christian religion but in private.

Hooker.

His majesty maintained an army here, to give strength and countenance to the civil magistrate.

Davies on Ireland.

Now then we'll use His countenance for the bottle, whilst he's doing; Let her who would be rid of him devise His speedy taking off.

Shakespeare's King Lear.

This is the magistrate's peculiar province, to give eternal glory to virtuous, and to make vice and profaneness.

Addison.

7. Superficial appearance; show; reconfiguration.

The election being done, he made countenance of great difficulties, and his scholemaster.

Oh, you blest ministers above!

Shakespeare.

Keep me in patience, and with ripen'd time Unfold the evil which is here wrapt up.

In countenance. Shakespeare's Measure for Measure.

Diana's love

Made me exchange my state with Tranio, While he did bear my countenance in the town.

Shakespeare.

The Countenance. v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To support; to patronise; to vindicate.

Neither shalt thou countenance a poor man in his cause.

Exodus.

This conceit, though countenanced by learned men, is not made out either by experience or reason.

Browne.

This national fault, of being so very talkative, looks natural and graceful in one that has grey hair in it, a countenance.

Addison.

2. To make a show of.

Each to these ladies love did countenance, And to his mistress each himself strove to advance.

Spenser.
COUNTERFEIT, n. s. [from the verb.]

Stop; rebuke.

If again I laid his beard was not well cut, I would say I lies: this is called the counterfeit quaff." Shakespeare.

1. To counterfeit, v. a. [counter and draw.] With painters, to design a design or painting by means of a fine linen cloth, an oiled paper, or other transparent manner, whereon the strokes, appearing through, are traced with a pencil. Chambers.

COUNTEREVIDENCE, n. s. [counter and evidence.] Testimony by which the deposition of some former witness is opposed.

Seale itself detects its more palpable decrees by a counter-evidence, and the more ordinary impositions seldom outlive the experiments.

We have little reason to question his testimony in this point, seeing it is backed by others of good credit; and all because there is no counter-evidence, nor any witness, that appears against it.

Shakespear's The Earth. To COUNTERFEIT, v. a. [contrefaire, Fr.]

1. To copy with an intent to pass the copy for an original; to forge.

What art thou, that counterfeitst the profile of a king? Shakespeare's Henry IV.

It came into this priest's fancy to cause this lad to counterfeit and perfonate the second son of Edward IV. escaped to be murdered. Bacon's Henry VII.

There have been some that could counterfeit the distance of voices, which is a secondary object of hearing in such forts, they are, who friends O! nay in evil hour thou didst give ear To that false worm, of whomsoever taught Thee this mischievous advice. Milton's Paradise Lost.

To counterfeit, is to put on the likeness and appearance of some real excellency: Britifh-Roans would not pretend to be diamonds, if there never had been diamonds. Tillotson.

COUNTERFEIT, adj. [from the verb.]

1. That which is made in imitation of another, with intent to pass for the original; forged; fictitious.

I learn Now of my own experience, not by talk, How counterfeit a sound is, that we envy, Bear in their superficie; in prosperous days They swarm, but in adverse withdraw their heads. Milton.

General observations drawn from particulars, are the jewels of knowledge, comprehending great store in a little room; but they are therefore to be made with the greater care and caution, lest, if we take counterfeit for true, the flame be the greater, when our stock comes to a fever fortune. Locke.

2. Deceitful; hypocritical.

True friends appear less meagre than counterfeit. Reference.

COUNTERFEIT, n. s. [from the verb.]

One who perforates another; an imposter.

Vol. I.

I am no counterfeit; to die is to be a counterfeit; for he is but the counterfeit of a man, who hath not the life of a man. Shakespeare.

This priest, being utterly unacquainted with the true person, according to whole pattern he should shape his image, and he could think it possible for him to instruct his pupils, either in gesture or fashion, or in fit answer to questions, to come near their counterpart. Bacon.

But trust me, child, I am much inlin'd to fee.
Some counterfeit in this your Jupiter. Addison, Ovid.

2. Something made in imitation of another, intended to pass for that which it resembles; a forgery.

I know not where, When I was shamed. Some counterfeit; yet my mother feend The Dian of that time. Shakespeare's Cymbeline.

There would be no counterfeit but for the lack of something real; though pretenders seem to be what they really are not, yet they pretend to be something that really is. Tillotson.

COUNTERFEITER, n. s. [from counterfeit.]

A forger; one who contrives copies to pass for originals.

Henry the Second altered the coin, which was corrupted by counterfeiters, to the great good of the commonwealth. Camden.

COUNTERFEITLY, adv. [from counterfeit.] Faliley; fictiously; with forgery.

Since the wisdom of their choice is rather to have my cap than my heart, I will pilfer the impatient nod, and be off to them most counterfeit. Shakespeare's Coriolanus.

COUNTERFEITMENT, n. s. [counterfeit and ernent.] Forger opposed to ferment.

What woman, or counterfeit woman, must a medley of interdependence produce in the body! When I behold a fashionable table, I fancy I see improper dainties lurking in ambush among the glittering dishes. dryer.

COUNTERFEITNESS, n. s. [contrefaire, French.] The act of counterfeiting; forgery. Not in use.

And his man Reynard, with fine counterfeits, supports his credit and his countriaome. Hubard's Table.

Such is the face of falsehood, fashion the light Of Sall Deusia, when her borrowed light Is laid away, and counterfeit known. Fairy 2.

COUNTERFET, n. s. [from counter and ferre.]

Counterfeiters, butchers or parrots, are pillarserv- ing to support walls or terrasses subject to bulge. Chambers.

COUNTERFA'TE, n. s. [from counter and gage.]

In carpentry, a method used to measure the joints, by transferring the breadth of a mortice to the place where the tenon is to be, in order to make them fit each other. Chambers.

COUNTERGUARD, n. s. [from counter and guard.] A small rampart, with parapet and ditch, to cover some part of the body of the place. Military Dict.

COUNTERLIGHT, n. s. [from counter and light.] A window or light opposite to any thing, which makes it appear to a disadvantage. Chambers.

To COUNTERMARCH, v. a. [contremander, French.]

1. To order the contrary to what was ordered or intended before; to contradict, annul, or repeal a command.

In states notoriously irreligious, a secret and irresistible power countermand their deepest projects, and frustrate their policies; with fruadation and a curse. Start.

2. To oppose; to contradict the orders of another.

For us to alter any thing, is to lift up ourselves against God, and, as it were, to countermand him. Hester.

3. To prohibit.

Avien, counterfeiters letting blood in choleric bodies, because he sitema the blood a braise of the fall. Chambers.

COUNTERMARCH, n. s. [contremand, Fr.]

Repeal of a former order.

Have you no counterfeit for Claudio yet; It must be die to-morrow? Shak, Macf. for Macf. To COUNTERMARCH, v. a. [counter and march.] To march backward; to march in indirect ways.

COUNTERMARCH, n. s. [from the verb.]

1. Retrocession; march backward; march in a different direction from the former.

How are such an infinite number of things placed with such order in the memory, notwithstanding the tumults, marches, and countermarches of the animal spirits? Collis on Thought.

2. Change of measures; alteration of conduct.

They make him do and undo, go forward and backward by such countermarches and retracements, as we do not willingly impute to wisdom. Burnet's Theory of the Earth.

COUNTERMARK, n. s. [counter and mark.]

A third mark put on a bale of goods belonging to several merchants, that it may not be opened but in the presence of them all.

2. The mark of the goldsmiths company, to show the metal is standard, added to that of the artificer.

3. An artificial cavity made in the teeth of horses, that have outgrown their natural mark, to diluge their age.

4. A mark added to a medal a long time after it is struck, by which the curious know with what order it has undergone.

COUNTERMARK. v. a. [counter and mark.]

A horse is said to be countermarked, when his corner teeth are artificially hollowed, a false mark being made in the holloas and retractions, as we do not willingly impute to wisdom. Farquh. Dill.

COUNTERMARK. n. s. [counter and mine.]

1. A well or hole sunk into the ground, from which a gallery or branch runs out under ground, to feck out the enemy's mine, and disappont it. Military Dict.

After this they mined the wells, laid the powder, and rammed the mouths; but the citizens made a counterette, and thereunto they poured such a plenty of water, that the wet powder could not be fired. Hayward.

He thinking himself contemned, knowing no counterfeit against contempts but terror, began to let nothing pass, which might bear the colour of a fault, without sharp punishment. Sidney.

3. A stratagem by which any contrivance is defeated.

The matter being brought, to a trial of skill, the countermove was only an act of self-preservation. To COUNTERMARK, v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To delve a passage into an enemy's mine, by which the powder may evaporate without mischief.

31. To...
To counterwork; to defeat by secret measures.

Thus infallibly it must be, if God do not miraculously crown us, and do more for us than we can do for ourselves.

dey of Pieces.

Contrary motion; opposition of motion.

That resistance is a counterpoint, or equivalent to one, is plain by this, that any body which is preferr'd must needs press again on the body that pressures it.

Digby on the Soul.

If any of the returning spirits should happen to fall foul upon others which are outward bound, these counterpoint, or counterbalance, would over-turn them, or occasion a later arrival.

Collier.

A wall built up behind another wall, to supply its place.

The great fly flying through the breach, did beat down houses; but the counterpoise, new built against the breach, standing upon a lower ground, it seldom touched.

Keate.

Contrary to nature.

A contrary, a counterpoise, hefeck extension of the body.

Harvey on Contraposition.

A found by which any other noise is overpowered.

They endeavor'd, either by a constant force, or by distant delights to charm and lull asleep, or else by a counterpoint of revellings and riotous excess to drown, the faster whisperings of their confidence.

Chambers.

An aperture or vent on the contrary side.

A tent, plugging up the entrance, would make the matter secure to the part disposed to receive it, and mark the place for a counterpoise.

Sharpe's Surgery.

Counterpart.

Contrary measure; attempts in opposition to any scheme.

When the least counterpoises are made to their measures, it will then be time enough for our malcontents.

Swift.

A counterpoise for a bed, or any thing else written in figures. It is sometimes written, according to cytolomy, counterpoint.

In this capacity, I have studded my crown.

In cyphers, marks are counterpoises. Shakespeare.

Counterpart.

The correspondent part; the part which answers to another, as the two papers of a contract; the part which fits another, as the key of a cypher.

There are many laws of Newman agree with each other so well as those of England; that so far as they form, as it were, copies or counterparts one of another.

An old fellow with a young wench, may pass for a counterpart of this table.

Digby on the Soul.

Oh counterpart!

Of our fat sex well are you made lords.

So bold, so great, so god-like are you form'd.

Hence let your love! It is fully done.

Dryden.

He is to consider the thought of his author, and his words, and to find out the counterpart to each in another language. Digby on the Soul.

In the discovery, the two different plots look like counterparts and copies of one another.

Adolphus's Spectator.

Counterplot.

A. [from counter and plot.] In law, a replication as, if a stranger to the action begun desire to be admitted to say what he can for the safeguard of his estate, that which the defendant allege against this request is called a counterplot.

Sowerby.

To counterplot. n. a. [counter and plot.]

To oppose one machination by another; to obviate art by art.

Counterplot. n. a. [from counter and plot.]

An artifice opposed to an artifice.

The wolf that had a plot upon the kid, was confounded by a counterplot of the kid upon the wolf; and such a counterplot as the wolf, with all his talon's fury, was not able to force. L'Estrange.

Counterplot. n. a.

A counterplot woven in squares, commonly spoken counterpoint. See Counterpoint.

To counterpose. n. a. [counter and pose.]

1. Counterbalance; to be equi-pendant to; to act against with equal weight. Our spoils we have brought home.

Do more than counterpoise a full third part.

The charges of the action, Shakespeare's Coriolanus.

The force and the distance of weights counterposing one another, ought to be reciprocally.

Digby on the Soul.

2. To produce a contrary action by an equal weight.

The heaviest of bodies must be counterposed by a plummet fastened upon the tail of the.

Within.

3. To act with equal power against any person or cause.

So many freeholders of England will be able to bear to counterpose the rest.

Spenzer on Ireland.

Counterpose. n. a. [from counter and pose.]

1. Equipoise; equivalence of weight; equal force in the opposite scale of the balance.

Take her by the hand,

And tell her she is the thing to whom I promise.

A counterpoise if not in thy estate.

A balance more requisite.

Shakespeare.

An allusion to the allusion.

2. The scale of being placed in the opposite scale of the balance.

The Eternal hung forth his golden scales,

Wherein all things created first he weigh'd.

The pendulous round earth, with balance's air

In counterpoises.

Milton's Paradise Lost.

3. Equipoise; equilibrium of power.

The second nobles are a counterpois to the higher nobility, that they grow not too potent.

Bacon.

Their generals, by their credit in the army, were, with the magistrates and other civil officers, a sort of counterpoise to the power of the people.

Swift.

Counterpoise. n. a. [counter and poise.]

Antidote; medicine by which the effects of poison are obviated. Counterpoises must be adapted to the case; for example, in poison from sublimed corrosive, and arsenic.

Aubrey.

Counterpressure. n. a. [counter and press.]

Opposite force; power acting in contrary directions.

Does it not all hang by heads confound,

That troops of atoms from all parts around,

Of equal number, and of equal force,

Should to this single point direct their course?

That to the middle,

Of equal vigour, might their motions play,

And by a steady pole the whole in quiet lie?

Blackmore.

Counterproject. n. a. [counter and project.]

Correspondent part of a scheme.

A clear reason why they never sent any forces to Sicily, for the obligation to enter into a treaty of peace with France, until that entire monarchy was yielded as a preliminary, was from out of the counterproject by the Dutch.

Swift.

To counterproject. n. a. [counter and project.]

To take off a design in black lead, or red chalk, by passing it through the rolling-press with another piece of paper, both being moistened with a sponge.

Chambers.

To counterroll. n. a. [counter and roll.]

This is now generally written as it is spoken, control.

To preserve the power of detecting frauds by another account.

Counterrollment. n. a. [from counterroll.]

A counter account; controlment.

This manner of exercising of this office, hath many testimonies, interchangable warrants, and counterrollments, whereof each, running through the hands, and rolling in the power, of many several persons, sufficient to argue and convince all manner of falsehood.

Bacon.

Counterstep. n. a. [from counter and step.]

That side of the ditch which is next the camp, or properly the talus that supports the earth of the covert-way; although by this term is often understood the whole covert-way, with its parapet and glacis: and so it is to be understood when it is said the enemy lodged themselves on the counterstep.

Harries.

To counterstep. n. a. [from counter and step.]

To sign an order or patent of a superiour, in quality of secretary, to render it more authentick. Thus charters are signed by the king, and countersigned by a secretary of state, or lord chancellor.

Chambers.

Counterstep. n. a. [from counter and step.]

One of the mean or middle parts of musick; so called, as it were, opposite to the tenor.

Harries.

I am deaft: this deafness unqualifies me for all company, except a few with counterstep voices.

Swift.

Counterstep. n. a. [counter and step.

Contrary tide; fluctuations of the water.

Such were our countersteps at land, and so Prefaging of the fatal blow.

In your prodigious ebb and flow.

Dryden.

Counterstep. n. a. [counter and step.]

1. The defence or resistance of a horfe, that intercepts his casde, and the measure of his manage.

Farrier's Dist.

2. Defence; opposition.

Let chearfulness on happy fortune wait,

And give not thus the counterstep to fate.

Dryden.

Counterturn. n. a. [counter and turn.

The catastroph, called by the Romans flatus, the height and full growth of the play, we may call properly the counterturn, which destroys that expectation, revolups the action in new difficulties, and leaves you sore diisant from that hope in which it found you.

Dryden on Drumphrick Pity.

To counterturn. n. a. [counter and turn.

To COUNTERVAIL. n. a. [counter and value, Latin.] To be equivalent to; to have equal force or value; to act against with equal power.

In
There are many cases where there may be found such qualities as are to counteract those exceptions which might be taken against them, and such men's authority is not likely to be shaken off. But, with caution, I divide them from him, And with importance, I charge him, that he--

Who, soon prepared to fight, his sword forth drew,

And him with equal valor counteracted.

Fairy Queen.

The outward streams, which defend, must be of so much force as to counteract all that weight whereby the attending fire does exceed the other.

William's Dialogue.

We are to compute, that, upon balancing the account, the profit at last will hardly counteract the inconveniences that go along with it. J. Mill's Economic.

COUNTERVAIL. n.f. [from the verb.]

1. Equal weight; power or value sufficient to obviate any effect or objection.

2. That which has equal weight or value with something else.

Surely, the present pleasure of a sinful act is a poor counteract for the bitterness of the review, which begins where the action ends, and lasts for ever.

Swift's Sentences.

COUNTERVIEW, n.f. [counter and view.]

1. Opposition; a pollute which in two perions front each other.

Most while, ere this was found'd, and judged on earth.

Within the gates of hell fat and death,

In counterview.

Aim's Paradigm.

2. Contradiction; a position in which two different things illustrate each other.

I have drawn some lines of Linger's character, on purpose to place it in counterview or contrast with that of the other company.

Swift's Political.

COUETWORK, n.a. [counter and work.]

To counteract any evil effect by contrary operations.

But heaven's great view is one, and that the whole:

That counteracts both folly and caprice;

That dispels the effect of every vice.

Page.

COUET, n.f. [comte., Lat. comitess, French.]

The lady of an earl or count.

I take it, that he carries up the train,

Is that old noble lady, the duchess of Norfolk.

It's, and all the rest are counter.

Swift's Henry VIII.

It is the peculiar happiness of the counties of Albion to have been so truly loved by you while you was living, and so gratefully honoured after that you was dead.

COUETING-HOUSE. n.f. [count and house.]

The room appropriated by traders to their books and accounts.

Men in trade seldom think of laying out money upon land, till their profits have brought them in more than their trade can well employ; and their idle bags cumbering their country-neighbors, put them upon emptying them.

Locke.

COUETLESS, adj. [from counter.]

Innumerable; without number; not to be reckoned.

Dry, rare for year, and living kids for kids,

Thy brother Marcus tenders thy slips on.

O were the fam of thee! that I should say

Careless and infinite, yet would I pay them. Stat. Brev. 24. But he who has mixtures which includes Legions of mischief, county's multitudes.

Of former coasts; Demas.

By one countess Iam of wise appetit,

Hate the care, and ignorant of any.

We find the vital springs relaxed and warm,

Thus thro' the round of ages, to childhood we return.

Prior.

I feel, I cried, his worn, a countess train;

Hee his friends ne'ere rhwihl'd beneath the main.

Pope's Odyssey.

COUNTRY, n.f. [countrice, Fr. contrat, Low Lat., supposed to be contraband from contraband.]

1. A tract of land; a region, as distinguished from other regions.

They require to be examined concerning the descriptions of those counties of which they would be informed.

Sprunt.

2. The parts of a region distant from cities or courts; rural parts.

Would I have for happiness creel,

Nature alone should be the architect;

She'd build it more convenient than great,

And doubtless the cause has been her duty. Bury.

I for him hurry from country to country, and from the town back again into the country. Swift's.

3. The place which any man inhabits, or in which he at present resides.

Send out more horses, strike the country round.

Hang there that rath of fear. Stukeley. Macleod.

4. The place of one's birth; the native soil.

The king for a foot a reformation in the ornaments and advantages of our country.

Sprunt.

O save my country, hear me! shall be your king.

Page.

5. The inhabitants of any region.

All the country, in a general voice.

Cried have upon him, all their prayers and love.

Went for Otho. Shakespeare's Henry IV.

COUNTRYMAN, n.f. [from country and man.]

1. One born in the same country, or tract of ground.

Locke.

Ere, who comes here!

My countryman, but yet I know him not.

Maritell.

If men, great buds! so fate ordains, rote;

And, bold as were his countrymen in fight,

Scotch their feet alive, from degrading grave.

And for their conduct in eternal light. Prior.

The English soldiers with great vigour under the conduct of one whom they do not consider only as their leader, but as their counsellor.

Addison on the War.

2. A rustic one that inhabits the rural parts.

A countryman took a boar in his corn. L'Estrange.

COUET, n.f. [comte., Fr. comitatius, Lat.]

1. A serf; a husbandman.

A countryman takes a boar in his corn. L'Estrange.

CoUET, n.f. [comte., Fr. comitatius, Lat.]

1. A serf; a husbandman.

A countryman takes a boar in his corn. L'Estrange.

COUET, n.f. [comte., Fr. comitatius, Lat.]

1. A serf; a husbandman.
A piece of chrysolite included a couple of drops, which looked like water when they were glassed, though perhaps they are not but bubbles of air.

Addison on Italian.

To couple. v. t. [coupled, Latin.]

1. To chain together.

Huntman, I charge thee, tender well my hounds; And couple Clowner with the deep-mouth'd Brach. Shakespeare.

2. To join one to another.

What greater ill have the heavens in store, To couple coming harms with sorrow path. Sidney. And whereas we went, like Juno's swans, Still we went coupled and inseparable. Dryden.

Put the taches into the loops, and couple the tent together that it may be one. Exod. xxix. 11.

They behold your couple conversation with us. 1 Peter, iii. 2.

Their concerns were so coupled, that if nature had not been, yet their religions would have made them brothers. Swift.

That man makes a mean figure in the state and reason, who is measuring syllables and coupling rhymes, when he should be mending his own soul, and forming his own immortality. Pope.

3. To marry; to wed; to join in wedlock.

I shall rejoice to fee you so coupled, as may be fit both for your honour and your satisfaction. Sidney.

I am just going to affit with the archbishop, in degrading a person who couples all our beggars by which I shall make one happy man. Swift.

To couple. v. n. To join in embraces.

Waters in several parts of Africa being rare, divers forts of beasts get from several parts to drink, and so being refreshed, fall to couple, and many times with several kinds. Bacon.

Thus with thy loyal crew,
Call wantons, as I have, to the sides of men,
And coupled with them, and begot a race. Milton's Paradise Regain'd.

That great variety of brutes in Africa, is by reason of the meeting together of brutes of several species, at water, and the promiscuous couplings of males and females of several species. Hall's Origin of Mankind.

After this alliance, Let tigers match with hinds, and wolves with sheep, And every creature couple with his foe. Dryden's Spanish Fairs.

COUPLE-BEGAR. n. f. [couple and beggar.] One that makes it his business to marry beggars to each other.

No couple-beggar in the land. Per join'd such numbers hand in hand. Swift.

COPLET. n. f. [French.]

1. Two verses; a pair of rhymes.

They should each carry their tripos, and holding hand in hand, dance by the taken cadence of their voices, which they would use in singing some short couplet, whereas the one half beginning, the other half following after. Dryden.

Then at the left, an only couple straight.

With some uneasiness they call a thought; A melodist Alexandrine ends the long, Their like wounded name, drags its bow length along. Pope.

In Pope I cannot read a line, But with a figh I wish it mine; When he, like in one couplet, More sensible than I can do in six, It gives me such a jealous fit, I cry, ox take him with his wit! Swift.}

2. A pair, as of doves.

Anem, as patient as the female dove, Enr her golden couplet are diffec'd, His silence will fit dropping. Shakespeare's Hamlet.

COU RAGE. n. f. [courage, Fr. from car, lat. carus] active; fortitude; spirit of enterprise.

The king-becoming grace,
Devotion, patience, courage, fortitude,
I have no reproof of them. Shakespeare's Macbeth.

Their discipline Now mingled with their courage. Shakes. Cymbeline.

Hope arms their courage; from their towers they throw
Their darts with double force, and drive the foe. Dryden.

Courage, that grows from constitution, very often forsets a man when he has occasion for it; and when it is only a kind of foolish pride in the soul, it breaks out on all occasions, without judgment or direction. That courage which arises from the sense of our duty, and from the fear of offending Him that made us, always in an uniform manner, and according to the dictates of right reason. Addison's Guardian.

Nothing but the want of common courage was the cause of their misfortunes. Swift.

CO U RAGEOUS. adj. [from courage.]

1. Brave; daring; bold; enterprising; adventurous; hardy; stout.

And he that is courageous among the mighty, Shall fly away in day. Amos, iv. 6.

Let us imitate the courageous example of St. Paul, who chose then to magnify his office when ill men conspired to leaff it. Atterbury.

2. It is used ludicrously by Shakespeare for courageous. He is very courageous mad, about his throwing into the water. Shakespeare.

CO U RAGEOUSLY. adv. [from courageous.]

Bravely; stoutly; boldly.

The king the next day presented him battle upon the plain, the fields there being open and spacious; the east courageously came down, and joined battle with him. Bacon's History VII.

CO U R AG E O USNESS, n. f. [from courageous.]

Bravery; boldness; spirit; courage.

Nicerick hearing of the manifolds and the couragousness that they had to fight for their country, durst not try the matter by the sword. 2 Mas. scr. xiv. 18.

CO U RAN ST. n. f. [curante, Fr.] See COURANT.

1. A nimble dance.

I'll like a mad the better, while I have a tooth in my head: why, he is able to lead her a courant. Shakespeare.

2. Any thing that spreads quick, as a paper of news.

To COURB. v. n. [courier, French.] To bend; to bow; to slop in supplication. Not in use.

In the fittest of the lusty times, Virtue listeth of vice much pardon beg. Yeas, curb and woe, for ladder is defile good. Shakespeare's Hamlet.

COU RIER. n. f. [courier, French.] A messenger sent in haste; an express; a runner.

I met a courier, one mine ancient friend. Shakespeare's Timon.

This thing the wary falls well perceiving, by speedy couriers advertised, Polyphemus, with many's purposes, requesting him with all speed to repair with his army to Tauris. Knolles's History.

CO U R SE. n. f. [course, Fr. curus. Latin.]

1. Race; career.

And some the arms with sinewy force, And some the arms with (twofold) force. Cowley.

2. Passage from place to place; progress.

To this may be referred, the course of a river.

And when we had finished our course from Tyre, we came to Potemis. Aris. xxv. 7.

Their silent course to Pium's well known store. Dryden.

3. Tilt; act of running in the lists.

Writ this every one in his course.

If any man speak in an unknown tongue, let it be by two, or at the most by three, and that by course; and let one interpret 1 Cor. xiv. 27.

4. Ground on which a race is run.

And in the end meet the old course of death.

Women will all turn monsters. Shak. King Lear.

The duke cannot deny the course of law. Shakespeare.

If God, by his revealed declaration, first gave rule to any man, he, that will claim by that title, must have the same positive grant of God for his succession; for, if it has not directed the course of its servant and conveyance, no body can succeed to that which is the right of the first ruler.

10. Series of successive and methodical procedure.

The glands did resolve during her course of physic, and the continuance very well to this day, as is shown in the history of King Lear.

11. The elements of an art exhibited and explained, in a methodical series. Hence our courses of philosophy, anatomy, chymistry, and mathematics. Chambers.

12. Conduite manner of proceeding.

Gritius perceiving the danger he was in, began to doubt with himself what course were best for him to take. That worthy deputy finding nothing but a common misery, took the best course he possibly could to establish a commonwealth in Ireland. Dryden.

He placed commissioners there, who governed it only in a course of direction, part martial, part civil. Wesley.

Give willingly what I can do, and take kindly what I cannot do. And know, obedience is your safest course. Wesley.

But if a right course be taken with children, there will be no such need of common rewards and punishments. Locke.

'Tis time we should decree.

What course to take, the senate observing how, in all circumstances, they were forced to yield to the tribunes and people, thought it wiser course to give way also to time.

23. Method.
I am continually flouting hares for you to cours; we were certainly cut out for one another; for my temper quite an amorous just where times takes it up.

To Cour. v. m. To run and rove about.
Swift: as quicksilver is carried through the natural gales and alloys of the body.

The blood, before cold and felted, left the liver white and pale, with the badge of pulsatillity and cowances; but the sheiris warms it, and makes it cours from the inwards to the parts extreme.

She said do cours o'er me my secreries, with such a greedy intimation, that the appetite of her eye did seem to forco me up like a burning glass.

Ten brace and more of ghoulsounds, hoary tail, and tall as flags, ran loose, and cours'd around his chair.

All, at once:
Relapsing quick, as quickly resco.

And mix, and thwart, extinguish, and renew,
All other courfing in a maze of light.

To Cour. n. s. from course; courser, French.

1. A swift horse; a war horse: a word not used in prose.

He proudly pricked on his cours strong,
And Atin ay him pricks with spur's of shame and wrong.

Then to his absent guest the king decreed
A pair of coursers, born of heavy breed;
Who from their mottles breath'd ethereal fire,
Whom Cineus fols from her celestial sire.

Dryden's Eneid.

Th'impatient coursers pants in every vein,
And, pawing, seems to bear the distant plais;
Hills, vales, and floods appear already cour'd,
And, ere he starts, a thousand foals are lost. Pipp.

2. One who pursues the sport of coursing hares.
A leach is a leathern thong, by which a falconer holds his, or a courser leads his greyhound.

COURT. n. s. [from cour, Fr. heint, Dut. curtis, low Latin.]

1. The place where the prince resides; the palace.

There do you keep a hundred hunters and squires; Men do so farly, so debase их and boast,
That this our court, infected with their maladies,
Shews a riotous inn; epicurism and lust
Make it more like a tavern, or a brothel,
Than a grace'd palace. Shakespeare's King Lear.

It shall be an habitation of dragons, and a court for evils.

Shaks, ejm. 13.

His expressions, that every mouth should have the word, was such, that you would think he had never seen a court; the politeness with which this justice was administered, would convince you he never lived out of one.

A suppliant to your royal court I come.

Swift's Old Age.

2. The hall or chamber where justice is administered.

Are you acquainted with the different? That holds this present question in the court?

St. Paul being brought up unto the highest court in Athens, to give an account of the doctrine he had preached concerning Jesus and the resurrection, took occasion to impress on those magistrate's a future state.

Arethure.

3. Open space before a house.
You must have, before you come to the front, three court; a given court gain, with a wall about it; a second court of the same, but more garnished with little terraces, or other embellishments, upon the wall; and a third court, to square with the front, not to be built but inclosed with a waked wall.

Dryden.

Suppose it were the king's bedchamber, but the meanest man in the tragedy must come and dispatch his business, rather than in the lobby or court yard (in which they sit for them) for fear the flag of the shire be cleared, and the secones works.

Dryden.

4. A small opening inclosed with houres, and paved with broad stones, distiniqued ed from a street.

6. Persons who compose the retinue of a prince.

To Cour. v. u. a. [from the noun.] to court; to solicit a woman to marriage.

Follow a shadow, it flies you;

So come if I will pursue:

Let her alone, she will court you.

John, P. K.

Fird with her love, and with ambition led,

The neighboring princes court her mortal bed.

Dryden's Aurengzbe.

3. To flatter; to endeavour to please.

Alas! Sempronius, wouldst thou talk of love?

To Mars, while his father's life's in danger?

When thou mightest as well court the pale trembling veil,

While she beholds the holy flame expiring.

Auray.

Ev'n now, when silent scorn is all they gain,

A thousand court you, though they court in vain.

Swift.

2. To solicit; to seek.

Their own ease and satisfaction would quickly teach children to court commendation, and avoid doing what they found condemned.

Locke, on Education.

1. To woo; to solicit a woman to marriage.

Follow a shadow, it flies you;

So come if I will pursue:

Let her alone, she will court you.

John, P. K.

Fird with her love, and with ambition led,

The neighboring princes court her mortal bed.

Dryden's Aurengzbe.

3. To flatter; to endeavour to please.

Alas! Sempronius, wouldst thou talk of love?

To Mars, while his father's life's in danger?

When thou mightest as well court the pale trembling veil,

While she beholds the holy flame expiring.

Auray.

Ev'n now, when silent scorn is all they gain,

A thousand court you, though they court in vain.

Swift.

2. To solicit; to seek.

Their own ease and satisfaction would quickly teach children to court commendation, and avoid doing what they found condemned.

Locke, on Education.

1. To woo; to solicit a woman to marriage.

Follow a shadow, it flies you;

So come if I will pursue:

Let her alone, she will court you.

John, P. K.

Fird with her love, and with ambition led,

The neighboring princes court her mortal bed.

Dryden's Aurengzbe.
CoU

The judge took time to deliberate, and the next court-day be spake.

Court-dresser. n. f. [court and dresser.] One that dresses the court, or persons of rank; a flatterer.

There are many ways of falsify; such arts of giving colours, appearances, and refemblances, by this court-dresser, fancy, Lucrece.

Court-favour. n. f. Favourites or bene- fits bestowed by princes.

We part with the belongings of both worlds for pleasures, court-favours, and commissions; and at last, when we have fold ourselves to our left, we grow sick of our bargain.

Court-hand. n. [court and hand.] The hand or manner of writing used in records and judicial proceedings.

He can make obligations, and write court-hand.

Court-Lady. n. f. [court and lady.] A lady conformed or employed in court.

The same, long continued, is as intolerable with them, as the appearing long in the same clothes or fashion is to a court-lady.

Courtly, adj. [courtis, French.] Elegant of manners; polite; well-bred; all facts of respect.

He hath deserved the merit of his country; and his manner, very much so, as those who have been supple and courteous to the people.

They are one while courteous, civil, and obliging; but, within a small time after, are supercilious, sharp, troublesome, fierce, and exquisitely.

Courtly, adv. [from courteous.] Respectfully; civilly; compliantly.

I thought them to be gentlemen of much more value than their habits bewrayed, yet he led them courteously.

While Christ was upon earth, he was not only easy of access, he did not only courteously receive all that addressed themselves to him, but also did not disdain himself to travel up and down the country.

Cools, C. Colossus.

Alienous, being prevalent upon the glory of his name, entertained him courteously.

Couttsness. n. f. [from courteous.]

Civility; complaisance.

Courtse van. n. f. [certifana, low Lat.]

Courtsevan. n. tin. A woman of the town; a prostitute; a harlot.

'Tis a brave night to court a courtsevan.

[Shakespeare's King Lear.]

With them there are no favours, no silly compliments; no courtsevan; nor any thing of that kind may they wonder, with detestation, at you in Europe, which permit such things.

[Benjamin's New Atlantic.]

The Corinthian is a column fabulously decked like a courtsevan.

Charon, the brother of Sappho, in love with Rhodope the courtsevan, spout his whole estate upon her.

[Abbein.]

Courtsevan. n. f. [certifia, Fr. certes, Italian.]

Elegance of manners; civility; complaisance.

Sir, you are very welcome to our house: It must appear in other ways than words, Therefore I shall not breathe courtsevan.

[Shakespeare's Merchant of Venice.]

We have seen his estate, his hospitality, his courtsevan to strangers.

[Pet. Hume.]

He, who was compounded of all the elements of affability and courtsevan towards all kind of people, brought all a habit of neglect, and even of rudeness, towards the queen.

[Clarendon.]

Courtsevan is fomme found in lowly shades With finny wits, then in rapturous halls. And courts of princes, where it first was nam'd.

COURTLINE. See CURTAIN.

Courtlike, adj. [court and like.] Elegant; polite.

Our English tongue is, I will not say as scurvy as the Hebrew, or as learned as the Greek, but as fluent as the Latin, as courteous as the Spanish, as courtly as the French, and as amorous as the Italian.

[Camden's Remains.]

Courtliness, n. f. [from courtly.] Elegance of manners; grace of men; complaisance; civility.

The slightest part that you excite in, is courtliness.

[Leu's Digby in Sir Kenelm Digby.]

Courtling. n. f. [from court.] A courtier; a retainer to a court.

Courtier. Feather thou shouldst utterly Dispare my work, than praise it foolishly.

[Ben Jonson.]

Courtly, adj. [from courtly.] Relating or retained to the court; elegant; folt; flattering.

In our own time, some courtly strains.

[From page than Addison's remains. Pag.]

Courtly, adv. In the manner of courts; elegantly.

They can produce nothing so courtly as, or which expostulates so much, the conversation of a gentleman, as Sir John Suckling.

[Dryden in Dramatic Poetry.]

Courtship, n. f. [from court.]

1. The act of soliciting favour.

He paid his courtship with the crowd, as for a much grade a nobleman.

[Swift.]

2. The solicitation of a woman to marriage.

Be merry, and employ your chiefest thoughts to courtship, and such fair offers of love, as shall convenient to your desire.

[Shakespear's Merchant of Venice. In tedious courtship we declare our pains, And are we kindness find, shall meet disdance.]

Every man in the time of courtships, and in the first entrance of marriage, puts on a behaviour like my correspondent's holiday suit. Addison's Guard. As for us moderns, what a courtship of.
To Cow. v. a. [from cowerd, by contraction.] To depred with fear; to oppress with habitual timidity.

Mackell was from his mother's womb
Untimely ripp'd.

—Accursed be that tongue that tells me so,
For it hath rev'd my better part of man.
Shakespeare's Macbeth.

By reason of their frequent revolts, they have, drawn upon themselves the pretenses of war so often, that it seems to have somewhat colored their spirits.

Herew'! Good Forf. For when men by their wives are rev'd;
Their horns of course are understood. Holinshed.

Cow-herd. n. f. (cow, and hyb. Sax, a keeper.) One whose occupation is to tend cows.

Cow-house. n. f. (cow and baung.) The booth in which kine are kept.

You must hooze your milch cows, that you give hay to, in your cow-lofts all night. Mariner.

Cow-leech. n. f. (cow and leeched.) One who professes to cure distempered cows.

Cow-leech. v. n. To profess to cure cows.

Though there are many pretenders to the art of watching and even healing, yet many of them are very ignorant, especially in the country. Mariner's History.

Cow-weed. n. f. (cow and weeded.) A species of chervil.

Cow-wheat. n. f. (cow and weat.) A plant.

Coward. n. f. (coward, Fr. of uncertain derivation.)

1. A poltroon; a wretch whose predominant passion is fear.

Pyrrhus did such wonders, beyond belief, as was able to lead Mithridatus to courage, though he had been born a coward.

There was a soldier that vaunted, before Julius Cæsar, of the honors he had received in his face. Cæsar, knowing him to be but a coward, told him, You were but taken, next time you run away, how you look back.

Some are brave one day, and cowards another, as great captains have often told me, from their own experience and observation. Temple.

A coward does not always escape with disgrace, but sometimes he loses his life. South.

'Tremble ye not, oh friends! and coward fly,
Down by the dear Teklemosus to die.' Fides Officia.

2. It is sometimes used in the manner of an adjective.

Having more man than wit about me, I drew;
And rais'd the house with load and coward cries. Shakespeare.

Invading fear repel my coward joy,
And its forebear the plains defray. Prior.

Cowardice. n. f. (from cowarded.) Fear; habitable timidity; pulchritudinim; want of courage.

Cerers, Sir kesht, ye were too much to blame,
Thus for to blot the honour of the dead;
And with foul cowardice his carcasse flame,
Whose livid hand, imbus, calleth'd him Fair. Queen.

Gallant and fearlesse courage will turn into a native and hardihead valour, and make them hate the cowardice of his neighbours. Milton.

None was of force; for falling is no shame,
And cowardice alone is joy of fame.
The vert'rous boldnes is from the faddle throwne,
But 'tis the fault of fortune, not his name. Dryden. Fab.'s.

This great, this holy, this terrible Being, is present to all our affections; for every tenderest inclination of our heart to defend his service; and treasurers up, against the day of his wrath, the secret cowardice which doth us from affording his cade, which prevails on us to compliment the virtues of the men we uphold and exalt, and laugh with the profaner. Rogers's Socræa.

Cowardliness. n. f. (from cowardly.) Timidity; cowardice.

Cowardly. adj. [from coward.] 1. Fearful; timorous; pulchritudinious.

An Egyptian foot抄layer made Antonius believe that his spirits were wrong, and the most of his confidence, was in the presence of Octavius poor and cowardly. Ræ's Natural History.

2. Mean; befitting a coward; proceeding from fear.

I do find it cowardy and vile,
For fear of what might fall, to prevent
The time of fear.
Shakespeare's Julius Cæsar.

Let all such as can enhance their considerance like him, and his cowardly spirit, think on that which fills him with such diversion, know, that Cæsar will one day learn them.
Shakespeare.

Cowardly. adv. In the manner of a coward; meanly; vilely.

He shamefully repays his servi of men no courage, who had most cowardly turned their backs upon their enemies.

Cowardship. n. f. (from coward.) The character or qualities of a coward; meanesses; a word not now in use.

A very valiant boy, and more a coward than a base: his disposition appears in leaving his friend here in necessity, and denying him; and for his cowardship, ask Fabian.
Shakespeare.

To Cow'er. v. n. (courture, Welsh, to curture, Fr, or perhaps borrowed from the manner in which a cow sinks on her knees.) To fink by bending the knees; to stoop to, to crouch.

Let the pail be put over the man's head above water, then he rover down, and the pail be prefed down with him. Bacon.

The fulling cotts cowr'd in the finding fands,
And would not dare me with their ragged tidis.
Shakespeare.

As thus he spake, each bird and beast beheld,
Approaching two and two, thieves crowing low
With blasphimous, each bird spoor'd to wing-
Milton.

Our dame fixed cow'ring o'er a kitchen fire,
Iraw. W. 3. 1. 4.

Cow's-wish. adj. [from To cew, to give.] Timorous; fearful; mean; pulchritudinious; cowardly. Not in uie.

It is the roguey terror of his spirits,
That does not understand: he'll not feel wrong,
Which tickle him to an answer.
Shakespeare. King Lear.

Cow'keeper. n. f. (cow'dle and keeper in Chirhit's code distortion, know, that Chirhit will one day learn them.
Shakespeare.

The term cowkeeper and hogkeeper are not to be used in our poetry; but there are no finer words in the Greek language.
Brow.

Cowell. n. f. (cuye, Saxon, cauillus, Latin.)

1. A man's hood.

You may imagine that Francis Cornelius did fracthe his chowe, when he had fweetly invented, to dignify his name, saint Francis with his friezy cowl in a cowfled. Cowled.

If differ more, you see, than crown and cowl,
I'll tell you, friend, a wife man and a fool.
Pep.

2. [Perhaps from cool, cooler, a veioline in which hot liqour is set to cool. A veioline in which water is carried on a pole between two men.

Cowl-staff. n. f. (cowl and staff.) The staff on which a veioline is supported between two men.

Which (toiling him fourting high)
He apprehended to Pegassos, Serling.
COZ

To Coy. v. a. [for deeply.] To allure. Not in use.

I'll mount barren their loves,
By their hearts from them, and come home be-

Of all they trade in Rome. Shakespeare, Coriolanus.

CO'ZEN, n. f. [from czen.] Fraud; deceit; artifice; fallacy; trick; cheat; the practice of cheating.

They say this town is full of czenage,
As nimble faggots that deceive the eye.

Dissipated cheaters.

Shakespeare.

Wisdom without honesty is mere craft and czenage; and therefore the reputation of honesty must first be set up, and hence can be but by living wisely, a good life is a main argument.

"Do you think I am a dunce?"
"No,的确." D'Urfy.

There's no such thing as that we beauty call,
It is mere czenage all,
And though it seems for some few ago
Lick'd certain colours mingled so and so,
That doth not tie me now from changing new.

Imaginary appearances offer themselves to our impatient minds, which entertain these counter-facts, without the least fulfillment of their czenage, Gloucester's Speech.

1. Strange enough! none would live past years again,
Yet all hope pleasure in what yet remain;
And from the dog's life think to receive
What the first frightfully running could not give.

Dryden, All For Good.

But all these are trifles, if we consider the fraud
And czenage of trading men and duplicitous

Swift.

CO'ZEN, n. f. [from czen.] A cheat; a defrauder.

Indeed, Sir, there are czeners abroad, and therefore it behoves men to be wary.

Shakespeare, Winter's Tale.

1. A crustacean fish.

Those that call their shell are, the lobster, the crab, the crick, and the crabs-eye. Those old shells are never found; so as it like they scale off and crumble away by degrees.

Shakespeare, Natural History.

The fox catches crab fish; with his tail, which Olus Magnus faith he himself was an eye-witness of.

Dobry.

2. A wild apple; the tree that bears a wild apple.

Noble rock
Was graft with crab-tree leaf, whose fruitful arts
Shakespeare.

Fetch me a dozen crab-tree leaves, and strong ones; these are the best.

Shakespeare, Henry VIII.

When roastd crabs bite in the bowl,
Then nightly sings the flattering owl.

Shakespeare.

Tell why a graft, taking nourishment from a crab-dock, shall have a fruit more noble than its narde and parent.

Cozen.

3. A peevish morose person.

A wooden engine with three claws for launching of ships, or heaving them in to the dock.

Phillips.

The sign in the zodiac.

Then will you wish and Crab, the Dog divides,
And Argo's keel, that broke the frothy tides.

Crotch.

CRAB, adj. It is used by way of contempt for any or perhaps a degenerate fruit; as, a craberry, a crab plum.

Berries showing their wonted fowl can boast.

Than the crab vintage of the neighboring coal.

Dryden.

CRABBED, adj. [from crab.] 1. Pevish; morose; cynical; four.

A man of years, yet fresh as is more apparent,
Of worth complexion, and of crabbit body.

That him full of melancholy did show.

S. of T.

2. Harsh; unpleasing.

That was when
Those crabbed months had found them four days to draw.

Ere I could make them open thy white hand,
And eke thyself my love.

Shak, Winter's Tale.

How charming is divine philosophy!

No harsh and crabbed, as dull fool foppes,
But musical as is Apollo's lute,
And a perpetual feast of neftard's sweet's,

Where no cruel forest reigns.

Milton.

3. Difficult; perplexing.

Before he was a thorough philosopher,
And had read every text and glose ever;

Whatever the crabbed author had,
He understood h' implicit faith.

Hudibras.

Lucifer had chosen a fussy natur'd engageable.

Dryden.

Your crabbed rogues that read Lucerist
Are against gods, you know.

Prior.

CRABBEDLY, adv. [from crabbit.] Pee-vilishly; morosely; with perplexity.

CRABBEDNESS. n. f. [from crabbit.] 1. Sourness of舌.

1. Sourness of countenance; desperation of manners.

2. Difficulty; perplexity.

CRABBER, n. f. The poor fish have enemies enough, before such unnatural fishermen as otters, the cormorant, and the crabbet, whose bone lane the water-rat.

Hawkins' Angler.

CRABS-ESYE. n. f. Whitsit bodies, rounded on one side, and depressoed on the other, heavy, moderately hard, and without fumel. They are not the eyes of any creature, nor do they belong to the crab, but are produced by the common crawfish; the fumes are bred in two separate bags, on each side of the flamish. They are alkaline, sub-

2. To CRACK. n. f. [krack, Dutch.] 1. A sudden disputation, by which the parts are separated but a little way from each other.

The chink, fissure, or vacancy made by disputation; a narrow breach.

Contrary, when great, do usually produce a fissure or crack of the skull, either in the same part where the blow was inflicted, or in the contrary part.

Wilkesman.

At length it would crack in many places; and those cracks, as they did dilate, would appear of a pretty good, but yet obscure and dark, fixt-colour.

Newton's Opticks.

2. The found of any body breaking or fall

If I say forth, I must report they were
As cansons overcharg'd with double cracks.

Shakespeare's Discourse.

Now day appears, and with the day the king.
Whole early care had robbed him of his rest:
Far off the cracks of falling houses ring,
And fragments of that pierce his tender breast.

Dryden.

3. Any fudden and quick found.

A fourth?—but eyes!

What will the line fretch out to th' crack of deomt?

Shakespeare.

Vulcan was employed in hammering out thunderbolts, that every now and then flew up from the anvil with dreadful cracks and flinches.

Addison.

4. Change of the voice in puberty.

And let us, Paltrius, though now our voices
Have got the mannish crack, sing him to th' ground.

Shakespeare.

5. Breach of chastity.

I cannot Believe this crack to be in my decorousf.
So severely being honorable. Shak, Wint. Tales.

6. A man crazed.

I have invented projects for raising millions, without bournishing the subjuct; but cannot get the parliament to listen to me, who look upon me as a crack and a projector.

Addison.

A woor, in low language.

10. A boalt.

Lesions, backslidings, and vain-glorious cracks.
All those against that fort did bend their liberties.

S. of T.

11. A boaster. This is only in low phrase.

To crack. v. a. [krac'ken, Dutch.]

1. To break into chinks; to divide the parts a little from each other.

Look to your pipes, and cover them with fresh and warm litter out of the dale, a good thic thick-s, lest the fook crack them.

Lytterman.

To...
2. To break; to split.

O, madam, my heart is crack'd, it's crack'd.

Shakespeare

Thou wilt quarrel with a man for crack'd nuts, having no other reason but because thou hast bad eyes.

Shakespeare

I would some wild fig-tree take her native bent, and have below the ready monument, would crack the marble titles, and disperse the characters of all the lying verse.

Dryden

Or as a thing, which in moist weather rings her knell along, by cracking of her things. Divine.

Honour is like that glossy bubble, that finds philosophers such trouble.

Who will part crack'd the whole don't fly, and wis are crack'd to find out our way. It is done.

3. To do anything with quickness or martians.

Sir Balsam now, he lives like other folks; he takes his chirping peas, he cracks his jokes.

Pope.

4. To break or destroy any thing.

You'll crack a quart together! Ha, will you not?

Shakespeare

Love looks, friendship falls off, brothers divide in cities, misfortune; in countries, elbid; in palaces, treason; and the bond crack'd is twist fun and fashion.

Shakespeare's King Lear.

5. To crack; to weaken the intestines.

I was ever of opinion, that the philosopher's stone, and an holy war, was but the rebound of crack'd brains, that wore their feathers in their heads. Why.

Bacon's Holy War.

He thought none poets till their brains were crack'd.

Byron.

To crack. v. n.

1. To burst; to open in chinks.

By misfortune the crack'd in the covering, whereby we were reduced to the use of one part, which was fright and intire.

Bye.

2. To fall to ruin.

The scour not only of banks, but of cheques, crack'd when little comes in, and much goes out.

Dryden.

3. To utter a loud and sudden sound.

I will burst her, though she chide as loud as thunder, when the clouds in autumn crack.

Shakespeare.

4. To boast with.

To look like her, are chimney-sweeps black, and fence her time are crooked counted bright, and are the completed flesh. Dark needs no candles now, for dark is light.

Shakespeare

Crack-brained. adj. (crack and brain'd.) Crack'd without reason.

We have sent you an answer to the ill-founded sophisms of the fee crack-brained fellows.

At bottom and Page.

Crack-hemp. n. f. (crack and hemp.) A wreath fatted to the gallows; a crack-rope: farcice.

Come hither, crack-hemp.

I hope I may chuse, Sir.

—Come hither, you rogue: What have you forgotten?

Shakespeare's Taming of the Shrew.

Crack-rope. n. f. (crack and rope.) A fellow that deserves hanging.

Cracker. n. f. (from crack.)

1. A noisy boasting fellow.

What crack'r is this fame that decoys our ears with this abundance of unresisted banter?

Shakespeare's King John.

2. A quantity of gunpowder confin'd to.

To burst with great noise.

The thunder, at its breaking, gave a great report as well like a bell.

Dryden.

And when, for furious haste to run,

They durst not fly to fire a gun,

Hear not with bonfires, and at home

Make quills and crackers overcome.

Shakespeare V. 1.

Then furious he begins his march,

Drives rattling o'er a beacon arch,

With quills and crackers arm'd, to throw

Among the somber'd rites of Olympus.

Swift.

To Crack. v. m. (from crack.)

To make flight cracks; to make small and frequent noisés, to decrissipate.

All these motions, which we saw,

Are but a ice which crackles at a thaw.

Dine.

As boys to venture on the unknown ice

That crackles underneath them.

Dryden.

Catch'd by her diamond's hair and rich attire;

Her crown and jewels crackled.

Dryden's Spain.

Morrow is a secret in that fury, which occasions a crackling of the bones, in which case marrow performs its natural function of moistening them.

Archbishop on Attonism.

Crack-nels. n. f. (from crack.) A hard brittle cake.

After my love he seek with daily fute

His close friend and earlist; She disdain'd;

Her kind to judge, his cunning, and his early fruit.

Spenser.

Pay tributary cracknels, which he sells;

And with our offerings help to raise his vails.

Dryden's Faealon.

Cradle. n. f. (cradle.)

1. A moveable bed, on which children or sick persons are agitated with a smooth and equal motion, to make them sleep.

He had Indeed, Sir, a son near her crackle, she the husband had for her bed.

Shakespeare, King Lear.

Buttering, nor cogent of vantage, but this bird

Hath his pendant bed and procnant crackle.

Shakespeare'salian.

His birth, perhaps, some patrician village hides,

And fets his crackle out of fortune's way.

Dryden.

A child knows his nurse and his crackle, and by degrees the playthings of a little more advanced age.

Lace.

The crackle and the tomb, alas, to night!

To live is trace distinguished from to die.

Prior.

Me let the tender office long engage,

To rock the crackle of repose.

With lenient arts extend a mother's breath,

Make languor famish, and smooth the bed of death.

Pope.

2. It is used for 'infancy, or the first part of life.

He knew them to be inclin'd altogether to wars

And therefore wholly trained them up, even from their crackles, in arms and military exercises.

Dryden.

The new ducal's daughter, her cousin, loves her;

Being even, from their crackles bred together.

Shakespeare's As you like it.

They should scarcely depart from a form of worship, in which they had been educated from their crackles.

Clarendon.

Crane's Ireland.

3. [With furgons.]

A cafe for a broken bone, to keep off pressure.

With flushing's, sir, a name of timber raifed along the outside of flip by the bulge, serving more securely and commodiously to help to launch her. Harris.

To a Crack. v. m. (from the substantiae.)

To lay in a crackle; to rock in a crackle.

He that has been crackled in majesty, will not leave the throne to play with beggars.

Dryden.

The tears flie from our eyes, when in the street

With some betther'd virgin's verse we meet;

Or Francis turf's, from the charg'd word

Cowper'd ye earth, and crackle of tomb.

Dryden.

He shall be crackle in my ancient shield, to resist

Moreover through the universes.

Arabians v. Page.

Craddle-clothes. n. f. (from cradle and clothes.) Bed-clothes belonging to a cradle.

Shakespeare.

O could it be prov'd

That some night-riding fairy had exchange'd

In cradle-clothes, our children, where they lay,

And call mine Percy, his Plantagenet.

Then would I have his merry and be mine.

Shakespeare.
CRAG.
The rugged protuberances of rocks. And at mount Etna vomits sulphur out, With clfts of burning crags, and fire and smoke. Theophilus.
Who hath digger'd, but thou, the winding way, Where springs down from the steepy crags a debt. Warne.
A lion fled a goat upon the crag of a high rock. L'Espr. 8. 4.
3. The neck. They looked bigger, as bulls that been bate, And Beaver the crag so stiff and so state. Spenser.
4. The small end of a neck of mutton: a low word. Cranage.
CRAGGED, adj. [from crag.]. Full of inequalities and prominences. On a bags hill, Cragged and steep, truth flahs. Boscawen.
CRAGGEDNESS. n. f. [from cragged]. Fulness of crags or prominent rocks. The craggedness or steepness of that mountain, makes many parts of it in a manner inaccessible. Boscawen.
CRAG'INESS, n. f. [from craggs]. The state of being craggy. Cranley.
CRAG'GY, adj. [from crag.]. Rugged; full of prominences; rough to walk on, or climb.
That fame wicked wight His dwelling has low in an hollow cave, Far underneath a craggly cliff upby. Dark, darklye, dreary, like a greene graye. Speyer. It was impossible to pass to the woody and craggly hills, without the lost of those comrades. Rel-ships Effects.
Mountaineers that from Severus came, And from the craggy cliffs of Tetricas. Dryden. The town and suburbick of St. Mary's Mount, on the top of a very high and craggy mountain. Williams.
To CRAM, v. a. [cramman, Saxton.]
1. To stuff; to fill with more than can conveniently be held. As much love in rhyme, As would be cram'd up in a thrupp of papers, Write on both sides the leaf, margent and all. Shak. Being thus cram'd in the basket, a couple of Foul's knives were called. Shak. M. W. f. Shak. Thou hatt spoke as if thyself for should be a fool, whose skull love cram with brains should.
2. A cramp, or contraction of the limbs, generally removed by warmth and rubbing. For this, be fare, to-night thou shalt have cramps, Side-dishes that shall pen thy breath up. Shakespeare's Tempest.
A retreat he outruns any laquyry, marry, in coming on, he has the cramps. Shakespeare. The cramp, or contraction of those limbs, which is manifest, in that it cometh either by cold or dryne. Bacon's Natural History.
Here, said to live on hemlock, do not make good the tradition; and he that observes what vertiges, cramps, and convulsions follow thereon, in these animals, will be of our belief. Browne's Bogus Errors.
2. A contraction; confinement; obtrusion; insurmountable. A narrow space is a cramp to a great mind, and makes a man underincapacities of leaving his friends. L'Estrange.
3. A piece of iron bent at each end, by which two bodies are held together. To the uppermost of these there should be fastened a sharp gole, or cramp of iron, which may be apt to take hold of any place where it lights. Williams.
CRAMP, adj. Difficult; knotty: a low term.
To CRAMP, v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To pain with cramps or twitches. When the contrasted limbs were cram'd, even then.
A waterish humour swell'd, and noz'd again. Dryden's V. C.
2. To restrain; to confine; to obstruct; to hinder. It is impossible to conceive the number of inconveniences that will ensue, if borrowing be cramp'd. Bacon.
There are few but find that some companies begnum and cramp them, so that in them they can neither speak nor do any thing that is handsomon. Glaviloe's Scrip. He who serves has still refrainers of dread upon his spirits, which, even in the midst of action, cramps and ties up his activity. South's Sermons.
3. To bind with crampions. He who serves has still refrainers of dread upon his spirits, which, even in the midst of action, cramps and ties up his activity. South's Sermons.
To CRANK, v. a. [from cramp and iron.]
1. A bird with a long beak. Like a crane, or a swallow, so did I chaffer. Idioms.
2. A pair of pincers terminating in a point, used by surgeons. Cranium.
3. A fpleon; a crooked pipe for drawing liquors out of a caft. Cran'es-bill, n. f. [from crane and bill.]
1. An herb.

[The rest of the text is too fragmented to provide a coherent representation.]
CRA

See this river comes me cranking in,
And cuts me from the belt of all my land.
A huge half moon, a monstrous canoe out.

To CRANKLE. v. a. To break into unequal surfaces; to break into angles.

Old Vaga's dream,
For'd by the sudden shock, her wanton track
Forsook, and drew her hummed train aloof.

Cranking her banks.

CRA.NKLES. n.s. [from the verb.] Inequalities; angular prominences.

CRA.NKNESS. n. s. [from crank.] 1. Heath; vigour.
2. Disposition to overact.

CRA'NTE'D. adj. [from cranny.] Full of chinks.
A wall it is, as I would have you think,
That had in it a creased hole or chink.

A very fair fruit, and not unlike a citron; but somewhat rougher chink, and cranked, vulgarly reckoned the marks of Adam's teeth.

Brown's Vulgar Errors.

CRA'NLY. n. s. [cren, Fr. cretes, Lat.] A chink; a cleft; a fissure.

An eye, or the under end of the skimmer, like the eye of the fish, for as you may see great objects thro' small crannies, or holes, so you may see great axioms of nature through small and contemplable in.

And therefore beat and laid about,
To find a cranny to creep out.

Hudibras.

In a firm building, the casities ought not to be filled with rubbish, but with brick or stone, fixed to the crannies.

Dryden.

Within the faking of water and springs, with streams and currents in the veins and crannies.

Burnet's History.

He skipped from room to room, ran up stairs and down stairs, from the kitchen to the garrets, and he peeped into every cranny.

Auburn's John Bull.

CRAP. n. s. [crepa, low Latin.] A thin stuff, loosely woven, of which the dress of the clergy is sometimes made.
And proud Roccan, sir'd with jealous rage,
With fifty yards of crap shall keep the fagots.

To thee I often call'd in vain,
Against that ass'lin in crap.

Swift.

'Tis through high life high characters are drawn
A slight in crap is twice a faint in lawn.

 Pope.

CRAP'ULENCE. n. s. [crapulus, a surfeit, Lat.] Drunkenness; fickleness by intemperance.

Driz.

CRAP'ULOUS. adj. [crapulosus, Latin.] Drunken; intemperate; sick with intemperance.

Driz.

To CRASS. v. n. [a word probably forshed from the thing.] To make a loud complicated noise, as of many masts falling or breaking as one.
There shall be a great crasing from the hills.

Zeph. ii. 10.

When convulsions cleave the lab'ring earth,
Before the din of war appears, the ground
Trembles and heaves, the nodding houses crasht.

Smith.

To CRASH. v. a. To break or bruise.
My master is the great rich Cadet; and if you be not of the house of Montague, I pray you come and crash a cup of wine.

Shakespeare.

Mr. Warburton has it, crash a cup of wine.

To crash, says Hamner, is to be merry; a crash being a word full used in some counties for a merry bust. It is surely better to read crack. See CRACK.
CRE

CRA

To CREAM.

1. To make a harsh protract'd noise.

Let not the crawling of flies, nor the ruffling of flocks, betray thy poor garden to be neglected.

Shakespeare's King Lear.

No door there was th'unguarded house to keep;
On crawling hinges turn'd, to break his flow'r.

Dryden.

2. It is sometimes used of animals.

The crawling locusts with my voice confpire,
They fired with heat, and I with fierce desire.

Dryden.

CREAM.

n. f. [creem, Latin.]

1. The unctuous or oily part of milk, which, when it is cold, floats on the top, and is changed by the agitation of the churn into butter; the flower of milk.

It is not your inky brows, your black silk hair,
Your bangle eye-balls, nor your cheek of cream,
That can entice my spirits to your worship.

Shakespeare.

I am as vigilant as a cat to steal cream.

Shakespeare's Henry IV.

Cream is matured and made to rise speedily, by putting in cold water; which, as it stews, gethers down the whey.

Bacon's Natural History.

How the dripping whey, which in the churn, before it be made cream,

To earn his cream-bowl duly set;
In one night, ere glimpe of morn,
His flaxen yell hath thereb'd the corn.

Milton.

Let your various cream-bowls be

With swelling fruits, just crouched from the tree.

King.

Milk, standing some time, naturally coagulates into an oily liquor called cream; and a thinner, blue, and more ponderous liquor, called skimmed milk.

Arbuthnot in Aliments.

2. It is used for the best part of any thing: as, the cream of a jest.

To CREAM.

n. a. [from the noun.] To gather cream.

There are a fort of men, whose vidges
Do cream and mandle like a standing pond;
And do a wifliit it makes entertaining,
With purpose to be droll in an opulent
Of wisdom, gravity, profound conceit.

Shakespeare's Merchant of Venice.

To CREAM.

n. a. [from cream.] Full of cream; having the nature of cream.

CREANCE.

n. f. [French.] Is, in falcyour, a fine small line, fastened to a hawk's leath when the is first lured.

CREASE.

n. f. [from creta, Latin, chalk, Skinner.] A mark made by doubling any thing.

Men of great parts are unfortunate in business, because they go out of the common road: I once desired lord Beaufort to observe, that the clerks used an ivory knife, with a blunt edge, to divide paper, which cut it even, only requiring a strong hand; whereas a sharp penknife would go out of the crease, and disfigure the paper.

Swift.

To CREAM.

v. a. [creet, Latin.] To mark any thing by doubling it, to as to leave the impression.

To CREATE.

v. a. [creet, Latin.] To form out of nothing; to cause to exit.

In
In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth. [Gen.]

We having but imperfect ideas of the operations of our minds, and much imperfectly yet of the operations of God, run in great difficulties about furnishing agents, which reason cannot well execute itself out of.

2. To produce; and cause; to be the occasion of.

Now is the time of help: your eye in Scotland would create soldiers, and make women fight.

Shakespeare.

His abilities were prone to create in him great confidence of undertakings, and this was like enough to betray him to great errors and many enemies.

King Charles.

The chief is the chiefest truths by difficulties of their own creating, or no man could miss his way to heaven for want of light. [Dryden.

None knew, till guilt created fear,

What darts or paffion'd arrows were.

Reformation.

Mist! I new bars to my own joy create,

Refuse myself what I had done't from face?

Dryden's Anacreogues.

Long absence is troublesome to acid conditions, by the uneasiness it creates in the stomach.

Aristotle.

3. To begin.

And the issue there create.

Shakespeare.

To invest with any new character.

Arms, my knights o'th' battle: I create you

Companions to your peril, and will sit you

With dignities beyond your eftates.

Shakespeare's Cymbeline.

5. To give any new qualities; to put any thing in a new fate.

The ball British undertaker had but a proportion of three thousand acres for himself, with power to create a manor, and hold a court-baron.

Davenant.

CREATION, n. s. [from create.]

1. The act of creating or conferring exi-

In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth. [Gen.]

ence.

Consider the immensity of the Divine Love, expressed in all the emanations of his providence; in his creation, in his conservation of us. [Taylor.

2. The act of creating, giving any new qualities or character; as, the creation of persons.

3. The things created; the universe.

As subject, then the whole creation came,

And from their natures Adam them did name.

Dinham.

Such was the faint, who dwelt with all the graces,

Reflecting, M. &c., like, his master's faces.

God saw his image lively was expressed,

And his own work as his creation blest'd.

Dryden's Fables.

Nor could the tender new creation bear

The excessive heats orcoldness of the year.

Days of yore, no matter where or when,

Before the low creation fram'd with men, Farwell.

4. Any thing produced, or caufed.

Art thou not, fatal vehicle,

To theatres to fight? Or are thou then

A dagger of the mind, a false creation,

Proceeding from the heart-deprieved brain?

Shakespeare's Macbeth.

CREATIVE, adj. [from create.]

1. Having the power to create.

But come, ye generous minds, in whose wide thoughts

Of all his works, creative beauty burns

With warmth of spirit. [Thomson's Spring.

2. Exercising the act of creation.

To trace the outgoings of the ancient of days

In the first instance, and of his creative power, is a very difficult matter. [South.

CREATOR, n. s. [creator, Latin.] The being that bowles existence.

Open, ye heavens, your living doors; let in

The great creator, from his work return'd

Magnificent: his fix days work, a world, Milton.

When you lie down, close your eyes, and with a short prayer, commit yourself into the hands of your faithful creator; and when you have done, trust him with yourself, as you must do when you are about to go to sleep. [Taylor's Galil.

CREATURE, n. s. [creatures, low Latin.] 1. A being not self-existent, but created by the supreme power.

Were the perfons isolat'd for the worship they did not give to the creator, or for the worship they did give to his creature? [Selling's facts.

2. Any thing created.

God's first creature was light. [Bacon's New Atl.

Imperfect the world, and all the creatures in it, must be acknowledged in many respects to be.

Tiltsop.

3. An animal, not human.

The queen pretended satisfaction of her knowledge only in killing creatures alive, as cats and dogs.

Shakespeare's Tragedy of Cymbeline.

4. A general term for man.

Yet crime in her could never creature find;

But for his love, and for her own self sake,

She wander'd through the woods, and mountains. [Milton.

Murder of all creatures under plea of Lo, Tantalus, I here terminis lece. [Sponer.

Though he might burst his lungs to call for help,

No creature would receive him. [Shakespeare.

A word of contempt for a human being.

Hence, home, you idle creatures, get you home;

Is this a holiday? [Shakespeare's Julius Cesar.

He would into the seas,

And from the common creatures pluck a glove,

And wear it as a favour. [Shakespe., Richard III.

I've heard that guilty creatures at a play,

Have, by the very cunning of the scene,

 Been drunk to the face of credulity. [Shakespeare's Hamlet.

They have proclaimed their misfortunes.

Shakespeare's Hamlet.

Nor think to-night of thy ill nature,

But of thy follies, little creatures. [Shakesp.

A good poet never communicateth his works,

but it is imagined he is a vain young creature, given up to the ambition of fame. [Pope.

6. A word of petty tenderness.

And then, Sin, would be grace and wring my hand.

Cry, Oh fatal creature, and then kiss me hard.

Ah, cruel creature, whom dost thou despise?

The gods to live in woods, have left the fields. [Dryden's Fugitive.

Some young creatures have learnt the woods and fields by having paizd upon little tots. [Watts.

7. A person who owes his rise or his fortune to another.

He sent to collect Maflcy to fend him men, which he, being a creature of Effect's devised.

Clarendon.

The duke's creature he desired to be esteemed.

Clarendon.

Great princes thus, when favourites raise;

To justify their grace, their creatures praise. [Dryden.

1 The design was discovered by a person when every body knows to be a certain great man.

Swift.

CREATURELY, adj. [from creature.]

Having the qualities of a creature.

The several parts of relatives, or creaturely injuncions, may have some proportion to one another.

Chivy's Philosophical Principles.

CREBRITUDE, n. s. [from crebrer, frequent, Latin.] Frequentency. Disd.

CREBROUS, adj. [from crebrer, Lat.] Frequent.

CREEDENCE, n. s. [from cred, Latin, credence, Norman Fr.]

1. Belief; credit.

Ne let him frame that credence this exceeds,

For he that made the fame was known right well

To have done much more admirable deeds;

It Merlin was. [Sponer.

Love, and wildness, [Sponer.

Approv'd to to your majesty, may plead.

For ample credence. [Shakespeare.

His word cannot not understand give out that this was the true earl; but the friar, finding some credence in the people, tookboldness in the pulpit to declare to as much. [Bacon.

That which gives a claim to credit or belief.

After they had delivered to the king their letters of credence, they were led to a chamber richly furnished. [Hayward.

CREDENDA, n. s. [Latin.] Things to be believed; articles of faith; distinguished in theology from agenda, or practical duties.

There were the great articles and credenda of Christianity, to so much startled the world. [South.

CRED'ENT, adj. [credenti, Latin.]

1. Believing; easy of belief.

When men weigh what lies before them may swallow,

If with too credit ear you lift his fong. [Shakespeare's Hamlet.

CREDIBLE, adj. [credible, Latin.] Worthy of credit; deserving of belief; having a just claim to belief.

The ground of credit is the credibility of things credited, and things are made credible, either by the known conditions and quality of the attorer, or by the manifest likelihood of truth in themselves. [Hume.

Necesar demonstratio de me, that there is such an island as Jamaica! yet, upon the testimony of credible persons, I am free from doubts. [Tilson.

CREDIBLENESS, n. s. [from credible.] Credibility; worthiness of belief; just claim to belief.

The credibilities of a good part of their narratives has been confirmed to me by a presbyter of physic.

Boyle.

CREDIBLY, adv. [from credible.] In a manner that claims belief.

This, with the test of a few of the English as scarce credible, being, as hath been rather confoundingly than credibly reported, but of one man, though not a few hurt. [Bacon.

CREDITE, n. s. [credite, French.] 1. Belief of; faith yielded to another.

When the people heard these words, they gave no credit unto them, nor received them. [Matt. x. 40.

I may give credit to repent. [Addison's Spectator.

Some CREED

CREED

CREED

Some secret truths, from learned pride conceal'd,
To minds alone and children are reveal'd:
What though no credit doubting wits may give,
'Tis fair and innocent shall still believe.
Page.

2. Honour; reputation.
I published, because I was told might please such as it was a credit to please.
Page.

3. Eeem; good opinion.
There is no deceiving merchant, or inward beggar, that has so many tricks to uphold the credit of their wealth, as these empty persons have to maintain the credit of their sufficiency.
Bacon.

4. To Honour esteemed King Hooker, Davis. Clarendon.

5. Being published, one he is Hooker. Shakespeare.

7. To Decay to and Shakespeare a To.

8. Having discharged debt a To.

9. There was no change broken. Shakespeare.

10. To procure credit, or to procure credit or honour to anything.

11. It may here her monument stand for.

12. To credit this rude age and show

13. To future times, that even we.

15. It was not upon design to credit these papers, nor to compliment a society to much abash a paper. Crabbe.

16. At present you credit the church as much as all your government, as you did the school formerly by your wit. South.

17. To trust; to confide in.

18. To admit as a debtor.

19. Reputable; above contempt.

20. He led him in a good creditable way of living, and by his interest one of the best places of the country. Arbuthnot's 'John Bull'.

21. Honourable; estimable.

22. The contemplation of things, that do not force to promote our happiness, but is more specious for the liebement, a more passionate and indecent kind of ignorance. Tilsit.

23. CREDIBLENESS. n. s. [from creditable.] Reputation; estimation.
...
Let a bull be lord of beauty, and his erib shall stand at the king's melfi. Shakespeare's "Hamiltey."

The deer and lion at one erib shall meet, and harmless fercs fill the pilgrim's feast. Pope.

To Crib. v. a. [from the noun.] To shut up in a narrow habitation; to confine; to cage. Now I am cabbin'd, cribb'd, confined, bound in.

To Cri'bble. n. s. A game at cards.

Cri'bration. n. s. [cribrum, Latin.] A cornieve.

Cri'ck-bag. To.

To Cri'ckage. n. s. [cribbage, Latin.] The act of sifting, or separating by a sieve.

Cri'ck. n. s.

1. [from crico, Italian.] The noice of a door.

2. [from criyce, Sax., a prake.] A painful stiftness in the neck.

Cirkefing Apple. n. s. A small species of apple.

Cir'kern. n. s. [from cry.] The officer whose busines is to cry or cry proclamation.

He openeth his mouth like a crime. Eccle. xvi. 15.

In the folemn death-watch, watch the hour the hour.

And thrilling crickets in the chimney crept. Gay.

2. [from criyce, Sax., a prake.] A sport, at which the coniders drive a ball with ficks in opposition to each other.

The judge, to date, his brother fekeant call;

The licent at criyce urge the ball. Pope.

3. [from kriechen, Germ. to creep.] A low feef or flied.

Cri'ct-fing Apple. n. s. A small species of apple.

Cir'kus. n. s. [from cry.] The officer whose businefs is to cry or cry proclamation.

He openeth his mouth like a crime. Eccle. xvi. 15.

The folemn death-watch, watch the hour the hour.

And thrilling crickets in the chimney crept. Gay.

2. [from criyce, Sax., a prake.] A sport, at which the coniders drive a ball with ficks in opposition to each other.

The judge, to date, his brother fekeant call;

The licent at criyce urge the ball. Pope.

3. [from kriechen, Germ. to creep.] A low feef or flied.

Cri'cous. n. s. [from crinckelen, Dutch.] To go in and out; to run in flices: diminutive of criable.

Cir'min. adj. [from crinco, Italian; commonly written as it is pronounced, crimfn.] A species of red colour.

Upon her head a crime, round,

With damask roses and fadifhly set.

Bay leaves between.

And the colour, Sir knight, ye guilty fand,

Or wrapped be in loves of former dames,

Crimson is not all, it confine, but diftle the fame.

Crimifh. n. s. [from crinco, Latin.] Wickedfled; guilt; crime.

The eribbold crime, I could never be convinced in any such crimifhing in him, as willingly to expose his life to the stroke of justice, & maltice of his enemies.

Crimielleful. adj. [from crime and ful.] Wicked; criminal: faulty in a high degree; contrary to duty; contrary to virtue.

You proceeded not againft these feats,

So crime and ful to corrupt. Shak. Hamlet.

Crimifhless. adj. [from crime.] Innocent; without crime.

To

amusly. a. [from the noun.] To lame; to make lame; to deprive of the use of limbs.

Knots upon his very joints appear,

And chalk is in his crippled fingers round.

Drake's.

that he threw himself from the rock, but was crippled in the fall. Addit.

CRIPPLENESS. n. s. [from cripple.]

Lamenefs; privation of the limbs. Dict.

CRISIS. n. f. [prefix.]

1. The point in which the disease kills, or changes to the better; the decisive moment when sentence is passed.

Wife leeches will not vain receipts obtrude;

Deaf to complaints, they wait upon the ill,

Till some fate cripple their authorized fall.

Dryden.

2. The point of time at which any affair comes to the height.

This hour's the very crisis of your fate;

Your good or ill, your infancy or fame,

And all the colour of your life, depends

On this instant now.

Dryden's Spanish Fiarie.

The undertaking, which I am now laying down, was entered upon in the very crisis of the late rebellion, and put upon us the duty of every nation to contribute his utmost assistance to the government, in a manner suitable to his station and abilities.

Addison's Freibald.

CRISP. adj. [cripsus, Latin.]

1. Curled.

Rolls are more crips on the forehead than about

The Ethiopian black, flat noted, and crips headed.

Hats.

2. Indented; winding.

You nymphs, call'd Naades, of the winding brooks,

With your fded e crowns, and ever harmless looks;

Leave your crips channels and on this green land

Answer your fames; Juno does command.

Shakespeare.

3. Brittle; friable.

In frosty weather, musick within them sundeth better;

which may be by reason, not of the disposition of the air, but of the wood or fring of the instrument, which is made more crips, and so more porous and hollow. Bacon.

Bacon's Natural History.

To

CRIT. n. s. [from crit.]

1. To curl; to contrive into knots or curls.

Severely, affrighted with their bloody looks,

Ran fearfully among the trembling reeds,

And his crips'd head in the hollow bank.

Shakespeare's Henry IV.

Young'd he had him too.

Yet a man, with crips'd hairs,

Calf in thousand stripes and rings.

For love's finges, and his rings. Ben Jonson.

Spirit of wine is not only unfit for inflamations in general, but also crips up the veifels of the dear macr and bones, and sometimes produces

Scurvy's Surgery.

2. To twift.

Along the crips'd shades and bowrs

Recurs the frence and jocund spring.

Milton.

3. To indent; to run in and out.

From that the cripsed brooks,

Rolling on orient pearl and sands of gold,

Ran, nectar, visiting each plant.

Milton.

CRIPULATION. n. f. [from crips.]

1. The act of curving.

2. The flate of being curiled.

Some differ in the hair and feathers, both in the quantity, criputation, and colours of them;

as lions are hirsute, and have great maims;

their's are smooth, like cats.

Bacon.

CRIPPLING-PIN. n. f. [from crips.]

A curling iron.

The changeable fuits of apparel, and the manes, and the wimples, and the cripping-pins.

Vol. I. 22.
2. To cow, or cry as a raven or crow.

The raven himself is hoarse,
That croaks the fatal entrance of Duncan
Under my battlements. — Shakespeare

Cheek by jowl, on the bleded mouldy
By croaking from the left, prepar'd the coming blow.

At the same time the walk of elms, with the swells of the ravens, looks exceeding formal and venerable.

Addition.

3. It may be used in contempt for any disagreeable or offensive murrain.

Their understandings are but little instructed, when all their whole time and pains is laid
But the croaking of their own belled.

Lack.

Crok., n. f. [from the verb.] The cry or voice of a frog or raven.

The swallow slims the river's watry face;
The frogs renew the croaks of their legueous race.

Dryden.

Was that a raven's croak, or my fon's voice?
No matter what, I'll to the grave and hide me.

Lear.

CRO'CEOUS. adj. [croceus, Latin.] Conspicuous, of saffron; like saffron. — Dict.

CROCITATION. n. f. [crocitaiation, Latin.] The croaking of frogs or ravens. — Dict.

CROCK. n. f. [kruck, Dutch.] A cup; any vessel made of earth.

CROCK'ERY. n. f. Earthen ware.

CRO'CODILE. n. f. [from eges, saffron, and alba, yellow.] An amphibious voracious animal, in shape resembling a lizard, and found in Egypt and the Indies. It is covered with very hard scales, which cannot, without great difficulty, be picked up or felt under the belly, where the skin is tender. It has a wide throat, with several rows of teeth, sharp and separated, which enter one another. It runs with great swiftness; but does not easily turn itself. It is long lived, and is said to grow continually to its death. Some are fifteen or eighteen cubits long. Crocodiles lay their eggs, resembling goole eggs, sometimes amounting to sixty, near the water's side, covering them with the sand, that the heat of the sun may hatch them. — Camden.

Crok'ker. n. m. A crooked fellow.

Beguileth him; at the mouthful crocodile
With sorrow raises relenting passengers.

Shakespeare's Henry VI.

Crocodiles were thought to be peculiar unto the Nile. — Brown's Valetudo Errorum.

Croc, will weep, the crocodile will weep. Dryd.

Enticing crocodile, whose tears are death;
Syren, that murder with enchanting breath.

Crocodile.

Crocodile is also a little animal, otherwise called croo, very much like the lizard, or small crocodile. It lives by land and water; has four short small legs, a very sharp muzzle, and a short small tail. It is pretty enough to look at, being covered all over with little scales of the colour of silver, intermixed with brown, and of a gold colour upon the back. It always remains little. — Trewes.

CROCODEL'INE. adj. [crocodileus, Lat.] Like a crocodile. — Dict.

CRO'CUS. n. f. A flower.

Fair-haunted Spring subdomine every grace.
Threw out the flow-drop and the crest first. — Thomson.

Cropt.

Cropt. n. f. [crop, Sax.] A little close joining to a house, that is used for corn or pasture.

This I have learned,
Tending my flocks I laid by 'till hilly crofts
That brow this bottom glade. — Milton.

Cro'ises, n. f.
1. Pilgrims who carry a cross.
2. Soldiers who fight against infidels under the banner of the croce.

Cro'ræ, n. f. [crocus, Sax, according to Varoom; croiis, Dutch, according to Skinner.]

1. An old cove.
Fost herring's plenty Michel brings,
With fatted crocs, and such old things. — Tusser.

2. In contempt, an old woman.
Take up the bistard,
Tackle it up, I say give it to thy croce. — Shakespeare's Winter's Tale.

The croce being in love with him on the wedding day, and finding his averion, endeavours to win his affections by reason.

Cro'on. n. f.
The hair which grows over the top of an horse's hoof.

Cro'n'y. n. f. [a cant word.] An old acquaintance; a companion of long standing.

So when the Scotts, your constant cromes,
Th' apparitors of your cuse and minions. — Hudibras.

To oblige your cromy Swift.
Bring us dams a new year's gift. — Swift's.

Strong, an unfortable should die
Without one wonder in the fly!
Not one of all his croon fairs
To pay their duty at his here! — Swift's.

CROOK. n. f. [croc, French.]
1. Any crooked or bent instrument.
2. A sheepehook.

I fing the man who Juthah's sceptre bore
In that right hand which held the crook before.

Crocket.

He left his crook, he left his flockes,
And wandered alone with lonely rocks. — Prior.

3. Any thing bent; a meander.

There fall these philo-careful brooks,
Which, contort-like, with curious crooks,
Into their deep channelled crookish-bower, — Sidney.

To Crock. v. n. [crocker, French.]
1. To bend; to turn into a hook.

It is highly probable, that this diseaes proceed from a redundant acidity, because vinegar will soften and crook tender bones. — Arabeon or Dier.

2. To pervert from rectitude; to divert from the original end.

Wherever affairs pass such a man's hands, he crooked them to his own ends; which must needs be often eccentric to the ends of his matter or estate.

To Crook. v. n. To be bent; to have a curvature.

Their shoes and pattens are fruited and piked more than a finger long, crooking upwards. — Camden.

CRO'OK BACK. n. f. [crook and back.] A term of reproach for a man that has gibbous shoulders.

Aile, and others, here I stand to answer thee,
Or say he the proudest of thy sort. — Shak's. Hen. VI.

CROOK'BACKED. adj. Having bent shoulders.

A dwarf as well may for a giant pass,
As negro for a fawn; a crookback'd lads.

Be called a Europe. — Dryden's Juvenal.

There are millions of truths that a man is not, or may not think himself, concerned to know; a, whether our king Richard III. was crookshanked or no. — Locke.

CROOK'ED. adj. [crocher, French.]

1. Bent; not straight; curved.

A boll or a cannon may be brought beyond a hill which intercepts the flight of the founding body; and are found propagated as readily through crooked pipes, as through straight ones. — New's Observ.

Mathematicians say of a straight line, that it is as well an index of its own trouble as the obliquity of a crooked one, Woodward's Natural Hist.

2. Winding; oblique; unfranchious.

A man shall never want crooked paths to walk in, if he thinks that he is in the right way, wherever he has the footsteps of others to follow. — Locke.

Among the crooked lanes, on every hedge,
The glow-worm lights his gem. — Thom's. Summer.

3. Perverse; untoward; without rectitude of mind; given to obliquity of conduct. They have corrupted himself; they are a perverted and crooked generation. — Deut. xxxii. 5.

Hence, heap of wrath; soul, indigested lump! As crooked in thine manners as thy hump. — Shakespeare's Henry VI.

We were not born crooked; we learned these windings and turnings of the serpent. — Smith.

CROOK'EDLY, adv. [from crooked.]

1. Not in a straight line.

2. Unwarily, uncomplainingly.

If we walk perversely with God, he will walk crookedly towards us. — Taylor's Rule of Living Holy.

CROOK'ENESS. n. f. [from crooked.]

1. Deviation from straightforwardness; curvity; the state of being infected; infection.

He that knoweth what is straight, shah even thereby differ what is crooked and what is not, because the absence of straightness, in bodies capable thereof, is crookedness. — Hooker.

2. Deformity of a gibbous body.

When the heathens offered a sacrifice to their false gods, they would make a severe search to see if there were any crookyness or spot, any uncleanliness or deformity, in their sacrifices. — Who were the Christians?

CROP. n. f. [crop, Sax.] The crae of a bird; the first fromato which its meat descends.

In birds there is no mastication or comminution of the meat in the mouth; but, in such as are carnivorous, it is immediately swallowed into the crop, or gape. — Ray.

But fluttering there, they nestle near the throne, And lodge in habitations not their own, To rear their crook'd and curvyizados. — Dryden.

CROP'FULL, adj. [crop, and full.] Satiated; with a full belly.

He, stretch'd out all the chimney's length, Rocks at the fire his firey strength; And, crop-full, out of door he rings The first crook'd branch rings. — Milton.

CROPSICK. adj. [crop, and sick.] Sick with repletion; sick with excess and debauchery.

Strange odder! where crop-full drunkards must engage A hungry fog, and armed with fogy rage. — Tate's Jovinul.

CROP', n. f. [cropa, Sax.] The highest part or end of any thing; as the head of a tree, the ear of corn.

1. The highest part or end of any thing; as the head of a tree, the ear of corn.

2. The harvest; the corn gathered off a field; the product of the field.

And this of all my joy thou hast, Nought reaped but a weedy crop of care. — Spenser's Epithalam.

Labring the fell, and reapeth plentiful crop, Corn, wine, and oil. — Pindar's. Olymp, IV.

The fountain which from Helicon proceeds, That freshen'd stream, should never water weeds, Nor make the crop of thorns and thistles grow. — Dryden's Fawneral.

Refinement.

Nothing.
You are first to consider seriously the infinite love of your Saviour, who offered himself for you as a sacrifice upon the cross.

The enigma of the Christian religion. Her holy faith and Christian cross oppress her soul.

Romans.

3. You must be content with a cross upon it to excite devotion, such as were anciently set in market-places.

She doth stay about by holy crosses, where the kneels and prays. Shak.

4. A line drawn through another.

Any thing that thwarts or obtrudes; misfortune; hindrance; vexation; opposition; misadventure; trial of patience.

Wishing unto me many crosses and afflictions in my love, whenever I should love.

Sidney.

Then let us practice our trials patiently, because it is a customary cross. Shakespeare.

Heaven prepares good men with crosses; but no ill can happen to a good man. Ben Jonson's Dido.

A great affliction hath great crosses, and a man's fortunes hath but small ones. Taylor's Rule of Living Holy.

Money, so called because marked with a cross.

He was made to order soldiers setting up against the very earth to follow him, though he had not a cross to pay the soldier. Herod's Vocal Forgeries.

Whereas we cannot much lament our loss, who neither carried back nor brought one cross. Dryden.

7. Crosses and Piles, a play with money; at which it is put to chance whether the file, which bears a cross, shall lie upward, or the other.

Whom had neither cross nor pile; His plunder was not worth the while. Holinshed.

This I humbly conceive to be performed only; and the other, another; Sir J. Davies.

8. Church lands in Ireland.

The absolute patriots make their own judges, so as the king's will did not run in those countries, but only in the church lands lying within the same, which were called the crosses wherein the king made a sheriff; to each of these counties plantation, one thousand of the interest, and another of the crosses. Sir J. Davies.

Crosses, adj. [from the substantive.]

1. Transverbe; falling athwart something else.

Whatever punishment shall be made in the circles by the tierce confession of the second order, that punishment would be conspicuous in the eight lines which touch those circles. Newton.

The sun in that space of time, by his annual motion eastward, will be advanced near a degree of the ecliptic, cross to the motion of the equator. Holder on Time.

The ships must needs encounters, when their advance comes near another in direct lines, or meet in the intersection of circles once. Bentley.

2. Oblique; lateral.

Was this a facetious edge?

To stand against the deep dread-looked thunder. In the most terrible and nimble stroke. Of quick crosses lightning! Shakespeare's King Lear.

3. Adversive; opposite; often with it.

We're both love's captives: but with fate to cross.

One must be happy by the other's loss. Dryden.

Cross to our interests, curving lines and lie; Opposed: where is the monarch's winding? It thrives through pain. Dryden.

It runs to cross the belief and apprehension of the rest of mankind; a difficulty which a modest and good man is fearsome to encounter. Atterbury.

4. Perversae; intractable.

When, through the cross circumstances of a man's temper or condition, the enjoyment of a pleasure would certainly come him to a greater inconvenience, then religion bids him quit it. South.

5. Pecvisch; fretful; ill-tempered.

Who may not, upon the view of himself, because he had received a cross answer from his mistress?

Taylor.

All cross and disfavourable humours, and whatever else may tend the conversation of meaner natures and unsaty to one another, must be shunned. Tillotson.

6. Contrary; contradictory.

The mind brings all the ends of a long and various overthrow together; fees how one part coheres with, and depends upon, another; and draws clear of all the opposing contrarieties and contradictions, that seemed to lie cross and unseath.

South.

7. Contrary to wish; unfortunate.

We learn the great reasonableness of not only a contented, but also a thankful, sequeleance in any condition; and under the cross and severest punishments.

South.

I cannot, without some regret, behold the cross and unkind figure of my design; for, by my dislike of disputes, I am engaged in one. Dryden.

8. Interchanged.

Eratosthenes made a cross marriage also with Doria's sister, and shortly left her with child of the famous Pyrocles. Sidney.

Croses marriages, between the king's son and the archbishop's daughter; and again, between the archbishop's son and the king's daughter. Bacon's Henry VII.

Cross, prep.

1. Athwart; so as to interfere any thing; transversely.

The enemy had, in the woods before them, cut down great trees cross the way, so that their little could not possibly pass that way. Knolles.

Betwixt the mith and thee, the gods affign'd All habitable fears of human kind; and croses limbs cut a flapping way, Which the twelve figns in beneficent order fancy. Dryden's Virgin.

Croses his back, as in triumphant form, The hope and pillar of the house was dryden's Fables.

2. Over; from side to side.

A fox way taking a walk one night croses a village. L'Estrange.

To Cross, v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To lay one body, or draw one line, athwart another.

This face'd the Rubban'sb, for the croses.

To crosse the curteous in the laws.

This what by breaking them had gain'd, By their support might be maintain'd. Holinshed.

The luxa, or cros-ビル, whose bill is thick and strong, with the tips crousting one another, with great reality: breaks open screws, apples, and other fruits, to come at their kernels; as if the crousting of the bill was designed for this service. Dryden's Plaisir-Thuery.

I shall most carefully watch, not to crosse over or deface the copy of your papers for the future, and only to mark in the margin. Pope.

A hunted hare tricks back her mates, and croust and confounds her former trackers. Watt.

2. To sign with the croses.

Frians

Respect to farmers rich, and bles their halfs, And exercise the bed; and croses the walls. Dryden.

3. To cancel: as, to cros an article.

4. To pass over.

I no more considered this proud Turk as far as the Hellespont, which he croust, and made a visit to the Greek emperor at Constantinople. Temple.

We found the hero, for whole were fake.

We croust the dark skilfully, and croust the lighter fake. Dryden.

1 L 2

5. To
CRO

5. To move laterally, obliquely, or a-nthwart; not in opposition; not in the same line.

But in them flying, 'gan to turn aside, For fear, as 'tis said, or for some feared loss; More greedy they of news, sail towards them as they can.

6. To thwart; to interpose obstruction; to embarrass; to obtrude; to hinder; to counteract.

Still do I crof this wretch, whatso he taketh in hand, The king no longer could endure Thus to be croft d in what he did intend. Daniel.

Paroad in private, and souddenly It crouth my design, which was not alone The time of funeral fitting his degree.

Swaid with our late successe on the foe, Which France and Holland wanted power to crouth, We urge an uncertain race.

The fum patriote there, Though still by faction, vice, and fortune crouth, Shall find the general labour was not lost.

Addition's Crouth.

7. Not to concur; to be inconfident with.

Then their wills clash with their understandings, and their appettites crouth their duty.

Locke.

8. To contravene; to hinder by authority; to countermand.

No governour is suffered to go on with anycourse, but upon the least information he is either stopped and crouth, or other courses appinted him from hence.

Spenor on Ireland. It may make my cafe dangerous, to crouth this in my family. Sake's Measure for Measure.

9. To contradict.

In all this there is not a syllable which any ways crouth us. Hooker.

It is certain, howsoever it crouth the received opinion, that sounds may be created without air. Bacon's Natural History.

10. To debar; to preclude.

From his bons no hopeful branch shall spring, To crouth me from the golden time I look for. Shakesper.

CRO. n. s.

1. To lie athwart another thing.

2. To be inconfident.

Men's actions do not always crouth with reason.

Ridouts.

CRO. n. s. n.

1. A round shot, or great bullet, with a bar of iron put through it. Harris.

To crouth-examine. v. a. [croth and examine.] To try the faith of evidence by captious question of the contrary party. If we may but crouth-examine and interrogate their actions against their words, there will conf cut the invalidity of their contumaciy confessions:

Decay of Piety.

The judge shall, as they think fit, interrogate or examine the witness.

CRO. n. s. n. [from croth and bag.] An instrument commonly called the forestaff, used by seamen to take the meridian altitude of the sun or stars. Harris.

CRO. n. s. [from croth and bite.] A deception; a cheat.

The favs, that trusted to his address and manage, went to much as dreaming of a crothable, from to slyly an animal, felt himself into the pit that he had digged for another. L'Estrange.

To crouth-bitte. v. n. [from the noun.]

To contravence by deception.

No rhetorical must be found against croth-things a country evidence, and frightening him out of his states.

CRO. n. s. n. [from croth and cow.] A small obscure path intersecting the chief road.

That many knotty points there are, Which all differ, but few can see An nature fully had thought fit,

For some by-cods, and croth-bitte wise. Prior.

CRO. n. s. [from croth and bow.] A midlive weapon, formed by placing a bow athwart a fock.

Gentlemen suffer their breasts to run wild in their woods and wafie grounds, where they are hunted and killed with croth-bows and pièces, in the manner of deer. Cornea of Cornwall.

The master of the croth bow, lord Rambouyl. Shakesper.

Teuthomny is like the flight of a long bow, which owes its efficacy to the fpace of the fower; argument is like the fhat of the croth-bow, equally fortable whether discharged by a giant or a dwarf. Moon.

CROSS.-OWER. n. s. [from croth-bove.]

A fucer with a croth-bow.

The French infilted themselves by land with the crothbowers of Genoa against the English. Relagh's Effays.

CROX-SGRAINED. adj. [croth and graine.]

1. Having the fibres transverse or irregular.

If the fluff proves crothgrained in any part of its length, then you must turn your fluff to plane it the contrary way, so far as it runs crothgrained.

Moon.

2. Perverse; troublesome; vexatious.

We find in written works, And croth grained works of modern wits, The wonder of the ignorant. Haddraitus.

The spirit of contradiction, in a croth-grained woman, is incorruptible. L'Estrange.

She was none of your croth-grained, quarling, scuffling tides, that one had as good be hanged as live in the house with. A'bcott's J. Dull.

But wisdom, prudence and croth-gained, Must be opposed, to be sufficient. Prior.

CROSTLY. adv. [from croth.]

1. Athwart; to or as to intersect something else.

2. Oppositely; adversely; in opposition to. He that provides for this life, but takes no care for eternity, is wife for a moment, but a fool for ever; and acts as ungodly and crothly to the reason of things, as can be imagined. Thicly.

3. Unfortunately.

CROSSNESS. n. s. [from croth.

1. Tranverseeness; interception.

2. Perversion; perverseness.

The lighter fort of malignity toucheth but to a croth of apprehens to spot but the deeper fort, to crave, or more mischief. Bacon.

I deny nothing, to be granted, out of crothness or humour. King Charles.

Who would have imagined that the sill crothness of a poor captive should ever have had the power to make Haman's first so easy to him L'Estrange. They help us to forget the crothness of men and things, compose our thongs, and our passions, and by our disapprobations alarm.

Calder of the Entertainment of Bocks.

CROS. v. n.

1. The rump of a fowl.

2. The buttocks of a horse.

CROUDES. n. s. [from crouth.]

Higher lamps than those of corvets, that keep that crothness of the hour in an equal height, so that he trusses his legs under his belly without jerking. Fa dier's Dit.

CROW. n. s. [crape; Saxo; corus, Lat.]

1. A large black bird that feeds upon the carcasses of beasts.

The crows and crows, that wing the midway

Show scarce to groth as bettes. Shak. King Lear.

To crouth be like impartial grace afford, or And crows and crows, and such republic birds.

Dryden.
2. To pluck a Crow, is to be industrious or contentious about that which is of no value.
   If you dispute, we must pluck a crow about it.

  Resolve, before we go,
   That you and I must pull a crow.

3. A piece of iron, with a beak, used as a lever to force open doors; as the Latins called a hook corvus.
   The crow is used as a lever to lift up the ends of great heavy timbers, and then they thrust the claws between the ground and the timber; and laying some flint behind the crow, they draw the other end of the flank backwards, and so to raise the timber.

4. From To crow. The voice of a cock, or the noise which he makes in his gaiety.

CROWFOOT. n. s. [from crow and foot; in Latin, rananculus.] A flower.

CROW-KNOW. n. s. [from crow and know.] A calthrop, or piece of iron with four points, two, three, or four inches long; so that, whatever way it falls, one point is up. It is used in war for incommo- dity the cavalry.

Military Diet.
To CROW, v. a. preterit. I crow, or crowed; I have crowed.

1. To make the noise which a cock makes in gaiety or defiance.
   But even then the morning cock crow loud. Shakespeare's Hamlet.
   Diogenes called an ill physician, cock. Why? faith he. Diogenes answered; Because when you crow, men use to rise. Bacon.
   That the lion trembles at the crowing of the cock, king James, upon trial, found to be fabulous. Hakewill.
   Within this homestead liv'd, without a peer. For crowing loud, the noble Chanceller.
   So bright his cock.

2. To boast; to bully; to vapour; to bluster; to swagger.
   Setby is crowing, and, though always defeated by his wife, still crowing on. Grandison.

CROWD, n. s. [croud, Saxon.]

1. A multitude confusedly pressed together.

2. A horridious medley, without order or distinction.
   He could then compare the confusion of a multitude to that tumult which he had observed in the Italian sea, daubing and breaking amongst its crowd of islands. Pope.

3. The vulgar; the populace.
   He went not with the crowd to see a throne.
   But fed us by the way with food divine.

4. [From croud, Welsh.] A fiddle.
   Hack how the minstrels' gin to thrill about
   Their merry mufick that refounds from fax,
   The pipe, the tabour, and the trembling crowd,
   That wall agree without breach or jar.

5. To CROW, v. a. [from the noun.]
   To fill with confused multitudes.
   A mind which is ever crowd'd of its memory with things which it leasts, may cramp the invention itself.

   Wats.
To C R U M B L E. v. a. [from crumb.] To break into small pieces; to comminute.

Flech is but the glass which holds the dust.
That meshit all our time, which also fills
To crumble into dust.

Heckert.

He had his bare wand untideth thy joints,
And crumblé all thy kernels.

Nilsson.

The finest pasters I and labrobing irruptions, in process of time they became so divided and crumbled, that there were few potions of able edibles.

At the same time we were crumbled into various factions and parties, all aiming at by-interests, with no sincerer regard for the public good.

Asterbury.

The bill leaves three hundred pounds a year to the mother church; which they can divide likewise, and crumble as low as their will and pleasure will dispose of them.

Swift.

To C R U M B L E. v. n. To fall into small pieces; broken.

There is no hot summer in my brain,
That all my bowels crumble up to dust.

Shakespeare's King John.

Nor is the profit small the peasant makes,
Who combs those with barley, or who poucedes with rakes.

Dryden's Georgics.

Ambition fires't the found it vain to fruit.
The faithful droup, and the crumbling bush, Poppa.

If the stone is brittle, it will often crumble, and pass in the form of gravel.

Abbebotot Diet.

What house, when its materials cromble,
Must not immediately tumble?

Swift.

For the little land that remains, provision is made by the late act against popery, that it will daily crumble away.

Swift.

C R U M E N A L. n. f. [from crumena, Latin.] A purée.

The fat ox, that woman lies in the stall,
Is now fast flatted in her crumena.

Spenser's Faè.

C R U M M Y. adj. [from crumb.] Soft.

CRUMP. n. [crum, Sax.; from, Dutch; krumm, German.] Crooked in the back.

When the workmen took measure of him, he was lying slouched, and the right side higher than the left.

L'Estrange.

To C R U M P L E. v. a. [from crump; or corrupted from crumple, rampale, Dutch.] To draw into wrinkles; to crush together in complications.

Sir Roger slighted from his horse, and exposing his palm to two or three that stood by him, they crumpled it into all degrees, and sillyingly flourished every wrinkle that could be made.

Swift.

To C R U N K. v. n. To cry like a

To C R U N K L E. s. crane.

Dick.

C R U F F E R. n. f. [from crozz, Fr. the buttocks of the horse.] That part of the horseman's furniture that reaches from the saddle to the tail.

Cribbon had received, first a blow, that it had lost the reins of his horse, with his head well right touching the crupper of the horse.

Sidney.

Ah, do you think I have left the money that I gave you?

Oh — a sentence that had a Wednesday flat.

To pay the ladler for my mistress' crupper today.

Foot off the rivets met, and neither spurs

Though from the vantage, which forgot to wear;

The head of that was to the saddle bent,

The other backward to the crupper fast.

Dryden.

C R U R A L. adj. [from cruss, cruris, Lat.] Belonging to the leg.

The sharpeness of the teeth, and the strength of the crural muscles, in lions and tigers, are the cause of the great and habitual immorality of those animals.

Addison.

C R U S A D E. n. f. See CROSIADE.

C R U S A D O. n. f. See CROSIADE.

1. An expedition against the infidels.

Believe me, I had rather have lost my purse

Full of crozys.

Shakespeare's Tempest.

C R U S E. See CRUZIE.

C R U S T. n. f. A goldsmith's melting-pot.

To CRUSH. v. a. [croser, French.]

1. To press between two opposite bodies; to squeeze; to crush by compression.

The sirs thrust herself upon the wall, and crushed Balsam's foot against the wall. Numbers xxv. 29.

Cold causes shrunken and defusions from the head, and some adhering plastra crush out purulent matter.

Racan.

He crushed treasure out of his subjects purces, by fortifying the gates and locks, and the buildings.

Bachus.

That first from out the purple crush'd the sweet potion of mixed wine.

Milton.

I thought and fell like one, but death deceive'd me;

I wanted weight of stable Moore upon me.

To crush my dominion, lean not on John's Don Sedgfield.

2. To press with violence.

I speak you far —

I don't extend him, Sirs within himself crush him together, rather than unfold his measure fully.

Shakespeare's Cymbeline.

When loud winds from different quarters rush,

Wind clouds encumbrance one another crush.

Waller.

3. To overwhelm; to beat down.

Put in hands the bruiting iron of wrath,

That they may crush down, with a heavy fall,

Th' infuring helmets of our adversaries!

Shakespeare's Richard III.

Vain is the force of man, and man's as vain,

To crush the pillaus which the pile sustains.

Dryden's ANyliad.

4. To subdue; to conquer beyond reftance.

They use it to plague their enemies, or to oppress a craft fome of them, and fulfilling two thousand freeholders.

Spencer in Tracts.

Mine emulation

Hit not that honour in 't I had; for

I thought to crush him in an equal force,

True sword to sword. Shakespeare's Coriolanus.

This act

Shall brute the head of Satan, crush his strength,

Defeating sin and death, his two main arms. Artifit.

What can that man fear, who takes care to please Being that is so able to crush all his adversaries? Being that can divert any misfortune from befudding him, or turn any such misfortune to his advantage?

Addison's Guardian.

To CRUSH. v. n. To be condensed; to come in a close body.

CRUSH. n. f. [from the verb.] A collifion; the act of rushing together.

Thus thou flourishest in immortal youth,

Ushers amidst the war of elements,

The wrecks of matter, and the crafts of worlds.

Addison's Cato.

C R U S T. n. f. [crozz, Latin.]

1. Any shell, or external coat, by which any body is enveloped.

I have known the face of an emperor quite hid under a craft of crozys.

Addison's Molad.

2. An incarnation; collection of matter into a hard body.

Were the river a confusion of never so many different bodies, if they had been all actually defusel'd, they would as least have formed one con-
CRY

To CRY, v. a. [crier, French.] 1. Lamentation; shriek; scream.
   2. Weeping; mourning.
   3. Crying; outcry.

A lamentation is a great CRY.
   [Dryden's Virgil.]

The CRY of a whole nation is a great CRY.

5. To overbear. Ill to the king,
   And from a mouth of honour quite CRY down.
   This hyperbolical silence.
   Shaks. II. VIII.

6. To CRY out, v. n. 1. To exclaim; to scream; to clamour. They made the opprobrium, they CRY out by reason of the arm of the mighty.
   2. With that Sufanna cried with a loud voice, and the two elders CRY out against her.

7. To complain loudly. We are ready to CRY out of an unequal management, and to blame the Divine administration.
   [Attire.] 8. To complain. To make public.
   9. To CRY in the ears of Jerusalem.
   [Jer. III. 2.]

5. To exclaim.

Yet let them look they glory not in mischief,
Nor build their evils on the graves of great men,
For then my guiltless blood must CRY against them.
   [Shakes.] 6. To utter lamentations.

We came crying hither:
Those know not the first time that we slew the air,
We wove and CRY.
   [Shaks. King Lear.] Behold, my servants shall sing for joy of heart;
   As ye shall CRY for sorrow of heart, and shall howl as sheep.
   [Isa. 42.] When evil any has upon philosophers, they groan as pitiably, and CRY out as loud, as other men.

7. To quail, as an infant.

Should fond good tell me, that I should be born,
And CRY again, his offer I should scorn.
   [Daviem.] Thus, in a flarty night, fond children CRY.
   For the rich younglings that adorn the sky.
   [Waller.] He struggles for breath, and CRY for aid:
   Then helpless in his mother's lap is laid.
   [Tolstoy.]

8. To weep; to shed tears.

Her who still weeps with stringed eyes,
And whose side is dry, and never CRY.

9. To utter an inarticulate voice, as an animal.

He gives to the beast his food, and to the young ravens which CRY.
   [Psal. cxlviii. 9.] The beasts of the field CRY also unto them.
   [Job. I. 20.]

10. To yelp, as a hound on a fætus.

He CRY upon it at the merriest lods;
   Truth may, I take him for the better dog.
   [Shakes.]

To CRY, v. a. To proclaim publicly something lost or found, in order to its recovery or restitution.

She CRY, the fætus, but no where spoke him:
   Love is lost, and thus the CRY him.
   [Cop.]

To CRY down, v. a.

1. To blame; to deprecate; to decry.
   Davius cries down an admirable state of philosophy,
   And says there's a sin in it.
   Watts. Men of distaste live CRY down religion, because they would not be under the restraints of it.
   [Tolstoy.]

2. To prohibit.

By all means CRY down that unworthy course of late times, that they should pay homage.
   [Bacon to William.] 3. To overbear.

To the king,
And from a mouth of honour quite CRY down.
This hyperbolical silence.
   Shaks. II. VIII.

4. To CRY out, v. n.

1. To exclaim; to scream; to clamour. They made the opprobrium, they CRY out by reason of the arm of the mighty.
   2. With that Sussanna cried with a loud voice, and the two elders CRY out against her.

5. To complain loudly. We are ready to CRY out of an unequal management, and to blame the Divine administration.
   [Attire.] 6. To CRY out.

With what a CRY out, new cry is it on us.
   Shaks. Crying out.

7. To CRY up.

Will then CRY out of Marcellus, oh, if he Had borne the business, Shakespeare's Coriolanus.

Behold, I CRY out of wrong, but I am not heard.
   [Shaks. xix.] CRY up upon the sails for doing
   Ill offices, to cross our wooing.
   [H. In. Crying up.

8. To CRY up.

Either Emily cries up upon it, as rank idolatry,
   And destructive to their souls who did it.
   [Shaks.]

9. To CRY up.

I CRY up, so far as reason will help them,
   Make use of it gladly, and where it falls them,
   They CRY out, it is matter of faith, and above reason.
   [Locke.]

10. To declare loud.

What is the CRY out?
   —So said her woman; and that her suffrance made
   Each pang a death.
   [Shaks. Henry VIII.]

11. To CRY up.

To CRY up, v. a.

1. To applaud; to exalt; to praise.
   Instead of CRY up all things which are brought from beyond sea, let us advance the native commodities of our own kingdom.
   Bacon to Tillotson.

The philosopher deservedly sought himself of vanity, when it CRY up by the multitude.
   [Glaswile's Stepfels.]

2. To cry up the toasts from whence he pretends to draw them.
   [Smith.]

They flight the strongest arguments that can be brought for religion, and CRY up very weak ones against it.
   [Tolstoy.]

He may, out of interest, as well as conviction, CRY up that for faced, which, if once trampled on and profaned, he himself cannot be safe, nor secure.
   [Locke.]

Poets, like monarchs on an eastern throne,
   Confined by nothing but their will alone.
   Here can CRY up, and there be boldly blame.
   And, as they please, give infamy or fame.
   [Walsh.]

Those who are fond of continuing the war, CRY up our constant succeth at a most prodigious rate.
   [Swift.]

3. To raise the price by proclamation.

All the effect that I conceive was made by CRY up the pieces of eight, was to bring in much more of that specie, instead of others current here.
   [Templ.]

CRY.

CRY. n. f. [cri, French.]

1. Lamentation; shriek; scream.

And all the first born in the land of Egypt shall die, and there shall be a great CRY throughout all the land.
   [Exod.]

2. Weeping; mourning.

3. Crying; outcry.

A lamentation is a general CRY.
   Proclamations Laoaccon duly CRY'd in.

4. Exclamation of triumph or wonder, or any other passion.

So comes fame imposteur cries out, a miracle! a miracle! to confirm the deluded vulgar in their credence; and to the cry goes round, without examining into the cheat.
   [Swift.]

5. Proclamation.

The hawkers proclamation of wares to be sold in the streets, as, the cries of London.

6. Acclamation; popular favour.

The cry went once for their.

And fill it might, and yet it may again.
   [Swift.]

7. Voice; utterance; manner of vocal expression.

Sands also, besides the different cries of birds and beasts, are modified by diversity of notes, different length, put together, which make that complex idea called tone.
   [Locke.]

9. Important call.

Pray not thou for this people, neither lift up CRY nor prayer for them.
   [Jer. vii. 15.]

10. Yelling of dogs.

He forms the dog, resolves to try
   The combat next; but if their CRY
   Invades again his trembling ear,
   He trials refrains his wonted care.
   [W. H.]

11. Yell; inarticulate noise.

There shall be the screech of a CRY from the faggots,
   And a bowling from the heeds, and a great CRYing from the hills.
   [Zeph. xi. 10.]

About her middle round.
   A cry of bell-hounds, or one calling back's.
   [Meth.] You commonly CRY of curs, whole breath I hate
   As reck' th' rotten fans; whole loves I prize
   At the dead carcasses of unburied men,
   To corrupt my Shakespeare's Coriolanus.

Cry'AL. n. f. The heron. Anifornwrb.

Cry'ER. See Crier.

Cry'ER. n. f. A kind of hawk, called the falcon gentle, an enemy to pigeons, and very swift.
   [Anifornwrb.]

CRYPTICAL. adj. [cryptic]. Hidden; CRYPTICK. f secret; occult; private; unknown; not divulged.

The students of nature, conscious of her more cryptical ways of working, resolve many strange effects into the near efficiency of second causes.
   [Glaswile's Aph.] Speakers, whose chief business is to amuse or delude, do not confine themselves to any natural order, but in a cryptical or hidden method adapt every thing to their ends.
   [W. H.] CRYPTICALLY. adv. [from cryptical.]

Occultly; secretly; perhaps, in the following example, the author might have written cryptically.

We take the word acid in a familiar sense, without cryptically distinguishing it from those savours that are a-kid to it.

CyrptogrAphY. n. f. [crypt and graphein].

1. The art of writing secret characters.

2. Secret characters; cyphers.
CRY

CRYPTOLOGY, n. f. [κρυπτoλoγία] Enigmatical language.

CRYSTAL, n. [κρυσταλλός] 1. Crystals are hard, pellucid, and naturally colourless bodies, of regularly angular figures, composed of simple, not filamentous plates, not flexible or elastic, giving fire with ease, not fermenting with acid menthol, and calcining in a strong fire. There are many various species of it produced in different parts of the globe. Hill on Cristall.

CRYSTALIZATION, n. f. [cristallizare] 1. Concretion into crystals. Such a combination of saline particles as resembles the form of a crystal, variously modified, according to the nature and texture of the salt. The method is by dissolving any saline body in water, and filtering the same, till the film appears at the top, and then let it stand to cool; and this is done by that attractive force which is in all bodies, and particularly in salt; whereas, when the menstruum, or fluid, in which such particles flow, is fastened enough or evaporated, so that the saline particles are within each other's attractive powers, they draw one another more than they are drawn by the fluid, then they run into crystals. And this is peculiar to those, that let them be ever so much divided and reduced into minute particles, yet when they are formed into crystals, each of them retaineth their proper shapes; so that one might as easily divide them of their saltres, as of their figure. This being an eminent and perpetual law, by knowing the figure of the crystal, we may understand what the texture of the particles ought to be, which can form those crystals; and, on the other hand, by knowing the texture of the particles, may be determined the figure of the crystal.

CRYSTAL, n. f. [cristallus] 2. Crystals (in chemistry) express all other matter shot or congealed in manner of crystal. Chambers.

CRYSTALLINE HUMOUR, n. f. The second humour of the eye, that lies immediately next to the aqueous behind the avex, opposite to the papilla, nearer to the front part than the back part of the globe. It is the leaft of the humours, but much more solid than any of them. Its figure, which is convex on both sides, resem- bles two unequal segments of spheres, of which the most convex is on its back.

CUB

CUB, n. f. [cubus, Latin.] The offspring of a beast, generally of a bear or fox. I would outhe the sterno eyes that look, Pluck the young suckling cubs from the five-beet. Shaksp. This night, wherein the cub-drawn bear would catch, The lion, and the belly-pinched wolf. Keep thieves for dry, Shakespeare's King Lear. In the dark, he was destroying not a buck, but a power executed with oppression. L'Estrange. 2. The young of a whale, perhaps of any viviparous fift. Two mighty whales, which fueling seas had One as a mountain vast, and with her came A cub, not much inferior to his dame. Water. 3. In reproach or contempt, a young boy or girl. O thou trembling cub! what wilt thou be? When time hath froze a grizzle on thy eafe? Or wilt not else thy craft so quickly grow, That thine own trip shall be thine overthrow? Shakespeare. O most comical sight! a country squire, with the equipage of a wife and two daughters, came to Mr. Shipton's shop last night, but such two unlicked cubs! Congreve.

To CUB, v. a. [from the nor.]. To bring forth the kind of beasts, or of a woman in contemplation. Cubk'd in a cabin, on a matress laid, On a brown george with lousy saddles fed; Dead wine, that think's of the Borrachio's top From a foul jack, or greaty maping. Dryden's Perdita.

CUBATION, n. f. [cubatio, Latin.] The act of lying down. Dit.

CUBATORY, adj. [from cubo, Lat.] Recumbent. Dit.

CUBATURE, n. f. [from cube]. The finding exactly the solid content of any proposed body. Harr.}

CUBES, n. f. [from vices, a die.]

1. [In geometry.] A regular solid body, consisting of six figure and equal faces or sides, and the angles all right, and therefore equal. Chambers.

2. [In arithmetick.] See CUBICK NUMBER. All the master planes move about the sun at several distances, as their common centre, and with different velocities, and so being observed in all of them, that the figures of the times of the revolutions are proportional to the cubes of their distances. Grew's Cyclopaedia.

CUBICK REST, n. f. The origin of a CUBICK REST. Cuckick number; or a number, by whose multiplication into itself, and again into the product, any given number is formed: thus two is the cube-root of eight. Chambers.

CUBER, n. f. A small dried fruit resembling pepper, but somewhat longer, of a greyish brown colour on the surface. It has an aromatick smell, and is acid to the taste. Cubes are brought from Java. Hill.

CUBICK, n. f. Aromatick, as cubeb, cinnamon, and nutmeg, are usually put into warm wines, to give them more oily spirits. Flower on the Humours.

CUBICAL, adj. [from cube.]

1. Having the form or properties of a cube. A cubic vessel, containing cubic feet of air, will not suffer a wax candle of an ounce to burn in it above an hour before it be suffocated. Whitby's Math. Mag.

It is above a hundred years since any particular throw, that you do not call any given figure of faces with six equal sides; because there are so many several combinations of the six faces of this number. Bentley's Geometry.

2. It is applied to numbers.

The number of four, multiplied into itself, produces the square number of sixteen; and that again multiplied by four, produces the cubic number of sixty-four. If we should suppose a multitude actually infinite, the cube must be infinite roots, and square and cubic numbers; yet, of necessity, the root is but the fourth part of the square, and the extremity of the part of the cubic number. Holme's Origin of Mankind.

The number of ten hath been as highly extolled, as confining even, odd, long and plain, quantative and cubical numbers. Brown's Polyglot Euse.

CUBICKNESS, n. f. [from cubical.] The state or quality of being cubical.

CUBICALITY, adj. [cubicalism, Latin.] Fitted for the pollution of lying down.

Cubick; by degrees, changed their cubicality beds into dicubical, and introduced a fashion to go from the baths unto these. Brown's Polyglot Euse.

CUBIFORM, adj. [from cube and form.]

Of the shape of a cube. 3 M.

CUBIT.
CU CUBIT. n. f. [from cubitus, Latin.] A measure in use among the ancients; which was originally the distance from the elbow, bending inwards, to the extremity of the middle finger. This measure is the fourth part of a well-proportioned man's stature. Some fix the Hebrew cubit at twenty inches and a half; Paris measure; and others at eighteen. Colinet.

From the tip of the elbow to the end of the long finger, is half a yard, and a quarter of the stature; and makes a cubit, the first measure we read of, the ark of Noah being framed and measures by cubits. Holden in Times. Measured by cubits, length, breadth, and height. Millin.

The Jews used two sorts of cubits; the Sacred, and the profane or common one. Archbold in Measures.

When on the gothic first I cast my sight, Source from her stature of a cubit bright. Pope.

CUBITAL. adj. [cubitalis, Latin.] Containing only the length of a cubit.

The watchmen of Tyre might well be called pygmies, the towers of that city being so high, that men below stood under the cup of a cubit.Brown in Vulgar Errors.

*CUCKINGSTOOl n. f. An engine invented for the punishment of fcods and unquiet women, which, in ancient times, was called tumrel. Covent.

"These mounted on a chair-currule, Which moderns call a cucking-Bud, March proudly to the river's side." Hudibras.

*CUCKOLD. n. f. [cucux, Fr. from cacuxon.] One that is married to an adulterer; one whole wife is false to his bed. But for all the whole world, why, who would not make here a cuckold, to make him a monarch? I should venture pagarity for't. Shakespeare's Othello.

There have been,
Or I am much deceiv'd, a cuckold ere now;
And many a man, there is, even at this present,
Now while I speak this, holds his wife by th' arm,
That little thinks she's been false d in his absence. Shakespeare.

For though the law makes null the adulterer's deed
Of lands to her, the cuckold may succeed. *Dryden's Jovial."

Even since the rise of king Charles II. the alderman is made a cuckold, the defiled virgin is debauched; and adultery and fornication are committed behind the fence. Swift.

To Cuckold. v. a.

1. To corrupt a man's wife; to bring upon a man the reproach of having an adulterous wife; to rob a man of his wife's fidelity. If thou canst cuckold him, thou tellst thyself a plagiarist, and me a forger. Shakespeare's Othello.

2. To wrong a husband by unchastity. But fatter not thy wife abroad to roam, Nor foot in streets with amazin pace; For that 'tis to cuckold thee before thy face. Dryden's Journal.

CUCKOLDLY. adj. [from cuckold.] Having the qualities of a cuckold; poor, mean; cowardly; sneaking. Poor cuckoldly knave, I know him not: yet I wrong him to call him poor; they say the feyless knave has four thousand. Shakespeare's Merry Wives of Windsor.

CUCKOLDMAKER. n. f. [cuckold and make.] One that makes a practice of corrupting wives.

If I spied any that had a head to his, either young or old, he or she, cuckold, or cuckoldeder, let me never hope to see a gullet.Shakespeare's Henry VIII.

One Hernandez, cuckold of this city, contrived to steal her away. Dryden's Spanish Friar.

CUCKO'DOM. n. f. [from cuckold.]

1. The act of adultery.

She is thinking on nothing but her colonel, and consorting cuckolddom against me. Dry. Spanish Friar.

2. The flame of a cuckold.

It is a true saying, that the last man of the parish that knows of his cuckold, is himself. Archbold's John Bull.

CUCKOO. n. f. [Tercelu, Lat. cocuu, Welsh; cocu, French; cockicky, Dutch.]

1. A bird which appears in the spring, and is said to suck the eggs of other birds, and lay her own to be hatched in their place; from which practice, it was usual to alarm a husband, at the approach of an adulterer, by calling cuckoo within the house, in order to catch him in the act.Brown in Vulgar Errors.

Finding Mopsa, like a cuckold by a nightingale, along with Pamela, I came in. Sedley.

The merry care, messenger of spring, His trumpet thrill hath three times already sounded. Shakespeare.

The plain long cuckoo gray, Whose note fail none a man doth fast, And dare not answer, nay. Shakespeare.

Take heed, have open eye; for thieves do foot by night.

Take heed the summer comes, or cuckoo birds afright. Shakespeare.

I deduce, From the first note the hollow cuckoo sings; The symphony of spring, and touch a theme Unknown to fame, the passion of the grove. Thomson.

2. It is a name of contempt. Why, what a sacrilegous act thou, then, to praife him so for running! — A burn, ye cuckoo; but a-foot, he will not budge a foot. Shakespeare Henry IV.

CUCKOO-BUD n. f. [cardoannin.] The name of a flower.

When daizily's died, and violets blue, And cuckoo-buds of yellow hue, Do paint the meadows much delight. Shakespeare.

Ditties, cuckoo-flowers. Dennel.

And all, as if to crown our noble King Lear.*

CUCKOO-SPITTLE. n. f. [cucko and spittle.] Cuckoo-spitte, or woodspit, is that spumous dew or exudation, or both, found upon plants, esp. the joint of the holly-ear, ye cokoose — but a-foot, he will not budge a foot.* Shakespeare Henry IV.

CUCKOOLATE. adj. [cuckoolatutus, hooded, cuckolated.] Lat.

1. Hooded; covered as with a hood or cowl.*

Having the resemblance or shape of a hood.

They are differently cuckolated, and exched upon the head and back. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

CUCKOUMBER. n. f. [cucumis, Latin.] The name of a plant, and all of the fruit of that plant.

It hath a flower consisting of one single leaf, bell shaped, and expanded toward the top, and cut into many segments; of which none are male, or barren, having no embryo, but only a large style in the middle, charged with the seeds; others are female, or fruitful, being fattened to an embryo, which is afterwards changed into a milky fruit, for the month past oblate and turbinated, which is divided into three or four cells, including many oblong seeds. The species are, 1. The common cucumber. 2. The white cucumber. 3. The long cucumber. Miller.

How can women along the surface creep, With crooked bodies and with bellies deep.* Dryden's Virgil.

CURBITACEOUS. adj. [from curcubits, Latin, a gourd.]

Curcubitaceous plants are those which resemble a gourd; such as the pumkin and melon. Chambers.

CURCUBITE. n. f. [curcubits, Latin, a gourd.]

A chymical vessel, commonly called a body, made of earth or glass, in the shape of a gourd, and therefore called a curcubite.Quintus.

I have, for curiosity's sake, distilled quicksilver in a curcubite, fitted with a capacious glass head. Rogers on Colours.

Let common yellow sulphur be put into a curcubite glass, upon which pour the strongest aqua fortis. Mortimer.

CUD. n. f. [cub, Saxon.]

That food which is reposed in the first stomach in order to rumination, or to be chewed again.Morley.

Many times, when my master's cane hit me, they cried out to him that the horse had wronged my back, as the horse, I said, had been bit, for I did not mean to strike. Sidney.

You range the pathless wood, While on a flowery bank he bays the cud. Dryden.

*CUDDEN. n. f. [without etymology.] A cuddy. *A clown; a stupid rullet; a low dott: a low bad word."

The swagger cudden, prop'd up by his staff, would stay gaping with a grinning laugh. Dryden.

To Cuddle n. i. o. [a low word; I believe, without etymology.] To lie close to; to fast.*

Have you mark'd that prattish quare, Viewing the tow'ring falcon high?* She caddles low behind the brake. Nor would the fly, nor darst the fly; Priime.

CUDGEL. n. f. [cudgel, Dutch.]

1. A fike to flrike with, lighter than a club, shorter than a pole.* Vine twigs, while they are green, are brittle; yet the wood, dried, is extreme tough; and was used by the captains of armies, amongst the Romans, for their cudgel. Barza.

Do not provoke the rage of stones
And cudgels to thy hide and bones: Tepper and rammus.

The saft was quickly given to understand, with a good cudgel, the difference between the one playellow and the other: L'Estrange.

His furious officer ne'er fail'd to crack
His knotty cudgeil on his tougher back.* Dryden's Journal.

This, if well reflected on, would make people more wary in the use of the rod and the cudgel.*

The wife Cornelius was convinced, that thieves, being politeral arms, could no more be learned alone than fencing or cudgel-played. Ashbuntant and Pope.

2. To croft the Cudgell, is to forbear the contile, from the practice of cudgell-players to lay one over the other. It is much better to give way, than it would be to contend at first, and then either to croft the cudgel, or to be bullied in the conclusion. L'Epre.

To Cudgel. v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To beat with a Rick.* My lord, he speaks not well of you, like a foul-mouthed man as he is; and said he would tumble and ramm. Shakespeare's Henry IV.

The self courting his master, till the cuddel had done, instead of being troked and made much
2. To beat in general.

Cudgel thy brains no more about it; for your dolt art will not mend his pace with beagles. Shakespeare's Hamlet.

A good woman happened to pass by, as a company of young fellows were cudgelling a walnut-tree, and asked them what they did there.
L'Estrange.

CUDGEL-PROOF. adj. Able to refit a kick. Shakespeare.

His doubter was of sturdy buff,
And thought no sword, yet cudgel-proof.
Shakespeare's Old Bachelor.

COU. EL. m. & f. A small fca-fea.
Of round fish there are butts, flats, scrubble, eels.
Corey.

CUMWEEDE. m. & f. [from end and weedy.] A plant.
Muller.

CUFF. n. & f. [queue, a tail, French.]
1. The tail or end of any thing; as, the long curl of a wig.

2. The last word of a speech, which the player, who is to finish, catches, and regards as intimation to begin.
Shakespeare. If you begin when you have spoken your speech, enter into that brake; and so every one according to his care.
Shakespeare's Midsummer Night's Dream.

3. A hint; an intimation; a slight direction.

What's Hecuba to him, or he to Hecuba,
That should weep for her? What would be done,
Had he the motive and the care for pity?
Shakespeare. That I have? He would drown the stage with tears.
Shakespeare.

Let him know how many servants there are of both sexes, who expect visits; and give them their care to attend in two lines, as he leaves the house.
Swift.

4. The part which any man is to play in his turn.

Hold your hands.
Both you of my incochin, and the rest,
Were it my care to fight, I should have known it;
Without a prompter.
Shakespeare's Othello.

Neither is Otto here a more making gentlerman than making sports in his care to move pity, or any way make the anxiety of his party. Rymer's Tragedies of the sixt Age.

5. Humour; temper of mind; a low word.

CUERPO. n. f. [Spanish.] To be in cuerpo, is to be without the upper coat or cloak; to make one to discover the true shape of the cuerpo or body.

Exposé en cuerpo to their rage,
Without my arms and equipage.
Hudibras.

CUFF. n. f. [suffs, a battle; suffrages to fight, Italian.]
1. A blow with the fist: a box; a stroke.

The priest let fall his book.
And as he flew'd again to take it up,
The mad-brain'd bridg'room took him such a cuff,
Shakespeare.

There was no money bid for argument, unleas the poet and the player went to cuffs in the question.
Shakespeare.

He gave her a cuff on the ear, and she would kick him with her knitting-needle.
Author's John Bull.

Their own sects, which now lie dormant, would be byramus, again with each other about picture and preferment.
Swift.

2. It is used of birds that fight with their talons.

To CUFF. v. n. [from the noun.] To fight; to fustle.
CUL

Culverins are such as have a smooth, jointed that, and usually hollow; and at each joint the stalk is wrapped about with small, narrow, long, sharp-pointed leaves, and their seeds are contained in empty husks. Culverin is a Dutch word for a kind of gun. They have also several sorts of grafts, both of the Cypcrus and culverins kinds; some with broader, others with narrower leaves. Woodward in Foggis.

The proper food of the vegetable kingdom is taken from the farinaceous or mealy foods of some culverins plants; as oats, barley, wheat, rice, maize, peas, milder, &c.

"To cultivate," CULVATUR, n. s. (from cultivate.)
1. The art or practice of improving soils, and forwarding or melliorating vegetables.
2. Improvement in general; promotion; mellioration.

CULPABILIT. n. f. (from culpable.)
Blamable; culpable.

CULPABLE, adj. (culpabilis, Latin.)
1. Criminal.

"The circumstances of the prisoner are such as will make it appear, that the crime, if committed by him, and not committed by his friends, and profit of his friends, and profit of himself, to have been committed by him."

2. Guilty; with of.

"These being perhaps culpable of this crime, or of having it suspected of this crime, were first put to the proof of the culpable."

3. Blameable; blameworthy.

"The wisdom of God fetth before us in Scripture, so many admirable patterns of virtue, and no one of them without somewhat not wherein they were culpable; but to the end that to Him alone it might always be acknowledged, "Thee only holy, and Thee only just."

"Such ignorance is voluntary, and therefore culpable."

"But in every man's power to have prevented it."

CULPABleness, n. f. (from culpable.)
Blame; guilt.

CULPABLY adv. (culpabiliter.) Blamably; criminally.

The punishment of this duty pliably and culpably, it is not to be expected we should communicate belli.

CULPRIT, n. f. (About this word there is great dispute. It is used by the judge at criminal trials, who, when the prisoner deems himself guilty, and puts himself upon his trial, affirms, \"Culprit, God send him a good deliverance.\"

It is likely that it is a corruption of Quell pari, may it appear; the wish of the judge being that the prisoner may be found innocent.) A man arraigned before the judge.

The knight appeared, and silence they proclaim, Then suit the trial to his name. And after form of ways, with right it to name.

To name the thing that woman and man did.\" De F.,

An author in the condition of a culprit, the judge on his judges by allowing too much, and considering too far, he may injure his own cause; and, by yielding and suffering too boldly, he may defeat the court. Prior's Preface to Schomae.

Cull. [Culler, Layr.] The iron of the plough perpendicular to the share. It is commonly written couler.

Hen fellow bee
The dannel, hemlock, and rank yewy, Doff not upon, while that the cutler cuts That should desecrate fall everwhere.

Shakespeare's Henry V.

To CULTIVATE, v. a. (culvare, Fr.)
1. To forward or improve the product of the earth by manual industry.

CULVIRIN, n. f. A flower.

Looking down the meadows I could see a girl cropping culverins and cowslips, to make garlands.

Walter's Angler.

To CUMBER, v. n. [Cumbren, Cumber, to disturb, Dutch.]
1. To embarrase; to entangle; to obstrue.

"Why asks he what avails him not in fight, And would but cumber and retard his flight, In which his only excellence is place'd?"

You give him death, that intersect his haft.

Dryden's Fables.

Hardly his head the pluming quire rears, Clog'd with his cloaths, and cumber'd with his years.

Dryden.

The learning and mastery of tongue, being in itself so contemptible a thing, should not be cumbered with any other difficulties, as is done in this way of proceeding.

Lukc.

To crowd or load with something ufeless.

Let it not cumber your better remembrance.

Shakespeare's Timon.

The multiplying variety of arguments, especiallly frivolous ones, is not only lost labour, but cumber besides.

To cumber with mothers.

To involve in difficulties and dangers; to diftrese.

Domesfield airy, and fierce civil strife, Shall cumber all the parts of Italy.

Shakespeare's Julius Caesar.

To busy; to distract with multiplicity of cares.

Martha was cumbered about much serving. Luke.

To be troublesome in any place.

Both the bramble cumber a garden? It makes the better budge; where, if it cheses to place the owner, it will tear the ground in. Shakespeare's Cymbeline.

CUMBER, n. s. [Cumber, Dutch.] Vexation; cumberonedness; embarrassment; obstruction; hindrance; disturbance; diftrese.

By the occasion thereof I was brought to as great cumber and danger, as lightly any might escape.

Sidney.

Thus fade thy helps, and thus thy cumber spring.

Spero.

The greatest ships are least serviceable, go very deep in water, are of marvollous charge and fearful cumber.

Raleigh.

CUMBERSONELY, adv. [from cumber.] In a troublesome manner; in a manner that produces hindrance and vexation.

CUMBERSONENESS. n. s. [from cumber.] Encumberance; hindrance; obstruc.

CUMBRANCE. n. s. [from cumber.] Burden; hindrance; impediment.

Extol not riches then, the coil of fools, The wife man's cumbrance, if not thare, more apt To flacker wits, and stirs to edge, Then prompt her to do aught may merit praise.

Milton.

CUMBROUS, adj. [from cumber.]
1. Troublesome; vexatious; disturbing. A cloud
CUN

A cloud of cunning goats do him molest,
All striving to fix their feeble limbs,
That from their noyse be no where cast.
Spefier.

2. Oppressive; burdensome.
Henceforth I fly not death, nor would prolong Life much: Best rather, how I may be quit,
Fairest and fairest charms and gentle words.
Milton. They rul'd him from the ground, and from his cunning arms his limbs unbound;
Then left his wing,
Puffin's head was grown so great:
He funk beneath the cunning weight.
Swift.

3. Jumbled; obstructing each other.
Swift to their several quarters halted then
The cunning, entangled earth, found him, first Min. CUMBER, n. f. [confusla]. A medicinal part.
CUMIN, n. f. [cumina, Latin.] A plant.
Miller. Rank smelling root, and cunning good for eyes.
Spefier.

7. CUMULATE, v. a. [cumula, Latin.] To heap together.
A man that beholds the mighty flights of shell;
bedded and cumulated, heap upon heap amongst earth, will faerly perceive which way those would work.
Woodward.
CUMULATION, n. f. The act of heap'ing together.
CUNTATION, n. f. [cunctatio, Latin.] Delay; procrastination; dilatoriness.
It is most certain, that the English made out their best improvements of these fortunate events; and that especially by two miserable errors, cunconfcting in profecution, and hafte in departure.
Hayward.
The swifts inlil animal, conyjened with a heavy body, implies that common moral folly, and that celerity should always be contemnered with cautelion.
Brown.
CUNCTOR. n. f. [Lat.] One given to delay; a lingerer; an idler; a sluggard.
None in use.
Others, being unwilling to discourse such cunctors, always keep them up in good hope, that if they are not yet called, they may yet, with the thief, be brought in at the last hour.
Conder's Fundamentals.
To CUND. v. a. [from connate, to know, Dutch.] To give notice to; a provincial or obfolute word. See Conder.
They are directed by a banker or buer on the cliff, who, determining the course of the ship, cundus, as they call it, the miler of each boat.
Carew's Survey of Cornwall.
CUNEAL, adj. [cuneus, Latin.] Relating to a wedge; having the form of a wedge.
CUNED. adj. [cunecus, Latin.] Made in form of a wedge.
CUNED FORM, adj. [from cunecus and forma, Lat.] Having the form of a wedge.
CUNED BONES, n. f. The fourth, fifth, and sixth bones of the foot; thus called from their wedgelike shape, being large above and narrow below. Dixi.
CUNER. n. f. [lepars.] A kind of fish less than an oyster, that sticks close to the rocks.
Amourfourth.
CUNNING. adj. [from connan, Saxo; kenna, Dut. to know.]

1. Skillful; knowing; well instructed; learned.
Skiulful women will keep within my house.
Fit to instruct her youth.—To cunning men,
I will be very kind; and liberal
To mine own children, to good bringing up.
Stat. 2.
1. A small veffel to drink in.

CUP

I do present with you a man of mine, Cuming in medicine and the mathematicks.
To inform his fame in this matter. Shaksp.
Wherein he is good, but to take sick and drink it? Wherein cunning, but in craft? Wherein truth, but in villainy? Shakespeare's Henry IV.
Send me the cunning artifices to work in gold and in silver, and that can flit to cut and to grave.
Shakespeare. When Pirro does the king command, He guides the cunning artific's bands.
Prior.
2. Performed with skill; artful.
And over them Azchone high did lift Her cunning web, and spread her fubtile net,
Enwrapped in foul fmoaks, and clouds more black than night.
Swift. And there beside of marble stone was built An altar, car'd with cunning imagery.
On which true Chrifliant blood was often spill'd, And holy martyr's done to die.
Spefier. Once put out thy light, Thus cunning? p?t of dscrying nature, I know not where is that Pomfretian heat That can thy light reuimage. Shakespeare's Othello.
3. Artfully deceitful; fly; designing; trickish; full of fuchceps and stratagemas; fable; crafty; fubtdious.
These small wars and petty points of cunning are insipid, and cunfidered dead to make a lift of them; for nothing doth more hurt than that cunning man pays for wife.
Bacon.
Men will leave truth and milcry to fuch as love it; they are reduced to be cunning; let others run the hazard of being fencre.
South.
4. Acted with fubtily.
The more he pretended, the more his father thought he did felmer, accounting his integrity to be but a cunning pretence.
CUNNING. n. f. [cunningne, Saxon.] 1. Artifice; deceit; flines; fleight; craft; fubtily; dilTemuation; fraudulcnt dexterity.
What if I be no fuch the poet, as even that miserable subject of his cunning, whereof you speak? We take cunning for a finner or crooked wisdom; and certainly there is great difference between a cunning man and a wife man, not only in point of honesty, but in point of ability. Bacon.
Discourage cunning in a child; cunning is the seed of wickedness.
Locke.
2. Art; skill; knowledge; right-hand cunning.
CUNNINGLY, adv. [from cunning.] Artfully; flily; subtilely; by fraudulent contrivance; craftily.
Among other crimes of this nature, there was diligent enquire made of such as had raised and disfigured a bruft and rumour, a little before the thought, that the rebels had the day, and that the king's army was overthrown, and the king fled; whereby it was fuppofed, that fome fanaticks were cunningly put off and kept back.
Henry's VII.
I must meet your danger, and defteem him ftrong: But cunningly and cleftely. Dend'm's Spect.
When ftick is high, they cut between, Making by second hand their offers; Then cunningly retire unconf.
With each a million in their coffers.
Swift.
CUNNINGMAN, n. f. [cunningn and man.] A man that is cunning in two fortunes, or reach to how recovering stolen goods.
He fent him for a ftrong detachment
Of blade, confable, and watchfver,
T attack the cunningman, for plunder
Commiffion to W. Hadhams.
CUNNINGNESS. n. f. [from cunning.]
Deceitfullness; finenes.
CUP, n. f. [cup, Sax. kep, Dut. cope, French.]
1. A small veffel to drink in.
...and the like, the beauty will not be so much respected, as it is when the nose is like a pug. Bacon.

Curiosity n.f. [from curios, Latin.]

1. Inquisitiveness; inclination to enquire.
2. Nicety; delicacy.

When thou wast in thy gift, and thy perfume, Be not careless for so much curiously thy rage thou knowest none, but art described for the county. Shakespeare's Timon.

5. Accuracy; exactness.

Qualities that a lover had, that curiously in neither can make choice of the female they flatter. Shakespeare's Love's Labours Lost.

Our senses, however armed or affrighted, are too gross to discern the curiously of the workmanship of man.

To CUR Le. (from curios, Latin.)

1. A ringlet of hair.

She appeared herself like a page, cutting off her hair, leaving nothing but the short curls to cover that noble head.

2. Undulation; wave; sinuosity; flexure.

Thus it happens, if the glass of the prisms be free from veins, and their sides be accurately plain and well polished, without those numerous waves or curvets, which usually arise from the sand-holes.

To CURLE a. [curls, Dutch, cuppam, Spanish, Arillas, Dutch, cyppum.]

1. To turn the hair in ringlets.

What hath thou been?

A fervent man, proud in heart and mind, that curled my hair, wore gloves in my cap, favored the foot of my child's heart, and did the act of darkness with her.

2. To writh; to twist.

3. To dres with curls.

If the first tured the curled Anteny, he'll make demand of her a kiss.

Shakespeare.

They up the trees.

Climbing, fat thicker than the flaky locks.

That curl'd Megara. Milton's Paradise Lost.

To raise in waves, undulations, or sinuositie;

The vibration of the winds, who take the crimson billows by the top. Curing their monstrous head.

Shakespeare's Henry IV.

Seas would be ponds, without the breathing air.

To curl a wave. Dryden's Fables.

To CURL a. n.

1. To shrun into ringlets.

Those slender aerial bodies are separated and furnished with, either by reason of their flexibilities and weights or their curl or curl.

2. To rise in undulations.

To every nobler portion of the town.

The curling billowsrow their restless tide; in strands now they straggle up and down, as armies, unsorted, forurry division.

Dryden.

While curling beams from village tops are seen.
1. To twist itself.
Then round her slender waist he twirled,
And stamp'd an image of himself, a fou'reign of
The very freckled faith.

2. A kind of water-fowl, with a large beak, of a grey colour, with red and black spots.
Among birds we reckon curles, curles, and curles.

3. A bird larger than a partridge, with longer legs. It runs very swiftly, and frequents the corn-fields in Spain, in Sicily, and sometimes in France.

4. Generally; uncontradicted; authoritative.
   Many strange truths are received for current.
   Because such as openly receive supposed difficulties, are taken for principal friends to the common benefit of all, under this fair and plausible colour, whatever they utter pashest for good and current.
   Moderns.
   I have collected the facts, with all possible impartially, from the current histories of those times. Swift.

5. Common; general.
   They have been trained up from their infancy in one set of notions, without ever knowing what other opinions are current among mankind.
   About three months ago we had a current report of the king of France's death. Addison.

6. Popular; such as is established by vulgar effusion.
We are also to consider the difference between worth and merit, freely taken: that is to say, what is intrinsically valuable, which is lost or more, as men have occasion for him.
   Great's Cynophylax.

7. Fashionable; popular.
   Off leaving what is natural and fit,
The current folly proves our ready wit;
And authors think their reputation safe,
Which lives as long as fools are pleasd to laugh.
   Pope.

8. Passible; such as may be allowed or admitted.
   Foulier than heart can think thee, thou canst make
No excuse current, but to hang thyself.
   Dryden.

9. What is now passing; what is at present in its course; as the current year.

10. A running stream.
   The current, that with gentle manner glides.
    How know'st thou, being (for'dy), impatiently doth rage;
    But his heart is not indolent.
    He makes sweet music with the silkworm's down.
    Shakespeare.

11. These inequalities will vanish in one place, and presently appear in another, and almost equally move like waves, proceeding and deserting one another; that they their motion oftentimes seems to be quicken, as if in that vast sea they were curried on by a current, or at least by a stir.
    Dryden.
    Hear her Eblanaus no more stall hot,
    Whose fame in thine, like foifer current, is loft;
    Thy nobler streams shall visit Jorda's abodes.
    To shine among the flats, and bathe the gulf.
    Dibdin.

12. Not false. Po more swells the poet's days,
While through the fly his fishing current flays.
Dibdin.

13. In navigation.
Currents are certain progressive motions of the water of the sea in several places, either quite down to the bottom, or to a certain determinate depth; by which a ship may happen to be carried more swiftly, or retarded in her course, according to the direction of the current, with or against the way of the ship.
Harris.

14. Cour'ere; progrenion.
   The current was taken, and Theses invected by Phebiads the Lacedaemonian infamously; which drew on a reparation of the calf, a recovery of the town, and a current of the war, even into the walls of Sparta.
Boeun.
CURSE. v. n. [cursean, Saxon.] 1. To wish evil to; to execrate; to devote. Curse me this people; for they are too mighty for us. Numbers. 2. To mischiefs; to afflict; to torment. On impious realms and horrid kings impend. Thy plagues, and curse them, with such foes as those. Page. To CURSE. v. n. To imprecate; to deny or affirm with imprecation of divine vengeance. The silver about which these curstly, and speak'd of also in my ear, the firder with which is vile. 1. Malediction; with of evil to another. This have I fulfill'd my mouth to blay, wishing a curse to his soul. Jeth. I never went from your lordship but with a longing to return, or without a heavy curse to him who receives you. What needs, and put me on the neces- sity of withdrawing. 2. Alliteration; torment; vexation. Curse on the stripping! how he apes his fire! Ambitiously, extravagantly! à la cent. Curtz. CURSED, participial adj. [from curse.] 1. Deserving a curse; hateful; detestable; abominable; wicked. Merciful power's! Rehrim in me the cursed thoughts that nature Gives way in to expire. Shakespeare's Measure. Unholly; unantified; blasph'd by a curse. Come, lady, while hea'v'n bids u grace. Let's fly this cursed place. Left the Escurtane on the field. With such other new devices. Nor a wither, nor ne'er end found, Till we come to harder ground. Milton. 3. Vexatious; troublesome. This curse that more renew'd. Be, as becomes a wife, obedient still, Though given, yet subject to her husband's will. One day, Belshaz, in Babylon he live; Defint the next a journey to partake. Where wounding thorns and cursed thistles grow. Dryden. CURSEFULLY, adv. [from curse.] Miser- ably; shamfully; a lowcut word. Satisfaction and realisation lies to cursefully bear on the gizzards of our publishers. f. Energy. Sure this is a nation that is cursefully afraid of being cursed; and to compare them to curses, and can not regain one great genius but at the expense of another. CURSELESSNESS, n. f. [from curse.] The state of being under a curse. CURSHIP, n. f. [from cam.] Dogship; meanness; foulishness. And that he was curseful in my eyes? 'Gainst arms, authority, and worship. Hurston. CURSITOR. n. f. [Latin.] An officer or clerk belonging to the Chancery, that makes out original writs. They are called clerks of course, in the oath of the clerks of Chancery. Of these there are twenty-four in number, which Vol. i.
If you are learned,
Be not as common fools; if you are not
Let them have cussifon by you. Shaks. Coriolanus.

But, in her temple's last reeks incl'd
On Daniel's lip th' animated head repos'd:
He made the mad snares of vain-words bite him,
And softly bespangled with kisserian dew. Pope.

Curtate Distance. n. f. [In astronomy.] The distance of a planet's place from the sun, reduced to the ecliptic.

Curvation. n. f. [from curvus, to shorten, Latin.] The interval between a planet's distance from the sun and the curvate distance. Chambers.

Curvelasse. See Cutlass.

Curvelax. See Curvature.

Curved, adj. [curvatus, Lat.] Bent; crooked.

Curvature. n. f. [curve, Latin.] The act of bending or crooking.

Curvedness; inflexion; manner of bending.

It is bent after the manner of the cartesian curve, by which it obtains that curvature which is requisite for the inclusion of the body. Cheyne's Philos. Principles.

Flame it was beyond the activity of the minds, and curvature of the offices, to give it due importance. Holier.

Curved, adj. [curve, Latin.] Crooked; bent; inflected; not straight.

It implies an intrinsic principle of gravity or attraction may make it describe a curve line about the attracting body. Bentz.

Curved, n. f. Anything bent; a flexure or crookedness of any particular form.

And as you lead it round, in artful curves,
With eye intentive mark the springing stage.

To CURVE, v. a. [curve, Latin.] To bend; to crook; to inflect.

And the tongue is drawn back and curved. Holier.

To CURVE. v. a. [corvettare, Italian.]

1. To leap; to bound.

Cry hail! to thy tongue, I pr'ythee: it creates unsavourly. Shakspeare's As you like it.

Himself he on an earwig sat,
Yet scarce he on his back could get,
So short and high did he crouch,
Ere he himself could settle. Dryg. Nymphid.

Seiz'd with uncustomed pain, fell up with right,
The wounded steed crouseth, and, rais'd upright,
Lighting on his feet before his horse behind
Springing up in air aloft, and lads the wind. Dryg. Eneid.

2. To strike; to be licentious.

Curt'et. n. f. [from the verb.]

1. A leap; a bound.

A frolick; a prank.

Curvilinear. adj. [curve and line, Lat.]

1. Consisting of a crooked line. The impulsive continually draws the celestial body from its rectilinear motion, and forces it into a curvilinear orbit so that it must be repeated every minute of time. Cheyne.

2. Composed of crooked lines.

Cru'vity. n. f. [from curve.] Crookedness.

The joined ends of that bone and the incus receding, make a more acute angle at that joint, and give a greater curvity to the posture of the offices. Holier on Speech.

Cus'hi'on. n. f. [kusfusf, Dutch; cusfusf, French.] A pillow for the fest; a soft pad placed upon a chair.

Call Claudius, and some other of my men; I'd have them sleep on cussifons in my tent. Shakespeare's Julius Caesar.

Cus'hioned. adj. [from cussifon.] Sacred on a cussifon; fupposing cussifons.

Many, when they were upon cussifons, would have remained in obliquity. Difficulties on Rhetoric.

Cusp. n. f. [cuspis, Latin.] A term used to express the points or horns of the moon, or other luminary. Harris.

Cus'pated. adj. [from cuspis, Lat.] Cuspidated. A word expressing the leaves of a flower ending in a point.

Cus'tard. n. f. [cudlard, Welsh.] A kind of sweetmeat made by boiling eggs with milk and sugar till the whole thicken into a mass. It is a food much used in city feasts.

He commend 'em, till their guts did ake.
With cudsord, cudfard, and plum-buckle. Hudibrast.

Now may'st and ditty's all bude and sate well.
Yet eat, in dreams, the cudfard of the day. Pope.

Cus'tody. n. f. [custodia, Latin.]

1. Imprisonment; restraint of liberty.

The council reprobated unto queen Elisabeth the mention of her life, and therefore they advised her, that she should go abroad weekly attended; but the queen answered, the lord rather be dead than put in custody. Burrard.

For us christians, it is our liberty, And unjust, and arbitrary punishment Inflicted! Milton's Paradise Lost.

2. Care; guardianship; charge.

Under the custody and charge of the fons of Mervat, shall be the boards of the following.

Numb. iii. 36. We being strangers here, how dare thou trust So great a charge from one common cussifon? Shakspeare.

An offer that it were just to depart out of the city committed to their cussifon. Knolles.

There is generally but one coin stamped upon the occasion, which is made a present to the person who is celebrated: by this means the whole family is in one cussifon. Addis.

3. Defence; preservation; security.

There was prepared a fleet of thirty ships for the cussifon of the narrow seas. Burrard.

Cus'tom. n. f. [cussifon, French.]

1. Habit; habitual practice.

Blind and destruction shall be in us, and we shall walk and strut, as men that walk and strut; and pity d'cussifon of them. Milton.

2. Fashion; common way of acting.

And the priest's cussifon with the people was, that when any malefactor sacrificed, the priest's servant came, while the flesh was in setting, with a flesh-hook of three teeth in his hands. Sama. ii.

3. Establisht manner.

According to the custom of the priest's office, his lot was to burn incense when he went into the temple of the Lord. Luke i.

4. Practice of buying of certain persons.

You say he is affidavit in his calling, and is he not grown rich by it? Let him have your cussifon but upon what his advantage?

5. Application from buyers: as, this trader has good cussifon.

Cus'tomhouse. n. f. The house where the taxes upon goods imported or exported are collected.

Some cussifoned officers, birds of passage, and oppressive thralldoms, are the only thinking people amongst us. Swift.

Cus'tomarily, adv. [from cussifon.] Common; habitual; frequent.

Cus'tomableness. n. f. [from cussifonable.]

1. Frequency; habit.

2. Conformity to custom.

Cus'tomary. adv. [from cussifonable.]

According to cussifon.

Kingdoms have cussifonably been carried away by right of succession, according to proximity of blood. Hayward.

Cus'tomarily, adv. [from cussifonable.]

Habitually; commonly.

To call God to witness truth, or a lie perhaps, or to appeal him to every trivial occasion, in common discourse, cussifonably without consideration, one of the highest indignities and affronts that can be offered him.

Cus'tomariness. n. f. [from cussifonable.]

Frequency; commonness; frequent occurrence.

A vice which for its guilt may justify the sharpest, and for its cussifonability the freest, invectives which can be made against it. Government of the Tongue.

Cus'tomary. adj. [from cussifon.]

1. Conformable to established cussifon; according to prescription.

Pray you now, if it may stand with the tone of your voice that I may be so civil I have here the cussifon gowns. Shakespeare.
7. To divide packs of cards.
Suppose they in their hearts remain,
Except from passion and from pain;
And frankly leave us, human churls,
That cut and shuffle for us all.
Gravelin.

8. To interface; to cros; as, one line cuts another at right angles.

9. To cut down. To fell; to hew down.
All the timber whereof was cut down in the mountains of Gulf of Cadaat.
Knolly.

10. To cut down. To excel; to overpower; a low phrase.
So great is his natural eloquence, that he cuts down the finest orator, and destroys the best contended argument, as from one he gets himself to be heard.
Adolphus Cowper.

11. To cut off. To separate from the other parts by cutting.
And they caught him, and cut off his thumbs.

d. To cut off. To destroy; extirpate; to put to death; to annihilate. All Spain was first conquered by the Romans, and filled with colonies from them, which were much increased, and the native Spaniards still cut off.

d. To cut off. To destroy; extirpate; to put to death.

12. To extirpate. To destroy; to cut off.

13. To cut off. To rekindle; to separate; to take away.
Pitch the wild fire, and we shall determine how to cut off some charge in legacies.

14. To cut off. To intercept; to hinder from union or return.
The king of this island, a wise man and a great warrior, handled the matter as he thought proper.

15. To cut off. To put an end to; to obviate.

16. To cut off. To withhold.
We are concerned to cut off all occasion from those who seek occasion, that they may have where to secure us.

17. To cut off. To preclude. Everyone who lives in the profit of any voluntary gift, actually cuts himself off from the benefits and protection of Christianity.

18. To cut off. To interrupt; to silence.
It is no grace to a judge to shew quickness of a convert in cutting off evidence or could too short.

19. To cut off. To apostrophize; to abbreviate.
No vowel can be cut off before another, when we cannot find the pronunciation of the word.

20. To cut out. To shape; to form.
By the pattern of mine own thoughts I cut out the purity of his.

21. To cut out. To scheme; to contrive.
Having a most pernicious fire kindled within the bowels of his own heart, he had work enough cut out to extinguish it.
Nelson.

22. To cut out. To adapt.
You know I am not cut out for writing a tragi-comedy, nor have a genius to pen any thing exactly.
Rymer.

23. To cut out. To debair.
I am cut out from any thing but common knowledge, or common discourse.

24. To cut out. To issue; to issue.

25. To cut short. To hinder from proceeding by sudden interruption. Thus much he spoke, and more he would have said.

26. To cut short. To abridge; as, the soldiers were cut short of their pay.

27. To cut up. To divide an animal into convenient pieces.
The boar's interment, and the note upon him after he was cut up, pointed out that he had no brains in his head, may be moralized into a fable man.

28. To cut up. To eradicate.
Who cut up worms as the hucksters, and jonquil roots for their meat.

This doctrine cuts up all government by the roots.

29. To cut off. To check.

---

CUT.

2. To operate by division; to divide by cutting.

3. To divide or separate; to separate; to divide.

4. To divide or separate; to separate; to divide.

5. To divide or separate; to separate; to divide.

6. To divide or separate; to separate; to divide.

7. To divide or separate; to separate; to divide.

8. To divide or separate; to separate; to divide.

9. To divide or separate; to separate; to divide.

10. To divide or separate; to separate; to divide.

11. To divide or separate; to separate; to divide.

12. To divide or separate; to separate; to divide.

13. To divide or separate; to separate; to divide.

14. To divide or separate; to separate; to divide.

15. To divide or separate; to separate; to divide.

16. To divide or separate; to separate; to divide.

17. To divide or separate; to separate; to divide.

18. To divide or separate; to separate; to divide.

19. To divide or separate; to separate; to divide.

20. To divide or separate; to separate; to divide.

21. To divide or separate; to separate; to divide.

22. To divide or separate; to separate; to divide.

23. To divide or separate; to separate; to divide.

24. To divide or separate; to separate; to divide.

25. To divide or separate; to separate; to divide.

26. To divide or separate; to separate; to divide.

27. To divide or separate; to separate; to divide.

28. To divide or separate; to separate; to divide.

29. To divide or separate; to separate; to divide.

---

CUT.

1. To make clean; to scrape; to clean; to shave.

2. To make clean; to scrape; to clean; to shave.

3. To make clean; to scrape; to clean; to shave.

4. To make clean; to scrape; to clean; to shave.

5. To make clean; to scrape; to clean; to shave.

6. To make clean; to scrape; to clean; to shave.

7. To make clean; to scrape; to clean; to shave.

8. To make clean; to scrape; to clean; to shave.

9. To make clean; to scrape; to clean; to shave.

10. To make clean; to scrape; to clean; to shave.

11. To make clean; to scrape; to clean; to shave.

12. To make clean; to scrape; to clean; to shave.

13. To make clean; to scrape; to clean; to shave.

14. To make clean; to scrape; to clean; to shave.

15. To make clean; to scrape; to clean; to shave.

16. To make clean; to scrape; to clean; to shave.

17. To make clean; to scrape; to clean; to shave.

18. To make clean; to scrape; to clean; to shave.

19. To make clean; to scrape; to clean; to shave.

20. To make clean; to scrape; to clean; to shave.

21. To make clean; to scrape; to clean; to shave.

22. To make clean; to scrape; to clean; to shave.

23. To make clean; to scrape; to clean; to shave.

24. To make clean; to scrape; to clean; to shave.

25. To make clean; to scrape; to clean; to shave.

26. To make clean; to scrape; to clean; to shave.

27. To make clean; to scrape; to clean; to shave.

28. To make clean; to scrape; to clean; to shave.

29. To make clean; to scrape; to clean; to shave.

---

CUT.

3. To cut; to cut; to cut; to cut.

4. To cut; to cut; to cut; to cut.

5. To cut; to cut; to cut; to cut.

6. To cut; to cut; to cut; to cut.

7. To cut; to cut; to cut; to cut.

8. To cut; to cut; to cut; to cut.

9. To cut; to cut; to cut; to cut.

10. To cut; to cut; to cut; to cut.

11. To cut; to cut; to cut; to cut.

12. To cut; to cut; to cut; to cut.

13. To cut; to cut; to cut; to cut.

14. To cut; to cut; to cut; to cut.

15. To cut; to cut; to cut; to cut.

16. To cut; to cut; to cut; to cut.

17. To cut; to cut; to cut; to cut.

18. To cut; to cut; to cut; to cut.

19. To cut; to cut; to cut; to cut.

20. To cut; to cut; to cut; to cut.

21. To cut; to cut; to cut; to cut.

22. To cut; to cut; to cut; to cut.

23. To cut; to cut; to cut; to cut.

24. To cut; to cut; to cut; to cut.

25. To cut; to cut; to cut; to cut.

26. To cut; to cut; to cut; to cut.

27. To cut; to cut; to cut; to cut.

28. To cut; to cut; to cut; to cut.

29. To cut; to cut; to cut; to cut.
2. The impression or separation of continuity, made by an edge or sharp instrument, the desk brushy, and distinguished from that made by perforation with a pointed instrument.

3. A wound made by cutting.

4. A channel made by art.

5. A part cut off from the rest.

6. A small particle; a shred.

7. A lot made by cutting a stick.

8. A near passage, by which some angle is cut off.

9. A picture cut or carved upon a ramp of wood or copper, and impregnated from it.

10. The ramp on which a picture is carved, and by which it is impregnated.

11. The art or practice of dividing a pack of cards.

12. Fashion; form; shape; manner of cutting into shape.

13. It seems anciently to have signified a fool or cull. To 'cut still signifies to choose, in old French, a country knife. Therefore the name of the newest for my daughter.

14. Cut and long tall. A proverbial expression for men of all kinds. It is borrowed from dogs.

15. He will maintain you like a gentlewoman.

16. The first and outermost covering of the body, commonly called the flesh.

17. A thin skin formed on the surface of any liquor.

18. The art of cutting with knives, as in sculpture, painting, and engraving.

19. A buffer or platterer, from the French cut, as in cutlery, cutters, and cutters.

20. A piece cut off; a chop.

21. Of two his cutlasses launch'd the firebrand, their quarter's, single, and fix'd on forks of wood.
C Y L

CUTTLE, n. f. [sepia.] A fish, which when he is parsleyed by a fish of prey, throws out a black liquor, by which he darkens the water and escapes. It is somewhat strange, that the blood of all birds, and beasts, and fishes, should be of a red colour, and only the blood of the cuttle be as black as ink. Bacon.

CUTTLE, n. f. [from cuttle.] A foul-mouthed fellow; a fellow who blackens the character of others. Ham.

CYCLIC, adj. [from cyclo.] Of a circular form; circular.

CYCLOID, n. f. [from cyclo.] A curve described by a point on the circumference of a circle which rolls along a straight line. Newton.

C Y N

The quantity of water which every revolution does carry, according to any inclination of the cyliner, may be easily found. Within.

The figure will make you ready for all manner of compartments, bases, pedestals, posts, and buildings, for vaulted turrets, and round cylinders. Peacham.

CYLINDRICAL, adj. [from cylinder.] Having the form of a cylinder.

CYLINDRICK. Partaking of the nature of a cylinder, having the form of a cylinder.

Miners fall fatigued, when several of the cylinder-like tissue are contiguous, and grow together into one mass, is called bruithone ore. Woodward's Natural History.

Obstitions must be most: in both the various parts of the body, where the circulation and the elastic fibres are both small, and those glands, which are the extremities of arteries formed into cylindric canals. Arbuthnot on Medicine.

CYMARR, n. f. [properly written cinar.] A light covering; a coverlet. Their comely coverlet, which he spreaded, was of ermine. Shakespeare's Henry IV.

CYNIC, n. f. [from cynic.] A man of an irreligious or morbid disposition. He hath that set many words for the explaining any subject, does, like the cuttle fish, hide himself for the most part in his own ink. Bacon on Creation.

CYNICAL. Growing by the side of the cuttlefish. A young man, growing up by the side of the cuttlefish, doth not faint, nor flummery, nor owre such word as this cynecle. Shakefpeare's Winter's Tale.

CYNANTHROPY. n. f. The imitation of mankind in which men have the qualities of dogs.

CYNARCTOMACHY. A species of madness in which men have the qualities of dogs.

CYNESICKS. The art of hunting, the art of training and hunting, and hunting with dogs.

There are extant, in Greek, forty books of cynicaty or version. Brown's惟cian Errors.

CYNICAL. adj. [from cynic.] Having the qualities of a dog: curiush: brutal: snarling: sifical.

He doth believe that some new-fangled wit (it is his cynical phrase) will some time or other find out his art. Whittie.

How seldom doth this cynic chime I—

Get thee hence, tirrah; saucy fellow, hence. Shak.
DAB
D is a consonant nearly approaching in sound to T, but formed by a stronger appulse of the tongue to the upper part of the mouth. The sound of D in English is uniform, and it is never mute.

DA CAPO. [ital.] A term in music, which signifying from the head or the beginning, means that the first part of the piece should be repeated at the conclusion.

To DAB. v. a. [dauber. Fr.] To strike gently with something soft or moist. A tree should never be wiped by drawing a piece of tow or rag over it, but only by dabbing it with fine lint.

DAB. n. f. [from the verb.]
1. A small lump of any thing.
2. A blow with something moist or soft.
3. Something moist or slimy thrown upon one.

[In low language.] An artif; a man expert at something. This is not used in writing.

A kind of small flat fish.
Of flat fish there are rays, flouks, dabs, plaice, Carens.

On feet and wings, and feet, and waders, and hips.

To DA'BLE. v. a. [dabbled. Dutch.]
To smear; to dab; to spatter; to be-sprinkle; to wet.
A shadow like an angel, with bright hair
Dabbled in blood. Shakespeare's Richard III.
I fear'd, and dabbled the wound with all of turpentine.
While the South, rising with dabbled wings,
A sable cloud advanc'd the welkin flying. Swift.

To DA'BLE. v. n.
1. To play in water; to move in water or mud.
Neither will a spirit, that dwells with dabs, dabble in this imperious mud. Glanville's April.
The little one complained of her eyes, that she could neither swim nor dabble with them. L'Estrange. But when he found the boys at play,
And saw them dabbling in their play,
He stood behind a wall to lurk,
And mark the projects of their work. Swift.

2. To do any thing in a slight, superficial, or shallow manner; to trumper.
Shakespeare shall be put into your hands, as dear and as fair as it came out of them: though you, I think, have been dabbling here and there with the text, I have had more reverence for the words and the printer, and left every thing standing.

DA'BBLER. n. f. [from dabble.]
1. One that plays in water.
2. One that meddles without mastery; one that never goes to the bottom of an affair; a superficial meddler.
He does not complain of the tooth-ach, lest our dabblers in politics should be ready to swear against him for disfavour. Swift.

DA'CSELF. n. f. [of uncertain derivation; in most provinces called bare. Lencey.]
A small river fish, resembling a roach, but left.
Let me live harmlessly, and near the brink
Of Trent or Avon I have a dwelling place;
Where I may see my quill or cork down link
With eager bite of perch, or bleak, or dace. Walton.

DA'C'TYLE. n. f. [from a tale, a finger.] A poetical foot consisting of one long syllable and two short, like the joints of a finger; as candidus.

DAD. n. f. [The child's way of ex.
DADDY. adj. [dabbling.]
preening father. It is remarkable, that, in all parts of the world, the word for father, as first taught to children, is compounded of a and r, or the kindred letter d, differently placed; as tad, Walla arias, Greek, atta, gothick; tata, Latin.] Father.
I was never so bemused with words,
Since first I call'd my brother's father dad. Shak.
His loving mother left him to my care;
Fine child, as like his dad as he could fare! Gay.

To DA'DLE. v. a. To hold up by a leading string.
The little children when they learn to go,
By painful mothers doted to and fro. Dryden.

D.A'DAL. adj. [dadal, Latin.]
1. Various; variegated.
2. Skilful; this is not the true meaning, nor should beimitated.
Nor hath
The dadel hand of Nature only pour'd
Her gifts of outward grace.

DA'SPOIL. n. f. [Supposed Doffed.]
by Skinner to be
Doff'd windingly. corrupted from spolians.

This plant hath a flabby flower, consisting of one leaf, which is bell-shaped, and cut into six segments, which inclose its middle like a crown; but the empannelment, which commonly sits out of a membranous vagina, turns to an oblong or roundish fruit, which is triangular, and gapes in three parts; it is divided into three cells, and roll of roundish seeds.

Milton. Screw me the green ground with daffodils and tulips, And cowslips, and king-cups, and loved lines.

Bid amaranths all his beauty shed,
And daffodills fill their cups with tears,
To dower the fairest here where Lycid lies.

Milton.
The daughters of the flood have search'd the mead
For violet paste, and cropp'd the poppy's head:

DA'GGER. n. f. [dag, French.]
1. A dagger.
2. A hand gun; a pistol: so called from serving the purposes of a dagger, being carried secretly, and doing mischief suddenly. It is in neither fence now used.

To DA'GGER. v. a. [from dag.] To dabble; to bemire; to let fall in the water: a low word.

DA'GGER. n. f. [dag, French.]
1. A short sword; a poniard.
She ran to her son's dagger, and struck herself a mortal wound.

This word a dagger had his page,
That was but little for his age;
And therefore walked on him to
As dwarfs upon knights-errant do. Hakluyt.
He strikes himself with his dagger; but being interrupted by one of his friends, he flaps him, and breaks the dagger on one of his ribs. Addison.

2. In fencing schools. A blunt blade of iron with a basket hilt, used for defence.

3. With printers. The obelus; a mark of reference in form of a dagger; as /[ ].

DA'GGER DRAWING. n. f. [dagger and draw.] The act of drawing daggers; approach to open violence.
They always are at daggerraving, and another at stopper-raving.
I have heard of a quarrel in a tavern, where all were at daggerraving, till one did learn to know the subject of the quarrel.

To DA'GGLE. v. a. [from dag, toew; a word, according to Mr. Lye, derived from the Danish; according to Skinner, from bag, sprinkled, or beaused, to dip.
They are probably all of the same root.
To dip, negligently in mire or water; to bemire; to be-sprinkle.

To DA'GGLE. v. n. To be in the mire; to run through wet or dirt.
Nor like a puppy, dagged through the town,
To fetch and carry long-fong up and down. Pope.

DAGGLETAIL. n. f. [daggled and tail.] Bemired; dipped in the water or mud; befurred.
The gentleman of wit and pleasure are apt to be chosen at the sight of to many daggle-tailed 'tions, that happen to fall in their way.

DAILY.
DAI

DAILY. adj. [begle, Saxon] Happening every day, or very frequently; done every day; frequent.

DAILY. adv. Every day; very often.

Dainty. adj. 1. Elegant; delicately. 2. Nicely; cleverly; scrupulously.

Dainty. n. s. 1. Delicacy; softness. 2. Pleasing to the palate; of exquisite taste; delicious.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Something nice or delicate; a delicacy; something of exquisite taste. 2. A word of fondness for or delicacy in anything.

Dainty, m. n. [from daisy.] 1. The occupation or art of making various kinds of food from milk. Grounds were turned much in England either to feeding or dairy; and this advanced the trade of English husbandry, and the Temples.

Dainty. m. n. [from daisy, an old word for milk. Mr. Eyre.] 1. The place where milk is manufactured. You have no more worth than the coarse and country fair.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Delicacy; softness.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Nicely; cleverly; scrupulously.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Delicacy; softness.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Nicely; cleverly; scrupulously.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Delicacy; softness.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Nicely; cleverly; scrupulously.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Delicacy; softness.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Nicely; cleverly; scrupulously.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Delicacy; softness.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Nicely; cleverly; scrupulously.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Delicacy; softness.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Nicely; cleverly; scrupulously.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Delicacy; softness.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Nicely; cleverly; scrupulously.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Delicacy; softness.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Nicely; cleverly; scrupulously.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Delicacy; softness.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Nicely; cleverly; scrupulously.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Delicacy; softness.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Nicely; cleverly; scrupulously.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Delicacy; softness.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Nicely; cleverly; scrupulously.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Delicacy; softness.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Nicely; cleverly; scrupulously.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Delicacy; softness.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Nicely; cleverly; scrupulously.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Delicacy; softness.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Nicely; cleverly; scrupulously.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Delicacy; softness.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Nicely; cleverly; scrupulously.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Delicacy; softness.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Nicely; cleverly; scrupulously.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Delicacy; softness.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Nicely; cleverly; scrupulously.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Delicacy; softness.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Nicely; cleverly; scrupulously.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Delicacy; softness.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Nicely; cleverly; scrupulously.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Delicacy; softness.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Nicely; cleverly; scrupulously.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Delicacy; softness.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Nicely; cleverly; scrupulously.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Delicacy; softness.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Nicely; cleverly; scrupulously.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Delicacy; softness.

Dainty. m. n. [from dainty.] 1. Nicely; cleverly; scrupulously.
4. Reparation of damage; retribution.

The bishop demanded reparation of the spoils taken by the Scots, or damages for the same.

Tell me whether, exhibiting several particulars which I have related to you, I may not sue her for damages in a court of justice.

5. [In law.] Any hurt or hindrance that a man takes in his estate. In the common law it particularly signifies a part of what the judge had awarded due damage to a person injured by a fire in a whole field whose neighbour had broken. It is reported that he recovered his own judgment, when he heard that the area, which had been damaged, was that of共建 (Builds). At D'AMAG. v.o. [from the noun.] To mischief; to injure; to impair; to hurt; to harm.

1. I consider time as an immense ocean, into which many noble authors are entirely swallowed up, many very much flattened and damaged, some dispersed and broken into pieces. Addit. To D'AMAG. v. n. To take damage, or be damaged.

DAMAGEABLE adj. [from damage.]

1. Susceptible of hurt: as, damageable goods.

2. Millesihous: perilous. Oaken and immovable is offensive to the purity of God, damageable and infectious in the innocence of our neighbors, and most perilous to ourselves.

DAMASCENE n. f. [damascenus, from Damascenus.] A small plum; a damson, as it is now spoken.

In April follow the cherry tree in blossom, the damascene and plum trees in blossom, and the whitethorn in best. Barlow.

In fruits the white is commonly used, as in pear, damascene, and the alderbuck or black damascene.

DAMASK, n. f. [damasquin, Fr. damasque, ital. from Damascus.]

1. Linen or silk woven in a manner invented at Damascus, by which part, by a various direction of the threads, exhibits flowers or other forms.

Not any weaving which his work doth best.

In drapery, or in lace. Spenser.

Wipe thy horse, for want of a clout, with a damask napkin. South's Rules to Servants.

2. It is used for red colouring in Fairfay, from the damask robe.

And for some drakes penryed was her spirit. Her damask late, now chand'd to purple white. Fairfay.

To D'AMAG. v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To form flowers upon stuffs.

2. To variegate; to diversify. They sit in a field down bank, damask'd with flowers. Milton.

‘round him dance the rosy hours, And damask'd with the ground with flow'res. With ambient sweet perfumes the noun. Fairfay.

DAMASK - ROSE, n. f. The rose of Damascus; a red rose. See Rose.

Damask-rose, or the rose of Damascus, has not been known in England above one hundred years, and now are so common. Barrow.

No gradual bloom is wanting from the bud. Nor broad carnations, nor gay spotted spinks, Nor flower'd from every bush, the damask-rose. Thomson.

DAMASKING n. f. [from damask, printer, Fr.] The art of adorning or decorating by the employment of incisions, and filling them up with gold or silver wire: used in enriching the blades of swords, and the locks of pistols.

Chambers.

DAME. n. f. [dam, French; dama, Spanish.]

1. A lady; the old title of honour to women.

The word dame originally signified a mistress of a family, who was a lady; but is now, in the English law to signify a lady; but in common use, now-a-days, it represents a farmer's wife, or a mistress of a family of the lower rank in the country. Langley.

Billy, but the air of a dam is not to be known, though in your state of honour I am perfect, and have no need of your foolish service. Swift.

Not all these lords do worse myself half as much. As that proud dame, the lord protector's wife.

Shadoff.

DAMAS - VIOLET, n. f. A plant, called also queen's gillyflower.

Muller.

To D'AMAG. v. a. [dama, Latin.]

1. To bloom to eternal torments in a future state. It is not necessary, that the church, by doctrine, and decree, do come to duty for ever those facts and opinions. Barrow.

2. To procure or cause to be eternally condemned.

That which he continues ignorant of, having done the utmost harm he could, and he might not be ignorant of it, shall not damn him. Soul's Sentence.

3. To condemn. Will damn, and confineence will record the soul.

Dyer.

4. To hot or his any publick performance; to explode.

They damn themselves, nor will my muse desert them.

To clap with fuch who fool's and knaves commend. Dyer.

For the great dams of woe.

Phæbus gives them full privilege alone.

To damn all others, and cry up their own. Dyer.

You are so good a critic, that it is the greatest happiness of the modern poets that you do not hear;
DA\n
he may now never to return to those flights which he hath had such experience of, for the Empires andDamning themselves, and to think himself a companion of Hymen. Hammond.

DAM. adj. [damning.] Moiture; fogginers.

Nor need they fear the damagings of the sky. Should flag their wings, and hinder them to fly; I was only water thrown on false too dry. Dryden.

But they often have very great loss, by the damagings of the ground, which roa and boils it. Moxterer.

DAMP. adj. [damp.] Dejected; gloomy; sorrowful.

The lords did dislo dark thoughts, which the remembrance of his uncle might raise, by supplying him with exercises and reports. Hayward.

DAMSEL. n. f. [damselle, French.]

1. A young gentlewoman; a young woman of distinction; now only used in verse.

Kestalling, I say my servant's smiles improve, And one mad damsel doth dispute my power. Prior.

2. An attendant of the better rank.

With her train of damsels she was gone In flindy walks, the foreheating to heaven. Dryden.

A wench; a country lass.

The characters are whoresomem, and the damsel with child.

DAMSON. n. f. [corruptly from damoisele,] A small black plum. See Dama.scene.

My wife defir'd some damson, And made me climb with danger of my life. Shaks.

DAN. n. f. [from damus, as now dat in Spanish, and danus, Italian, from dunus.] The old term of honour for men, as we now say Master. I know not that it was ever used in prose, and imagine it to have been rather of ludicrous import.

Dan Chaucer well of English undoubted, Doughty.

This whimised, whining, purblind, wayward boy.

This figure Juno's giant dwarf, wan Cupid. Shaks.

Dick, if this story pleath thee, Pray thank Dan Pope, who told it me. Prior's Alce.

To DANCE. v. n. [danser, Fr. damper, Span. as some think from tanza, Arab., a dance; as janissis, who loves to derive from Greek, thinks, from hym-] To move in measure; to move with steps correspondent to the sound of instruments.

What say you to young Mr. Fenton? He capers, he dances, he has eyes of youth, he writes very.

Shakespeare.

To DANCE. v. n. To dance; to put into a lively motion.

Thy grandfader lov'd thee well; Many a time he danc'd thee on his knee. Shaks.

Thou noble thing! I more danc'd my own heart, When in my first wedded misfortunes saw Beside my threshold, the malignity of the thing vapour dance the principal spirits. Bacon.

DANCE. n. f. [from the verb.] A motion of one or many in concert, regulated by music.

Our dance of culture, round about the oak of Hence the hunter. Shaks's "M. W. of W." after. There
DAN

The honorable left part of talk is to give the occa-sion, and again to moderate and end with somewhat else for then a man leads the dance.
Bacon.

But you perhaps expect a modest feast,
With amorous songs and wanton dances granted.

DANCER, n. f. [from dance.] One that practices the art of dancing.

He at Philippi kept
His sword c'en like a dancer, while I brook
The lean and wrinkled Caesar.
Shakespeare.

Musicians and dancers! take some truce
With their pleasing labours, for great use
And in their seasons poets bring us dance.
Dryden.
The ear was so far from being a good dancer, that he was no graceful goer.
Warren.

It is a usual practice for our fanaticalists, or dancers on the rope, to attempt somewhat like to Flying.
Wilkins.

He, perfect dancer! climbs the rope,
And balances your fear and hope.
Prior.

Nature, I thought, performed too mean a part,
Forming her movements to the rules of art;
And, yes'd, I found that the musician's hand
Had o'er the dancer's mind too great command.

DANCINGMASTER, n. f. [dance and master.] One who teaches the art of dancing.
The ape was taught their ape tricks by a dancingmaster.
L'Estrange.

This is the dance of a dancing-master, and the fingers of a musician, fall, as it were, naturally, without thought or pain, into regular and admirable modoms.
Locke on Underst.ing.

DANCING-SCHOOL, n. f. [dancing and school.] The school where the art of dancing is taught.
They bid us to the English dancing-schools,
And teach favolists high, and swift croonants;
Saying our grace is only in our heels.
Shakespeare.

A certain Egyptian king endowed a dancing-school for the instruction of ages of quality.

L'Estrange.

DANDELION, n. f. [dent de lion, French.] The name of a plant.

It agrees in all respects with the hawkweed, but only in its having a single naked stalk, with one flower upon the top.

Mill.

For cowslips sweet, let dandelions spread;
For bladder-wort, blithesome mad-dam.
Gay's Fagmuths.

DANDIPRAT, n. f. [dandie, French.] A little fellow; an urchin: a word used sometimes in fornads, sometimes in contempt.

To DANDLE, v. a. [dandelion, Dutch.] 1. To make a child on the knee, or in the hands, to please and quiet him.

Then shall your look, and shall be borne upon her fides, and be dandled upon her knees.

Shakespeare.

Thy little brethren, which, like fairy sprites,
Off flip into our chamber stocks sweet nights,
And in the morning, as the sun lights up,
Were b'd next day to tell what they did see.

Dante.

Courts are but superficial schools
To dandle fools,
Bacon.

Sporing the lion ramp'd, and in his paw
Dandled the kid.
Mill.

Motion occasions dstrate, as we find by the common habit of making forward children in cradles, or dandling them in their nurse's arms.
Temple.

2. To fondle; to treat like a child.
Their child shall be advance'd,
And be received for the emperor's heir;
And let the emperor dandle him for his own.
Shak.

They have put me in a fell gown, and a gaudy fool's cap; I am almost to dandle thus, and cannot look in the gills without blushing, so far seemed turned into such a little pretty matter.
Addison's Guardian.

DAN

With danging hands he stokes th' imperial robes,
And with a cockle's air commands the globe.

Smith.

But have you not wish to think beheld
The sworded danging o' th' dragon's head.
Prior. 2. Though hung upon any one; to be a humble, useless, harmless follower.

The prebendaries, and other fanatics that dangle after them, are well inclined to pull down the present establishment.
Swift.

DANGLER, n. f. [from dangle.] A man that hangs about women only to waftle time.

A dangler is of neither fox.
RALPH.

DANK, adj. [from tunecen, Germ. Skinner.] Damp; humid; moist; wet.

He her the maiden sleeping found
On the dank and dirty ground.
Shakespeare.

Yet oft they quit
The darts, and rising on flath pinions tour
The mid aerial sky.
Millen.

Through each thicket, dank or dry,
Like a black mild, low creeping, he held on
His midnight search.
Millen.

Now that the fields are dank, and ways are miry,
Where shall we sometimes meet, and by the fire
Burn a fallen dandling friend?
Millen.

By the rusty-fringed bank,
Where grows the willow and the offer dand,
My folding chariot bays.
Millen.

Me, in my own vond
Picture, the sacred wall declares t' have hung
My dank and drooping weeds
To the form god of seas.

Millen.

To wash the sinews of beasts and fowls bereft, would keep them from growing dank in moist weather.
Great.

DANKISH, adj. Somewhat dank.

They bound me, b're me thence,
And in a dank and dandling vault at hand
There left me.
Shakespeare.

To DAP, v. n. [corrupted from diph.] To let fall gently into the water: a word,
I believe, only used by anglers.

... have taught him how to catch a chub, by dapping with a grasshopper.
Walton.

DAPPTICALLY, adj. [from dapticus, Lat.] Sumptuous in cheer.

DAPPLED, adj. [dappiter, Dutch.] Little and active; lively without bulk. It is usually spoken in contempt.

And on the twain faces and shelves,
Trip the pert fairlinked and dapper elves.
Millen.

A prit dapper phisick of a mage fairfed the bird... his head never was governed till himself should sit at the helm.
L'Estrange.

DAPPERLING, n. f. [from dapper.] A dwarf; a dappiprat.
Anyworth.

DAPPLED, adj. [from apple; as pammell.] Marked with various colours; variegated; streaked; imbricated: it is used chiefly of animals.

In this neatness... do not find it impossible to think of a lame horse, till they have run over all beings that are, and then pitch on dapple.
Locke.

To DAPPLE, v. a. [from the adjective.] To dappled, to vary; to diversify with colours.

But under him a grey fey did he will,
Whose sides with dappled dyes were embellished.

Spenser.

The gentle day
Dapples the drowsy eath with spots of grey.
Shak.

Here and there that are dappled turn white; and old squirrels turn grey.
Bacon.

The lark begins his flight,
From his watch-tower in the floods;
Till the dappled dawn doth rise.
Millen.

The dappled pink, and blushing roe,
Deck'd my charming Chloe's hair.
Pitie.

The
The gods, to curse Pamela with her prey,
Gave the gift coach and dreadful Flanders mare.

DAR. [*f.] A fish found in the Severn.

DARLY. [from dark.] Boldly, courageously; fearlessly; impudently;
outrageously.

Some of the great principles of religion are every day dawningly and darkeningly attacked from the press.
(Shakespeare.)

Your brother, sir, with his fowls.
Too daringly upon the face old prens.

DARKNESS. [*f.] [from dark.] Boldness.

1. Not light; wanting light.
A theme, his son, who keeps him company.
Must embrace the fate of that dark hour.

While we converse with her, we mark
No want of day, or think it dark.

2. Not of a showy or vivid colour.

If the plague be somewhat dark, and the plague spread not in the skin, the priest shall pronounce him clean.
(Leviticus.)

In Manso the generality of the people are more inclined to have dark coloured hair than fixed.

By Boyle.

3. Blind; without the enjoyment of light.

Such wretched daughter of a dark old man,
Comes to the weary steps, Dryden and Lee's Oedipus.

4. Opake; not transparent; as, lead is a dark body.

5. Obcure; not pericipuous.

What may seem dark at the first, will afterwards be found more plain.

Hooker.

Mean time we shall express our dark purposed
Shakespeare.

6. Not enlightened by knowledge; ignorrant.

The age, wherein he liv'd, was dark; but he could not want light, who taught the world to see.

Dryden.

7. Gloomy; not cheerful.

All men of dark temperns, according to their degree of melancholy or enthufiasm, may find convents fitted to their humours.
Addison on Italy.

DAR. [*f.]

1. Darkness; obscurity; want of light.
Come, thick night,
And pall thee in the dunnete sicker of hell.
That my keen knife cut not the wound it makes;
Nor heave it, mangled through the blankets of the dark.
To cry, hold, hold!
Shakespeare's Macbeth.

Cloud and ever-during dark
Surrounds me! from the cheerful ways of men
Cut off.

Whereas seeing requires light, and a free and a right line to the object, we can hear in the dimmmum by no visible figures.
Hold.

2. Obscurity; condition of one unknown.

All he says of himself is, that he is an obscure person; one, I suppose he means, that is in the dark.
Atterbury.

3. Want of knowledge.

Till we ourselves perceive by our own understandings, we are as much in the dark, and as void of knowledge, as before.
Locke.

To DAR. [*v. a. from the noun.] To darken; to obscure; obbleote.
Fair when that cloud of plague, which oft doth black your goodly light, with smiles she drives away.
Spenser.

To DAR. [*a. from darke.]

1. To make dark; to deprive of light.
Black with surrounding forests then it flowed,
That hung above, and dark'nd all the flood.
Addison.

Whether the darnd'nd room to make inviting,
Or when'd they would provoke the flow'rs to write.
Spenser.

2. To cloud; to perplex.

Said was his wisdom, that his conduct did

DAR. [from darke] his forfeday, especially in things near hand.

3. To foul; to fully.
The lusts and passions of men do fully and darken their minds, even by a natural influence.

To DARREN. [*v. i.] To grow dark.

DARKNESS. [a participle, as it seems,
from darke, which is yet I never found;
or perhaps a kind of diminutive from dark, as young, youngling.] Being in the dark; being without light; a word merely poetical.

O, wilt thou darkeing leave me? do not so.
Shakespeare.

Darkling hands.
The varying shore of the world.
Shakespeare.

The wakeful bird.
Sings darkeying, and, in midnight covert hid,
Takes her nocturne note.
Milton.

Darkley they mourn their fate, whom Cicero's power
With words and wicked herbs, from human kind
Had altered, and in brutal fames confin'd.
Dryden.

DARELY. [*a. from darke.] In a situation void of light; obscurely; blindly;
gloomily; uncertainly.

For well you know, and can record alone.
What fame to future times conveys but Darke down.
Dryden.

DARKNESS. [*f. from darke.]

1. Absence of light.
Darke was upon the face of the deep, Genesis.
I go whence I shall not return, even to the land of darkness, and the shadow of death.
Job.

2. Opakeness; want of transparency.

3. Obscurity; want of pericipuous; differen-cienced to the understanding.

4. Infernal gloom; wickedness.

The infrinements of darkeys tell us truths;
Win us with honest tributes, to betray us
In deepst confusuc, Shakespeare.

5. State of being intellectually clouded;
ignorance; uncertainty.

All the light truth has, or can have, is from the cleanliness and validity of those proofs upon which it is received; to talk of any other light
In the understanding, is to put ourselves in the dark, or in the power of the pricks of darkness.
Locke.

6. The empire of Satan; or the Devil.
Who had delivered us from the power of darkness and Satan and translated us into the kingdom of his dear Son.
Colossians.

DARKsome. [*a. from darke.] Gloomy; obscure; not well enlightened; not luminous.

He brought him thereto a darkeome narrow path.
To a broad gate.
Spenser.

And her fair eyes, like flars that dimmed were
With darkeome cloud, now fliew their goodly beams.
Spenser.

You must not look to have an image in any thing lightsome; for even a face in iron, red-hot, will not be seen, the light confounding the small differences of lightsome and darkeome, which flowv the figures.

A darkeome cloud of locusts, swarming down,
Must eat, and on the ground leave nothing green.
Addison.

He, here with us to be.
Forsook the courts of everliving day,
And chose with us a darkeome boute of mortal clay.
Milton.

Mittaken blessings, which old age they bless.
'Tis a long, nasty, darksome hospital.
Dryden.

The darkeome pines, that o'er ye rocks reclin'd
Wave high; and murmur to the hollow winds.
Pope.

DARLING. [*a. from darke.] Favourite; dear;
beloved;
loved: regarded with great kindness and tenderness.

The not for a generous prince to countenance oppression and injustice, even in his most darling Favourites.

Have a care lest some beloved notion, or some darling science, too far prevail over your mind.

Darling. n. f. A favourite; one much beloved.

Young Ferdinand they suppose is drown’d, And his and my lov’d darling, Shakespeare. In the storm, the ocean’s darling, England’s pride. The pleasing emblems of his reign do give delight.

She became the darling of the prince. Addison.

To Dart. v. a. [of uncertain origin.]

To mend holes by imitating the texture of the stuff.

Will they linen wash, or holin’ dart? Gay.

He spent every day ten hours in his closet, in darning his stockings, which he performed to admiration.

Swifts.

Darnel. n. f. [lotus.] A weed growing in the fields.

He was met e’er now Crown’d with rank fumiter and ever-weeds. Darnel, and all the idle weads that grow. In our futhing, and, Shakespeare.

Want ye corn for bread?

’Twas full of darts; do you like the stuff? Shak.

No fruitful crop the sickly fields return; But other darts I think the rising corn. Dryd.

To Darain. v. a. [This word is by

Tunius referred to dart: it seems to me more probably deducible from arranger, la battelle.]

1. To prepare for battle; to range troops for battle.

The town-boys parted in twain, the one side calling themselves Pompeians, the other Carraisins; and then darting a kind of battle, but without arms, the Carraisi got the upper hand.

Carrius’s Survey of Cornwall.

Comes Warwick, baggage of the duke of York; Darnain your battle; for they are at hand. Shak.

2. To apply to the fight: of fingle combatants.

Therewith they ‘gan to hurien gretly; Rebrobted battle ready to darraine. Stan.

Dart. n. f. [fr. dard, French.]

1. A miface when thrown by the hand: a small lance.

Here one is wounded or slain with a piece of a rock or flint; there another with a dart, stone, or lance.

Peecham.

Overwhelm’d with darts, which from 8at they fling.

The weapon round his hollow temples ring.

2. [In poetry.] Any miface weapon.

Y0 Dart. v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To throw offensively.

He whets his tuffs, and turns, and darts the war;

Th’invaders dart their jav’lins from hies. Dryd.

2. To throw: to emit; as, the fun darts his beams on the earth.

Pan came, and asked what magic caus’d my fears?

Or what ill eyes malignant glances darts. Pop.

To Dart. v. n.

1. To fly as a dart.

2. To let fly with hoffile intention.

Now, darting Parthia, ar’thou thou. Shak.

To DASH. v. a. [The etymology of this word, in any of its fenses, is very doubtful.]

1. To throw or strike any thing suddenly against something.

If you daph a stone against a stone in the bottom of the water, it maketh a sound. Bown.

A man that cuts himself, and teazeth his own head, and dapers his head against the stones, does not act so uncomically as the wicked man. Tilley.

To break by collision. They that stand high have many blasts to shake them.

And, if they fall, they daph themselves to pieces. Shakespeare.

David’s throne shall then be like a tree,

Spreading and over-hanging all the earth; Or as a stone, that shall fall to pieces daph All monarchies besides throughout the world. Milton.

To throw water in flashes. Dashing water on them may prove the best remedy. Middleton.

Middling his head, and prone to earth his view.

With ears and cheeth that daph the morning dew. Tickl.

To beDSPAT; to besprinkle.

This tempest, Dashing the garment of this peace, abode The sudden breach on’t. Shaks. Henry VIII.

To agitate any liquid, so as to make the surface self.

At once the buffing oars and bracing prow Daph up the sandy waves, and ope the depths below. Dryden.

To mingle; to adulterate; to change by some worce admixture.

Whom the gods had daph and drew.

Not wise, but more unlawful low. Hadd.

I take care to daph the character with such particular circumstances, as may prevent ill-intenented applications.

Several revealed truths are daphed and adulterated with a mixture of fables and human inventions. Spect.

To form or sketch in haste, carelessly.

Never was daph’d out, at one lucky hit.

A fool fea jot a copy of wit. Pops.

To obliterare; to blot; to cross out.

To daph over this with a line, will deface the whole cropy entirely, and to a degree that, I fear, may alipplad ye. Pops.

To confound; to make asashed suddenly; to surprize with flame or fear; to depress; to suppress.

His tongue

Droop’d manna, and could make the worce appear The better reason, to perplex and daph Matured councils. Milton.

Yearly enchat’d, some fuy, to undergo

This annual, humbling certain number’d days,

To daph their pride and joy for man seduce. Milton.

An unknown hand full check’d my forward joy,

Daph’d me with blumes. Dryden and Lee’s Ode.

To daph this cavi, read but the practice of Christian emperors. Lez.

After they had sufficiently blamed him in his personal capacity, they found it an easy work to daph and overthrow him in his political. Shak.

Nothing daphed the confidence of the male fhep, or the braving of the afs, while he was dilating upon his genealogy. Lez.

The symptom, when nothing could Narcissus move,

Still daph’d with blumes for her flighted love. Add.

Some stronger pow’rer eludes our flicker will Daph’d our rising hope with certain ill. Prior.

Daph the pensive man, in his gild’d ear.

Bare the mean heart thatureka beneath a star. Pop.

To DASH. v. n.

1. To fly in flashes with a loud noise.

On each hand the guthing waters play.

And down the rough cascades, all daphing fall. Tickl.

3. To rush through water, so as to make it fly.

Doge, tho’ without knowing how or why, Spurn’d boldly on, and daph’d of this thick and thin, fire and fumills and nothing, never ouer in. Dryd.

Dash. n. f. [from the verb.]

1. Collision.

By the touch ethereal rood.

The daph of clouds, or irritating war.

Fire and lights, while all is calm below.

They furious siring.

2. Infusion; something worce mingled in a small proportion.

There is nothing which one regards so much with an eye of mirth and pity, as innocence, when it has in it a daph of folly. Add.

3. A mark in writing: a line — to note a pauf, or omifion.

He is afraid of letters and characters, of none and daphes, which, set together, do signify nothing. Brow. Poet’s Errours.

In modern witt, all printed trath is Set off with numeros breaks and daphes. Swifts.

4. Sudden stroke; blow; act; ludicrous.

Stand back, you lords, and give us leave to behold,

An act upon her bravely at first daph. Shak.

Dash. adv. An expression of the bound of water daph’d.

Hark, hark, the waters fall.

And, with a murmuring sound, Daph’d, daph’d, upon the ground.

To gentle humours call. Dryd.

Dastard. n. f. [of fr. Sax.]

A coward; a poltron; a man insaous for fear.

The cruelty and envy of the people, Permitted by our dastard nobles.

Have suffer’d me by th’voice of slaves to be Whoop’d out of Rome. Shak.

Shake.

Who now my masters, value dare oppoite?

How long will Dares wait his dastard foes? Dryd.

Dastard and drunkard, mean and insaous.

Tongue-valliant hero, vaunter of thy might,

In threats the foremost, but the last in fight. Dryd.

Dag-beat sounds, in the minds of children,

Make them dastards, and afraid of the flud of darkness ever after. Locke.

Curse on their dastard souls, they flit a fable and abominable. Add.

To Dastard. v. a. To terify; to intimadate; to defeat with cowardice; to diphirit.

I’m weary of this flicch which holds us here.

And dastards many fols with hope and fear.

Dryd.

To Dastardise. v. a. [from dastard.]

To intimodate; to deject with cowardice; to diphirit; to terify; to make an habitual coward.

He had such things to urge against our marriage,

As now declar’d, would blunt my sword in battle, and dastardly my courage. Dryd.

Dastardly. adv. [from dastard.] Cowardly; mean; timorous.

Brawl and clamour is so arrant a mark of a dastardly wretch, that he does as good as call himself so that uses it.

Dryd.

Dastar. n. f. [from dastard.] Cowardliness; timorousness.

Datar. n. f. [Datarius.] An officer of the chancery of Rome, through whose hands beneffcs pas.

 Dict.

DATE. n. f. [datte, Fr. from datum, Lat.]

1. The time at which a letter is written, marked at the end or the beginning. 2. The
The time at which any event happened.
3. The time stipulated when any thing shall be done.

And my reliance on his trusted dates
Has faint my credit.
Shakespeare’s Timon.

My father’s promise ties me not to time;
And bonds without a date, they say, are void.
Dryden.

4. End; conclusion.

What time would spire, from steel receives its
And monuments, like men, submit to fate.
Popes.

5. Duration; continuance.

Could the declining of this fate, O friend,
Our dooms to immortality extend?
Dryden.

Then, says—
From the confabulating mas, ping‘d and refound’d,
New heavens, new earth, new ages of endless date.
Founded in righteousness.
Milton.

[From datifJus.] The fruit of the date-tree.

Hold, take these keys, and fetch more spices, nurse.

They call for dates and quinces in the paste.
Shakespeare.

DATE-TREE. n. s. See PALM, of which it is a species.

To DATE. v. a. [from the noun.] To note with the time at which any thing is written or done.

’Tis all one, in respect of eternal duration yet behind, whether we begin the world to many millions of ages ago, or date from the last war of about six thousand years.
To all their dated backs he turns you round;
Thos. Aldas printed; tho’ Do Swell has bound.
Popes.

D’TELESS, adj. [from date.] Without any fixed term.

The fly-flow hours shall not determine
The dateful limit of thy dear exile.
Shakespeare.

DATAIVE, adj. [dativus, Latin.]

1. [In grammar.] The epithet of the cafe
That signifies the person to whom any thing is given.

2. [In law.] Those are termed datives executors, who are appointed such by the judge’s decree; as administrators with us here in England.

Ayliffe.

To DAUB. v. a. [dabben, Dutch; dubber, French.]

1. To smear with something adhesive.

So for him thus, and made it with withers, and dabbed it with fillets and with pitch.
Exodes.

2. To paint coarsely.

Hasty dabbing will spoil the picture, and make it so unnatural as not wish idle light to:
Gay it off.
Dryden.

They snatch up of his hands a lame imperfect piece, rudely dabbed over with little reflection.
Dryden.

If a picture is dabbed with many bright and glaring colours, the vulgar admire it as an excellent piece.
Watts.

3. To cover with something specious or gross, something that diffuges what it lies upon.

So smooth he daub’d his vice with flow of virtue, He liv’d from all attendant of faults.
Shakespeare.

4. To lay on any thing gaudily or ostentatiously.

Since princes will have such things, it is better they be covered with elegance, than daubed with cait.

Let him be daub’d with laces, live high, and where.
Dryden.

Sometimes be lately, but be never poor.
Dryden.

5. To flatter grossly.

Let every one, therefore, attend the sentences of his confidenc; for he may be sure, it will not to daub or not.

To DAUB. v. n. To play the hypocrite; this fene is not in use.

And yet I must. Shakespeare.

DAUBER. n. s. [from daub.] One that daubs.

1. A coarse low painter.

What they call’d his picture, had been drawn at length by the daubers of all nations, and fillet by them.
Dryden.

Parts of different species jumbled together, according to the main imagination of the dauber, to cause laughter.
Dryden.

A sign of daubers would disfigure to paint.
Dryden.

The one-eyed hero on his elephant.
Dryden.

The treacherous tempter, Thomas,
Hangs a new angel two doors from us, As fine as daubers hands can make it.
Swifts.

A low flatterer.

DAUBY. n. s. [from daub.] An old word for any thing artificial.
She works by charms, by flodds; and such daubers as this is beyond our element.
Shakespeare.

DAUBY. adj. [from daub.] Vicif; glorious; adusive.

Not in vain this imperious kind.
Dryden.

With dauby wax and flower the chinks have lim’d.
Dryden.

Some the gall’d ropes with dauby marling bind,
Or fear-cloth mats with strong tarpawing coats.
Dryden.

DAUGHTER. n. s. [daubter, Gothick; bohren, Sax. dotter, Runick; dotter, German; dotcher, Dutch.]

1. The female offspring of a man or woman.

Your wives, your daughter.

Your masters, and your maidens, could not fill up
The chime of my life.
Shakespeare.

Now Aurora, daughter of the dawn,
With rosy lute purpled o’er the lawn.
Popes.

2. A daughter in law, or son’s wife.

A daughter in law, or son’s wife.

3. A woman.

Jacob went out to see the daughter of the land.
Genius.

4. [In poetry.] Any dependant.

[From date.] Do not.

5. The female penitent of a confessor.

Are you at leisure, holy father, now;
Or shall I come to you at evening mass?
—My life serves me, my father, daughter now.
Shakespeare.

To DAUNT. v. a. [domer, French; demeter, Latin.] To discourage; to fright; to intimidate.

Fairfax, whose name in arms thro’ Europe rings, And fills all months with envy or with praise, And all her jealous monarchs with amaze; And rumours loud, which daunt remotest kings.
Milton.

Where the rude war, with heaved strokes
Was never past the thumps to daunt,
Or fright them from their jalous’d haunts.
Milton.

Some pretences daunt and discourage us, when others raise us to a brisk affurance.
Giovanni.

DAUNTLESS. adj. [from daunt.] Fearless; not dejected or not discouraged.

Grow great by your examples, and set on
The dauntless spirit of resolution.
Shakespeare.

Dauntless he strode, and to the right return’d;
With shining his glowing cheeks, his eyes, with Dryden, Virgil.

He, not by wants or woes upreft;
Stems the bold torrent with a dauntless breast.
Dryden.

The utmost weight of affliction from intellectual power and popular hatred, were almost worth bearing, for the glory of such a dauntless conduct as he has shown under it.
Popes.

DAUNTLESSNESS, m. s. [from daunt.] Fearlessness.

DAW. n. s. [supposed by Stainer to named from his note, by Finsius to be corrupted from daw; the German tal, and dol in the Bavarian dialect, having the same signification.] The name of a bird.
Mendels.

I will wear my heart upon my sleeve.
For daws to peck it.
Shakespeare’s Othello.
If death do come as quite, we have great wrong.
Dryden.

That daw, and trees, and rocks should fail to do.
When we must in infant pain to nought.
Dryden.

The loud daw, his throat displaying, drawn.
The whole assemblage of his fellow dawes.
Wallis.

DAWK. n. s. A cant word among the workmen for a hollow, rupture, or incision, in their stuff.

Observe if any hollow or dawks be in the length.
Morgan.

To DAWK. v. a. To mark with an incision.

Should they apply that side of the tool the edges lies on, the twist coming about of the work would, in a small irregularity of stuff should happen, in the edge into the daws, and so do in dawes.
Mans.

To DAWN. v. a. [supposed by the etymologists to have been originally to day, or advance towards day.] To grow luminous; to begin to grow light.

I have been troubled in my sleep this night;
But dawning day new comfort hath inspired.
Shakespeare.

As it began to dawne, towards the first day of the week, came Mary Magdalene to see the sepulchre.
Matthew.

All night I slept, oblivious of my pain;
Aurora dawned, and PhæBUS shone in vain.
Popes.

2. To glimmer obscurely.

A Romanist, from the very first dawning of any notions in his understanding, hath this principle constantly inculcated, that he must believe at the church.

3. To begin, yet faintly; to give some promises of luster or eminence.

While we behold such dauntless worth appear In dawning youth, and souls to fear of void.
Dryden.

Thy hand strikes out some free degree.

When life awakes and dawns at every line.
Popes.

Dawn. n. s. [from the verb.]

1. The time between the first appearance of light and the sun’s rise, reckoned from the time that the sun comes within eighteen degrees of the horizon.

Then on to morn’s dawns thy care employ
To search the land, but give this day to joy.
Dryden.

2. Beginning; first rise.

These tender circumstances diffuse a dawn of serenity over the soul.
Pope.

Such their guiltless passion was,
As in the dawn of time inform’d the heart
Of innocence and unbribing truth.
Thomson.

Dawn. n. s. [dark, Saxton.]

1. The time between the rising and setting of the sun, called the artificial day.

—Why stand ye here all the day idle? Marston.

Of night impatient, we demand the day;
They may arrive, and for the night we pray
The night and day shall turn come and go,
Our lasting pains no interruption know.
Blackmore.

Or object new
Causal discourses draws on, which instructs
Our day’s work.
Milton.

2. The time from noon to noon, or from midnight to midnight, called the natural day.
How
DAY

How many hours bring about the day?
How many days will fill up the year?
Skate.

3. Light; sunshine.
Let us walk hand in hand, as in the day; not in rioting and drunkenness.
Romans.

The wey yet glimmers with some streaks of day.
Now spurs the latest traveller,
To gain the timely shelter of Shakespeare’s Markb.
Around the 2ids did nimble lightsplay
Which offer’d us by fist, and fixt’th d the day.
Midst this we the hearl and tender cars
Or well-pless’d ghosts, which in the thorn did dye.
Dryden.

Yet are we able only to survey
Dawnings of beams, and presence of day.
Prior.

Sthumming and distingushed from other time; an age; the time.
In this fene it is generally plural.

After him reigned Catheline his heir,
The jutfe man and truest in his days.
Fairy-R. I think, in these days, one honest man is obliged to acquaint another who is his friends.
Pope.

We have, at this time of day, better and more certain measures of information than they had.
Ward.

5. Life: in this sense it is commonly plural. He never in his days broke his word; that is, in his noble life.

He was not at a loss in his days for a frequent answer.
Carle’s Life of Ormonds.

6. The day of contest; the contest; the battle.
His name decreed fear, his conduct won the day;
He came, he saw, he felt the shouting prey.
Reynamman.

The noble thames do bravely in the war;
The rudesly set; proferves yours;
And little is to do.
Shakespeare’s Merchan.

Would you th’advantage of the fight delay,
If, striking first, you were to win the day?
Dryden.

7. An appointed or fixed time.
Or if my dears do not keep their promise,
Deny their hands, and then refuse to pay,
I must with patience all the terms attend.
Dryden.

8. A day appointed for some commemoration.
The field of Agincourt,
Fought on the day of Cifax Cibilianus.
Shaks.

9. From day to side; without certainty or continuance.
Bavaria hath been taught, that merit and service
doth oblige the Spaniard but from day to day.
Eneas.

TO-DAY. On this day.
To-day, ye weal hear his voice, harden not your hearts.
“Psalms.”

The path it all by death’sfeet,
And frugal fate, that guards the rest,
By giving, bids us live to-day.
Fentus.

DA’RED. n.f. [day and bed.] A bed used for idleness and luxury in the day-time.
Calling my officers about me, in my branched voice gown; having come down from a daybed, where I have left Olivia sleeping.
Shakespeare’s Twelfth Night.

DA’BOOK, n. f. [from day and book.] A tradesman’s journal; a book in which all the occurrences of the day are set down.

DA’BREAK. n. f. [day and break.] The dawn; the first appearance of light.
I would the early glories of her eyes,
As men for daybreak watch the Eastern skies.
Dryden.

DA’LY. n. f. [day and labour.] Labour by the day; labour divided into daily tasks.

DA’LIES. n. f. [day and labour.] Light denied, I fondly sirk.
Milton.

Daylabour was but a kind and a dry kind of DAZ.

livelihood to a man that could get an estate with two or three strokes of his pen.
Shakespeare.

DAY-LABOUR, n. f. [from daylabour.] One that works by the day.

In one day, he compass’d more
His shadowy flail hath threat’rd the corn
That ten daylabours could not end.
Milton.

The daylabourer, the honest yeoman, has commonly but a small pittance of courage.
Locke.

DAYLIGHT. n. f. [day and light.] The light of the day, as opposed to that of the moon, or a taper.
By this the dosing daylight gan to fade,
And yield his room in lod succeeding nights.
Fairy Queen.

Thon shalt buy this dear,
If ever I thy face by daylight see.
Now go thy way.
Shakespeare.

They, by daylight passing through the Turks fleet,
Recovered the haven, to the joy of the beleaguered Christians.
Keillor.

He stands in daylight, and distains to hide.
An act, to which by honour he is tied.
Dryden.

Will you murder a man in plain daylight?
Dryden.

Through rough bears in covert feck defiance,
White foxes fly, with seeming innocence;
That crafty kind with daylight can dispose.
Dryden.

If bodies be illuminated by the ordinary prismatic colours, they will appear neither of their own daylight colours, nor of the colour of the light call us them, but of some middle colour between both.
Newton

DAY-LILY. n. f. The same with Asphodel, which see.

DAYMAN. n. f. [day and man.] An old word for umpire.
Ainsworth.

Perhaps rather, surety.

For what art thou,
That migh’t thy dayman, to prolong the vengeance peace?
Fairy Queen.

DAY-SPRING. n. f. [day and spring.] The rife of the day; the dawn; the first appearance of light.
So all ere dayspring, under conscious night,
Secret they find’d, and in order lie.
Milton.

The breath of heav’n fresh-blowings, pure and sweet,
With dayspiring born, here leave me to refire.
Milton.

DAYSTAR. n. f. [day and star.] The morning star.
I meant to make her fair, and free, and wise,
Of greatest blood, and yet more good than great;
I meant the daystar should not brighter rise;
Nor lend influence from his lacerant feat.
Ben Jonson.

Sunk thouk he beneath the wat’ry floor;
So sinks the day-star in the ocean bed,
And yet again the daystar, day-dawn, daybreak.
Milton.

DAYTIME. n. f. [day and time.] The time in which there is light: opposed to night.
In the daytime, Fame was fitter in a watch-tower, and fleeth most by nights; the migesth things done with things not done, and is a terror to great cities.
Bancon.

My ants never brought out their corn but in the night when the moon did shine, and kept it under ground.
Addison.

DAYWORK. n. f. [day and work.] Work impo’d by the day; daylabour.
True labour in the vineyard of thy lord,
Ere prime thoa hast th’impo’d daywork conmind.
Pope.

DAY. w. a. [bynum, Saxon.] To overpower with light; to srike with too strong light; to hinder the act of seeing by too much light suddenly introduced.

DEA.

They note the glittering armes, as they stand,
With quivering beams, which did’st the wood ring.
Dryden.

Poor human kind, all do in open day,
Ere after biffa, and blindly miss their way.
Dryden.

DA’BIZED. adj. [rather dazed.] See DA’IZE.

Befprinkled with daze.
Let us find out the prettiest daze plot we can,
And make him a grave.
Shakespeare’s Cymbeline.

To DAZ. w. a. [See DA’ZE].

1. To overpower with light; to hinder the action of the light by sudden luster.

Fears unto be represented in such an imaginary fashion, as they rather daube men’s eyes than open them.
Bacon.

How is it that some wits are interruped.
That now they dazled are, now clearly fee?
Devere.

2. To strike or surpipe with splendour.

Those heavenly shapes
Will daze me now this earthly with their blaze.
Insufferably bright.

Milton:
The places that have either finellent sentiments or manners, have no occasion for them: a dazing expirnation rather damages them, and serves only to relapse their beauty.
Pope.

Ah, friend! to daze let the vain design;
To raise the thought, or touch the heart, be thine.
Pope.

To DAZ. w. a. To be overpowered with light; to lose the power of light.

Daze mine eyes? or do I the three furs?
Shakespeare.

Come, boy, and go with me; thy flight is young,
And you shall read when mine begins to daze.
Shakespeare.

An oversight makes the eyes dazed,
Infamch as perputual looking against the sun would cause blindness.
Bacon.

I dare not trust these eyes;
They dance in mills, and daze with surplice.
Dryden.

DE’ACON. n. f. [deaconus, Latin.]
1. One of the lowest of the three orders of the clergy.

Like wise must the deacon be grave. 2 Tim. III. 8.

The constitutions that the apollos made concerning deacons and widows, are very importantly preserved.
By Hemp.

2. [In Scotland.] An overseer of the poor.

3. And also the master of an incorporated company.

DE’ACONERSS. n. f. [from deacon.]
A female officer in the ancient church.

DE’ACORY. n. f. [from deacon.]
The deaconship; office or dignity of a deacon.

DEAD. adj. [dead, Saxon; doux, Dutch.]
1. Deprived of life; examinated.

The queen, our lord, is dead;
—She should have died hereafter.
Shakespeare’s Macht.

A brute or a man are another thing when they are alive, for what they are when dead.
Hill.

She either from her hopeles lover fled,
Or with disdainful glances shot him dead.
Dryden.

2. With of before the cauca of death.

This Indian told them, that, midstaking their cause, the crew, all except himself, were died of hunger.
Arbuthnot.

3. Without life; inanimate.

All, all but truth, drops dead-born from the press.

Like the last gazette, or like the last address.
Pope.

4. Imitating death; senseless; motionless.

At thy rebate, O God of Jacob, both the chariot and horses are cast into a dead sleep.
Psalms.

Amasting of the forehead, navel, and backbone, we know is used for procuring dead sleeps.
Bacon.

5. Unactive;
5. Unactive; motionless.

The tind fold sometimes higher, and sometimes lower, according to the quick and abundant blood, and also the violent fall of the body, Careull.

Nay, there's a talk when the rolling year Seems to stand still: dead calms are in the ocean, When not a breath disturbs the circus main. Linn.

The winds that blow the dead weight of unoccupied time lying upon their hands, nor the uneasiness it is to do nothing at last.

6. Empty; vacant.

This colour often carries the mind away; yea, it deceiveth the sense; and it seemeth to the eye a shorter distance of way, if it be all dead and continued, than if it have trees or buildings, or any other objects whereby the eye may divide its view. Nought but a blank remains, a dead void space, A flat of life, that promiseth such a race. Dryden.

7. Useless; unprofitable.

The commodities of the kingdom they took, though they lay dead upon their hands for want of use. Bacon.

Persuade a prince that he is irremediable, and he will take care not to let glorious an attribute lie dead and useless by him. Addison.

8. Dull; gloomy; unemployed.

Travelling over Anamus, then covered with deep snow, they came in the dead winter to Aleppo. Klopse.

There is something unspeakably cheerful in a spot of ground which is covered with trees, that smiles amidst all the rigours of winter, and gives us a kind of most gay season in the midst of that which is the most dead and melancholy. Addison.

9. Still; obscure.

Their flight was only deferred until they might cover their disorders by the dead darkness of the night. Howarid.

10. Having no resemblance of life.

At a second fitting, though I alter not the draught, I must touch the same features over again, and change the dead colouring of the whole. Dryden.

11. Obstuse; dull; not sharply; void of sounds.

We took a ball of about two inches in diameter at the bottom, which was supported in the midst of the cavity of the receiver by a bent stick, in which when it was closed up, the bell seemed to found more dead than it did when just before it from the hand in the hand as before. Addison.

12. Dull; frigid; not animated; not affecting.

How cold and dead does a prayer appear, that is composed in the most elegant forms of speech, when it is not heightened by solemnity of phrase from the forc'd writings. Addison.

13. Tafteles; vapid; spiritless; used of liquors.

Somewhat is left under dead walls and dry ditches. Arbuthn.

5. Unactive; motionless.

The tind fold sometimes higher, and sometimes lower, according to the quick and abundant blood, and also the violent fall of the body, Careull.

Nay, there's a talk when the rolling year Seems to stand still: dead calms are in the ocean, When not a breath disturbs the circus main. Linn.

The winds that blow the dead weight of unoccupied time lying upon their hands, nor the uneasiness it is to do nothing at last.

6. Empty; vacant.

This colour often carries the mind away; yea, it deceiveth the sense; and it seemeth to the eye a shorter distance of way, if it be all dead and continued, than if it have trees or buildings, or any other objects whereby the eye may divide its view. Nought but a blank remains, a dead void space, A flat of life, that promiseth such a race. Dryden.

7. Useless; unprofitable.

The commodities of the kingdom they took, though they lay dead upon their hands for want of use. Bacon.

Persuade a prince that he is irremediable, and he will take care not to let glorious an attribute lie dead and useless by him. Addison.

8. Dull; gloomy; unemployed.

Travelling over Anamus, then covered with deep snow, they came in the dead winter to Aleppo. Klopse.

There is something unspeakably cheerful in a spot of ground which is covered with trees, that smiles amidst all the rigours of winter, and gives us a kind of most gay season in the midst of that which is the most dead and melancholy. Addison.

9. Still; obscure.

Their flight was only deferred until they might cover their disorders by the dead darkness of the night. Howarid.

10. Having no resemblance of life.

At a second fitting, though I alter not the draught, I must touch the same features over again, and change the dead colouring of the whole. Dryden.

11. Obstuse; dull; not sharply; void of sounds.

We took a ball of about two inches in diameter at the bottom, which was supported in the midst of the cavity of the receiver by a bent stick, in which when it was closed up, the bell seemed to found more dead than it did when just before it from the hand in the hand as before. Addison.

12. Dull; frigid; not animated; not affecting.

How cold and dead does a prayer appear, that is composed in the most elegant forms of speech, when it is not heightened by solemnity of phrase from the forc'd writings. Addison.

13. Tafteles; vapid; spiritless; used of liquors.

Somewhat is left under dead walls and dry ditches. Arbuthn.

5. Unactive; motionless.

The tind fold sometimes higher, and sometimes lower, according to the quick and abundant blood, and also the violent fall of the body, Careull.

Nay, there's a talk when the rolling year Seems to stand still: dead calms are in the ocean, When not a breath disturbs the circus main. Linn.

The winds that blow the dead weight of unoccupied time lying upon their hands, nor the uneasiness it is to do nothing at last.
DEAE

I have also found, that a piece of deal, far thicker than one would easily imagine, being purposely Interposed between my eyes, placed in a room, and the clearer daylight, was not only somewhat trans- parent, but appeared quite through a lovely red.

Boyle on Colors.

To Deal, v. a. To deprive of the power of hearing.

Hamilton, Sc. 1. Their deafness is that of their spiritual ears; and, if so, they have so much the more reason, a great deal, to doubt of it. South.

The author, who knew that such a delusion as this could not be carried on without a great deal of artifice and sophistry, has puzzled and perplexed his cause. Addison.

To Deafen a man, to make him deaf. South.

To Deafen, v. a. [deafen, Dutch.] To deprive of the power of hearing.

Dryden.

1. To distribute; to dispense to different perfections. Deal thy bread to the hungry, and be the poor, that are cast out into the highways. Isa. 3:16. Why a broken trebouche shall be his blows. Dryden.

2. To scatter; to throw about. Keep me from the vengeance of thy darts, Which Noble's devoted into, when shaking his feathers to the dead. Dryden.

3. To give gradually, or one after another. The nightly mallet deals refounding blows. Gay.

4. To distribute the cards.

To Deal, v. n.

1. To traffick; to transact business; to trade. It is generally better to deal by speech than by letter; and by a man himself, than by the mediation of a third. Bacon.

This is to write a whole trade, when all other petty merchants deal but for parcell. Def. of Poetry. They buy and sell, they deal and traffic. South.

With them, she goes into patience he deals, They tell the secret which he first reveals. Prior.

3. To act between two perfections, to inter-vene. To act all in any manner. Two deep enemies, Fees to my revet, and my sweet Peak's disturbers, Are they that I would have the deal upon. Shak.

3. To Deal by. To treat well or ill. This seems a vitious use. Such an one deals not fairly by his own mind, nor conducts his own understanding-wights. Lecky.

6. To Deal in. To have to do with; to be engaged in; to practise. Suitors are so disdained with delays and abuses, that plain-dealing, in doing you in deals in fruits at first, is grown not only honourable, but also graceful. Bacon.

The Scripture forbids even the countenancing a poor man in his case; which is a popular way of preventing justice, that some men have deals in, though without that furcice which they propitiate to themselves. Atterbury.

Among authors, none deal upon themselves more disfavourably than those who deal in political matters. Addison.

True logic is not that noisy thing that deals all in dispute, to which the former ages had debauched it. Watts's Legis.

7. To Deal with. To treat in any manner; to see well or ill.

Neither can the Irish, nor yet the English lords, think themselves wronged, nor hardly deal with, to have that which is none of their own to give them.

Spectator's Ireland.

If a man would have his confidence deal closely with him, he must deal generously with that. Swift.

God did not only exercise this providence towards his own people, but he dealt also with other nations. Tillotson.

But I will deal the more civilly with his two progeny, because nothing ill is to be spoken of the dead. Dryden.

You wrote to me with the freedom of a friend, dealing plainly with me in the matter of my own trinity. Swift.

Reflect on the merits of the cause, as well as on the men, who have been thus dealt with by their country. Swift.

To Deal with. To contend with.

If she hated me, I should know what passion to deal with. Sidney.

Gentlemen were commanded to remain in the cause, not to govern the people, easy to be dealt with whilst they stand in fear. Haywood.

Then you upbraided me; I am pleas'd to see You're not so perfect, but can fail like me. Love to God to this effect. Swift.

To DEALBATE, v. a. [dealsbe, Latin.] To whiten; to bleach.

DEALBATION. n. f. [dealsbatia, Latin.] The act of bleaching or whitenning; rendering things white which were not so before; a word in little use.

All feed is white in viviparous animals, and such as have preparing vellets, wherein it receives a manifester dealbatia. Brown's Vesper Errors.

DEALER, n. f. [from deal.] 1. One that has to do with anything, I find it common with these small dealers in wit and learning, to give themselves a title from their first adventure. Swift.

2. A trader, a trafficker. The fraud is permitted and condoned at, the honest dealer is always undone, and the knave has the advantage. Galloway's Travels.

3. A person who deals the cards.

DEALING, n. f. [from deal.]

1. Practice; action. Concerning the dealing of men, who administer government, and until whom the execution of that law belongeth, they have their judge, who fittest in heaven. Hooker.

What these are! Whole own hard dealings teach them to fucce.f The thoughts of others. Shakespeare.

But this was neither one poor's fault, nor one poor's dealing; he must write a story of the em- pire, that means to tell of all their dealings in this kind. Raleigh.

2. Intercourse. It were to be wished, that men would promote the happiness of one another, in all their private dealings, among those who lie within their influence. Addison.

3. Mixture of treatment; mode in which one treats another. Such a great deal with men, are the aids and auxiliaries necessary to us in the pursuit of pietie. Hammond.

4. Traffick; business.

The deal must needs the rich; he had great deals of the same. Spenser.

DEAMBULATION. n. f. [deambulatio, Latin.] The act of walking abroad. D'Aemubu-
DEAMAULATORY. adj. [deambulare, Lat.]

Relating to the practice of walking abroad.

DEAN, m. s. [decanus, Latin; dioecen, Fr.]

From the Greek word diax in English, ten; because he was anciently set over ten, canons or prebendaries at least in some cathedral churches.

Addfis's Paraffon.

As there are two foundations of cathedral churches in England, the old and the new (the new are those which Henry VIII. upon dissolution of abbeys transformed from abbot or prior; and convents, to dean and chapter) so there are two means of creating these deans; for those of the old sort are brought to their dignity much like bishops, the king first setting out his congé d'elire to the chapter, the chapter then chusing and the bishop confirming them, and giving his mandate to install them. Those of the new foundation are, by a shorter course, instilled by virtue of the king's letter patent, without either election or confirmation.

This word is also applied to divers, that are chief of certain peculiar churches or chapels; as the dean of the king's chapel, the dean of the Arches, the dean of St. George's chapel at Windsor, and the dean of Bucking in Eftor.

The dean and canons, or prebendaries, of cathedral churches, were of great use in the church; they were not only appointed to give with the bishop for his revenue, but chiefly for government in cause ecclesiastical. Use your best means to prefer such to those places who are fit for that purpose. Bacon.

DEANERY, n. f. [from dean.]

1. A cause of a dean.

He could no longer keep the deanery of the chapel-royal.

Clerendun.

2. The revenue of a dean.

Put both deans in one; or, if that 'tis too much

Instead of the deans make the deanery double. Swift.

3. The house of a dean.

Take her by the hand, away with her to the deanery, and dispatich it quickly. Shakespeare.

DEANSHIP, n. f. [from dean.]
The office and rank of a dean. Bacon.

DEAR, adj. [beau, Saxon.]

1. Beloved; favourite; darling;

Your brother Glister hates you.

2. Valuable; of a high price; costly.

Some thoughts the dear stone; it was yours.

3. Scarce; not plentiful; as, a dear year.

It is a dear year.

4. It seems to be sometimes used in Shakespeare for dear; sad; hateful; grievous.

What foolish boldness brought thee to their mercy.

Whom thou in terms so bloody, and so dear,

Had made these enemies? Shaks. Twelfth Night.

Let us return, and strain what other means is left unto us.

In our dear peril.

Shakespeare's Times.

Some dear cause

Will in concealment wrapp me up a while;

When I am known, night, you shall not grieve

Lending me this accommodation. Shak. King Lear.

Would I had met my dearst foe in heav'n,

Or ever I had seen that day. Shakespeare's Hamlet.

Or other hildren, if with his dear fight

Struck pale and bloodless.

Shakespeare's Timon Ajuredon.

DEAR, n. f. A word of endearment; darling.

That kif.

I carried from them, dear; and my true lip

Hath virgin'd e'er since. Shakespeare's Cerdan.

Oh, dear; each minute does new danger bring.

Dryden.

VOl. I.

DEA

DEA

DEA

DEA

DEA

Sirs, my dear,

How lavifh nature has adorn'd thee the year. Dryden.

DEARBOUGHT. adj. [dear and bought.]

Purchased at a high price.

O fleeting joys

Of Paradise, descending with falling wax. Milton.

Such dearbought blessings happen every day;

Because we know not why to things.

Forget not what my ransom cost,

Nor let my dearbought soul be lost. Roffeome.

DEARLING, n. f. [now written darling.]

Favourite.

They do feed on nectar, heavenly wife,

With Hercules and Iphies, and the rest

Of Venus' dearlings, through her bounty blest.

Sprangers.

DEARLY, adv. [from dear.]

1. With great fondness.

For the unquestionable virtues of her person

And landlord's prohibitions. Watton.

2. At an high price.

It is rarely bought, and then also bought dearly enough with such a fine.

Bacon.

The soul shall dearly pay for faith forsworn;

And crotch, and frauds, and thiefs, on Tyburn. Dryden.

My father does, and let him still do on;

He buys his miftriss dearly with his throne.

To dearl. v. a. [by-man, Sax. to hide.]

To lend clothes. See DARN.

D' ARNESS, n. f. [from dear.]

1. Fondness; kindness; love.

My brother holds you well, and in dearness of heart hath holp to effect your ensuing marriage.

Shakespeare.

The whole senate dedicated an altar to Friendship, as to a god; in respect of the dear goodness of friendship.

Bacon.

He who hates his neighbour warmly and wisely, too; much profess all the dear-ness and friendship, with readiness to serve him.

Swift.

2. Scarcity; high price.

For dearness of corn, and dearness of meat among jackals, and of dearness, of corn in this year.

Swift.

DEARLY, adv. [beau, Sax. to hide;]

Privately; unseen. Obsoleite.

At last, as chance 'd them by a forest side

To pay for the venom of the cherishing ray.

They heard a rueful voice, that dearly cried.

With piercing shrieks.

Sprangers.

DEARTH, n. f. [from dear.]

1. Scarcity which makes food dear.

In times of dearth it driven much coin out of the kingdom, to furnish us corn from foreign parts.

Bacon.

There have been terrible dearths of corn, and every place is famished with beggars; but dearths are common in better climates, and our evils here lie much deeper.

Swift.

2. Want; need; famine.

Pity the dearth which I have pined in;

By longing for that food so long a time. Shakespeare.

Of every tree that in the garden grew,

Eat freely with glad heart; fear here no dearths.

Mitton.

3. Barrenness; sterility.

The French have brought on themselves that dearth of plot, and narrowness of imagination, which may be effected in all their plays. Dryden.

To dear'ticate, v. a. [de and arti-

Aculatus, Latin.] To disjoint; to dismember.

DEATH, n. f. [beau, Saxon.]

1. The extinction of life; the departure of the soul from the body.

He is the mediator the Church's Testament, that by means of death, for the redemption of the transgression, which they are called might receive the promise of eternal inheritance. Hick. ix. 15.

DEATH BED. n. f. (death and bed.)

The bed to which a man is confined by mortal sickness.

Sick, take heed, take heed of perjury;

Thou art on thy death-bed; Shakespeare's Cæsar.

Thy death-bed is no lositer than the land

Wherein thou liest in reputation sick.

Shakespeare's Richard II.

These are such things as a man shall remember

With joy upon his death-bed; such as shall warm and warm his heart, even in that last and bitter agony.

South's Sermons.

Then round our death-bed every friend should run!...

And joy are our conquest even won. Dryden.

Fate on thy death-bed, figure is certainly the most humbly in the world. Colet, on the Father of Life.

A death-bed repentance ought not indeed to be neglected, because it is the last thing that we can do.

Ankerwycke.

Fame can never make us lie down contentedly on a death-bed.

DEATHFUL. adj. [death and full.]

Fall of slaughter; destructive; murderous.

3 P. Yorke.
DEB

Your cruelty was such, as you would have his life for any dreadful torment. To this they lent, under the dreadful shade of whole wings all things wither, hasted that lively virtue of nature in man, and beauty, and plants.

Ralph.

Bleed, death, and dreadful deeds, are in that ruin, destruction at the utmost point. Milton.

Thine eyes behold

The dreadful scene, where princes roll'd.

DEATHLESS. adj. [from death.] Immortal; never-dying; everlasting.

God hath only immortality, though angels and human soul be deathless. Their temples wreath'd with leaves that still remain. Prior.

DEATHLIKE. adj. [death and like.] Resembling death; still; gloomy; motionless; placid; calm; peaceful; undisturbed; resembling either the horrors or the quietness of death.

What had lost the lustre and the light suppris'd In death's dark flames, while thy dangers crev A waking eye and end. Crafton.

A deathlike step! Milton.

On feet, on earth, and all that in them dwell, A deathly quiet and deep silence fell. Waller.

Black melancholy fits, and round their heads A deathlike flood, and a dread reproach. Pope.

DEATHWATCH. n. f. [death and door.] A near approach to death; the gates of death, with an awe. It is now a low phrase. I myself knew a person of great fashion, who was afflicted to death's door with a vomiting.

There was a poor young woman, that had brought herself even to death's door with grief for her sick husband. L'Estrange.

DEATHSMAN. n. f. [death and man.] Executioner; hangman; headman; he that executes the sentence of death.

He's dead! I'm only sorry
He had no other benefactor.

Shakespeare.

As deathsmen you have rid this sweet young prince.

Shakespeare.

DEATHWATCH. n. f. [death and watch.] An infall that makes a tinkling noise like a watch. It is supremely imagined to prognosticate death. The solemn deathwatch click's the hour he died.

We learn to prize approaching death in a family by ravens, and little worms, which we therefore call a deathwatch. Watts.

Mice are muckyworm, sickworms beaux. And deathwatchs physicians. Pope.

To DEARURATE. v. a. [decur, Latin.] To gild, or cover with gold. Did.

DEARURATION. n. f. [from dearurate.] The state of being gilded.

DEBASE. v. a. [debasch, Latin.] To deprive of his beard. Did.

DEBACKE. v. a. [debarque, French.] To disembark. Did.

DEBATER. v. a. [bar.] To exclude; to preclude; to shut out from any thing; to hinder.

The same boats and the same buildings are found in countries debased from all amcentration by unpassable mountains, lakes, and defects. Raleigh's History.

DEBATE thy cause with thy neighbour himself, and discover not a secret to another. Psalms, xxvii. 9.

He could not debate any thing without some connection, even when the argument was two of Gloriana. Dryden.

DEBATE. v. a. [from baże.]

1. To reduce from a higher to a lower state.

Homer intended to teach, that plethoric and freeminded men into brutes. Bacon on the Odyssey.

As much as you raise filter, you debauch gods, for they are less inclin'd to listen upon use, in debauching in our wishes, and in crossing all our reasonable desires. Swift.

2. To make mean; to sink into meaness; to make deplacable; to degrade.

It is a kind of taking God's name in vain, to debauch religions with such frivolous disputes. Hooker.

A man of large possessions has not likewise to confer of every light eavy, and will not debate himself to the management of every tide. Dryden.

Extraining others, yet himself not free; Made important by poor's, debauch'd by dignity. Dryd.

3. To sink; to disfrace with meaness.

He ought to be careful of not letting his subject debauch his style, and betray him into a meanness of expression. Addison.

Huming after arguments to make good one side of a question, and wholly to refuse those which favour the other, is so far from giving truth its due value, that it wholly debauches it. Locke.

4. To adulterate; to lessen in value by base admixtures.

He reform'd the coin, which was much adulterated and debauch'd in the times and troubles of king Stephen. Hall.

Words to debauch'd and hard, no stone Was hard enough to touch them. Shak.

DEBAUSEMENT. n. f. [from debaute.] The act of debauching or degrading; degradation.

It is a wretched debausage of that frightful faculty, the tongue, tisus to be made the interpreter to a good grace. Pope.

DEBASER. n. f. [from debashe:] He that debauches; he that adulterates; he that degrades another; he that sinks the value of things, or destroys the dignity of persons.

DEBATEABLE. adj. [from debaute.] Disputable; that which is, or may be, subject to controversy.

The French requested, that the debateable ground, and the Scottish hoffage, might be reduced to the Seas. Hoyward.

DEBATE. n. f. [debate, French:] A per discuss, a controversy.

A way that men ordinarily use, to force others to submit to their judgments, and receive their opinion in debate, is to require the adversary to admit what they allege as a proof, or to align a better. Locke.

It is to diffuse a light over the understanding, in our inquiries after truth, and not to furnish the tongue with debate and controversy. Watt's Logick.

2. A quarrel; a contest: it is not now used of hostile context.

Now, looks, as though he which gave successful end To this debate that bleedeth at our doors, We will our youth lead on to higher fields, And draw no swords but what are sanctified. Shak.

'Tis thine to alter, ye can save a face; Bewit the dearst friends to raise debate. Dryden.

To DEBATE; v. a. [debarte, French:] To controvert; to dispute; to contest.

DEBASHER. n. f. [from debauch.] One who seduces others to intemperance or lewdness; a corruptor.

DEBAUCHERY. n. f. [from debauch.] The practice of excess; intemperance; lewdness.

Oppose vices by their contrary virtues; hyperciety by sober piety, and debauchery by temperance. Spenser.

These magistrates, instead of suffering enormities, occasion just twice as much debauchery, and there would be without them. Swift.

DEBAUCHMENT. n. f. [from debauch.] The act of debauching or vitiating; corruption.

They told them ancient stories of the revolvent of the gods, the punishment of nations, or the extreme poverty of learned persons. Taylor's Rule of Living Holy.
DEB.

DEB. n. f. [debilis, Lat.] Weak; fee-yble; languid; faint; without strength; in health. I impotent.
I have not half of your note that'd. "Or fou'd some dumb wretch, which without note
There 's many else have done. Shakespeare.

DEBILITATE. v. a. [debilitate, Latin.] To weaken; to make faint: to enfeebble; to neutralize.
In the buff of the eye, the buff of the flesh, and the pride of life, they fawized as weakly to fall as these debilitated poberty ever after.
The spirits being rendered languid, are incapable of purifying the blood, and debilitated in attracting nutriments. Harrov on Consumptions.

DEBILITATION. n. f. [from debilitatio, Latin.] The act of weakening.
The weaknes cannot return any thing of its strength, honour, or safety to the head, but a debilitation and ruin.

DEBILITY, n.f. [debilitus, Latin.] Weaknes; feebleness; languor; faintness; imbecility.
Method: I am a perpetrator of thy passion,
And in thy case do gain mine own debility. Sidney.
Aliment too vaporous or peripatetic will subject it to the inconveniences of too strong a peripatetic which are debility, faintness, and other sudden stum.

DEBONAIR. adj. [debonaire, French.] Elegant; civil; well-bred; gentle; complaisant; an obfete word.
One may let the lady debonair.
Thou recreant knight, and from thyself prepare
To battle, if thou mean her love to gain. Spenser.
Zephyr met her once a-maying,
Fled her with their, a daughter fair, So buoyant, blithe, and debonair.
Milton.
The nature of the one is debonair and acceptable; of the other, retired and supine; the one quick and spirits, the other slow and stubborn.
Homew's Poem. Ferri.
And she that was not only passing fair,
But withal disfett and debonair.
Doyle.

DEBONAIRLY. adv. [from debonair.] Elegantly; with a genteel air.

DEBT. n. f. [debitum, Latin; deters, Fr.] 1. That which one owes to another.
There was one that died greatly in debt: Well, for one, if he be gone, then he hath carried five hundred ducats of mine with him into the other world. Easby's Alphabets.
The debt of ten thousand talents, which the fervant owed the king, was not such an ordinary sum.
Dopple's Devotions.
To this great loss a few of tears is due; But the whole debt not to be paid by you. Waller.

DEBTOR. n. f. [debitor, Latin.] A person who owes money, or other thing, to another. To be obliged to another.

DEC.

Dec., a thousand pounds in debt.
Takes horse, and in a mighty fast
Rides day and night.

3. That which any one is obliged to do or suffer.
Your son, my lord, hath paid a soldier's debt;
He only liv'd but till he was a man.
But like a man he died. Shakespeare's Belketh.
To decy is to extinguish. DECY is not found.
Indebted; obliged to.
Which do amount to three old decies more
Than 1 stand indebted to this gentleman. Shakespeare.

DEB'TOR. n. f. [debitor, Latin.] 1. He that owes something to another.
I saw debtor both to the Greeks, and to the Barbarians, both to the wife, and to the unsure.

2. One that owes money.
I'll bring your latter hazard back again,
And thankfully call debtor for the first. Shakespeare.
If he be ampley pain
Should happen on ill-fated hoolander
Of debtor, his body, to the touch
Obstinate, as whitemen kings were wont,
To some enchanted castle is convey'd. Dryden.
There died all fathers, no man's debtor;
And there I'll die, nor worse, nor better. Pope
The case of debtors in Rome, for the first centuries, was, after the set time for payments, no choice but either to pay, or be the creditors's slave.

When I look up the debtor side, I find such innumerable articles as, that I want arithmetick to call them up, but when I look upon the creditor side, I find little more than blank paper. Addition.

DEBULLITION. n. f. [debullit, Latin.] A bubbling or festering over.

DECAMER. n. f. [decameron, Latin.] Having the top cut off. Dryden.
Decade. n. f. [Gr., decas, Latin.] The sum of ten; a number containing Ten.
Men were not only out in the number of some ten, the latitude of a few years, but might be wide by whole olympiads, and divers decades of years. Brown's Vulgar Errors.
We make cycles and periods of years; as decades, centuries, and millennia, chiefly for the use of computations in history, chronology, and astronomy.

Holden on Time.
All rank'd by ten; whole decades, when they die,
Must want the Togian flame to pour the wine. Pope.
Decadency, n. f. [decadence, French.] Decay; fall, Diis.
Decagon, n. f. [from Gr., ten, and 7 e, a corner.] A plain figure in geometry, having ten sides and angles.

DECAGROUN, n. f. [Gr., 10, Greek.] The ten commandments given by God to Moses.
The commands of God are clearly revealed both in the decaloges and other parts of Sacred writ.

To DECAMP. v. n. [decamp, French.] To shift the camp; to move off.

To DECANT. n. f. [from decant.] The act of shifting the camp.

To DECAY. v. a. [decemere, Fr.] To lose excellence; to decline from the state of perfection;
to be gradual to decline.
The monarch oak,
Three centuries he grows, and three he fays
Supreme in state, and in three more decays. Dryden.
The gallow's fate, the vane too is worn to
So dies her love, and so my hopes decay. Pope.

To DECAY, v. a. To impair; to bring to decay.
Infirmity, that destroys the wife, doth the same better
the body. Shakespeare.
Cut off a stock of a tree, and lay that which you call to cut off, to see whether it will decay the rest of the stock. Bacon.
He was of a very small and decayed fortune, and of no good education. Dryden.
Decay'd by time and wars, they only prove
Their former beauty by your former love. Dryden.
In Spain our friendships, old men's children, be Decays and wither'd from their infancy. Dryden.
It is so ordered, that almost every thing which corrupts the soul destroys the body.
Addison.

Decay, n. f. [from the verb.] 1. Decline from the state of perfection;
depravation or diminution.
What commotions in this great decay come
Shall be applied. Shakespeare.
She has been a fine lady, and paints and hides
Her decay very well. The Spanish Folly.
The gods, and vice versa, speak the naked truth.
Through the defects of age, were crimes of youth.
Denham.
By reason of the tenacity of fluids, and duration of their parts, and the weakness of elasticity in bodies, motion is much more apt to be lost than gain, and is always upon the decay. Newton.
Each may feel increases and decays,
And face them newer and newer days. Pope.
Taught, half by reason, half by mere decay,
To welcome death, and calmly pass away. Pope.

2. The effects of diminution; the marks of decay.
They think, that whatever is called old must have the decay of time upon it; and truth too were liable to mould and rottenness.
Locke.

3. Declension from prosperity.
And if thy brother be waster poor, and fallen in decay with thee, then thou shalt relieve him.
Levis, xxv. 15.

I am the very man.
That, from your fine and difference and decay,
Have followed your fall and decline.
Shakespeare, King Lear.

4. The cause of decline.
He that seeketh to be eminent amongst this men, hath a great task: but that is ever good for the public good: but he that plans to be the only figure among cyphers, is the decay of a whole age.
Bacon.

Decay, n. f. [from decay.] That which causes decay.
Your water is a sore decayer of your whorish:
dead body. Shakespeare's Hamlet.

Decay, n. f. [from decay.] Death; departure from life.
Lands are by human law, in some places, after the owner's death, divided unto all his children;
in some, all descendent to the eldest son. Hume.
To DECAY. v. a. [decad, Latin.] To die; to depart from life.
He tells us, that he is a decayed person.

Shakespeare.

You.

3 P 2
DEC

You shall die
Twice now, where others, the thinamority
In her fair arms holds, shall once decease.

Dekman.

His latest victories all thickest grew,
As, near the centre, motion doth increaseth
Till, he preagu’d from his own weighty name;
Did, like the vernal, under spells decease.
Dryd.n

DECET. n. f. [deceit, Lopez, decei.

1. Fraud; a cheat; a fallacy; any practice by which falsehood is made to pass for truth.

My lips shall not speak wickedness, nor my tongue utter deceit.

2. Statagem; anifice.

His demand
Springs not from Edwards’s well-meant honest love;
But from deceit, bred by necessity.
Shakespeare.

3. [In law.] A subtle wily shif or device; all manner of craft, subtility, guile, fraud, wiliness, sleightness, cunning, covin, collusion, practice, and offence, used to deceive another man by any means, which hath no other proper or particular name but offence.

Covell.

DECEITFUL. adj. [deceit and fall] Fraudulent; full of deceit.

I grant him blood.
Luxurious, victorious, false, deceitful. Shakespeare.

The lovely young Lavinia once had friends,
And fortune’s fable, deceitful, on her birth. Tennyson.

DECEITFULLY. adv. [from deceitful] Fraudulently; with deceit.

Exercice of form may be deceitfully dispatched of course.
Wotton.

DECEITFULNESS. n. f. [from deceitful] The quality of being fraudulent; tendency to deceive.

The eye of this world, and the deceitfulness of riches, chose the word, and he became unfruitful.
Matt, viii. 22.

DECEIVABLE. adj. [from deceive.]

1. Subject to fraud; exposed to imposture.

Man was not only deceiver in his integrity, but the angels of light in all their clarity.

Bacon’s Pop. Errours.

How would thou use me now, blind, and thereby Deceivable, in many things as a child

Helpeth? hereby in every contemn’d and scorn’d,
And last neglected.
Milton.

2. Subject to produce error; deceitful.

It is good to consider of deformity, not as a sign, which is more deceitful, but as a cause which seldom falseth of the effect.

He received nothing but fair promises, which proved deceitful.
Haywood.

An everlasting truth
In mortal strength! and oh, what not in man
Deceivable and vain!
Milton.

DECEIVABleness. n. f. [from deceitful]

Liableness be deceived, or to deceive.

1. He that has a great patron, has the advantage of his negligence and deceitfulness.

Government of the Tongue.

To DECEIVE. v. a. [decipia, Latin.]

1. To cause to mistake; to bring into error; to impose upon.
Some have been deceived into an opinion, that there was a divine right of primogeniture to both sexes and negroes.
Laity.

2. To decline by statagem.

3. To cut off from expectation, with of before the thing.

The Turkish general, deceived of his expectation, withdrew his first twelve miles off.
Koeltz.

The happy day approach’d, nor are my hopes dece.
Dryd.

4. To mock; to fail.
They rais’d a feeble cry with trembling notes,
But the weak voice deceiv’d their gasping throat’s.
Dryd.

5. To deceive by fraud or stealth.
Wine is to be forbore in consumptions, for that there is no书记 in the vifual juice of the body, Intercommunicating with the spirits of the body, and so deceive and rob them of their nul.

Bacon.

Then fruit-trees in large borders, and set there in fine flowers, but thin and smartly, and then deceiv’d the trees.
Bacon.

DECEIVER. n. f. [from deceive.] One that leads another into error; a cheat.

Such noble women, ladies, fig no more;
Men were deceiv’d ever:

One foot in sea, and one on shore;

To one thing constant never. Shakespeare.

As for Perkins’s insufficiency out of France, they interpret it not as if he were deceitfully for a counterfeité deceiver.

Bacon.

Those voices, actions, or gestures, which men have not by any compact agreed to make the instruments of conveying their thoughts one to another, are not the proper instruments of deceiving, so as to denominate the person using them a liar or deceitful.

Smith.

It is to be admired how any deceiver can be so few to forget things near at hand, when a very few months must of necessity discover the imposture.

Swift.

Adieu the heart-expanding bowl,
And all the kind deceivers of the soul.

Dec. n.f. [December, Latin.] The last month of the year; but named December, or the tenth month, when the year began in March; for in the time of the old Calendar,

Men are April when they woo, and December when they wed.

Shakespeare’s A Midsummer Night’s Dream.

What should we speak of
When we are old or you? When we fall heir.
The rain and wind beat dark December.
Shaksp.

Dict.

Dec. Var. n. f. [decemvarius, Latin.] The dignity and office of the ten governors of Rome, who were appointed to rule the commonwealth in state of confus: their authority subsisted only two years. Any body of ten men.

Decen
cency, French; Decency, n. f. Latin.

1. Propriety of form; proper formality; becoming ceremony; decei’sion is seldom used.

These thousand deceivers, that daily flow
From all her words and actions.

Milton.

In good works there may be goodness in the general but deceivers and gracefulness can be only in the particular in doing the good.

Spray.

We were the offices of religion first of all the external devices of worth, that more than a make no impression on the minds of those who affit at them.

Alice.

She speaks, behaves, and acts as just as the ought; but never think’d or one generous thought;

Victor of the scenes too painful an endeavour,
Content to dwell in decencies for ever.
Page.

2. Suitableness to character; propriety.
And must I own, the false, my feret Smart.

What with more deceivers were in silence kept?

Dryd.

The consideration immediately subsequent to the being of a thing, is what specers or disputes of the being of the power其所, and we could not makeoter impulsion on the minds of those who affit at them.

Athen.

She speaks, behaves, and acts as just as the ought; but never think’d or one generous thought;

Victor of the scenes too painful an endeavour,
Content to dwell in decencies for ever.
Page.

Sentiments which raise laughter, can very felicidom be admitted with any decency into a heroic poem.
Addison.

3. Modesty, not rufby; not obscenity.

Immodest words admit of no defence.

Decemn. adj. [from decem, Latin.] What continues for the space of ten years.
Decenn. adj. [decem and n.

Decenn. adj. [decem, Latin.] Relating to the number nineteen.

Denzon, of old, in the time of the Peloponnese war, constituted a decennial circle, or of nineteen years; the fame which we now call the golden number.
Huldr.

3. Not wanton; not immodest.

D. cent. adj. [decem, Latin.]

1. Becoming; fit; suitable.

Since there must be ornaments both in painting and poetry, if they are not necessary, they must at least be decent; that is, in their due place, and but moderately used.

Dryd.

2. Grave; not gaudy; not ostentations.

Come, pensive nun, devout and pure,
Sober, steadfast, and demure.

All in a robe of darkest green.
Flowing with majestic train,
And false robe of Cyrus lawn.

O’er the decent shoulders drawn.
Milton.

4. Without immodesty.

Past hope of safety, ‘twas his last care,
Like falling Cedar, decently to die.

Dryd.

Deceptibility, n. f. [from deceit.] Liableness to be deceived.

Some errors are so fleked in us, that they maintain their interest upon the decetibility of our decayed natures.
Clavell.

Deceptible, adj. [from deceit.] LIABLE TO BE DECEIVED; OPEN TO IMPOSTURE; SUBJECT TO FRAUD.

The full and father cause of common errors, is the common infamy of human nature; of whose deceitful condition, perhaps, there should not need any other evi- lution, than the frequent errors we fall ourselves commit.

Brow.

Deception. n. f. [deceit, Latin.]

1. The act or means of deceiving; cheat; fraud; fallacy.

Being thus divided from truth in themselves, they are yet farther removed by adventif decep-tions.

All deceptions is a misapplying of those signs, which, by compact or institution, were made the means of men’s signifying or conveying their thoughts.
Swett.

2. The fute of being deceived.

Reaon, not imposibly, may meet Some specious object by the foe suter’d,
And fall into deception unaware.
Milton.

Deceptious, adj. [from deceit.] Decellful; apt to deceive.
Yet let that sight in your heart,
That don’t intend the strictest and ears;
As if those organs had deceptive functions,
Created only to calumniate.
Shakespeare.

Deceptive, adj. [from deceit.] Having the power of deceiving.
Dict.

Deceptory.
Affluence is a write in a private character, not to be read, nor understood, but by the conscience, to which the spirit of God hath vouchsafed to decipher it to Sin.

2. To unfold: to unravel; to explain: as, to decipher an ambiguous speech.

3. To write out: to mark down in characters.

Could I give you a lively representation of guilt, and show you on this hand, and paint out eternal wrath and destructive vengeance on the other; then might I show you the condition of a friend hearing himself denied by Christ. South.

Then were the lives of necessity invented, that to every particular faith there might be his principal pleasure decipher'd into him, in the tables of his laws. Locke.

4. To stamp, to characterize; to mark.

You are both decipher'd for villains mark'd with rage. Shakespeare.

DECIPHERER. n. f. [from decipher.] One who explains writings in cipher.

DECISIVE. adj. [from decide.] 1. Determination of a difference, or of a doubt.

It is the time approaches, that will with due decifion make us know What we shall fly we have, and what we owe. Shakespeare.

Pleasure and revenge.

Have ears more dey than adv the voice
Of any true decipher.

The number of the undertakers, the worth of some of their, and their zeal to bring the matter to a decision, are fine arguments of the dignity and importance of it. Woodward.

War is a direct appeal to God for the decision of some disputes, which can by no other means be determined. Berkeley.

2. Determination of an event.

Their arms are to the left decision bent, And fortune labours with the vail event. Dryden.

It is used in Scotland for a narrative, or reports of the proceedings of the court of seisin there.

DECISIVE. adj. [from decide.]

1. Having the power of determining any difference; conclusive.

Such a reflection, though it carries nothing perfect, decifion in it, yet creates a mighty confidence in his breast, and strengthens him in his opinions. St. John Bosco.

These are ready to look upon as a determination on their side, and defensive of the controversy between vice and virtue. Rogers.

2. Having the power of settling any event.

For on this event,

Dreiser of this bloody day, depends

The fate of kingdoms. Philips.

DECISIVELY. adv. [from decisive.]

In a conclusive manner.

DECISIVENESS. n. f. [from decisive.]

The power of argument or evidence to terminate any difference, or settle an event.

DECISORY. adj. [from decide.]

 Able to determine or decide.

To DECIDE. v. a. [decem. Dutch.]

To cover; to overspread.

Ye mith and exultations, that ore rise.

From hill or dreaming lake, dulky or grey.

In honour to the world's great Author, rife!

Whatever to deck with clouds the uncolour'd sky.

Or wet the thirds earth with falling showers,

Rising or falling, fill advance his praise. Milton.

To dress; to array.

Sweet ornament that decks a thing divine. Shak.

Long may th' earth, to wait thy children's lots,

And feed another, as I feel thee now.

Dick'd in thy rights, as thou art mark'd in mine. Shakespeare.
2. Appealing to the passions. He has run himself into his own declaratory way, and almost forgotten that he was now setting up for a moral poet. Belmore.

DECLARATION. n. f. [from declare.]

1. A proclamation or affirmation; open expression; publication. His promises are nothing else but declarations, what else will do for the good of men. Butch. Though wit and learning are the essential perfections of the mind, yet the declaration of them, which alone being the representative, is so far to be preferred. Swift. There are no where so plain and full declarations of mercy and love to the sons of men, as are made in the gospel. Tillotson.

3. [In law.] Declaration (declaratio) is properly the shewing forth, or laying out, of an action personal in any suit, though it is used sometimes for both personal and real actions. Cowell.

DECLARATIVE. adj. [from declare.]

1. Making declaration; explanatory. The names of things should be always taken from something declaratively declarative of their form or nature. Green.

2. Making proclamation. To this we may add the vox populi, to declarae. on the same side. Swift.

DECLARATORY. adv. [from declarato.] In the form of a declaration; not in a decretory form. A declaration is not always the civilian, and Franciscus de Cordus, have both declaratorily confirmed the same. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

DECLARATORY. adj. [from declar.]

Affirmative; expressive; not decretory; not promisory, but expressing something before promised or decreed. Thus, a declaratory law, is a new act confirming a former law. These kind of words are not only declaratory of the good pleasure and intention of God towards them, but likewise of the natural tendency of the thing. Tillotson.

To DECLARE. v. a. [declare. Latin.]

1. To clear; to free from obscurity: not in use.

2. To make known; to tell evidently and openly. It hath been declared unto me of God, that there are secretions among you. 1 Cor. ii. 11.

The fun by certain figures declares. Both when the south presents a stormy day, and when the clearning north will pull the clouds away. Dryden's Virgil.

3. To publish; to proclaim. Declare his glory among the heathen. Isaiah. xliii. 9.

4. To shew in open view; to shew an opinion in plain terms. In Caesar's army so few that the soldiers who had had not; yet they would not declare themselves in it, but only demanded a discharge. Bacon. God will declare the body, who upon a proper occasion, would not fail to declare themselves. Addis.

To DECLARE. v. n. To make a declaration; to proclaim some resolution or opinion, or favour or opposition; with for or against.

DEC.

The internal faculties of will and understanding decreing and declaring against them. Taylor.

To God will declare to himself without witnesses in the world; there being something fixed in the nature of men, that will be fore to testify and declare for him. South's Sermons. Like Gabriel, who, for favouring them, and And then come smiling, and declare for fate. Dryden.

DECLAEMENT. n. f. [from declare.]

Discovery; declaration; testimony. Cloyne.

To declare what it is to pass into electricity; that is, into a power to attract faces, or light bodies; and convert the needle freely placed, which is a declaration of very different parts. Brown.

DECLARATION. n. f. [from declare.]

A proclaimer, that makes anything known.

DECLINATION. n. f. [declinatio. Latin.]

1. Tendency from a greater to a lesser degree of excellence. A beauty-walking and diffused widow, Ev'n in the afternoon of her bel days, Seduced'd the pitch and height of his thoughts: To base declension. Shakespeare's Richard III.

To take the picture of a man in the greenness and vivacity of his youth, and in the latter date and declension of his drooping years, and you will scarce know what it belong to the same person. South's Sermons.

2. Declination; defect. We may reasonably allow as much for the declension of the land from that place to the sea, as for the immediate height of the mountain.Burns's Theory.

3. Inflexion; manner of changing nouns. Declension is only the variation or change of the termination of a noun, which is continued to signify the same thing. Clarke's Latin Grammar.

DECLINABLE. adj. [from decline.]

Having variety of terminations: as, a declinable noun.

DECLINATION. n. f. [declination. Latin.]

1. Defect; change from a better to a worse state; diminution of vigour; decrease. The queen, hearing of the declination of a monarchy, took it to ill, as she would never after hear of his fault. Bacon.

Two general motions all animals have, that is, their beginning and increase; and two more, that is, their fate and declination. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

Decline, Hope awaits upon the flow'rest prime. And summer, though it be less gay, Yet is not look'd on as a time of declination or decay. Waller.

2. The act of bending down; as, a declination of the head.

DECLARATION. n. f. [declare. Latin.]

1. Defect; from a better to a worse state; diminution of vigour; decrease. The queen, hearing of the declination of a monarchy, took it to ill, as she would never after hear of his fault. Bacon.

Two general motions all animals have, that is, their beginning and increase; and two more, that is, their fate and declination. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

Decline, Hope awaits upon the flow'rest prime. And summer, though it be less gay, Yet is not look'd on as a time of declination or decay. Waller.

2. The act of bending down; as, a declination of the head.

DECLARATORY. adv. [from declarato.]

1. Making declaration; explanatory. The names of things should be always taken from something declaratively declarative of their form or nature. Green.

2. Making proclamation. To this we may add the vox populi, to declarae. on the same side. Swift.

DECLARATORY. adj. [from declarato.]

In the form of a declaration; not in a decretory form. A declaration is not always the civilian, and Franciscus de Cordus, have both declaratorily confirmed the same. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

DECLARATORY. adj. [from declar.]

Affirmative; expressive; not decretory; not promisory, but expressing something before promised or decreed. Thus, a declaratory law, is a new act confirming a former law. These kind of words are not only declaratory of the good pleasure and intention of God towards them, but likewise of the natural tendency of the thing. Tillotson.

To DECLARE. v. a. [declare. Latin.]

1. To clear; to free from obscurity: not in use.

2. To make known; to tell evidently and openly. It hath been declared unto me of God, that there are secretions among you. 1 Cor. ii. 11.

The fun by certain figures declares. Both when the south presents a stormy day, and when the clearning north will pull the clouds away. Dryden's Virgil.

3. To publish; to proclaim. Declare his glory among the heathen. Isaiah. xliii. 9.

4. To shew in open view; to shew an opinion in plain terms. In Caesar's army so few that the soldiers who had had not; yet they would not declare themselves in it, but only demanded a discharge. Bacon. God will declare the body, who upon a proper occasion, would not fail to declare themselves. Addis.

To DECLARE. v. n. To make a declaration; to proclaim some resolution or opinion, or favour or opposition; with for or against.
DEC. 11.

Whatever they judged to be most agreeable or digastric, they would pursue or decline. Afterw.
3. To modify a word by various terminations; to inflect.
4. You decline mutes, and continue Latin, by the help of a tutor, or with some English translation. Watts.

DECLINE. n. f. [from the verb. The state of tendency to the left or the words distribution; decay.
Contrary to increase, improvement, or elevation.
Thy right fortune did I only wed,
From its decline determined to recede.
Prior.
Those fathers lived in the decline of literature.

DECLIVITY. n. f. [declivitas, Latin.] Inclination or obliquity reckoned downwards; gradual deficient, not precipitous or perpendicular; the contrary to acility.
Rivers will not flow unless upon declivity, and their courses be raised above the earth's ordinary flatness, so that they may run upon a definite.
Woodward.
I found myself within my depth; and the declivity was so small, that I walked near a mile before I met with a Gallineer. Trotter.

DECLIVOUS. adj. [declivus, Lat.] Gradually descending; not precipitous; not perpendicularly sinking; the contrary to acicular; moderately steep.

DECO'CT. v. a. [decoctus, decoctum, Latin.]
1. To prepare by boiling for any use; to digest in hot water.
Seas lose their windings by decocting; and fudible or windily fudible are taken off by evaporation or distillation.

2. To digest by the heat of the fermentation.
There the decoctus, and doth the food prepare.
The distiller distributes it to every vein;
The capus whence the may fitly spare.

3. To boil in water, so as to draw the strength or virtue of any thing.
The longer, madder or herbs are decocted in liquor, the clearer it is.

4. To boil up to a consistence; to strengthen or incorporate by boiling; this is no proper use.
Can fodder water, their barley broth,
Deco're their cold blood to such sallacious heat! Skel.

Deco'table. adj. [from decoct. ] That which may be boiled, or prepared by boiling.
Deco'tion. n. f. [decolatum, Lat.]
The act of boiling any thing, to extract its virtues.
In infusion the longer it is, the greater is the part of the gree body that goeth into the liquor; but in decoction, though more goeth forth, yetis either purged at the top, or fettled at the bottom.
The lineaments of a white lily will remain after the strongest decoction.

2. A preparation made by boiling in water.
They distil their husband's land
In decocting; and man's
With ten empires, in their chamber
Lying for the spirit of amber.
Ben Jonson.

3. Flesh or blood, boiled in water, the strained liquor is called the decoction of the plant. Arbuthnot.
Deco'ture. n. f. [from decoct.] A substance drawn by decoction.

Decollation. n. f. [decellatio, Lat.] The act of beheading.
He, by a decollation of all hope, annihilated his mercy; this, by an innocencing thereof, destroyed his justice.
Brown.

RECOUPMENT. adj. [decoptus, Lat. ]
Compounded a second time; compounded with things already compounded.
Decomposition of three metals, or more, are too long to inquire of, except there be some compositions of them already observed.
Bacon.

DECO'COMPOUND. v. a. [decompone, Lat.]
The act of compounding things already compounded.
We consider what happens in the compositions and decompositions of saline particles. Boyle.

To DECOMPOUND. v. a. [decompone, Lat.]
1. To compose of things already compounded; to compound a second time; to form by a second composition.
Nature herself doth in the bowels of the earth make decomposed bodies, as we see in vitriol, cinabar, and even in sulphur itself.

When a word founds for a very complex idea, that is compounded and decomposed, it is not easy for men to form and retain that idea exactly. Locke.
If the violet, blue, and green be intercepted, the remaining yellow will still complying upon the paper an orange; and, then, if the intercepted colours be let pass, they will fall upon this compounded orange, and, together with it, decomposed.
Newton.

2. To resolve a compound into simple parts. This is a fenis that has of late crept irregularly into chymical books.
Decompounded adj. [from the verb.] Composed of things or words already compounded; compounded a second time.
The pretended falls and sulphur are so far from being contrary parts extricated out of the body of mercury, that they are rather, to borrow a term of the grammarians, decomposed bodies, made up of the whole metal and the menstruum, or other additions employed to distil it.

No body should use any compound or decomposed of the substantial verbs. Arbuthnot and Pope.

DecOM'AMENT. n. f. [from decorate.]
Ornament; embellishment; Didi.
To DECO'RATE. v. a. [decora, Lat.]
To adorn; to embellish; to beautify.

Decor'a'tor. n. f. [from decorate.] Ornament; embellishment; added beauty.
The enigmas of virtues contribute to the ornament of figures; such as the decorations belonging to the liberal arts, and to war.

This hand of the buckler I can spare,
As only decoratrices of the world,
So Mars arm’d for glory, not for need.
Dryden.

Dryden.

Deco'ry duck. n. f. A duck that lures others.
There is a sort of ducks, called decoyducks, that will bring whole flocks of fowl to their retirement, where are conveniences made for catching them.

DeCO'RY. n. f. [from the verb.] Allurement to mischief; temptation.
The Devil could never have had such numbers, had he not used some decoy to ensnare others.

Government of the Tongue.
The exhorberant productions of the earth become a continual decoy and snare: they only excite and stimulate.

To DECREASE. v. n. [decreto, Lat.] To grow less; to be diminished.

1. From the moon is the sign of earth, a slight that decreptce in her perfection. Etym. chil. 7.
2. After fifty years, as they fold, the heart muscell increaseth the weight of one drachm; after which, in the same proportion, it decrepeth.

Brown's Viper Ears.

When the sun comes to his tropick, days increase and decrease but a very little for a great while together.
Newton.

To DECREASE. v. a. To make less; to diminish.

Those articles, which did our state decrease. Dry.
Nor cherish'd they relations poor,
That might decrepe their present force.
Prior.

Heat increaseth the fluidity of tuncious liquids, as oil, water, and honey; and thereby decrepeth their refinance.
Newton.

DECREASE. n. f. [from the verb.]
1. The state of growing less; decay.
By week'ing toll and hourly age o'comes,
See thy decrep'ce, and hasten to thy tomb.
Prior.

2. The vain; the time when the visible face of the moon grows less.
See in what time the feed, in the forget less of the moon, come to a certain height, and how they differ from those that are set in the decrep'te of the moon.
Boece.

To DECREP'T. v. n. [decretum, Latin.] To make an edict; to appoint by edict; to establish by law; to determine; to resolve.

They shall see the end of the wife, and shall not understand what God in his counsel hath decreed of him.

Father eternal! thine is to decrep't.
Mine, both in heaven and earth to do thy will.

Milton.

Had hearken decreed that I should live enjoying,
Heav'n had decreed to make unhappy Troy.
Dry.

To DECREP'T. v. a. To doom or appoint by a decrep't.

Thou shalt also decrep a thing, and it shall be established.

To the
To

to

Decretal adj. [decretum, Latin.] Aptaining to a decree; containing a decree.

Decretum n.s. [decretum, Latin.]

A book of decrees or edicts; a body of laws.

The second room, whose walls

Were painted fair with memorable

gests; of magistrates, of courts, of laws, of judgments, and of decrees.

Spenser.

The collection of the people's decrees.

Traditions and decrees were made of equal force, and as authentic as the sacred charter itself.

Dryden.

Decretist n.s. [from decreit.] One that studies or professes the knowledge of the decretal.

The decreit had their rise and beginning under the reign of the emperor Frederick Barbarossa.

Browne.

Decretory adj. [from decreit.]

1. Judicial; definitive.

2. Critical; in which there is some definitive event.

The motions of the moon, supposed to be measured by fountains, and the critical or decreitory days, depend on that number.

Browne.

Decretum n.s. [Latin.]

Clamorous cenuse; hally or noisy condemnance; concurrence in confounding any thing.

To DECRY w.a. [decirer, French.] To confound; to blame clamorously; or clamour against.

Malice in civiticks regna so high,

That for small errors they whole play decry.

Dryden.

Those measures, which are extolled by one half of the kingdom, are naturally detest by the other.

Dryden.

They applied themselves to lessen their authority, decreed them as hard and unnecessary restraints.

Rogers.

Quecks and impostors are still caunting us to beware of counterfeiters, and decry others cheat only to make more way for their own.

Swift.

Decumence n.s. [decumbus, Latin.]

Decumency. The act of lying down;

the posture of lying down.

This must come to pass, if we hold opinion they lie not down, and enjoy no decumence at all;

for station is properly no rest, but one kind of motion.

Browne.

Not considering the ancient manner of decuming, he impasted this gesture of the beloved disciple unto rubbish, or an act of inutility.

Browne.

Decumiture n.s. [from decumbe,

Latin.] The act of lying down.

Dryden.

Browne.

Decumity. n.s. [from decumbe,

Latin.] The act of lying down.

Dryden.

Browne.

Decumity. n.s. [from decumbe,

Latin.] The act of lying down.

Dryden.

Browne.

Decumity. n.s. [from decumbe,

Latin.] The act of lying down.

Dryden.

Browne.
DED

Pray's from prefered souls, from falling maid's, whole names are dedicate. The foundling child, as Shakespeare. This tenth part, or title, being thus assigned unto him, leaveth not to be of the nature of the other nine parts, which are given us for our worldly order and behooves us as a thing of infinite and appropriate unto God. Spedman.

DEDICATION. n.f. [dedicate, Latin.] 1. The act of dedicating to any being or purpose; consecration; solemn appropriation. It cannot be laid to many men's charge, that they should be so curious as to trouble himself with placing the first stone in the churches; or in forcible words, after the erection of them, to make any great ado for their dedication. Hooker. Thus, what public solemnities there is none formidable as that under the reign of King Solomon, at the dedication of the temple. Addison.

2. An address to a patron. Pope.

DEDICATOR. n.f. [from dedicate.] One who, or which, doth work to a patron with compliment and fervility. Leave dangerous truths to unsuccessful sires, And flattering to fulsome dedicatees. Pope.

DEDICATORY. adj. [from dedicate.] Composing a dedication; complimental, adulatory.

Thou shalt begin my epistle, if it were a dedicate one; but it is a friendly letter. Pope.

DEDICATION. n.f. [dedicati, Latin.] The act of yielding up any thing; surrender. It was not a complete conquest, but rather a dedication of principles and capitulations agreed between the conqueror and the conquered. Hume.

To DEDUCE. v. a. [deduce, Latin.] 1. To draw in a regular connected series, from one time or one event to another. I will deduce him from his cradle, through the deeps of experience, to fame and courts, till be was swallowed in the gulph of futurity. Lyttelton.

O golden, fair, shall I dedicate my chimes From the delight of times and early times? Pope.

2. To form a regular chain of consequent propositions. Reason is nothing but the faculty of deducing unknown truths from principles already known. Locke.

3. To lay down in regular order, so as that the following shall naturally rise from the foregoing. Let me your friends, ye nightingales! oh pour The many running soul of melody Into my varied versif while I deduce, From the first note the hollow cock-crow sings. The symphony of spring. Thomson.

DEDUCTION. n.f. [from deduce.] The thing deduced; the collection of reason; consequential proposition.

Presc and prayer are due worship, and the rest of those dedications which I am confident are the remote effects of revelation. Dryden.

DEDUCIBLE. adj. [from deduce.] Collectible by reason; consequential; discoverable from principles laid down.

This condition, although deducible from many grounds, yet shall we evidence is not from few. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

Brown's Vulgar Errors.

The general character of the new earth is pious and placid; and the particular character, that it hath no sea; and both are apparently deducible from its formation. Burnet.

So far, therefore, as confidence reports any thing agreed to or deducible from thence, it is to be looked to. South. Vol. I.

DEE

All properties of a triangle depend on, and are deducible from, the complex idea of three lines, included under one angle. Shakespeare.

DEDUCE. adv. [from deduce.] Performing the act of dedication. Did. To DEDUCT. v. a. [deduce, Latin.] 1. To sublimate; to take away; to cut off; to deface. We deduce from the computation of our years that part of our time which is spent in insignificance of infant. South. 2. To separate; to dispart; to divide. Now not in use. Having yet, in his dedicated sight, Some sparks remaining of that heavenly fire. Spenser.

DEDUCTION. n.f. [deducit, Latin.] 1. Consequent collection; consequence; proposition drawn from principles premised. Of scripture such duties may be deduced, by some kind of consequence; as by long circuits of deduction it may be that, even truth, out of any truth, may be concluded. Hooker.

Set before you the moral law of God, with such deductions from it as our Saviour hath drawn, on our own reason, well informed, can makes. Du Bois.

That by diversity of motions we should spoil our things not refined by them; we must attribute to some secret deduction; but what this deduction should be or not, we are not informed; but we see that it is advanced, as is dark as ignorance. Glasseville.

You have laid the experiments together in such a way, and made such deductions from them, as I have not hitherto met with. All crost and difficult hints are either expressly, or by clear consequence and deduction, forbidden in the New Testament. Tiusfodot.

A reflection so obvious, that natural inclination seems to have suggested it even to those who never much attended to deductions of reason. Roger.

2. That which is deduced; defacement. Bring then these beginnings to a strict account. Make these deffects; see to what they mount. Pope.

DEDUCTIVE. adj. [from deduce.] Deducible; that which is or may be deduced from a position premised. All knowledge of causes is deducible; for we know nothing by deduction, but through the mediation of their effect. Glasseville.

DEDUCTIVELY. adv. [from deduction.] Consequentially; by regular deduction; by a regular train of reasoning. There is scarce a proper error passant in our days, which is not either directly expressed, or deducively contained, in this work. Dryda.

DEED. n.f. [deed, Saxox; dade, Dutch.] 1. Action, whether good or bad; thing done. From lowlaid place when virtuous things proceed, The place is dignified by th' honest deed. Sasse. The monster sought replies; for words were vain, And deeds could only deeds unfit maintain. Dryden. The fame had not consented to the council and deed. We are not secluded from the expediency of regard for our charitable deeds. Smardge's Sermons.

2. Exploit; performance. Trade, and cunning, and the other side, 'd no ambition to commend my deeds, The deeds themselves, this mate, spoke loud the done. Milton.

Thousands were there, in darker place that dwell, While deeds fame nobler poem shall adorn. Dryda.

3. Power of action; agency. Nor knew I not To be with will and deed created free. Milton.

4. Act declaratory of an opinion. They define, with strange absurdity, that in the fame feate it should belong to give full judgment in matters of reformation, and to abridge whom it pleased them, clean to their own former deeds and oaths. Hooker.

5. Written evidence of any legal act. The solicitor gave an evidence for a deed, which was impracticable to be fraudulently. Barrow.

He builds his house upon the sand, and writes the deeds by which he holds his estate upon the face of a river. South.

6. Fact; reality; the contrary to fiction; whence the word indeed. O that, as oft I have at Athens seen The stage afive, and the big clouds descend; So now in very deed I might behold The pompous scene and clattering many roofy seat. Meet like the hands of Jove! Audite! Let's Odiopis.

DEEDS. adj. [from deed.] Unavoidable; without action; without exploit. Speaking in deeds, and deed's his tongue. Shakespeare.

Inchant, he cried, your female discourse! Ye ded'st, he cautious, and the song attend. Pope.

To DEEM. v. n. part. deems, or deeme'd, [dimens, Gothic; deenen, Dutch; belemen, Saxon.] 1. To judge; to conclude upon consideration; to think; to opine; to determine. Here eke that famous golden apple grew, For which the idle ladies disputed, I'ld partial Paris decide; It Venus! With beauty, and some true of heart. Spenser.

So natural is the union of religion with justice, that we may boldly deem there is neither, where both are not. Hooker.

He who, to be deeme'd
A god, lep fondly into Aetna flames. Milton.

These blessings, friend, a deity's behold.' For never can I deem him less than god. Dryden.

And did we not see
Is deeme'd vindictive to have chang'd her course. Tho'mson.

2. To effimate; to make effimate of: this fene is now difculated. Do me not to dy,
Ne deem thy force by fortune's doon unjoyed, That hath, maugre her spyle, thus low me laid in dath.

But that ye fall not of so heavenly matter. All that they know not, envy, or admire, Rather than envy, let them wonder at her, But not to deeme her of her defett anfere. Spenser.

DEEM. n.f. [from the verb.] Judgment; estimate; opinion. Not now in use.

3. To deeme or impute; to ascribe to me, my love. Arar me, my love, I would not eare, I trul true! how now? what wicked deem is this? Shakespeare.

DEEMSTER. n.f. [from deem.] A judge; a word yet in use in Jersey and the Isle of Man.

DEEP. adj. [deep, Saxon.] 1. Having length downwards; descending far; profound; opposed to shallow. All trees in high and sandy grounds are to be set deep, and in watery grounds more shallow. Beatt.

The gaping gulph low to the centre lies, And twice as deep as earth is distant from the fire. Dryden.

2. Low in situation; not high.

3. Measured from the surface downward. Mr. Hailey, in diving deep into the sea in a diving vat, friend, in his far fun-drive, that when he was sunk many fathom deep into the water, the upper part of his hand, on which the fun常 directly, appeared of a red colour. Davenst.

4. Entering far; piercing a great way. This saviour Strikes deeper; grows with more pernicious root. Shakespeare.
D E F

DEFATIGATE. v. a. [defatigue, Lat.] To weary; to tire. The power of these men's industries, never deferatigated, has been great. Dr. Menzies.

DEFAUL'T. n. f. [defaut, Fr.] Default.

DEFECT. n. f. [defectus, Latin.] Weariness; fatigue.

DEFECTUOUS. adj. [from defectus.] Deficient; wanting. To their defects, the authors of the text attach no weight. Davies.

DEFECTIVENESS. n. f. [defectuinesis, Latin.] The perfection and sufficiency of Scripture has been shown, as also the defectiveness of that particular tradition. Lord Diggory to Sir Ken. Diggory. The corruption of things depends upon the intrinsic defectiveness of the connection or union of the parts of things corporal.

Hale's Origins of Mankind.

DEFECTUOUS. adj. [from defectus.] 1. Imperfect; deficient; wanting. The extraordinary persons, thus highly favoured, were for a great part of their lives in a defectible condition. Hale.

DEFECTIOUS. n. f. [defectibus, Latin.] 1. Want; fault.

DEFECTIVE. adj. [from defectus, Lat.] 1. Wanting the just quantity. Nor will polished amber, although it lends form to a groat and compensates for a void, be found a long time defective upon the exact scale.

Brown's Vulgar Errors.

2. Full of defects; imperfect; not sufficient; not adequate to the purpose. It subjects them to a ill the defects depend upon a defective projective motion of the blood.

Arthuron Aliment.

3. Faulty; vicious; blamable. It will very little help to call my ignorance, that this is the best of four or five hypothetic proposals, which are all defective. Locke.

4. If it renders us perfect in one accomplishment, it generally leaves us defective in another. Addison.

DEFECTION. n. f. [defectionis, Latin.] 1. Wanting; absence of something necessary; insufficiency; the fault opposed to superfluity. We can never have more of this natural gift than is necessary.

White.

2. Failing; imperfect. He is a true lover of his art; and every city.

Hogarth.

DEFECTIVE or DEFECTING. n. f. [from defective.] Indecisive, n. f., or such as want a number, or some particular cafe.

DEFECTIVE Verb. [in grammar.] A verb which wants some of its tenses.

DEFECTIVENESS. n. f. [from defective.] Want; the state of being imperfect; faultiness.

DEFECTIVE or DEFICIENT Nouns. [in grammar.] Indecisive nouns, or such as want a number, or some particular cafe.

DEFECTIVE Verb. [in grammar.] A verb which wants some of its tenses.

DEFENCE. n. f. [defensio, Lat.] 1. Guard; protection; security. We have not the body of taille, and the defects of some other particular makes any single part appear in perfection.

Addison.

2. Vindication; justification; apology. The youthfull prince. With form replied, and made this bold defence.

Dryden.

3. Prohibi-
3. Prohibition: this is a tense merely French.

4. Refinance.

5. [In law.] The defendant's reply after declaration produced.

6. [In fortification.] The part that hanks another work.

To DEFEND, v. a. [defend, Lat.] To defend by fortification; not in use.

De FENDANT, adj. [from defend,].

1. He that defends against assailants.

2. [In law.] The person accused or sued.

3. The city itself being strongly fortified.

4. He is not 'the' appellant and defendant.

5. The city was the capital.

DEFENDRE, n. f. [defensor, Lat.]

1. One that defends; a champion.

2. To pay defence or regard to another’s opinion.

3. [In law.] An advocate; one that defends another in a court of justice.

DEFENSIBLE, adj. [from defence.]

1. That may be defended.

2. To stand in defence of; to protect; to support.

3. To fortify; to secure.

4. To prohibited; to forbid.

5. To maintain a place, or cause, against those that attack it.

6. As you imagine: she has a hidden strength.

7. To be defended against.

8. All naked; unarmed; not provided with defiance; unprepared.

9. Captain or colonel, or knight in arms, whose chance on the defensive turns them into the danger line, to between them and them within protect from harms.

10. My sister is not to be defendest last.

11. If I may that fear.

12. Defend the fool from himself.

13. That may be defended.

14. To the three cities in the world, I informed myself in what its strength consists.

15. Right; capable of vindication.

16. Nothing but the sound of Hosty’s name.

17. That may be defended.

18. Nor I alone, one of us men is become, they, Guard them, and him within protect from harms.

19. Your sister is not to be defended last.

20. Defend the fool from himself.

21. To the three cities in the world, I informed myself in what its strength consists.

22. Right; capable of vindication.

23. Nothing but the sound of Hosty’s name.

24. That may be defended.

25. Nor I alone, one of us men is become, they, Guard them, and him within protect from harms.

26. Your sister is not to be defended last.

27. Defend the fool from himself.

28. To the three cities in the world, I informed myself in what its strength consists.

29. Right; capable of vindication.

30. Nothing but the sound of Hosty’s name.

31. That may be defended.

32. Nor I alone, one of us men is become, they, Guard them, and him within protect from harms.

33. Your sister is not to be defended last.

34. Defend the fool from himself.

35. To the three cities in the world, I informed myself in what its strength consists.

36. Right; capable of vindication.

37. Nothing but the sound of Hosty’s name.

38. That may be defended.

39. Nor I alone, one of us men is become, they, Guard them, and him within protect from harms.

40. Your sister is not to be defended last.

41. Defend the fool from himself.

42. To the three cities in the world, I informed myself in what its strength consists.

43. Right; capable of vindication.

44. Nothing but the sound of Hosty’s name.

45. That may be defended.

46. Nor I alone, one of us men is become, they, Guard them, and him within protect from harms.

47. Your sister is not to be defended last.

48. Defend the fool from himself.

49. To the three cities in the world, I informed myself in what its strength consists.

50. Right; capable of vindication.

51. Nothing but the sound of Hosty’s name.

52. That may be defended.

53. Nor I alone, one of us men is become, they, Guard them, and him within protect from harms.

54. Your sister is not to be defended last.

55. Defend the fool from himself.

56. To the three cities in the world, I informed myself in what its strength consists.

57. Right; capable of vindication.

58. Nothing but the sound of Hosty’s name.

59. That may be defended.

60. Nor I alone, one of us men is become, they, Guard them, and him within protect from harms.

61. Your sister is not to be defended last.

62. Defend the fool from himself.

63. To the three cities in the world, I informed myself in what its strength consists.

64. Right; capable of vindication.

65. Nothing but the sound of Hosty’s name.

66. That may be defended.

67. Nor I alone, one of us men is become, they, Guard them, and him within protect from harms.

68. Your sister is not to be defended last.

69. Defend the fool from himself.

70. To the three cities in the world, I informed myself in what its strength consists.

71. Right; capable of vindication.

72. Nothing but the sound of Hosty’s name.

73. That may be defended.

74. Nor I alone, one of us men is become, they, Guard them, and him within protect from harms.

75. Your sister is not to be defended last.

76. Defend the fool from himself.

77. To the three cities in the world, I informed myself in what its strength consists.

78. Right; capable of vindication.

79. Nothing but the sound of Hosty’s name.

80. That may be defended.

81. Nor I alone, one of us men is become, they, Guard them, and him within protect from harms.

82. Your sister is not to be defended last.

83. Defend the fool from himself.

84. To the three cities in the world, I informed myself in what its strength consists.

85. Right; capable of vindication.

86. Nothing but the sound of Hosty’s name.

87. That may be defended.

88. Nor I alone, one of us men is become, they, Guard them, and him within protect from harms.

89. Your sister is not to be defended last.

90. Defend the fool from himself.

91. To the three cities in the world, I informed myself in what its strength consists.

92. Right; capable of vindication.

93. Nothing but the sound of Hosty’s name.

94. That may be defended.

95. Nor I alone, one of us men is become, they, Guard them, and him within protect from harms.

96. Your sister is not to be defended last.

97. Defend the fool from himself.

98. To the three cities in the world, I informed myself in what its strength consists.

99. Right; capable of vindication.

100. Nothing but the sound of Hosty’s name.

101. That may be defended.

102. Nor I alone, one of us men is become, they, Guard them, and him within protect from harms.

103. Your sister is not to be defended last.

104. Defend the fool from himself.

105. To the three cities in the world, I informed myself in what its strength consists.

106. Right; capable of vindication.

107. Nothing but the sound of Hosty’s name.

108. That may be defended.

109. Nor I alone, one of us men is become, they, Guard them, and him within protect from harms.

110. Your sister is not to be defended last.

111. Defend the fool from himself.

112. To the three cities in the world, I informed myself in what its strength consists.

113. Right; capable of vindication.

114. Nothing but the sound of Hosty’s name.

115. That may be defended.

116. Nor I alone, one of us men is become, they, Guard them, and him within protect from harms.

117. Your sister is not to be defended last.

118. Defend the fool from himself.

119. To the three cities in the world, I informed myself in what its strength consists.

120. Right; capable of vindication.

121. Nothing but the sound of Hosty’s name.

122. That may be defended.

123. Nor I alone, one of us men is become, they, Guard them, and him within protect from harms.

124. Your sister is not to be defended last.

125. Defend the fool from himself.

126. To the three cities in the world, I informed myself in what its strength consists.

127. Right; capable of vindication.

128. Nothing but the sound of Hosty’s name.

129. That may be defended.

130. Nor I alone, one of us men is become, they, Guard them, and him within protect from harms.
2. Defect; failing; imperfection.

Seagers, finding a defect in the reason of Aristotle, introduced one of no less difficulty himself. Brown's Vag. Errors.

 Thou in thyself art perfect, and to thee
Into defence found.

Thou, and in our own nature, too, great evidence of our defective, and deplorable condition of human ignorance. Clamachus.

What great defect is this, if we come short of Sprat.

The characters of comedy and tragedy are never

To be made perfect, but always to be drawn with defects, and fable, such as they have been described to us in history. Dryden.

Sack.

Deficiency. n.f. [deficient, from defect, Latin.] Failing; wanting; defective; imperfect.

O woman! beft of all things, as the wise

Of God ordain'd them: his creating hand

Nothing imperfect or deficient. Milton.

Figures are either single or mixed: the simple

Def. xiv. 26.

either be circular or angular; and of circular,

Redmond.

either complete, as circles; or deficient, as ovals.

Virgil.

Neither Virgil nor Homer were deficient in any

Def. xiv. 26.

of the former beauties.

Several thoughts of the mind, for which we have either none, or very deficient names, are diftinguished

Def. xiv. 26.

by these figures.

Deficient Numbers [in arithmetic] are those numbers, whose parts, added together, make less than the integer whose parts they are.

Def. xiv. 26.

Defier. n.f. [from def and Fer., Fr.] A challenger; a contemner; one that dares and defies.

It is not then high time that the laws should provide, by the most prudent and effectual means, to curb those bold and infolent defiers of Heaven.

Tilson.

To DEFEAT. v.a. [aplan, Saxon, from ful, foul.]

1. To make foul or impure: to make naily or filthy: to dirty.

There is a thing, Harry, known to many in our land by the name of pitch; this pitch, as ancient writers do report, doth defile. Shakespeare.

He is jolly reckoned among the greatest pleasure

Def. xiv. 26.

makers of this age, however his character may be

Def. xiv. 26.

defiled by mean and dirty hands.

2. To pollute; to make legally or ritually impure.

That which dieth of itself it shall not eat, to

Lev. xxi. 11.

defile himself therewith.

Neither shall he defile himself for his father.

Lev. xxi. 11.

3. To corrupt chastity; to violate.

Ev'ry object his reverence revileth.

The husband murdered, and the wife defili'd. Prior.

4. To taint; to corrupt; to vitiate; to make guilty.

Forgyulibf of good turns, defiling of souls, adultery, and flameless uncleanness.

Wild.

God requires that v. should do, that defile ourselves with impurities. Sifting feet.

Let not any infinities of sin defile your requests.

With.

To DEFEAT. v.a. [defiler, French.] To march; to go off file by file.

Defile. n.f. [defile, Fr. from file, a line of soldiers, which is derived from filum, a thread.]. A narrow passageway; a long, narrow path; a lane.

There is in Oxford a narrow defile, to use the military term, where the parapets used to encircle.

Addison.

Defilement. n.f. [from defile.] The state of being defiled; the act of defiling; pollution; corruption; defecation.

Levi.

By unshod looks, loose gestures, and foul talk.

Let in defilement to the inward parts. Milton.

The unshod are provoked to see their vice exposed, and the charge cannot rake into such fitch without danger of defection. Pepy.

Defiler. n.f. [from defile.] One that defiles; a corrupter; a violator.

At the last tremendous day, I shall hold forth in my arms my much wronged child, and call aloud for vengeance on her defiler. Addison.

Dryden.

Definable. adj. [from define.]

1. That which may be defined; capable of definition.

The Supreme Nature we cannot otherwise define, than by saying it is infinite; as if infinite were definable, or infinity a subject for our narrow understanding. Dryden.

2. That which may be ascertained.

Concerning the time of the end of the world, the question is, whether that time be definable or

Burnet's Theory.

To DEFINE. v.a. [define, Lat. definere, French.]

1. To give the definition; to explain a thing and its circumstances.

Whose love canst thou mean?

Sidney.

That dost so well their miseries define?

Sidney.

Though defining be thought the proper way to make known the previous significations, yet there are some words that will not be defined.

Locke.

2. To circumscribe; to mark the limit; to bound.

When the rings appeared only black and white, they were very different and well defined, and the blueness seemed as intense as that of the central spot.

Newton.

To DEFINE. v.n. To determine; to decide; to decree.

The unjust judge is the capital remover of landmarks, when he defines all lands and

Bacon.

Definer. n.f. [from define.]

One that explains; one that describes a thing by its qualities.

When God, forsooth, is found incomprehensible and infinite;

But is he therefore found? Vain teacher! I go;

Let your imperfect definition show.

Shake.

That man can make the weakness known, know. Prior.

DEFINITE, adj. [from definitus, Lat.]

1. Certain; limited; bounded.

Hither to your anchor divers times he repaired, and here, by your means, had the fight of the goddess, who in a definite compas can sect for infinite beauty.

Sidney.

2. Exact; precise.

Idols, in this case of favour, would

Be wildly defiler.

Shake.

In a charge of adultery, the accused ought to Find, in the accusatory bill, or inquisition, which succeeds in the place of accusation, some certain and definite time. Aylliff's Paragon.

DEFINITE. n.f. [from the adjective.]

Thing explained or defined.

Specifically is nothing else but the definition of the general; and the general, again, is nothing else but a definite of the special. Aylliff.

DEFINITENESS. n.f. [from definite.]

Certainty; limitedness.

Diz.

DEFINITION, n.f. [from definite, Lat. definitionis, Fr.]

1. A short description of a thing by its properties.

In order to define poetical wit from my particular consideration of him; for propriety of thoughts and words is only to be found in him. Dryden.

2. Decision; determination.

3. [in logic.] The explication of the essence of a thing by its kind and difference.

What is man? Not a reasonable animal merely; for that is not an adequate and distinguishing definition.

DEFINITIVE. adj. [definitive, Latin.] Determine; positive; express.

Other authors write often dubbiously, even in matters wherein is expected a strict and definite truth, and withal, with great error. Brown's Vag. Errors.

I make haste to the calling and comparing of the whole work, it being indeed the very definitive form of this art, to distinguish usefully and gracefully a well chosen form. Bateman.

DEFINITIVELY. adv. [from definitive.]

Positively; decisively; expressly.

Definitively thus I answer you:

Your love defers my thanks; but my defect

Uncertainty, dubs your high request. Shakespeare.

Bellarmine faith, because we think that the body of Christ may be in many places at once, locally and visibly; therefore we say and hold, that the same body may be circumspectively and definitely in more places at once. Hall.

That Methusalem was the longest lived of all the children of Adam, we need not grant; nor is it, definitely set down by Moses.

Brown's Vag. Errors.

DEFINITIVENESS, n.f. [from definitive.]

Decisiveness.

DECLARGIBILITY. n.f. [from deflagro, Lat.] Combustibility; the quality of taking fire, and burning totally away.

We have spent more time than the opinion of the ready deflagrability, if it may so speak, of felicitates did permit us to imagine.

Bylev.

DECLAGRABLE. adj. [from deflagro, Lat.]

Having the quality of wasting away wholly in fire, without any remains.

Our chemical oils, supposing that they were exactly pure, yet they would be, as the bell spirit of wine is, but the more inflammable and deflagrable.

DECLAGRATION. n.f. [deflagratus, Lat.]

A species of fluid, which frequently made use of in chemistry, for setting fire to several things in their preparation; as in making Alchamps with fire, with salt primrose, and many others. Quincy.

The reason why the powder is not burned by the flame that plays about, is, being burnt, that the aqueous part of the spirit of wine, being imprisoned by the paper, keeps it to moist, that the flame of the superficial parts of the powder cannot be taken on it; and therefore, when the deflagration is over, you shall always find the paper mint.

Bylev.

To DEFLECT. v.a. [deflect, Lat.]

To turn aside; to deviate from a true course, or right line.

At some paws of the Aesop's the needle deflected

The arrow, but lieth in the true meridian; on the other side of the Aesop, and this side of the equator, the north point of the needle wherewith to the west. Brown's Vag. Errors.

For, did not some from a straight course deflect,

They could not meet, they could no world erect.

Blackmore.

DEFLECTION. n.f. [from deflect, Lat.]

1. Deviation; the act of turning aside.

Needles incline to the south on the other side of the equator; and at the very line, or middle circle, without deflection. Brown's Vag. Errors.

2. A turning aside, or out of the way.

In navigation. The departure of a ship from its true course.

DEFLEXURE. n.f. [from deflect, Lat.]

A bending down; a turning aside, or out of the way.

Diz.

DECLARATION.
DE F

DE FORMATION. n. f. [deformation, Fr.]
from deformatus, Lati.]
1. The act of deforming; the taking away of a woman's virginity.
2. A selection of that which is most valuable.
The laws of Normandy are, in a great measure, the derivatives of the English laws, and a transcript of them.

DÉFLOUR. v. a. [déflour, Fr.]
To ravish; to take away a woman's virginity.
As is the lust of an eneuch to defain a woman, so is he that executeth judgment with violence. 1 Pet. iv. 1.
Defy'. n.s. [from the verb.] A challenge; an invitation to fight: this is now hardly used.

Defy'er. m.s. [from defy.] A challenger; one that invites to fight; more properly defier.

Defy'ed. m.s. [from defy.] A challenge; to invite to fight; more properly defier.

God may revenge the affronts put upon them by such impudent defiers of both, as neither believe a God, nor ought to be believed by man.

Degeneracy. n.s. [from degenerate.] A departure from the virtue of our ancestors.

A deflation of that which is good.

Tis sure, we have contracted a great deal of vices and impurities by our wilful degeneracy from goodness; but that grace, which the gospel offers to us for our assistance, is sufficient for us.

The ruin of a state is generally preceded by an universal degeneracy of manners, and contempt of religion, which is entirely due at present.

3. Meanest.

There is a kind of deplorable reclusion, as well as poorest and degeneracy of spirits, in a state of slavery.

Addison.

To DEGENERATE. v.t. n. [degenerate, Lat., fr. degener, Fr. degner, Spanish.] 1. To fall from the virtue of ancestors.

2. To fall from a more noble to a base state.

When wit transgresseth decency, it degenerates into inanity and impurity.

Tillotson.

3. To fall from its kind; to grow wild or bale.

Most of those fruits that use to be gathered, if they be let of kernels or bolls, degenerate. Bacon.

Degenerate. adj. [from the verb.]

1. Unlike his ancestors; fallen from the virtue and merit of his ancestors.

Thou art like enough
To fight against me under Pietys' pay;
To dog his harts, and curst at his frown,
To view how much thou art degenerate. Shakspere.

Yet ah! a greater curse is to
BeAhma'd of them, than of thee;
Degenerate from their own great bond.

Suck'd in the court allowance'd them food. Swift.

2. Unworthy; base; departing from its kind or nature.

So must the human degenerate, all deprav'd;
Justice and temperance, truth and faith, forget!
One man except. Milton.

When a man so far becomes degenerate as to quit the principles of human nature, and to be a notorious rascal, there is commonly an injury done some person or other. Milton.

Degenerates. n.s. [from degenerate.] Degeneracy; a being grown wild, or out of kind.

Degeneration. n.s. [from degenerate.]

1. A deviation from the virtue of one's ancestors.

2. A falling from a more excellent state to one of less worth.

3. The thing changed from its primitive state.

As plants, these transplations are obvious; as that of barley into oats, of wheat into carnary; and those grains which generally arise among corn, as cockle, arsces, tullips, and other degenerations. Hervey's Flemish Dictionary.

Degener'ous. adj. [from degener, Lat.]

1. Degenerated; fallen from the virtue and merit of ancestors.

2. Vile; base; infamous; unworthy.

Let not the tumultuous violence of some men's immoderate demands ever betray me to that degenerous and slavery, which should make me strengthen them by my confedent. Shakspeare.

Shame, instead of pity, restrainst them from many base and degenerous practices. Shakspeare.

Degeneration, as it is for man too base, it seems, in 1st, seats in the female race; these rages, and, to make its blow secure, Pats vastly on, until the aim be sure. Dryden.

In a degenerate manner; badly; meanly.

How winding a spectacle is it to see heroes, like Hercules at the daffal, thus degenerously employed! Dryden of Pigty.

Declu'tion. n.s. [degeneration, Fr. from dehers, Lat.] The act or power of swelling.

When the deglution is totally abolished, the patient may be nourished by chylers. Arbuthnot on Diet.

Degradation. n.s. [degradation, Fr.]

1. A deprivation of dignity; diminution from office.

The word degradation is commonly used to denote a deprivation and removing of a man's degenerate degree.

2. Degeneration; bafeinc.

So deplorable is the degradation of our nature, that whereas we bore the image of God, we now retain only the image of men. South.

3. Diminution, with respect to strength, efficacy, or value.

4. In [painting.] A term made use of to express the lessening and rendering con- fused the appearance of distant objects in a landscape, so as they may appear there as they would do to an eye placed at that distance from them. Dict.

7. To DEGRADE. v.t. n. [degrader, Fr.]

1. To put one from his degree; to deprive him of his office, dignity, or title.

He should
Be quite degraded, like a hedgehogg twin
That doth presume to boast of gentle blood.

Shakspeare.

2. To lessen; to diminish the value of.

Nor shalt thou, by defaming to assume Man's nature, leffen or degrade thine own. Milton.

All higher knowledge in his preference fails.

Degraded. Adj.

3. To reduce from a higher to a lower state, with respect to qualities: as, gold is degraded into silver.

Degravation. n.s. [from degrarvus, of degeam, Lat.] The act of making heavy.

Degr. DEGREES. n. [degree, Fr. from gradu, Lat.]

1. Quality; rank; station; place of dignity.

It was my fortune, common to that age,
To love a lady fair, of great degree,
The which was born of noble parentage;
And set in highest degree of joy.

Dryden.

I remembranc'd the ancient received course and convenience of that discipline, which teacheth that, inferior degrees and orders in the church of God.

Baker.

Surely men of low degree are vanity, and men of high degree are a lye: to be laid in the balance, they are altogether lighter than vanity.

Siphon ill. 9.

Well then, Coleville is your name, a knight is your degree, and your place the slate. Shakspere.

Degree being vizarded,
Th' unworthy show's fair as finely the mask. Shakspeare.

This noble youth, Lord Whitfield, of high degree, Honorius was her name. Dryden.

Farmers in degrees; He a good husband, a good housewife the. Dryden.

But in rank, to compare, a common degree.

From this contagious taint of low feet? Dryden.

2. The comparative state and condition in which a thing is.

The book of Wisdom notes degrees of idolatry, making that of worshipping pitty and vile idols more gross than simply the worshipping of the creature.

Bacon.

As if there were degrees in infinite, And Heav'sal bale, rather half want perfection Than punish to excess.

Dryden.

Poety Admits of no degrees; but must be fill.

Sublimely good, or deformously ill. Rape.

3. A step or preparation to any thing.

Her first degree was by putting forth her beauties, truly in nature not to be mistaken, but as much advanced to the eye, as abased to the judgment, by art.

Dryden.

Which fright the knowledge of myself might bring.

Which to true wisdom is the first degree. Dryden.

4. Order of lineage; delicant of family.

King Latin, the life of this degree, Had Saturn author of his family. Dryden.

5. Orders or classes.

The several degrees of angels may probably have larger lites, and be endowed with capacities able to set before them, as in one picture, all their part knowledge at once.

Locke.

6. Measure; proportion.

If all the parts are equally heard as loud as one another, they will not taste, than you to that degree, that you will fancy your ears were torn in pieces. Dryden.

7. [In geometry.] The three hundred and sixtieth part of the circumference of a circle.

The space of one degree in the heavens is accounted to answer to fifty miles on earth.

8. [In arithmetick.] A degree consists of three figures, viz. three places, comprehending units, tens, and hundreds; to three hundred and sixty-five degrees.

Cocker's Arithmetick.

9. The division of the lines upon several forts of mathematical instruments.

10. [In music.] The intervals of sounds, which are usually marked by little lines.

Dict.

11. [In philosophy.] The vehement or slackness of the hot or cold quality.

The second, third, and fourth degrees of heat are more cally introduced than the first: everyone is both a preparative and a depl to the next. South.

By DEGREES. adv. Gradually; by little and little.

Their bodies are exercised in all abilities both of doing and suffering, and their minds acquired by degrees with danger.

Don not this infernal medium, in passing out of water, glass, crystal, and other compact and dense bodies, into empty spaces, grow dener and denser by degrees?

Bauing in triumph now swell the bold notes; In broken air, trembling, the wild music floats; This degree, however ruinous and fatal, The strain subsides, And melt away,

In a dying, dying fall.

Pope.

A period.
DEJ

A person who is addicted to play or gaming, though he took but little delight in it at first, by degrees contracts a strong inclination towards it.

DEJUGATION, n.s. [deputatio, Latin.]
A putting.

DEJUHRT. v. a. [dehortare, Latin.]
To dissuade; to advise to the contrary.

DEHORTATION, n. f. [from dehortare, Latin.]
Dissuasion; a counselling to the contrary; advice against something.

DEHORATE, n. f. [from dehortare, Latin.]
A dissuader; an advisor to the contrary.

DEICIDE. n. f. [from deus et cardo, Latin.]
The murder of God; the act of killing God. It is only used in speaking of the death of our blessed Saviour.

DEICY, adj. [dejeicere, Latin.]
Defective; defective.

DEJCT. v. a. [decejus, Latin.]
1. To call down; to afflict; to grieve; to depress; to sink; to discourage; to crush.

2. To change the form with grief; to make to look sad.

DEJECTION. n. f. [from dejecere, Latin.]
The state of being cast down; a lowness of spirits; melancholy depression of mind.

DEJECTION, n. f. [dejection, French, from dejecere, Latin.]
1. Lowness of spirits; melancholy depression of mind.

2. Weakness; inability.

The effects of an alchakefruit; in a great degree, are thirst and a dejection of appetite, which produces often more than others.

Arbrean on Aliments.

DEI

[In medicine] Going to stool.

The liver should continually separate the choler from the blood, and empty it into the intestines; where it is good with it, not only to provoke defecation, but also to attenuate the chyle.

Ray on the Creation.

DEJECUTION, n. f. [from dejectio, Latin.]
The excrement.

A digestive opposite to putridity is too great dulness, the symptoms of which are excess of animal secretions; as of perspiration, sweat, urine, liquid defecation, leanness, weakness, and thirst.

Dejection, n. f. [from dejecere, Latin.]
A taking of a seminal oath.

DEJECPTION, n. f. [dejectio, Latin.]
The act of defecating, or making a god.

DEFORM. adj. [from deos und forma, Latin.]
Of a godlike form.

To DEIFY. v. a. [deifer, French; from deus und fisc, Latin.]
1. To make a god of; to adore as god; to transfer into the number of the divinities.

2. To praise excessively; to extol one as if he were a god.

DEJERATION, n. f. [from dejerat, Latin.]
Deterioration; decline; reduction; loss.

DEJERATION, n. f. [from dejerat, Latin.]
A falling down of the humours; the waterinhibition of the eyes; a weeping much.

DEJERATION, n. f. [deletior, Latin.]
A weaning from the breast.

DEJERATION, n. f. [delequis, Latin.]
[With physicians.] Bearing or falling down. It is used in speaking of the womb, and the like.

To DELATE. v. a. [from delatus, Latin.]
1. To carry; to convey.

Try exactly the time which is found is delayed.

2. To accuse; to inform against.

DELATION. n. f. [delatio, Latin.]
1. A carriage; conveyance.

In delation of founds, the chances of them preferred thim, and causeth them to be heard further.

It is certain, that the delation of light is in an infant.

There is a plain delation of the found from the teeth to the instrument of hearing.

2. An accusation; an impeachmen.

DELATUR. n. f. [delator, Latin.]
An accuser; an informer.

What were the harpies but flatterers, delators, and inexplicable courtiers? Sandy's Travels.

Men have proved their own delaturs, and discovered their own most important secrets.

Government of the Tongue.

No sooner was that small colony, whereon the depopulated earth was to be replanted, come forth of the ark, but we meet with Cham, a delator to his own father, inviting his brethren to that execrable spectacle of these two naked naked.

Government of the Tongue.

To DELAY. v. a. [from delayer, French.]
1. To defer; to put off.

And when the people law that Moses delayed to come down out of the mount, the people gathered themselves together unto Aaron. Exod. xxix. i.

Cyrus.
DEL

cy, found, on him his force essay'd. For her was to the tenth year delay'd. Dryden.
2. To hinder; to frustrate; to keep suspended.
3. To detain, stop, or retard the course of.
Thyself, whose awful straits have oft delay'd
The huddling brook to bear his madrigal.
Milton.
Shed with a-dying and mixing with the burning of maddening matrons, bears the bride along;
Wandering through woods and wilds, and devious ways.
And with their arts the Trojan match delay'd.
Dryden.
Be mindful, goddes, of thy promise made
Maud fast Ulysses ever delay'd? Pope.

To DELATE, v. t. To stop; to cease from action.
There seem to be certain bounds to the quickness and slowness of the succession of those ideas one to another in our minds, beyond which they cannot be delay'd. Locke.

DELAY, n. f. [from the verb.]
1. A deferring; procrastination; lingering indiscretion.
I have heard that fearful commenting is least favor'd to small delay;
Delay leads impotent and false-4'd beggary.
Shakespeare's Richard III.
The conduct of our lives, and the management of our great concerns, will not bear delay. Locke.
2. Stay; stop.
I had a keeper charm'd, the chieft without delay.
Psal. xcviii., and took the irremovable way.
Dryden.

DELAVER, n. f. [from delay.] One that declares; a defterer.
DELETABLE, adj. [deli-cabili-s, Lat.]
Pleasing; delightful.
Evening now approach'd.
For we have also our evenings and our morn;
We ours for change desired, and mine.
Milton.
He brought thee into this delightful grove.
This garden planted with the trees of God;
Delicate both to behold and take.
Some of his attributes, and the manifestations thereof, are not only highly delicate to the in-telllective faculty, but are suitably and easily conceived by us, because apparent in his works; at his goodness, beneficence, wisdom, and powers.
Hume.
The apple's outward form, Delicate, the par-ticle's clain beguiles;
Till that with withering breath, and spattering noise,
He takes the bitter mor-tal.
Evadne.

DELICATENESS, n.f. [from delicate.]
Delights; pleasantness.
DELICATELY, adv. Delightfully; pleasantly.

DELECTATION, n. f. [delectatio, Lat.]
Pleasure; delight.
Out break the tears for joy and delectation.

To DELICATE, v. t. [delicat, Latin.]
1. To fend away.
2. To fend upon an embassy.
3. To entreat; to commit to another's power and jurisdiction.

As God hath imprinted his authority in several parts upon several classes of men, as princes, pa-riots, spiritual guides; so he hath also delegated and committed part of his care and provision unto us. Taylor.
As God is the universal monarch, so we have all the relation of fellow-subjects to him; and can pretend no further jurisdiction over each other, than what he has delegated to us.

Why do's he wake the corresponding room,
And fill her willing lamp with liquid light;
Commanding her, with delicat'd powers,
To beautify the world, and light the night? Prior.

4. To appoint judges to hear and deter-monte particular cause.

DELEGATE, n. f. [deli-gatus, Latin.] A deputy; a commission; a vicar; any one that is sent to act for, or represent,
another.
If after her
Any shall live, which dare tree good perfect,
E'ry such perfon is her delegate,
'T accomplish that which should have been her tree. Dryden.
They must be severe exactors of accounts from their delegates and ministers of justice. Taylor.
Let the young Austrian then her tears pour,
Great as he, her delegate in wars,
Priez.
Elected by Jove, his delegate of sway,
With joyous pride the summons I do obey. Pope.

DELEGATE, adj. [deligatus, Latin.] Deputed; sent to act for, or represent, another.

PRINCIPLES in judgment, and their delegate judges, must judge the causes of all persons impartially and impartially.
Taylor.

DELEGATE, n. f. [delegate, Latin.]
Deputed; sent to act for, or represent, another.

DETECT, v. t. Delightfully; by which all causes of appeal, by way of devolution from either of the archbishops, are decided.
Ayiffe's Parergon.

DELIBERATION, n. f. [delicat, Latin.]
1. A finding away.
2. A putting in commission.
3. The assignation of a debt to another.

DELETERIOUS, adj. [deliteri-us, Latin.]
Deadly; destructive; of a poisonous quality.
Many things, neither deliberius by substance or quality, are yet destructive by figures, or some occasional activity.
Brown.

DELETERY, adj. [deliterius, Latin.]
Deadly; destructive; poisons.
Nor doctor epidemic.
Though wick'd with deliterious medicines
Which whoever took is dead since,
Ever fent to vaunt a colony.
To both the under worlds as he.
Hudibras.

DELETERIOUSLY, adv. [deliterious, Latin.]
1. Of rain, or for blotting out.
2. A defraction.
Indeed, if there be a total deleration of every perfon of the opposing party or country, then the victory is complete, because none remains to call it in question. Hume.

DELI, n. f. [from belian, Saxon, to delet, dig.]
1. A mine; a quarry; a pit dug.
Yet could not such mines, without great pains and costs, if at all, he wrought the doff would be
f. flown with waters; that no engines or machines could suffice to lay and keep them dry.
Ray on the Crusades.

2. Earthen ware; counterfeit China ware made at Delphi.
That better harder for a piece of diet.
Nay, not for China's wide domain life.
Smart.

DELIBERATION, n. f. [deliberate, Latin.]
An essay; a tale.

7. DELIBERATE, u. n. [delibere, Lat.]
To think, in order to choice; to hesitate.

A confiding stick, reflecting cause,
Which freely moves and acts by reason's laws;
That can dissever means and things,
Their due connection with the end design'd.
Blackmore.
DEL

Delicacy, which may make him afraid of being spoken ill of. [Admon.]

10. Weakness of constitution.

11. Smallness; tenacity.

DElicate, adj. [delicate, French.] 1. Nice; pleasing to the taste; of an agreeable flavor.

The choosing of a delicate before a more ordinary dish, is to be done as other human actions are, in which there are no degrees and precise natural limits described. [Taylor.] 2. Deleterious to the health.

A choice of curious meats.

3. Choice; select; excellent.

4. Pleading to the senses.

5. Fine; not coarse; consisting of small parts.

As much blood passeth through the lungs as through all the body; the circulation is quicker, and last greater, and their structure is extremely delicate. [Avicenna.

6. Of polite manners; not gross, or coarse.

7. Soft; effeminate; unable to bear hardships.

Wounds this army, of such sorts and charge, Lay, all the princes and tender princes. [Shakespeare.]

Tender and delicate persons must needs be oft angry, they have so many things to trouble them, which more robust natures have little sent of. [Bacon.]

8. Pure; clear.

Where they most bread and haunt, I have found the air is delicate. [Shakespeare.]

DElicately, adv. [from delicate.]

1. Beautifully; with soft elegance.

That which will distinguish his style from all other poets, is the elegance of his words, and the sonorities of his verse: there is nothing so delicately turned in all the Roman language. [Dryden.]

The gods like vassals and loyal slaves.

To their changes half their charms were lost.

Such happy spots the wise admiter takes,

Fire by desire, and delicacy week. [Pope.

2. Daintily.

Eat not delicately, or nicely; that is, be not troublesome to thyself or others in the choice of thy meats, or the delicacy of thy tastes. [Taylor.]

3. Choicely.

4. Politely.

5. Effemintly.

DElicateness, n.f. [from delicate.]

The rate of being delicate; tendernees; fineness; effeminacy.

The delicate woman among you would not adventure to set the sole of her foot upon the ground, for delicatessons and tenerees. [Jesus Christ.

DElicates, n.f. [from delicate.]

Necessities; rarities; that which is choice and dainty.

The shepherd's homely coat,

His cold thin drink out of his Master's bottle,

All which suffice and sweetly he enjoys,

And this to a prince's delicacy. [Shakespeare.

Their appetites not only feed

With delicatessons of leaves and marly bread,

But with thyicks repig the rankest land. [Dryden.]

When the choice was delicate he knew

And can regale himself withtoast and cheese. [King's Country.

DElicacies, n.f. pl. [delicacies, Latin.] Pleasures.

This word is merely French.

And now he has poured out his idle mind

In these delightful sentiments.

Having his warlike weapons cast behind,

And flowers in pleasures and vain playing toys. [Sparrow.

DElicious, adj. [delicious, French, from delicat., Latin.] Sweet; delicate; that affords delight; agreeable; charming; grateful to the sense or mind.

It is highly probable, that upon Adam's discontent. Almighty God cast him out of Paradise, the fairest and most delicate part of the earth, into other the more barren and unpleasant. [Woodward.

In his left hand his only wit display,

Like the rich fruit he sing'd in decay. [Smith.

Still on that bright enamour'd let us lie,

Still drink delicacy from thou by thy. [Pope.

DEliciously, adv. [from delicious.]

Sweetly; pleasantly; delightfully.

To be esteem'd and beloved for so much interest and sorrow given. [Rev. iv. 7.

DEliciousness, n.f. [from delicious.]

Delight; pleasure; joy.

It is loseth in its own delicious, And in the taste confounds the appetite. [Shakespeare.]

Let no man judge of himself, by the blessings and the way of the conversation itself, by any infirmity, by the good and delicatessons, which he sometimes perceives, and at other times does not perceive. [Taylor.

DElication, n.f. [delicatio, Latin.] A binding up in chains.

The third intention is deligation, or retaining the parts is joined together. [Wynman's Surgery.

DElight, n.f. [delicet, French, from delicat., Latin.]

1. Joy; content; satisfaction.

And commanded his servants, saying, among with David secretly, and took, and brought the king, that delight in thee, and all his servants love thee. [1 Sam. xviii. 22.

2. That which gives delight.

Come, let us reason together; we will call upon the light, And the soul of our delight. [Ps. xiv. 5.

We'll charm the air to give a sound,

While you perform your antick round. [Schiller.]

These Vagabonds was not more the delight of human kind; the universal empire made him more known, and more powerful, but could not make him more beloved. [Dryden.]

That was the way of his love, and his delight.

New in his thoughts, and ever in his sight. [Dryden.

To DELIGHT. v. a. [delectar, Latin.]

To please; to content; to satify; to afford pleasure.

The princes delighting their conceptions with confirming titles, he was the only wherein the ecclesiastics differed from the land-princes, had pleasant entertainment. [Sidney.

Delight thyself also in the Lord, and he shall give you the desires of your heart. [Ps. xxxvii. 4.

Your feet, whereas some are been, delighted with flowers, and their pleasantness; others beaten, delighted with other kinds of viands. [Locke.

He heard, he took, and putting down his thrath, Delighted, filled all the large luxuriant draught. [Pope.

To DELIGHT, v. n. To have delight or pleasure in. It is followed by in.

By both my lord, the King, delight in this thing? [Sparrow.

Blessed is the man that searcheth the Lord, that delighteth greatly in his commandments. [Psalm xlvii. 4.

DElightful, adj. [from delight and full.] Pleasant; charming; full of delight.

He was given to praising in so immoveable a sort, that he did not only bar himself from the delicious, but almost from the necessity, of the world. [Spenser.

No spring nor sunshine, on the mountain steep,

Smiles with gay fruits or with delightful green. [Addison.

DElightfully, adv. Pleasantly; charmingly; with delight.

O voice! once heard

Delightfully, increase and multiply;

Now dear to hear! [Milton.

DEligfhfulness, n.f. [from delightful.]

Pleasure, content, satisfaction.

That can deliver from extremity of grief

And to our chief delightfulness

Where but a being place is one portion. [Sidney.

This idea is from the excellency of the object; but des not altogether take away the delightfulness of the knowledge. [Tilson.

DElightfulness. adj. [from delight.]

Pleasant; delightfull.

The words therewith being to anoint, the anointing of them to show and intenerate, and the whole periods and compass of his speech to delightful for the amazement, and to grace for the strangers. [Spenser.

God has furnished every one with the same means of exciting hunger and thirst for delightful vigour. [Greeks.

DElightfully, adv. [from delightfulness.] Pleasantly; in a delightful manner.

DElightfulness. n.f. [from delightfulness.] Pleasenness; delightfulness.

To DELIGHTED. v. a. [delicatus, Latin.]

1. To make the first draught of a thing; to design; to sketch.

2. To paint; to represent a true likeness in a picture.

The licentia pictura is very large: with the same reason they may delineate old Nature like Adam's, however with Helen's face, and Time with Abolphon's head. [Brown.

3. To describe; to set forth in a lively manner.

If thou seest to delineate the region in which God first breathed his delightful garden. [Ridolph.

I have not here time to delineate you the glories of God's heavenly kingdom; nor, indeed, could I tell you, if I had, what the height, thick of that place and portion it. [Ridolph.

DElinination, n.f. [delinatio, Latin.]
The first draught of a thing.

In the orthographical schemes, there should be a true delineation, and the just dimensions. [Mortimer.

DElimination, n.f. [delinientum, Latin.]
A mitigating, or allaying.

DElinquency, n.f. [delinquensia, Latin.]
A fault; a failure in duty; a misdeed.

They never pass the greatest and most intolerable delinquency of the tumults, and their victims. [King Charles.

Thy years determine like the age of man,

That thou shouldst fill my delinquens require,

And with variety of tortures live. [Sardier's Paraphrase of Job.

A delinquens ought to be cited in the place or jurisdiction where the delinquency was committed. [Addison.

DElinquent, n.f. [from delinquens, Latin.] An offender; one that has committed a crime or fault.

Such an enormous rate,

That sooner will accede the magistrate

Than the delinquens; and will rather grieve

The treason is not sated, than believe. [Hunt.

All ruined, not by war, or any other disasters, but by justice and sentences, as delinquents and criminals. [Addison.

He laid, upon frivolous forms, been sent for as a delinquens, and been brought upon his knees. [Dryden.

To DELIQUATE. v. n. [deliquere, Lat.]
To melt; to be dissolved.
It will be resolved into a liquor very analogous to that which the chemists make of salt of tatar, left in moist cellars to deliquate. Boyle.

Such an emulsion as we see made by the mixture of some chemical liquors, as all of vitriol and deliquated salt of tatar. Cudworth.

DELIQUATION. n. f. [deliquation, Latin.] A melting; a deliquating. BOYLE.

DELIRIUM. n. [Latin.] A chymical term. A distillation by dissolving any calcined matter, by hanging it up in moist cellars, into a lixivious humour.

DELI'RANT. n. f. [deliramentum, Latin.] A doing or delirious fancy. DICK.

To DELIRATE. v. n. [delira, Latin.] To dote; to rave; to talk or act idly. DICK.

DELI'RATION. n. f. [deliratio, Latin.] Doting; folly; madness.

DELIRIOUS. adj. [delirius, Lat.] Light-headed; saving; dotting.

The people about him said he had been for some hours in a disorder: I saw him he had his understanding as well as I ever knew. Swift.

On bed Delirious slumber, deep in his pillow lies. Thomson.

DELI'RIOUS, n. f. [from delirium, Latin.] A delirating; a chiding; a contending. DICK.

To DELIVER, v. n. [deliver, French.]

1. To set free; to relieve.

Thick the captive old deliver The captive thus gave up his quiver. Prior.

2. To save; to rescue.

Deliver me, O my God, out of the hand of the wicked, out of the hand of the unrighteous and cruel man. Psalm lxi.

I was like to be apprehended for the witch of Branford; but that my admirable desertion of war, counteracting the action of an old woman, delivered me. Swift.

3. To surrender; to put into one's hands; to resign; to give up; to yield.

In any case thou shalt deliver him the pledge again when the sun goeth down. Deut. xxviii. 12.

And they took Daniel, his master, and they delivered him down to this company. 1. Sam. Vii. 4.

They obeyed not thy commandments, therefore thou hast delivered us for a spoil, and unto captivity. 2. Kings ii.

4. To give; to offer; to present.

Now therefore receive no more money of your requisitions, but deliver it for the breaches of the house. 2. Kings. vii.

Thou shalt deliver Pharaoh's vapour into his hand, after the former manner, when thou tookst the better. Gen. x. 13.

It was no wonder that they, who at such a time might be outraged in frame and deliver such a petition, would not be satisfied by further answer. DODDRY.

To DELIVER. n. f. [from deliver,] A botanist so fat forth the content of all nations and ages, in the composition of the captivating and debasing of plants, matters, and foreign tyrants, not only as lawful, but as monstrous even of divine favouring and this, although the deliverer was unkind to the one end of the world under the other. By that fed It meant thy great Deliverer, who shall bruise The serpent's head. Milton.

Andrew Doria has a flame erected to him at the entrance of the doge's palace, with the glorious titles of deliverer of the commonwealth. Addison.

Him their deliverer Europe does confess; All tongues exalt him, all religious blest. Halier.

2. A relater; one that communicates something by speech or writing.

Divers chemical experiments, delivered by several authors, have been believed false, only because the demonstrations were not as well explained, or quixytly disproved, as those that were used by the deliverers of these experiments. Boyle.

DELIVER. n. f. [from the verb.]

1. The act of delivering.

2. Release; rescue; saving.

He in a word delivered his daughter.

That he would labour my delivery Shakespeare.

3. A surrender; act of giving up.

After the delivery of your royal father's person into the hands of the army, I undertaking to the queen mother, that I would find some means to get access to him, he was pleased to send me. DICK.

Nor did he in any degree contribute to the delivery of his house, which was at first imagined, because it was ill, or not all delivered. Clarendon.

4. Utterance; pronunciation; speech.

What if we suppose the strophe himself do not speak, for the saving forms of the word God? may not he reason, to what certain kind of delivery, but howsoever the same shall be made known. H使用.

I was charmed with the ghastliness of his figure and delivery, as well as with his discourse. Addison.

5. Use of the limbs; activity.

Mundus could not perform any action on horse or foot more strongly or deliver that strength more nimbly, or become the delivery much more gracefully, or employ all more virtuously. Sidney.

The ear was the taller, and much the stronger; but the voice had the higher limits, and finer delivery. Warton.

Childbirth.

Like as a woman with child, that draweth near the time of her delivery, is in pain, and crieth not.

Delu. n. f. [from delu, Dutch.] A pit; a hole in the ground; any cavern in the earth, wider than a ditch and narrower than a valley. Obsolete.

Dell. n. f. [from Delphi, the name of the capital of Delphi.] A fine sort of earthen ware.

A foper worthy of heret; Fine earthenware in five plates of dish. Swift.

DELTOIDE. adj. [from delta, the fourth letter of the Greek alphabet; so called by reason of its resembling this letter.] An epitaph applied to a triangular muscle arising from the clavicle, and from the process of the same, whose action is to raise the arm upward.

Cut still more of the deltoid muscle, and carry them away. Sharp's Gray's Anatomy.

DELL'ORLE. adj. [from dell'orle.] Liable to be deceived; that is candidly impudic on: rather deludible.

Not well under standing ostentation, he is not so ready to deceive himself, as to falsify unto himself whole coagitation in no way dell'orle. F advert, Falstaff.
DEL
To DELUDE, v. a. [delude, Lat.] 1. To beguile; to cheat; to deceive; to imposture. O, give me leave, I have deluded you; Twas neither Charles, nor yet the duke. Shakespeare's Henry VI. Let not the Treasons, with a figno'd presence Of pow'r's dead peace, delude the lawful princes. Dryd. 2. To disappoint; to frustrate. DELUER. n. f. [from delude.] A beguiler; a deceiver; an impostor; a cheat; a false pretender. Say, flatterers, fly, all false deludes speak; Answer me this, ere ye my heart doth break. Grenville. And thus the sweet deluders tune their song. Pope. To DELVE. v. n. [belane, Sax. delven, Dutch; perhaps from τάξει, a dog.] 1. To dig; to open the ground with a spade. It shall go hard, But I will delve one yard below the mines, And blow them at the devil's hazard. Shakespeare. In the course of common depth your threshing floor; With temper'd clay then fill and face it o'er. Dryden. The filthy stone with deluding snow. Philips. The rooted root'd undermine. Shakespeare. DELVE. n. f. [from the verb.] A ditch; a pit; a pail; a den; a cave. He by and by His feeble feet directed to the cry; Which so to study delude or charm brought at last, Where Mammon er'd did fund his treasury. Spenser. Such a light and mettled dance Saw you never yet in France; And by lead, or for the names, That round girdle like grizzle-fores, Which they dig out fro' the delve, For their barns bread, wrens, and doves. Handley. DEM DELUSION. n. f. [delusus, Lat.] 1. The act of deluding; a cheat; guile; deceit; treachery; fraud; collusion; falsehood. 2. The state of one deluded. 3. A false representation; illusion; error; a chimera thought. Who therefore finds in thee The wishful, finds her not, or, by delusion, Milton. 1. waking, view'd with grief the lying sun. And fondly mourns the dear delusion gone. PARRY. DELUSIVE. adj. [from delusus, Lat.] Apt to deceive; beguiling; imposing on. When, for'd with passion, we attack the false Delusive lights and brittle vows we hord. Prior. The happy whimsey you purport, Till you at length believe it true; Caught by your own delusin art, You fancy first, and then affort. Prior. While the base and groveling multitude were listening to the delusive delites, those of more erect aspect and exalted spirit separated themselves from the rest. Tatler, No. 81. Phenomena to delusus, that it is very hard to escape imposition and imitate. Woodward. DELUSORY. adj. [from delusus, Latin.] Apt to deceive. This confidence is founded on no better foundation than a very insipid. Grenville. DEMAGOGUE. n. f. [διαμαγωγός]. A ringleader of the rabble; a popular and factious orator. Who were the chief demagogues and patrons of tumults, to fend for them, to flatter and embroil them. Lord. King George. A plausible, insignificant word, in the mouth of an expert demagogue, is a dangerous and devious weapon. Swift. Demagogues and Ciceros, though each all them, a leader or, as the Greeks called a, demagogue, in a popular state, yet seem to differ in their practice. Swift. DEMAIN. DEMAIN. n. f. [domain, French.] 1. That land which a man holds originally of himself, called dominium by the civilians, and opposed to feudum, or fee, which signifies those that are held of a superior lord. It is sometimes used also for a distinction between those lands that the lord of the manor has in his own hands, or in the hands of his lepse, demised or let upon a rent for a term of years or for life, and such other lands appertaining to the said manor as belong to free or copyholders. Phillips. 3. Elate in. Having now provided A gentlemen of noble parentage, Of fair demesnes, youthful, and nobly allied, Stark. And such a noble and a royal jurisdiction and dominion, though the lands of that county in demesne were possessed for the most part by the ancient inhabitants. Davies. 3. Land adjoining to the manor, kept in the lord's own hand. Those acts for planting forest trees have hither to been wholly insufficient, except about the persons of a few gentlemen and even these in general, very unskilfully made. Swift. To DEMAND. v. n. [demander, Fr.] 1. To claim; to ask for with authority. The pound of flesh, which I demand of him, Is dearly bought; 'tis mine, and I will have it. Shakespeare. 2. To question; to interrogate. And when Usak was come unto him, David
DEM
DEMAND. n. f. [demande, French.] 1. A claim; a challenging; the asking of any thing with authority. This manner is by the decree of the watchers, and the demand by the word of the holy ones. Dan. iv. 17. Giving vent, gives life and strength, to our appetites; and he that has the confidence to turn his wishes into demands, will be but a little way from thinking he ought to obtain them. Locke. 2. A question; an interrogation. 3. The calling for a thing in order to purchase it. My book-seller tells me, the demand for those my pages increases daily. Addison. 4. In law.] The asking of what is due. It hath also a proper signification distinguished from plaint; for all civil actions are pursued either by demands or plaints, and the purfer is called demandant or plaintiff. There are two manners of demands, the one of deed, the other in law: in deed, as in every practice, there is express demand; in law, as every entry in land-deeds for rent, taking or setting of goods, and such like acts, which may be done without any words, are demands in law. Broughton. DEMANDELABLE. adj. [from demand.] That may be demanded; requested; asked for. All sums demandable, for licence of alienation to be made of lands held in chief, have been played in the way to the hanger. Broughton. DEMANDANT. n. f. [from demand.] 1. He who is actor or plaintiff in a real action, because he demanded lands. Coke. 2. A plaintiff; one that demands redef. One of the witnesses deposed, that dining on a Sunday with the demandant, whose wife had sat below the figure's lady at church, the said wife dropped some expressions, as if she thought her husband ought to be knighted. Spicarius. DEMANDEUR. n. f. [demandeur, Fr.] 1. One that requires a thing with authority. 2. One that asks a question. 3. One that asks in a thing in order to purchase it. They grow very fat and fat, which also bettereth their tills, and delivereth them to the demandants; and also all factions. Corne. 4. A dicker; one that demands a debt. DEMANDE. n. f. [from demener, Fr.] A mien; pretence; carriage; demeanour; deportment. At his feet, with thronorial demeanors, And deadly hues, an armed corse did lie. Spenser. To DEMANDEAN. v. a. [from demener, Fr.] 1. To behave; to carry one's self. Thos
DEM.

Siult. i,i,aie/'pttirt't grant Dia. It
The partly mixture that god dempertral It
a Ptctr. ball and Miltn. for Cijrtcn. length.
expsiiled defert.
Snvifr. advar.,
mak-
See carries mighty
Jal^a,,. flinuld Milton.
To fortune [d,mtnter,YT.}
pi.
s
Demi-caknon.
Deme'sion.
Deme'sed.
2.
Deme'mtation. n.s. [dememt, Lat.] Carri-
riage; behaviour.
Of fe unsupported a pride he was, that where his deads might well flir envy, his demeneor did did rather breed disdain.
Angels best like us when we are most like unto them in all parts of decent demeancour.

Deme'aneour n.s. [demener, Fr.] Carriage; behaviour.
2.
To leflan; to debate; to undervalue.
Numbcr of doubts. Ambitios is read
EHe he would never to demens himself. Shakeky.

Deme'aneour n.s. [demener, Fr.] Carriage; behaviour.
2.
To leflan; to debate; to undervalue.
Numbcr of doubts. Ambitios is read
EHe he would never to demens himself. Shakeky.

Demi-can'nor Ordinary. A great gun fix inches four eights diameter in the bore, twelve foot long. It carries a five inches one sixtieth diameter, and thirty-fire pounds weight.

Demi-can'nor of the lovest Size. A gun fix inches and eight parts diameter in the bore, twelve foot long. It carries a ball of fix inches five eights diameter, and thirty-fix pounds weight.

What! this a fleece? 'tis like a demi-cannon.
Shakespeare.

Ten engines, that shall be of equal force either to a cannon or demi-cannon, culverin or demi-cul-verin, may be framed at the same price that one of
there will amount to.

Demi-cul'verin n.s. [deemi and cul've-rin.]

Demi-cul'verin of the lovest Size. A gun four inches two eighths diameter in the bore, and ten foot long. It carries a ball four inches diameter, and nine pounds weight.

Demi-cul'verin Ordinai'y. A gun four inches four eights diameter in the bore, ten foot long. It carries a ball four inches two eighths diameter, and ten pounds eleven ounces weight.

Demi-cul'verin, elder Sort. A gun four inches and fix eights diameter in the bore, ten foot one third in length. It carries a ball four inches four eighth parts diameter, and twelve pounds eleven ounces weight.

Military Dictionary.

They continue a perpetual volley of demi-culverins. Raleigh.
The army left two demi-culverins, and two other good guns.

Demi-devil. n.s. [demi and devil.] Partaking of infernal nature; half a devil.
Will you, I pray, demand that demi-devil,
Why he hath thus enhar'd my soul and body?
Shakespeare's Othello.

Demi-god. n.s. [deemi and god.] Partaking of divine nature; half a god;
an hero produced by the cohabitati of divinities with mortals.
He took his leave of them, whole eyes bate him farewell with tears, making temples to him as to a demi-god.
Shakespeare. Othello.

Be gods, or angels, demi-gods.
Transported demi-gods flood round,
And men grew heroes at the sound,
End'med with glory's charms.

Pope,
Nay, half in heaven, except (what's mighty odd)
A fit of vapours clouds this demi-god.
Pope.

Demi-lance. n.s. [deemi and lance.]
A light lance, a short pike; a half-pike.
On their fiel'ds he's head's demi-lancers wore
Small pennons, which their ladies colours bore.

Dryden.

Light demi-lances from afar they throw,
Fellen'd with leathern cloths, to call the foe.
Dryden.

Demi-man. n.s. [demi man.] Half man; a term of reproach.
We must adventure this battle, lest we perish
by the complaints of this lurching demi-man.
Routier.

Demi-wolf. n.s. [deemi and wolf.] Half a wolf; a mongrel dog between a dog and wolf: lyraica.

Spanish, cur.
Show'ds, water-rugs; and demi-wolves, are el'den
All by the name of segt. Shakespeare's Maritilla.

Demise. n.s. [from demetres, demets, de-misf, Fr.] Death; decease. It is seldom but in formal and ceremonious language.

About a month before the demise of queen Anne,
the author retired.
Swift.

To Demo'se. v. a. [demin, demis, Fr.] To grant at one's death; to grant by will; to bequeath.

My executor shall not have power to demise my lands to be purchased.
Swifts Liti Will.

Demo'ssion. n.s. [demission, Latin. begradation; diminution of dignity; depreffion.

Tolerable rigour is worse than a disgrace demo'sion of sovereign authority.

L'Estrange.

To Demo't. v. a. [demit, Lat.] To depress; to hang down; to let fall.

When they are in their pride, that is, advancing their train, if they decline their neck to the ground, they pretend to demise and let fall the fame.
Brown's Polgar Eerrars.

DE'MON. One of the three forc's of government; that in which the sovereign power is neither lodged in one man, nor in the nobles, but in the collective body of the people.

While many of the savants, by industry and virtue, arrive at riches and esteeem, then the nature of the government inclines to a democracy.

Lacks.

Democra'tical. adj. [from democracy.]
Pertaining to a popular government;
popular.

They are still within the line of vulgarity, and are democratical enemies to truth.
Brown's Polgar Eerrars.

As the government of England has a mixture of democratical in it, for the light is partly in the people.

To Demo'sh. v. a. [demis, Fr. demolier, Lat.] To throw down buildings;

to raz:; to destroy.

I expected the fabric of my hook would long since have been demolished, and biged even with the ground.

Red lightning play'd along the firmament,
And their demolished works to pieces rent.
Dryden.

Demolisher. n.s. [from demolish.] One that throws down buildings; a destroyer; a layer waffe.

Demolition. n.s. [from demolish.] The act of overthrowing or demolishing buildings; destruction.

Two gentlemen should have the direction in the demolition of Dunkirk.

DE'MON. n.s. [demon, Latin; eisouan.]
A spirit; generally an evil spirit; a devil.

I felt him frille, and now I for him fly'
Cur'd demi! O f or ever broken lie
Thee false diabole, by which I inward blest!
Prior.

Demo'niacal. adj. [from demon.]

DE'MONIAK. 1. Belonging to the devil; devilish.
His, all unknow.'
Shall chaie thee with the terror of his voice
From thy demoniac mother, possession soul.
Milton.

2. Influenced by the devil; produced by diabolical possession.

Demoniac pluralis, making melancholy. Milton.

DE'MONIAK.
DEMONSTRATIVE. adv. [from demonstratio.] 1. With evidence not to be opposed or doubted.

No man, in matters of this life, requires an assurance either of the good which he desirous, or of the evil which he avoids, from arguments demonstratively certain.

First, That feet were only made to move. Prior.

2. Clearly; plainly; with certain knowledge.

Demonstratively understanding the simplicity of perfection, It was not in the power of earth to work them from it. Brow.

DEMONSTRATOR. n. s. [from demonstrare.] One that proves; one that teaches; one that demonstrates.

DEMONSTRATORY. adj. [from demonstrare.] Having the tendency to demonstrate.

DEMONSTRABLE. adj. [demonstrabilis, Lat.] That which may be proved beyond doubt or contradiction; that which may be made not only probable but evident.

DEMOSTRANT. n. [from demonstrare.] In such a manner as admits of certain proof; evidently; beyond possibility of contradiction.

DEMONSTRATION. n. s. [demonstratio.] 1. The highest degree of deductive or argumentative evidence; the strongest degree of proof; such proof as not only evinces the position proved to be true, but thaws the contrary position to be absurd and impalpable. What appeareth to be true by strong and invincible demonstration, such as wherein it is not by any way possible to be deceived, thereunto the mind doth necessarily yield. Hooker.

DEMONSTRATION. n. s. [demonstratio.] Where the agreement or disagreement of any thing is plainly and clearly perceived, it is called demonstration. Locke.

1. Indubitable evidence of the senses or reason.

Which way forever we turn ourselves, we are encountered with clear evidences and sensible demonstrations of a Deity. Thomson.

DEMONSTRATIVE. adj. [demonstratious, Latin.] 1. Having the power of demonstration; invincibly conclusive; certain.

An argument necessary and demonstrative, is such as being propounded unto any man, and understood, the man cannot choose but inwardly yield. Hooker.

2. Having the power of expressing clearly and certainly.

Painting is necessary to all other arts, because of the need which they have of demonstrative figures, which often give more light to the understanding than the clearest discourses. Dryden.

2. Grave; affectedly modest: it is now generally taken in a sense of contemt.

After a demonstrative train of reflection, I tell thee I know my place, as I would they should do theirs. Shakespeare.

There be many wise men, that have secret hearts and tranquility of counsels, that would be done with a demonstrative stabbing of your eyes sometime. Bacon.

A cat lay and looked to demonstrate as if there had been neither life nor soul in her. L'Estrange.

So cat, transform'd, fat gravely and demonstratively, Till mock'd appear'd, and thought himself secure. Swift.

Jove sent and found, far in a country remote, Truth, innocence, good-nature, look fair; From whom ingredients, first, the detest'd boy Pick'd the demons, the awkward, and the coy. Pope.

To DEMURE. v. n. [from the noun.] To look with an affected modesty; not used. Your wife Octavia, with her modest eyes, And still conclusion, shall acquire no honour, Judging upon me. Shakspere.

DEMURELY. adv. [from demure.] 1. With affected modesty; solcnlly; with pretended gravity.

Put on a sober habit, Talk with respect, and swear but now and then, Wear prayer-books in your pocket, look with soberness. Shakspere.

Eph's damsel, turned from a cat to a woman, fat very demonstrably at the board's end, till a mouse ran before her. Bacon.

Next flood hypocrisy with holy love, Soft sighing, and demonstrably looking down; But bid the doughty underneath the gown. Dryden.

2. In the following line it is the same with solemnly. Shakspere.

Hark, how the drums demonstrably wake the sleepers! Shakspere.

DEMURENESS. n. s. [from demure.] 1. Modesty; sobrecity; gravity of aspect.

Her eyes having in them such a cheerfulness, as nature formed to smile in them; though her mouth and cheeks obeyed to that pretty demureness, which the more one marked, the more one liked it. Swift.

2. Affectedly; pretendcdly gravity.

DEMURRAGE. n. s. [from demur.] An allowance made by merchants to masters of ships, for their stay in a port beyond the time appointed.

DEMURRER. n. s. [demurer, French; i. e. maner in aliquo loco, vel morari.] A kind of pause upon a point of difficulty in an action: for, in every action, the controvercy confists either in the fact, or in the law. If the fact, that is tried by the jury; if the law, then it is the cause plain to the judge, or so hard and rare, as it breedeth just doubt. I call that plain to the judge, wherein he is affliured of the law; and in such case the judge, with his associates, proceeds to judgment without further work. But when it is doubtful to him and his associates, then is there half made, and a time taken, either for the court to think farther upon it, and to agree, if they can; or else for all the judges to meet together in the Chancery chamber, and, upon hearing that which the serjeants can say of both parts, to advise, and set down as law, whatsoever they conclude firm, without farther remedy. Cowell.

A prohibition was granted, and hereunto there was a demurer. Ayliffe's Forms, DEN.
DEN. n. f. [den, Saxon.]
1. A cavern or hollow running horizontally, or with a small obliquity, under ground; distinct from a hole which runs downward perpendicularly.
They have dispersed, some in the air, some on the earth, some on the water, some among the minerals, den, and caves under the earth. Hooke.

2. The cave of a wild beast.
What should they seek the lion in his den,
And fright him there? Shakespeare.
The tyrant's den, whose ed, though but to fame,
Was never the apartment of the royal dame;
The cavern, only to her father known. Brown.
By him was to his darling daughter shown. Dryden.
'Tis then the shapeless bear his den's forsoaks; In woods and fields a wild destruction makes. Dryden.

3. Den, the termination of a local name, may signify either a valley or a woody place; for the Saxons 'bon imports both. Giffard's Camden.

DENANT. n. f. [a word formed between deny and name.] Denial; refusal.
To hear in haste, give her this jewel: say,
My love can give no harms, but leave no damage. Brown.

DENDROLOGY. n. f. [dendro and logia.]
The natural history of trees.

DENIA'BLE. adj. [from deny.] That which may be denied; that to which one may refuse belief.
The negative authority is also deniable by reason. Brown.

DENIAL. n. f. [from deny.]
1. Negation; the contrary to affirmation.
No man more impudent to deny, where proofs were not manifest, no man more ready to confide, with a reputed manner of aggravating his own evil, where denial would but make the fault feeter. Sibly.

2. Refusal; the contrary to grant, allowance or concession.
Here comes your father; never make denial; I must and will have Catherine to my wife. Shak.
The denial of land, and fancy warning us, trouble us much more. Bacon.

4. Abjunction; contrary to acknowledgment of adherence.
We may deny God in all those acts that are capable of being morally good or evil; those are the proper subjects on which we set our confessions or denials of him. Saint.

DENIER. n. f. [from deny.]
1. A contradiactor; an opponent; one that holds the negative of a proposition.
By the word Virtue the affirmator intends our whole duty to God and man, and the denier by the word Virtue means only courage, us, at most, done duty towards our neighbours, without including the idea of the duty, which we owe to God. Watts.

2. A disowner; one that does not own or acknowledge.
If it was so fearful when Christ locked his denier into rock caves, only to be when he shall look into destruction. Saint.

3. A refuser; one that refuses.
It may be I am esteemed by my desire sufficient of myself to discharge my duty to God as a priest, though not to men as a prince. King Charles.

DENIER n. f. [from denarius, Lat. It is pronounced as deneser, in two syllables.]
A small denomination of French money; the twelfth part of a sou.
You will not pay for the glasse you have hurt?—No, not a denier. Shakespeare.

DENIGRATE. v. a. [denigrare, Lat.]
To blacken; to make black.
By suffering some impression from fire, bodies are casually or artificially denigrated in their natural condition, though they are charitably made black by an infection of their own suftains. Brown's Pulgar Errors.
Harsh-ton, and other white bodies, will be denigrated by heat; yet camphire would not at all soil its whiteness. Bray.

DENIGATION. n. f. [denigritio, Latin.]
A blackening, or making black.
These are the adventent and artificial ways of denigration, inferiourly whereunto may be the natural progress.
In several instances of denigration, the metals are worn off, or otherwise reduced into very minute parts. Dryden.

DENIZATION. n. f. [from denizen.] The act of infranchising, or making free.
That the mere Irish were reputed almost, if not, by the charters of denization, which in all ages were purchased by them. Davis.

DENIZEN. n. f. [from denjavus, a DENSIF. man of the city; or denisned, from the city, Welsh.] A freeman; one infranchised.
Denizen is a British law term, which the Saxons and Anglo-Saxons found here, and retained. Davis.
Thus th'o' Almighty Sire began ye gods, Native, or denier, of his holy abodes, From whence these murmurs? Dryden.
A great many plants will hardly, with nursing, be made to produce their food out of their native soil; but corn, so necessary for all people, is sird to grow and to feed as a free denizen of the world. Grew.

Denizens, who, in the days of ancient antiquity, were taught to feed themselves while other nations, through ignorance and superstition, starved. Dryden.

DENOMINATION. n. f. [denomination, Latin.]
1. That which gives a name; that which confers a distinct appellation.
That which obtains a distinct appellation. This would be more analogically denominated.
The last denomination of part is a minute, the greatest integer being a year. A. R. Reay.

The giver of a name; the person or thing that confers an appellation.
Both the less of one name should have one common denomination. Brown's Pulgar Errors.

DENOMINATOR. n. f. [from denomer.]
Denominator of a Fraction, is the number below the line, showing the nature and quality of the parts which any integer is supposed to be divided into: thus in \( \frac{3}{4} \) the denominator shows you, that the integer is supposed to be divided into 4 parts, or half quarters; and the numerator 6, that you take 6 of such parts, i.e. 3 quarters of the whole. Harris.

When a single broken number or fraction hath for its denominator a number containing of an 11th, in the first place towards the left hand, and no thing but cyphers from the unit towards the right hand, it is then more aptly and rightly called a decimal fraction.
Denominator of any proportion, is the quotient arising from the division of the fraction of the antecedent; that is \( \frac{a}{b} \) is the denominator of the proportion that goeth to \( b \), i.e. \( \frac{a}{b} \) of \( b \). This is also called the exponent of the proportion, or ratio. Harris.

DENOTATION. n. f. [denotation, Latin.]
The act of denoting.
To denote, to be a sign of; to betoken; to signify signs; as, a quick pulse denotes a fever.

DENOUNCE. v. a. [denuncio, Latin; denoutier, French.]
1. To threaten by proclamatiun.
I denounced unto this day, that ye shall hourly perish. Heb. 10:38
He of their wicked ways Shall them admonish, distinguishing wrath to come. On their impiety.
They impose their wild conjectures for laws upon others, and denounce war against all that receive them not. Dis. 16:13

2. To threaten by some outward sign or expression, He ended flowing, and his look denounc'd D. Operate revenge, and battle dangerous T. Milton.
The sea grew white; the rolling waves from far, Like heralds, first denounce the wat'ry war. Dryden.

3. To give information against; to denounce; to accuse publickly.
Archilochus sought to propice parts of the New Testament to be learned by heart by inferior clerics, and denounce such as are repugnant. Dryden's Parnassus.

DENOUNCER. n. f. [from denounce.] The act of proclaming a muy menace; the proclamation of intended evil; denunciation.
Fable is the reply of Cain upon the denouncement of his curse; My iniquity is greater than can be forgiven. Dryden.
Denunciation. n. f. [from denounce.] One that declares some menace.

Here comes the fat denouncer of my fate.

Dense. adj. [denes, Latin.] Close; compact; approaching to solidity; having small interstices between the constituent particles.

The dense of all is the density of the body; for all dense bodies are colder than most other bodies, as metals, stones, plas; and they are longer in bearing than softer bodies.

Denseness. n. f. [denesitas, Latin.] Cloteness; compactness; close adhesion, or near approach, of parts.

Dental. adj. [dentals, Latin.]
1. Belonging or relating to the teeth.
2. [In grammar.] Pronounced principally by the agency of the teeth.

The Hebrews have suffixed which letters be called, which dental, and which guttural. Bacon.

The dental consonants are easy, therefore let them be used, and the labial-velars, as also the linguo-holders.

Dental. n. f. A small shellfish.

Two small black and flaking pieces seem, by the shape, to have been formed in the shell of a dentid. Woodward.

Dentell. n. f. [Italian.] Modillons.

The modillons, or dentells, make a noble show by graceful projections. Spedding, N° 315.

Denticulation. n. f. [denticulatus, Latin.] The art of being set with small teeth, or prominent resembling teeth, like those of a saw.

He omits the denticulation of the edges of the hill, or those small oblique incisions made for the better retention of the prey. Grevo's Museum.

Dentilicated. adj. [denticulatus, Lat.] Set with small teeth.

Dentifrice. n. f. [dent and prise, Lat.] A powder made to cure the teeth.

Is this grey powder a good dentifrice? B. Jenk.

The sheers of all sorts of shell-fish, being born, obtain a crackish nature upon them, crossed and powdered, make excellent dentifrices. Grevo's Museum.

To Dentise. v. a. [dentisher, French.] To have the teeth renewed. Not in sfc.

The two extreme of D. School, who used till the last were D. once, did descent twice or thrice, casting bogy old teeth, and others coming in their place. Bacon.

Dentition. n. f. [dentitia, Latin.]
1. The art of breeding the teeth.
2. The time at which children's teeth are to be expected.

To Denuodate. v. a. [denudate, Latin.] To divest; to strip; to lay naked.

Till he has denudated himself of all incumbrances, he is unqualified. Dryden.

Denuotation. n. f. [from denudate.] The act of stripping, or making naked.

To Denuode. v. a. [denudo, Latin.] To strip; to make naked; to divest.

Not a treaty can be obtained, unless we would denude ourself of all force to defend us. Clarendon.

If in summer-time you denude a vine-branch of its leaves, the graces will never come to maturity. Roy.

The eyes, with the skin of the eyelids, is denuded, to fly the multitude.

Denuunciation. n. f. [from denunciate, Latin.] The act of denouncing; the proclamation of a threat; a public menace.

In a denunciation or indiction of a war, the war is not confined to the place of the quarter, but is left at large.

Christ tells the Jews, that if they believe not, they shall die in their sins: did they never read those denunciations? Words.

Midst of these denunciations, and notwithstanding the warning before me, I commit myself to falling success. Congreve.

Denuunicator. n. f. [from denunio, Latin.]
1. He that proclaims any threat.
2. He that lays an information against another.

The denunciate does not make himself a party in judgment, as the accuser does. Addison's Parod. To DENY, v. u. a. [denier, French; denego, Latin.]
1. To contradict; opposed to affirm.
2. To contradict an accusation; not to confess.

Sarah denied, saying, I laughed not; for she was afraid. Genii.

3. To refuse; not to grant.

My young boy, Hath an aspect of intercidence, Which great nature cries; deny not. Shakespeare.

Ah, charming fair, said I, How long can you my bites and yours deny? Dryden.

4. To abnegate; to disown.

It shall be therefore a witchcraft unto you, lest you deny God. Job, xiv. 27.

To renounce; to disregar; to treat as foreign or not belonging to one.

The best figs and fruit of denying ourselves, is mercy towards men. Sprat.

When St. Paul says, If in this life only we have hope in Christ, we are of all men most miserable; he considers Christians as denying themselves in the pleasures of this world, for the sake of Christ. Alderbury.

To Deobstruct. v. a. [deobstruo, Latin.] To clear from impediments; to free from such things as hinder a passage.

It is singular, good wound-herb, useful for deobstructing the parts of the body.

More's Antidote against Ablinon. Such as carry off the fevers and mucus, deobstruct the passages of the body, fo as the chyle may have a free passage into the blood. Arboleson on Diet.

Deobstruunt. n. f. [deobstruunt, Lat.] A medicine that has the power to resolve vicificities, or to open by any means the animal passages.

All fevers are steepling and deobstruent, alleviating all agues, according to Arboleson in Aliments.

Depand. n. f. [Deo pandum, Latin.] A thing given or forficate to God for the pacifying his wrath, in case any misfortune, by which any Christian comes to a violent end, without the fault of any reasonable creature; as, if a horse should strike his keeper, and to kill him, if a man, in driving a cart, and endeavouring to rectify something about it, should fall to the cart wheels, by running over him, should push him to death; if one should be falling a tree, and giving warning to company by, when the tree was near falling, to look to themselves, and any of them should nevertheless be slain by the fall of the tree; in these cases the horse, the cart-wheel, cart, and horses, and the tree, are to be given to God; that is, sold and distributed to the poor, for an expiation of this dreadful event, though occasioned by unreasonable, senseless, and dead creatures; and though this be given to God, yet it is forfeited to the king by law, as executer in this case, to see the price of these distributed to the poor.

Cowell.

To Deopenpilatc. v. u. a. [de and opposc, Latin.] To deobstruct; to clear a passage; to free from obstructions.

Deopphila. n. f. [from deopenpilatc.] The act of clearing obstructions; the removal of whatever obtrudes the vital passages.

Though the greater parts be excluded again, yet are the disfobrutable parts extracted, whereby it becomes effectual in deobstructions.

Deopphiliater. adj. [from deopenpilatc.] Deobstructed.

A physician prescribed him a deopenpilator, and purgative oposum. Harvey.

Deosculacion. n. f. [deosculatio, Lat.] The act of kissing.

We have an enumeration of the several acts of worship required to be performed in images, visions, prophesies, sensations, tribulations, and deosculations.

To DEPAINT. w. u. a. [depinc, French.]
1. To picture; to describe by colours; to paint; to show by a painted resemblance.

He did unwilling worship to the saint.

That on his shield depainted he did see. Spenser.

2. To describe.

Such tender fair would I depaint.

In roundelay, or sonnet quain.

Gasp. To DEPART. w. u. a. [depart, French.]
1. To go away from a place: with from the thing left.

When the people departed away, Sufanannah went into her garden. Solomon's wis.

He said unto him, go in peace; so he departed from him a little way. 2 Kings, viii. 19.

They departed quickly from the ship-ward, with great joy, and did run to bring his discharge word.

Mar. xxviii.

He, which hath no stomach to this fight,

Let him depart; his passport shall be made.

Shakespeare.

Barabara, appeased with presents, departed out of that bay.

Kilkenny.

And couldst thou leave me, cruel, thou base! Now no kind offer from a departing maid.

No look, no last adieu! Dryden.

2. To depart from a practice.

He cleazed unto the fins of Jerobeam, he departed from thereon. 2 Kings, iii. 3.

3. To be left; to perish.

The good departed away, and the evil abide still.

2 Edw. iii. 4. To
They keep their cattle, and live themselves, in bodies perishing upon the mountains, and remaining dull to fresh land, as they have defpoured the former.

To depauperate. v. a. [depauperate, Latin.] To make poor, to impoverish;
to consume.
Limitless: not depauperate the ground will last long, and bear large grain. Marit. Great evaucations, which carry off the purulent humour, depauperate the blood. Arth.

Dep. ctables. adj. [from deteft, Latin.]

To depart. v. n. a. To quit; to leave; to retire from. Not in use.
You've had dispatch in private by the conful;
You are with him this evening.
To depart. v. a. [partir, French; partir, Latin.] To divide; to separate a chymical term.

Depart, n. sf. [depart, French.]
1. The act of going away: now departures, of going out of this world.
To marry princesses Margaret. Shak.
2. Death.
When your brave father breathed his latest gasp, Tit.
Tidings, as swiftly the pull could be.
Wore brought me of his life and his departure.
Shakespeare's Henry VI.
3. [With chymists.] An operation so named, because the particles of silver are darted or divided from gold, or other metal, when they were before melted together in the same mass, and could not be separated any other way.

The chymists have a liquor called water of depart.

Depart. n. j. [from depart.] One that refines metals by separation.

Depart. n. f. [depaartment, Fr.]
Separate allotments; province or bufh affigned to a particular perfon: a French term.
The Roman fleets, during their command at sea, had their several flations and departments: the most considerable was the Alexandria fleet, and the gold was the African.

Depart. n. sf. [from depart.]
1. A going away.
For thee, fellow,
Who needs must know of her departures,
And not be ignorant, we'll ëve it from thee
By a sharp torture. Shak.

Of sorrow, and dejection, and despair,
Our only can Sall, and nothing bring;
Departure from this happy place.
Millam.
They were seen not only as several of our Savour was upon earth, but arrived after his departure, as well as after his death.
Ad.
2. Death; decease; the act of leaving the present state of existence.
Happy was his good prince in his timely departure, which barred him from the knowledge of inguinal mischief.
Chir.
3. A forsaking; an abandoning: with from.
The fear of the Lord, and departure from evil, are privileges of the importance.
Vill.

Depa. cfent. adj. [depa. sent, Latin.]
Feeding.

Depa. r e. v. a. [from depa. sent, Latin.] To eat up; to consume by feeding upon it.

Vol. I.

3. Concatenation; connexion; relation of one thing to another.
In all sorts of reasoning, the connexion and dependance of ideas is essential to be followed; till the mind is brought to the source on which it bottoms.
Lock.

4. State of being at the disposal or under the sovereignty of another: with upon.
very moment we feel our dependence upon God, and find that we can neither be happy without him, nor think ourselves free.
Til.

5. The things or persons of which any man has the dominion or disposal.
Hence there is a property vested of his dependencies by his council, except where there has been either an over-greatness in one counsellor, or an over-strict combination in divers.
Bac.

6. Reliance; trust: confidence.
Their dependances on him were drowned in this core.
Htur.

They first in peace by night,
Secure of bread, as of returning light.
And with this firm dependance on the day,
That need green vapours, and forgot to groan.
Dryd.

7. Accident; that of which the existence presupposes the existence of something close.

Thus I, call such complex ideas, which, however compounded, contain not in them the suppe-rition of subsisting by themselves, but are conferred as dependances on, or affections of, sub-fences; such are the ideas signified by the words triple, quadruple, and such like.
Locke.

Dep. end. adj. [from depend.]
1. Hanging down.
2. Relating to something previous.
3. In the power of another.

On God, as the most high, all inferior caufes in the world are dependants.
Htur.

Dep. end. n. j. [from depend.] One who lives in subjection, or at the direction of another; a retainer.

A great abatement of kindred appears as well in the general dependants, as in the duke himself already, and your daughter.
Shak.

For a stroke of policy recommend a dependant upon him, who paid two thousand pounds ready money.
Ch.
His dependants shall quickly become his profects.
Scot.

Dep. end. n. j. [from depend. Lat.
Dep. end.ency.
This word, which signifies many others of the same termination, are indifferently written with one or in the any or as, as the authors intended to derive them from the Latin or French.

1. A thing or person at the disposal or dependance of another.
We invade the rights of our neighbours, not upon account of conquests, but of dominion, that we may create dependances.
Cal.

2. State of being subordinat, or subjux in some degree to the discretion of another; the contrary to subjection.
Let me report to him.
Your servant dependant on you and
A courier that will prays in aid to kindred,
Where he is grace is knell'd to.
Shak.

At their fitting out they must have their commission, or letters ment, from the king, that he may acknowledge their dependancy upon the crowns of England.
Bac.

3. Which is not principal; that which is subordinate.
DEP

We speak of the habbous worlds, this earth, and its dependencies, which safe out of a chaos about six thousand years ago. Bumet's Theory.

4. Concatenation; connexion; rifle of consequences from premisès. The whole is, with the added frame of facts.

Such a dependency of things on one another is, therefore, natural.

5. Relation of any thing to another, as of an effect to its cause.

I took pleasure to trace out the cause of effects, and the independence of one thing upon another in the visible creation. Burnet's Theory.

6. Trust; reliance; confidence.

The expectation of the performance of our duty, in that we call dependence upon him having a subsistence.

STILLINGSTERN.

DEPENDENT, adj. [dependent, Latin.] This, as many other words of like termination, are written with ent or ant, as they are supposed to flow from the Latin or French.] Hanging down.

In the time of Charles the Great, and long after, the whole furs in the tails were dependent, but now that fashion is left, and the spots only worn, without the tails. Fancier.

DEPENDENT. n.s. [from dependent.] One that is dependent, or at the discretion of another.

We are indefatigable and indefatigable beings, the creatures of his power, and the dependents of his providence. Regn.

DEPENDENT. n.s. [from depend.] A dependent; one that reposes on the kindness or power of another.

What shall you expect, To be depend on a thing that lacks? Shakespeare.

DEPENDENCE. n.s. [from dependent, Latin.] Logo; destruction.

It may be unjust to place all efficacy of gold in the non-omission of weights, or destruction of any ponderous particles. Brown.

DEPLEGATION. n.s. [from deplegen.] An operation which takes away from the phlegm any spiritual fluid by repeated distillation, till it is at length left all behind.

If this safety is not enough to separate the aqueous parts by deplegation for some liquors contain also an unsuspected quantity of small corpuscles, of somewhat an earthly nature, which being, insomuch, in the fine particles, do engender, and blot them, and thereby weaken their activity. Boyle.

To DEPHELGM. v. a. [depleg-]

To DEPHELGMATE. n.s. [may, low Latin.] To clear from phlegm, or aqueous infilt matter.

We have sometimes taken spirits of salt, and carefully deplegated them. Boyle.

DEPLEGMENNESS. n.s. [from deplegen.] The quality of being freed from phlegm or aqueous matter.

The proportion between the coralline solution and the spirit of wine, depends so much upon the strength of the former liquor, and the deplegmenness of the latter, that it scarce possible to determine generally and exactly what quantity of each shall be taken. Boyle.

To DEPECT. v. a. [depinge, depinge, Latin.] To paint; to portray; to represent in colours.

The cowards of Lacedemon deplited upon their fields the most horrid beasts they could imagine. Tertull.

2. To describe; to represent an action to the mind.

When the distractions of a tumult are sensibly detached, every object and every occurrence are so presented to your view, that while you read, you seem indeed to see them. Brown.

DEPLEATORY. n.s. [de and pilis, Latin.] An application used to take away hair.

DEPILIOUS. adj. [de and pilis, Latin.] Without hair.

This animal is a kind of lizard, or quadruped巡plated and deplated; theirs, without wool, hair. Brown.

DEPLANTATION. n.s. [deplants, Latin.] The act of taking plants up from the bed.

DEPLETION. n.s. [depleos, deplatus, Latin.] The act of emptying.

Abstinence and a slender diet attenuates, because depletion of the vitals gives room to the fluid to expand itself. Arbuthnot.

DEPLOWABLE. adj. [from defloro, Latin.] 1. Lamentable; that which demands or causes lamentation; afflaim; sad; calamitous; miserable; hopeless.

This was the deplorable condition to which the king was reduced. Clarendon.

The bill of all weapons, gives the most ghastly and deplorable wounds. Temple.

It was now, in how deplorable a state learning lies in that kingdom. Swift.

2. It is sometimes, in a more lax and jocul. senfe, used for contemptible; deplorable; as, deplorable nonsene; deplorable stupidity.

DEPLOWABleness. n.s. [from deploralbe.] The state of being deplorable; misery; hopelessness.

DEPLOWABLE. adj. [from deploralbe.] Lamentably; miserably; hopelessly; often in a sense of contempt.

Notwithstanding all their talk of reason and philosophy, God knows, they are deplorably stranger to them. Swift.

DEPLOWATE. adj. [from deploration, Latin.] Lamentable; hopeless.

The case is then most deploration, when reward goes over to the wrong side. L'Estrange.

DEPLORATION. n.s. [from deploration.] The act of deploring, or of lamenting.

To DEPLO'RE. v. a. [defloro, Latin.] To lament; to bewail; to wail; to mourne; to bemoan; to express sorrow. Delia's lodge.

If she did, till the whole deploration of her face was taken. Her.

With Aesclapius herbs his life better de.

DEPLORE. v. a. [deploro, Latin.] To lament; to bewail; to wail; to mourn; to bewail; to express sorrow. Delia's lodge.

If she did, till the whole deploration of her face was taken. Her.

To DEPO'SE. v. a. [depo, Latin.] To strip of its feathers.

To DEPO'N. v. a. [depo, Latin.] To lay down as a pledge or security.

To DEPO'N. v. a. [depo, Latin.] To strip of its feathers.

To DEPOSE. v. a. [depo, Latin.] 1. To lay down; to lodge; to set fall.

Its shores are neither advanced one jot further into the sea, nor its surface raised by additional muds upon it, by the yearly inundations of the Nile. Woodward.

2. To degrade or a throne or high station.

First, of the king: what shall of him become? — The duke yet lives: that Henry still has. Shakespeare.

May your sick fame still languish till it die.

Then, as the greatest curse that I can give unlimited wills are, at later days. Dryden.

Deduced confuls and captive princes, might have preceded them. Teilor.

3. To take away; to divest; to strip of: not in use.

You
DEP
You may my glory and my face depre, But not my griefs; still am I king of thee. Shaks.

4. To give testimony; to attest. The three forms that made you to depose Your oath, my lord, is vain and frivolous. Shakspir.

5. To examine any one on his oath. Not now in use. According to our law, Depose him in the justice of his cause. Shakspir.

To DEPOSE. v. n. To bear witness. To a lodgment; to a lending. Bacon.

Depository. n. f. [depositarius, Latin.] One with whom any thing is lodged in trust.

I gave you all.--Made you my guardians, my depositaries; But kept a reservation, to be follow'd With such a number. Shakspir.

To DEPOSIT. v. a. [depositum, Latin.]

1. To lay up; to lodge in any place. The eagle got leave here to deposit her eggs. L'Estrange.

Dryden wants a poor square foot of stone, to fix where the abode of one of the greater gods on earth are deposited. Gurtzi.

When vessels were open, and the infects had free access to the aliments within them, Redi diligently observed, that no other infects were produced, but of such as he saw go in and feed, and deposit their eggs there, which they would readily do in all pustulation. Bramly.

2. To lay up as a pledge, or security.

3. To place at interest. God commands us to return, as to him, to the poor, his gifts, out of mere duty and thankfulness; not to deposit them with him, in hopes of meriting by them. Sprat.

4. To lay aside. The difficulty will be to persuade the depositing of such luks, which have, by I know not what fascination, so endeared themselves. Decay of Piety.

DEPOSIT. n. f. [depositum, Latin.]

1. Any thing committed to the trust and care of another.

2. A pledge; a pawn; a thing given as a security.

3. The state of a thing pawned or pledged. They had since Marietiles, and fairly left it; they had the other day the Valentine, and now have put it in deposit. Bacon.

Deposition. n. f. [from deposito, Lat.] The act of giving publick testimony, if you will the veracity of the fathers by those circumstances usually considered in deposition, you will find them strong on these ideas. Sir R. Bp.

A witness is obliged to swear, otherwise his deposition is not valid. Addison.

2. The act of degrading a prince from sovereignty.

Depository. n. f. [from deposito.] The place where any thing is lodged. Depo- sitory is properly used of persons, and depository of places; but in the following example they are confounded. The Jews themselves are the depositories of all the prophesies which tend to their own confusion. Addison.

DEPRAVATION. n. f. [depravation, Lat.]

1. The act of making any thing bad; the act of corrupting; corruption.

The three forms of government have their several perfections, and are subject to their several depositions: however, few states are raised by defect in their institutions, but generally by corruption of manners. Swift.

2. The state of being made bad; degeneracy; depravity.

We have a catalogue of the blackest sins that human nature, in its highest depositions, is capable of committing. South.

3. Defamation; censure; a sense not in use. Stubborn critics are apt, without a theme For depravation, to square all the sex. Shakspir.

To DEPREVE. v. a. [depraves, Lat.] To vitiate; to corrupt; to contaminate.

We admit the providence of God in the continuance of scripture, notwithstanding the endeavours of infidels to abolish, and the fraudulence of heretics to deprave, the same. Witsk.

Who lives that's not depraved, or depraves? Shakspir.

But from what we can proceed But all corrupt, both mind and will depraved. Milton.

A table which plentiful does supply, Lotts lawful good, and lawful ill does crave. Dryden.

DEPRAVITY. n. f. [from depraves.] Corruption; taint; contamination; vitiated state.

What sins do you mean? Our original depravedness, and proneness of our eternal part to all evil. Hammond.

DEPRAVEMENT. n. f. [from depraves.] A vitiated state; corruption.

He maketh men believe, that apparitions are either deceptions of sight, or melancholy deprivations of fancy. Browne.

DEPREVER. n. f. [from depraves.] A corrupting of the states depravers, or corruptors. Bacon.

DEPRAVITY. n. f. [from depraves.] Corruption, a vitiated state. To DEPREDATE. v. a.

1. To beg off; to pray deliverance from; to avert by prayer.

In depraving of evil, we make an humble acknowledgment of guilt, and of God's justice in charging, as well as clemency in sparing the guilty. Grew.

Poverty indeed, in all its degrees, men are easily persuaded to deprave from themselves. Rogers.

The judgments which we would deprave are not removed. Milmor.

The Italian entered them in their prayer: amongst the three evils he petitioned to be delivered from, he might have despised the evil. Bacon: Reflections on Learning.

2. To implore mercy of: this is not proper.

At length he sets those sorts, whose pleas make gods adore His might, and deprave his power. Prior.

DEPREATION. n. f. [deprecatio, Lat.]

1. Prayer against evil

I, with leave of speech implor'd And humble deprecation, thus replied. Milton.

Sincerely they generally conceived to be a good sign, or a bad one; and so, upon this motion, they commonly used a gratulation for the one, and deprecation for the other. Browne.

2. Intreaty; petitioning.

3. An excusing; a begging pardon for.

DEPREATORY. I adj. [from deprecate.]

DEPREATE. I That serves to deprate; apologizick; tending to avert evil by supplication.

Bishop Fox understanding that the Scottish king was still distressed, being troubled that the occasion of breaking of the truce should grow from his men, sent many humble and deprecatory letters to the Scottish king to appease him. Bacon.

DEREC. TAK. n. f. [deprecatur, Lat.] One that averts evil by petition.

To DEPRECATE. v. a. [deprecari, Lat.]

1. To bring a thing down to a lower price.

2. To undervalue. They presumed upon that mercy, which, in all their conversations, they endeavour to deprave and collapse of advantage. Addison.

As there are none more ambitious of fame, than those who are coiners in poetry, it is very natural for such as have not succeeded in it to deprave the works of those who have. Spedilion.

To DEPREDATE. v. a. [depredari, Lat.]

1. To rob and pillage.

2. To spoil; to devour.

It maketh the substance of the body more solid and compact, and so left apt to be consumed and depredated by the spirits. Bacon.

DEPREATION. n. f. [depretation, Lat.]

1. A robbing; a spoiling.

Commissioners were appointed to determine all matters of piracy and depredations between the subjects of both kingdoms. Hayward.

The land had never been before so free from robber and depredation, though his reign. Wet.

Were there not one who had said, Hitherto shalt thou come, and no farther: we might well expect such victories in future, such flourishing in future, and such depredation and change of sea and land. Wood's.

Voracity; waife.

The speedy depredation of air upon watry moisture, and version of the fame into air, appeareth in nothing more visible than in the flowers discharging, or giving off of a little cloud of breath, or vapour, from glafs, or the blade of a sword, or any such polished body. Bacon.

DEPREATOR. n. f. [depredator, Lat.]

A robber; a devourer. It is reported, that the Arabes called our Lady's Seal, which is a kind of briozy, and coweles, fit near together, one or both will die: the cause is, for that they be both great depredators of the earth, and one of them devours the other. Bacon.

We have three that collect the experiments, which are in all books; these we call depredators. Bacon.

To DEPREHEND. v. a. [deprehendo, Lat.]

1. To catch one; to take unawares; to take in the face.

That wretched creature, being depredated in that impiety, was held in ward. Hooker.

Who can believe men upon their own authority, that are once depredated in so grand and impious an imposition. More.

2. To discover; to find out a thing; to come to the knowledge or understanding of.

The motions of the minute parts of bodics, which do so great effects, are invisible, and tend not to the eye; but yet they are to be depredated by experience. Bacon.

DEPREHENSIBLE. adj. [from deprehend.]

1. That may be caught.

2. That may be apprehended, or discovered.

DEPREHENSIBILITY. n. f.

Capableness of being caught.

DEPREHENSION. n. f. [deprehensio, Lat.]

1. A catching or taking unawares.

2. A discovery.

To DEPRESS. v. a. [from deprisus, of deprims, of deprims, Latin.] preclude, is deprived, or deposed from his preferment, for any matter in fact or law. Phillips.

To DEPRIVE. v. a. [from de and privo, Latin.]

1. To bereave one of a thing; to take it away from him; with of.

God hath deprived him of his beloved, neither hath he imparted to her understanding. Job, xix. 17.

He lamented the loss of an excellent servant, and the horrid manner in which he had been deprived of him. Bacon.

Now wretched Occipus, deprived of his right, led a long death in everlasting night. Dryden.

To hinder; to debar from: Milton uses it without of.

From his face shall I be hid, deprived of his blessed countenance. Milton.

The ghosts rejected, are they unhappy crew Deprived of all pleasures and funereal use. Dryden.

3. To release; to free from.

Moll happy he.

Whose grief delight sufficeth to deprive Remembrance of all pains which he opprest. Spenser.

4. To put out of an office.

A minister, deprived for inconformity, said, that if they deprived him, it should cost an hundred men's lives. Baxter.

DEPTH, n. f. [from deep, of deep, Dutch.]

1. Deepness; the measure of any thing from the surface downwards.

As for men, they had buildings in many places higher than the depth of the water. Bacon.

We have large and deep coves of several depths: the deepest are sunk fix hundred fathoms. Bacon.

The life to that unhappy region tends, To which the depth of Tartar descending. Dryden.

For the, in nature, depth and height Are equally held infinite; In art by man the less, if he knows, 'Tis only infinite below. Swift.

2. Deep place; not a flaxal.

The falls tides seem from the cover'd land, And seam them with diptemnt ports betray. Dryden.

3. The abyss; a gulph of infinite profundity.

When he prepared the heavens was there, when he set a compass upon the face of the depth. Prov. viii. 28.

4. The middle or height of a season.

And in the depth of winter, in the night, You plough the raging seas to coals under. Dryden.

The earl of Newcastle, in the depth of winter, refused the county for the rebels. Clarendon.

Abstruseness; obscurity.

There are greater depths and obscurities in an elaborate and well-written piece of nonsense, than in the most abstruse tracts of school divinity. Addison's Whig Examiner.

DEPTH of a Squadron or Battalion, is the number of men in the file. Milit. Dict.

To DEPTHEN. v. a. [deepes, Dutch.] To deepen, or make deeper. Dict.

To DEP'CULATE. v. a. [deputer, Fr.] To defoul; to bereave of virginity. Dict.

DEPR'ULATION. n. f. [depulat, Lat.] Abating or thralling away.

To DEP'LORD. n. f. [from defpaul, Lat.] Putting away; averting. Dict.

To DEP'URATE. v. a. [deputer, Fr. from depurge, Lat.] To purify; to cleanse; to free anything from its impurities.

Chemistry enabling us to depurate bodies, and in some measure to analyse them, and take away their blemishes. Hence many chemical experiments we may, better than in others, know what manner of bodies we employ. Boyle.
DER
cause the officer or person for whom he acts to lose his office. Philadelphia.
To Dequantitate. v. a. [from de and quantitas, Lat.] To diminish the quantity of.
This we affirm of pure gold; for that which is current, and yaffish in form among us, by reason of its being a proportion of silver or copper mixed therewith, is actually debauched by fire, and possibly by frequent extraction.
Brown's Pelgar Errors.
DER. A term used in the beginning of names of places. It is generally to be derived from an object, a wild beast, unless the place stands upon a river; for then it may rather be fetched from the British dur, i.e. water. Gibbon's Camden.
To Deracinate. v. a. [deracinate, Fr.] To pluck or tear up by the roots.
Her Fall less Wow
The danel, hemlock, and rank furinny
Deth must they, while that the culle ruts
That should deracinate such fagacity. Shakespeare.
2. To abolish; to destroy; to extirpate. To DER_ALIGN. v. a. [disfratinate, or v. a. [deracinate, lat.]
1. To prove; to justify.
When the end of any church is disturbed to demand tythes in the next parish by a writ of indicet, the patron shall have a writ to demand the advowson of the tythes being in demand; and when it is desirable, shall then have the plea paid in the court chirls, as far forth as it is directed in the king's court. Blount.
2. To disorder; to turn out of course. Ditto.
DER,MENT. n. f. [from deraign, Fr. to turn out of the right way.]
1. Tumult; disorder; noise.
2. Merriment; jollity; solemnity: not in use.
Douglas.
To DeR. v. a. [beautan, Sax.] To hurt. Obsolete. Some think that in the example it means deranging.
So from immorality he, that can but proceed,
That mortal hands may not withstand his might.
Dread for his derang'd doe, and bloody deed.
For all in blood and spue is his delight.
F.Roger.
DERELIC. n. f. [derelicta, Lat.]
1. The act of forsaking or leaving; abandonment.
2. The state of being forsaken. There is no other thing to be looked for, but the effects of God's grief just displeasure, the withdrawing of grace, derogation in this world, and in the world to come confusion.
Hooker.
DE RELICTS. n. f. pl. [in law.] Goodly willfully thrown away, or relinquished, by the owner.
Did. DERIDE. v. a. [deride, Lat.] To laugh at; to mock; to turn to ridicule; ocorn.
Before such precece to offend with any the least unceunliness, we would be fully as they who mostly reprehend or deride what we do. Hooker.
When shall be the portion of those who have derided Christ, and crucified him, a mock of every thing that is sacred and religious? Theodorus.
These few, ye gods, who wish divinity proud
Frode my darkness, and my great deride. Pope.
Some, that adore Newton for his flxation desirous of his religion. Berkeley.
DERIDE. n. f. [from the verb.]
1. A mocker; a scoffor.
Upon the wilful violation of oaths, execrable blasphemies, and men opposed to the interest of religion, serious tokens of divine revenge have been known to follow. Hooker.
2. A droll; a buffoon.
DERISION. n. f. [derisive, Lat.]
1. The act of deriding or laughing at.
Are we griefed with the scorn and derision of the profane? Thus was the blessed Jesus defamed and rejected of men. Rogers.
Vanity is the natural weakness of an ambitious man, which expulses him to the secret scorn and derision of those he converses with. Addison.
2. Contempt; scorn; a laughing-flock.
I am in derision daily; every one mocketh me. Jer. xx. 7.
Thou makest us a reproach to our neighbours, a scorn and a derision to them that are round about us. Ps. lix. 15.
Enfreft, abdul, overcome; led bound.
They forsake derision, captive, poor, and blind.
Into a dungeon thrst. Milton.
DERISIVE. adj. [from deride.] Mocking; scoffing.
O'er all the dome they quaff, they feast;
Derise to think of them guilty to truth; and
Each in jovial mood his mate adorns with care.
Derisory. adj. [derivitious, Lat.]
Mocking; ridiculing.
Derivable. adj. [from derive.] Attainable by right of descendent or derivation.
God has declared this the eternal rule and standard of all honour derivable upon me, that those who honour him shall be honoured by him. South.
DERIVATION. n. f. [derivatio, Lat.]
1. A draining of water; a turning of its course.
When the water began to swell, it would every way proceed by itself by its defeces or defictions of the ground; and these defeces and derivations being once made, and supplied with new waters, pushing them forwards, would continue their course till they arrived at the sea, just as other rivers do. Burnet.
2. [In grammar.] The tracing of a word from its original.
Your lordship here seems to dislike my taking notice that the derivation of the word Substancc favours the idea we have of it, and your lordship tells me, that very little weight is to be laid on it, on a bare grammatical etymology. Locke.
3. The transmission of any thing from its source.
Atouching traditional communication, and tradition of those truths that I call natural and engraven, I do not doubt but many of those truths have had the help of that derivation.
Machy of Mankind.
4. [In medicine.] The drawing of a humour from one part of the body to another.
Derivation differs from renovation only in the measure of the diasthes; and the force of the medicines used; if it fo be very remote, or, it may be, contrary part, we call that renovation; if only to some neighbouring place; and by gentle means, we call it derivation. Wotton.
5. That thing deduced or derived: not used.
Most of them are the genuine derivations of the hypothesis they claim to. Gloselle.
DERIVATIVE. adj. [derivatious, Lat.] Derived or taken from another.
As it is a derivative perfection, so it is a distinct kind of perfection from that which is in God.
Hale.
DERIVATIVELY. adv. [from derivative.]
In a derivative manner.
To DERIVE. v. a. [to derive, Fr. from derive, Lat.]
1. To turn the course of water from its channel.
Company leaves the chance of vice by deriding, and abates the torrent of a common edium by deriving it into many channels. South.
2. To deduce; as from a root, from a cause, from a principle.
Men derive the varieties of colours from the various proportions of the direct progeny or motion of those globes to their circoluation, or motion about their centre. Boyle.
Gods derive the ideas of duration from their reflection on the train of ideas they observe to succeed one another in their own understanding. Locke.
From these two causes of the last and rigidity of the simplest, the most ancient sect of physiologists, derived all distinctions of human ideas with a great deal of reason; for the fluids derive their quantities from the solid. Arithmet.
3. To communicate to another, as from the origin and source.
Child having Adam's nature as we have, but incorrupt, derivatius not nature, but incorruption, and that immediately from his own parent, unto all that belong unto him. Hooker.
4. To receive by transmigration.
This property seemst rather to have been derived from the precursors soldiers. Decy of Perty.
The cenfers of these wretched, who, I am sure, could nearly infirmity to them from their own persons; yet upon this account, that they had been confecrated by the offering incense in them, were, by God's special command, sequestr'd from all common society. South.
5. To communicate to by descent of blood.
Besides the readiness of parts, an excellent disposition of mind is derived to your lordship from your parents of two generations, to whom I have the honour to be known. Felton.
6. To spread; to diffuse gradually from one place to another.
The dream of the publick justice were deriv'd into every part of the kingdom. Davis.
7. [In grammar.] To trace a word from its origin.
To DERIVE. v. a.
1. To come from; to owe its origin to.
He that refults the power of Pouleny, Reřis the power of heaven; for pow'r from heaven Derives, and monarchs rule by gods appointed. Prior.
2. To descend from.
I am your lord, as well derive'd as he.
As well dôn.
Derivation. adj. [from derive.] One that draws or fetches, as from the source or principle.
Such a one makes a man not only a partner to or men's sins, but also a derive of the who'ld limited guilt of them to himself. Bayle.
DERN. adj. [beau, Saxon.]
1. Sad; solitary.
2. Barbarous; cruel. Obsolete.

DERNIER. adj. Last. It is a mere French word, and used only in the following phrase.

In the Imperial Chamber, the term for the proceeding with a trial is not circumscribed by the term of one or two years, as the law elsewhere requires in the empire; this being the deroint resort and supreme court of judicature.

Add. 1.

DEROGATE. v. n. [derogare, Lat.] To detract; to lessen reputation: with from. We should be injurious to virtue itself, if we did derogate from them whose industry hath made us great.

1. To derogate so far as to a law or custom, as to diminish its former extent: distinguished from derogate. By several contrary customs and fites used here, many of those civil and canon laws are controlled and derogated.

2. To derogate the worth of any person or thing: to vilify.

DEROGATE. v. n.
1. To detract; to lessen reputation: with from.
We should be injurious to virtue itself, if we did derogate from them whose industry hath made us great.

2. To derogate so far as to a law or custom, as to diminish its former extent: distinguished from derogate. By several contrary customs and fites used here, many of those civil and canon laws are controlled and derogated.

DEROGATION. n. s. [derogatio, Latin.]
1. The act of weakening or restraining a former law or custom.
It was indeed but a woolen ambaissage, with good respects, to entertain the king in good affection; but nothing was done or handed to the derogation of the king's long treaty with the Italians. Baco.

That which enjoins the deed is certainly God's law; and it is also certain, that the scripture, which allows of the will, is neither the derogation nor relaxation of that law. South.

2. A defamation; detraction; the act of lessening or taking away the honour of any person or thing. Sometimes with to, properly with from.
Which, though never to necessary, they could not execute, for the honour of their king, without some fear of derogation from their credit; and therefore that which once they had done, they became for ever after refoluto to maintain. Hook.

So farly he is a very brave man, neither is that any thing which I speak to his derogation; for in that I said he is a mangled people, it is no disparage.

Storrs on Ireland.

DEROGATIVE. adj. [derogatius, Latin.]
Derogating; lessening the honour of: not in use.

The wife princes need not think it any diminution to their greatness, or derogation to their sufficiency, to rely upon counsel.

Bacon.

I say not this in derogation to Virgil, neither do I contradict any thing which I have formerly said in his just praise.

Dryden.

None of those patriots will think it a derogation from their native to have it said, that they received many lights and advantages from their intimacy with my lord Somer.

Add.

DEROGATORINESS. n. s. [from derogatory.]
The act of derogating. Did.

DEROGATORY. adj. [derogatorius, Lat.]
Detractive; that lessens the honour of; dishonourable.

They live and die in their abilitiees, passing their days in prevented apprehensions and concepions of the world, derogatory unto God, and the wisdom of the creation.

Brown.

These befe persons are derogatory from the wisdom and power of the Author of nature, who doubtles can govern this machine he could create, by more direct and easy methods than employing these subfervient divinities.

Cham.

DER'VIS. n. s. [derovy, French.] A Turkish priest, champaigner.
Even there, where Christ vouchsafed to teach, Their derefsors dare an impoffor preach. Sandys.
The deroy at first made some scrup of violating his promise to the dying brachmian; but told him, at last, that he could conceal nothing so excellent a prince.

Soparor.

DESCANT. n. s. [discentante, Italian.]
1. A fong or tune composed in parts.
Now, now you are too flate.

And marge the concord with too hard a discent. Shak.

The wakeful nightingale
All night long her amorous discent sung. Milton.

2. A discontinue action or dification branched out into several divisions or heads. It is commonly used as a word of censure or contempt.
Look you get a prayer-book in your hand, And fland between two churchmen, good my lord; For that ground I'll build a holy discent. Shak.

Kindlings would supplant our unkind reportings, and severe discents upon our brethren.

Government of the Tongue.

1. To sing in parts.

To discent in large; to make speeches: in a fene of censure or contempt.
Why I, in this weak piping time of peace, Have no delight to pass away the time, Unleas to lay my shadow in the sun, And discent on mine own deformity.

Shak's Richard III.

Com'th then for this, vain boasteer, to survey me, To discent on my strength, and give thy verdict.

Milton.

A virtuous man should be pleased to find people discenting upon his actions, because, when they are thoroughly canvassed and examined, they turn to him to be Adjudit.

DESCENDANT. n. s. [descendenc, French; descended, Latin.]
The offspring of an ancelor; he that is in the line of generation, at whatever distance.

The descendants of Neptune were planted there.
Bacon.

O, true descendant of a patrent line.
Wouchsafe this picture of thy foul to see. Dryden.

He revealed his own will, and their duty, in a more ample manner than it had been declared to any of my descendants before them. Atterbury.

DESCENDENT. adj. [descendens, Latin.]
It seems to be established, that the subjunctive should derive the termination from the French, and the adjective from the Latin.

1. Falling; sinking; coming down; descending.
There is a refref of the sip in plants from above downwards; and this descendant juice is that which principally nourishes both fruits and plants.

Roy on the Creation.

2. Proceeding from another, as an original or ancelor.
More than mortal grace
Speaks the descendant of eternal race.

Page.

DESCENDIBLE. adj. [from descend.]
1. Such as may be descended; such as may admit of a passage downwards.
Page.

2. Transmissible by inheritance.
According to the customs of other countries, those honorary fees and inculcations were descendible to the eldest, and not to all the males.

DESER.'
1. A single step in the scale of genealogy; a generation.

2. To delineate; to mark out; to trace: as a torch waved about the head describes a circle.

3. To mark out any thing by the mention of its properties.

4. Men passed through the land, and described it by cities into seven parts in a book. Josh. xiii. 9.

5. To define in a lax manner by the promiscuous mention of qualities general and peculiar. See Description.

6. A discoverer; a detector.

7. To take the nectar of a kiss. Georg.

8. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

9. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

10. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

11. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

12. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

13. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

14. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

15. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

16. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

17. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

18. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

19. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

20. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

21. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

22. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

23. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

24. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

25. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

26. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

27. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

28. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

29. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

30. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

31. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

32. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

33. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

34. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

35. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

36. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

37. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

38. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

39. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

40. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

41. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

42. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

43. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

44. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

45. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

46. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

47. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

48. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

49. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

50. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

51. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

52. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

53. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

54. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

55. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

56. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

57. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

58. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

59. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

60. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

61. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

62. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

63. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

64. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

65. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

66. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

67. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

68. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

69. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

70. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

71. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

72. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

73. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

74. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

75. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

76. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

77. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

78. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

79. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.

80. The act of delineating or expressing any person or thing by perceptible properties.
DES.

1. Qualities or conduct considered with respect to rewards or punishments; degree of merit or demerit.

Being of necessity a thing common, it is, through the manifold perfections, dispositions, and occasions of merit, that under both praise and blame, are distinguished from praise and blame, by the learned.

2. To form or order with a particular purpose; with regard to the subject. The skilful writer was perfectly designed for the literary purpose of the being, whom the most excellect creatures are bound to adore as well as to fear. Stilling we do you not for obliquity desist? But, like the sun, must cheer all human kind.

3. To devote intentionally with the design of employing a thing which is unjustly disposed of by the old man to his son. Car. He was born to the inheritance of a splendid fortune; he was design in the study of the law. Dryd.

4. To plan; to design; to form in idea. We are to observe whether the picture or outlines be well drawn, or as more elegant artists term it, well designed; then, whether it be well coloured, which be the general heads. Wherein I think the art is not from me, but of the new elected first, and the design.

5. To mark out by particular tokens; little used. I am not enough to make a man a subject, to consider him that is regal in the world; but there must be ways of designating and knowing the person to whom this regal power of fighting belongs.

DES'G. n. [from the verb.]

1. An intention; a purpose.

2. A scheme; a plan of action.

3. A scheme formed to the detriment of another.

A sedate servant upon another man's life, put him in a state of war with him against whom he has declared such an intention. Lact.

4. The idea which an arithmetical endeavours to execute or express.

I doubt not but in the discovery of several Greek medals one may often for the hand of an Apples or Protogenes. Thy hand strikes out some new design, where life awakes and dawns at every line. Pape.

DESIGNABLE. adj. [design, Latin.] Distinguishable; capable to be particularly marked out.

The power of all natural agents is limited: the more we must be continued to observe these proportions, and cannot pass over all these infinite different degrees in an infant. Dilly.

DESIGNATION, n. s. [designatio, Latin.]

1. The act of pointing or marking out by some particular token.

This is a plain design, because the duke of Marlborough was one kind of stuff, and the fairest hand is called marron, and every body knows that borough is a name for a town. Swift.

2. Appointment; direction.

Without the Congregational to use that claim to the beginning, but mixed it with a legislative presence, grounded upon the will and designation of Edward the Confessor. Bacon.

3. Import; intention.

Desire and intention to be looked upon by me as the mind of quantities, and to be attributed primarily in their first design only to those things which have parts, and are capable of increase or diminution. Leib.

DESIGNEDLY. adv. [design, Latin.] Purposely; intentionally; by design or purpose; not ignorantly; not inadvertently; not fortuitously.

Uts made things; that is to say, these things were made designedly, and on purpose, for such an use as they are the end of them that.

The next thing is sometimes designedly to put children in pain; but care must be taken that this be done when the child is in good humour. Lact.
Drink provokes, and unprovokes; it provokes the defier, but it takes away the performance.

Shakespeare.

Defier's the vast extent of human mind;
It mounts above, and leaves poor hope behind.

Dryden.

It is in a man's power only to observe what the ideas are that take their turns in his understanding, or else to direct the fast, and call in such as he hath a defier or use of.

Love.

To Desir' v. n. [defirer, French; defierare, Latin.]

1. To wish; to long for; to covet.

Thou shalt not defire the silver or gold.

Durst, vii. 25.

2. To express wishes; to appear to long;
Love beheld it with a defiring book.

Dryden.

3. To &c.; to intreat.

Sir, I intreat you home with me to dinner;
I humbly do defire your grace of pardon;
I must away this night.

Shakespeare.

But since you your return intreat in our fast, and Troys dissaf'rous end to defire, I will reframe my tears, and briefly tell
What in our last and fatal night befell.

Dryden.

4. To require; to demand. Not in use.

A defier's task a doleful one.

Without vain art or curious compliments.
Spenor.

Desir'er. n. f. [from defirer.]

One that is eager of any thing; a wilier.
I will counterfeit the bewitchment of some prominent man, and give it hountfully to the defier.

Shakespeare.

Desir'ous. adj. [from desirer.]

Full of desire; eager; longing after; wishing for.

The same pietie which maketh them that are in uncertainty about it, to please and reformable God by justice, inflameth every way men of action with zeal to do good.

Hooker.

Be not defirous of his dainties; for they are deceitful and unprofitable.

Prov. xxiii. 1, 2.

Men are drowsy and defiers to sleep before the fit of an auge, and yarn and yarsh.

Bacon.

Waiting defier, you have won.

Of choice fleaw's a garland.

Milton.

Conjugal affection,
Prevailing over fear and timorous doubt,
Hath like a defier to behold
Once more thy face.

Milton.

Desir'ousness. n. f. [from desirer.]

Fulness of defier; eagerness.

Desir'ously, adv. [from desirer.]

Eagerly; with defier; with ardent wish.

Desir'ousness, n. f. [from desirer.]

Fulness of defier; eagerness.

Desir'ously, adv. [from desirer.]

Eagerly; with defier; with ardent wish.

Desir'ousness, n. f. [from desirer.]

Fulness of defier; eagerness.

Desir'ously, adv. [from desirer.]

Eagerly; with defier; with ardent wish.

To Desist. v. n. [desist, Latin.]

To cease from any thing; to stop: with from.

Desist, thou art dier'd,
And toll'd in vain; nor me in vain misled.

Milton.

There are many who will not quit a project, though they find it pernicious or absurd; but will continue it, when they are convinced it is impracticable.

Addison.

Desist'ance. n. f. [from desist.]
The act of desisting; cessation.

Men usually give freewill where they have given himself; and make it his own motive and except of their desisters from giving any more, that they have given already.

Ryle.

Desis'tive, adj. [defis'tus, Latin.]
End- ing: conclusive; final.

Inceptive and desistive propositions are of this sort: the frogs vanish as the fun rises; but the frogs have not yet begun to vanish, therefore the fun is not yet risen.

Wallis.

Desist, n. f. [desist, a table, Dutch.]
An inclining table for the use of writers or readers, made commonly with a box or repository under it.

Lichte.
D E S

2. That, which causes despair; that of which there is no hope.

Strangely visited people,
All faith and hope, put out of the eye;
The ears were deaf, and the heart was a weary;
Hanging a golden rope about their necks,
Put me, with holy prayer.

[In theology.] Loss of confidence in the mercy of God.

Are not all or most evangelical virtues and graces in danger of extremes? As there is, God knows, too often a defect on the one side, so there may be an excess on the other; may not hope in God, if it be not carefully preserved in proportion to despair?

Spratt.

4. To desire, w. n. [desire, Latin.] To be without hope; to despair; with before a noun.

Though thou drawest a sword at thy friend, yet despair not; for there may be a running.

Eccles. xlix. 21.

We commend the wit of the Chinese, who desire of making of gold, but are mad upon making of silver.

Never desire of God's blessings here, or of his reward hereafter; but go on as you have begun.

Wits.

D E S P A I R E. n. s. [from despair.] One without hope.

He cheers the fearful, and consoles the bold,
And makes despairers hope for good success. Dryd.

D E S P A I R E. v. adj. [despair and full.]

Hopeless. Obsolete.

That sweet but fentcteful care.
Sidney.

Other cares amongst the Irish favour of the Syrenian barbarism; as the lamentations of their burials, with despairful outcries. Spenser.

D E S P A I R I N G L Y. adv. [from despairing.]

In a manner betokening hopelessness and dependence.

It speaks cowardly and despondingly of our society.

Bogi.

D E S P A T C H. v. a. [despatch, Fr.]

To send away hastily.

Doctor Theodore Coleby, a sober man, I despatched immediately to Utrecity, to bring the more, and learn the exact method of using it in Temple.

The good lEneas, whose paternal care,
Kills' absence could no longer bear.
Despatched, he comes in haste, and
To give a glad relation of the past. Dryd.

2. To send out of the world; to put to death.

Edmund, I think, is gone,
In pity of his misery, to despatch.
His knightly life. Shakespeare.

And the company shall loose them with stores, and despatch them with their victuals. Encl. xxviii. 47.

In combating, but two of you will fall;
And we resolve we will despatch you all. Dryd.

Despatch me quickly, I may death forgive;
I shall grow tender elks, and wish to live. Dryd.

3. To perform a business quickly; as, I despised his affairs, and ran hither.

Therefore commanded he his chariot-man to drive without ceasing, and to despatch the journey, the judgment of God now following him.

No sooner is one action despatched, which, by such a determination at the will, we are for upon, but another uneasiness is ready to set us on work. Locke.

4. To conclude an affair with another.

What are the brothers parted?
—they have despatch't with Pompey; he's gone. Shakespeare.

D E S P A T C H E N. n. s. [from the verb.]

1. hastily execution; speedy performance.

Afflicted despatches is one of the most dangerous business that can be. Bacon.

2. You'd for, could you her inward motions watch,
Reigning delays, the wishes for despatch;
Then to a wound, if so you would heal,
Thou read her backward. Gravimile.

The despatch of a good office is very often at benevolent to theibolier, as the good office itself. Addison.

Conduct; management. Obsolete.

You shall put this night's great business into my despatch,
Which shall, to all our days and stays to come,
Give solely concern (way and manner. Skar.

3. Express; hasty messenger or message;
as, despatches were sent away.

D E S P A T C H F U L L v. adj. [from despatch.]

Best on haste; intent on speedy execution of business.

So saying, with despatchful looks in haste
She turns, on hopeful thoughts intent. Athen.

Let one despatchful bid some found ways to lead
A well-fed halloch from the gristy mead. Locke.

D E S P E R A T E. v. adj. [despaterus, Latin.]

1. Without hope.

Since his exile she hath despaired me most;
Forworn my company, and railed at me,
That I am despatcher of her distress. Shakespeare.

2. Without care, safety, rash; precipitant; fearful of danger.

Can you think, my lord,
That any Englishman dare give me counsel, or he a known friend gainst his highest pleasures,
Though he be grown so despatcher to be bane,
And live a subject?

He who goes on without any care or thought of reforming, such an one we vulgarly call a despatcher, and that fare is a most damping thing. Hammond.

3. Irretrievable; unfurnishable; irrecoverable.

These debts may well be called despatched ones;
For a mad man own them. Shakespeare.

In a part of Alca the Bel, when their care comes to be thought despatched, are carried out and laid on the earth, before they are dead, and left there.

I am a man of despatched fortunes, that is, a man whose friends are dead; for I never aimed at any other fortune than in friends. Pope to Swift.

4. Mad; hot-brained; furious.

Were any physician to with his friend dead, rather than to apply the best endeavour of his skill for his recovery?

Spenser's State of Ireland.

5. It is sometimes used in a sense nearly ludicrous, and only marks any bad quality predominating in a high degree.

Concluding all more despatch full of fools, and fools, that durst depart from Aristotle's rules. Pope.

D E S P E R A T E L Y. adv. [from despatch.]

1. Furiously; madly; without attention to safety or danger.

Your eldest daughters have foredone themselves,
And despatchedly are dead. Shakespeare.

There might be somewhat in it, that he would not have done, or defined undone, when he broke forth as desparately as before he had done unluckily.

Benjamin Franklin.

2. In a great degree; violently: this sense is ludicrous.

She fell desparately in love with him, and took a voyage into Sicily in pursuit of him. Addison.

D E S P E R A T E N E S S. n. s. [from despatcher.]

Madness; fury; precipitance.

The graining not only in terms of assurance and maintenance of conscience, but also boldly, hopefully, confidently, in witful habits of fun, is called a desparation; and of the more bold thus, the more

Bacon.

D E S P E R A T I O N. n. s. [from despatcher.]

Hopeless; despair; despondency.
D

E

D E

S

'Wth men the(e confiderations .-.re nfually the -caufcs o( deffue, difdaln^ or avcrfion from others;
but with God they pafs for reafons of our greater
,

Spratt,

tenderness towards 'thers.

3. Defiance
The

;

unlubdue.d oppodtion.

life, tliou gav'ft

inc

2.

was firft, loft

and done

Till with thy war like fword, deffjre of fate,
Tomydetermin'd time thou gav'ft new date.

Shah

My life

thou (halt command, but not my fhame
The one my duty owes; bu: my fair name,
Di/'file of death, that lives upon my grave,
To dark difiionour's ufe thou (halt not hxrt. Shai.
Know I will ferve the fair in thy diffite. DryJ.
I have not quitted yet a vi«£lor's right
-I*il make you happy in your own defpUe, Drydar*
Say, would the tender creature, in de/ftte
Of heat by day, and chilling dews by night.
Blacimere.
Its life maintain ?
Thou, with rebel infolence, didft dare
To own and to protedt that hoary ruffian ;

And,

in deff.iit

ey'nof tby father's

To DESPO'ND.

1

Tc

to difappoint

Saturn, with his wife Rhea, ded by night ; fetting the lown on fire, to dcMie Bacchus. Ra/figh.

Despi'teful.

atij.

and [tie/fite

Malicious ; full of fpleen malignant ; mifchievous perfor.s and things.

;
:

aJ-v,

[ham

de/piteful.]

Malicioufly ; malignantly.
Pray for them that drfpiitfullj ufe you and perfecute you.
Matthnv, v. 44.

Despi'tefulness.
Malice

n. /,

[

frtm

defpite-

hate ; malignity.
Let us examine him with drjfilcfulntjt and torture, that we know his meeknefs, and prove his fttl.^

;

patience.

fVifd.

IJespi'teous.

adj. [from

defpite.'\

A

ii.

19.

ad'v.

In a furious manner

The Deep

That mortal

fteel

:

[from deff'naujly entail'd

in their flc(h, quite thro' the iron walls, a large purple (Iream adown their giambeux

Sfenfir.

ro DESPO'IL.
I.

defpittous .'\

not in ufe.

falls.

'V.

a.

[de/pollc,

Lat.]

To

He confiders what is tlie natural tendency of -virtue, or fuch a vice : he is well apprized that the reprefentation of fome of thefe things mav convince the underftanding, fome may terrify the confcience, fome may allure the flothful, and fome encourage the diffondng mind.

Despo'ndency.
Despo'ndent.
Defpairing
It is well

adj.

To

thy way, or fend thee back
Dej'ftild »/ innocence., of faith, of blifs.
Mihn.
He, pale as death, deJfcU'd of Wis an ay,
Into the queen's apartment takes his way. Drjd.
Ev';i now thy *d,
"lugene, with regiments unequal preft,
Awiits ! this day a/all his honours gain'd
Dc/poilt him, if t'ly fuccour oppoituDC thleaiii not the fad hour.
FbUI'tpt.

At your folute in

Thci-e is a great variety of apprehcnfions
and fancies of men, in tht drjliralion and application
of tilings to fcveral ends ajid ufes.
I/alt.

To De'stine.
1.

;

2.

a.

[dep'no, Latin.]

to

DryJ,

To

appoint to any ule or purpofe.
Too thin blood ftrays into the immediately fubordinate velTels, which are d.fmed to carry fecreted from the blond.

Ariutbtic, cr.

3.

humourl

To Mmnls.

devote ; to doom to puniilimcnt or mifery
ufed ablblutely.
:

May
The
4.

To

heav'n around this dejlm'd head choiceft of its curfes /lied.

Prior.

unalterably.
The infernal judges dreadful pow'r

From

fix

the dark urn ihall throw thy dijliti'd hour.

De'stiny.
God's univcrfal law

I.

Guve to the man dtjpcikk power
Over his female in due awe,
Nor from that right to part an hour.
Smile (he or lowre.

enjom'-d them witii power

:

it had the paffions in perfcfl fubjcflion

; though its command over them was but pcrfualive and political, yet it had the force of coaflive and dr/foikal.
Scrub.

We

may fee in a neighbouring government the confcqucnces of having a dcfpotkk prince for j notv/ithftanding there is vaft ex:cnt

of

of Uieia better ihaa Uinfc «f the lanrfs,

SwiU

and
and

n.f. {deftmee, French.]
that fpins the life, and determines the fate, of living beings.

The power

Thou art neither like thy fire or damBut, like a foul mif-(hapen ftigmat'ck, Mark'd by the drfthncs to be avoided.
Shakcfptart.

Milroti.

In all its directions of the inferior faculties, reafon conveyed its fuggeftions with clearncfs,
and many

-v.

devote; to appoint unalterably to any Hate or condition.
;

unac-countable.

ill

To doom

Wherefore ceafc we then ?
Say thay who counfel war : we arc decreed,
Referv'd, and d./liti'd to eternal woe
;
Whatever doing, what can we fufjer more?
A/;*.
All altars fjame; before each altar lies,
Drench'd in his gore, the dtfth'd facrifice.

power; unli-

arbitrary

;

;

pafTagcs through derful that they (hould perform their regular rfey?,without lofirg their way.

Clanvillr.

DE'SPOT. »./

3

couife was well lerv'd up in plate.

isatkrs

^

mited in authority

Ijrft

the ultimate defign.
which fpirits are conveyed to the members, being almoft infinite, and each of them drawn through fo many meanders, it is won-

The Ttmfn.

Ab-

the

on the table after thy due, thou haft the art with a (ine Jf[rert.

Diydm.
bright pewter comes too late.

def/irt

your pointed ftt

z/^/^fl/.]

fet

The

Dest:na'tion. ». /. [from def/natf.]
The purpofe for which any thing is ap-

other.

[from

[{rom. /quanta,

DE'STINATE. -v. a. [defim, Lat.]''fo
defign for any particular end or purpofe.
Birds are dtftir.ated to Hy among the branches
of
trees and bulhes.
Ray o„ tht Creatkn.

Idefponfi, Lat.]
betroth ; to afHance ; to iaiiite by reciprocal promifes of marriage.

7

;

To

DESPO'NSATE. -v. a.

«<?>.

n. /.

n.f. [de/erte, French.]
courfe at an entertainment;

When

To Despo'tical.

Despo'tick.

to froth

;

To give thee all
To make a fupper

Lum.]

[Jj,^„i;.] An abfolute prince ; one that governs with unlimited authority.
This word is not in ufe, except as applied to fome Dacian prince
j as, the d^fpot of Servia.

[de/pumo, Lat.]

foam of fcaling foul bones.

fweetmeats
the meat.

hopelefs ; without hope.
known, both fnim ancient and mo-dead tree, a dull dtffimdni flock.

«.

term of chirurgery^

fruit or

;

Congregated thru(hes, linnets,

On the

.

throiv oiF parts in laft defperaticn.

;

dern experience, that the ve:y boldeft athcifts, out of their debauches and company, when they chance to be furprifed with folitude or fickncfs, «re the moft fufpicious, timorous, and deffsndatt wretches
'
in the world.
Sttitlcy.

are nobly born,

Vih'/iled tf your honour in your life. Hhahffrart.
lie waits, with hellifh rancour im.-ninent.

A

Watts.

[de/poftdens,

from

Fr.

[defpotifme,

n.f. [from defpumate.]
aft of tlwowing oiFexcrementitious parts in fcum or foam.

[from dejpondent.]

»./.

Defpair; hopeleflnefs

Spfnfer,

To intercept hope of the dcfpoti-

The

fuch a rob ; to deprive : witTi of.

Veffoird 0/ vnrVikc arms, and knowen (hield.

You

lofe

[from

DEspuMA'-notf.

L'Efirangc.

Ma- Desponsa'tion. It. f. [from de/pon/ale.]
of ufe.
The aft of betrothing perfons to each licious ; forions.

word now out
The knight of the red-crofs, when him he fpicd
Sparring fo hot with rage difp'tmus,
"Can fairly couch his fpcar.
Fair^ ^nr.
Turning defpitecui torture out of door. ' Shaktjp.

Despi'teously.

To

.Sivfc,

.

to work.

learned leaches in defpair depart.

[In theology.]
divine mercy.

2.

Shakrjpearf,

Despi'tefully.

To

:

firft di(Sculty;
and conclude, that making any prpgrefs in knowledge, f .rthcr than fervcs their ordinary bufinefj, is above their capacities.
Locke.

Addifon,

n. /.

DESPU'MATE. f

To

L-EJIrapge.

and refignation.
Phyfick is their bane

the latter ate

Abfolute power.

defpot.']

(hake their heads, dtff ending ot thtir art. Dryd.
Others deprefs their own mi'nds, dcfpcnd at the deffUeful Juno, fcnt him forth courtly friends with camping foes to live,

Preferve \a from the hands of our drffittful ani
Jeadly enemies.
^'"F Charlii.
Mean while the heinous and defyittfuri&.
Of Satan, done in Paradife, was known
In heav'n.
M}llen.

De'spotism. n.f.

Desse'rt.

/u/l.]

death and danger dog the heels of worth.

LaV,]

among Abfolute authority.

(«/.]

Sfieafer.

vidence has given us for a guide ; ard then, when we have done our own parts, to commit all chearfully, for the reft, to the good pleafure of heaven,

The
And

I, his

From Where

laid in ealy bed.

Desquama'tion.
Latin.]
The aft

truft

people

and dr/poikk fiaverj.

There is no furer remedy for fuperftitious and dcjfond'mg weakn«»'s, than tirft to govern ourlelves by the beft irapt«vement of that rcafon which pro-

with full of hate ;

ufed both of common batter fituation.

Patriots were forced to give way to the ni idnefs of the people, who were now wholly bent upoa fingle

.

to give

;

much

Despo'ticalness.

'gjn de'pcil

Prs^'^nt-

Rowt.

Crifons, the in a

not in ufe.

:

-v. a. ideffondco, Lat.]
defpair ; to lofe hope ; to become hopelefs or defperate.
It is every man's duty to labour in his cabling, and not to dijprd for any mifcarriages or difappointments that were not in his own power tu

.

aft of oppofition.
;
His punifliment, eternal milery.
It would be all his folace and revenge.
As a dtffitc done againft the Moft High,
Thee once to gain companion of his woe. MlUor.
To Despi'te. -v. a. [from the noun.] To
;

to llrip

OfpuilTant arms, and

3. Aft of malice vex ; to offend

uneaCnefs to.

Simply

DispoLl a'tion. «. / [from defpoUo,
The aft of defpoiling orftripniner.

jufticc.

the faftious rabble up to arm',

ftir

diveft by any accident.
Thefc formed ftoncs, </f//i«'W 0/" their (hells, and expofed upon the furface of the ground, in time moulder away,
K^ocdieard.

A groom

'

To

To

3.

5"

DE

S

z.

Fate ; invincible neceffifcy.
He faid, dear daughter, rightly may I rue
The fall of famous children born of me
'
But who can turn the ftveam of dcftiyi.
Or break the chain of ftrong necfliity,
Which fa!i is tied to Jove's ;:ternal feat? F^thy
•

How can hearts, not free, be tried whether fervc

Willin?: or no,

By

deji.nj,

who 9 tW

a

but what they m\i{i
and c«] no o her chufe?
Uilien. will

3

^ a

H*i


DE defy

Had they the great defy but given the bell To know, as well as pote's act, her will. Degas.

Doom.
3. Doon.

Doste.

Dost, the friendles.

Dost,

Doulas.
3. Doon.

Doyen.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.

Drama.
DET

He has described the passion of Calypso, and the indecent advances the maid to detain him from his country.

3. To refrain from departure.

Let us detain the youth, we shall have made ready a kid. J. D. xi. 15.

She Orpheus sung it in the utmost sphere;
So much the hymn had pleas'd the syren's ear.
The wind had been detain'd to keep her husband there.

4. To hold in custody.

 DETAIN. n. f. [from detain.] The name of a writ for holding one in custody.

DETAIN. n. f. [from detain.] He that holds back any one's right; he that detains any honor.

Judge of the obligation that lies upon all sorts of Injurious persons; the specious, the detainer of tithes, and cheaters of men's inheritances. Taylor.

5? DETECT. v. a. [detect.] To
1. To discover; to find out any crime or artifice.

There's no true lover in the crowd; each eating himself, and grinning every hour, would distect the lazy foot of time as well as a clock. Shaks.

Though should I hold my peace, yet thou

2. To discover in general.

The utmost infinite ramifications and insculp-tions of all the several sorts of vellies may easily be detected by glasse. Ray.

DETECTER. n. f. [from detect.] A dicoverer; one that finds out what another desires to hide.

Oh heavens! I that this treason was not; or not I the detector. Shaks. Phars.

Hypocrisy has a secret hatred of its detector;
that which will bring it to a task which it cannot

DETECTION. n. f. [from detect.] 1.
Discovery of guilt or fraud, or any other fault.

Should I come to her with any eisellm in my hand, I could drive her then from the ward of her purse.

That is a sign of the true evangelical zeal, and note for the detection of its contrary: it should abound more in the mild and good-natured affections, than in the vehement and wrathful passions.
Woodward.

Determination. n. f. [from detain.]

1. The act of keeping what belongs to anything.

Ho. how goes the world, that I am thus encountered
With clamrous claims of debt, of broken bonds,
And the detection of long unfaire due debts,
Vowing they may never be paid. Shaks.

2. Confinement; restraint.

This worketh by detection of the spirits, and coronation of the tangible parts. Baian.

To DETEER. v. a. [deterre, Lat.] To discover by terror or to fright from any thing.

1. I never yet the trugle breed astray'd,
Deterre'd by thy irresistible maid. Wall.

Many and potent enemies tempe and dete our from our duty; yet our case is not hard, so long as we have a greater strength on our side. Tilbyson.

Trees, or fences of any force to draw or deter imitation, than any diversions which can be made to them. Locke.

DETERGER. v. a. [deterge, Lat.] To cleanse a forge; to purr any part out from fractures or obstructions.

Consider the part and habit of body, and add or diminish your yimes as you design to derg or incarn. Winson.

Sea salt prefers bodies, through which it paffes, from corruption; and it derg its vesels; and keeps the fluids from putrefaction.

DETERGENT. adj. [from derg.]

That which cleans.

The good ought to be nörmgshing and dergent.

DETERMINATION, n. f. [from deter,
Lat.]

The act of making any thing worse; the state of growing worse.

DETERM. n. f. [from deter.]

That of discourageing, that by which one is deterred. A good word, but not now used.

This will not be thought a discourageing unto spirits, which endeavour to advantage nature by art; nor will the ill success of some be made a

There are not all the determination that oppresses my obeying you. Boyle.

DETERMINABLE. adj. [from determine.]

That which may be certainly decided.

Whether all plants have feds, were more easily determinable, if we could conclude concerning hurt-gagers, fumes, and some others.

Brown's Vulgar Errors. About this matter, which seems to easily deter-minate by taste, accurate and sober men widely differ. Boyle.

To DETERMINE, v. a. [determine, French.]

To limit; to fix; to determine; to terminate: not in use.

The fly-flow hours shall not determine
The dateless limit of thy dear exile. Shakespeare.

DETERMINE. adj. [determinatius, Latin.]

1. Settled; definite determined.

Determinations in numbers, if they are not more evident and exact than in extension, yet they are more general in their use, and deter-nate in their applications.

Locke.

To determine all the planets more about the fun in circulating orbs, there must be given to each, by a de-teminate impulse, those distinct peculiar degrees of velocity which they now have, in proportion to their distances from the sun, and to the quantity of the

2. Established; settled by rule; positive.

Scriptures are read before the time of divine service, and without either choice or flint appointed by the determinate order. Hucker.

3. Decisive; conclusive.

I th' progress of this business,
Ere a determine resolution, he,
I mean the bishop, did require a refert. Shak.

Fixed; resolve.

Like men diffused in a long space, more deter-minate to do, than skilful how to do. Sidney.

5. Revolved.

My determinate voyage is more extravagant
Shakespeare.

DETERMINE. adv. [from determine.]

1. Reluctantly; with fixed resolve.

The queen obeyed the king's commandment, full of raging aggriment, and determinately bent that the would look all lovingly means to win Leidmone.

Sidney.

2. Unconditionally.

In those errors they are to determinately settled, that they pay unto futility the whole form of whatsoever love is owing unto God's truth. Hucker.

DETERMINE. adv. [from determine.]

1. Absolutely to a certain end.

When we voluntarily waive much of our lives, that discriminates can by no means confine with a confident determination of will or desire to the great-east apparent good. Locke.

2. The refut of deliberation; conclusion formed; resolution taken.

Shakespeare's Merchant of Venice. The proper acts of the intellect are intermedication, deliberation, and determination or decision.

Hume's Of Man. It is much disputed by divines, concerning the power of man's will to good and evil in the state of impartiality; and upon very nice and dextrous principles fixed their determinatethor ther.

Spence. Conflict thy judgment, affections, and inclinations, and make thy determination upon every particular; and be always as jubilant of thyself as possible. Calamy.

3. Judicial decision.

He confined the knowledge of governing to justice and lenity, and to the proper determination of civil and criminal causes. Calundeau.

DETERMINE. adv. [from determine.]

1. That which uncontrovertably directs to either end.

That individual action, which is justly punished as sinful in us, cannot proceed from the special influence and determinative power of a just cause.

Bramhall against Hobbes.

2. That which makes a limitation.

If the term added to make up the complex subject does not necessarily or constantly belong to it, then it is determinative, and limits the subject to a particular part of its extension; as, every glosse being a determinative.

DETERMINE. n. f. [from determine.]

One who determines.

They have recourse unto the great determinate of virginty, conceptions, fertility, and the infer-arable infirmities of the whole body. Brown.

To DETERMINE, v. a. [determine, Fr.]

1. To fix; to settle.

Is it concluded he shall be protector?

—It is determin'd, not concluded yet;

But f'st it must be, if the king's military. Shak.

That particular's fixed by to determine the proper flection for grammar, I do not fee how it can be made a fluidy, but as so introduction to rhotick. Locke.

2. To conclude; to fix ultimately.

Probability, in the nature of it, suggests that a thing may or may not be so, for any thing that yet appears, or is certainly determinate, on the other side.

Southwark. Hume's subject was still greater than Hume's or Virgil's it do not determine the fate of singular persons or nations, but of a whole species.

Addison.

Defination hangs on every word we speak.

On every thought, till the concluding stroke
Determine s all, and closes our design.

Addison.

3. To bound; to confine.

The knowledge of men hitherto hath been deter-ned by the view or figure; so that whatsoever

—innovably, either in respect of the infamous of the body
DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DET

DE}
DEU

If any shall detract from a lady's character, unleas he be absent, the said detractor shall be forthwith ordered to the lowest place of the room.

D E Y

D E V

DETRIMENT. n. f. [detrimentum, Lat.
Lose; damage; mischief; diminution; harm.

Difficult it must be for one Christian church to abolish that which had all received and held for the space of many ages, and that without religious reason. Hooker.

I can repair
That detriment, if such it be, to lose
Self-lost.
Its joint power prevails, the affairs of hell.
No detriment need fear; go, and be strong. Milton.
There often fall out so many things to be done on the stormy sea, that none of them must be neglected for that whole year, who in the greatest detriment to this whole mystery.

Lovel's Calendar.

Let a family burn but a candle a right light for the usual number, and they may take in the Spec-ator without detriment to their private affairs.

Addison.

D E TR I N T A L. adj. [from detriment]
Mitchiefous; harmful; causing loss.

Among all honest endeavours, which are neither dangerous nor detrimental to the donor, I remember none so remarkable as the titles which are beferred by the emperor of China; these are never given to any subject till the subject is dead.

Addison.

Obstinate in prejudices, which are detrimental to our country, ought not to be mithand in virtusiousresolution and firmness of mind. Addison.

D E T R I T I O N. n. f. [detero, detritus, Lat.
The act of wearing away. Did.

To D E T R U D E. v. a. [detruo, Latin.
To thrash down; to force into a lower place.
Such as are detruded down to hell.
Either for shame, or for mischiefs, they retire,
Or, died in chains, they close prison dwell.

Davies.

Philosophers are of opinion, that the number of men may, for their miscarriages, be detruded into the bodies of beasts.

Locke.

At thy command the vernal sun awakes
The torpid fire, detruded to the root
By wintry winds. Thomson.

To D E T R U N C A T E. v. o. a. [detruo, Latina.
To lop; to cut; to shorten by deprivation of parts.

D E T R U N C A T I O N. n. f. [from detruncate.
The act of lopping or cutting.

D E T R U S I O N. n. f. [from detruso, Latin.
The act of cutting off or thrusting.

From this drusion of the waters towards the side, the parts towards the pole must be much in creased. Kell against Breret.

D E T U R B A T I O N. n. f. [de turbare, Latin.
The act of throwing down; degradation.

D E V A S T A T I O N. n. f. [devasto, Latin.
Waste; havoc; desolation; destruction.

By devastation the rough warrior gain,
And farmers fatten more when famine reigns.

Gibbs.

That flood which overwhelmed Attesa in the Days of Oggy, and that which drowned Thethis in Dorcas's time, made cruel havoc and devastations among them. Woodward.

D E V E. n. s. [dave, French.]
1. Two: a word used in games.
You are a gentleman and a gambler; then, I am sure you know how much the great ones of are denoted to.

Shakespeare.

2. The devil. See DEVE.

D E V E L O P. v. a. [developer, French.]
To digg from something that en-folds and conceals; to disentangle; to clear from its covering.

Take him to develop, if you can.
And how the block off, and get out the man.

D E Y E R G E N C E. n. s. [deverygentia, Lat.
Declivity; declination.

D E Y E R S T. v. a. [deyster, French; de and scito, Latin.]
1. To flipp; to deprive of clothes.
In quarter and in terms like bide and groom
Deceiving them for bed.

Shakespeare.

Then of his arms Andreus he deyest.
His favor, his shield, he took, and pled the cross.

Dryden.

2. To annul; to take away any thing
good.
What are those breaches of the law of nature and nations, which do forfeit and deveyest all right and title in a nation to government? Bacon.

3. To free from any thing bad.
On come, thou little innate of this breach,
Which for thy fake from pailsim I deveryest. Prior.

D E V E X ' s. adj. [devenix, Latin.]
Bending down; declivous; incurved downwards.

D E V I C I T Y. n. s. [from devicer. Incubration downwards; declivity.

To D E V I A T E. v. n. [de via decedere, Latin.
1. To wander from the right way.
The reft to some faint meaning make pretence,
But Shadwell never entertain'd it. Dryden.

Thus Pegasus, a nearer way to take,
May boldly deviate from the common track. Pope.

What makes all physical and moral ill?
That nature deviates, and here wonders wills. Pope.

Besides places which may deviate from the sense of the author, it would be kind to observe any deficiencies in the edition.

Pope.

2. To go afar; to err; to sin; to offend.

D E V I A T I O N. n. f. [from deviate.
The act of quitting the right way; erro; wandering.

These bodies constantly move round in the same tracks, without making the least deviation. Cheyne.

2. Variation from established rule.

Having once surveyed the text and proper natu-nal alphabet we may easily discover the deviations from it, in all the alphabets in use, either by defect of single characters, or letters, or composition of them. Holder.

3. Offence; obliquity of conduct.
Worthy persons, if inadvertently drawn into a deviation, will endeavor instantly to recover their lost ground, that they may not bring error into habit.

Cherl.

D E V I C E. n. s. [devise, French; devise, Italian.]
1. A contrivance; a stratagem.
This is no device,
That Falstaff at that oak shall meet with us.

Shakespeare.

He intended it as a politick device to leven their interest, and keep them low in the world. Atrip.

2. A defign; a scheme formed; project;
speculation.

Touching the exchange of laws in practice with laws in device, which they say are better for the state of church, if they might take place; the farther we examine them, the greater cases we find to conclude, although we continue the fame we are, the harm is not greater. Hooker.

His device is against Babylon, to destroy it.

Jen. II. 11.

There are many devices in a man's heart; nevertheless the counsel of the Lord shall stand.

Prov. xiv. 21.

3. The emblem on a shield: the enigm armorial of a nation or family.

Then change we shield; and their device bear.
Let truth supplant the want of force in war. Dryd.

D'Artillery's barb, device of her command,
And parent of her mirth, shall there be seen.

Prior.

They intend to let the world see what party they are of, by figures and devices upon these fans; as the knights-errant used to distinguish themselves by devices on their shields.

Addison.

4. Invention; genius.

For gentles are all schooled, and yet learned:
full of noble devices, of all sorts enchantingly loved.

Shakespeare.

D E V I L. n. f. [cupul, Saxox; diabulus, Latin. It were more properly written devil.

1. A fallen angel; the tempter and spiritual enemy of mankind.

Are you a man?

—Ay, and a bold one, that dare look on that
Which might appall the devil. Shakes.

2. A wicked man or woman.

See thyself, devil.

Properly of family not in the fiend.
So horrid as in woman. Shakespeare.

3. A ludicrous term for mischief.

A war of profit mitigates the evil.
Turn not at heart, and be not, as the devil. Grov'llll's

4. A kind of explicable, expressing wonder or vexation.
The things, we know, are neither rich nor rare;
But wonder how the devil they got there? Pope.

5. A kind of ludicrous negative in an adverbial sense.

The devil was well, the devil a monk was not.

A Proverb.

D E V I L I S H. adj. [from devol.]
1. Partaking of the qualities of the devil; diabolical; mischievous; malicious; destructive.

Gynecia misruffled greatly Cerepeia, because she had heard much of the devilish wickedness of her heart. Sidney.

For-grief thereof, and devilish delight,
From his infant furnace forth he threw
Huge flames of Satan's infernal night.
Enroll'd in duck'd smoke and brimstone blue.

Spen.

He trains his devilish enginy, impal'd
On cards with shadowy squadrons deep, Miles.

2. Having communication with the devil.

The deceiver, by his subterfuge,
Upon my life began her devilish practices. Shak.

3. An epitaph of abhorrence or contempt.

A devilish knave! besides, the knife is hand-fome, young, and byth; all those requisites are in him that delight.

Shakespeare.

4. Excessive: in a ludicrous sense.

Thy hair and beard are of a different dye,
Short of a foot, disdained of an eye.
With all these tokens of a knave complete,
If thou art honest, thou'rt a devilish chest. All

D E V I L I S H L Y. adv. [from devilsh.] In a manner fuiting the devil; diabolically;

These trumpeters threatened them with continuance of slanderous; if they did not venture life, fortune, and all, in that which wickedly and devilishly those impostors called the cause of God.

South.

D E V I L K I N. n. s. [from devil.] A little devil.

Cherl.

D E V I L O U S. adj. [devius, Latin.]
1. Out of the common track.
Cruels kept behind: by choice we stray
Through ev'ry dark and ev'ry devilous way. Dryd.
DEV.

1. To dedicate; to consecrate; to appropriate by vow.

2. To dedicatethat a man shall devote unto the Lord, of all that he hath, both of man and beast, and of the field of his possessiion, shall be sold or redeemed. Lev. xxv. 23.

3. What black magician conjures up this fand, To stop devotest hallow oer Shakespeare. Thymis, impious, daed to pray

4. On herds devoted to the god of day. Page

To addid; to a sect, or study.

5. This virtue, and this moral discipline, Let's be no flocks, nor no stocks, I pray; Or to devote to Aristotle's checks,

6. As Ovid he ourself quites. Shakespeare.

If perfons of this make should ever devote themselves to science, they should be well assured of a solid and strong constitution of body. Watts.

To condemn; to resign to ill.

7. Aliens were devoted to their rape and delight. Drye of Pity.

Ah why, Penelope, this caustic fear,

To render Sleep's first blessings infamous

And envy to her son's extreme devotion.

The day sekefion and the midnight dream. Page

To addid; to give up to ill.

8. The Romans having once debouched their fens with the pleasures of other nations, they devoted them almost all wickedness.

Dev:'e, adj. For devoted.

9. Now, on a sudden, fo, Dief'd, defcver'd, and now to death devote! Milton.

Devot'dness. n. s. [devote, French.] The state of being devoted or dedicated; consecration; addiction.

Whatever may fall from my pen to her disavow'd, relates to her but as the was, or may again be, an obstacle to your devotions to farshick love.

The owning of our obligation unto virtue, may be fydred natural religion, that is, a devot'dness unto God, so as to act according to his will. Grew.

Devote's, n. s. [devot, French.] One erroneously or superstitiously religious; a bigot.

Devotional. n. s. [devotion, French; devotis, Latin.] The state of being consecrated or dedicated.

1. Peace; acts of religion; devounits.

Mean time her warlike brother on the Ras having firmerand to the words displays.

And vows for his return with vain devotion pays. Dryden.

3. An act of external worship.

Religious minds are inflamed with the love of public devotions. Hooke.

For as I pass'd by and beheld your devotions, I found an altar with this inscription, To the unknown God. Acts, xviii. 23.

In vain ethen man the name of Jah expiates.

If his devotions he to God neglect. Deyam.

4. Prayer.

1. To compound; to assemble.

De'vis'd adj. [devisat, Latin.] Possible to be avoided; avoidable.

Deviva'tion. n. s. [devativis, Latin.] The act of escaping or avoiding. Didi.

De'veide adj. [suide, French.]
4. Prayer; expression of devotion.

An aged man,
That day and hour did he his devotion,
No other worldly business did attend.
Fairest Queen.
Your devotion has its opportunity; we must pray always, but chiefly at these times.

5. The state of the mind under a strong feene of dependance upon God; devoutness; piety.
Gratefull to acknowledge whereas his good
Defendants, thither with heart, and voice, and eye.
Directed in devotion, to ad
Acknowledged God Supreme, who made him chief
Of all his works.
Milton.

From the full choir when loud heenasr, rile,
And swell the swelling hands of sacrifice;
Amid that fire, if from reeling eye.
Glance on the scene where cold religious lie,
Devotions self shall steal a thought from heav'n,
One human tear shall drop, and be forg'd.

Devotion may be considered either as an exercise of publick or private prayers at set times and occasions, or as a temper of the mind, a state and disposition of the heart, which is rightly affected
Law in Christ's Perfections.

6. A state of reverence, respect, or ceremony.

Whither away so fall?

Upon the like devotion as yourself,
The death of many a prince there.
Shake.

7. Strong affection; ardent love; such as makes the lover the sole property of the person loved.
Be opposite all planets of good luck
To my proceeding, if, with pure heart's love,
Immaculate devotion, holy thought,
I tender not thy beausethian princely daughter.
Shakespeare.

He had a particular reverence for the person of the house of Egipt, of extraordinary devotion for that of the prince, as he had had the honour to be truthted with his education.
Clarendon.

8. Earnestness; ardour; eagerness.
They seek his heart with greater devotion than they can kneel or stand, and leaves nothing undone.
Shakespeare.

May fully discover him their opposite.

9. Diligence; power; state of dependance on any one.
Ardent zeal would keep that rich corner of the country in the majesty's devotion.
Clarendon.

Devotional adj. [from devotion.] Pertaining to devotion; annexed to worship; religious.
Nor are the cumber of them so apt for that devotional compliance and justice of hearts, which I define to bear in holy offices, to be performed with me.
King Charles.

The favourable opinion and good word of men comes oftentimes at a very easy rate, by a few decree looks, with some devotional patters and graces.

Devotionalist, n. f. [from devotion.]
A man zcallous without knowledge; superstitiously devout.

To DEVOUK, v. a. [devour, Latin.]
1. To eat up ravenously, as a wild beast or animal of prey.

We will say some evil beast hath devoured him.

To gob.

We're willing damsens enough; there cannot be
That volute in you, to devour so many
As will to greaters: dedicate themselves,
Finding it in lothe in Shakespeare.

So looks the pent up lion o'er the wretch
That trembles under his devouring paws.
Shakespeare.

2. To defray or consume with rapidity and violence.
A fire devour'd before them, and behind them a flammable swarm.

VOL. I.
Upon his crested head, false lore did flite,
That to the foul a yarning wound it made.

Dewdrop. n. f. [dew and drop.] A drop of dew which sparkles at sun-rise. I must go seek some dewdrops here, And hang a pearl in every cowslip's ear. Shakespeare.

Innumerable as the stars of night, Or flats of morning, dewdrops, which the sun
Imprints on every leaf, and every flower. Milton.

Rain, sweet at dewdrops on the flow'ry lawns. When the sky opens, and the morning dawns! Tickell.

DeWlap. n. f. [from leaping or kicking the dew.] 1. The flinch that hangs down from the throat of oxen. Large townes of it about his shoulders hang, And from his neck the double dewlap hung. Add.

2. It is used Shakespeare for a lip laced with age, in contempt. And sometimes lurk I in a golpy's bowl, In very likens of a rosted eel.' And when flies Betty showing on her lips I bob, And on the wither'd dewlap pour the ale. Shak.

DeWlapT, adj. [from dewlap.] Furnished with dewlaps.

Who would believe there were mountaineers of Dewlap like bulls, whose throats had hanging at 'em? Wallets of fat? Shakespeare. The dewlapp bold now chases along the plain, Whose tender beans are danc'd in every vein. Gay.

DeW-Worm. n. f. [from dew and worm.] A worm found in dew. 'For the trout, the dew worm, which some call the lob worm, and the branding, are the chief. Warton.

De'Wy. adj. [from dew.] 1. Refrumbing; partaking of dew. From the earth a dewy mist Went up, and water'd all the ground, and each Plant of the field. Milton.

Where two adverse winds, Sublime'd from dewy vapours in mid sky, Engage with horrid thigh, the ruffled bine Rovs stormy. Phillips.

2. Molt with dew; rosoid. The joyous day 'gan early to appear, And fair Aurora from her dewy bed Of aged Tithome 'gan herself to rear, With roly cheeks, for shame as blushing red. Spenser.

The nymph, It was just, that at her flow'ry work both sighs,
And the waters murmuring, With such content as they keep, Enites the bow, or feather'd deep. Milton.

His dewy locks divell'd Ambrosia. Milton.

Before the fuscour which cold Ancient yields, The rocks of Aurum, and dew fields. Dryden.

Dexter. adj. [Latin.] the right; not the left. A term used in heraldry. My mother's blood Runs on the dexter cheek, and this sinister Falls in my left. Shakespeare.

Dexterity. n. f. [dexteritas, Lat.] 1. Readiness of limbs; activity; readiness to attain skill; skill; expertness.

As an husk. They attempted to be knaves, but wanted art and dexterity. Dryden.

The same Protesstant may, by their dexterity, make themselves the national religion, and diplice the Church's revenue among their posterity. Swift.

2. Readiness of contrivance; quickness of expedient; skill of management. His wildness, by often evading from peril, was turned rather into a dexterity to deliver himself from all danger, when they professed them, than into a providence to prevent and remove those snares off.

Lacess.

Dexterous. adj. [dexter, Latin.] 1. Expert at any manual employment; active; ready; as, a dexterous workman. For both the dexterous hands the lance could wield.

2. Expert in management; able; full of expedients. They confine themselves, and are dexterous managers enough of the wares and products of that country with which they content themselves. Locke.

Dexterously, adv. [from dexterous.] Expertly; skilfully; artfully.

The magistrate sometimes cannot do his own dexterously, but by setting the minisits Seated. But then by my study to cog the dice, And dextrously to chide the lucky face. Dryden.

Dextral. adj. [dexter, Latin.] The right; not the left.

As for any tunics or skins, which should hinder the liver from enabling the dextral parts, we must not conceive it difficult of its virtue by mere irradiation, but by its veins and proper vessels. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

Dexterity, n. f. [from dextral.] The state of being on the right, not the left, side. If there were a determinate prepossession in the right, and such as arise from a constant root in nature, we might expect the same in other animals, whose parts are also determined by dextrality. Brown: Vulgar Errors.

Diatete. n. f. [dracon, f.] A morbid copiousness of the urine; a fatal colligation
By the urinary passages.

An increase of that secretion may accompany the general colliguations; as in fluxes, hectic sweats and coughs, diabetes, and other consumptions.oney.

Diabolical. adj. [from diabole, Lat.] Diabolical, Diabolic. n. [from diabole, Lat.] 2. Devilish; partaking of the qualities of the devil; impious; atrocious; nefarious; pertaining to the devil.

'Tis, in other beasts observ'd,
Double might beget of diabolic power,
Active within the affections of the soul. Milton.

Does not the ambitious, the envious, and the revengeful man know very well, that the thirst of blood, and affecition of domination by violence and oppression, is a most diabolical outwrought upon the laws of God and Nature? L'Estrange.

The practice of lying is a diabolical exercize, and they that use it are the devil's children. Roy.

Damned spirits much needs he all enemies, deformed, and rage, and have so much of a diabolical nature in them, to as with all men to share their misery. Atterbury.

Diadenum. n. f. [diadem, Lat.] The crown; headgear. A tiara; an ensign of royalty bound about the head of eastern monarchs. The faced diadem in pieces rent, And purple robe gored with many a wound. Spenser.

A lift the coblers' temples rise,
To keep the hair out of their eyes; From whence 'tis plain the diadem, The radiant crown, derives from them. Swift.

2. The mark of royalty worn on the head; the crown. A crown, Golden in their, but a wreath of thorns;
Bring's dangers, troubles, cares, and steeped nights,
To him whom we call the servant of Milton. Why should be ravish then that diadem
From your grey temples, which the hand of time Might shortly plant on his. Dryden.

Diadem. n. f. [from diadem.] Adorned with a diadem; crowned.

Not to, when diadem'd with rays divine,
Touch's with the flame that breaks from virtue's shrine.

Her pritects must forbear the good to die,
And open the temple of eternity. Pope.

Diadrom. n. f. [diadromus, Gr.] The time in which any motion is performed; the time in which a pendulum performs its vibration.

Lye is the tenth of a line, a line one tenth of an inch, an inch one tenth of a philosophical foot, a philosophical foot one third of a pendulum; whole diadromes, in the stature of forty-five degrees, which equal each to one second of time, or a sixtieth of a minute. D'ArCesius. n. f. [diasesius, Gr.] The separation or disjunction of syllables; as air.

Diagonistic. n. f. [haviasic, Gr.] A symptom by which a disease is distinguish'd from others. I tell thy down some indistinguishable marks of this vice, which, whatever we set the tokens, we may conclude the plague is in the house;—let us hear your diagonistics. Collier on Plague.

One of our physicians proved disinterested of his prognosti'd, or rather diagonistics. Harvey on Confinement.

D'Algonal. n. f. [from the adjective.] A line drawn from angle to angle, and dividing a square into equal parts.

When a man has not only the idea of two lines, viz. the side and diagonal of a figure, whereas the diagonal is an inch long, he may have the idea also of the division of that line into a certain number of equal parts. Woodward.

D'Algonally. adv. [from diagonally.] In a diagonal direction.

The right and left are not defined by philosophers according to common acceptation, but is, respectively from one man unto another, or any constant fit in each, as though that should be the right in one, which, upon confront or facing, stands athwart or diagonally unto the other; but were distinguish'd according unto their activity, and predominant locomotion in either side.

Brown's Vulgar Errors.

Diagram. n. f. [diagramma, Gr.] A delineation of geometrical figures; a mathematical scheme.

Many a fair conceit in poetry it is seeming demonstration in the mathematicks; very feculent in the diagram, but failing in the mechanical operation. Dryden.

Why do not those persons make a diagram of their respective line; and demonstrate their properties of perception and appetite, as plainly as we know the other properties of triangles and circles? Bentley.

Diagrydium. n. f. [from diagramus, Lat.] Strong purgatives made with diagrumy.

All choleric humours ought to be evacuated by diagramy, mixed with tartar, or some acid, or rubarb powder. Flyer.

Dial.
DIAG. n. f. [dialogue, Skinner.] A plate marked with lines, where a hand or shadow Shews the hour.

Dial, an instrument used to indicate the time of life is short;
To spend that flori?dly's but too long,
Through life did ride upon a dial's point,
Still ending at its arrival of an hour.

Diaphanous, adj. [from Siiitt.] Ob'erving a flower. PlAPHOas were, capable conversation and Paebam.

Dialect, n. f. [dialog and elocution.] On which hours or lines are marked.
Strata tells us that the two friends, being each of them possessed of a Sceptre of needle, made a kind of dial plate, inscribing it with the hour and twenty letters, in the same manner as the hours of the day are marked upon the ordinary dial plate. Addison's Spectator.

DIAL. n. f. [halo and elighting.] The subdivision of a language; as the Attic, Doric, Ionic, Æolic dialects.

Style; manner of expression.
When themselves do practice do thereof where they write, they change their dialect; and those words they think, as if there were in them some secret Boxer.

Language; speech.
In her youth
There is a zone and speechless dialect,
Such is more own. Shakspere. Mayfore for Measure.
If the conferring of a kindred did not bind the person upon whom it was conferred to the return of gratitude, why, in the universal dialect of the world, are kindred fleshless obligations? Swift.

DIALECTICAL. adj. [from dialectick.] Logical; argumental.
These dialectical subtleties, that the schoolmen employ about physiological mysteries, more declare the wit of him who uses them, than increase the knowledge of either lovers of truth.

DIALECTICK. n. f. [messiah and logic.] The art of reasoning.

DIALLING. n. f. [from dial.] The china-ter science; the knowledge of shadow; the art of constructing dials on which the shadow may show the hour.

DIALIST. n. f. [from dial.] A contriver of dials.
Scientific dials, by the geometric construction of limits, have found out rules to mark out the irregular motion of the shadow in all latitudes and on all planes. Moxon.

DILOGIST. n. f. [from dialogue.] A speaker in a dialogue or conference; a writer of dialogues.

DIALOGUE. n. f. [diologe and conference.] A conference; a conversation between two or more, either real or imagined.
Will you hear the dialogue that the two learned men had committed in prose of the owl and eagle?

Dialogue, the impudence of this wicked art! Laitious dialogues are innocent with you.

Dryden's Spanish Friar.

In easy dialogue is Fletcher's praise;
He mov'd the mind, but had not pow'r to rule.

To DIALOGUE. v. a. [from the noun.]
To discourse with another; to confer.
Doat dialogue with thy shadow? Shak. Timon.

DIALYSIS. n. f. [dialysis and south.] The figure in rhetoric by which syllables or words are divided.

DIAMETER. n. f. [diam and metre.] The line which, passing through the centre of a circle, or other curvilinear figure, divides it into equal parts.
The figure between the earth and the moon, according to Proclus, is two thousand times the diameter of the earth, which makes, in a good account, about one hundred and twenty thousand miles.

The bay of Naples is the most delightful one that I ever saw; it lies in almost a round figure of about thirty miles in the diameter. Addison on Italy.

DIAMETRAL. adj. [from diameter.] Describing the diameter; relating to the diameter.

DIAMETRALLY. adv. [from diametral.] According to the direction of a diameter; in its direction.
Christian pity is, beyond all other things, diametrically opposed to profaneness and impurity of actions.
Hammond.

DIAMETRICAL. adj. [from diameter.] In a diametrical direction.
He perished, and was tending to content to what was diametrically against his conscience and his honour, and, in truth, his security.

Clarkend. That intersected in its passage, the vapour, which cannot enter the frustum diametrically, glides along the lower and lower, permeating the horizontal interval, which is between the said frustum and that which lies underneath it. Wood's.

DIAMANT. n. f. [diaman, Fr. adamant, Latin.] The diamond, the most valuable and hardest of all the gems, is, when pure, perfectly clear and pellucid as the pellucid water; and is eminently distinc-ting from all other substances by its vivid splendour, and the brightness of its reflections. It is extremely various in form and size, being found in the greatest quantity very small, and the larger ones extremely lepidum met with. The largest ever known is that in the possession of the Great Mogul, which weighs two hundred and seventy-nine carats, and is composed to be worth seven hundred and seventy-nine thousand two hundred and sixty-four pounds. In the force of the strongest fires, except the concentrated solar rays, without hurt; and even that infinitely fierce of all fires does it no injury unless directed to its weaker parts. In this respect few fire for many days, and if taken carefully out, and suffered cool by degrees, is found as bright and beautiful as before; but if taken hastily out, it will sometimes crack, and even split into two or three pieces. The places where we have diamonds are the East Indies and the Brazil; and though they are usually found clear and transparent, yet they are sometimes fullingly tinged with the colours of the other gems, by the mixture of some metallic parities. Hill in Light.
Give me the ring of mine you had at dinner; Or, for the diamond, the chain you promised.

I see how thine eye would emulate the diamond thou hast the eighth arched bent of the bow. Shak.
The diamond is preferable and vasterly superior to all others in light and beauty; as also in hardness, which renders it more durable and lasting, and therefore much more valuable, than any other stone.
Woodward.

The diamond is by mighty monarchs worn;
Fair as the star that others in the moon. Blank. The lively diamond drinks thy pearly rays, Collected light, compact.

Trans. Thompson.

DIAPASON. n. f. [dia and acus.] A chord including all the notes of the old word for diapason.
See DIAPASON.

And twist them both a quadrant was the base,
Proportion'd exactly by even and nine

Nite was the circle set in heaven's place,
All which compounded made a good diapason. Shakspere.

The forenumbered and medicatory measures,
With which I give the same amalgamated words,
And make a tuneful diapason of pleasures,
Now being let to run at liberty. Shakspere.

DIAPA\SON. n. f. [dia et acus.] A chord which includes all the notes is the same with that an eighth or an octave; because there are but seven tones or notes, and then the eight is the same again with the first.
Harriss.

It doth foretell the true coincidence of sounds into diapason, which is the return of the same sound.

Bacon.

Hand's diu.
Broke the fair musick that all creatures made;
To their great Lord, whose love in their song gave
In perfect diapason, whilst they flood
In first obedience, and their state of goods.
Milton.
Many a sweet rite, many a sweet a pull
A full-mouth diapason swallow'd all.
Cowper.

From harmony, from heavenly harmony,
This universal frame began.
From harmony to harmony,
Through all the compass of the notes it ran;
The diapason closing full in man.
Dryden.

DIAPE\TER. n. f. [diapere, Fr. of uncertain etymology.]

1. Linen, or flower woven in flowers, and other figures; the finest species of figured linen after damask.
Not any damask, which her vaunted moth
In skifull knitting of soft filken twine
Nor any weave, which his work doth both
In diapere, in diamond, or in damask,
Might in their divers evoking ever dare
With this so curfet net-work to compare. Spens.

2. A napkin; a towel.
Let one attend him with a flaver bowl
Full of cold water, and bring him flowers;
Another bear the ewer, a third a diapere. Shakspere.

To DIAPE\TER. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To varygate; to diversify; to flower.
For fear the flows her tender foot in evil wrongs
The ground he treadeth with flowers all along,
And diapere'd like the discordant morn. Spens.
Flora ueth to cloath our grand-dam: Erisk
With a new liveliness, diapere'd with various flowers, and chequer'd with delightful figures.
Horace's Poesa Fam.

2. To draw flowers upon clothes.
If you diapere upon folds, let your work be broken, and taken, as it were, by the hands for forming what unclean.

Diaphan\ny. n. f. [from diapasia.] Transparency; pellucidness; power of transmitting light.
Because the outward eye of the cost ought to be pellucid, to transmit the light, if the eyes should always stand open, would be apt to grow dry and thinline, and lose their diastasis; therefore are the, c. they contrived to atti with to their own eye, a clown and vunible them over with the moisture their body, &c.

Rais.

Diaphanie\rick. adj. [dia and phaino.] Transparent; pellucid; having the power to transmit light.

Air is an element superior, and lighter than water, through whose body, open, visible, diaphanous, or transparent body, the lights, afterward received, easily transmitted.

Rais.

Diaphanous. adj. [dia and phare.] Transparent; clear; translucent; pell-ucid; capable to transmit light.

Arotle of light a quality inherent or clearing to a diaphanous body, as air. Shakspere.

When he had taken off the infecb, he found in the leaf very little and diaphanous eggs, exactly like to those which yet remaine in the tubes of the fly's wombe.

Wag.
DIB

DIAPHRAGMATIC. adj. [di'æfæg'mæt]. 1. Sudorific; promoting a diaphoresis or perspiration; causing sweat.

Diaphragnetic, or promoting perspiration, help the organs of digestion, because the attenuation of the aliment makes it perspirable.

Diaphragnia. n. f. [di'æfæg'né-] A vein of the heart.

1. The midriff which divides the upper cavity of the body from the lower.
2. Any di vision or partition which divides a hollow body.

It consists of a fatty body of many parts, about a foot in length, and covered with bones called ribs. The diaphragm is thick in the middle, but is thin at the costal border. Walter.

DIARRHEA. n. f. [diərə'hē-] A flux of the belly, whereby a person frequently goes to stool, and is cured either by purging off the cause, or restricting the bowels.

During his diarrhoea I healed up the finger wounds with Epsom Salt.

DIARRHEATIC. adj. [from diarrhoea]. Promoting the flux of the belly; solutive; purgative.

Millet is diarrheatic, cleaning, and useful in disease.

DIA. n. f. [diairium, Lat.] An account of the transactons, accidents, and observations of every day; a journal.

In these voyages, where there is nothing to be seen but sky and sea, men make diaries; but in land-travel, where so much is to be observed, they omit it. I go on in my intended diary.

DIASOLE. n. f. [δασολ]. A figure in rhetoric, by which a short syllable is made long.

2. The dilatation of the heart.

The syllable serves to re semble the forcible bending of a spring, and the diaphragn is flying out again to its natural state. Ray's Creation.

DIASTYLY. [δία, and στύλος, a pillar.] A fort of edifice, where the pillars stand at such a distance from one another, that three diameters of their thicknesses are allowed for intercommunication. Harrisi.

DIATÉSERON. n. f. [διατέσσερον, four.] An interval in music, composed of one greater tone, one lesser, and one greater semitone; its proportion being as four to three. It is called, in musical composition, a perfect fourth. Harrisi.

DIATÔNICK. [of διατόνικος]. The ordinary fort of music which proceeds by different tones, either in ascending or descending. It contains only the two greater and lesser tones, and the greater semitone.

DIAZETICK TONE. [δία and ζητέω, seek.] In the ancient Greek music, disjoined two-fourth, one on each side of it; and which, being joined to either, made a fifth. This is, in our music, from A to F.

They allowed to this diazetic tone, which is our E, the proportion of nine to eight, as being the unsalterable difference of the fifth and fourth. Harrisi.

DIBBLE. n. f. [from dibble, Dutch, a sharp point; Skinner; from dabble, jamais.] A small spade; a pointed instrument with which the gardeners make holes for planting.

Through cunning, with bloody, rakes, mattock, and spade, I lay by line and level trim garden is made. Tuff's Houseto.

DISTON. n. f. A little rope which children throw at another flute.

I have seen little girls exercise whole hours together, and take abundance of pains, to be expert at ditties. Locke.

DICE. n. f. The plural of dice. See Dir.

I don't exactly know the trick; some of the jugs have a particular throw, so that you do not cast any given face of the dice; because there are so many different combinations of the six faces of four dice; now, after you have cast all the trials but one, it is fixed and altered by the last remaining time, as it was at the first. Bentley.

To DICE. o. n. [from the noun] To game with dice.

I was as virtuously given to a gentleman next to be, vigorous enough: four little; died at about eight poor in time. Shakesf. Henry IV.

DICE-BOX. n. f. [dice and box]. The box from which the dice are thrown.

What would you say, should you see the farrker finding her way to town, with a whole train of odd things, and throwing the table with a dice-box? Addis. Guard.

DICE-R. n. f. [from dice.] A player at dice; a gamereller.

They make marriage vows as false as their oaths. Shakespeare's Hamlet.

DICT. This word seems corrupted from dit for do it.

Rich men see, and I eat root.

Much good dithe thy good heart, Apmantess. Shak.

DICTOGRAPHIA. n. f. [δικτογραφία]. Distribution of ideas by pairs.

Some persons have disturbed the order of nature, and altered their readers by an affliniation of dithyrambs, trichotomies, fevens, twelves, &c. Let the nature of the subject, considered together with the design which you have in view, always determine the number of pairs to which you divide it. Watts.

DICKENS. A kind of adversial exclama tion, importing, as it seems, much the fame with the devil; but I know not whence derived.

Where had you this pretty weathercock? - I bought it in the way. I was told it was in my husband had him of. Sh. Merry Wives of Wind.

What a dicebox does he mean by a trivial sum? But haven't you found it, Sir? Congr. Old Bub.

DICKER of Leather. n. f. [diera, low Lat.] From hides.

DICT. To DICTATE. o. n. [dī'kāt]. Lat. To deliver to another with authority; to declare with confidence.

The spoils of elephants the roots inlay, And flouted amber darts a golden ray; Such, and not nobler, in the realms above, My wonder ditties in the dome of Love. Pope. Od.

- Whatever is dittoed to us by God himself, or by men who are divinely inspired, must be believed with full assurance. Watts.

DICT. O. n. [dādi'um, Lat.] Rule of a maxim delivered with authority; pre scription; precept.

These rights help of art, which will be scarce found by those who falsely confine themselves to the duties of others. Locke.

I credit the Grecian ditties say, And Samian founds on Scott's hills convey. Prior.

Then let this dittie of my love prevail. Pope. Od.

DICTATION. n. f. [from dittie.] The act of practice of dictating or prescribing.

Ditt.
DIE

DIET.

The means used to this purpose are partly didactical, and partly protreptical; demonstrating the truth of the gospel, and then urging the professions of those truths to be justified in the faith, and to begin immediately. Hence it is called an inducational Sermon.

Drapper, n. f. [from drape] A bird that dives into the water.

Diascallic. adj. [diascalic.] Preceptive; didactic; giving precepts in some art.

I found it necessary to form some family, and give a kind of body to the poem; under what species it may be comprehended, whether didactic or he-

To Di'nder. v. a. [dinderin. Ticut. xitterin. Germ.] To quake with cold; to shiver.

A provincial work. Skinner.

Diet. The second period of the preten tion of 6. See DIT.

On left and best of Scots! who did maintain Thy country's freedom from a foreign reign. Dryd. DICTION. n. f. [diction. Latin.] Separation by withdrawing one part from the other.

I sought to show what kind of things they are, which, though strongly tainted to the inside of the receiver and superficies of the bladder, must draw at forcibly one another, in comparison of those that within the bladder draw so as to hinder the distillation of its fluid. To Die. v. a. [bexy. Saxon, a colour.] To tinge; to colour; to stain.

So much of death her thoughts Had constraint, as did her cheeks with pale. Milton.

All white, a virgin faint the sought the Bibles; For marriage, though it fallies not, it dyes. Dryd.

Dye. n. f. [from the verb.] Colour; tincture; stain; hue acquired.

I considered nothing more to please mine innocence; for the dye is on me, Which makes my white's part black. Shakespeare's Henry VIII.

We have dainty works of feathers of wonderful luster, excellent dyes, and many. Bacon's New Atlantis.

Darksome we see emerges into light, And burning fires of feame to flame: Ev'n heav'n itself receives another dye, When war'sed animals in flames lie.

Of midnight ealfe; another, when the grey Over-grown, of the shewer of the day. Dryd. It is surprising to see the images of the mind flushed upon the ascept; to see the cheeks take the dye of the passions, and appear in all the co-

Dyst. v. a. [dystin. Germ.] To Die. v. a. [bexy. Saxon.]

1. To lose life; to expire; to pass into another state of existence.

You do kill me with thy falsehood; and it grieves me not to die, but it grieves me that thou art the murderer. Dryd.

Nor did the third his conquest long survive. Dying ere he could have begun to live. Addis Dey. 'O let me live my own, and die to too.

The drum will stop for none. Danubian.

2. To perish by violence or disease.

The dire only served to confirm in his first opinion, that it was his destiny to die in the ensuing combat. Dryd.

Pursued not life or ruin, he replied.

Patriotick-dead, whoever meets me, dies; In vain a single Trojan venue for grace; But save the loss of Trojan's joyful race: Die then, my wretch, since death is God's decree?

The good, the great, the Pole's honor is none! He, for thy better, was foredoomed to die. Dryd. And thou, dost thou, bewail mortally? Pope's Homer.

3: It has by before an instrument of death.

Their young men shall die by the sword; their sons and daughters shall die by famine. Jerem.

4. Of before a disease.

They often come into the world clear, and with the appearance of sound bodies; which, notwithstanding, have been infected with disease, and have died of it, or at least have been very infirm. Whetman.

5. For commonly before a privative, and of before a positive cause: these prepositions are not always truly distinguished.

At first the pestles, then the flames ars'd; At last with terror the flames, then both fly. And loath to wary griefs wherein the gas'd. And shuns it still, alto for thirst the dir. Davies. He in the laden vineyard died for thirst. Addis. Hipparchus being passionately fond of his own life, which had been smothered of Bathybus, heaped no more, died of his fall. Addis.

6. To be punished with death.

If I die for it, as no less is threatened me, the king my old master must be relieved. Shakespeare's King Lear.

What is the love of our neighbour? — The valuing him as the image of God, one for whom Chrift died. Humann.

7. To be left; to perish; to come to no thing.

How now, my lord, why do you keep alone? Of forfeit Fancies your companion making. Using those thoughts which should indeed have died With them they think on. Shakespeare's Macbeth.

To any of my next of kin, or friends, For his death, I made no provision. He had been veiled in Adam, which in truth there was not, it would have died with him. Locke.

Whereever pleasure any men may take in spreading whispers, he will find greater falsification by letting the former dye within his own breath. Spel.

8. To sink; to faint.

His heart died within him, and he became as a stone. Samuel.

9. [in theology.] To perish everlastingly. So long as God shall live, so long shall the dainty die. Hakewill on Providence.

10. To languish with pleasure or tenderness.

To sounds of heavily harps the dyes away, And melts in visions of eternal day. Pope.

11. To vanish.

This battle faces like to the morning's war, When dying clouds contend with growing light. Shakespeare.

The smaller flowers and blemishes may die away and disappear, and fumcrh brights that surround them; but a drop of a deeper nature casts a shade on all the other beauties, and darkens the whole character. Addison's Spectator.

12. [In the fyle of lovers.] To languish with affection.

The young men acknowledged, in love-letters, that they died for Rebecca. Tailor.

13. To wither, as a vegetable.

Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground, and die, it is hidden but alive; but if it die it bringeth forth much fruit. John.

14. To grow rapid, as liquor.

DIE. n. f. pl. dits. [de, fr. dite, Wolfe.] A smallc ball, marked on its faces with numbers from one to fixed, which gamers throw in play.

Keep a gamer from the dice, and aged student from his book, and it is wonderful. Shakespeare.

I have a case, and I will find the hazard of the dice. Shakespeare's Richard III.

He knows which way the bolt and the ditt shall fall, as perfectly as if they were already cast. South.

2. Hazard; chance.

Exhusts his cruel hand Sir Guyon fluid, Temples the passion with admiration flow, And mustering might on enemy dismay'd; For ther' equal dye he well did know. Fairy R.

So both to battle fierce arranged are; In which his harder fortune was to fall Under my spear's such is the die of war. Fairy R.

Thine is th' adventure, thine the victory; Well hast thy fortune turn'd the die for thee. Dryd.

3. To cube, to body.

Young creatures have learned spelling of words by having them panted upon little flat tablets or dits. Watte.

DIE. n. f. plur. dits. The flamp used in coinage.

Such a variety of dits made use of by Wood in stamping his money, makes the discovery of coun-treasures more difficult. Swift.

D'in. n. f. [from die.] One who follows the trade of dying; one who dies clothes.

The neces, that he has turn'd the die, shall'd, Never again its native whiteness gain'd. Waller.

There were some of very low rank and professions who acquired great estates: cobiers, dits, and shoe-makers gave publie shows to the dits, and not where the canals are obstructed, it being void of all faine quality. Aubertin.

2. Food regulated by the rules of medicine, for the prevention or cure of any disease.

I commend rather some die for certain feacions, than frequent use of physic; for those dits alter the body more, and trouble it less. Bacon.

I reprobated myself to fo regular a diet, as to erect flesh but once a day, and little at a time, without salt or vinegar. Temple.

3. Allowance of provision:

For his diet, there was a continual diet given him by the king. Jeremias.

To Di'et. v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To feed by the rules of medicine.

She ditt him with fasting every day, The swelling of his wounds to mitigate, And made him gray both early and eke late. Pope.

Some while a fearful swamp. To diet rank minds sick of happiness.

And paige th' obstructions which begin to spread Our very veins of life. Shakespeare's Henry IV.

He was not taken well; he had not ditt: The veins unfitt'd, our blood is cold: and then We post upon the morning, see on.

To give or to forgive; but when we've ditt'd These pipes, and these conveyances of blood, With wine and feeding, we have supplier fouls Than in metaphorical lies; therefore I'll watch him He be ditt'd to, I'll ditt his Diet, Shak's Coriol.

I will attend my husband, be his nurse, Diet his sickness; for it is my office. Shakespeare.

Henceforth my early meal.

Shall tend thee, and the fertile bawden cafes; Till, ditted by thee, I grow mature.

In knowledge as the gods, who all things know,

Milton.

We have lived upon expedients, of which no country had occasion: we have ditt'd a healthy body into a consumption, by plying it with physic instead of food. Swift.

2. To give food to.

I'm partly led to diet my revenge; For that I do suspect the llyfi Moor.

Hath leap't into my diet. Shakespeare's Otello.

3. To board; to supply with diet.
Thus, born alike, from virtue first began
The "Virtue" that distinguishes man from man:
He claim'd no title from descent of blood;
But that, which made him noble, made him good.

Droyn.

Though it is useful to differ every variety that is to be found in nature, yet it is not convenient to consider every different is that in things, and divining them into distinct classes under every such difference.

3. The disproportion between one thing and another, caused by the qualities of each.
You shall see great difference between our Repeals and your Scotch.

On the strange difference of man to man.
To these various services are due;
My fool usurps my body.
Shakespeare. King Lear.

Here might be seen a great difference between mankind practised to fight, and men accustomed to flee.

Dryden.

4. Difturb; debate; quarrel; controversy.
What was the difference?

— It was a contention in public.
Shakespeare. Winter's Tale.

The more of his life, that hath a difference with any of them, and will walk abroad after daylight.
Sandal.

Nothing could have fallen out more unluckily than that there should be such differences among them about that which they pretend to be the only means of ending differences.

Tilton.

5. Diftinction.
Our condition only does not make a difference between the good and the bad, but, even among the guilty, between such as are more or less criminal.

Addison. Freeholder.

6. Point in question; ground of controversy.
Are you acquainted with the differences?
That holds this prefent question in its court?

Shakespeare.

7. A logical distinction.
Some are never without a difference; and commonly, by amusing men with a falsity, blunt them.

Dryden.

8. Evidences of distinction; differential marks.
Henry had the title of sovereign, yet did not put those things in execution which are the true marks and differences of sovereignty.

Davies.

Difdinct kind.
This is notoriously known in some differences of brake or fern.

Brown's Vulgar Errors.

To Differenc. v. n. [differen. Latin]

1. To be distinguished from; to have properties and qualities not the same with those of another person or thing.
If the pipe be a little wet on the inside, it will make a differing sound from the same pipe dry.

Bacon.

Thy prejudices, Syphax, won't discern
What virtues grow from ignorance and choice.
Nor how the hero differs from the brute. Add. Cat.

The several parts of the same animal differ in their qualities.

Addison. Freeholder.

2. To contend; to be at variance.
A man of judgment shall four times hear ignorant men differ, and know well within himself that those which differ mean one thing, and yet they themselves mean another.

Here uncontroul'd you May in judgment sit;
We'll never differ with a crossed pit.

Reyn.

3. To be of a contrary opinion.
In things freely speculat'd, as these are, and no ingredients of our faith, it is free to differ from one another in our opinions and sentiments.

Barnes's Theory.

There are certain measures to be kept, which may secure a tendency rather than gain than those who differ with you in their sentiments.

Addison. Freeholder.

Others differ with me about the truth and reality of their speculations.

Cheyney.

Difference. n. f. [differentia, Latin.]

1. State of being difficult from something; contrary to it.
Where the faults of the holy church is one, a difficulty between customs of the church do not happen.

Hiller.

2. The quality by which one differs from another.
The possibility, or difference from the vulgar, was not in the beginning given to the succession of blood, but to the succession of virtue.

Raleigh.

Happiness consists in things which produce pleasure, and in the absence of those which cause pain: now these, to different men, are very different things.

Leibn.

Differential Method, is applied to the doctrine of infinitesimals, or infinitely small quantities, called the arithmetic of fluxions. It consists in finding the fluxions from which quantities to the infinitely small differences, and comparing together these infinitely small differences, of what kind forever they be; and from thence it takes the name of the differential calculus, or analysis of infinitesimals.

Harris.

Differently, adv. [from different.]
In a different manner.
He may consider how differently he is affected by the same thought, which presents itself in a great writer, from what he is when he finds it delivered by an ordinary genius.

Addison.

Differently, adv. [from differing.]
In a different manner.
Such perturbative and concave parts of a surface may recall the light to the differently, as to vary a colour.

Bacon.

DIFFICIL. adj. [difficult, Latin.]

1. Difficult; hard; not easy; not obvious.
Little used.

That that should give motion to an unweary body which neither bulk nor motion, is of no difficulty when the avenue is given.

Gayville's Essay.

2. Scrupulous; hard to be persuaded.
The cardinal finding the pope difficult in granting the dispensation, doth use it as a principal argument, concerning the king's merit, that he had touched none of those powers which had been left by popes in England.

Bacon.

DIFFICULINES. m. f. [from difficult.] Difficulty to be persuaded; incompliance; impracticabilitie. A word not in use, but proper.

There be that in their nature do not affect the good of others; the less give more to others who give to them, which is more hurt but to a crossmen, or fourwardens, or aports, or difficultie, or the like; but the deeper first, to envy and more mischief.

Bacon.

DIFFICULT. adj. [difficult, Latin.]

1. Hard; not easy; not facile.
It is difficult in the eyes of these people. Zaisor.

2. Troublesome; vexatious.

3. Hard to please; peevish; morose.

difficulty. adv. [from difficult.] Hardly; with difficulty.

A man, who has always indulged himself in the full enjoyment of his opinion, will diffically be persuaded to think any methods unjust that offer to continue it.

Rogers's Sermons.

DIFFICILTE. n. f. [from difficult; difficulty, French.]

1. Hardness; contrariety to cabinets or faculty.
The religion which, by this covenant, we engage ourselves to observe, is a work of labour and difficulty; a service that requires our greatest care and attention.

Rogers.

2. That which is hard to accomplish; that which is not easy.
They mistake difficulties for impossibilities: a pernicious mistake certainly, and the more pernicious, for men are seldom concerned of it, till the conviction do them no good.

South.

3. Difficult; opposition.
Thus, by degrees, he safe to Jove's imperial feast:
Thus difficulties prove a legitimately great. Dryden.

4. Perplexity
4. Perplexity in affairs; uneasiness of circumstances.

They lie under some difficulties by reason of the emperor's displeasure, who has forbidden their manufactures.

Addison on Italy.

5. Objection; cavil.

Men should consider, that raising difficulties concerning the mysteries in religion, makes them more wise, learned, or virtuous.

To DIFFIDE, v. n. [differ, Latin.] To distrust; to have no confidence in.

With hope and fear.

The woman did the new solution bear.
The man differed in his own augury, and doubts the god.

Dryden.

DIFFERENCE, n. f. [from differ.]
1. Diftruit; want of confidence in others.

No man almost thought himself secure, and men durst scarce commune or talk one with another; but there was a general difference everywhere.

Bacon's Henry VII.

You have brought scandal.

To Israel, difference of God, and doubt.

In foible hearts, provence enough before.

To way.

Milton's Agrippina.

2. Doubt; want of confidence in ourselves.

If the evidence of its being, or that this is its true fene, be only on probable proofs, our affent can reach no higher than an affirmation or difference arising from the more or less apparent probability of the proofs.

Locke.

Believe always when you doubt your fene; and speak, though fure, with feeming difference.

Pep.

Whatsoever semelts think on, or whatsoever they look on, do all admittance some fear.

Suffision and differences, let poftillo they may be in the wrong; and then it is a fcriff thing to fall into the hands of the living God.

Bentley.

DIFFIDENT, adj. [from differ.]
1. Difftrufhit; doubting others.

Be not deftrit of wisdom; fe the defefts theret not, if thou Diffrfts not her, when moft thou need'her nigh.

Milton.

Ply fpeaks of the Seres, the fame people with the Chinese, as being very fhy and diftrufhit in their dealing.

Avdentum.

2. Doubtful of an event, ufed of things; unknown.

I was really fo diffident of its, as to let it lie by rise these two years, just as you now fee it. Pops.

3. Doubtful of himself; not confident.

I am not fo confident of my own fufficiency, as many look on me as one of the others; but yet I am not fo diffident of myself, as brutality fubmit to any man's defiarces.

King Charls. Diffidents makes the humble head diftruit.

Cliffiria.

To DIFFYND, v. n. [diffide, Latin.] To cleave in two; to split.

DIFFUSION, n. f. [diffufore, Latin.] The act of cleaving or splitting.

Dift.

DIFFUSION, n. f. [diffufore, Latin.] The act of fearing with a blast of wind.

Dift.

DIFFUSION, n. f. [from diffusion, Lat.]
1. Diftruition.

The quality of falling away on all fides; the effect of fluidity; the contrary to {fufficiency}.

Ice is water corrupted by the frigidity of the air, whereby it acquires no new form, but rather a confufion or {determination} of its diffufion; and amitteth not its effence, but condition of fluidity.

Browne's Vulgar Errors.

DIFFUSION, adj. [diffusus, Latin.] Flowing every way; not {confident}; not fixed.

DIFFORM, adj. [from forma, Latin.]

Contrary to uniform; having parts of different {fufficiency}; {diffimilar};} unlike; irregular: as, a {differior} flower, one of which the leaves are unlike each other.

The unequal refractions of differior rays proceed not from any contingent irregularities; such as veins, an uneven polh, or fortitious position of the pores of glass.

Newton.

DIFFORMITY, n. f. [from differ.] Differency of form; irregularity; {differility}.

While they murmur against the present differiority of things, they defire in them a diffufore from the primitive rule, and the idea of that mind that formed all things best.

Brook's Valeger Eroanet.

DIFFRACTION, n. f. [franctifice, French.] The act of taking away the privileges of a city.

To DIFFUSE, v. n. [diffuse, Latin.]
1. To pour out upon a plane, so that the liquor may run every way; to pour without particular direction.

When their waters began to rise at first, long before they could swell to the height of the mountains, they would diffuse themselves everywhere.

Dryden.

2. To spread; to scatter; to diffuse.

Wisdom had oad'm'd Good out of evil to create; instead Of spirits malign, a better race to bring Into their order.

Milton.

His good to worlds, and ages, infinite.

Milton.

No falt wants its spots to propagate and diffuse it.

Dryden.

A chief crowned'd in war, Whole race shall bear aloft the Latin name, And through the conquer's world diffuse our fame.

Dryden.

His eyes diffuse'd a venerable grace, And charity itself was in his face.

Dryden's Good Parfian.

DIFFUSE, adj. [diffusus, Latin.]
1. Scattered; widely {spread}.

2. Copious; not concile.

DIFFUSION, participial adj. [from diffuse.]

This word seems to have signified, in Shakespeare's time, the fame as wide, uncouth, irregular.

Let them from forth a fawest rulf at once, With fome {diffuse} long.

Shak. M. B. of Winds.

He grows like vagabages, To fwear and flrang looks; diffuse'd attire, And every thing that fecs unnatural.

Shakespeare's Henry V.

DIFFUSELY, adv. [from diffuse.]

Wide; diiferely; in manner of that which is spread every way.

DIFFUSNESS, n. s. [from diffused.]

The state of being diifered; diiferion.

DIFFUSLY, adv. [from diffuse.]

1. Widely; extensively.

2. Copiously; not concile.

DIFFUSE, s. f. [from diffuse.]

1. Diiferion; the state of being {spread} every way.

Whereas all bodies are either by the commination of their natures, or by the impressions and {figures} of their motions, the diiferion of species visible feminine, are particule of more of the former operation, and the species audible of the latter.

Bacon's Natural History.

A sheet of very well plucked, marbled paper did not call diiferent colours upon the wall, nor throw its light with an equal diiferion; but threw its beams, unfealhed and bright, to this and that part of the wall.

Bisque or Colours.

2. Copiousness; exuberance of style.

DIFFUSIVE, adj. [from diffuse, Latin.]
1. Having the quality of scattering any thing every way.

DIG, v. n. To work with a {spade}; to work in the ground.

They make that warmeth in others they expect;

The valor works like bodies on a glass,

And does its image on their men project.

Dryd.

2. Scattered; diifered; having the quality of {sufferer} diiferion.

All liquid bodies are {diifered}; for their parts, being in motion, have no connection, but glide and fall away.

Parent's Thes.

No man is of to {general} and diifer a bull, as to proffecute his amours all the world over.

Sam.

The stars, no longer overlaid with weight,

Exert their heads from underneath the masts,

And upward shoot, and kindle as they pass.

With {diifered} light adorn their heavy place.

Dryd.

Cherish'd with hope, and fed with joy, it grows;

Its cheerful buds their opening bloom diiffcute,

And round the happy {fall diifered} dour flow.

Pirr.

3. Extended.

They are not agreed among themselves where infallibility is; whether in the pope alone, or a council alone, or in both together, or in the {diifered} body of Christians.

Tilz.

DISSOLVE, v. n. [disolve, Latin.]
1. Extendion; diiferion of the power of diiferion; the state of being diifered.

2. Want of concile; large compafs of expression.

The fault that I find with a modern legend, is its {diiference}; you have sometimes the whole.

H. C. Pirt.

To DIG, v. n. dig, dig, or dig, dig; part. paff. digg, or digged; paff. [bic, Saxon, a ditch; digger, Danish, to dig.]

To pierce with a spade.

The hall he unto me, Son of man, digg now in the wall; and when I had digg'd in the wall, I beheld a door.

Ezek.

To form by diggin.

Seek with heart and mouth to build up the walls of Jerusalem, which you have broken down; and to fill up the mines that you have digg'd, by craft and falsity, to overtop the fame.

Wing.

He built towers in the desart, and dug many wells; for he had much cattle.

Ch. xxvi, 10.

3. To cultivate the ground by turning it with a spade.

The walls of your garden, without their furninure, have lost all their {value} of your house so that you cannot digg'd your garden roomly.

Temple.

Be first to digg the ground, be first to burn the branches leff.

Dryden's Pindar.

4. To pierce with a sharp point.

A curious value in his {spade} did her crooked beak and cruel talons tind;

Still for the growing liver digg'd his beak,

The growing liver still supplied the feaft.

Dryden's Pindar.

5. To gain by diggin.

It is digg'd out of even the highest mountains, and all parts of the earth conspicuous of it; as py.

Woodward.

Nur was the ground alone requir'd to give her annual income to the crooked sharpe;

But greedy mortals, rammaging her store,

Digg'd from her enam'd first the precious ore.

Oliv.

To DIG, v. n. To work with a {spade}; to work in the ground.

The hall for death, but it cometh not; and digg'd for more than the bad creatures.

Job, lli. 21.

The Italians have often digg'd for gold, described in old authors as the places where flowers or obe-lique stones, and seldom fucceed of success.

Addison's Travels.
DIG.

To Dig up. v. a. To throw up that which is covered with earth. If 1 dig up my forefathers graves, and hag their rotten bones up in chains, it would not look like me.

DIGGANY. n. f. [diminutiv.] Second marriage; marriage to a second wife after the death of the first: as Diggany, having two wives at once.

Dr. Campbell only proves, that archbishop Cranmer was twice married: which is not denied: but brings nothing to prove that such bigamy, or diggany rather, deprives a bishop of the lawful use of his children. [Bishop Erpe.]

D'IGENT. adj. [digerens, Latin.] That which has the power of digesting, or causing digestion.

D part. of the civil law, containing the opinions of the ancient lawyers. I had a purpose to make a particular diggant, or accomplishment to the laws of mine own nation. Bacon.

Laws in the diggant shew that the Romans applied themselves to trade. Actu como in Camera.

2. To distribute into various classes or repartitories; to range or dispose methodically.

3. To concoct in the stomach, so as that the various particles of food may be applied to their proper use.

If little faults, proceeding on diet, shall not be wink'd at, how shall we fret our eyes, when capital crimes chew'd, swallow'd, and digg'd?

Appears Shakespeare's Henry V.

Enter then has organs to digg'd his food. One to begat, and one receive, the brood. Prior.

4. To soften by heat, as in a boiler, or in a dunn'ghill: a chemical term.

5. To range methodically in the mind; to apply knowledge by meditation to its proper use.

6. To range methodically in the mind; to apply knowledge by meditation to its proper use.

7. To reduce to any plan, scheme, or method.

Our play. Leaps o'er the vount and driftings of those broils, 'Ging' th' middle, starting them away. To what may be digg'd in a play. Shakespeare.

6. To receive without loathing or repugnance; not to reject.

First, let us go to dinner.

—'Nay, let me prate you while I have a mouth.

—'No, pray thee, let's serve for table-talk.

Then, how forter thou speakest, 'mong other things

I shall digg it. Shakespeare's Merchant of Venice.

The pleasure of numbers is, that rudeness and barbarism might the better taste and digg the lessons of civility. Peacham.

7. To receive and enjoy.

Cornwall and Albany, With my two daughters dowers, digg'd the third.

8. [In chirurgery.] To digg a wound to generate pus in order to a cure.

DIG'ST. v. n. To generate matter, as a wound, and tend to a cure.

DIGS'TER. n. f. [from digg'd.]

1. He that digg'd or dipp'd.

2. He that digg'd or concoct's his food.

3. A strong vessel or engine, contrived by M. Lapin, wherein to boil, with a very strong heat, any bony substances, so as to reduce them into a fluid rate. Quincy.

4. Which causes or strengthens the concoction of food.

5. Of excellent use for all illnesses of the stomach, a great refomer of health, and a great digg'er. Temple.

DIGESTIBLE. adj. [from digg'd.] That which is capable of being digg'd or concoct'd in the stomach.

The medicine that purge by food, are, not digestible by the stomach, and therefore move immediately downward to the guts. Bacon's Natural History.

DIGESTION. n. f. [from digg'd.]

1. The act of digg'd or concocting food in the stomach.

Now good digestion wait upon appetite, And health on both. Shakespeare's Macbeth.

Digg'sion is a fermentation begun, because there are all the reagents of such a fermentation; heat, air, and motion: but it is not a complete fermentation, because that requires a greater time than the continuance of the aliment in the stomach: vegetable putrefaction refineth very much animal digestion. Shaw.

Quantity of food cannot be determined by measures and weights, or any general Lullian rules; but must vary with the vigour or decays of age or of health, and the use or idleness of air or exercise, with the changes of appetites and then, by what every man may find or suspect of the present strength or weakness of digestion. Temple.

Every cold in a hollow hunger, is only a new labour to a tired digestion. South.

2. The preparation of matter by a chemical heat.

We conceive, indeed, that a perfect good concoction, or digestion, or maturation of the food, proceeds, with produce gold. Bacon's Natural History.

Did chymick chance the furnaces prepare, Roll all the labour-houses of the air,

And by iterable vapours in digestion there? Blackmore.

3. Reduction to a plan; the act of methodizing; the maturation of a design.

The digestion of the counsels in Sweden is made in secrecy, consulting of forty counsellors, who are generally the greatest men. Temple.

4. The art of digg'd or concocting a wound to generate matter.

5. The disposition of a wound or gore to generate matter.

The first stage of healing, or the discharge of matter, is by surgical called digestion.

6. To receive without loathing or repugnance; not to reject.

methoding; adjudging.

To businesse, ripen'd by digg'd thought, this future rate is into method brought. Dryden.

DIGESTIVE. n. f. [from digg'd.] An application which digg's a wound to generate matter.

I dressed it digg'd wounds. Wigan on Accidents.

DIGEST'URE. n. f. Concoction; not used. Newby.

DIGIT. n. f. [from digg'd.] One that opens the ground with a spade.
DIG No turbary dignifies my board! But gedgums, foundors, what my Thames affords.

DIGNITARY, n. f. [from dignus, Latin.] A clergyman advanced to some dignity, to some rank above that of a parochial
Pope.

DIJUDICATION, n. f. [from disposition, Latin.] Judicial disposition.

Dike, n. f. [bie, Sax. dyke, Erse.] 1. A channel to receive water. The dykes are filled, and with a roaring found the Riving rivers float the nether grounds. Dryden's Virgil.

2. Deviation. The digressions of the sun are not equal, but, near
The equinoctial intercessions, it is right and greater; near the solstices, more oblique and lesser.

In the course of the infallible errors. Sow-

A divert, or a dissipation of the shining flow of truth.

The image of the sun should be drawn out into an oblong figure, either by dilatation of every ray, or by any other casual inequality of the reflections.

To DILATE, v. a. [dilata, Latin.] 1. To extend; to spread out; to enlarge oppose to contract.

But ye thereby much greater glory, Than had ye forced with a prince's peer.

For now your high light doth in your dilatation, And in my darkness greater dots appear. Dryden's Dilatation.

But will to induce and hinder inundations.

God, that breaks up the flood-gates of so great a deluge, and all the art and industry of man is not sufficient to raise up dykes and ramparts against it. Cowley.

To DILACERATE, v. a. [diclerus, Latin.] To tear; to rend; to force in two.

The infant, at the accomplished period, to come forth, dilacerates and breaks those parts which restrained him before.

DILACERATION, n. f. [from dilacertas, Latin.] The act of rending in two.

The greatest dilaceration of pain is by the obstruction of the fluid vessels, and dilaceration of the nerves fibres.

To DILACERATE. v. a. [ diclerus, Latin.] To tear; to rend; in pieces.

Rashly that they would dilacerate the entrails of their own mother, and explose her thereby to be reverence, they met half way in a gallant kind. Houscroft's Fane Piper.

To DILAPIDATE, v. n. [dilapidus, Latin.] To go to ruin; to fall by decay.

Dilapidation, n. f. [dilapidatus, Latin.] The incumbent's suffering the channel, or any other edifices of his ecclesiastical living, to go to ruin or decay, by neglecting to repair the same: and it likewise extends to his committing, or suf- fering to be committed, any wilful waste in or upon the glebe-woods, or any other inheritance of the church.

To DILAPIDATE. v. n. [dilapidus, Latin.] To go to ruin; to fall by decay.

Dilapidation, n. f. [dilapidatus, Latin.] The incumbent's suffering the channel, or any other edifices of his ecclesiastical living, to go to ruin or decay, by neglecting to repair the same: and it likewise extends to his committing, or suf- fering to be committed, any wilful waste in or upon the glebe-woods, or any other inheritance of the church.

Dilapidation, n. f. [dilapidus, Latin.] To go to ruin; to fall by decay.

Dilapidation, n. f. [dilapidatus, Latin.] The incumbent's suffering the channel, or any other edifices of his ecclesiastical living, to go to ruin or decay, by neglecting to repair the same: and it likewise extends to his committing, or suf- fering to be committed, any wilful waste in or upon the glebe-woods, or any other inheritance of the church.

Dilapidation, n. f. [dilapidatus, Latin.] The incumbent's suffering the channel, or any other edifices of his ecclesiastical living, to go to ruin or decay, by neglecting to repair the same: and it likewise extends to his committing, or suf- fering to be committed, any wilful waste in or upon the glebe-woods, or any other inheritance of the church.

To DILAPIDATE. v. n. [dilapidus, Latin.] To go to ruin; to fall by decay.

Dilapidation, n. f. [dilapidatus, Latin.] The incumbent's suffering the channel, or any other edifices of his ecclesiastical living, to go to ruin or decay, by neglecting to repair the same: and it likewise extends to his committing, or suf- fering to be committed, any wilful waste in or upon the glebe-woods, or any other inheritance of the church.

Dilapidation, n. f. [dilapidatus, Latin.] The incumbent's suffering the channel, or any other edifices of his ecclesiastical living, to go to ruin or decay, by neglecting to repair the same: and it likewise extends to his committing, or suf- fering to be committed, any wilful waste in or upon the glebe-woods, or any other inheritance of the church.

Dilapidation, n. f. [dilapidatus, Latin.] The incumbent's suffering the channel, or any other edifices of his ecclesiastical living, to go to ruin or decay, by neglecting to repair the same: and it likewise extends to his committing, or suf- fering to be committed, any wilful waste in or upon the glebe-woods, or any other inheritance of the church.

Dilapidation, n. f. [dilapidatus, Latin.] The incumbent's suffering the channel, or any other edifices of his ecclesiastical living, to go to ruin or decay, by neglecting to repair the same: and it likewise extends to his committing, or suf- fering to be committed, any wilful waste in or upon the glebe-woods, or any other inheritance of the church.

Dilapidation, n. f. [dilapidatus, Latin.] The incumbent's suffering the channel, or any other edifices of his ecclesiastical living, to go to ruin or decay, by neglecting to repair the same: and it likewise extends to his committing, or suf- fering to be committed, any wilful waste in or upon the glebe-woods, or any other inheritance of the church.

Dilapidation, n. f. [dilapidatus, Latin.] The incumbent's suffering the channel, or any other edifices of his ecclesiastical living, to go to ruin or decay, by neglecting to repair the same: and it likewise extends to his committing, or suf- fering to be committed, any wilful waste in or upon the glebe-woods, or any other inheritance of the church.

Dilapidation, n. f. [dilapidatus, Latin.] The incumbent's suffering the channel, or any other edifices of his ecclesiastical living, to go to ruin or decay, by neglecting to repair the same: and it likewise extends to his committing, or suf- fering to be committed, any wilful waste in or upon the glebe-woods, or any other inheritance of the church.

Dilapidation, n. f. [dilapidatus, Latin.] The incumbent's suffering the channel, or any other edifices of his ecclesiastical living, to go to ruin or decay, by neglecting to repair the same: and it likewise extends to his committing, or suf- s
DIL

Dilatory fortune plays the flit
With the brave, noble, honest, gallant man,
To throw herself awry on fouls and knaves. Orson.
A dilatory temper commits innumerable cruelties without deluge.

Dilection. n. s. [dilectio, Latin.] The act of loving; kindliness.
So far is Christ's dilection, that the grand condition of our felicity is our belief.
Bible's Song of Love.

Dilemma. n. s. [Arca.]
1. An argument: equally conclusive by contrary suppositions. A young rhetorician applied to an old sophist to be taught the art of pleading, and bargained for a certain reward to be paid, when he should gain a cauce. The master sued for his reward, and the scholar endeavoured to elude his claim by a dilemma:
If I gain my cauce, I shall withhold your pay, because the judge's award will be against you; if I lose it, I may with-bold it, because he shall not yet have gained it. On the contrary, says the master, if you gain your cauce, you must pay me, because you are to pay me when you gain a cauce; if you lose it you must pay me, because the judge will award it.

A dilemma, that Morton used to raise benevolement, some called his fork, and some his crotch.
Bacon's Henry VII.

Hope, whose worst being ruin'd
Is alike if it succeed, and if it mis-seems, when good or ill does equally confound,

And both the horns of false dilemma wound.
Cowley.

2. A difficult or doubtful choice; a vexa-tious alternative.
A strong dilemma in a de-pace café!
To act with infamy, or quit the place.
Swift.
A dire dilemma; either way I'm spo'd
If foes write if, friends read me dead.
Pep.

Diligence. n. s. [diligentia, Latin.] Inddustry; assiduity; constancy in business; continuance of endeavour; unintermitted application; the contrary to idleness.
Do by diligence thine heartly unto me.
Tim. iv. 9.
Brethren, give diligence to make your calling and election sure.
2 Pet. i. 10.

Diligent. adj. [diligent, Latin.]
1. Confident in application; persevering in endeavour; assiduous; not idle; not negligent;
not lazy.
Seek thou a man diligent in his business, he shall stand before kings.
Prov. xxvi. 29.

2. Confidently applied; prosecuted with activity and perseverance; assiduous.
And the judge shall make diligent inquisition.
Daw, s.x.

Diligently. adv. [from diligent.] With assiduity; with heed and perseverance;
not carelessly; not idly; not negligently.
If you inquire not attentively and diligently, you shall never be able to discern a number of mechaical motions.
Bacon.
The inventors have diligently examined what confests the beauty of good poisons.

Dill. n. s. [sult, Saxon.] It hath a flender, fibreous, annual root; the leaves are like those of fennel; the seeds are oval, plain, streaked, and bordered.

DILUCID. adj. [dilucidus, Latin.]
1. Clear; not opaque.
2. Clear; plain; not obscure.

To DILUCIDATE. v. s. [from dilucidare, Latin.] To make clear or plain; to explain; to free from obscurity.
It shall not extenuate, but explain dilucidating to the current of the ancients.
Brown's Vulgar Errors.

DILUCIDATION. n. s. [from dilucidare, Latin.] The act of making clear; explanation; exposition.

DILUENT. adj. [diluxens, Latin.] Having the power to thin and attenuate other matter.

DILUENT. n. s. [from the adjective.]
That which thickens other matter.
There is no real diluent but water: every fluid is made water in it.
Arabid in Aliments.

To DILUTE. v. s. [dilux, Latin.]
1. To make thin; to attenuate by the adm-xixture of other parts.
Drinking a large dose of diluted tea, as the was ordered by a physician, the evil to be Leaks.
The solution ought to be thin to diffuse, deletent to temper, or acid to fuse.

Arabid in Aliments.

2. To make weak.
The chamber was dark, left these colours should be diluted and weakened by the mixture of any advantageous light.
Newt.

DILUTE. adj. Thin; attenuated.
If the red and blue colours were more dilute the weak, the distance of the images would be less than an inch; and if they were more intense an fall, that distance would be great.

Diluter. n. s. [from dilute.] That which makes any thing else thin.
Water is the only diluter, and the best diluent of most of the ingredients of our aliments.
Arabid in Aliments.

DILUTION. n. s. [dilutio, Latin.] The act of making any thing thin or weak.
Opposite to dilution is precipitation, or thickening, which is performed by dissolving the mast liquid parts by heat, or by insinuating some substances, which makes the parts of the fluid cocr a more diluted in Aliments.

DILUVIAN. adj. [from diluvium, Latin.]
Relating to the deluge.
Suppose that this diluvium lake should rise to the mountain tops in one place, and not diffuse itself equally into all countries about.
Barrar's Theory.

DIM. adj. [dimme, Saxon; of, Welth; doze, Erse.]
1. Not having a quick sight; not seeing clearly.
For her true form how can my spark discern,
Which, dim by nature, art did never clear? Davis.
2. Dull of apprehension.
The understanding is dim, and cannot by its natural light discover spiritual truths.
Rogers.

3. Not clearly seen; obscure; imperfectly discovered.
We might be able to aim at some dim and seemning conception, how matter might begin to exist
by the power of that eternal first Being.
Locke.

Something, as dim to our internal view, is
It is thus perhaps the cause of all we do.
Pope.

4. Obstructing the act of vision; not luminous; somewhat dark.
Her face right wondrous fair did seem to be,
That her own beauty's beam great brightness threw
Through the dim shades, that all men might it see.
Spen.
DIM

DIM’KINGLINGLY, adv. [from dim.]
In a manner tending to vilify, or lessen.
I never heard him converse, or to much speak dim’kingly of any one that was absent. Locke.

DIM’NATION, n. [diminutivis, Lat.]
1. The act of making less; opposed to augmentation.
The one is not capable of any diminution or augmentation in all by men; the other ax to admit both. Hunter.

2. The state of growing less; opposed to increase.
The gravitating power of the sun is transmitted through the whole of the planets without any diminution, so as to act upon all their parts, to their very centres, and according to the same laws, as if one part upon which it acted were not surrounded with the body of the planet.
Newton.

Finite and infinitesimal to be looked upon as the modes of quantity, and to be distributed primarily to those things which are capable of increase or diminution. Locke.

3. Difiered; lack of dignity; degradation; degradation.
Gaily to thee
Henslowe.’s s. of Eulensglas. He prides himself
Nor thinks it diminutive he rank’d
In military honour next.
Philips.

4. Deprivation of dignity; injury of reputation.
Make me wife by thy truth, for my own soul’s salvation, and shall never regard the world’s opinion or diminution of me. King Charles.
They might raise the temptation of another, though they are a diminution to his. Add. Specll.

5. [In this character.]
The contraction of the diameter of a column, as it ascends.
Dim’nc’ive, adj. [diminutivus, Lat.]
Small; little; narrow; contracted.
The poor worn,
The most diminutivis of birds, will fight,
Her young ones in her nest, against the owl.
Shakespeare.’s Mark. It is the interest of mankind, in order to the advance of knowledge, to be sensible they have yet attained it but in poor diminutive measure. Glanville’s Sopor.

The light of man’s understanding is but a slant, diminutive, contracted light, and looks not beyond the present.
Swift. Some of these ladies should once take a liking to such diminutive race of ladies, we should, in a little time, mankind epitomized, and the whole species in miniature. Addison.

There is not the least idea how weak and awkward many of those little diminutives difficulties are. Watt.

Dim’nu’tive, n. f. [from the adjective.]
1. A word formed to express littlenesses:
as capillus, in Latin, a little stone; matrimon, in French, a little house; manum, in English, a little man.
He afterwards proving a dainty and effeminate youth, was commonly called, by the diminutivis of his name, Peterkin or Perkins. Daven. Ills VII. Sim, while but Sim, in good reputation did live; Was then a knave, but in diminutivis. Cotton.

2. A small thing; a feme not now in use. Follow his character; mock, feme-like, be thrown.
For poor’lt diminutive, for do’s! Shakespeare.

Dim’nu’tively, adv. [from diminutivis.]
In a diminutive manner.

Dim’nu’tiveness, n. f. [from diminutivis.]
Smallness; littlenesse; petty; small; want of bulk; want of dignity.
Din! Worth a dim. Somewhat dim; somewhat obscure.
’Tis true, but let it not be known,
My eyes are somewhat dimly grow’d
For nature, always in the right;
’Twas your eyes adays made my light.
Swift.

DIN

DIN’MIS’RY, adj. [dimissus, Lat.]
That by which a man is dismissed to another jurisdiction.
A bishop of another diocese ought neither to ordain or admit a clerk, without the consent of his own proper bishop, and without the letters dimissivi, and admission of the new bishop. Alytus’ Rerographer.

DIN’MY’THY, n.s. A fine kind of sultan or cloth of cotton.
I directed the line of fine dimity, Wyman.

DIN’LY, adv. [from dim.]
1. Not with a quick sight; not with a clear perception.
Unfelspeck who fitteth above these hewn’s,
To us invisible, or dimly seen,
In lowly bowers. Milton.
2. Not brightly; not louringly.
In the beginning of our pumping the air, the match appeared well lighted, though it had almost filled the receiver with fumes; but by degrees it burnt more and more dimly. Light’s Spring of the Air.

I saw the angel’s guards from earth ascend,
Grew’d they must now no longer man attend;
The heavens about their temples dimly shone;
One would have thought the crime had been their own. Dryden.

DIN’NESS, n. f. [from dim.]
1. Dulness of sight.
2. Want of apprehension; stupidity.
Answerable to this dimness of their perception, was the whole system and body of their religion. Dryden.

DIN’PLE, n. f. [dint, a hole; dintle, a little hole; by a careless pronunciation dimple. Skinner.]
A small cavity or depression in the cheek, chin, or other part.
The dimple of the upper lip is the common measure of beauty. Gozzi.

In her forehead’s fair half-round, Love’s feet in open triumph crown’d he
In the dimple of her chin; in private state, by friends is seen. Prior.

To DIN’PLE, v. n. [from the noun.]
To sink in small cavities, or little inequalities.
The wild waves matter’d him, and suck’d him in.
And smiling eddies dimpled on the main. Dryden.

Dimpling smiles, dimpled temple, dimpled brow.
Dryden.

To DIN’PLE, v. n. [from dimple.]
Set with dimples.
On each side her
Stood pretty dimpled boys like smiling Cupids. Shakespeare.

DIN’PLEY, adj. [from dimple.]
Full of dimples; sinking in little inequalities. As the smooth surface of the dimply flood The silver-dimpl’d virgin lightly trod. Warton’s Life.

DIN. n. f. [byn, a noise; bynian, to make a noise, Sax. dyne, to thunder, thund’r, to make a noise; bylian, to shout; a noise; and continued sound.]
And all the way he roared as he went,
That all the foret with attenuation
Thence did tremble; and the beast therein
Fled fast away from that foul dreadful din. Haberdash. Tale.

O, ‘twas a din to fright a monster’s ear;
To make an earthquake: sure, it was the roar
Of a whole host of lions. Shakespeare’s Tempest.
While the clouds with lively din
Scatters the rear of darkness thin
And to the dark, or the barn-door;
So the gun’s report, and voice before.
Milton.

Now might be seen an’
Inducing darkness, grateful true impulse’d.
And hence, on the odious din of war. Milton.

DIN, while the troubled elements around,
Earth, water, air, the running din refund.
What storms of foame and angry, the sides.
While every shot is level’d at his sides. Smiles.

Some independent ideas, of no alliance to one another, are, by education, custom, and the con-fant din of their party,奢华 complied in their minds, that they always appear there together. Locke.

To DIN, v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To fun with noise; to haras with clam.
Rather live
To bathe the food with bread, and din your ears
2. To impress with violent and continued noise.
What shall we do, if his majesty puts out a proclamation commanding us to take Wood’s half-page? This hath been often din’d in my ears. Swift.

To DINE, v. n. [Dinner, Fr.]
1. To eat the chief meal about the middle of the day.
Perhaps some merchant hath invited him,
And from the m’drst he’s somewhere gone to dinner. Good fitter, let us dine, and never rest. Shakspere.

Myself, he, and my father.
To-day did dine together. Shakespeare.

He would dine with him the next day. Clarend.

Thus, of your business and have brought his
With whom old Homer makes such noise,
The greatest actions I can find,
Are, that they did their work and din’d. Prior.

To DINE, v. a. [to give a dinner to; to feed.]
Bull this refreshing root in generous wine,
And let before the door the flick’ry flax to dink. Dryden’s Virgil.

DIN’TI’CAL, adj. [dimetrical, L.]
Whirling round; vertiginous.
Some of late have concluded, from spots in the sun, which appear upon the face, besides the revolution it makes with its orbs, it hath also an horizontal motion, and rolls upon its own poles. Brown’s Polar Errors.

A spherical figure is most commodious for din-ctional motion, or revolution upon its own axis. Roy.

To DING, pret. dungi, v. a. [dringen, Dutch.
1. To daff with violence.
2. To impress with force.

To DING, v. n. To bluster; to baoze
To huiff. A low word.

Buffus and dings, because we will not spend the little we have left, to get him the title of lord Strutt. Arbuthnot.

DING’-DON, n. f. A word by which the sound of bells is imitated.
Let us all ring fancy’s knell. Dryden’s dog bell. Shakespeare.

DIN’GLE, n. f. [from ben, or bun, a hollow, Sax.] A hollow between hills; a dale.
I know each lane, and every alley green,
Dings, or bushy dell of this wild wood.
And every bushy dell again.
My daily walks and ancient neighbourh. Milt.

DIN’ING-ROOM, n. f. [dine and room.]
The principal apartment of the house; the room where entertainments are made.
He went out from the dining-room before he had fallen into error by the perspicuity of his means, or the deluge of cinder’s Taylor’s Rule of Living Truths.

DINNER, n. f. [dine, French.]
The chief meal; the meal eaten about the middle of the day.
Let me not stay a jot for dinner.
Go, get it ready. Shakespeare’s King Lear.

Before dinner and supper, as often as it’s convenient, or can be had, let the public prayers of 3 X 2 church,

DIO

church, or some parts of them, be told publickly in the family.

The jolly crew, unmindful of the path,
The quarry share, their plentiful dainty fare.

Dryden's Amours.

DINNER-TIME. n. f. [dinner and time.]

The time of dining.

At dinner-time,
I pray you, have in mind where we must meet.

Shakespeare

Then from the mint walls forth the man of rhyme.
Happy to catch me at such dinner-time.

Pope

DINT. n. f. [bony, Saxon.]

1 A blow; a stroke.

Much dunned at that dust, her sense was dazed.
Yet, kindling rage, herself the gather'd round.

Spenser

Neither valiant hope
To be invulnerable in their bright arms,
Though temper'd heavily; for that mortal dust,
Save he who aims above, none can reach.

Milton

2. The mark made by a blow; the cavity remaining after a violent preliure.

He embrac'd her naked body o'er;
And, training hard the fist, was afraid
His hands had made a dint, and hurt the maid.

Dryden

3. Violence; force; power.

Now you weep; and, I perceive, you feel
The dint of pity.

Shakespeare's Julius Caesar.

We arc to weep the whole Spanish monarchy out of their hands and enemy; and, in order to work our way into the heart of his country by dint of arms.

Adrian

The dewlatt bull now chases along the plain,
While burning love ferments in ev'ry vein;

His well-arm'd front against his rival aims,
And by the dint of war his mighties claims.

Gay

To DINT, v. a. [from the noun.]
To mark with a cavity by a blow, or violent preliure.

With pity stored each other both affult,
And strike so fiercely, that they do impress
Dent-dotted bowers in the batter'd wall;
The iron walls to their blows were weak and Dampen'd.

Dryden's Fable.

Leave, leave, fair bride, your solitary bone.
No more shall you return to it alone;
It is fuch service, and your body's print,
Like a grave, the yielding down both dust.

Dryden's Stanzas with Mrs. Wilmot.

Sack are her eyes, and toothless are her jaws.

Dryden's Fable.

DISTRIBUTION, n. f. [disserteratim, Lat.]
The act of numbering out finely.

DIOCEsan, n. f. [from diocese,] A bishop,
As he stands related to his own clergy or flock.

As a diocesan you are like to astound yourself in all other capacities, and exemplify every word of this discourse.

Shaks.

I have heard it is advised by a diocesan to his inferior clergy, that they should read some of the most celebrated sermons printed by others.

Tatler.

D'OCHESS. n. f. [diocese;] A Greek word, compounded of δις and αὐτός.

The circuit of every bishop's jurisdiction; for this realm has two divisions, one into fives or counties, in respect of temporal policy; another into dioceses, in respect of jurisdiction ecclesiastical.

Cowell

None ought to be admitted by any bishop, but such as have dwelt and remained in his diocesan confines this long time.

Whitting.

He should regard the bishop of Rome as the fiders of Jerusalem, and the other of Rome, and spiritual power.

Shakspeare

D'OCHESS

The virtue dwelling in Prometheus' side,
His bloody heaft with his torn liver dyed

Graevilis.

3. To enter lightly into any thing.

When I think all the repetitions are struck out in a copy, I sometimes find more upon dipping in the fifth volume.

D'OCHESS

4. To take that which comes first; to choose by chance.

With what till thoughts of Jove art those perfec-

'f's?

Wouldst thou prefer him to some man? Suppose

A dipp'd among the words, and St. Cuthbert's choice?

Dryden's Persius.

D'OCHESS.

n. f. [from dip and ebb.]
The name of a bird.

D'OCHESS is so named of his dining and litterelle.

Corne.

D'OCHESSALOUS, adj. [see; and antifona.]

Having two flower leaves.

D'OCHESS: Chart. n. f. [see; and antifona.

A coalition of two virtues to form one sound:

As, main, leaf, Cefer.

They see how many disputes the simple and ambiguous nature of words created among grammarians, and how they have begot the mitlaffe concerning dipthongs:

All that are properly fyllables, and not dipthongs, are as intended to be figurified by that word, Holder's Elements of Speech.

Make a dipthong of the second era and awe, instead of their being two syllables, and the objection is gone.

Pope

DIPLOE. n. f. The inner place or lamina of the skull.

DIPLOMA. n. f. [diplomata,] A letter or writing conferring fome privilege; so called, because they were formerly to be written on waxed tables, and folded together.

DIPPER. n. f. [from dip.] One that dips in the water.

DIPPING Needle. n. f. A device which shows a particular property of the magnetic needle, so that, besides its polarity or verticity, it is its direction of altitude, or height above the horizon, when duly poifed about an horizontal axis, it will always point to a determined degree of altitude, or elevation above the horizon, in this or that place respectively.

DIPPER. n. f. [Latin, from διππειν, to dip.]
A serpent, whole bite produces the fentation of unquenchable thirst.

Scorpion, and a&, and amphibious a&,
Cerat shares, and, ellops drink,
And dippl.

DIPPLETO. n. f. [hodola,] A noun confisting of two cates only.

Clark.

DIPSYCH. n. f [dipsycha, Lat. two leaves together.

A regifter of bishops and martyrs.

The communication of sins was made out of the dipsycha of the church, as appears by multiples of places in St. Austin.

Suffreding sect.

DIRL. adj. [dipsus, Lat.] Dreadful; dif-

mal; mournful; horrible; terrible; evil in a great degree.

When a man's sight,
To oft their dire distresses.

Shakspeare, Marlowe.

More by temperance die in and drinks, which on the earth shall bring

Dipses diri; of which a monstrous crew before thee shall appear.

Shakspeare, Methuselah.

Hydras, and gorgons, and chimæras diri.

Milton.
The direction of good works to a good end, is the only principle that distinguishes charity.

2. Motion impressed by a certain impulse.

No particle of matter, nor any combination of particles, is in body, can either move of itself, or of itself alter the direction of its motion.

3. Order; command; prescription.

From the counsel of St. Jerome given Laets, of taking heed how they be apostolical, and also by the help of other learned men's judgments, delivered in like cases, we may take direction.

4. Regularity; adjunction.

All nature is but art unknown to thee.

All chance, direction which thee cannot fore.

Direction. n.s. [from direc.] Straightness; tendency to any point; the nearest way.

Ah! they argued from celestial causes only, the constant vicinity of the diredor of his rays; never suspecting that the body of the earth had to gain an efficiency in the changes of the air.

Director. n.s. [director, Latin.] 1. One that has authority over others; a superintendent; one that has the general management of a design or work.

Himself stood director over them, with holding or slumbering, seeing he did like or mislike these things he did not understand.

Swift.

2. A rule; an ordinance.

Common forms were not designed Directors to a noble mind.

Swift.

3. An instructor; one who shews the proper methods of proceeding.

They are glad to use counselors and directors in all their dealings of wealth, as contracts, tenements.

Dryden.

4. One who is consulted in cases of conscience.

I am her director and her guide in spiritual affairs.

Dryden.

5. One appointed to transact the affairs of a trading company.

What made directors cheat in fourth-feast years?

Pope.

An instrument for surgery, by which the hand is guided in its operation.

The manner of opening with a knife, is by dilding is on a director, the groove of which prevents its being mistaken.

Simpkin's Surgery.

Directionary. n.s. [from director.] The book which the faithful preachers published in the rebellion for the direction of their feet in acts of worship.

As to the ordinance concerning the directionary, we cannot conform to the taking away of the book of common prayer.

Oxford Reform against the C.

D'seful. adj. [from direc.] This word is frequent among the poets, but has been censure as not analogous; all other words compounded with it consisting of a subtilitate and full; and dreadful, or full of dread; joyful, or full of joy.

Dirc; dreadful; dismal.

Point of spirit it never piercing would.

No direlful word divide the fullis since could.

Fairly Reason.

But yet at last, whereas the direlful breed.

She saw not Air, of flaxing vain afflict.

She slihur drew, and saw that joyous end.

Then God the pray'd, and thank'd her faithful knight.

Direlful was befitting that hated wretch.

That makes us wretched by the death of thee.

Shakespeare.

The voice of God himself speaks in the heart of men, whether they understand it or not; and by frequent intimations gives the inner fire of that direlful eye, which he is like to drink more deeply of hinters.

Spenser.

Iours the direlful author of my woes;" Twas told again, and thence my rain robe.

Dryden.

Achilles' wrath to Greeks the direlful flying.

Of wases numberless, heavenly gods and kings. Pope.

D'reness. n.s. [from direc.] Dismalness; horror; hideousness.

Direeys, familiar to my fraughts thoughts, Cannot once flint me.

Shakespeare's Aschitc.

Direct. n.s. [director, Latin.] The act of plundering.

Drye.
DIRGE. [This is not a contration of the Latin dirige, in the popish hymn, Dirige gratias mea, as some pretend; but from the Teutonic dyrke, loudare, to praise and extol. Whence it is possible their dyrke, and our dirge, was a laudatory song to commemorate and applaud the dead. Verfegan. Bawdapparently derives it from dirige.]. A mournful ditty; a song of lamentation. The lines figure of this warlike talk.

Have we, as twere, with a deasdted joy, With mirth in funeral, and with dirge in marriage.

In equal, the weighing delight and dole, Toke of wife. Shakespeare's Hamlet.

Meanwhile the body of Richard, after many indignations and reproaches, the dirges and obsequies of the common people towards tyrants, was obdurately buried. Bawd.

You from above shall hear each day One dirge dispatch'd unto thy clay; That's your own anthems shall become, Your falling epipedium.

All due measures of her mourning kept, Did office at the dirge, and by infection went.

D'IRIGENT adj. [dirigens, Latin].
The dirigent line in geometry that along which the line described is carried in the generation of any figure.

DIRK. n. f. [an Eric word.]. A kind of dagger used in the Highlands of Scot-land.

In vain thy hungry mountaineers Come forth in all their warlike gear, The shield, the palfal, dirk, and dagger. To which they daily went to swagger. Tickell.

To DISKE, v. a. To spoil; to ruin. Obsolete.

The vaft bigens but cumbers the ground, And draws the beauties of my blossoms round. Speicer.

DIRT. n. s. [dirt, Dutch; dirt, Irish, Irish].

1. Mud; filth; mire; anything that sticks to the clothes or body. They, gilding dirt in noble verse, Rudick philosophy rehearse.

Dismant. The Eskie engages his land and labours, and together a little dirt that shall bury them in the wind. The sea rises as high as ever, though the great height of dirt it brings along with it are apt to chock up the hollows. Addis.

Mark by what wretched steps their glory grows; From dirt and dirt- weed as proud Venice rose in. In each how guilt and greatness equal, was, And all that rade thing the hero, that the man. Page.

Is yellow dirt the passion of thy life? Look but on Grippus, or on Grippus' wife. Page.

2. Meannefs; forldinefs.

To DIRT. v. a. [from the noun.]. To foul; to bemire; to make filthy; to bedaub; to pollute; to daily. Lit company is like a dog, who dirt those things whom he loves best. Swift.

DIRT-PIE. n. f. [dirt and pie.]. Forms moulded by children of clay, in imitation of pafty.

Though setted thy heart upon that which has newly left off making of dirt-pies, and is preparing it for the green-tinker's dish, to make it more homely. Swift.

D'IRITIE. adv. [from dirity.]

1. Naffly; foully; filthy.

Meanly; fordidly; shamefully.

Such gold as that witherth. Chimeres from each mineral. Art dirity and desperately gull'd. Donne.

D'IRITINESS. n. f. [from dirity.]

1. Naitlinefs; filthynefs; foulnefs.

2. Meannefs; baifenefs; forldinefs.

DIRTY. adj. [from dirt.]

1. Fouf; naffly; filthy.

Thy Dol and Helen of thy noble thoughts Is in base disguise, and concomitant, Haut'd with deceit, by mechanic, dirty hands. Shakespeare.

2. Sullied; cloudly; not elegant.

Found an almond, and the clear white colour will be turned into a dirty one, and the sweet talk into an icy one. Locke.

3. Mean; base; despicable.

Such employments are the diseases of labour, and the rule of time, which it contracts not by lying still, but by dirty employment. Taylor's Holy Living.

Marriages would be made up upon more natural riches than more dirty interests, and interest of riches without measure or end. Temple.

They come at length to grow fees and epistles, mean in their discourses, and dirty in their prac- tices. South.

To DIRTY, v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To foul; to pollute. The birds Sheru lived gently, and never used to diry their fingers with pen, ink, and counters.

2. To disgrace; to scandalize.

DIRUPTION. n. f. [drupiue, Latin.]

1. The act of bursting, or breaking.

2. The state of bursting, or breaking.

An inapplicable species of care in com- position, implying commonly a priva- tion or negative figuration of the world to which it is joined; as, to break, to diftract; to join, to disrupt. It is borrowed from detruit, used by the French and Spaniards in this sense: as, deficuer, to unite; disjicrur, to banish: from the Latin de; as, disre, to build, to disrupt, to destroy.

DISABILITY. n. f. [from difficile.

1. Want of power to do any thing; weak- nefs; impotence.

Our consideration of creatures, and attention unto scriptures, are not in themselves things of facility to breed or beget faith. Hooker.

Many withdrew themselves out of pure faint- nes, and disability to attend the conclusion. Ralpigh.

He that knows most of himself, knows least of his knowledge, and the exercised understanding is conscious of its disability. Glanville.

The ability of mankind does not lie in the impotency or disabilities of brute. Locke.

2. Want of proper qualifications for any purpose; legal impediment.

A suit is commenced in a temporal court for an inheritance; and the defendant pleads, in disability, that the plaintiff is a bastard. Addison's Egerian.

This disadvantage which the disfitter at present lies under, of a disability to receive church prefer- ments, will be cutly remedied by the repeal of the left. Swift.

To DISABLE, v. a. [dis and able.]

1. To deprive of force; to weaken; to disable for any act.

The disadvantage which this suit did not only disable this king to be a conqueror, but deprived him both of his kingdom and life. Davy's Ireland.

Nor is it overcome Stan, whose full force heen, a desiderable brute. Disjicur not to give thee his death's wounded. Milton.

A Christian's life is a perpetual exercise, a wrestling and warfare, for which frequent perverses disable the body, by yielding to that enemy with whom they must fight. Taylor's Holy Living.

2. To render from action; to disable.

Have known a great fleet disabled for two months, and thereby lost great occasions by an indisposition of the admiral. Temple.

3. To impair; to disable.

By churning something a more feeling part Than my faint means would grant continuance. Shakespeare.

4. To deprive of usefulness or efficacy.

Fawcet, Mountdore, Traveller; loft you this, and wear strange fruits; disable all the benefits of your own country. Shakespeare.

5. To exclude, as wanting proper qualifica- tions.

I will not disable any for proving a scholar, nor yet disable that I have so many happily forced upon the course by which nature they seemed much indigified. Glanville's Sicrist.

Those thoughts by fair Lyric must not flow, If she would bite her lovers, though Like birds she flit among grapes, Are disabling who first the grapes. Waller.

If by simplicity you meant a general defect in that trope that angels sing, I hope to disable you. Waller's Alter.

Claws of thought and passions, ill confin'd; Still by himself about or disabling. Pope.

DISECATION. n. f. [dis and accommodation]. The state of being unfit or unprepared.

Devolutions have happened in some places more than in others, according to the accommodation or disaccommodation of them to such calamities. Hume's Origin of Mankind.

To DISECATION, v. a. [dis and accufcufion]. To destroy the force of habit by disable or contrary practice.

To DISEACKNOWLEDGE. n. f. [dis and acknowledge]. Not to acknowledge.

The manner of denying Christ's deity here prohibited, was, by words and oral expressions verbally to deny and disacknowledge.

Dishonour is a fault, n. f. [dis and acquittance]. Difie of samility.

Confidence, by a long neglect of, and for- feiture with itself, contracts an invertebrute rust or soil. Smith.

DISEMNAGE. n. f. [dis and advantage].

1. Loss; injury to interef; as, he held to disfavorage.

2. Diminution of any thing desirable, as credit, fame, honour.

Chaucer in many things resembled Ovid, and that with no disfavorage on the side of the modern authors.

The most shining merit does go down to pottifery with disfavorage, when it is not placed by writers in its proper light. Addison's Frendtielder.

These parts already published give reason to think that the list will appear with no disfavorage to that immortal poem. Addison's Frendtielder.

Their testimony will not be of much weight to its disfavorage, since they are liable to the common objection of condemning what they do not understand. Swift.

3. A state not prepared for defence.

No fort can be too strong, No fleshly breast canbe arm'd so freely.
To DISAPPEAR, v. a. [dit and affirm.] To throw open to common purposes; to reduce from the privilege of a forest to the state of common ground.

The commissioners of the treasury moved the king to dismiss some forests of his, explaining themselves as being under the necessity of clearing the way, not near any of the king's houses. Bacon. How happy's he, which hath due place affixed to his beard, and disaffixed his mind! Donne.

To DISAGREE, v. n. [dis and agree.] To differ; not to be the same.

The mind clearly and infallibly perceives all distinctions in disaffections; that is, the one not to be the other.

The 'disaffections are

To DISAFFECTION, v. a. [dis and affect.] To fill with discontent; to discourage; to make less faithful or zealous.

They had attempted to disaffect and discontents his majesty's late army. Clarion.

DISAFFECTIONED, part. adj. [from disaffected.] Not disposed to zeal or affection. Usually applied to those who are enemies to the government.

By denying the civil worship to the emperor's fathers, which the custom then was to give, they were proceeded against as disaffected to the emperor. Stebbing Stella.

DISAFFECTIONEDLY, adv. [from disaffected.] After a disaffected manner.

DISAFFECTIONEDNESS, n. f. [from disaffected.] The quality of being disaffected.

DISAFFECTION. n. f. [from disaffection.] 1. Dislike; ill will.

In making laws, princes must have regard to the public dispositions, to the affections and disaffections, of the people; and must not introduce a law with public scandal and disaffections. Taylor's Rule of Holy Living.

2. Want of zeal for the government; want of ardour for the reigning prince.

The crown, in every thing disliked by those who think with the majority, is called disaffected. Swift.

DISORDER. n. f. [dis and order.] Bad condition; in a physical sense.

The crown took its original merit from the disaffection of the part, and not from the incapacity of the houers. Winstan.

DISAFFIRMANCE, n. f. [dis and affirm.] Confutation; negation.

This kind of reasoning which subverts the opposite conclusion, to proving that it is altogether absurd, is a demonstration in disaffirmance of anything that is affirmed. Hume.

To DISALLOW, v. w. [dit and allow.] To refuse permission; not to grant; not to make or suppose lawful.

God doth in converts, being married, allow continuance with infidels, and yet disallow that the faithful, who are free, should enter into bands of wedlock with them. Hooker.

DISALLOWABLE, adj. [from disallow.] Not allowable; not to be suffered.

Prohibition.

God accepts of a thing suitable for him to receive, and for us to give, where he does not declare his refusal and disallowance of it. Swift.

DISANCHOR, v. a. [dit and anchor.] To drive a ship from its anchor.

To DISANIATE, v. a. [dit and animate.] Privation of life.

They cannot in reason retain that apprehension after death, as being affections which depend on life, and depart upon discontinuance. Brown's Talisman Errors.

To DISANNUL. v. a. [dit and annul.] This word is formed, contrary to analogy, by those who, not knowing the meaning of the word annul, intended to form a negative feenie from the needlesse use of the negative particle. It ought therefore to be rejected, as ungrammatical and barbarous. To annul; to deprive of authority; to vacate; to make null; to make void; to nullify.

The Jews ordinances for us to refuse, were to check our Lord himself, which hath disannulled them. Hooker.

What gave him power of disannulling of laws, and disposing of men's fortunes and estates, like a king, to points of absolute power, being in themselves hard and odious. Bacon.

To be in both worlds full.

Is more than God was, who was hungry here. Would thou his laws of fasting disannul? Herbert.

With what my judgments disannul! Deface my equal rule, to clear thyself of blame! Spenser.

DISANNULEMENT, n. f. [from disannulled.] The act of making void.

To DISAPPEAR, v. n. [disspirit, Fr.] To be lost to view; to vanish out of sight; to fly; to go away.

She disappare'd, and left me dark! I wak'd

To find her, or ever to deplor. Milton.

The night and winter disappear, The purple morning rising with the sun, Salutes the spring. Dryden.

The pictures drawn in our minds are laid in fading colours, and, if not sometimes refreshed, vanish, and disappear. Locke.

Criticks I saw that others names deface, And fix their own with labour in their place; Their own, I think, beyond their place resign'd, Or disappare'd, and left the first behind. Pope.

To DISAPPOINT, v. a. [dit and appoint.] To defeat of expectation; to balk; to hinder from something expected.

The fuperior Being can defeat all his designs, and disappare all his hopes. Tillem.

With it.
Whilst the champion, with redoubled might,
Struck the heart with force as the spring blow.
Yet the wound was felt by the blow itself.
Addison.

There is nothing like surprising the enemy;
When they are not prepared for the attack.
Addison.

The past is a thing that must be forgotten.
And the future is a thing that must be prepared for.
Addison.

2. It has of before the thing lost by disappointment.
The past is a thing that must be forgotten.
Addison.

Dissapointment. n. f. [from disapp.]. Defeat of hopes; miscarriage of expectations.
It is impossible for us to know what are calamities, and what are blessings.
How many accidents have passed for misfortunes, which have turned to the welfare and prosperity of the person in whose lot, they have fallen!
How many disappointments have in their consequences, saved a man from ruin!
Speech.

If we hope for things, of which we have not thoroughly considered the value, out disappointment will be far greater than our pleasure in the fruition of them.
Addison's Speech.

Disapprobation. n. f. [dis and approbation]. Censure; condemnation; expression of disfavour.
He was obliged to publish his letters, to show his disapprobation of the publishing of others. Pope.

Disapprove. v. a. [disapprover. Fr.].
1. To disfavour; to censure.
I cannot disapprove of this book, but I must confess that it is not a good one.
Pope.

2. To reject or disapprove; not to confirm by authority.
A project for a treaty of peace with the States, was transmitted to the President.
The Instructions to the American Commissioners, 1783.

D'YARD. m. f. [by, bury, Saxon, a tool, Skinner, disarray, French, Juvisy].
A prattler; a boasting talker. This word is inferred both by Skinner and Juvisy; but I do not remember it.

To Disarray. v. a. [disarranger, French].
1. To spoil or divest of arms; to deprive of arms.
An order was made by both houses, for disarming all the papers in England.
Clarckson.

I am still the same;
By different sorts, I am one of the persons.
And by disarming you know where to find me.
I am still the same, as I was before you. Dryden.

2. It has, g. b. before the arms taken away.
They would be immediately disarmed of their great magazine of artillery.
Locke.

To Disarray. v. a. [dis and array]. To undress one; to divest of clothes.
So, as the bad, the witch they disarrayed.
Fairly Quaker.

Now night is come, now loo her disarray.
And in her bed she lay,
Spenser's Epithalamion.

Disarray. n. f. [from the verb.]

1. Disorder; confusion; lots of the regular order of battle.
He returned towards the river, to prevent such danger as the disarray, occasioned by the narrowness of the bridge, might ease upon them.
Hayward.

Disarray and shameful rout ensue,
And force is added to the flaming crew.
Dryden's Table.

2. Undress.
DIS

From a foundation to form, wise, which the doctrine of futility rendered amiss, they brought themselves to doubt of religion; or, out of a vain affection of feeling farther than other men, preferred to disbelieve it.

Dis. [adj. from disbelief.] One who refuses belief; one who denies any position to be true.

As humble soul is frightened into sentiments, because a man of great name pronounces hereby upon the contrary sentiments, and calls the disbeliever a dreamer. Warte.

To DISBELIEVE. v. a. [dis and branch.] To drive from a feast.

Sir, I hope my words disbelieve it not.
When blows have made me fly, I fled from words.

To DISBELIEVER. n. a. [dis and branch.] To feerate, or break off, as a branch from a tree.

She that bestow will diller and disbelieve.

From her maternal sway, persevere must wither,
And come to deadly use. — Shakspeare, King Lear.

Such as are newly planted, need not be disbelieved,
For they begin to stir, that so the wound may be healed without the scar.

Evelyn's Calendar.

To DISBURS. v. a. [With gardeners.]
To take away the branches or spires newly put forth, that are ill placed.

To DISBURSE. v. a. [deboucher, French.]
To spend or lay out money.

Money is not disburse at once, but drawn into a long back, by lending over twenty thousand, and next half year ten thousand pounds. Spenser.

Nor would we work him brail for his men,
Still hold'd a ten thousand dollars. Shakspeare.

As Alexander received great sums, be not so liberal and liberal in disburse of them.

Arabian Nights.

Disbursement. n. f. [debourse, Fr.]
1. Act of disbursing or laying out.

The queen's treasure, to so great occasions of disbursements, is not always to easy, nor to plentiful, as it can spare to great a sum together.

Spenser's Ireland.

2. Sum spent.

Disburse. n. f. [from disburse.] One that disburse.

Disburse. n. f. [from disburse.] One that disburse.

Disburse. n. f. [from disburse.] One that disburse.

Disburse. n. f. [from disburse.] One that disburse.

Disburse. n. f. [from disburse.] One that disburse.

Disburse. n. f. [from disburse.] One that disburse.

Disburse. n. f. [from disburse.] One that disburse.

The act of pulling off the shoes.

Vol. I.
When Caesar would have discharged the senator, in anguish of his soul, he said, "Oh, my God; if this man tell him, he hoped he would not disemove the senator till his wife had dreamed a better dream." BACON.

14. To emit.

The matter being supplicated, I opened an inflamed tree-hole in the angle of the left eye, and discharged a well-considered matter. W.J.'s Surgeon.

To DISCHARGE, n. s. To disinfect; to break up.

The cloud, if it were oily or fatty, would not discharge. BACON's Natural History.

DISCHARGE. n. s. [from the verb.]

1. Vent; explosion; emission.

As the heat of all springs is owing to subterranean fire, so wherever there are any extraordinary discharges of this fire, there also are the neighbouring springs hotter than ordinary. Woodward.

2. Matter vented.

The hemorrhage being stopped, the next occurrence is a thin seborrhoeic discharge. Sharpe's Surgeon.

3. Disproportion; evanescence.

Mark the discharge of the little cloud upon frogs or geese, or blades of swords, and you shall see it ever break up in bits in the hands, and last to the middle. BACON's Natural History.

4. Dismission from an office; as, the governor solicited his discharge.

5. Release from an obligation or penalty.

He warns us, 'lay not too sure of our discharge from penalty, because from death released.' Some day.

6. Abolition from a crime.

The text expresses the found chafe of the confidence, nor making, but by its not condemning us; which word imports properly an acquittance or discharge of a man upon some preceding accatement, and a full trial and cognizance of the cause. Swift.

7. Random; price of random.

O, all my hopes defeated.

To free him hence! But death, who lets all free, Hath paid his random now and full discharge. MILTON.

8. Performance; execution.

The obligations of hospitality and protection are sacred; nothing can absolve us from the discharge of these duties. L'Estrange.

9. An acquittance from a debt.

To attain, to be emancipated.

There is no discharge in that war, neither shall wickedness deliver those that are given to it. JEREMIAH, viii. 23.

DISCHARGE. n. s. [from discharge.]

1. He that discharges in any manner.

2. He that fires a gun.

To abate the bombination of gunpowder, a way is promised by Porta, by borax and butter, which he says will make it to go off, as scarce to be heard by the discharge. Brown.

DISTINCT. adj. [difficullus, Latin.] Ungirded; loosely girded.

To DISCHARGE. v. a. To discharge, Latin. To divide; to cut in pieces.

We found several connotations so soft, that we could easily design them between our fingers. Nay.

DISCIPLINE, n. s. [diplomata, Latin.] A scholar; one that proffers to receive instructions from another.

He rebuked disful who would call for fire from heaven upon whole cities, for the neglect of a few.

The commemorating the death of Christ, is the professing ourselves the disciples of the crucified Saviour; and that engageth us to take up his cross and follow him the greater part of our time. HAMMOND.

A young disciple should behave himself so well, as to gain the satisfaction and the ear of his instructor. WARD.

To DISCIPLINE. v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To train; to bring up.

He works for

Into the service of the time, and was Disdined of the breach. SHAKESPEARE.

2. To punish; to discipline. This word is not in use.

Sinner, patience! with an iron whip

Wast we him to discipline every day. SPENDR.

DISCIPLINE, n. s. [from dis- and -ciplina.]
The state or function of a disciple, or follower of a master.

That to which justification is promised, is the giving up of the whole soul, literally into Christ, undertaking to discipline upon Christ's terms. HAMMOND's Pratt's Catech.

DISCIPLINABLE. adj. [discripiabilis, Latin.] Capable of instruction; capable of improvement by discipline and learning.

What engenders in disciplinarian uncertainties, when the love of God and our neighbour, evangelical unquestionables, are neglected? GLOVER. SCOTT.

DISCIPLINARIAN, n. s. [disciplicina, Lat.] One who rules or teaches with great strictness; one who allows no deviation from stated rules.

2. A follower of the presbyterian sect, fond from their perpetual clamour about discipline.

They draw thence that different into discipline with the state, as partisans, or disciplinarians. Sander's Pox. 4 Ed.

DISCIPLINARIAN, adj. [disciplinaria, Lat.] Pertaining to discipline.

DISCIPLINARY. adj. [disciplicina, Lat.]

1. Pertaining to discipline.

2. Relating to government.

Those canons in behalf of marriage were only disciplinarian, grounded on prudential motives. BISHOP FARN.

3. Relating to a regular course of education.

They are the studies, wherein our noble and gentle youth ought to know their time in a disciplinary way. MILTON.

DISCIPLINE, n. s. [diplomata, Latin.]

1. Education; instruction; the art of cultivating the mind; the art of forming the manners.

He had charge my discipline to frame,

And tutors nourish to overface. SPENDR.

The cold of the northern parts is that which, without aid of discipline, doth make the bodies hardest, and the courage warmest. BACON.

They who want that sense of discipline, hearing, are also by consequence deprived of speech. HARKER.

It is by the abundance of the eye and the ear especially, which are called the senses of discipline, that our minds are furnished with various parts of knowledge. WATTS.

2. Rule of government; order; method of government.

They hold, that from the very spottless age till this present age, wherein yourselves imagine you have found out a right pattern of sound discipline, there never was any time the like followed. HARKER.

As we are to believe for ever the articles of evangelical doctrine, To the precepts of discipline we are, in like sort, bound for ever to observe. HARKER.

While Change.

A

The most perfect, who have their passions in the best discipline, are yet obliged to be constantly on the alert in preserving them.

Sam.

To

and Stiffness.

the

To

science.

To

Bacon.

Sir.

That

if
to

Hooker.

cenfailure

defective

to

The

found course.

Dear

The

disabilities.

2.

Discovery

and production

The producing of cold is a thing very worthly the inquisition, both for the use and discipline of cruelty.

3.

ACT of revealing any thing secret.

For so happy a marriage between the king and her daughter, she was, upon a sudden mutability and defection of the king's mind, heavily favored.

Twixt.

disclaim

To regulate

To

to chastifed

and by wise

disclaim

To

and incommode.

To

and claim.

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To Coriolanus.

are

To

To

the

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To

To
DISCOMMODITY, n.f. [from dispossession.] Inconvenience; disadvantage; hurt; mischief.

We speak now of usher, how the discoumodities of it may be better or worse, and the commodities falling a-toward one or the other, in the balance of commodities and discoumodities, the qualities of usher are to be reconsidered.

By mutual want to differ. Shakespeare.

To DISCOMPOSE. v. p. [to decompose.] (See Cipher.)

To DISCOMPOSEMENT, n.f. [from decomposition.] The state of being decomposed.

DISCONTEN'T, n.f. [dis and content.] Want of content; uneasiness at the present state.

May love its bloom full of discontent.

Your hearts of sorrow, and your eyes of tears.

Shakespeare.

Not that their pleasures caus'd her discontent,

She sigh'd not, not that they fray'd, but that the want.

Pope.

DISCONTEN'T. adj. [dis and content.] Uneasy at the present state; diffatisfied.

They were of their own nature circumstanced and disposed, and the like, and they suffered fitly for their purpose.

Hayward.

To DISCONTENT, v. a. [from the noun.]

To disaffort; to make uneasy at the present state.

I knew a discontented gentleman,

Whose humble means match not his haughty spirit.

Shakespeare.

The discontent now are only they.

Whole crimes before did your just call betray.

Dryden.

DISCONTEN'TED, participial adj. [from discontent.] Uneasy; cheerless; malevolent.

Let us know

What will tie up your discontented bow'd.

Shakespeare.

There are, beyond comparison, the two greatest evil in this world; a discontented body, and a discontented mind.

Talbot.

The goddess, with a discontented air,

Seems to reject him, though she grants his pray'r.

Pope.

DISCONTEN'TEDNESS, n.f. [from discontent.] Uneasiness; want of peace; dissatisfaction.

A beautiful holt of Alexander the Great calls up his face to heaven with a noble air of grief, or discontentedness, in his looks.

Addison's Travels.

DISCONTEN'TMENT, n.f. [from discontent.] The state of being discontented; uneasiness.

There are the vices that fill them with general discontentments, as though the bosom of that famous church, wherein they live, were more noisome than any dungeon.

Berkeley.

The politic and artificial nourishing and excitation of hopes, and carrying men from hopes to hopes, is one of the best antidotes against the passion of discontentments.

Bacon.

DISCONTINUANCE, n.f. [from discontinuance.] Want of one part with another; disruption.

The filthilode of water, if there be enough to follow, will draw themselves into a small thread, because they will not discontinue; but if there be no remedy, then they cast themselves into round drops, which is the figure that faveth the body much from discontinuance.

Bacon's Natural History.

2. Cessation; intermission.

Let us consider whether our approaches to him are sweet and refreshing, and if we are uneasy under any long discontentment of our conversation with him.

Dryden.

3. In the common law. An interruption or breaking off; as discontinuance of possession, or discontinuance of proc. The effect of discontinuance of possession is, that a man may not enter upon his own land or tenement alienated, whatsoever his right be unto it, or by his own authority; but must seek to recover possession by law. The effect of discontinuance of plea is, that the judgment may not be taken up again, but by a new writ to begin the suit afresh.

Conc. dis.

DISCONTINUATION, n.f. [from discontinuance.] Disruption of continuity; breach of union of parts; discontinuance; separation.

Upon any discontinuance of parts, made either by bubbles, or by shaking the glass, the whole mercury falls.

Newton.

7. DISCONTINUE. v. n. [discontinue, French.]

1. To lose the cohesion of parts; to suffer separation or disruption of substance.

All bodies, ductile and tenebrous, that will be drawn into wires; and wool and tow, that will be drawn into yarn, or thread; have in them the appetite of not discontinuance; which, which maketh them follow the force that pulleth them out, and yet to as to discontinuance or dontake their own body.

Bacon.

2. To lose an established or precriptive custom or right.

Thyself shall discontinue from thine heritage that I gave thee, and I will cause thee to serve thine enemies.

Jeth.

7. DISCONTINUE. v. a.

1. To leave off; to cease any practice or habit.

Twenty puny lyes I'll tell,

That men shall swear I've discontinued school
Above a twelvemonth.

Shakespeare.

Example, the evidences of diet; story, exercise, apparel, and the like; and try, in any thou shalt judge hurtful, to discontinue it by little and little; but so, as thou mayst in convenience by the change come to the habit.

Bacon.

2. To break off; to interrupt.

There is that property, in all letters, of appertains to be contained in syllables and words, through the voluntary motions of the organs from one stop or figure to another, that they modify and discontinue the voice, without appearing to discontinue it.

holder's Elements of Speech.

DISCONTINUITY, n.f. [dis and continuity.] Disunity of parts; want of cohesion.

That discontinuity of parts is the principal cause of the diversity of bodies, will appear by considering that opaque substances become transparent by filling their pores with any substance of equal, or almost equal, density with their parts.

Newton.

DISCONVENIENCE, n.f. [dis and convenience.] Inconvenience; discontinuance; opposition of nature.

Fear ariseth many times out of natural antipathies of nature; but, in those discontinuances of nature, deliberation hath no place at all.

Bramblett's Essay to Hobbes.

DISCORD. n.f. [discordia, Latin.] 1. Disagreement; opposition; mutual angr; reciprocal oppugnacy.

See what a scuffle is laid upon your hate,

That he's not finds means to kill your joy with love!

And I, for winking at your joys too,

Have lost a brace of kinshaps.

Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet.

He is a false wit that speaks his lies and that foweth discord among brethren.

Proverbs.

2. Difference or contrariness of qualities, particularly of sounds.

Take but degree away, untune that string,

And back what was before; then patch this批

In more oppugnancy.

Shaksp. Troil. and Cress.

Disorder, like that of music's various parts,

Disorder that makes the harmony of hearts;
DIS

Diffused, that only this diffuse shall bring,
Whos blood shall love the deets and serve the kings.
Dryden.

All nature is but unknown to thee;
All choice and direction which thou canst not see;
All disorder, harmony thou dost not know;
None has a universal good.
Pope.

[S] [in music.] Sounds not of themselves pleasing, but necessary to be mixed with others.

It is found alone that both immediately and inco-

Dore and discord are such, that most is manifest in

Then, of words, newly made, and designed for

Milton.

3. To ken: to cry.
When we had discovered Cyprus, we left it on the

6. To find or to obtain:
In this old book, by any alteration in me, discover my knowledge of his mistake.
Pope's Letters.

7. To detect:
To find though concealed
Up his stacks.

8. To find things or places not known before.
Some to discover islands far away.
Shakespeare.

No. 1. [Discourse, Latin.] To discourse; not to talk with.

Sounds do disturb and alter things
one another;
sometimes the one disturbeth the other,
and making it not heard.
Shakespeare.

To DISCORS. [discourses, Latin.] To discourse; not to talk with.

To DISCORS. [discourses, Latin.] To discourse; not to talk with.

To DISCORS. [discourses, Latin.] To discourse; not to talk with.

1. Inconfident: at variance with itself.

Myths was joy'd the welcome news to hear,
But, clogg'd with guilt, my joy was wond'rer'd.
So variable, to discourse is the mind.
That in our will a different will we find.
Dryden.

2. Opposite; contrarious.
The discovery of some wandering

They were described by Satan, and that not in an invisible fiction,
but in an open and discoverable discovery, that is, in the form of a serpent.
Shakespeare.

3. Incoherent: not conformable.

His choice is to be preferred; if by a conform-

To DISCOVER. [discover, French; dit and couver.] 1. To shew: to disclose; to bring to light; to make visible.

All came equally.
The cover of the cove was made with such
holes, that as they might, to avoid the weather,
pull it by the chief, lest they might part each end,
down and come as discover'd and open, hang
on the back.
Shakespeare.

To DISCOVER. [discover, French; dit and couver.] 1. To shew: to disclose; to bring to light; to make visible.

All came equally.
The cover of the cove was made with such
holes, that as they might, to avoid the weather,
pull it by the chief, lest they might part each end,
down and come as discover'd and open, hang
on the back.
Shakespeare.

To DISCOVER. [discover, French; dit and couver.] 1. To shew: to disclose; to bring to light; to make visible.

All came equally.
The cover of the cove was made with such
holes, that as they might, to avoid the weather,
pull it by the chief, lest they might part each end,
down and come as discover'd and open, hang
on the back.
Shakespeare.

To DISCOVER. [discover, French; dit and couver.] 1. To shew: to disclose; to bring to light; to make visible.

All came equally.
The cover of the cove was made with such
holes, that as they might, to avoid the weather,
pull it by the chief, lest they might part each end,
down and come as discover'd and open, hang
on the back.
Shakespeare.

To DISCOVER. [discover, French; dit and couver.] 1. To shew: to disclose; to bring to light; to make visible.

All came equally.
The cover of the cove was made with such
holes, that as they might, to avoid the weather,
pull it by the chief, lest they might part each end,
down and come as discover'd and open, hang
on the back.
Shakespeare.

To DISCOVER. [discover, French; dit and couver.] 1. To shew: to disclose; to bring to light; to make visible.

All came equally.
The cover of the cove was made with such
holes, that as they might, to avoid the weather,
pull it by the chief, lest they might part each end,
down and come as discover'd and open, hang
on the back.
Shakespeare.

To DISCOVER. [discover, French; dit and couver.] 1. To shew: to disclose; to bring to light; to make visible.

All came equally.
The cover of the cove was made with such
holes, that as they might, to avoid the weather,
pull it by the chief, lest they might part each end,
down and come as discover'd and open, hang
on the back.
Shakespeare.

To DISCOVER. [discover, French; dit and couver.] 1. To shew: to disclose; to bring to light; to make visible.

All came equally.
The cover of the cove was made with such
holes, that as they might, to avoid the weather,
pull it by the chief, lest they might part each end,
down and come as discover'd and open, hang
on the back.
Shakespeare.

To DISCOVER. [discover, French; dit and couver.] 1. To shew: to disclose; to bring to light; to make visible.

All came equally.
The cover of the cove was made with such
holes, that as they might, to avoid the weather,
pull it by the chief, lest they might part each end,
down and come as discover'd and open, hang
on the back.
Shakespeare.

To DISCOVER. [discover, French; dit and couver.] 1. To shew: to disclose; to bring to light; to make visible.

All came equally.
The cover of the cove was made with such
holes, that as they might, to avoid the weather,
pull it by the chief, lest they might part each end,
down and come as discover'd and open, hang
on the back.
Shakespeare.
The spindle with great zeal disfigurea too unreasonably a person. Riggs.

2. To deter; to fright from any attempt: with from before the thing.

Wherefore disfigure we the heart of the children of Head, from going over into the land. Numbers.

3. It is irregularly used by Temple with to before the following word.

You may keep your terror and your health, unless ye destroy them yourself, or discourage them to play with you, by using them. Temple.

DISCOURAGER. n. f. [from discourage.]

One that impresses reverence and terror.

Most men in years, as they are generally discouraged by care, or the old age, which, being past bearing themselves, will suffer no young plants to flourish beneath them. Pope.

DISCOURAGEMENTS, n. f. [from discourage.]

1. The act of deterring, or depressing hope.

2. Determination; that which detests from anything; with from.

Amongst other impediments of any inventions, it is none of the meanest discouragements, that they are so generally derived from common opinion. Hervey.

The books read at schools and colleges are full of incriminations to virtue, and discouragements from vice. Swift.

3. Cause of depression, or fear: with to, less properly.

To things we would have them learn, the great and only discouragement is, that they are called to them. Locke.

DISCOURSE. n. f. [discourse, French; discursus, Latin.]

1. The act of the underlining, by which it passes from premises to consequences.

By reason of that original weakness in the instruments, without which the underlining part is not able in this world by discourse to work, the very conceit of beneficence is a bridge to thy base. Johnson.

Sure he that made us with such large discourse, looking before and after, gave us not that capability and godlike reason
To rub in us unwise. Shakespeare.

The mind of the mind which connects propositions, and deduceth conclusions from them, the chironics call discourse, and we shall name it common reason, if we name it reason. Glanvill.

2. Conversation; mutual interchange of language; talk.

He waxeth fierer than himself, more by an hour's discourse, than by a day's meditation. Bacon.

In thy discourse, if thou desire to please, all such is courteous, useful, new, or witty; Unprofit ablest comes by labour, wit by care. Cowley.

Certainly grows in court, news in the city. Herbert.

The vanquish'd party with the victors join'd. Nor wanted sweet discourse, the banquet of the mind. Dryden.

3. Excursion of language; speech.

Topical and superficial arguments, of which there is there to be found on both sides, filling the head with variety of thoughts, and the mouth with copious discourse, force only to arrive the understanding and entertain company. Locke.

4. A treatise; a dissertation either written or uttered.

The discourse here is about ideas, which, he says, are real things, and in God. Locke.

Plutarch, in his discourse upon garrulity, commends the fidelity of the companions of Ulysses. Pope's Odyssey.

To DISCOURSE, v. n. [from the noun.]

1. To converse; to talk; to relate.

When our thought has hold, being prizes discourse, I pray, when on this turns't top. Shaksp.

Of various things discoursing as he saith. Dryden.

2. To treat upon in a solemn or set manner.

The general maxims we are discoursing of are not dependent on children, idiots, and a great part of mankind. Locke.

3. To reason; to pass from premises to consequences.

And yet the power's of her discoursing thought, From the collection is a diverse thing. Brices. Brices do want that quick discoursing power. Davids.

To DISCOURSE. v. a. [from discourse.]

1. A speaker; an haranguer.

The tract of every thing Would be by a good discourse left some life. Which action's self was tongue to. Shakespeare.

2. A writer on any subject; a dissortator.

Philologers and critical discussors, who look beyond the obvious exterior of things, will not be angry at our narrow explorations. Brown.

But it seems to me, that such discussors do reason upon short views, and a very moderate compass of thought. Locke.

To DISCOURSE. v. a. [from discourse.]

1. Pafing by intermediate steps from premises to consequences.

The sole Reason receives, and reason is her being. Discoursive, or intuitive; discourse is often yesterdays. Milton.

2. Containing dialogue; interlocutory.

The whole is every where interlaced with dialogue, or discourse fince. Dryden on Dramatic Poetry.

To DISCOURSE. n. f. [discours, French; discursus, Latin.]

1. Uncivil; unpremeditated; defective in good manners.

He referred to unhorseth the first discussors knight he should meet. Mettam's De Riris.

2. Incivility; rudeness; act of disrespect.

As if charitableness had been tarnished, and good entertainment had been turned to discoursity, he would ever get him alone. Sidney.

Be calm in arguing; for fierce words makes Error a faithful daughter. Herbert.

He made not visits, maunduring, as if he had done him a discussity. Whiston.

To DISCOURSE. v. a. [from discourse.]

1. Uncivilly, rudely.

Discoursing. v. a. [from discourse.]

2. Used by botanists to denote the middle, plain, and flat part of some flowers, such as the fis solis, etc. Quincy.

DISCREDIT. n. f. [decréditer, French.]

Ignominy; reproach; lower degree of infamy; disgrace, impertinence of a fault.

Had I been the finder-out of this fuccest, it would not have relished among my other discredits. Shaksp. Good idlers will ev'ry life live longer, and not fall to work, but be lazy, and then certify over their country to the discredit of a plantation. Bacon.

That they may quit their metals without any discredit to their intellectual, they fly to several state, tribe, pitiful objections and cavills. Swett.

'Tis the duty of every Christian to be concerned for the reputation of discrdity, his life may bring on his perfection. Regius.

Also, the small discredity of a bite. Scurvy bears the lawyers, but undes the ferbere. Pope.

The Dr. of discredity, or a dr. of discourse. To DISCREDIT. v. a. [discréditer, Fr.]

1. To deprive of credibility; to make not trusted.
DIS

5. Discrete Proportion is when the ratio between two pairs of numbers or quantities is the same; but there is not the same proportion between all the four: thus, 6:8::3:4.

Harris.

3. DISCRIMINATION. n.f. [from differens, Lat.]
1. Prudence; knowledge to govern or direct one's self; skill; wife management.

Nothing then was further thought upon for the manner of governing; but all permitted unto their wisdom and discretion which were to rule. Hooker.

A knife may be taken away from a child, without depriving them of the benefits thereof which have been given: there yet remains the use of it. Hooker.

It is not good that children should know any wickeds; old folks have discretion, and know the world. Shakespeare.

All this was ordered by the good God.

Of the right reverend cardinal of York.

Shakespeare's Henry VIII.

The pleasure of commanding our passions is to be preferred before any temporal pleasure; because it is the pleasure of wisdom and discretion. Tillotson.

But care in poetry must still be had. Pope.

There is no talent so useful towards reclining in the world, or which puts men more out of the reach of fortune, than discretion, a species of lower prudence. Swift.

2. Liberty of acting at pleasure; uncontrolled and unconditional power; as, he observes at discretion; that is, without dilputation.

DISCRETIONARY, adj. [from discretion.] Left at large; unlimited; unrefrained.

A dram may have a discretion for entering into orders before he is twenty-three years of age; and is in discretion in the bishop to admit him to that order at which time he thinks fit. Agyft's Parergon.

The major being a person of consummate experience, was invested with a discretionary power. Taylor.

DISCRETIVE, adj. [diferentus, Latin.]
1. [In logic.] Discrete or different propositions are such wherein various, and seemingly opposite, judgments are made, whole variety or distinction is noted by the particles but, though, yet, &c. as, travellers may change their climate, but not their nature; so, a man may change his faults, though his soul was great. Watts.

2. [In grammar.] Discrete or different propositions are such as imply opposition; as, not a man, but a thief.

DISCRIMINABLE, adj. [from discriminatus.] Distinguishable by outward marks or tokens.

To DISCRIMINATE. v. a. [discrimino, Latin.]
1. To mark with notes of difference; to distinguish by certain tokens from one another.

Oysters, and cockles, and muscles, which move not, have no discriminat tex. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

There are three sorts of it differing in finers from each other, and discriminirnated by the natures by these peculiar names. Boyle.

The right hand is discriminat from the left by a natural necessity, and never to be confounded distinction. Swift.

Although the features of his countenance be without reason of obedience, yet they may serve to discriminate him from any other person, whom he is not to know. Warton.

There may be ways of discriminating the voice: as by accents and gravity, the several degrees of rising and falling from one tone or note to another, Wilder.

2. To select or separate from others.

You owe little life for what you are not, than for what you are, to that discriminating, to which alone you owe your exemption from misrule.

Boyle.

DISCRIMINATENESS, n.f. [from discriminatus.] Discriminativeness; marked difference.

DISCRIMINATION, n.f. [from discriminatus, Latin.]
1. The state of being distinguished from other persons or things.

There is a reverence to be showed them on the account of their discrimination from other places, and the fewness of their inhabitants. Spenser.

2. The act of distinguishing one from another; distinction; difference put.

Aaiser should expose nothing but what is corrigible; and make a due discrimination between those that are, and those who are not, the proper objects of it. Addis.'s Spectator.

By that prudent discrimination made between the offenders of different degrees, he obliges those whom he has distinguished as objects of mercy. Addis.'s Franklin's.

3. The marks of distinction.

Take heed of abetting any factions, or applying any publick discriminations in matters of religion. King Charles.

Letters arise from the first original discriminations of voice, by way of articulation, whereby the ear is able to judge and observe the differences of vocal sounds, Hold. Dury.

DISCRIMINATIVE, adj. [from discriminatus.]
1. That which makes the mark of distinction; characteristic.

The only standing test, and discriminative characteristic of any man or animal, must be found for the constituent matter of it. Wood.

2. That which observes distinction.

Discriminative Providence knew before the nature and course of all things. Moore.

DISCRIMINOUS, adj. [from discrimen, Latin.]
Dangerous; hazardous. Not usual.

Any kind of splitting of blood imports a very discriminous state, unless it happens upon the giving of a vein opened by a punction. Hawkes.

Hawkes.

DISCUBITORY, adj. [discubitorius, Lat.]
Fitted to the possession of leaining.

After bathing they retired to bed, and refreshed themselves with a repast of fruits, by degrees, changed their cubicular beds into discubitory, Brown's Vulgar Errors.

DISCUMBENCY, n.f. [discumbere, Lat.]
The act of leaning at meat, after the ancient manner.

The Greeks and Romans us'd the custom of discumbency at meals, which was upon their left side; for so their right hand was free and ready for all service. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

To DISCUMBER. v. a. [edit and cumber.]
To digendage from any troublesome weight; to discumber from impediment.

His limbs discumber'd of the clinging veil, He binds the sacred cincture round his breast. South.

Opinions often turn; still dubium remains; And who judges thought, increases pain. Prior.

2. [In surgery.] Discumber or resolution is nothing else but breathing out the humours by insensible transpiration. If fum. South.

DISCUSIVE, adj. [from discursus.] Having the power to discurs or discourse any noxious matter.

DISCUSSION. n.f. [from discursus.]
1. Discusition; examination; ventilation of a question.

Truth is best known without some labour and intention of the mind, and the thoughts dwelling a considerable time upon the survey and discourse of each particular. South.

Various discourses near our heated brain; Opinions often turn; still dubium remains; And who judges thought, increases pain. Prior.

2. [In surgery.] Discusious or resolution is nothing else but breathing out the humours by insensible transpiration. If fum.

DISCUSIVE, adj. [from discursus.] Having the power to discursive or discourse any noxious matter.

DISCUSSION. n.f. [from discursus.]
1. Discusition; examination; ventilation of a question.

Truth is best known without some labour and intention of the mind, and the thoughts dwelling a considerable time upon the survey and discourse of each particular. South.

Various discourses near our heated brain; Opinions often turn; still dubium remains; And who judges thought, increases pain. Prior.

2. [In surgery.] Discusious or resolution is nothing else but breathing out the humours by insensible transpiration. If fum.

DISCUSIVE, adj. [from discursus.] Having the power to discursive or discourse any noxious matter.

DISCIVITIENT. n.f. [discivitient, Latin.]
A medicine that has power to repel or discharge the latter tumours in the blood. It sometimes means the same as discriminative.

Quining.

The swellings arising from those require to be treated, in their beginning, with moderate repellents and discriminations.

Witman.

To DISCIVITIENT. v. a. [discivitie, French.]
1. To form, to confederate as unworthy of one's character.

Thers
There is nothing so great, which I will fear to do for you; nor nothing so small, which I will disdain to do for you.

He was dismayed in his feet.

A lazard-bane it found, wherein were laid Numbers of different kinds, all maladies

Of ghastly spirit, or racking torture.

To put to pain, to pain; to make unhappy.

Though great light be insufferable to our eyes, yet the highest degree of darknes does not at all displease them.

This is a reproach to some former state; not that state of indigence and distress.

To disengage. [dis and engage.]

To disencumber. w. a. [dis and encumber.]

1. To discharge from encumbrances; to free from clogs and impediments; to disburthen; to deliver the body from the actual, and the soul from the idea of a burden.

2. To free from obstruation of any kind.

3. To separate from any thing with which it is interwoven.

4. To difengage; to clear from impediments or difficulties.

To disengage. w. a. [dis and engage.]

1. To separate from any thing with which it is in union.

2. To disengage; to clear from impediments or difficulties.

When our mind's eyes are disengaged and free, they clearer, farther, and distinctly see. Denham.

5. To release from an obligation.

To disengage. w. a. To set one's self free from; to withdraw one's affections from.

Provided gives us notice, by sensible declensiones, that we may disengage them to these words in degrees.

Callier on Thoughts.

To disengage. partici. adj. [from disengage.]

1. Disjointed; disengaged.

2. Vacate; at leisure; not fixed down to any particular object of attention.

3. Released from obligation.

To disengage. n. s. [from disengage.]

The quality of being disengaged; vacuity.
DISCOURAGEMENT. n.s. [from discourage.] 1. Release from any engagement, or obligation.
2. Freedom of attention; freedom from any prevailing business; disjunction.

DISPARAGEMENT. n.s. [from disfigure.] To Disfigure. v. a. [disfigured.]
1. Disfigurement; an unpropitious regard; unattractive aspect; unattractive circumstance.
2. A rate of ungraciousness or unacceptableness; a rate in which one is not favoured.

DISFAVOUR. n.s. [dis and favour.] To Disfavour. v. a. [disfavored.]
1. Discomfiture; unpropitious regard; unfavourable aspect; unfavourable circumstance.
2. A rate of ungraciousness or unacceptableness; a rate in which one is not favoured.

DISFAVOUR. n.s. [dis.] To Disfavour. v. a. [disfavored.]
1. Want of beauty.
2. To Disfavour. v. a. [from the noun.]
To Discomfiture; to withhold or withdraw kindness.

DISFAVOUR. n.s. [from disfavour.]
Discomfiture; not a favourer.

DISFAVOUR. n.s. [dis and figure.] To Disfigure. v. a. [disfigured.]
1. The act of disfiguring.
2. The figure being disfigured.

DISFAVOUR. n.s. [from disfigure.]
Discomfiture; not a favourer.

DISFAVOUR. n.s. [disfigured.]
The act of disfiguring.

4. Deformity.
To Disfigure. v. a. [disfigured.]
To change any thing to a worse form; to deform; to mangle.

5. You are but a form in wax.
By him imprudently, and within his power to leave the figure, or disfigure. Skakespeare.
In this the antique and well-naved face.

6. Of plain old form is much disfigured.
Skakespeare.

7. Disfiguration. n.s. [from disfigure.]
Disfigurement; not a favourer.

8. The act of disfiguring.

10. Deformity.
To Disfigure. v. a. [disfigured.]
To change any thing to a worse form; to deform; to mangle.

11. You are but a form in wax.
By him imprudently, and within his power to leave the figure, or disfigure. Skakespeare.
In this the antique and well-naved face.

12. Of plain old form is much disfigured.
Skakespeare.

13. Disfiguration. n.s. [from disfigure.]
Disfigurement; not a favourer.

15. The act of disfiguring.

To Disfigure. v. a. [disfigured.]
To change any thing to a worse form; to deform; to mangle.

17. You are but a form in wax.
By him imprudently, and within his power to leave the figure, or disfigure. Skakespeare.
In this the antique and well-naved face.

18. Of plain old form is much disfigured.
Skakespeare.

19. Disfiguration. n.s. [from disfigure.]
Disfigurement; not a favourer.

20. The act of disfiguring.

21. The act of disfiguring.

22. Deformity.
To Disfigure. v. a. [disfigured.]
To change any thing to a worse form; to deform; to mangle.

23. You are but a form in wax.
By him imprudently, and within his power to leave the figure, or disfigure. Skakespeare.
In this the antique and well-naved face.

24. Of plain old form is much disfigured.
Skakespeare.
To retire behind their chariots, was as little disgraceful then, as it is now to slight from one's horse in a battery.

Disgracefully, adv. [from disgraceful.] In disgrace; with indignity; ignominiously.

The senate have call you forth Disgracefully, to be the common tale Of what they write 'tis Catiline's Catiline.

Disgracefulness, n.f. [from disgraceful.] Ignominy.

Disgracer, n.f. [from disgrace.] One that exposes to shame; one that causes ignominy.

I have given good advice to those infamous disgracers of the sex and calling. Swift.

Disgraceful adj. [dis and disgrace.] Unleavened.

I do suppose I have done some offence, That seems disgraceful in the city's eye. Shaksp. To Disgrace, v. a. [disgrace, Er. dis and guile.]

1. To conceal by an unusual dree.

How might we disguise him? — Also I know not: there is no woman's gown big enough for him. Shaksp. The Merry Wives of Windsor.

Disguise'd he is come; but those his children dear Their parent from didcurn through his disguises. Milton.

2. To hide by a counterfeit appearance; to cloak by a false show: as, he disguise'd his anger.

To disguise one another. Dryden's Absalom. More dutiful at her call,

Than at Creane call the herd disguise'd, Milton. Ulysses wakes, not knowing the place where he was; because Minerva made all things appear in a disguise'd view. Pope.

3. To deform by liquor: a low term.

I have just left the right worshipful, and his myrmidons, about a finchler of five gallons: the whole majesty was pretty well disguise'd before I gave them the slip. Spenser.

Disguise, v. n. [from the verb.]

1. A dree's contrivance to conceal the person that wears it.

They generally a in a disguise themselves, and therefore mistake all outward show and appearance, for hypocrify in others. Addison.

Since I in Arcite cannot Arcite find, The world may search in vain with all their eyes, But never penetrate through this disguise. Dryden's Fables.

2. A false appearance; counterfeit show.

Hence guilty joys, disguises, formities, False oaths, false tears, deceit, disguise. Pope.

3. To disguise by drink. You see we've burnt our cheeks; and mine own tongue

Splits what it speaks: the wild disguise hath almost Shaksp. Actung and Cleopatra.

Disjunctive, n.f. [from disjunctive.] Dree of concealment.

Under what this disjunctive I should find opportunity to reveal myself to the owner of my heart. Sidney.

The margin's thought belt to disfume his beard, and the old fellow, having courage to take a secret view of the forwards of his master's face: this did somewhat handsomely heal the disjunctive. Wotton.

Disguiser, n.f. [from disguise.]

1. One that puts on a disguise.

If he be grown more dissembling from his inconstancy on his own affairs, which is quite the re-

Disclose, v. o. [from disjunctive.] To serve in a dree; to send up to table.

For conspiracy, I know not how it falls, though it be disjunctive. For me to try. Shakespeare's Winter's Tale.

Disguise, n.f. [dis and guile.] The cloth with which the maid rubs their dites.

A disjunctive of Iogentia's she wore next his heart for a favour. Shaksp. Locke's Labour Lost. Send them up to their matters with a dree, dily pinneled at their tails. Swift's Directions in the Cock.

Diswasher, n.f. [dish and wash.] The name of a bird: mergus.

Dishabill'd adj. [dishabille, Fr.] Undressed; loosely or negligently dreed. Queens are not to be too negligently deck'd or dishabill'd. Dryden's Fables.

Dishabit, v. a. [This word I have found only in Shakespeare.] To throw out of place; to drive from their habitation.

But for our approach those sleeping flowers, By the composition of their ordinance. By this time from their fixed beds of time Had been dishabill'd, and wide havoc made. Shaksp.'s King Lear.

Disharmony, n.f. [dis and harmony.] Contrariety to harmony.

To Dishear'ten, v. a. [dis and heart.] To discourage; to depress; to dispirit.

To dishearten with fearless sentences, as though salvation could hardly be hoped for, is not so conso-ring to Christian charity. Hooker.

Be not dishearten'd, nor, cloud they think That want to be more cheerful and serene. Milton. Yet neither trust dishearten'd nor dismay'd, The time prov'd of rich man, of royal man. Milton. It is a consideration that might dishearten those who are engaged against the common adversaries, that they promise themselves as much from the folly of enemies, as from the power of the friends. Stillwell.

Men cannot say, that the greatest of an evil and danger's an encouragement to men to run upon it, and that the greatness of any good and happy art in reason to dishearten men from the pursuit of it. Titus.

A true christian fervour is more than the silence of our potent friends, or even the tears of our disheartened enemies. Spenser.

Dishe'reson, n.f. [dis and herison.] The act of debarring from inheritance.

To Dishe're'ship, v. a. [dis and inherit.] To cut off from hereditary successe; to debar from an inheritance.

He tried to restore to their rightful heritage such good old English words as have been long time out of use, almost dishe'reson. Shaksp.,

Nor how the Drydans and the woodland train, Dishe'reson, ran howling o'er the plain. Dryd. Fab. To Deshe're'ship, v. a. [dishe'reson, French.] To deprive the heir directly; to throw the hair of a woman negligent about her head. It is not often used but in the paffive participle.

A gentle lady, all alone

With garments rent and hair dishe'resoned,

Wringing her hands, and making pitiful moans. Shaksp.

After followed great numbers of women weeping with dishe'resoned hair, Keraching their faces, and tearing themselves, after the manner of the country, mourning their misfortunes. Shaksp.

A troop of Trojans mix'd with these appear, And mourning mares with dishe'reson'd hair.

The flames, involve'd in fince, from the faced altar broke, Caught her dishe'reson'd hair and rich attire.

Dryd. Absol.
This no more discomposed you at all,
Than to take in a town with gentle words,
Which else would put you to your fortune.

Shakespeare's Coriolanus.

A woman that honours her husband, shall be judged wife of all; but the that dishonour'd him in his pride, shall be counted ungodly of all.

Ecclus. xxvi. 26.

We are not so much to strain ourselves to make those virtues appear in us which really we have,
as not to avoid those imperfections which may disfigure us.

Dryden's Dunciad.

1. Void of probity; void of faith; faithless; wicked; fraudulent.

Justice then was neither blind to discern, nor tame to execute. It was not sufficed to be imported upon the grace of fancy, nor yet to be bribed by a giving appetite, for an ittle or judicious turn the balance to a false or disfigured sentence.

South.

He lays it down as a principle, that right and wrong honest and dishonest, are defined only by laws, and not by nature.

Locke.

2. Unﺹate; lewd.

To tomorrow will we be married.—I do define it with all my heart, and I hope it is no dishonest fire, to determine a woman of the world.

Shakespeare's As you like it.

3. Dishonored; dishonour'd.

Dishonour with yong's arms the youth appears,
Spoil'd of his name, and honed of his own.

Dryden.

4. Dishonorable; ignominious. These two seemes are scarcely English, being borrowed from the Latin idiom.

She saw her foes with purple death expiring,
How they did, and domes in rolling fire; a
A dreadful fire of intestine wars,
Ingruious triumphs, and dishon'rcs fears.

Pope.

Dishonestly. adv. [from dishonest.]

1. Without faith; without probity; faith-lessly; wickedly.

I protested he had the chain of me,
Th' worst dishon'ably he dare deny it.

Shakespeare.

2. Lewdly; wantonly; unchaste.

A wife daughter shall bring an inheritance to her husband; but the that dishon'ably he is her father's headless.

Ecc. xix. 4.

Dishonesty. n. f. [from dishonest.]

1. Want of probity; faithfulness; violation of truth.

Their fortune depends upon their credits, and a strain of open public dishon'ably must be to their disadvantage.

3. Unseaworthy; incontinence; lewdness.

Mrs. Ford, the honest woman, the modest wife, the virtuous creature, that hath the jealous fool to her husband; I suspect without cause, no mistrust, do I?—Heaven be my witness you do, if you suspect me in any dishon'ably.

Shakespeare.

Dishonor. n. f. [dis and honor.]

1. Reproach; disgrace; ignominy.

Let not my successors be your dishon'ners.

Shakespeare's Macbeth.

But mine own faults.

Shakespeare's Measure for Measure.

He was expel'd to own his manhood in the dif-agreement of the grave, and vnoshed him, in that defpicable condition, the glorious title of his friend.

Shakespeare.

Drake's Shaq's Love.

Take him for your hussaid and your lord;

'Tis no disfigure to cover your grace.

On no account from a royal race.

Dryden. Fables.

2. Reproach uttered; cenere; report of infamy.

So good, that no tongue could ever
Procure discomfiture: by my life
She never knew harm doing.

Shakespeare. Henry VIII

To Dishonour. v. a. [dis and honor.]

1. To disgrace; to bring shame upon;

To blush with infamy.

It is no vicious blot, mother, or foulness,
Nor disfigure, or dishon'ning they.

That hath depr'd me of your grace and favour.

Shakespeare.
DISSONANCE. n.f. [dis and conson.] A discord; a false harmony; a mixture of sounds that is not agreeable.

1. Want of "kindness; want of affection; want of benevolence.

2. Ill turn; injury; act of malignity; de- triment. This discourse is so far from doing any dis- nects to the cause, that it does it a real service.

DISLIKE. n.f. [from the verb.]

1. Disinclination; abstinence of affection; the contrary to fondness.

He then took, and tempering kindly well. Their contrary discords with trivial means,

Displace them all in order, and compel To keep themselves within their sandy reigns, Together link'd with admantines chains.

SPEAKER, our discords, to whom I would be pleasing, Do cloud my joys with danger and de-

DISLIKE. n.f. [from the verb.]

2. Disinclination; abstinence of affection; the contrary to fondness.

He then took, and tempering kindly well. Their contrary discords with trivial means,

Displace them all in order, and compel To keep themselves within their sandy reigns, Together link'd with admantines chains.

SPEAKER, our discords, to whom I would be pleasing, Do cloud my joys with danger and de-
To Di'slocate, m. a. [dis, and locut, Lat.] 1. To put out of the proper place. After some time the firsts on all sides of the globe were dislocated, and their situation varied, being elevated in some places, and depressed in others. Woodworth.

2. To put out of joint; to disjoint. W'ret't not my fitnes' To let these hands obey my boiling breath, To make their pulsations, and dislocate thy flesh and bones. Shakespeare's King Lear.

Dislocation, n. f. [from dislocate.] 1. The act of shifting the places of things. 2. The state of being dislocated. The poulter of rooks, often leaning or protruding, gave them some dislocations of their natural site. Bunten.

3. A luxation; a violent preful of a bone out of the socket, or correspondent part; a joint put out. It might go away either within or without the upper, and be in it for only pulled it out, and cause a dislocation, or a strain. Grew's Musum.

To Dislocate, v. a. [dis and lodge.] 1. To remove from a place. The dish-fish which are resident in the depths of the earth, and are never dislocated or moved by storms, nor cast upon the shores which the littorales usually use. Woodworth.

2. To remove from an habitation. Thee' three fold, behold a new delight. The God dislodging from another seat. Dryden's Juvenile.

3. To drive an enemy from a station. My word can perfect what it has begun, And from your walls displace that haughty fort. Dryden.

4. To remove an army to other quarters. The ladies have prevail'd; The Valdoians are disjunct, and Marcus gone. Dryden.

Disloyal, adj. [disloyal, French; dis and loyal.] 1. Not true to allegiance; faithless; false to a sovereign, disobedient. Foul strifit, and breach Dryjoy] on the part of many, revolt Milton.

2. Dishonest; pernicious, Obsolete. Such things, in a false dryjoyal knee, Are tricks of custom; but, in a mast that's just, They're cold delutions working from the heart, That passion cannot rule. Shakespeare's Cymbeline.

3. Not true to the marriage-bed. The lady is disloyal. — Dryjoy! The word is too good to paint out her wickedness. — Shakespeare.

Disloyal town! Speak, didst not thou Forsake thy faith, and break the nuptial vow? — Dryden.

4. False in love; not confiant. The three latter fenses are now obsolete. Disloyally, adv. [from disloyal.] Not faithfully; treacherously; disobediency. Disloyalty, n. f. [from disloyal.] 1. Want of fidelity to the sovereign. Let the truth of that religion I profess be repre- sented to judgment, not in the disguise of love, schism, heresy, poverty, and disloyalty. K. Charles.

2. Want of fidelity in love. A fene now obsolete. There shall appear such levelling truths of Hero's Dryjoyal, that Jolebe shall be called assurance. Shakespeare.

Dismalign, adj. [dispute malus, Latin, an evil day.] Sorrowful; dire; horrid; melancholy; uncomfortable; unhappy; dark.

The chance of Coward yan a dismalign conflict. Shak.

On all sides of innumerable tongues Milton. Nor yet in horrid shade or dismalign den, Nor noise on earth, but on the gravity, brow. Fearless, unscared, he slept. Shak.

The dismalign situation wide and wild, A dungeon horrible! — Milton. Such a variety of dismalign accidents must have broken the spirits of any man: — Clarendon.

On the one hand to the most glittering temptations to discord, and on the other the dismalign effects of cooperation. — Beef. Deer of Viver.

Dreadful gleams. Dryjoy.

Dismally, adv. [from dismalign.] Horribly; sorrowfully; uncomfortably.

Dismalness, n. f. [from dismalign.] Horror; sorrow.

To Dissemble, v. a. [dis and mantle.] 1. To deprive of a dress; to flipp; to de- nude He that makes his prince defiled and undervelved, and bears him out of his subjects hearts, may easily flipp him of his other-gauns, having already disfigur'd him of his strength, by disman- neling him of his honors, and feiting his reputation. Swift.

2. To loose; to throw off a dress; to throw open. This is most strange! That she, who's ev'ry hand but his own object. Deceit and shew, shoul'd in this time of commit a thing so monstrous, to dissemble So many fitts of favour. Shakespeare's King Lear.

3. To flipp a part of its outworks. It is not sufficient to molest our own fort, with- out the dismantling and demolishing of our enemies. — Henshall.

4. To break down any thing external. His eyewells, rooted out, are thrown to ground; His nose dismanl'd in his mouth is found; His jaws, cheeks, front, one undistinguish'd wound. Dryden.

To Dismask, v. a. [dis and mask.] To disvest a man; to uncover from concealment. Fair ladies mask'd are seen in the bud. And angels veild in clouds; are robe show. Dismanl'd, their damask; wheast commemmate them. — Dryden.

The marquis thought best to dissemble his heart, and told him that he was going covertly. Watton.

To DISMAY, v. a. [dismay, Spanish.] To terrify; to discourage; to affright; to deprees; to deject. Their mighty strokes their hableous dismay'd. — Spenser.

Enemies would not be so troublesome to the western coasts, nor that country itself be so often dismaying with alarms as they have of late years been. He will not fail thee; fear not, neither be dis- may'd. — Dact.

Nothing can make him rehind in the practice of his tongue, so that he has a propect of improving can allay him, nor fear of danger dismay him. — Attenborough.

Dismay, n. f. [dismay, Spanish.] Fall of courage; terror; felt; defecion of mind; fear impressed.

All sate mute. Pondering the danger with the thought among us: and in another's countenance read his own dismay. Milton. This then, not minded in dismay, yet now Afflicts me that the bitternes of death Is fail'd. Milton.
2. To defend from every elevation.

DISENTANGLE. v. a. to dis and naturalize. To alienate; to make alien; to deprive of the privileges of birth.

DISMASTRED. adj. [di and nature.'] Unnatural; wanting natural tenderness; devoid of natural affection. Unusual.

If the mist came, create her child of spleen, that it may live, and be a thwart diabler if conduct to her Shakespeare's King Lear.

DISOBEDIENCE. n. f. [dis and obedience.] 1. Violation of lawful command or prohibition; breach of duty due to superiors. Th' offence is holy that the heart command'd; and this deceit loses the name of craft. Of disobedience, and unaccountable title. Shakespeare.

Of man's first disobedience, and the fruit of that forbidden tree, fing heavily mue.

Murder, adultery, or disobedience to parents, have a general notion antecedently to laws. Stillingfleet.

This is not disobedience, but rebellion. Us disclaim the sovereignty of Christ, and renouncing all allegiance to his authority. Rogers.

2. Incompliance. If planetary orbs the fun obey, Why should the moon dissemble foreign sway? Why in a whirlwind doth of her own accord

Around the globe tertillial should she run? This disobedience of the moon will prove

The fait bright orb does not the planets move.

DISOBEDIENT. adj. [dis and obedient.] Not ob servant of lawful authority; guilty of the breach of lawful commands, or prohibition.

The man of God was disobedient unto the word of the Lord. 1 Kings, xili. 56.

To DISOBEDY. v. a. [dis and obey.] To break commands, or transgress prohibitions.

She absolutely bade him, and he durst not know how to disobey. Sidney.

He's both to disobey the god's command,

Not willing to forsake this pleasant land. Denham.

DISOBEDIENCE. n. f. [dis and obedience.] Cause of guilt.

If he receded from what he had promised, it would be such a disinclination to the prince that he would never forget it. Clarendon.

There can be no malice, and consequently no crime or disinclination. F. Eddis.

To DISOBEY. v. a. [dis and obey.] To offend; to disoblige; to give offence to. A term by which obedience is tenderly expressed.

Abbie had been removed from that charge, and was thereby so much disoblige'd, that he quitted the king's party. Clarendon.

Those, though in highest places, who fling and disoblige their friends, shall infallibly come to know the value of them, by having none when they shall most need them. Swift.

It is in the power of more particular persons in this kingdom, than in any other, to distress the government, when they are disoblige'd.

Addison's Freeholder.

My plan has given offence to some gentlemen, whom it would not be very safe to disoblige. Addison's Guardians.

We love and esteem our clergy, and are not to say weight upon their opinion, and would not willingly disoblige them. Swift concerning the Saratoga Treaty.

If a woman suffers her lover to see her, if he is in a happy power to disoblige him, let her beware of an encoacher. Clarissa.

DISOBLIGING. participle adj. [from disoblige.] Disgustful; unpleasant; offensive.

Peremptoriness can leave no form of understanding; it renders wife mere disobligeable and troublesome, and feet ridiculous and contemptible.

Government of the Tongues.

DISOBLIGINGLY. adv. [from disoblige] In a disobligeing or offensive manner; without attention to please.

DISOBLIGEDNESS. n. s. [from disoblige]lness. Oftensiveness; readiness to disoblige. To thrust out of the proper orbit.

DISORDER. n. f. [dis and order; disorder.]

1. Want of regular disposition; irregularity; confusion; immetrical distribution.

When I read an author of genius without method, I fasten myself in a wood that abounds with many noble objects, either among one another in the grand confusion and disorder. Spenser.

2. Tamul; disturbance; bulle. A greater favour this disoblige brought Unto her servants, than their awfoul thought

Durst entertain, when thus compell'd they preh

Her yielding up of her lovely brow. Waller.

3. Neglect of rule; irregularity. From vulgar bounds with brave disord'r part,

And snatch a grace beyond the reach of art. Pope.

4. Breach of laws; violation of standing intimation.

These reign'd in all men blood, man of each, disoblige'd good men, forgetfulness of good turns, and disord'r in marriages. Wilt. xics. 26.

5. Breach of that regularity in the animal economy which causes health; sickness; disoblige. It is used commonly for a flight disease.

Pleasure and pain are only different conftuctions of the mind, sometimes occasioned by disord'r in the body, or sometimes by thoughts in the mind. Locke.

To DISORDER. v. a. [dis and order.]

1. To throw into confusion; to confound;

To put out of method; to disturb; to ruffle; to confuse.

Eve,

Not for rep'ls'd, with tears that couldn't flow, But tress'd all disord'r'd, at his feet

Fall innoc'd.

You disord're'd heap of ruin lies,

Stone rent from stones, where clouds of dust arise. Dryden.

The incursions of the Goths, and other barbarous nations, disord'red the affairs of the Roman empire. Arbuthnot.

2. To make sick; to disturb the body as, my dinner disord'red me.

3. To discompose; to disturb the mind.

4. To turn out of holy orders; to depose, to strip of ecclesiastical vestments.

Let him be strip't, and disord'red; and I would fain see him walk in quervy, which the world may bo defend the inside of a falan. Dryden's Spanish Prior.

DISORDERED. adj. [from disorder.]

Disorderly; irregular; vicious; loath; unrestrained in behaviour; debauched.

Here do you keep a hundred knights and squires, Men for disord'r'd and bold.

That this our court, infected with their manners, shows like a riotous inn. Shakespeare's King Lear.

DISORDEREDNESS. n. f. [from disord'r- ed.] Irregularity; want of order; confusion.

By that disorder'dness of the soldiers, a great advantage was offered unto the enemy. Knolles.

DISORDERLY. adv. [from disorder.]

1. Confused; immetrical; without proper distribution.

Those oblique laws of Henry I. were but disorderly, confused, and general things; rather rules and shells of administration than institutions.

He.

2. Irregular; tumultuous.

They thought it the extremest of evils to put themselves to the mercy of them hungry and disorderly people. Boswell.

His thoughts, which are the pictures and records of passions, are generally such as naturally arise from those disorderly motions of our spirits.

Dryden.

A disorderly multitude contending with the body of the legislature, is like a man in a fit under the touch of one in the fulness of his health and strength.

Addison.

3. Lawless; contrary to law; inordinate; contrary to the rules of life; vicious.

He reproved them for their disorderly afflictions against the peaceful people of the realm. Hayward.

DISORDERLY. adv. [from disorder.]

1. Without rule; without method; irregularly; confusedly.

Naked savages fighting disorderly with bones, by appointment of their commanders, may truly and absolutely be said to war.

Rutledge.

2. Without law; inordinately.

We behaved not ourselves disorderly among you.

Thuc.

DISORDERED. adj. [dis and order.]

Not living by the rules of virtue; inordinate.

There thee disoblige, yet canst not suffer

The punishment of disoblige days. Milc. Asinus.

DISORDEREDLY. adv. [from disorder.]

Inordinately; vitiously.

DISORDERED. adj. [dis and order.]

Turned from the east; turned from the right direction; thrown out of the proper path. Harris.

To DISORDER. v. a. [dis and order.]

1. To deny; not to allow.

Then they, who brother's better claim disoblige, Expet their parents, and usurp the throne. Dryden's Revenge.

2. To abnegate; to renounce.

When an author has publickly disoblige'd a glorious piece, they have disoblige'd his name with him. Swift.

To DISPAND. v. a. [dispand, Latin.]

To display; to spread abroad. Dispand.

DISPERSION. n. f. [from dispand, Latin.]

The act of displaying the act of spreading; disoblige; disobligeation.

To DISPARGE. v. a. [from dispar, Latin.]

1. To marry any one to another of inferior condition.

2. To match unequally; to injure by union with something inferior in excellence.

3. To injure by a comparison with something of less value.

4. To treat with contempt; to mock; to flout; to reproach.

Abides a fatiguer conqueror, he drew God's altar to dispairage and disoblige, For one of Syrian mode. Milton's Paradise Lost.
Men ought not to afficte and join themselves together in the same office, under a dissimilarity of condition.

Some members must preclude, and others obey; and a dissimilarity in the outward condition is necessary to keep them several orders in mutual dependence on each other.

2. Dissimilitude; unlikeliness.

To DISPAR. v. a. [dis and par.] 1. To throw open a park.

You have fed upon my figurines, Dispard my parks, and field my forest woods.

2. To let at large; to release from enclo.

They were in a prodigious rage.

Till his fine muse threw down the pale, and did at once dispard them all.

To DISPAR. v. a. [dis and par.; dispar, French; dispariter, Latin.] To divide in two; to separate; to break; to burst; to rive.

The gate not wood, one of enduring brass.

But of more worthy substance framed was Doubly dispers'd, it did look and close.

That when it look'd none might through it pass.

On either side

Dispard chaos overbuilt exclaim'd;

And with rebounding forge the bars affaid.

That forms a niggard, aurifcent beauty.

The rest to several places,

Dispards, and between spurs out the air.

Milten.

Dispard Britten mount'd their doubtful faw,

And dared both, when neither would obey.

Prim. The pilgrim off

At dead of night, 'mid his orison, heirs,

Highly, the voice of time dispersing twain. Dis.

Dispard the ailes, and forgot the night,

Innumerable ranks that to talk of consider, when we are certain of making your own terms.

Stottoune's Innuend Army.

4. It has to before the person or thing dispersard.

Then to our age, when not to pleasure bent.

This forms an honour, not dispersal. Denham.

Nor was none for the stage; and without dispersal to the author, he could have proceeded.

Dryden.

DISPARAGER. n. f. [from disparage.]

One that disperses; one that treats with indignity; one that contrives an unequal election.

DISPARATES. n. f. [disparata, Latin.] Things to unlike, that they cannot be compared with each other.

DISPARITY. n. f. [from dispar, Latin.] 1. Inequality; difference in degree either of rank or excellence.

Between Ethius and the rest of Job's familiars, the greatest dispersacy was but in years.

Huetter.

Among ungrasps, what society Can sort, what harmony among delight? Which must be mutual, in proportion doe Givn' and receiv'd; but in disparity, the one to the other falls remiss, Can't ever sue with either, but soon prove Tedious alike.

Milton's Paradise Lost.

There was as great a disparity between the practical rules of the age, from then and now, as there is between empire and slavery, could.

Subst.
DIS

Hast thou not sworn allegiance unto me?
Canst thou dispitewit heaven for such an oath?

Disperse, n.f. [from the verb.] Dispersal; exception: not in use.

Indulgences, dispersers, parsons, bulls.
The sport of winds.

Disperse, n.f. [from dispel.] One that disperses; one that deals out any thing of a distributor.

The minister of that household are the dispersers of that faith.
Spirits.

Those who stand before earthly princes, who are the dispersers of their favours, and conveyors of their wills, which act high honours.

To dispel, v.a. [dis and people.] To depopulate; to empty of people.
The Irish, banished into the mountains, where they lived only upon white meats, seeing their lands so depopulated and wretched, came down into the plains.

Confabulations, and great disorders; not merely disperses, but depopulate.

His heart exuls him in the hope.

Already done, to have dispelled heaven.

Kings, by order, and fevices.

Who claim'd the skies, dispel the earth; and fo.
The lovely lords of empty wilds and woods.

Dispersion, n.f. [from dispel.] A depopulator; a wailer.

Nor drain I ponds the golden earp to take;

Not trouble for pikes, dispersers of the lake.

Gay.

To dispel, v.a. [dispersa, Lat.] To sprinkle; to scatter.

Shakespeare.

To dispel, v.a. [dispersa, Lat.] To drive to different places, and from different parts.

And I scattered them amongst the heathens; and they were dispersed through the countries.

Exo. xxxvi. 19.

2. To dispel.

Slanders, dispel your toles.

If the night.

Have gathered ought of evil, or concealing, dispel it, as now light dispels the dark.

Milton.

3. To deal about; to distribute.

Being a king, that loved wealth, he could not endure to have trade skim, nor any obstruction to continue in the gate which dispelsthat blood.

Bacon.

Dispersion, n.f. [from dispel.] In a dispersed manner; separately.

The exquisite wits of some few, peradventure, are able, dispersely here and there, to find now a word, and then a sentence, which may be more probably suspected, than any clearness, of error.

Hooke.

Those minerals are either found in grains, dispersely intermixed with the corporacies of earth, or else amass'd into bands or nodules. Woodhouse.

Dispersion, n.f. [from dispel.] The state of being dispersed; dispersion.

Dispersion, n.f. [from dispel.] Thinnness; scatteredness.

The terribl parts of Africk are by Ptolemy referred to a libbard's skin, the disance of whole spots represent the dispersness of habitations or towns in Africk.

Hereinon in Languagew.

Dispersion, n.f. [from dispel.] A scatterer; a spreader.

Those who are pleased with defamatory libels, to fo as to approve the authors and dispersers of them, are as guilty as if they had composed them.

Spectator.

Dispersion, n.f. [from dispel, Lat.] 1. The act of scattering or spreading.

2. The state of being scattered.

No man has dispersion.

Ralph.

After so many disperses, and so many divisions, two or three of us may be gathered together.

Pope.

7. Dispersion, n.f. [from dispel, Fr.] 1. To spread wide.

The northern wind his wings did spread broad At his command, and raised him up light.

Fairly Queen.

There he found him all carelessly display'd,

In secret shadow from the sunny ray;

On a sweet bed of lilies softly laid,

Fairly Queen.

2. To exhibit to the sight or mind.

You speak not like yourself, who ever yet

Have failed to charity, and dispersed all do the effects of gentleness.

Thou hast not grafted beauty cases.

The blith of morning, and the milk was dry.

Doy.'

The works of nature, and the words of revelation, disperseth truth mankind in characters to violate, that those, who are not quite blind, may read.

The form the dark Lyceum groves display'd,

And first to light exposed the sacred flame.

Say how this instrument of love began.

And in immortal features display'd their.

3. To carve; to cut up.

He carves, dispels, and cuts up to a wonder.

Spectator.

4. To talk without restraint.

I the very fellow which late

Disp'd in faudry against your rightness.

Shak.

5. To let ostentatiously to view.

They are all couched in a pit, with obscured lights, which, at the very instant of our meeting, they will at once display to the sight.

Shakespeare.

Dispilay, v.a. [from the verb.] An exhibition of a thing to view.

We endeavored to take the wings of the morrow to visit the world abroad, and have a glorious display of the highest form of created excellencies.

Galin.

I can with the greatest coldness behold the stupendous displays of omnipotence, and be transported at the pensive efficacy of human skill.

Spectator.

Dispensacion, n.f. [from dispel.] Anger; disconceent. Obscurete.

Contrived both, to avoid her, and to please her.

Haught displayed.

Spectator.

Dispensation, adj. [from dispel.] Unpeaceful; offensive; displeasant.

What to one is a most grateful eden, to another is noxious and displeasant, and it were impertinent to name it.

To paint it forth, him dispelshon may'st.

Fairy Queen.

Dispensation, n.f. [from dispel, Fr.] Offence; turbulent; quality of offending.

It is a mistake to think that men cannot change the disputation or indissension, that is, in actions, into plea and debate, and that what do but what is in their power.

Spectator.

Dispensation, n.f. [from dispel, Fr.] Offence; turbulent; quality of offending.

It is a mistake to think that men cannot change the disputation or indissension, that is, in actions, into plea and debate, and that what do but what is in their power.

Spectator.

Dispensation, n.f. [from dispel, Fr.] Offence; turbulent; quality of offending.

It is a mistake to think that men cannot change the disputation or indissension, that is, in actions, into plea and debate, and that what do but what is in their power.

Spectator.

Dispensation, n.f. [from dispel, Fr.] Offence; turbulent; quality of offending.

It is a mistake to think that men cannot change the disputation or indissension, that is, in actions, into plea and debate, and that what do but what is in their power.

Spectator.
Undoubtedly he will relent, and turn from his dispositions. Milton.

Though the recipient of the injury ought to alay the difpofitions of it, yet men so much more consider what they suffer than what they do. Dryden.

On me alone thy just displeasure lay'st
But take thy judgments from this mourning land. Dryden.

You've shown how much you my content design;
Yet, ah! I would have’sn displeasure pass sublime! Dryden.

Nothing is in itself so pernicious to communities of learned men, as the dispositions of their prides. Addison’s Frendshir.

Dispositions, n. f. [from displeas.] To
To displace; not to gain favour; not to win affection. A word not elegant, nor now in use.

When the way of pleasing or displeasing lieth by the favourite, it is impossible any other should consider. Bacon.

To DISPLACED, a. [displac'd, Lat.] To displace with a loud noise; to vent with violence. Stood stand'd of straggam another row,
In power to displace their several fire
Of character. Milton.

Dispositions, n. f. [from displeas.] The act of displacing; a sudden burst or disperion with noise and violence. The sport, play sport; pastime; diversion; amusement; merriment.

She lift not hear, but her disposition purified;
And ever bade him stay, till time the tide renew'd. His dispositions were ingenuous and manlike, where by he always learned something. Haym. on Ed. VI. She bedefd, heard he found
Of railing leaves; but minded not, as we'd To such dispositions before they come to the field. Milk.

To DISPOSE, v. a. [dispose, Fr. disposer, Lat.] To divert. He often, but attended with weak guard, Considering this way to displace himself. Stath.

To DISPOSE, v. w. To play; to toy; to wanton.

Fife pipes and gentle airs
Whisper'd it to the woods, and from their wings
Flung out the most divine sound, from the fiery brains. Disposing!

Loud to the winds their airy garments sway;
The delight, the pleasure of the day, the beauty of the air, Where light dispositions ever mingling sing. Pope.

Dispositions, n. f. [from dispose.] 1. The act of disposing or regulating anything; regulation; dispensation; distribution.

Tax not divine dispositions, which men have, nor, and by bad men been debased. Milk.

The power of distribution; the right of bestowing. Are not the blessings both of this world and the next in his dispositions? Atterbury.

Government; management; conduct. We shall get as much new and clear knowledge by one rule, than by taking up principles, and by putting our minds into the dispositions of others. Locke.

Establishment in a new state; dismission into new hands. I can called off from public dispositions by a doctrine of great impossibility, which is no less than the dispositions of my father Jenny for life. Tiber, No 25.

To DISPOSE, v. a. [disposer, Fr. disposer, Lat.] 1. To employ to various purpoues; to difperse.
Thus, whilst the did her various pow'r disperse,
The world was free from tyrants, wars, and woes. Prior.

2. To give; to place; to bellow. Yet see, when noble benefits shall prove
Not well disperse'd, the mind grown once corrupt,
They turn to vicious forms, ten times more ugly Than ever they were fair. Shakespeare.

Of what you gathered, as most your own, you have disperse'd much in works of public plenty. Spratt.

3. To turn to any particular end or consequence. Endeavors, and conquests: love will soon dispose
To nature good our pall and present woes. Dryden.

4. To adapt; to form for any purpose. There when the knights beheld, they can dispose themselves to court, and each a sovereign.

But if they live unto the court to thongs,
And there to haunt after the hoped prey,
Then must they then dispose another way. Spenser.

5. To frame the mind; to give a propension; to incline: with to.
Sufficiently dispose kings to tyranny, husbands to jealousy, and wise men to irreligion and melancholy. The memory of what they suffered, by being without it, easily disposes them to this. Clarendon.

He knew the last of Paradise.
And, as he was disposed, could prove it.
Below the moon, or else above it. Hudibras.

This disposition men to believe, that teaches, to follow what is at its own.
A man might do this now if he were maliciously disposed, and had a mind to bring masters to extremity. Dryden.

Although the frequency of prayer and fasting may be of no efficacy to dispose God to be more gracious, yet it is of great use to dispose us to be more objects of his grace.

Some moralists find themselves disposed to pride, lust, insensibility, or aversion; they do not think their morality concerned to check them. Swift.

6. To make fit: with for.
This may dispose me, perhaps for the reception of treatises, or else not to it. Locke.

7. To regulate; to adjuit.
We're by the crie, the Athenian chief akes
The knightly forms of combat to disperse. Dryden’s Fables.

8. To DISPOSE of. To apply to any purpose; to transfer to any other person or use.
All men are naturally in a state of perfect freedom to order their actions, and dispose of their possessions and perfections, as they think fit, within the bounds of the law of nature. Locke.

Dispose of the meat with the better, or any other creature. Swift.

9. To DISPOSE of. To put into the hands of another.
As for mine, I may dispose of her;
Which shall I either to a gentleman, Or to her death. Shakespeare.

I have disposed of her to a man of business, who will sell her, that to be well disposed, in good humour, and cheerful in her family, are the arts and sciences of female life. Talles.

10. To DISPOSE of. To give away by authority. A rural judge disposed of beauty’s prize. Walker.

11. To DISPOSE of. To direct. The lot is cast into the lap: but the whole disposing thereof is of the Lord. Prov. 16.

12. To DISPOSE of. To conduct; to behave.

They must receive instructions how to dispose of themselves when they come, which must be in the nature of laws unto them. Bacon or Willers.

13. To DISPOSE of. To place in any condition.
For the remaining doubts, What to reforme, and how dispose of me,
Be wary to call that wastes care alike. Dryden’s Fables.

14. To DISPOSE of. To put away by any means.
They require more water than can be found, and more than can be disposed of, if it was found. Bacon.

To DISPOSE, v. w. To bargain; to make terms. Obsolete. When the saw you did suspect
She had disposed with Ceasar, and that your rage Would not be purg’d, the word was dead. Shakespeare.

Dispositions, n. f. [from the verb.] 1. Power; management; disposition: with at or to.
All that is mine I leave at thy dispose;
My goods, my lands, my reputation.
Shakespeare.

To render thee the Parthian at dispose. Milton.
Of all your goodness leaves to our disposition.
Our liberty’s the only gift we choose. Dryden’s Indian Emperor.

2. Disposition; act of government; disposition. All is best, though oft we doubt
What ’s unsearchable dispose
Of highest wisdom brings about,
And ever best found in the close. Milk. Agap.

3. Disposition; cast of behaviour. Obsolete. He hath a person, and a smooth dispose.
To be suspected; fram’d to make women fall.
A dispos’d fellow. Lodge.

4. Disposition; cast of mind; inclination. Obsolete. He carries on the stream of his dispose Without obstravance or respect of any,
In will peculiar. Shakesp. Trolly, and Cradles.

Disposer, n. f. [from dispose.] 1. Disposer; disjector; beflowerer.
The magistrate is both the disposer, and the dispose of what is got by begging. Gram’s Bull of Morality.

2. Governor; regulator; director. I think myself collodged, whatever my private apprehensions may be of the future, to do my part, and leave events to their dispose. Bayle.

All the resou of mankind cannot aig a cold ground of dissatisf’ction, but in making that God our friend, who is the absolute disposer of all things. South.

Would I had been dispose of thy trust;
Thou shouldst have had thy wish, and died in wars. Dryden.

3. One who takes from, and gives to, whom he pleases.
But brandish'd high, in an ill omen’d hour,
To thee, proud Gaul, behold thy justifi’d fear,
The matter’s done, dispose of thy poor. Prior.

Disposition, n. f. [from dispositio, Lat.] 1. Order; method; distribution.
Touching musical harmony, whether by instrument or voice, it being of high and low, in due proportionable dispositions, such notwithstanding is the force thereof, and is very pleasing effects it hath, in that very part, wherein is most divine, that some have been thereby induced to think, that the soul itself by nature is, or hath in it an harmony. Hunter.

Under this head of invention is placed the disposition of the work, to put all things in a beautiful order and harmony, that the whole may be of a piece. Dryden’s Dunciad, Preface.
DIS

1. Ask whether the connection of the extremes be not more clearly seen, in this simple and natural synthesis, than in the perplexed repetitions and incompatible solutions. — Lock.

2. Natural sense, quality. Refrangibility of the rays of light in this distribution is refracted, or turned out of their way, in passing out of one transparent body or medium into another. — Newton.

3. Tendency to any act or state. This argues a great distribution to particular action in the soul and air. — Bacon's Natural History. Divisions in the source and an act, as to whether it is forward, and readily upon every occasion to break into action. — Locke.

4. Temper of mind. I have suffered more for their sakes, more than the illiberal inconscioncy of man's distribution is available. — Shakespeare.

5. Affection of kindness or ill-will. I take myself to be so well informed as much more of the distribution of each people towards the other. — Swift.

6. Predominant inclination. As they pinch one another by the distribution, he cries out, no more. — Shakespeare. Attraction and repulsion.

The love we bear to our friends is generally caused by our finding the same distribution in them which we feel in ourselves. — Pep.

7. Affortion; adjustment of external circumstances: not used. I love it for my own wife, due reference of place and exhibition, as levels with her breeding. — Shakespeare. Othello.

DISTRIBUTIVE. adj. [from distribute.] That which implies distribution of any property; decrative. The words of all judicial acts are written narrowly, unless be be in sentences wherein distributive and enacting terms are made use of. — Astle's Par.

DISTRIBUTIVELY. adv. [from distribute.] 1. In a distributive manner. 2. Respecting individuals; distributively. That the soul in philosophy goes, that the generation of anything is the corruption of another, although it be substantially true, concerning the form and matter, is also distributively verified in the efficient or produce and phlegm. — Bacon's Familiar Letters.

DISPOSITOR, n. s. [from dispose.] The lord of that sign in which the planet is, and by which therefore it is over-ruled.

To DISPOSES, v. a. [dis and pes.] 1. To put out of possession; to deprive; to disfize. The blow from faddle forced him to fly; he might not need both to hit his breast Had not he at least his head in twain, and life thence disposed. — Fairy Queen. Then shall hold the opinion of Pythagoras, ere I will allow of thy wise; and fear to kill a woodcock, lest thou dispose the soul of thy grandson. — Shakespeare's Twelfth Night.

Let us fix upon the ground, how some have been sold, some bred in war, some basted by the ghosts they disposed of. — Shakespeare's Richard II.

I will evade Mine host from forth the beggars of the world, and disposing her all. — Shakespeare's Timon. In thee I hope; thy success I invoke, to win the crown whence I am disposed; for like evanescence on the stream, to cast the baubles down, or raise th' oppressed. — Fairfax.

The children went to Gillett, and took it, and disposed the Amorite which was in it. — Milton.

This inaccessible height, the seat of Deity,badge, as disposed, he trusted to have set his foot in. — Dryden.

And Amata lay Fixed with disdain for Turnus disposed, and the new maitlails of the Trojan guest. — K Ollis's History.

2. It is generally used with of the thing taken away. Charles refolved, with a sufficient army, to pass over, and to dispose of the pirate of Tunis. — K Ollis's History.

No cow's small disposed of! — Tennyson.

No matter what was done by the disposed of. — Dryden. State of Immortals. Nothing can create more trouble to a man than to endeavour to dispose of him of this conceit. — Tennyson.

3. Formerly with from. They arrogate domination undeclared. — Dryden. Over their hereditary, and quite disposed to Concord and law of nature from the earth. — Milton. It will be found a work of so small difficulty to dispose of and throw out a Vice which that heart, where long position begins to plead precipitation. — Swift.

DISTRIBUTION, n. s. [from dispose.] 1. Disposition; government; power; management. In his disposition is the orb of earth, the throne of all, of whose birth, Sand. They quietly surrendered both it and themselves to his disposition. — Sandy's Journey.

Whist we marmar against the present disposition of things, and firmly refuse them a disposition from the primitive rule, and the idea of that mind that formed all things best. — Breton's Vaguer Errors.

2. Secure; possesse. They reserved it in a kind of warlike disposition, or perhaps little better. — Witten.

DISPRAISE, n. f. [dis and prase.] Blame; censure; disfigure. If I can do it By such I can speak in his dispossession, He shall not long remain in the treasury. — Shakespeare.

To me reproach Rather belongs, distrust, and all misprision. Milton. Nothing is here for ears, nothing to wall Or knock the shrillest; no worse than contempt, Dispraise, or blame. — Milton's Agonies.

I need not raise Trophies to Vice from other men's dispossession. Looks frightet men: the general has seen Moorg. With as bad faces; no disposition to Bertran's Dryden. If any writer shall do this paper so much honour as to inscribe the title of it to others, the whole praise or dispraise of such a performance will belong to some other author. — Addison.

My faults will not be hid, and it is dispraise to me that they will not: the clearness of one it never better proved than in discovering its own faults. — Pep.

To DISPRAISE, v. a. [from the noun.] To blame; to censure; to condemn.

In praising Anthony, I've dispraised Cato. — Shakespeare.

No abuse, Ned, in the world; honest, Ned: none! I dispraised him before the wicked, that the wicked might not fall in love with him; in which doing, I have done the part of a careful friend. — Shakespeare's Henry IV.

The critics, while they like my ware, may dispraise my writing. — Spenser.

DISPRAISER, n. f. [from dispraise.] A censor; one who blames. — Diet.

DISPRAISELIE, adj. [from dispraise.] Unworthy of commendation. — Diet.
DIS

Mufick craveth your acquaintance: many are of minds disposed to spirits, that they avoid her company.

We met, with undisguising voice,
May rightly answere that melancholy noise;
As we met, we, in the very sound of this
Jaird against nature's clime.

DISPROPORTIONAL. adj. [from disproportion]. Unsuitable in form or quantity; not duly regulated in regard to
something else.

Doubts and fears are the sharpest passions:
through these false pictures all that foe is like the evening shadows, disproportionate to the truth, and strangely longer than the true substance.

Sucking.

We are apt to set too great a value on temporal blessings, and have too little and disproportionate evil of spiritual.

There is no wine of joys strong a body as to bear such a disproportionate quantity of water as fifty parts.

DISPROPORTIONALNESS. n. f. [from disproportionable]. Unsuitableness to something else.

DISPROPORTIONAL. adv. [from disproportion]. Disproportionable; unsym-metrical; unuitable in quantity or form to
something else.

DISPROPORTIONALLY. adv. [from disproportion]. Unsuitably with respect to quantity or value.

DISPROPORTIONATE. adj. [from disproportion]. Unsymmetrical; unsuitable to something else either in bulk, form, or value.

None of our members are crooked or distorted, or disproportionate to the cell, either in essence or defect.

It is plain that men have agreed to a disproporton agreement, and unequal populusion of the earth.

DISPROPORTIONATELY. adv. [from disproportion]. Unsuitably, unsymmetrically.

DISPROPORTIONATENESS. n. f. [from disproportionate]. Unsuitableness in bulk, form, or value.

To DISPROVE. v. a. [dis and prove].
1. To confute an assertion; to convict of error or falsehood.

This exposition they plainly disprove, and by way of a direct reason, that of David the words of David could not possibly be meant. Hooke.

This Weftmoreland maintains, And Warwill shall disprove it. Shakespeare.

That is the same name.
I find return, and then disprove thy claim.

Dryden's Fable.

It is easier to affirm than to disprove. Hooke.

That false disposition I advanced in order to disprove it, and by that means to prove the truth of my doctrine.

Addison.

I see the same affront produced again, with out any notice of what had been laid to disprove them.

Swift.

2. To convict a practice of error.

They beheld those things disproved, disaffirmed, and rejected, which had made in a manner natural.

Hooke.

If God did not forbid all indifferent ceremonies, itour conformity with the church of Rome in some things: it is not hitherunto at yet disproved, though papists were wont as heathens were, unto Hooke.

3. To disapprove; to disallow.

Some things are good, yet in so mean a degree of goodness, as they are not meanly so disapproved, or disallowed of God for them. Hooke.

DISPROVER. n. f. [from disprove].
1. One that disproves or confutes.
2. One that blames; a censurer: if the following passage be not ill printed for disprover.

The fact is, the people of our age have yielded of two extreme, within so short time, by most of the same commanders and disprovers, would require no light memorial. Warton.

DISPROVABLE. adj. [dis and prov able]. Without penal restraint.

No leaves of any part of the fault lands shall ever be made, other than leaves for years not exceeding thirty-one, in possession, and not in reversion or remainder, and not disproviable of ways.

To DISPROSE. v. a. [dis and pusu.
Pay; to disburse. It is not certain that the following passage should not be written disprosely.

Many a pound of my own proper store,
Because I would not the same common,
I have thus dispayed the spectacle.

And never ask for refutation. Shaks. Hen. VI.

DISPUTABLE. adj. [from dispute].
1. Liable to contest; controverted; that for which something may be alleged on opposite sides. Hooke.

If they who are in themselves disputable, why are they, so much disputed? South.

2. Lawful to be contented.

Until any point is determined to be a law, it remain disputable by every subject.

Swift.

DISPUTA. W. n. f. [from dispute; dispusiter]. Latin. A controvertist; an arguer; a reasoner.

Nothingwithstanding these learned disputants, it was put to the anthropologist flavas. the world now their proper defense, and liberties.

Our nation in the mind of the brutish fish, that, when he is unable to excite himself, his blackens all the water about him till he becomes invisible. Spectator.

DISPUTANT. adj. Disputing; engaged in controversy. Not in use.

Among the gravelly roberts, disputant
On points and questions sitting Modes' chair. Mdl.

DISPUTATION. n. f. [from dispute;
Latin].
1. The skill of controversy; argumenta-
tion.

Consider what the learning of disputations is, and how they are employed for the advantage of them-seves or others, whole business is only the valuation of minds.

Locke.

2. Controversy; argumental content.

Well do I know the wife knotting together of your answer, that any disputations I can use is as much too weak as I unworthy. Sidney.

Till some admirable or unusual accident happen, it is in vain to work the beginning of a better alteration in the mind, disputative about the knowledge of God commonly prevalent little.

Hooke.

DISPUTATIOUS. adj. [from dispute].
Inclined to dispute; cavilling.

A man must be of a very disputatious temper, that enters into fute controverfial with any of the fair sex.

Addison.

DISPUTATIVE. adj. [from dispute].
Disposed to debate; argumentative.

Perhaps this practice might not so easily be perverted, as to raise a cavilling, disputative, and reptical temper in the minds of youth.

To DISPUTE. v. n. [dispute, Latin]. To contend by argument; to altercation; to debate; to argue; to controvert.

If attempts of the pen have often proved unfruitful, that of the sword are more, and fighting is a more excellent than disputing. Dryden. Ode of Peace.

The atheist can pretend no obligation of conscience, why he should dispute against religion.

Dryden.

To DISPUTE. v. a.
1. To contend for, whether by words or action.

Things were disputed before they came to be determined; men afterwards were not to dispute any longer, but to obey. Hooke.

So dispute the prize.

As you fought before Calladara's eyes.

Dryden.

2. To question; to reason about.

Now I am fast, and am not to dispute
My prince's orders, but to execute. Dryd. Ind. Emp.

To dicuss; to think on: a dictate not in use.

Dispute it like a man.

—but must also feel it as a man. Shaksp. Macb.

DISPUTE. n. f. [from the verb].
Contest; controversy; argumental contention.

The question being about a fact, it is begg ing, to bring as a proof an hypothesis which is the very thing in dispute.

Lactant.

The earth is now placed so conveniently, that plants thrive and flourish in it, and animals live this is matter of Cell, and beyond all dispute.

Bentley.

DISPUTELESS. adj. [from dispute].
Undisputed; uncontroversible.

Dis.

DISPUTER. n. f. [from dispute]. A controversist; one given to argument and opposition.

Both were vehement disputers against the heathen idolatry. Sibellius.

These conclusions have generally obtained, and have been acknowledged even by disputers them-seves, till with labour he had diffused their conclusions. Briggs.

DISQUALIFICATION. n. f. [from disqualify]. That which disqualifies; that which makes unfit.

It is recorded as a sufficient disqualification of a wife, that speaking of her husband, the facts,
God forgive him. Spectator.

To DISQUALIFY. v. a. [dis and qualify].
1. To make unfit; to disable by some natural or legal impediment.

Such persons as shall confer benefits on unworthy and disqualify persons, after a notice or sanction given, shall for that time be deprived of the power of preftenting unto such benefices.

Shaksp. Paragon.

2. It has commonly before the objective noun.

I know no employment for which they disqualify.

Swift.

My common illness utterly disqualifies me for all conversation; I mean my death.

Swift.
3. To deprive of a right or claim by some positive restriction; to disable; to debar, except from any grant. Swift has from the church of England the only body of Christian doctrine to which he is attached. He is employed to preach its doctrine, from flaring in the civil powers, further than in sensitives. Swift's on the Sorrows.

To DISQUISIT. [n. f. [dis and quantity.]] To lessen; to diminish. Not used.

Be expected
Of fifty to disquaint your train
And the remainders, that shall be all, depend,
To the which men may be your age.

Disquiet. n. f. [dis and quiet.]

1. Turf; to make uneasy; to harass; to vex; to fret; to deprive of tranquillity.

2. To disturb; to make uneasy; to harass; to vex; to fret; to deprive of tranquillity.

3. The Roman king disquieted. Fairy Queen. Why art thou so vexed, O my soul? and why dost thou disquiet within me?

4. By anger and impatience the mind is disquieted; and is not able so compose itself to prayer.

5. Thou happy creature, art free
From all the torments we endure;
Defeat, ambition, jealousy.
Lo! friends, not love, disquiet thee.

6. A disturber; a harasser.

7. Without rest; anxiously; unceasingly; without calms.

8. To disturb, and all unruly disorders, follow us.

9. To disquiet our great. Shakespeare's King Lear. He felt disquieted that night; but in the morning I found him calm.

10. Uncautious; restless; anxiety; disturbance.

11. All otherwise, said he, I riches rede.
And deem them root of all disquiets.

12. Without rest; anxiously; unceasingly; without calms.

13. That which men may be your age. Shakespeare.

14. Little disturbances are a great character, and to a multitude of disquiets the desire of it; which was an ambitious mind. Addison's Spectator.

15. To be the best preparative from all those temporary fears and disquiets, which corrupt the enjoyment, and embitter the face of men.

Examination. n. f. [disquisition, Latin.]

1. Examination; disquietive enquiry.

2. God hath relaxed many things to this one revolution, whose disquiets we cannot hope from thence; but with reverence must submit unto that great day, where justice shall disquiet our consciences, or relieve our disquiets. Byron.

3. To disquiet the proper place for this disquisition concerning the antediluvian earth. Woodhouse's Natural History.
She cut her up; but, upon the definition, found her just like other hens.

I shall enter upon the definition of a court's heart, and communicate that curious piece of anatomy.

Addison.

2. Nice examination.

Such strict enquires into nature, so true and so just a definition of human kind, is the work of extraordinary diligence.

Granville.

To DISSECT, v. a. [dissipate, French.] To dispassionate; to deprive; it is commonly used of a legal act.

He so defined his gripping grief,

The knight's bright sapphire again affayed

In his bright-angled body to situate.

Fairy Queen.

If a prince should give a man, before his ancient patrimony which his family has been defined of, an additional estate, never before in the possession of his ancestors, the tongue be not to re-establish linear succession.

Locke.

DISSECT, n. f. [from dissipate, French.] An unlawful dissipating a man of his land, tenement, or other immovable or incorporeal right.

Cowell.

DISSECT, n. f. [from dissolves.] He that dissipated another's.

To DISSECT, v. a. [dissimilate, Latin; disembowel, disembowel, and probably dissolves, old French.] 1. To hide under false appearance; to conceal; to pretend that not to be which really is.

She answered, that her soul was God's; and touching her faith, as she could not change, so she would not dissemble it.

Heywood.

2. To pretend that to be which is not.

This is not the true significancy. Your son Lucieno

Dath love my daughter, and she loveth him, or both dissimulate thy affected ones. Shakespeare.

In vain on the dissimulated, mockers tongue be not to re-establish linear succession.

Colloquy.

To DISSECT, v. a. [dissimulate, Latin; disembowel, disembowel, and probably dissolves, old French.] 1. To hide under false appearance; to conceal; to pretend that not to be which really is.

She answered, that her soul was God's; and touching her faith, as she could not change, so she would not dissemble it.

Heywood.

2. To pretend that to be which is not.

This is not the true significancy. Your son Lucieno

Dath love my daughter, and she loveth him, or both dissimulate thy affected ones. Shakespeare.

In vain on the dissimulated, mockers tongue be not to re-establish linear succession.

Colloquy.

To DISSECT, v. a. [dissimulate, Latin; disembowel, disembowel, and probably dissolves, old French.] 1. To hide under false appearance; to conceal; to pretend that not to be which really is.

She answered, that her soul was God's; and touching her faith, as she could not change, so she would not dissemble it.

Heywood.

2. To pretend that to be which is not.

This is not the true significancy. Your son Lucieno

Dath love my daughter, and she loveth him, or both dissimulate thy affected ones. Shakespeare.

In vain on the dissimulated, mockers tongue be not to re-establish linear succession.

Colloquy.

To DISSECT, v. a. [dissimulate, Latin; disembowel, disembowel, and probably dissolves, old French.] 1. To hide under false appearance; to conceal; to pretend that not to be which really is.

She answered, that her soul was God's; and touching her faith, as she could not change, so she would not dissemble it.

Heywood.

2. To pretend that to be which is not.

This is not the true significancy. Your son Lucieno

Dath love my daughter, and she loveth him, or both dissimulate thy affected ones. Shakespeare.

In vain on the dissimulated, mockers tongue be not to re-establish linear succession.

Colloquy.

To DISSECT, v. a. [dissimulate, Latin; disembowel, disembowel, and probably dissolves, old French.] 1. To hide under false appearance; to conceal; to pretend that not to be which really is.

She answered, that her soul was God's; and touching her faith, as she could not change, so she would not dissemble it.

Heywood.

2. To pretend that to be which is not.

This is not the true significancy. Your son Lucieno

Dath love my daughter, and she loveth him, or both dissimulate thy affected ones. Shakespeare.

In vain on the dissimulated, mockers tongue be not to re-establish linear succession.

Colloquy.

To DISSECT, v. a. [dissimulate, Latin; disembowel, disembowel, and probably dissolves, old French.] 1. To hide under false appearance; to conceal; to pretend that not to be which really is.

She answered, that her soul was God's; and touching her faith, as she could not change, so she would not dissemble it.

Heywood.

2. To pretend that to be which is not.

This is not the true significancy. Your son Lucieno

Dath love my daughter, and she loveth him, or both dissimulate thy affected ones. Shakespeare.

In vain on the dissimulated, mockers tongue be not to re-establish linear succession.

Colloquy.

To DISSECT, v. a. [dissimulate, Latin; disembowel, disembowel, and probably dissolves, old French.] 1. To hide under false appearance; to conceal; to pretend that not to be which really is.

She answered, that her soul was God's; and touching her faith, as she could not change, so she would not dissemble it.

Heywood.

2. To pretend that to be which is not.

This is not the true significancy. Your son Lucieno

Dath love my daughter, and she loveth him, or both dissimulate thy affected ones. Shakespeare.

In vain on the dissimulated, mockers tongue be not to re-establish linear succession.

Colloquy.

To DISSECT, v. a. [dissimulate, Latin; disembowel, disembowel, and probably dissolves, old French.] 1. To hide under false appearance; to conceal; to pretend that not to be which really is.

She answered, that her soul was God's; and touching her faith, as she could not change, so she would not dissemble it.

Heywood.

2. To pretend that to be which is not.

This is not the true significancy. Your son Lucieno

Dath love my daughter, and she loveth him, or both dissimulate thy affected ones. Shakespeare.

In vain on the dissimulated, mockers tongue be not to re-establish linear succession.

Colloquy.
That most of them never met again, but were forever parted by Sulney.

The different of fleets hath been the and level the mountainous countries.

Different your united strength,
And part your mingled colours once again. Beul.

To faint and disturb, to Dispersal, n. f. [Effusio, Latin.] Dissi-cord; disagreement.

Dispersion, n. f. [Effusio, Latin.] The act of dispersing foam.

Dispersion, n. f. [Effusio, Latin.] The act of dispersing foam.

To DISSIPATE, v. a. [Dispersio, Lat.

1. To scatter every water; to disperse.

The heat at length grows so great, that it gives and disperse the heat of the corals, which it brought.

Woodward's Natural History.

2. To scatter the attention.

This slavery to his passion produced a life in-regular and disordered.

Savage's Life.

3. To spend a fortune.

The wherry that contains

Of dispersed wealth the poor remain,

Lincoln.

Disipation, n. f. [Dispersio, Latin.

1. The act of dispersion.

The effect of heat is so advanced when it worketh upon a body without loss or disfision of the matter. Bacon.

Abraham was contemporary with Paley, in which the famous works of mankind, and disunion of languages, happened.

Holt's Origin of Mankind.

2. The state of being dispersed.

Now faw disfion follow'd, and false rout. Milton.

Where the earth contains nitre within it, if that heat which is continually Streaming out of the earth be prestured, its dispersion prevented, and the cold kept off by some building, this stone is ordinarilie sufficient to raise up the mire.

Woodward.

3. Scattered attention.

I have begun two or three letters to you by scatter and burnt from dissolving them by a thousand evaporation and dissipations. Swift.

To DlS.OCIATE, v. a. [Dispersio, Lat.

To separate; to disperse; to part.

In the dissolving action, even of the gentlest fire, upon a concrete, there perhaps vanish some inner and concealed particles, whose presence was a requisite to contain the concrete under such a determinative form. Boyle.

Dissimulable, adj. [from dissoluble.] Ca-capable of dissolving; liable to be melted.

Such things as are not dissoluble by the moisture of the tongue, are not upon the table.

Newton.

Dissoluble, adj. [Effusio, Latin.] Capacable of separation; having one part separable from another by heat or moisture.

Nodules, repos'd in cliffs amongst the earth, being hard and not fit dissoluble, are left behind.

Woodward's Natural History.

Dissolubility, n. f. [from dissoluble.] Liable to suffer a dissusion of parts by heat or moisture; capacity of being dissolved.

Bodies seem to have an intrinsic principle of alteration, or corruption, from the dissolubility of their parts, and the coalition of several particles endured with contrary and destructive qualities each to other.

Holt's Origin of Mankind.

To DISSOLVE, v. a. [Effusio, Latin.

1. To dissolve the essence of any thing by dissolving the parts with heat or moisture; to melt; to liquefy.

I have heard of archersolv'd in a truce.

Dyson.
A giant huge and tall,
Who him diurnated, dissipate, diversify.
Unawares surpris'd.
Fair Rosin.
Such stood in a narrow lane,
And bust our watch; and rob our passengers;
While he, young, wander, and effeminate boy.
Takes on the point of honor, to support
So dissipated a crew. Shakespeare's Richard II.
A man of little gravity, or dissidence in pleasures; yet, sometimes almost dissipated. Haywood.
They cool'd in zeal,
Thenceforth shall practise how to live fecund,
Without dissipation, on what their hearts.
Shall cause them to enjoy.
Milton.
The true spirit of religion banishes indeed all levity of behaviour, all vicious and dissipate mirth; but, in exchanges, fills the mind with a perpetual fear; by which fear is meant the fear of the divinity of matters.
The beauty of religion the most dissipate are forced to acknowledge. Rogers.

Dissolutely. adv. [from dissipate.]
Loosely; in debauchery; with no restraint.
Whereas men have lived dissipately and unrighteous, thou hast torment them with their own abominations. Wisdom.

Dissoluteness. n. f. [from dissipate.]
Lascivious; laxity of manners; debauchery.
If we took into the common management, we shall have reason to wonder, in the great dissipate-ness of manners which the world complains of, those there are one footstep at all left of virtue. Locke.

Dissolution. n. f. [dissipate, Latin.]
1. The act of liquefying by heat or moisture.
2. The state of being liquefied.
3. The state of melting away; liquefaction.
I am as subject to heat as butter; a man of continual dissipation and thaw. Shakespeare's Merry Wives of Windsor.
4. Deflation of any thing by the separation of its parts.
The elements were at perfect union in his body; and their contrary qualities formed not for the dissipation of the compound, but the variety of the compound. Swift.
5. The substance formed by dissolving any body.
Weigh iron and aqua-fortis severally; then dissolve the iron in the aqua-fortis, and weigh the dissolution. Bacon.
6. Death; the resolution of the body into its constituent elements.
The life of man is always either increasing towards rigens and perfection, or declining and decreasing towards rottenness and dissipation. Raleigh's History.
We expected immediate dissolution, which we thought was meant by death that day. Milton's Par. Lost.
7. Destruction.
He determined to make a pretense dissolution of the world. Hinde.
He thinks shall come,
When this world's dissolution shall be ripe. Milton.
We shall seem to mankind thuslay aside all care of provisions by agriculture or commerce, because possibly the dissolution of the world may happen in the next moment. Berkeley.
8. Breach or ruin of any thing compounded or united.
It makes a man consider of wealth and power. Why let him read of those france and unexplicable dissolutions of the great monarchies and governments of the world. Swift.
9. The act of breaking up an assembly.
10. Loose ness of manners; laxity; remission; dissipation, they be dissolvables; whether spondee, toechor, or iambic, it matters not. Dryden.

Dissistaff. n. f. [borce, Sax.]
1. The fluff from which the flax is drawn in spinning.
In form, and Boreas never ruled fleet.
Who Neptune's web on dancer's dissipate spins,
With greater power than she did make them wend
Each way, as she age's prank'd d'board. Sidney.
Weave thou to end this web which I begin
I will the dissipate hold, come thou and spin. Fair.
Ran Col. our dogs, and Talbot, with the band;
And Mallin, with her dissipate in her hand. Dryden.
2. It is used as an emblem of the female
So the French say, The Crown of France never falls to the dissipate;
In my civil government some say the crook,
Some say the dissipate, was too busy.
Howel's England's Train.
See my royal master murder'd
His crown usurp'd, a dissipate in the throne. Dryden.

Distaff-thistle. n. f. A species of thistle.

To Distain. v. a. [dis and gain.]
1. To slant; to tinge with an adventitious colour.
Nor ceas'd his arrows, till the shady plain
Sev'n mighty bodies with their blood dissistain.
Dryden's Flaya.
Place on their heads that crown dissistain'd with gars,
Which those dire hands from my slain father wore.
Dryden.

2. To blot; to fully with insanity.
He understood,
That lady, whom I had to me assign'd,
Had both dissistain'd her honourable blood,
And else the faith which he to me did bind. Fairy Queen.
The worthinesse of prais'd dissistain his worth,
If he that 's prais'd himself bring the praiseth forth.
Shakespeare.
Some theologians define places erected for reliigion, by defacing oppressions, dissipating their professions by publishing odious untruths upon rep-port of others. Sir J. Heywood.

Distance. n. f. [distance, Fr. dissistant, Latin.]
1. Distance is space considered barely in length between any two things, without considering any thing else between them. Locke.
It is very cheap, notwithstanding the great dis-
(1) See Addin.
It is very cheap, notwithstanding the great dis-
(2) Addin.
As he lived but a few miles distance from her father's house, he had frequent opportunities of see-
(3) Addin.
2. Remoteness in place.
(4) See Addin.
(5) See Addin.
(6) See Addin.

Cubik is still dissip't to give us terms,
And waits at distance till he hears from Cato.
Addi.
These dwell at such convenient distance,
That each may give his friend assistance. Prior.
3. The space kept between two antagonists in fencing.
We come to see fight; to see thy paths, thy rock, thy reveries, thy distance.
Shakespeare's Merry Wives of Windsor.
Contra-
4. Contrariety; opposition.
(5) See Addin.
(6) See Addin.
(7) See Addin.
(8) See Addin.
(9) See Addin.
(10) See Addin.

Cubik is still dissip't to give us terms,
And waits at distance till he hears from Cato.
Addi.
These dwell at such convenient distance,
That each may give his friend assistance. Prior.
3. The space kept between two antagonists in fencing.
We come to see fight; to see thy paths, thy rock, thy reveries, thy distance.
Shakespeare's Merry Wives of Windsor.
Contra-
4. Contrariety; opposition.
(5) See Addin.
(6) See Addin.
(7) See Addin.
(8) See Addin.
(9) See Addin.
(10) See Addin.

Cubik is still dissip't to give us terms,
And waits at distance till he hears from Cato.
Addi.
These dwell at such convenient distance,
That each may give his friend assistance. Prior.
3. The space kept between two antagonists in fencing.
We come to see fight; to see thy paths, thy rock, thy reveries, thy distance.
Shakespeare's Merry Wives of Windsor.
Contra-
4. Contrariety; opposition.
(5) See Addin.
(6) See Addin.
(7) See Addin.
(8) See Addin.
(9) See Addin.
(10) See Addin.

Cubik is still dissip't to give us terms,
And waits at distance till he hears from Cato.
Addi.
These dwell at such convenient distance,
That each may give his friend assistance. Prior.
3. The space kept between two antagonists in fencing.
We come to see fight; to see thy paths, thy rock, thy reveries, thy distance.
Shakespeare's Merry Wives of Windsor.
Contra-
4. Contrariety; opposition.
(5) See Addin.
(6) See Addin.
(7) See Addin.
(8) See Addin.
(9) See Addin.
(10) See Addin.

Cubik is still dissip't to give us terms,
And waits at distance till he hears from Cato.
Addi.
To DISTANCE, v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To place remotely; to throw off from the view. That which gives a relcavo to a bowl, is the quick lights, or white, which appears to be on the side nearest to us, and the block by consequence distances the object. Dryden's Defence.
2. To leave behind at a race the length of a distance; to conquer in a race with great superiority. Each daring lover, with adventurous pace, Pursued his wish in the dang'rous race; Like the vaulting wall bounding damsel's dites, Strains to the goal; the distance'd lover dies. Gay.

Distant, adj. [distant, Latin.]
Remote; not near. This heaven which we behold Distant to high. Milton.
I felt, Though distant from the worlds between. Milton. The world's rock the Paramic marble throne, And seem'd to distant fragments of old plate. Dryden's Defence.

Distasteful, adj. [distaste and full.]
1. Nautious to the palate; disgusting. What to one palate is sweet and delicious, to another is odious and distasteful. Dryden.

Distasteful, n. f. [dist and temper.]
1. A disproportioned mixture of parts; want of a due temper of ingredients. A disease; a malady; the pestilence pre- dominance of one thing; to dispos- sition; in the body, when a man is continually turning and toil ing. Shakspeare's Henry VI.
2. Want of due temperature. It was a reasonable conjecture, that those coun- tries which were situated directly under the tropic, were of a distemper unfavorable. Addison's Spectator.

Distaste, n. f. [dis and rage.]
1. Aversion of the palate; distaste; dis- gust. It gives the reason of the distaste of fatuity, and of the pleasure in novelty in men and animals. Bacon's Essays.
2. Dislike; uneasiness. Prosperity is not without many fears and disfavors, and adversity is not without comfort and hopes. Bacon's Essays.

Disorder; uneasiness.
Three of distaste, Which puts some of the storms in us; but I cannot name the disasters, and it is sought Of you that yet are well. Shakespeare, Winter's Tale.

Disorder; uneasiness.
Still as you rife, in the leaves, and some, Find no dissensus while 'tis chang'd by you. Waller.

Disorder; uneasiness.

Disorder, n. f. [dis and temper.]
1. To disease. Young men to argue a distemper'd head, So soon to bid good-morrow to thy bed. Shakespeare's Rome and Juliet.
2. To disorder. In madness, Being full of supper and dissembling draughts, Upon malicious bravery, doth come But tis not my guilt. Shakespeare's Othello. He deprived himself one night with long sleep his History of Ireland.
3. To disturb; to fill with perturbation; to ruffle. Thou see'st, me much distempered in my mind; Pull'd back, and then push'd forward to be kind. Dryden.

Distemperate, adj. [dis and temperate.]
Immoderate. Aquinas objecteth the disemperate heat, which he apprehends to be in all places directly over the sun. Rayleigh's History.

Distemperance, n. f. [from disem- perance.]
1. Intemperateness; excess of heat or cold; or other qualities. Through this disemperance we fee The sears alter, hourly, heated fruel. Dryden. Fall in the ethrip of the crimson rote. Shakspeare. They were consumed by the discommodities of the country, and the disemperance of the air. Chaucer.

Disviolent tumultuous; outrageous.

Disturbation; uneasiness; outrageous.

Diseases; uneasiness.

Perturbation of the mind. They entails doth me affre. Thou art uproot'd by some disemperance. Shak.
4. Confusion; commixture of contrarieties; a loss of regularity. At your birth Our grandchild earth, with this disemperance, In passion flack. Shakespeare's Henry V. Told how the world fell into this disem- perance. Shak. And how in great disemperance did grow. Daniel.

To DEISTEND, v. a. [deistant, Latin.]
To stretch out in breadth. Avoid enormous heights of green trees, as well as irregular forms; and the contrary faults, of low disemper'd fronts, is at last. Thus all day long the full dissensus clouds Indulge their genial root, and
DIS

DISTINCT, part. pass. [distant, Lati.] Spread. Not used.

Some others were new driven and distant into great lengths.

Some in round plaster, with nouveau mantles.

DISTINCT, n. s. [from distinct.] The space through which any thing is spread; breadth. Not much in use.

These arcs are the girdleleaf, which, keeping precisely the same height, and yet be dissolved one fourteenth part longer; which addition or dissolve will confer much to their beauty, and de-state but little from their strength.

DISTINCTION, n. s. [distinctio, Lat.]

1. The act of stretching; state of things stretched.

Wind and distillation of the bowels are signs of a bad distillation in the intestines; for in dead animals, when there is no digestion at all, the disti-nation is in the greatest extremity.

2. Breadth; space occupied by the thing distended.

3. The act of separating one part from another; diversification.

Our legs do labour more in elevation than in distingation.

DISTINGUISH, v. a. [dis and throne.]

To dethrone; to depose from sovereignty. Not used.

By his death it he recovered;
But Periander and Vigen him distinguished.

Fairy Queens, Act I, Sc. 1.

DISTILL, v. a. [disil, Lati.] A couple; a couple of lines; an epigram confining only of two verses.

The French compare anagrams, by themselves, to goats; but when they are cast into a distill, or epigram, to gems embossed in enamelled gold.

Camillus's Remain.

The bard, whose distill all command,
In power, a fervent; out of power, a friend.

Pe. 72.

DISTILLER, n. s. [from distill.] 1. One who practises the art or trade of distilling.

For spirit of faith to a very eminent distill of it.

Boyle.

2. One who makes and sells pernicious and inflammatory spirits.

DISTILLMENT, n. s. [from distill.] That which is drawn by distillation; that which drops. A word formerly used, but now obsolete.

Upon my secure hour thy uncle floes,
And in the porches of mine ears did pour
The leprous distillments. St. John's Hamlet.

DISTINCT, adj. [distinctio, Lat.]

1. Different; not the same in number or in kind.

Belarrass faith, it is idlatry to give the fame worship to an image which is due to God. Vazquez faith, it is idlatry to give distill worship; therefore, if a man would avoid idlatry, he must give none at all.

Fatherhood and property are distinct titles, and began properly, upon Adam's death, to be in dis-distinct persons.

<. Dist. 2. Different; separate; being apart, not conjunct.

The intention was, that the two armies, which marched out together, should afterwards be dis-cer.

Clarendon.

Men have immortal spirits, capable of a pleasurable and happiness distinct from that of our bodies.

Tillotson.

3. Clear; unconfused; heav'n is high;
High and red, and the sea, from thence distinct.

Each thing on earth.

Milton.

4. Spotted; variegated.

Tempestuous fell.

His arrows from the fourfold vise'd four,

Distill'd with eyes; and from the living wheels
Distill'd alike with multitude of eyes.

Milton.

5. Marked out; specified.

Dominion hold
Over all living things that move on'th earth,
Wherefore created; for no place
Is yet distinct by name.

D. Distinction, n. s. [distinctio, Lat.]

1. The act of distincting one as preferable to the other.

In the wind and tempest's frown

Distillation, with a broad and powerful face.

Putting at all, winnows the light away.

Shake. 2. Note of difference.

3. Honourable note of superiority.

4. That by which one differs from another.

This faculty of reception puts the distinctness between the animal kingdom, and the inferior parts of matter.

5. Difference regarded; preference or neglected in comparison with something else.

They, women, wives, without distinction fall;
The foregoing delays, love, comes on, and covers all.

This fierce abridgment

Hath to it circumstantial branch, which Distillation should be rich in.

Shake. Cymbeline.

7. Division into different parts.

The distillation of tragedy into acts was not known; or, if it were, it is yet so darkly delivered to us, that we cannot mark it.

Dryden or Dramatic Poety.

8. Notation of difference between things feemingly the same.

The mixture of those things by speech, which by nature are divided, is the mother of all error:
In taking away these bounds, which confine breath, distillation is requisite.

Hook.

Lawfulness cannot be handled without limitations and distinctions.

Banc's Nat. Hist.

This will puzzle your logic and distinctions to answer it.

Dranch's Ophrey.

D. Distention.

D. Distinction, adj. [from distinct.]

1. That which marks distinction or difference.

From the natural hour, distinctive names,
One common right the great and lovely claims.

Pe. 73.

2. Having the power to distinguish and discern; judicious.

Credulous and vulgar auditors readily believe, and the more judicious and distinctive heads do not reject it.

Brown.

DISTINGUISH, v. a. [from distinct.]

Particularly; not confusedly.

I did all my pilgrimage dilate,
Whereof by parcels he had somehow heard,
But not distinguishably.

Shakespeare's Orbis.

DISTINCTLY, adv. [from distinct.] 1. Not confusedly; without the confusion of one part with another.

To make an echo that will report three, or four, or five words distinctly, it is requisite that the body percussing be a good distance off. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

On it's fides it was bound pretty distinctly, but on its ends very confusedly and indistinctly.

Newton's Optics.

2. Plainly; clearly.

The object I could find distinctly view,
Was tall freight trees, which on the waters flow.

Dryden.

After the light of the sun was a little worn off my eyes, I could see all the parts of it distinctly by a glimmering reflection that played upon them from the surface of the water.

Add. 9.

DISTINCNESS, n. s. [from distinct.]

1. Nice observation of the difference between different things.

The membranes at the humours of the eye are perfectly pellucid, and void of colour, for the reception, and for the distinctness of vision.

Ray's Genet.

2. Such separation of things as makes them easy to be separately observed.

To distinguish, v. a. [disjungere, Lat.]

1. To note the diversity of things.

4 B. Rightly
Rightly to distinguish, is, by conceit of the mind, to judge things different in nature, and to discern which are the same, and which different.

2. To separate from others by some mark of honour or preference. They distinguish my poems from those of other men, and have made me their peculiar care. Dryd.

Let us resolve that roll with distrest eye, Which from the mire of falseness guide Flamen. To distinguish sth. adv. [from distinguishing] With distinction; with some mark of eminent preference.

3. To divide by proper notes of diversity. For as distinguishing the causes of the flood into those that belong to the heavens, and those that belong to the earth, the rains, and the abyss. Locke's Theory.

4. To know one from another by any mark or note of difference. So long as he could make me, with his eye or hand, Distinguish him from others, he did keep the deck. Shakespeare's Cymbeline.

We have not yet been seen in any house, Nor can we be distinguishing, by our face, For man or matter. Shakespeare, Tim. of the Shrew. By our reason we are enabled to distinguish good from evil, as well as truth from falsehood. Bacon's Essays.

5. To discern critically; to judge. Sweet prince, the untainted virtue of your years Hath not yet div'd into the world's deceit; Nor more can you distinguish a man, Than of his outward show! Shakespeare, Richard III. To discern critically.

6. To constitute or determine; to speculate; to make different from another.

St. Paul's Epistles contain nothing but points of Christian instruction, amongst which he seldom fails to enlarge on the great and distinguishing doctrines of our holy religion. Locke.

7. To make known or eminent. To distinguish. v. n. To make distinction; to find or shew the difference. He would wisely distinguish between the profit of the merchant and the gain of the kingdom. Shakespeare's Comedy of Errors.

The readers must learn by all means to distinguish between proverbs, and those polite speeches which beautifully conversate. Swift.

Distinguishable. adj. [from distinguishing.]

1. Capable of being distinguished; capable of being known, or made known, by notes of diversity.

Impeccant, they left a race behind Like to themselves, distinguishable leaves From Gentiles, but by circumcision vain. Milton.

The whole art of distinguishing, as it relates to perception and decision, to choice and pursuit, or averse, is distinguishable to us. Hale's Origin of Mankind.

I shall distribute duty into principal and eminent parts, distinguishable as they relate to God, our neighbour, and ourselves. Government of the Tongue.

Being distinguished in aqueous juices, it is by the eye distinguishable from the edible body. Boyle.

In fine, it is impossible to give any complete idea of a subject, which, in itself uncommunicable, contains nothing but one uniform appearance, or conception in the mind, and is not distinguishable into different ideas.

2. Worthy of note; worthy of regard.

I would endeavour that my betters should think me by the merit of something distinguishable, instead of my thinking them.

Swift.

Distinguished. participial adj. [from distinguishing.] Eminent; transcendent; extraordinary.

For sins committed, with many aggravations of guilt, the furnace of wrath will be seven times hotter, and burn with a distinguishable fury. Rogers.

A complex idea, but in its favourite line With says so strongly distinguishing'd, and divine. Pope's Odyssey.

Distinguished. n. f. [from distinguishing.]

1. A judicious observer; one that accurately discerns one thing from another.

If writers be just to the memory of Charles II, they cannot deny him to be a man of known kind, and a perfect distinguishing of their talents. Dryden.

2. He that separates one thing from another by proper marks of diversity.

Let us admire the wisdom of God in this distinguishing of times, and villains from the fan. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

Distinguishingly, adv. [from distinguishing.] With distinction; with some mark of eminent preference.

Some call me a Tory, because the heads of that party have been distinguishably favourable to me. Pope.

Distinguishment, n. f. [from distinguishing.] Distinction; observation of difference.

To make corrections upon the following reports, I considered whether any credit at all were to be given to their distinguishing traits. Grant's Bills of Mortality.

To DISTORTE. v. a. [distortus, Lat.] 1. To wringe; to twist; to deform by irregular motions.

I see her face each nauzous draught, And fo obligingly am I am bough'd. I bleat the hand from whence they came, Nor dare I part my face for shame. Swift.

Now mortals partake his lovely form. Swift.

2. To put out of the true direction or pollice.

With fear and pain Distorted, all my mother shape thus grew. Transform'd. Wuth all amotions, envy and revenge, so drawn I and distorts the understandings of men. Tilton.

3. To wrest from the true meaning.

Something must be distorted before the intent of the divine indite. Pearson on Poetry.

Distortion. n. f. [distortus, Lat.] Irregular motion by which the face is wrinkled, or the parts disordered.

By his distortions he reveals hiselas. He by his tears and by his sighs complaints. Prior.

In England we see people lulled asleep with solid and elaborate diversions of piety, who would be warmed and transported out of themselves by the bellowings and disquisitions of enthusiasm. Addison's Spectator.

To DISTRACT. v. a. part. past. distracted; distraitly; anciently distracted; and sometimes dijtrasted. [distrautus, Lat.] 1. To pull different ways at once.

The needle endeavors to conform unto the mediam; but, being distracted, driven that way where the greater and powerfuller part of the earth is placed. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

2. To separate; to divide.

By far, by sea.

—Most worthy Sir, you therein throw away The absolute friendship you have by land; Distraits your army, which doth much confust Of war—my ador'd, is no less wherefore, Act. and Clotp. 3. To turn from a single direction towards various points.

If he cannot wholly avoid the observer of the fever, he hopes to dijtray it by a multiplicity of the object. Swift.

4. To fill the mind with contrary considerations; to perplex; to confound; to harass.

While I suffer the terrors I am dijtrasted. Pindar. Come, coulo, canst thou quench, and change thy colour? Murder thy breath in middle of a wood, And then again begin, and stop again, As if thouwert dijtrayed and mad with terror? Shakespeare, Richard III.

It would burst forth; but I recover breath, And hence dijtray to know what I utter. Dryden's All for Love.

Distracted. adj. [from distracting.]

Cauliflower perplexity. Where any unmindful through distracting cares, I've stretched my arms, and touched him unaware. Dryden.

To DISTRAIN. v. a. [from distracting, Latin.]

1. To seize; to lay hold on as an indemnification for debt.
Of that peculiar mixture out of which the bodies of vegetables and animals are formed, the water in the common vehicle and distributor to the parts of those bodies. Woodward.

Distribution. n. f. [distributed, Lat.]
1. The act of distributing or dealing out to others; dispensation.

Of great riches there is no real use, except it be in the distribution. Bacon's Essays.

Providence has made an equal distribution of natural gifts, whereas each creature generally has a share. L'Éléphant.

Every man in a great station would imitate the queen in the distribution of offices in his disfavor. Sir W. Temple.

2. Act of giving in charity.

Let us govern our charitable distributions by this pattern of nature, and maintain a mutual circulation of benefits and returns. Atterbury.

3. [In logic.] As an integral whole is distinguished into its several parts by division; so the word distribution is most properly used, when we distinguish a universal whole into its several kinds of species. Watts.

Distributive. adj. [from distribute.]
1. That which is employed in assigning to others their portions; as, distributive justice, that which allotts each to his sentence or claim.

If justice will take all, and nothing give, justice-making is not distributive. Dryden.

Observe the distributive justice of the authors, which is constantly applied to the punishment of virtue, and the reward of vice, directly opposite to the rules of their best critics. Swift.

2. That which assigns the various species of a general term.

Distributively. adv. [from distributive.]
1. By distribution.

2. Singly; particularly.

Although we cannot be free from all fin collectively, in facts, that no part thereof shall be found inherent in us; yet, distributively as the last, all great and grievous actual offences, as they offer themselves one by one, both may and ought to be by all means avoided. Hooker.

3. In a manner that expresses singly all the particulars included in a general term; not collectively.

An universal term is sometimes taken collectively for all its particular ideas united together; and sometimes distributively, meaning each of them singly and alone. Locke.

District. n. f. [districtus, Latin.]
1. The circuit or territory within which a man may be compelled to appearance. Gower.

2. Circuit of authority; province.

His governors, who formed themselves upon the example of their grand monarch, prattled all the arts of despotic government in their respective districts. Addison.

With item distributum, to their own district, to drive the future crowds.

Distr. m. f. [from the verb.]
1. Dificredit; loss of credit; loss of confidence.

To me reproach.

Rather belong, dishonor, and all disgrace. Milton.

2. Suffocation; want of faith; want of confidence in another.

You doubt not me; nor have I spent my blood, To have my faith no better understood: Your soul's above the baftards of dishonor. Nothing but love could make you so unjust. Dryd.

Distr. adj. [drut, and full.]
1. Apt to distrust; Iustitious.

Generally offer doubtful thoughts in their breasts. Rape. Of Senses.

2. Not confident; deficient.

The great corruptors of divorce have never been so distrustful of themselves. Gower. Of the Tongue.

3. Distrustful; of himself; modest; timorous.

Distrustful words with modest caution speaks; But being once said in full vailis breaks. Pope.

Distr. adj. [from distrustful.]
In a distrustful manner.

The youth with wants and hardships must engage.

Pride and rebellious most distrust his age. Prior.

Distr. to confound; to put into irregular motions.

3. To interrupt; to hinder: as, care distrusts study.

4. To turn off from any direction: with from. This is not usual.

It oft-times may succeed, to as perhaps shall give him, if I find not; and distrust must countenance their delinquent. Milton.

Distr. n. f. [from distrustful.]
Confusion; tumultuary emotion.

Influent without distrust they took alarm, And onward move embattled. Milton.

Distr. n. f. [from distrustful.]
Perplexity; interruption of a settled state.

The denomination of money concerns trade, and the alteration of that necessity brings disturbances to it. Locke.

2. Confusion; disorder of thoughts.

They can survey a variety of complicated ideas without fatigue or disturbance. Watts on the Mind.

Distr. n. f. [from distrustful.]
3. Tumult; violation of peace.

This mischief had not then befallen, and more that shall befall: innumerable.

Distrusts on earth through female fasces. Milton.

Distr. n. f. [from distrustful.]
1. A violator of peace; he that causes tumults and public disorders.

He flands in the fight both of God and men most justly blameable, as a needless disturber of the peace of God's church, and an author of dissension. Hooker.

Men that make an insult upon society, ought to be humbled, as disturbers of the public tranquillity. Addison.

Ye great disturbers, who in endless noise, In blood and horror, seek unnatural joys; For what is all this bustle, but to thin Thofe thoughts with which you dare not alone? Granville.

4. B 2

2. He
To DISJOINT. v. a. [dis and unite.] 1. Separation; disjunction. Bob. Reft is left oppofite to motion, the immediate caufe of difunion. Vexillifn. Disunion, the diaftrict of the corporal principles, and the vital caufe of death. Shay. Correlated Cosmos. Let not peace be made before the difunion of France and Spain. Add.4n's State of the War. The strength of it will join infift to France, and grow the closer to it by its difunion from the refh. Add.4n's on the War.

2. Breach of concord.

To DISUNITE. v. a. [dis and unite.] 1. To separate; to divide. Hail. The breach they then divide, and difunite the ribs and limbs. Pope's Odifey. 2. To part friends or allies. Hail. Because they difunite, to become separate. While every particular member of the publick provides foarly for itself, the feparation of the body publick do difunite and defect, and do become unable to support the whole. South. DISUNITY. n. f. [dis and unity.] A state of actual feparation. Disunity is the natural property of matter, which is nothing else but an infinite confufion of pifical monads. More. DISUAS'GE. n. f. [dis and ufanage.] The gradual ceafation of ufe or ufanage. They cut off prefently fuch things as might be extinguifhed without danger, leaving the refh to be abolished by diufage through track of time. Hook. DISUDE. n. f. [dis and ude.] 1. Ceflation of ufe; defufedil; want of practice. The diufe of the tongue is the nief effehtial reftoration. Add.4n's Guardian. 2. Ceflation of ufanage. The obligation upon the lands did not prohibite, or come into diufage, but by fifty confecutive years. Abuvtons.

To DISUSE. v. a. [dis and ufe.] 1. To ceafe to make ufe of. No war, now inverts the courfe As nature's institutions are in force, Unaccompanied, though diufed. Dryden's Fabick. Pray in arms, diufed inverts his limbs decay'd. Dryden. 2. To disaffust: with from or to a more properly from. Diufe me from the quafy pain Of being belov'd and living. Davis.

D'he shall his troops for fighting fields prepare, Diffus'd to toils and triumphs of the war. Dryden's Aegid. To DISVOUCH. v. a. [dis and vouch.] To defray the credit of; to contradict. Every letter he hath writ hath difcharged another. Shakespeare. DISVULSED. adj. [dis and vuit.] Deprived of the wits; mad; diftracted. A word not in ufe. She ran away alone; Which when they heard, there was not one But half a being after to be got. As they had been disvulued. Dryden's Nymphidia. DIT. n. f. [dictch, Dutch.] A ditty; a poem; a tune. Obloque. No bird but did her flite notes twinge; No fong but did contain a lovely wifl. Fairy Queen. DITATION. n. f. [dictation, Latin.] The art of enriching. Those eastern authors intended rather homage than ditation; the befieled virgin comes in the form of power. Hall's Conftitution. DITCH. n. f. [biech, Saxox; diich, Erft.] 1. A trench cut in the ground, between uffle. Some asked for manors, others for acres that lay convenient for them; that he would pull down his fences, and level his ditches. Adamf.4n's History of John Bull. Sudden the ditches foall, the meadows swim. Thomson. 2. Any long narrow receptacle of water; used fometimes of a fmall river in con- tempt. In the great plagues they were bean, in divers ditches and low grounds about London, many tofts that had take three inches long. Bacon. 3. The moat with which a fortrefs is fur- rounded. The ditches, fuch as they were, were altogether dry, and easy to be passed over. Kneiff. 4. Ditch is ufed, in combination, in any thing worthless, or thrown away into ditches. Poor Tom, when the foul ftrange races, can- doung for fallets, fwallows the old raf, and the dog. Shakespeare. To DITCH. v. n. [from the noun.] To make a ditch. I have employed my time, besides ditching, in finifhing my travels. Swift. DITCHIFIED. adj. [ditch'd and de- true'd.] Brought forth in a ditch. Finger of birth-branfed babe, Ditch-delivered's by a drab. Shad. Ditchify'd. TITCHER. n. f. [from ditch.] One who digs ditches. You merit your employment daily, Our thresher, ditches, gard'ner, bally. Swift. DITHYRAMBICK. n. f. [dithyrambick, Latin.] 1. A fong in honour of Bacchus; in which, ancently, and now among the Italians, the diftration of ebfuity is imitated. 2. Any poem written with wildnes and enthufiafm. DITHYRAMBICK. adj. Wild; enthufiafmick. Pindar does new words and figures roll Down his impetuours dithyrambick tide. Cowley. DIT'TANDER. n. f. The fame with pere- verpt. DIT'TANY. n. f. [ditlyamus, Latin.] Dityann hath been reformed, for many ages, upon the account of its foreign qualities in medicines. It is generally brought over dry from the Levant. Millar.

DIV.

Vigil reports of dityann, that the wild goat eats it when they are hot with darns. More's Antidote againsstdiftion. DIT'TED. adj. [from ditly.] Sung; ad- apted to multyce. He blow'd with his foot pipe, and smooth ditlyed long. Well knows to fill the wild winds when they roar. Milton. DITTY. n. f. [dictch, Dutch.] A poem to be sung; a fong. Although we lay altogether aside the confederation of ditty or matter, as we have not been unfpeakable to the power of sounds being framed in due fort, and carried from the ear to the spiritual faculties of our souls, it, by a native - prudence and efficacy, greatly available to bring to a perfect temper whatsoever is there touch. Hooker. Being young, I framed to the harp. Many an English ditty lovely well, And gave the tongue a helpfull ornament. Shakespeare. Strike the melodious harp, shrill timbres ring, And to the warbling lute ditty fings. Sandys. His annual wound in Lebanon, allard The Syrian damfels to lament his fate. In amorous ditties, all a summer's day. Milton. Mean while the rural ditties were not mute, Temper'd to the eaten frow; Rough fayer's ditties. Milton. They will be fighting and finging under thy in- exorable windows lamentable ditties, and call thee cruel. Dryden. DIVAN. n. f. [An Arabic or Turkish word.] 1. The council of the Oriental princes. 2. Any council assembled: used commonly in a fene of dillke. Forth rudi'd in baftle the great confulting peers, Ra'did from the dark dawn, and with like joy Congratulating approach'd him. Milton. Swift to the queen the herald Medon ran, Who heard the confult of the ditte dawn. Pope's Odyssey.

To DIVARICATE. v. n. [divaricats, Latin.] To be parted into two; to be divided. In the partitions are tranfayed across one of them divaricats into two, and another into feveral fmall ones. Westwood. To DIVARICATE. v. a. To divide into two. A slender pipe is produced forward towards the throat, whereunto it is at last inferted, and is there divaricats, after the fame manner as the spermac- tick vefles. Gree. DIVARICATION. n. f. [divaricats, Lat.] 1. Partition into two. Dogs, running before their matters, will stop at a divarication of the way, till they fee which hand: their matters will take. Ray. 2. Division of opinions. To take away all doubts, or any probable divarication, the curfe is plainly infcribed. Brown's Fulgar Errours. To DIVE. v. n. [bippa, Saxon.] 1. To fink voluntarily under water. I am not yet informed, whether when a diver drowns, having his eyes open, and withmuth upon his back, he fees things in the air greater or lit. Bacon's Natural History. Around our pole the fiery dragon glides, And, like a winding stream, the bears divides, The lea and the lake, by joint and synant of furface. Asher to dive beneath the fulhorn fees. Dryden's Futed. That the air in the blood-vessels of live bodies has a communicatin after the outward air, I think, terms plain, from the experiments of hu- man creatures being able to bear air of much greater density in diving, and of much life upon the tops of mountains, provided the changes he made gradually. Adamf.4n's. 2. To...
DIVERSiFICATION, n. s. [from diversify].
1. The act of changing forms or qualities.
   If you consider how variously several things may be compounded, you will not wonder that such fruitful principles, or manners of diversification, should generate differing colours.

DIVERSiFY, v. a. [dive'rify, prp.]
1. To make different from another; to distinguish; to discriminate.

Divers friends thought it strange, that a white dog should acquire a rich colour upon the effusion of spring-water.

Boyse on Colours.

DIVERSiFY, n. s. [from diversify, v. a.]
1. Difference; dissimilitude; unlikeness.
   Then is there in this diversity no contrariety.

DIVERSION, n. s. [diver'sion].
1. The act of turning anything off from its course.

Cut off the tops, and pulling off the buds, work retarding of the fruit a time and diversification of it to the fruits that were not forward.

Bacon's Natural History.

We have divers examples in the church of such as by fear, being compelled to sacrifice to strange gods, were rejected, and kept the office of preaching the gospel.

Whitgift.

The teeth bared when the child is a year and a half old; then they call them, and new ones come about seven years; but divers have backward teeth come at twenty, some at thirty and forty.

Bacon's Natural History.

I have ranked this diversification of Christian practice among the effects of our contentions.

Dray of Powy.

The cause by which any thing is turned from its proper course or tendency.

Fortunes, honours, friends;
Are mere diversions from love's proper objects,

Dunkin's Stepy.

Sport; something that unbends the mind by turning it off from care.
which the pride, the passions, and the folly of men have drest it up. Reger.

Div. still. u. s. [from divide.] The act of putting up.

The divulsion of mortality diversifies them from those laborious and avocating duties which are here requisite to be performed. Boyle's Sphæra. Love.

Divisible. adj. [from divide.] Separate; different; parted. A word not in use.

How could communities maintain Peaceful commerce from divisible heavens? Shakespeare.

Dividend. adj. [from divide.] Different; separate. A word not in use.

To divide a living child into two, and give half to the one, and half to the other. 1 Kings.

Let old Timotheus yield the prizes, Or both divide the crown? He could not, without the fairest part. She drew an angel down. Dryd. St. Cæl.

They were divided into little independent socie- ties, speaking different languages. Locke.

To divide, to distribute, by staking as a partition between.

Let there be a firmament in the midst of the waters, and let it divide the waters from the waters. Gen. 1.

Where seas, and winds, and devils will divide you. Dryd.

3. To divide by discord. Locke.

There shall five in one house be divided. Luke.

To deal out; to give in shares. Locke.

Then in the midst a tearing grain did break. The name of Anthony; it was divided Between her heart and lips. Shakespeare.

Divide the prey into two parts; between them that took the war upon them, who went out to battle; and between all the congregation. Num. 16.

Cham and Japhet were heads and princes over their families, and had a right to divide the earth by families. Locke.

To divide. u. n.

1. Part to; parted.
2. To break friendship. Locke.

Sisterly divide. Shakespeare's King Lear.

Dividend. f. [from divide.] A share; the part allotted in division. Each person shall adjust to himself his peculiar share, like other dividends. Dryd. of Pirie.

If on such petty merits you confer So vast a prize, let each his portion share. Make a just dividend; and, if not all, the greater part to Dioneal will fall. Dryd.

2. [In arithmetick.] Dividend is the number given to be parted or divided. Cocker's Arithmetic.

Dividend. u. s. [from divide.]

1. That which parts any thing into pieces.

According as the body moved, the divides did more and more enter into the divided body; so it joined itself to some new parts of the medium, or divided body, and did in like manner forake others. Digby on the Soul.

2. A distributor; he who deals out to each his share.

Who made me a judge or divider over you? Luke.

2. A difuniter; the person or caufe that breaks concord. Money, the great divider of the world, hath, by a strange revolution, been the great uniter of a divided people. Swift.

4. A particular kind of compasses. Dividend. adj. [dividens, Latin.] Divided; shared or participated in common with others.

She shined, Revolv'd on heav'n's great axle, and her reign With thousand little lights dividually holds. Marv.

Divination. u. s. [divinatio, Latin.]

1. Divination is a prediction or foretelling of future things, which are of a secret and hidden nature, and cannot be known by any human means.

Alyffe's Parerg. Certain tokens they noted in birds, or in the emblems of beasts, or by other the like frivolous divination, as birds.

Surely there is no enchantment against Jacob, neither is there any divination against Israel. Numbers.

His countenance did imprint an awe, and naturally all souls to his old bow; as wands of divination downward draw, and point to beds where fors' reign gold doth grow. Dryd.

The excellency of the soul is for by its power of divining in dreams: that several such divina- tions have been made, none can question who believes the holy writings. Addison.

2. Conjectural preface or predication. Tell thou thy ear this divination lies, And I will take it as a sweet disgrace. Shakesp. Henry IV.

Divine. adj. [divinus, Latin.]

1. Partaking of the nature of God. His line Was hero-make, half human, half divine. Dryd.

2. Proceeding from God; not natural; not human. The benefit of nature's light is not thought ex- cluded as unnecessary, because the necessity of a divine light is magnified. Hiscr.

Instructed, you'd explore Divine constraint, and a God adore. Blackmur.

3. Excellent in a supreme degree. In this fene it may admit of comparis- fon. The divinity and the richest mind, Both by art's perfections and by nature's dower, That ever was from heaven to earth confin'd. Dryd.

2. Prefageful; divining; prescient. Yet out his heart, divine of something ill, Mil. gave him; he the fault'ring measure felt. Milton.

Divine. n. s.

1. A minister of the gospel; a priest; a clergyman.

Claudio must die to-morrow; let him be furnished with divines, and have all charitable prepara- tion. Shakesp.

Give Marcus leave to proceed in his discoveries; for his spoke like a divine in armour. Baco's Holy War.

A divine has nothing to say to the welfet con- greagation, which he may not express in a manner to be understood by the meanest among them. Swift.

2. A man skilled in divinity; a theolog- ian.

Th' eternal cause in their immortal lines. Was taught; and poets were the first divines. Dryd.
To DIVINE. n. a. [divine, Lat.] To foretell, to foreknow; to prede.

Why dost thou say king Richard is death?
Dais thou little better thing than earth,
Dish his downfall?

To DIVINE. n. a. [divine, Lat.]

1. To utter prognostication.

Then is Cæsars and he knelt together.—If I were to divine of this unity, I would not prope ably to.
The prophets thereof divine for more

2. To feel presages.

If secret powers
Suggest but truth to my divine thoughts,
This pretty lad will prove our country’s knight.

3. To conjure; to guess.

The beft of commentators can but guess at his meaning; none can be certain he has divine rightly.

In change of torment would be ease.

Dram安居, n. f. [divine, French; from divinité, Latin.]

1. Participation of the nature and excellence of God’s deity; godhead.

As with new wine into intoxicated bath.
They swim in mirth, and fancy that they feel
Divinity within them breathing wings,
Wherewith to scorn the earth.

2. God; the Deity; the Supreme Being;
The Cane of causes.

“Tis the Deity within us,
’Tis Heaven itself that points out an hereafter,
And intimates eternity to man.

3. Fable god.

Vain, idle, deities that ne’er before
In Israel’s state had fixed their dire shades;
Beautifying divinities, and doves of gods.
Priis.

4. Celestial being.

God doubtless can govern this machine he could create, by more direct and easy methods than employing these sublunary divinities.

Chyzer.

5. The science of divine things; theology.

Hearing him but reason in divinity,
And, all admiring, with an inward
You would defire the king were made a præst.

Truft not my age,

My reverence, calling, not divinity,
If this fastet lie not guiltifhes here
Under some being erring.

Shakespeare.

Among hard words I number those which are peculiar to divinity, as it is a science.

Swifts.

They lay there is divinity in odd numbers, either in nativity, chance, or death.

Divisible.

Capable of being divided into parts;
difceivable; separable.

When we frame in our minds any notion of matter, we change their dire shades, and extension and bulk, which is impenetrable, or divisible and passive.

Beckley’s Stanzas.

Divisibility. n. f. [divisibilt, Fr.]
The quality of admitting division or separation of parts.

The most subtile philosophers willpref the affectors of infinite divinity.

Glumville’s Swifts.

This will easily appear to any one, who will let his thoughts rove in the vast expander of faith, or divinity of others.

Divisibility.

Naturalists disagree about the origin of motion, and the indefinite divinities of matter.

Boyle.

Division. n. f. [diviso, Latin.]

1. The act of dividing any thing into

2. The flate of being divided.

Thou madest the spirits of the firmament, and commanded it to part funder, and to make a division betwixt the waters.

2. Eftor, vi. 41.

3. That by which any thing is kept apart;
parted, or separated.

Partitions of God’s.

4. The part which is separated from the rest by dividing.

If we look into communities and divisions of men, we observe that the different men, not the witty, guides the conversation.

Addison’s Spect.

5. Division; discord; difference.

There was a discord among the people because of him.

John, vii. 43.

As to our divisions with the Romans,
we have one source of passion, the fear; they would,
like small cattle in the ground, wait a cool reason to cement them.

Diary of Pity.

6. Parts into which a discourse is distributed.

In the divifion I have made, I have endeavored, the best I could, to govern myself by the diversity of matter.

Locke.

Expect the heads of your divisions in as few and clear words as you can, otherwise you never be able to retain them.

Swifts.

7. Space between the notes of musick, or parts of a musical composition; just-time.

Thy tongue
Maketh words as sweet as ditties lightly penned,
Sung by a fair queen in a summer’s bove;
With ravishing division, to her lute.

Shakespeare’s Henry IV.

Our tongue will run division in a tune, not mining a note, even when our thoughts are merely engaged elsewhere.

Glovilles.

8. Division.

I will put a division between my people and thy people.

Exod.

9. [In arithmetick.] The separation or partition of any number or quantity given, into any parts assigned.

Cocker.

10. Subdivision; division of the general into species.

Abound.

In the division of every crime,
Adam’s Marken, Mark’s.

Divisor, n. f. [divisor, Latin.]
The number which the dividend is divided; the number which thsehow how many parts the dividend is to be divided into.

Divorce. n. f. [divorce, French; from divorcium, Latin.]

1. The legal separation of husband and wife.

Divorce is a lawful separation of husband and wife, made before a competent judge, on difag-ognize had of the cause, and sufficient proof made thereof.

Ayliffe’s Pargion.

To restore the king,

He counsels a divorcer, a lot of her,
That like a jewel has hung twenty years
About his neck, yet never lost her lute.
Shakespeare’s Henry VIII.

He had in his eye the divorce which had passed betwixt the emperor and Scribonia.

Dryden’s Dedication to the World.

2. Separation; diufion.

Such motions may occasion a further alienation of nations, and divorce of affections, in her from any religion.

K. Charles.

These things, to be a bastard, and to be born out of lawful wedlock, are convertible the one with the other; and is hard to make divorce between those things that are so near in nature to each other, as being convertible terms.

Ayliffe’s Pargion.

3. The sentence by which a marriage is distilled.

4. The cause of any penal separation.

Go with me, like good angels, to my end;
And, as the long divorce of steel falls on me,
Make of your prayers one sweet sacrifice,
To His fanguifer feal to heaven.
Shaksp. Henry VIII.

5. To divide; to separate; to separate by violenlce.

Were it consonant unto reason to divorce these two sentences, the former of which doth show how that is a redresser, and not marking the for-mens, to conclude by the latter of them? Hooke.

The continent and the island were continued together, within men’s remembrance, by a draw-able bridge; but are now divided by broad cilver.

Cavend’s Survey of Cornwall.

So DI

DIV

Divorce; separation of marriage.

Write her a bill of divorce, and give it in her hand, and send her out of his house.

D. xxv. 1.

DI

DIUR'NECK. adj. [diurneck. \

Having the power to provoke urine.

DIURE'TIC. adj. [diuretic. \

Diuretics are decoctions, emulsions, and oils of embolic vegetables, that relax the urinary passages; such as relax ought to be tried before such as force and stimulare. Those emollients ought to be taken in open air, to hinder them from purifying, and on empty stomachs. Amoebus, cholera, cold, the moderates the rest.

And whistles sweet her diuretic strains. Young.

DIURNAL. adj. [diurnus, Latin. \

1. Relating to the day.

We observe in a day, which is a short year, the greatest heat about two in the afternoon, when the sun is past its meridian, which is the diurnal pholos, and the same is evident from the thermometer.

Thirdly, are those diurnals that leave cold the night, how we gather'd beams reflected, may with matter fire cement. Milton.

2. Constituting the day.

Why does he order the diurnal hours
To leave earth's other parts, and rise in ours?

Prior.

3. Performed in a day; daily; quotidian.

The prime orb, incredible how swifts, had otherrowd.

Diurnal. Milton.

Diurnal and annual revolution of the sun have been, from the beginning of nature, confiant, regular, and universally observable by all mankind.

DIURNAL. n. s. [diurnald. Fr. ] A journal; a day-book.

DIURNALLY, adv. [from diurnal.] Daily; every day.

As we make the enquiries, we shall diurnally communicate them to the publick.

Tailor.

DIU'TRITY. n. s. [diu'tritius, Lat. \

Length of duration.

As a continent, as it might be said that generation should not pass till it was fulfilled, they needed not suppos of such duration.

* Brown's Proverbs.

DIVULGE. n. [divulge, Lat. \

1. To publish; to make publick; to reveal to the world.

Men are better contented to have their commendations suppressed, than the contrary much.

Hooker.

I will pluck the veil of modesty from the so scenmg mihtens Page, and divulge Page himself for a secure and willful Acton.

Shakespeare's Merry Wives of Windsor.

These anteters in the filet the knight record'd.

The king himself divulge'd, the land believ'd.

Dryden's Absalom.

You are deprived of the right over your own sentiments, of the privilege of every human creature, to divulge or conceal them.

Pope.

The cabinets of the fiek, and the closets of the dead, have been ransacked to publish private letters, and divulge to all mankind the most licentious sentiments of friendship.

Milton.

2. To proclaim; to declare by a publick act.

This is true glory and renown, when God, looking on our revolution marks, the just man, and divulges him through heaven
To all his angels, who with true applause
Reconcile his praifcs.

Milton's Paraphrase. Left.

DIVULGER. n. s. [from divulge. ] A publisher; one that exposes to publick view.

I think not any thing in my letters could tend so much to my approach, as the odious divulging of them did to the infamy of the divulgers.

King Charles.

DIVULSION. n. s. [divulsion. Lat. ]

The act of plucking away.

Aristotle, in his Ethics, takes up the conced of the beavers, and the divulsion of his texitcles.

Brown's Proverbs.

To DI'ZEN. v. a. [divi'der, items corrupted from digit. ] To divide; to dle; to rig out. A low word.

Your ladyship lifts up the faith to be seen.

For sake I had di'zen'd you out like a queen.

Sweifs.

DIZZ'ARD. n. s. [from dizzy. ] A block-head; a fool.

Dizz'iness. n. s. [from dizzy. ] Giddi-ness; whir in the head.

Fixed furious hath the brain in force to di-traction, and causeth an aching and dizzying in founder heads.

Glamis.

1. Giddi'; vertiginous; having in the head the sensation of turning round.

All on a sudden miserable pain
Surpris'd thee, dim thine eyes, and dizzy swarm in darkenes.

Milton's Paradise Lost.

2. Causing giddiness.

How fearful
And dizzy 'tis to cast one's eyes below!

Shakespeare's King Lear.

Giddy; thoughtless.

What follow, when misadventure canst thou gain? Or at thy wholes the dizzye multitudes,

Longer than thou canst feed them on thy self.

Milton.

To DIZ'Z'Y, v. a. [from the adjective. ] To whirl round; to make giddy.

Not the dreadful storm
Which shipman do the hurricane call,

Shall dizziness with more charmour Neptune's ear
In his Kent, that shall my promised forced Falling on Dinomede.

Shak, Tragedies and Credilosa.

To divide him inventorially, would dizziness the architectism of memory.

Shakespeare.

To DO. v. a. Thou sah, he doth or done; pretter, did; part. pass. done. [bon, Sax. die, Dutch. ]

1. To practice or act any thing good or bad.

Thou shalt done evil all above that were before the.

I Kings.

Flee evil, and do good.

Psalms.

2. To perform; to achieve.

They helped, who hurt to final.

And he hath nothing done, that did not all.

Daniel.

DO

Learn to live well, that thou mayst die to do.

To live and die is all we have to do.

Dryden.

What is the reason the arm's wont smile and frown; and do all the lively puishes of the countenance?

Collins.

3. To execute; to discharge.

May one, that is a herald and prince,

Do a fair meagre to his kindred.

Shakespeare's Timon of Athens.

Pindar's is come.

To do you satisfaction from his master.

The jury prayed the court a guard, that they might do their confessions.

Benj.

4. To cause. This structure is obsolete.

A fatal plague which many did to die. Spenser.

Nought can quench misle by flaying flocks.

Nor sex of liquor cold, nor lake of fire.

Nothing but death can do me to restore.

Fair Q.

5. To transfuse.

The thing was not done in a corner.

6. To produce any effect to another.

If he did not care whether he had their love or no, he waved indifferently 'twas done them neither good nor harm.

Shakespeare's Comedias.

Then hail, Shakespeare, done good better frame.'

Shakespeare.

If there be any good thing to be done,

That may to thee do safe, and grace to me.

Speak to me.

Shakespeare's Hamlet.

'Tis true, I did so; nor was it in vain:

She did me right, and falsified my vengeance.

You did her too much honor: she hath neither face nor taste, if she dare not yield you. Swifts.

7. To have recourse to; to practise as the last effort; commonly in the form of a passionate interrogation.

8. To perform for the benefit or hurt of another.

I know what God will do for me. Sam. xliii. 5.

Acts of mercy done to the poor, shall be accepted and rewarded as done to our Saviour himself.

Atterbury.

9. To exert; to put forth.

Do thy diligence to come thither unto me.

2 Tim. iv. 9.

10. To manage by way of interchange or dealing; to have business; to deal.

I have been deterred by an indulgacion from having much to do with teams of so dangerous a nature.

Bacon.

What had I to do with kings and courts?

My humble lot had call me far beneath them.

Roper.

11. To gain; to effect by influence.

It is much that a jury with a fat brown will do with a fellow who never had the ache in his shoulders.

Shakespeare's Henry IV.

His queen, notwithstanding the hast preferred him with divers children, and with a crown also,

though he would not acknowledge it, could do nothing with him.

Bacon.

12. To make any thing what it is not.

Off with the crown, and with the crown his head;

And whilst we breathe take him to do him dead.

Shakespeare.

13. To finish; to end.

As for this mercy, which he intends for Lear and Cordelia,

The battle done, and they within our power,

Shakespeare.

The may the reading of some part of the New Testament, not carefully, or in haste, as if you had a mind to have done; but attentively, as to be able to give some account of what you have read.

Dryden.

14. To
14. To conclude; to setle.
They did their work and don'd.

15. To put.
Nobly, Warwick, who should be the duke to death.

16. To do.
To do. \\
To Do. \\
To Do. v. n.

1. To act or behave in any manner well or ill.
Unto this day they do after the manner of others; they fear not the Lord, neither do they the law and commandment which the Lord commanded the children of Israel.

2. To make an end; to conclude.
This is only in the compound præterite.

3. To cease to be concerned with; to cease to care about; to desist from notice or practice: only in the compound præterite.
No man would make use of disposed parties to destroy one body, unless they were sure to matter them when they had done with them.

4. To fare; to be with regard to sickness or health.
Good woman, how dost thou? Be not the better that it pleases your good worship to ask.

5. To succeed; to fulfil a purpose.
Come, 'tis no matter; we shall do without him.

6. To deal with.
No man, who hath to do with the knowl, will think himself safe, unless he be his own judge, and guide him.

7. To be used for any verb, to have the reputation of the word: as, I shall come, if I do not, go away; that is, as, I come not.
Thus painters Cupids paint, thus poets do.

8. To be a word of vehement command; or earnest requent: as, help me, do; make haste, do.

If you but lift thy hand, do not alofe thy confidence; and if thou must die a little sooner, yet do not die impatiently.

Taylor's Rule of Holy Living.

—Look me—I will free thou and I shall thy rive.

Dryden's King.

9. Do is put before verbs sometimes expeditively: as, I do love, or I loved; I did love, or I loved.

This is the way to acknowledge God the Father, creator of heaven and earth, and the first Person in the Trinity, though they deny the reft.

Bacon's Holy War.

This just reproach their virtue don excite.

Expeéts their feeble aid do join.

10. Sometimes emphatically: as, I do hate him, but will not curst him now.

Pettition catch my soul
But I do love thee; and when I love thee no more,
Chaos is come again.

Shakespeare's Othello.

11. Sometimes by way of opposition: as, I did love him, but scorn him now.

To Doat. v. n. See To Dote.

DOCIBLE, adj. [docilis, Lat.] Tractable; docile; easy to be taught.
The affinities and similarieties and brambles is commonly set before them at all the food and entertainment of their tenderest and most docile.

Melville.

Docilness. n. f. [from docile.]
Teachableness; docility; readiness to learn.

I might enlarge in commendation of the noble hound, as of the docility of dogs in general.

Walton's Angler.

DOCILE. adj. [docilis, Latin.]
1. Teachable; easily instructed; tractable.

Dogs soon grow accustomed to whatever they are taught, and, being docile and tractable, are very useful.

Ellis's Voyage.

2. With is before the thing taught.
Soon docile to the secret art of ill.

With fines I could betray, with tender ill. Prior.

Docility. n. f. [docilitat, Fr. from docile, Lat.] Aptness to be taught; readiness to learn.

All the perfection they allowed his understanding was spined and docility, and all that he attributed to his will was a possibility to be virtuous.

Swift.

What is more admirable than the firmness of every creature? the docility of an elephant, and the insinuancy of a camel for travelling in deserts?

Grew.

DOCK. n. f. [bocca, Sax.] A plant; a weed.
The species are fifteen, ten of which grow wild, several of them being used in medicine; and the plant called the oriental cardew, is said to be the true rhubarb.

Millar.

Nothing seems.
But hateful dox, rough thistles, 3kew, burs, losing both beauty and utility. Shak. Henry IV.

My love for gentle Dermot stillers grows.

Than what tall dock that rides to thy node.

Cut down the dock: these roots again, but, know.

Love rooted out again will never grow.

Swift.

DOCK. n. f.

1. The stump of the tail, which remains after docking.

2. The solid part of the tail.
The tail of a great chimer is not well described by Boislau. The dock we eat half an inch thick, and two inches broad, like an apothecary's spurtata.

Green's Medicinal.

DOCTOR. n. f. [d delegation. Latin.]
A direction tied upon goods; a summary of a larger writing.

DOCTORAL. adj. [dotalis, Lat.] Relating to the degree of a doctor.

DOCTORALLY. adv. [from dotalis.] In manner of a doctor.

DOCTORSHIP. n. f. [from doctor.] The rank of a doctor.

The physicians referred to him to touch his pulse, and consider of his diseases doctors at their departure.

Havercal.

Clarendon.

4 C DOCTORIAL.
DO C

Doctrinal, adj. [doctrina, Latin.]
1. Containing doctrine, or something formally taught.

2. Pertaining to the act or means of teaching.

To this end the word of God no otherwise enters, than only in the nature of a doctrinal instruction.

What particular property or quality is that, which, being so where found but in sermons, maketh them effective to save souls, and leaveeth all other doctrinal means to do their particular effect? Hooker.

Doctrine is f. s. Something that is part of doctrine.

Not such as attest to every word in scripture, can be said in doctrinals to deny Christ. Starbucks.

Dorically, adv. [from doctrina.] In the form of doctrine; positively; as necessary to be held. Scripture accommodates itself to common opinions, and employs the usual forms of speech, without delivering any thing doctrinally concerning those points.

Didactic, adj. [doxastic, Latin.]
1. The principles or positions of any sect or matter, which is taught.

To make new articles of faith and doctrine, no man thinketh it lawful: new laws of government, what church or commonwealth is there, that maketh not, either in one time or other? Hiu'er.

Ye are the sons of clerics, who bring all their doctrines thus to the light, and invite men with freedom to examine them. Addington.

The most principle in natural philosophy is the doctrine of gravitation, or mutual tendency of all bodies towards each other. What's Imp. of the Mind.

2. The act of teaching.

He said unto them in doctrine. Mark iv. 2

Document, n.f. [documentum, Latin.]
1. Precept; instruction; direction.

It is a most necessary instruction and document for them, that as her majesty made them dispensators of her favour, so she would have them to know their own distributions. Leamers. Let not any one be too much crowded with a heap or multitude of documents or ideas at once.

2. Precept, in an ill sense; a precept illentiously authoritative, magisterially dogmatical, solemnly trilling.

Gentle infinissime piece, as oil is the most degenerating of all liquors; but in magisterial do- nations, the person is themselves attacked, and made upon their guard. Government of the Tongue.

It is not unnecessary to digress in the doctrine of teaching authors into several classes.

Doddre. r.f. [tosteren, to shoot up, Dutch. Skinner.

Doddre is a globular plant; when it first shoots from the seed it has little roots, which pierce the earth near the roots of other plants; but the capsules of which it is formed form after clinging among these plants, the roots wither away. From this time it propagates itself along the stalks of the plant, entangling itself about it. It has no flowers, but consists of calliphanies or flake; brownish with a cast of red, which run to great length. They have tubercles, which fix them fast down to the plant, and by means of which they absorb the juices defined for its nourishment.

Doderred. adj. [from dodder.] Overgrown with dodder; covered with supercrecent plants.

Near the breath a lourly grew,

Dodo, with which white-boughed encompass round

The household gods, and shake the holy ground.

Dryden's Anonid.
DOG

3. A reproachful name for a man.

4. To give or lend to the Dogs; to throw away. To go to the Dogs; to be ruined, destroyed, or devoured.

5. It is used as the term for the male of several species as the dog, fox, the dog otter. If ever I thank any man, I'll thank you; but that they call compliments is like the encounter of two dog sets. Shakespeare.

The same ill taste of fowls will force to join dogs foxes in the yoke, and dresser the wine. Dryden.

6. Dog is a particle added to any thing, to mark meanness, or degeneracy, orworthlefsness: as, dog rofe.

To Dog, v. a. [from the noun.] To hunt, as a dog, insidiously and inoffensively. I have dug'd him from the hither. Shaksp. I, his defpightful Jono, sent him forth from courtesy friends, with camping fowls to live, where death and danger dgs the beaft of worth. Shakespeare.

Sorrow dogging fun.

A defcriptions forced. Herriot.

I fear the dread events that dog them both,
Left all fome-gleeting touch the pretence
Of our renowned felfer. Thesef spiritual joys are dog'd by no fad fequels. Giamobile.

I have been purfued, dogged, and way-laid through feveral nations, and even now can think myself secure. Pope.

Hate dgs their rife, and infult mocks their fall. Vanity of Human Wifhes. Walton.

DOG-FISHER. n. f. [dog and fisher.] A kind of fift. The dog-fisher is good against the falling fickens. Wetten.

DOG-TEETH. n. f. [dog and teeth.] The teeth in the human head next to the grinders; the eye-teeth.

The best instruments for dividing of herbs are incisor-teeth; for cracking of hard substances, in bones and nuts, grinders, or mull-teeth; for dividing of flaths, sharp-pointed or dog-teeth. Artifices of Aliments. Arbuthnot.

DOG-TRICK. n. f. [dog and trick.] An ill turn; furly or brutal treatment. Learn better manners, or I shall serve you a dog-trick: I'll make you know your rider. Dryden. Des Subfiant.

DOG-BANE. n. f. [dog and bane.] A plant. Miller.

DOGGERELL. n. f. [dog and geller.] A kind of cherry.

DOG-GORFL. n. f. [dog and golf.] Of this word I know not the meaning, unless it be, that when meal or flour is fifted or bolted to a certain degree, the coarser part is called doghorl, or flour for dogs.

His only facket was, that now his dog-gefture was fo lofs, That either it muft quickly end,
Or turn about again, and mean. Hudson.

DOG-BRIAR. n. f. [dog and briar.] The briar that bears the hip; the cynophodon.

DOG-HEART. adj. [dog and heart.] Cheap as dogs meat; cheap as the calf bought for dogs.

Good here of hafteis, say you, and doggear? Dryden.
Dogmatizer, n. f. [from dogmatize.] An asserter; a magisterial teacher; a bold advance of opinions.

Discourse, n. f. [dog and ref.] The flower of the hip. Of the rough or fairy excellence, those on the brisk, or degrees, are a good idea. "Hamlet"

Dogshoat, n. f. [dog and flea.] Prettied fleck. "Juvvenal" indeed means a dowry husband, who now and eke by sowing; but then he is represented to have slept what the common people call dogfleap. "Addison".

Dogsmeat, n. f. [dog and meat.] Refuse; vile fluff; offer like the flesh fold to feed dogs. His reverence sought of me the flower of all the markets; these are but dogsmeat to 'em. "Dryden".

Dogstar, n. f. [dog and star; canicula, Lat.] The star which gives the name to the dog-days. All whom the raging dogstar's sultry heat, and now and here and now in town retreats. Add.

Dogstooth, n. f. [from dog and tooth.] A miller.

Dogstrot, n. f. [dog and trot.] A gentle trot like that of a dog. This said, they both advanced, and rode a dogstrot through the bowling-ground. "Hudibras".

Dog's tooth. n. f. [dog and tooth.] Tired as a dog; excessively weary. Oh, matter, matter, I have watch'd so long, That I'm dogtired. "Shak. Taming of the Shrew".

Dogwood, n. f. A species of cornelian cherry.

Doily, n. s. A species of woolen stuff; so called, I suppose, from the name of the first maker. We should be as weary of one set of seducers, though never so good, as we are of one suit, though never so fine; for a fool, and a silly stuff, will now and then their round of grace, and be worn for variety. "Congr. of the World".

Doings, n. s. [from To do.] This word has hardly any fingular.

1. Things done; events; transactions.
   I have but kill'd a fly.—"But how is this? has a father and mother? How would he hang his slander-gilding wings, and buzz lamented dinings in the air!" "Shak. Hen. VIII".

2. Facts; actions; good or bad. The next degree was to mark all Zelma's dinings, speeches, and fadations, and to take them unto her self, as a pattern of worthy proceeding. "Sidney".

If I'm traduced by tongues which slander know
My faculties nor perfect, yet will be
The chronicles of my doings, let me say
'Tis but the face of place, and the rough brake
That virtue must go through. "Shak. Hen. VIII".

And at both a certain fire among them came,
And of their doings great dislike declared,
And testified against their ways. "Milton".

3. Behaviour; conduct.
   Never the earth on his thumb shoulders bare
   A maid train'd up from high or low degree,
   That in her doings better could compare
   Mirth with respect, few words with courtesy. "Sidney".

4. Conduct; dispensation.
   Dangerous it were for the feeble brains of man to wade far into the dinings of the Mole Hill. "Hooker".

5. Stir; bustle; tumult,
   Shall there be then, in the mean while, no doing? "Hooker".

6. Fertility; merriment; as, joyously doing.

7. This word is now only used in a ludicrous, sene, or in low mean language. After such miraculous dinings, we are not yet in the power of putting Francisco's, "Shake. Tempest".

Dole, n. s. [doe, Dutch; dooght, Erse.] A small piece of money. When they will not give a dole to relieve a lame beggar, they will lay out ten to see a dead Indian. "Shake. Temple"

In Anna's wars a soldier, poor and old, had deedty earn'd a little purse of gold;
Tir'd with a tedious march, one luckless night He flept, poor dog! and tol it to his end. "Pope".

DOLE. n. f. [from desta; Bolman, Saxon.]

1. The act of distribution dealing.
   Thus in the dice of blows your foul may drop. "Shake. "

   The personal fruition in any man cannot reach to feel great riches; there is a coidhy of them, or a power of dole and directory of some, of a fame to them, but no solid use to the reader. "Bacon".

   At her general dole. Each receiver has his ancient soul. "Cleroverland".

2. Any thing deal out or distributed. Now, my masters, happy man he bin his dole, say I; every man to his buffets. "Shake. "

   Let them, and I will do, and are our quarters,
   Fall on, and happy man be his dole. "Hubris".

   Alotions or money distributed in charity. They had such firm dependence on the day,
   That need grew pamper'd, and forget to pray; So force the dole, so ready at their call.
   They foolish prepar'd to see the manna fail. "Dryden".

   Clients of old were fed: now a poor
   Divided dole is dealt at the outward door,
   Which by the hungry rout is flown disp'arch'd, "Dryden's Juvenal".

   What if his eye-fight, for to Israel's God
   Nothing is hard, by miracle endor's,
   He now doth deal, so readily at their call,
   And over heaps of laughter'd walk his way? "Milton".

5. [from dolor.] Grief; sorrow; misery; dolorifick.
   "They dole they lie; the poor old man, their father,
   Making such pitiful dole over them, that all
   Inhabitants take his part with weeping. "Shake. As you like it".

   Our sometime fellow, our queen,
   Have we, as 'twer, with a defeated joy,
   With mirth in funeral, and with digre in marriage,
   In equal state weighing delight and dole. "Tennyson's Hamlet"

   They might hope to change
   Torment with ease, and foment recompense
   Dole with delight. "Milton's Paradise Lost"

To Dole. n. s. [from the noun.] To deal; to distribute.

Dole. n. s. [dole and left in tellage. Dole.

Doleful, adj. [dole and fall].

1. Sorrowful; dismal; expressing grief; querulous.
   She earnestly intreated to know the cause thereof,
   Of that either the might comfort or accompany
   Her doleful humour. "Sidney"

   For none but you, or whom of you it leisure,
   Can rightfully are doleful lay. "Spenzer"

   With screwed face, and doleful voice, they only
   With perilous harangues of confidence against Caractacus, and the English leaders. "South".

   Jult then the hero exal a doleful cry,
   And in those ardents flames began to fry:
   The blind con DAG r'd within his veins. "Dryden"

2. Melancholy; afflicted; feeling grief; sorrowful.
   How oft a doleful fire cry'd to my heart, tarry, fon,
   When first he cry'd my love. "Sidney"

3. Dismal; impelling sorrow; dolorifick.
   It watereth the heart to the end it may freuity;
   Melteth the vituous pin, Full of great min-
   Milist and courage; serveth as a most approved remedy against all doleful and heavy accidents, which befall men in this present life. "Hooker".

   Happy the man, who now at last
   Has through this dismal vale of misery past.
   Who to his defend'd stage has carried.
   The tellious load, and laid his burden down. "Pope's Doleful".

Dolefully, adv. [from doleful.] In a doleful manner; sorrowfully; dismal; querulously.

Dolefulness, n. f. [from doleful.]

1. Sorrow; melancholy.

2. Querulousness.

3. Dismalness.

Dolesome, adj. [from dole].
   Melancholy; gloomy; dismal; sorrowful; dolorful.

Dolesomeness, n. f. [from doleful.]
   Dole; melancholy; dismalness.

Dole. n. s.

1. A contraction of Dorothy.

2. A little girl's puppet or baby.

Dollar, n. f. [dole, Dutch.] A Dutch and German coin of different value, from about two shillings and sixpence to four and threepence.

Dolorifick, adj. [from dolorificus, Latin.]

That which caues grief or pain.

The pain returned, dissipating that vapour which restrained the nerves, and giving the dolorifick motion Pleasure again. "Rap".

This, by the strengths and rarity of the fluid, is insensible, and not dolorifick. "Arbaton on Air".

Dolorous, adj. [from dolor, Latin.]

1. Grieveful; dolorful; dismal; gloomy; impelling sorrow.

   We are taught, by his example, that the presence of dolorifick and dreadful objects, even in minds most perfect, may, as clouds, overcast all delightful joy. "Hooker"

   You take me in too dolorifick a feast.

   I spake't you for your comfort. "Shake."

   Through many a dark and dreary vale
   They pafs'd, and many a region dolorifick
   O'er many a frozen, many a icy alp,
   Rocks, caves, lakes, fens, bogs, dens, and shades of death. "Milton's Paradise Lost".

   Talk not of ruling, in troubled life; the gommon
   Nor think vain words, he cries, can ease my soul. "Pope".

   Painful.

   Their dispath is quick, and left dolorful than the paw of the bear, or the sting of the lion. "Mercurius, Avaritia against Ailouts".

Doulour, n. f. [dole, Latin.]

1. Grief; sorrow.

   I've words too few to take my lease of you,
   When the tongue's office should be prudical,
   'Tis breath's abundant doleful of the heart. "Shak".

   Sorrow, lamentation, complaint.

   Never troubling him either with asking
   Questions, or finding fault with his melancholy; but rather fitting to his dolorful dispositions of their own and other folks misfortune. "Sidney".

3. Pain;
DOM

DOM, n. s. [domination, Lat.]
1. Sovereign authority; unlimited power.

T'\'s donations of bishops or kings of England did ever retain in all their dominions, when the pope's usurped authority was at the highest.

South. •

2. Pre-eminence; ascendant.

Objects placed foremost ought to be more finitish than those cast behind, and to have dominion over things confused and transient. Dryden's D\'uforgy.

3. A title or rank of any great man.

By him were all things created, visible and invisible, whether they be thrones or dominions, or principalities or powers. Col. 1. 16.

DON, n. s. [domi, Lat.]
The Spanish title for a gentleman or knight.

It is with us used ludicrously.

To the great don's wit.

Phæbus gives them full privilege alone to damn all others, and cry up their own. Dryd.

2. We use it to put on; to

To dom'ny, n. a. [from dom'.] Quality or rank of a gentleman or knight.

I'm none of those,

Your bosom-friends; or you suppose we
But Ralph himself, your truthful liar,

WH'S has dagg'd your dom'ny out of th'ire.

South.

To dom'ny, v. a. [To do on.]

To put on; to

To invoil with; the contrary to daff. Obfoleate.

The purple morning left her crimson bed,
And don'd her robes of pure vermilion

Fairfax.

Her helm the virgin don'ts.

Fairfox.

What I should do this role, and trouble you
Shakespeare.

DONARY, n. s. [donarium, Lat.] A gift given to favored uces.

Dona'tion, n. s. [donatio, Lat.]
1. The act of giving any thing; the act of bestowing.

He gave us only over beast, fish, fowl,
Dominion absolute; that right we hold
By his donation, but the thief thereof is so imprinted in their hearts, as if every one laid claim for himself unto that which was conferred upon all.

South.

2. The grant by which any thing is given or conferred.

However the letter of that donation may be ungregarded by men, but the thief thereof is so imprinted in their hearts, as if every one laid claim for himself unto that which was conferred upon all.

Ralph's Eff'ory.

The kingdoms of the world to come are giv'n,
Permitted rather, and by thee up'ld

Other donation none thau canst produce. Milton.

Do'native, n. s. [donatius, Fr. from donat, Lat.]

2. A
3. A gift; a largess; a present; a dole of money distributed.

The Roman emperor's caesars were, at certain solemn times, to bow to his soldiers a largess, which then they received near the gallipoles upon their heads.

They were entertained with publick feasts and solemnities, to make them more easily digest their tokens.

Dryden.

2. [Law.] A benefice merely given and collated by the patron to a man, without either presentation to the ordinary, or induction by the ordinary, or induction by his orders.

Cowell.

Never did gentle carry double triner;

His is the desirous, and mine the cure. Cleveland.

Done. part. pass. of the verb To do.

Another like fair tree grew thereby,

Whereof who did eat, chafous did know.

Both good and evil: O mournful memory!

But I, through one man's fault, hath done us all to dye.

Speigler's Fairy Queen.

Done. a kind of interjection. The word by which a wager is concluded: when a wager is offered, he that accepts it says done.

One thing, sweet-heat, I will ask;

Take me for a new-fash'd man—

Done, as I say, thou shalt this.

I'll throw my mask off when I like.

Cleveland.

Twas done and done, and the fox, by consent, was to be the judge.

L'Estrange.

Do' nor n. f. [now corrupted to dangerous, from dominum, low Latin, according to Manet.] The highest and strongest tower of the castle, in which prisoners were kept, as in Castile. It is now used of subterraneous prisons.

The gate tower, that was so thick and strong,

Which of the castle was the chief danger,

Wherein the knights were in prison,

Was even joynant to the garden-wall.

Ther as this Emely had her playing. Chaucer.

Do' nor n. f. [from done, Latin.] A giver; a benefactor; one who gives anything.

Litters thick beseech the done's gate,

And begging lords and teeming ladies wait.

The done is German, old Done, Do, as Dryden's Journal.

It is a mighty check to benefactors temper to consider how often good designs are frustrated and prevented to purpose, which, could the donors thereof have a foresight, they would have every thing very just to promote. Atterbury.

Do'dle n. f. [a cant word, perhaps corrupted from dare little: fainting.] A trifler; an idler.

To DOOM. v. a. [Beman, Saxon.]

1. To judge.

Him through malice fell,

Father of mercy and grace I thou didst not doom.

So thriftily, but much more to pay incalculable.

Millim.

2. To condemn to any punishment; to sentence.

He may be doom'd to chains, to flame, to death;

While proud Hypocrit shall mount his throne.

Smith.

Justly th' impartial fate conspire,

Dooming that sin to be the fire

Of such another soul.

Graeviiii.

3. To pronounce condemnation upon any.

The earth is full of sinners, appears,

And lives and crimes, with his afflicters; hear;

Round in his urn the blessed balls he rolls,

Abdolles the just, and doom's the guilty souls.

Dryden's Annals.

4. To command judicially or authoritatively.

Have I a tongue to doom my brother's death,

And shall that tongue give pardon to a slave?

Shakespeare.

To define; to command by uncontrollable authority.

Fate and the gods, by their supreme command,

Have doom'd our ships to seek the Latin land.

Dryden's Annals.

I have no will but what your eyes command;

Defin'd so love, as they are doom'd to rigid.

Graeviiii.

6. To doom, n. f. [Saxon; doom, Latin.]

1. Judicial sentence; judgment.

He's red, my lord, and all his paws do yield;

And humble thus, as on the whale's necks;

Expect your highness' doom of life or death.

Shakespeare.

To Satan, first in sin, his doom applied,

Though in mysterious terms, judged as then bid.

Milton.

And now, without redemption, all mankind

Must have been lost, adjured to death and hell

By doom forever.

Milton.

In the great day, wherein the secrets of all hearts shall be laid open, no one shall be made to answer for what he knows nothing of; but shall receive his doom, his conscience accusing or exculcating.

Locke.

2. The great and final judgment.

Search Windsor Castle, elses, within and out;

Strang[e] goods, unsear'd, for strewed room,

That it may stand till the perpetual doom.

Shak.

3. Condemnation; judicial sentence.

Reprove thy doom,

Or whilst I can ever tremble from my throat,

I'll tell thee thou dost evil. Shak's King Lear.

4. Determination declared.

If friend or foe, let him be gently urg'd;

—Reprove that doom of mercy, for his Clifford.

Shakespeare.

5. The fate to which one is defined.

By day the web and loom,

And homely household talk, shall be his doom.

Shakespeare's Flight.

6. Ruin; destruction.

From the same foes, at last, both felt their doom;

And the same age saw learning fall, and Rome.

Pope.

Doomsday. n. f. [doom and day.]

1. The day of final and universal judgment; the last, the great day.

The end, the great day, the end of the age,

Men, women, and children, and all the race,

As it were doomsday. Shakespeare's Julius Caesar.

They may serve for any theme, and never be out of date until doomsday.

Brown's Pledge. Burnetts.

Our final thus; but halters on for ever lighter.

Till doomsday wander in the shades of night.

This only holiday of all the year.

We privily in fandales may appear. Dryden.

2. The day of sentence or condemnation.

All dooms-day is my body's doom-day.

Shakespeare's Richard III.

Doomsday-book. n. f. [doomsday and book.]

A book made by order of William the Conqueror, in which the estates of the kingdom were registered.

The day's also brought in a reckoning of money by ones, per annos, per porti, which is mentioned in doomsday-book. Camden.

DOOR. n. f. [bore, dorse, Saxon; dores, Erfe.]

1. The gate of a house; that opens which gives entrance. Door is used of houses, and gates of cities or public buildings; except in the licence of poetry.

All the cattle are there; the gate of the garden,

And every door of free will open freely. Gayysagen.

In the city, a door

Conduits and of provisions hold in large,

For man and beast.

Milman's Paradise Lost.

To the same end men fev'l paths may make,

As many doors into one temple lead. Dryden.

For without rules there can be no art, any more than there can be a house without a door to conduct you in.

Dryden.

2. In familiar language, a house; often in the plural, doors.

Lay one piece of fish or fish in the open air, and another of the same kind and bigness within doors. Bacon's Natural History.

Let him doubt whether clothes be warm, and go naked; whether his house be frizzled and live without doors. Dryden's Folly.

Marvin's office is now the second door in the place, where he will pay for his sentences. L'Estrange.

Lamps, though they are bred within doors and never saw the actions of other species, put at those who approach them with their forheads.

Addison's Cato.

The Sultan entered again the peasant's house, and turned the owner out of doors. Addison's Goad Bate.

3. Entrance; portal.

The tender blade of grass appears,

And bade, that yet the breath of Erebus fear.

Stand at the door of life, and clodid thy year.

Dryden.

Pillage; avenue; means of approach.

The indestructible necessity of sincere obedience, flocks the door against all temptations to corruption. Hamond.

4. Determinations, and the work of the door.

With a bough, voice and supercilious brow,

To fervile duties, thou wou'dst fear no more;

The gallows and the whip are out of doors.

Dryden's Dufcroy, Preface.

His imaginary title of fatherhood is out of doors, and Cain is no prince over his brother. Locke.

5. Out of Door, or Doors. No more to be found; quite gone; fairly went away.

Should he, who was thy lord, command thee

With a bough voice and supercilious brow,

To servile duties, thou wou'dst fear no more;

The gallows and the whip are out of doors.

Dryden's Dufcroy, Preface.

6. At the Door of any one. Impartial; chargeable upon him.

In every which of which I have failed, the fault lies wholly at thy door.

Dryden's Dufcroy, Preface.

7. Next Door to. Approaching to; near to; bordering upon.

A singular word leads to a broil, and a note unpublish'd is next door to a tumult. L'Estrange.

Door-case. n. f. [door and cafe.] The frame in which the door is inclosed.

The making of frames for doorcases, is the framing of two pieces of wood atwitch at two pieces other.

Doorkeeper. n. f. [door and keeper.] Porter; one that keeps the entrance of a house.

He that hast given the following assistances to thee, defines to be even a doorkeeper in God's house, and to be a servant in the midst of God's ser.

Taylor's Preface.

Door Quit. n. f. A paper containing a warrant.

Before the institution of this office, no doer of license, nor warrant for pardon of alienation made, could be purchased without an oath. Bacon's Office of Alimentation.

Doorman. adj. [dermantine, French.]

1. Sleeping.

He is a dragon! if he be, 'tis a very peaceful one: I can infringe his anger is doorman or, should be from to tame, 'ds well making him, and he will sleep like a top. Congreve's Old Bachelor.

With this radius he is fain to strike and kill his foe, for which he lies, as it were, till it finishes within his reach.

Grevy's Moesame.

2. In a sleeping posture.

If a lion were the coat of Judah, yet were it not a lion rampant, but rather crouching and dormant.

Brown.

3. Private; not public.

There were other doorman mutters of soldiers throughout all parts of the realm, that were put in readiness, but not drawn together.

Bacon's War with Spain.

4. Concealed;
What should a bald fellow do with a comb, a dumb devil with a pipe, or a blind man with a looking-glass?
Burton.

2. A man fondly, weakly, and excessively in love.

If in black my lady's bow be deckt,
It mourns that painting and usurping heart
Should rashly wound with a false apparel:
And therefore is the born to make black fair.
Shakespeare.

Our duty upon red and white are insensibly perverted by the uncertainty both of the continuance of their mistress's kindness, and of the taking of her beauty.
Byron.

Do'tingly, adv. [from dating.] Fondly;
by excessive fondness.

That he, to wedlock doth betray'd
Should hope in this heart town to find a maid!
Dryden's Journal.

Double, adj. [double; French: duplés; Latin: duplés, Eras.]

1. Two of a sort; one corresponding to the other;
in pairs.

All things are double one against another, and he hath made nothing imperfect. Eccles. xii. 24.

2. Twice as much; containing the same quantity repeated. It is sometimes used with to, and sometimes without.

Great hours are great barthoms; but on whom
They are call with envy, he doth bear two heads:
His cares must still be double his joys,
In any dignity.
Dryden's Faisey's Caro lis.

This sign of forty thousand pounds is almost double to what is sufficient.
Swift's Drapier's Letters.

3. Having one added to another; having more than one in the same order or patelled.

It is a curiosity also to make flowers double, which is effected by often removing them to the new earth;
so, on the contrary part, double flowers,
by neglecting, and not removing, prove single.
But as Natural History,
I met a savour, fat, old grey frise,
With a panach swollen so high, his double chin
Might rest upon it.
Dryden's Spanish Faison.

4. Two-fold; of two kinds.
Thus curled steel, and more accur'd gold,
Gave mischief birth, and made that mischief bold,
And double death did thenceforth devolve,
By steel assailed, and by gold betray'd.
Dryden's Ode.

No dar appear to lead his fiery light,
Darkeasts and tempermake a double night.
Dryden.

5. Two in number.

And if one power did not both see and hear,
One fights and sounds would always double.
Dryden.

6. Having twice the effect or influence;
having the power of two. Not used.

The magnifico is much belov'd,
And hath in his effect a voice potential,
As doth the double.
Shakespeare's Othello.

7. Deceitful; acting two parts, one openly, the other in secret.

I th' presence
He would say untruths, and be ever double
Both in his words and meaning.
Shakespeare's Henry VIII.

Fifty thousand could keep ranks, who were not of double heart.
1 Chron. xii. 33.

Double-plea. n. f. [duplicate placentum; Latin.]
Is that in which the defendant alleges for himself two several matters in bar of the action, whereof either is sufficient to effect his desire in deburring the plaintiff.

Double-quick, is a complaint made by any clerk or other to the archbishop of the province, against an inferior or famous, for delaying justice in some case ecclesiastic. The effect is, that the archbishop directs his letters, under the authentic seal, to all clerks of his province, commanding them to admonish the said ordinary within nine days to do the justice required, or otherwise to cite him to appear before him or his official; and lally to intimate to the said ordinary, that if he neither performs the thing enjoined, nor appears at the day assigned, he himself will procceed to perform the justice required.
And this seems to be termed a double-quarrel, because it is most commonly made against both the judge, and him at whose petition justice is delayed.
Pepin.

Double. adj. Twice over.

I am not to old in proportion to them as 1 for-mority way, which I can prove by arithmetick, for then I was double their age, which now I am not.
Swift.

Double is much used in composition, generally for double, two ways; as, double-edged, having an edge on each side; or for twice the number or quantity; as, double-tiled, twice died.

Double-sounding. adj. [double and bite.]
Biting or cutting on either side.
But most their looks on the black monarch bend,
His riddle icles and his brave commend;
His double biting ax, and brassy spear,
Each asking a gigantic force to bear.
Dryden's Faisey.

Double-buttoned. adj. [double and buttten.]
Having two rows of buttons.
Others you see, when all the town's abroad;
Wp; in it embraces a kerssy coat,
Or double-buttned' snoise.
Gay's Trivia.

Double-dealer. n. f. [double and deliler.]
A deceitful, subtle, industrious fellow; one who acts two parts at the same time; one who says one thing and thinks
another.
Double-dealers may pass muster for a while; but all parties wash their hands of them in the conclusion.
L'Engagev.

Double-dealing. n. f. [double and dealing.]
Artifice; dissimulation; low or wicked cunning; the action of one thing with the profession of another.
Quoth he not the worse for me; there's gold.
—But that it would be double-dealing, Sir, I would you could make it another.
Shakespeare's Twelfth Night.

Our poets have joined together such qualities as are by nature most compatible; a valour with anger, me-knots with pride, and prudence with dissimulation; this last union was necessary for the goodness of Ulysseus; for, without that, his dissimulation might have degenerate into wickedness and double-dealing.
Shakespeare's Troilus and Cressida.

To double-deal. v. a. [double and die.]
To die twice over.
Yes, I'll to the royal bed,
Where first the mysteries of our love were asked,
And double-deal'd it with imperial crimes.
Gay's Trivia and Let.

Double-founted. adj. [double and fount.]
Having two sources.
Here the double-founted stream
Jordan, true limit eastward.
Milton.

Double-handed. adj. [double hand.]
Having two hands.
All things being double-handed, and having the appearances both of truth and falsehood, we, our affections have engaged us, we attend only to the former.
Gay's Trivia and Let.

Double-headed. adj. [double and head.]
Having the flowers growing one to another.
The double rich scarlet umbels is a large double-headed flowers, of the rich scarlet Vermilion.

To double-lock. v. a. [double and lock.]
To shoot the lock twice; to failen with double security.
He immediately double-locked his door, and fast down carefully to reading and comparing both his orders and his letter.

Double-minded. adj. [from double and mind.]
Unsettled; undecided.
A double-minded man is unstable in all his ways.

Double-shining. adj. [double and shine.]
Shining with double luster.
He was
Among the east that first did take delight
To see the sports of double-shining day.
Sidney.

Double-tongued. adj. [double and tongue.]
Deceitful; giving contrary accounts of the same thing.
The deacons must be grave, not double-tongued, not given to much wine, not greedy of filthy lucre.
Tertull.

For much the fear'd the Tyrians double-tongu'd;
And knew the town to Joan's care belonged.
Dryden's Faisey.

To double. v. a. [from the adjective.]
1. To enlarge any quantity by addition of the same quantity.

Rumour both double voice and echo
The numbers of the seas;
Shakespeare, Henry IV.
Pay him fit thousand, and disperse the bond;
Double for thousand, and then triple that.
Shakespeare's Richard III.
Our feet 'o proud the weaker to affile.
Or dubble his thimble if he fail.
Dryden.

This power of repeating or doubbling any idea we have of any difficulty, and adding it to the former, as often as we will without being ever able to come to any stop or slum, is that which gives us the idea of immanency.
Locke.

This was only the value of the flower, there was besides a truth part of that number of itizens of gold, which, if it was reckoned in a decuple proportion, will double the sum.
Addison on Cato.

2. To contain twice the quantity
That reinforced against the adverse feats.

Still doubting ours, brave Rupert leads the way.

3. To repeat; to add.

He ran aloud Arter and fierce Palmon
In mortal battle doubling blow on blow.
Like lightning flam'd their salutons to fire.

Dryden.

4. To
1. To double. v. n.

1. To increase to twice the quantity.

"This observed in particular nations, that within the space of three hundred years, notwithstanding all casualties, the number of men doubled. Barthes's Bones." Dryden.

2. To enlarge the stake to twice the sum in play.

"Throw a 'Slippery,' by, and offer in the dead, offer—the crown on Bernice's head: I am resolved to double till I win." Dryden's Tyrannical Lover.

3. To turn back, or wind in running.

"Doubt not to double and goth back again, and make a long stroller." Double.

Who knows in which way the points? Dribbling and turning like a hunted hare! I find out the meaning of her mind who can. Dryden. So keep thy hunters, and thy feet so strong, Thy turns and doublets cannot save thee long.

Swifts.

4. To play tricks; to use sleights.

Do. ub. n.

1. Twice the quantity or number.

If the thief be found, let him pay double. Exid.

In all the four great mortality of above mentioned, I do not find that any week the plague increased to the double of the precedent work above five times.

Strong beer; beer of double the common strength.

Here's a pot of good double, neighbour! drink, and fear not your man. Shakespeare's Henry VI.

3. A turn used to escape pursuit.

"Man's best safety, Convolutions rack his nerves, and cars his breath; his flying life is shot by raving pains, Through all his doubles, in the winding veins."

Blackmore.

4. A trick; a theft; an artifice.

"These men are too well acquainted with the thief, to be sung off by any fates or spies. Add to this."

Doubler. n. f. [from double.] He that doubles any thing.

Doubler, n. f. [from double.]

1. The inner garment of a man; the waistcoat: so called from being double for warmth, or because it makes the dress double.

What a pretty thing a man is, when he goes in his coat and his hat, and leaves off his wig. Shak.

His doublet was of fluffy buff, And though not found yet cudgel proof. Houdah.

It is common enough to see a countryman in the doublet and breeches of his great grandfather.

Addison in Stile.

They do but mimic ancient ways at best.

As speis our grandfathers, in their doubles dress. Pope. Vols. I.

2. Two; a pair.

Those doublets on the sides of his tail seem to add strength to the muscles which move the tail fins.

Doublon, n. f. [French.] A Spanish coin containing the value of two pistoles.

 Doublon. n. f. [from double.]

1. In the quantity; to twice the degree.

Young Heli, as a muse by Mars begot, Born, Caesar-like, in noble and great deeds, Impatient to revenge his father's wrongs; His right hand double to his left succeeds. Dryd. Haply at night he does with horror thus A widow's daughter, or a dying son done; His neighbour's effigies he to-morrow sees, And double feels his wish in their increase. Prior.

To DOUBT, v. n. [doubter, doubting.]

1. To quash; to be in uncertainty.

"Even in masters divin, conceiving for a time, we may lawfully doubt and suspred our judgment, inclining neither to one side or other; as, name- ly, touching the time of the fall both of man and angel. Hecker.

Let no man, whilst the lives here in the world, doubt whether there be any hell or no, and thereupon live (as if absolutely) there were none. South. I doubt not but it appear to be a monstrous fully to decry holy things."

Can we conclude upon Luther's infallibility, because in a high notion, no way fundamental, an enemy writes that is of no weight? Add to this.

To question any event, fearing the worst. Doubting things go ill, often hurts more Than to be sure they do. Shaks. Cynthia.

"Admitting nothing, I urge to these Invalid, that which this then doubles up. Milts.

Sometimes with of in both the following senses.

Solyman said he had hitherto made war against divers nations, and always had the victory, whereas he doubted not also now. Kevel's History of the Turks.

Have I not manag'd my convenience well To try your love, and make you doubt of me?"

Dryden.

4. To fear; to be apprehensive of ill.

I doubt there's deep repentfulness in his mind. For the late flight his honour suffer'd there. Oneway. If there were no fault in the title, I doubt there are too many in the body of the author. Bakin on Learning.

This is enough for a project, without any name; I doubt more will be reduced into practice. Swifts.

5. To suspect; to have suspicion.

The king did all his courage bend Against those four which now before him were, Dribbling not without him him dort attend. Daniel.

To heistare, to be in suspicious; to wa- ter undetermined.

What fear we then, why doubt we to incence His utmost ire? Milts.

At first the tender blades of grass appear, And bodes, that yet the blast of Eurus fear, Stand at the door of life, and doubt to close the year. Dryden.

To DOUBT, v. a.

1. To hold questionable; to think uncertain.

He from the terror of this form so late Dribbled his empire. Milts's Paradise Left.

2. To think endangered.

He did ordain the interdices and prohibitions which we are to make entrance of strangers, which at that time was frequent, doubting novelties and comminution of manners. If they turn not back perversely; But that I doubt, Milts.

You that will be left fearful in the different, That gave the fundamental part of state, More than you doubt the change of it, prefer A noble life before a long. Shaks. Coriolanus.

4. To distrust; to hold suspic'd.

To teach vain wins a science little known, To admire superior sense, and doubt their own. Pope.

Doubt, n. f. [from the verb.]

1. Uncertainty of mind; suspic'd; un- determined state of flane.

Could any difficulty have been prop'd, the resolution would have been as early as the propos'd; it could not have had time to settle into doub't.

Those who have examined it, are thereby got past doub't in all the doctrines they profess. Locke.

2. Question; point unsettled.

He that appraises comments the flux of the wild low above the same; and no doubt but the animal is more or less healthy, according to the air it lives in. Archbloom on Almanacs.

'Tis past doub't, All Bedlam and Parantius is let out.

3. Scruple; perplexity; irresolution.

Our doubts are traitors, And make us lose by fearing to attempt. The good we oft might win. Shakspeare.

4. Uncertainty of condition.

And thy life shall hang in doubt before thee; and thou shall fear day and night, and shall have no assurances of thy safety. Dryd. I'm bound in

To fancy doubts and fears.

5. Sufpicion; apprehension of ill.

I define to be present with you now, and to change my voice; for I stand in doub't of you. Gal. in. 20.

6. Difficulty objected.

To every doub't your answer is the same, It is fell out, and fuby chance it came. Blackmore.

Dooubter, n. f. [from doubt.] One who entertains scruples; one who hangs in uncertainty.

Dooubtful. adj. (doubt and full)

1. Doubious; not settled in opinion.

Methods I should know you, and know this man; Yet I am doub'tful. Thus they their doubtfull confusions ended.

Milton.

2. Ambiguous; not clear in its meaning; as, a doubtfull expression.

3. That about which there is doubt, that which is not yet determined or decided; obscure; questionable; uncertain.

In handling the right of a war, I am not willing to intermix matter doubtfull with that which is out of the question for so in equal causes, whereof but one man's life is in question, which ought to be clear; so much more in a judgment upon a war, which is capital to thousands. Bacons.

In doubtfull cases, reason still determines for the safer side, especially if the cause be not only doubtfull, but also highly concerning, and the venture be a soul, and an eternity. Sailes.

There is first, the doub'tful whether his's, Or to the Tragedy definition require, Mve's that the ramparts might be broken down. Dryden.

Hazardous; of uncertain event.

We have suff'd one day in doubtfull sight, What fear's a' high, and well as I have heard. Milts. Newer councils to this.

What doubtfull war in end. Milts.

3. Not secure; not without suspicion.

Our manner is to always to cast a doubtfull and a more suspicion: eye towards a, over which we know we have least power. Hecker, Dissertation.

4. Not confident; not without fear.

With doubtfull face, and wavering resolution, I come, filling destroying my face, Sansion. Milts.

This was at last resolved.

If we were, agains't to great a for Comtending, and to doubtfull what might fall. Mitn.

7. Parring different qualities.
1. Soft wool, or tender hair. I love my husband still; but love him and his was when youthful grace, and the first dawn in the face of time. Dryden. On thy chin the springing beard began to sprout a double mould, and promise time. Prior.

2. The best fibres of plants which wing the seeds. Any light thing that moveth, when we find no wind, sheep a wind at hand; as when feathers, or down of fowls, fly by fro in the air. And to those he wove, that they might be clothed. Eton's Natural History. Lett. like 10, downward. Sandy.

3. [answering to wp.] Here and there. Let them wander up and down for meat, and grudge them not unfilled. Psalms, lxx. DOW. interj.

4. An exhortation to demolition. Go, some roll down the Savage; others to the inner court; down with them all. Shakespeare. If there be ten, think not, but down with them. But now they cry, down with the palace, fire it. Pull out th' affuring queen. Dryden.

5. A concomitant threat. Down, down to hell, and lay I fast three thither. Shakespeare.

6. [To go.] To be digested; to be received. If he be hungry more than wonten, bread alone will down, and if he be not hungry, 'tis not fit he should eat. I know not how absurd this may seem to the manners of demonstration; and probably it will hardly go together with any body, at first hearing. Locke.

7. To down. a. [from the particle.] To knock; to suffuse; to suppress; to conquer. The hidden beauties seem'd in wait to lie, to down vast ground that would not willing give. Locke.

8. Beut down; directed to the ground. Wanton languishing bow'd on her eyes the downcast look of modesty. Sidney. My will, my lusts, has long experience found. And first discover'd to my soul its wound; 'Tis love, that hath the sway and my downcast eyes, and greatly dumbfelled, witness'd my fervid. Dryden.

9. Thy downcast looks, and thy diffident thoughts, Tell me no more, for I ask not the fœces. My cause has found. Addison's Cato.

10. [from down and fall.] Ruin; calamity; fall from rank or state. Why dost thou say King Richard it desip'd? Dost thou think thou knowest better thing than earth, Divine his downcast? Shakespeare's Richard II. We have seem'd, by the ways by which they had design'd to rise uncontrollably, to have directly procured their fall, and their own downfall. Drayton.

11. A sudden fall, or body of things falling. Each downcast of a flooded the mountains poor From their rich bowels, rolls a silver stream. Dryden.

12. Of Dejection. Not more about the matters of renown When tyrant Nura burn'd it'd imperial town, Shrink'd for the downcast in a dolorous cry, For which their gallant lords were doon'd to die. Dryden.

13. From a higher flatation to a lower. Look downcast on that globe, whose nether Life with light from hence, thine. Milton. Hills are ornamental to the earth, allowing pleasantries prospects to those that look downwards from them upon the subjacent countries. Who would take this man? Now upward will be fair. And with life less than angel, would be more. Now, seeking dejectures, but as griev'd appear To want the strength of bulls, the force of bears. Pope.

14. In a course of successive or lineal descent. A ring the eminent does wear, That downcast has succeeded in his bough, From son to son, some four or five descendants. Dryden.

15. Moving on a declivity; tending towards the centre; tending to the ground. Jeffrey's, suff'd with jaundices in his eye, Discolouring all the view'd, in.twain divesting Downward, and with a cocker on her fins. Dryden. DOWNWRIGHT. adv. [down and right.] About to be in travail of childbirth. Ewes, away! We shall chose downwright if I longer stay. Shak. 3. Completely, without stopping short. His paper was roll'd in such a position, that she fell downwright into a fit. Arbuthnot.

16. Open; plain; apparent; undisguised. An admonition from a dead author, or a covert from an impartial pen, will prevail more than a downright advice, which may be mistaken as spoken magisterially. It is downwright madness to strike where we have no power to hurt. L'Estrange. We have been found inns, inns, inns, and inns, do not to have downrights money; but the necessary part of her mind is engaged with a pretext of place. Spenser.

17. Directly tending to the point; plain; artless. I would rather have a plain downright wisdom, than a fallacious and affected eloquence. Bin Towne's Discoveries.

18. Unceremonious; honestly fury. When it came to the count to speak, old Fia flared him in the face, after his plain downright way, that the count was flirk'd down. Addison's Count Tarissi.

19. Without palliation. The idleness was direct and downright in the people, whose credulity is illimitable. Brown's Vandal Errours. Religion seems not in danger from downright atheism, since rational men must reject that for which their country's conscience is in woe. Rogers.

20. From a higher flatation to a lower. Thou knowest my downwring and mine spying; thou understandest my thoughts after all. Psalm cxiv. 2. DOWNSWAMP. DOWNWARDS. {adv. [beneapart, Sax.}

21. Towards the centre. As you rise up the gentle, the drop will ascend flower and flower, and at length reach, being carried downwards by its weight as much as upwards by the attraction. Milton. Nowise.

22. From a higher flatation to a lower. Look downcast on that globe, whose nether Life with light from hence, thine. Milton. Hills are ornamental to the earth, allowing pleasantries prospects to those that look downwards from them upon the subjacent countries. Who would take this man? Now upward will be fair. And with life less than angel, would be more. Now, seeking dejectures, but as griev'd appear To want the strength of bulls, the force of bears. Pope.

23. In a course of successive or lineal descent. A ring the eminent does wear, That downcast has succeeded in his bough, From son to son, some four or five descendants. Dryden.

1. Draconian. From Dracon, the name of a lawgiver in ancient Greece, whose laws were harsh and severe.

2. Draffy, adj. [from draft.] Worthless; shabby.

3. Draffy, adj. [corrupt for draught.] Employed to draw.

4. To DRAW, v. a. [Drazen, Sax.]
   - To pull along the ground by main force; to draw heavily along.
   - Such his aspect, when sullied with bloody dust; Drags by the cords which through his feet were threaded.
   - While I have any ability to hold a commerce with you, I will never be flient; and this shaking to a day that I can hold a pen, I will draw it as long as I am able.
   - To draw any thing burthenome, any thing from which one cannot disengage one's self.
   - Can I, who lovd so well, to part with all my bliss to save my lover, Oh can I drag a wretched life without him? Smith.

5. To draw contemnuously along, as a thing unworthy to be carried.

6. The contempt was no sooner extirpated but he was reproached with disfiguring words, brought and dragged to the very dust, which he had partly cleaved with his life.

7. To pull roughly and forcibly.

8. To fall, that's justice; But then, to drag him after! For to die.

9. The weight of my misfortunes drag'd you down. Dryden.

10. To DRAG, v. n. To hang so low as to trail or grate upon the ground.

11. From hence are heard the groans of ghosts, the pains

14. Draff, n. [from the verb.]

15. A net drawn along the bottom of the water.

16. Calling nets were spread in shallow bourns, Draffs in the deep, and baits were hung on hooks, the beak set a spas."
dra'go', n. f. [drag and ver.] A net which is drawn along the bottom of the water.

Dragons were made to fish within the net, and being drawn along the ground.

Dragons.

Some fishermen, that had been out with a dragon, and caught nothing, had a dragnet towards the evening, which put them in hope of a fingerfish at last.

One of our late great poets is sunk in his reputation, because he could never forgive any concert which came in his way, but swept, like a dragon, great and small.

Dragnet.

Whatever old Time, with his huge dragon, had conveyed down to us along the stream of ages, whether it be fishes or shellfishes, jewels or pebbles, sticks or straw, seaweed or mud, these are as good as the fathers. Watta.

The dragon, the dragon! A plant.

To DRAG'ON, n. f. [draco, Latin; dragon, French.]

1. A kind of winged serpent, perhaps imaginary, much celebrated in the romances of the middle ages.

I go alone, like to a lonely dragon, that his fear makes flags and tall'der of more than bees.

Swift.

Drake.

May be the raven's eye. Shakespeare's Cymbeline. And ye dragget of the fierce stag.

Whom glittering gold and shining armours grace;

In other nations harnets are found:

Their guarders genst and protect'rs ownd'd. Retire

On spiny volumes there a dragon ride;

Here, from our strict embrace, a flame he gleid.

Pope.

2. A fierce violent man or woman.

3. A constellation near the north pole.

DRA'GONET, n. f. [from dragon.] A little dragon.

Or in his womb might fuke some hidden nett Of many dragons, his fruitful feeds. Fairy Queen.

Dra'gonet. [dragon and jet.] A fierce flinging fly.

The body of the cherub is from bright coloured, and it may be, that the delicate coloured dragonet, may have likewise some curious quality. Barlow's Natural History.

DRA'GONISH, adj. [from dragon.] Having the form of a dragon: dragonlike.

An arbitrary word.

Sometimes we are cloud that's 'dragony';

A vapour sometimes like a bear or lion. Shakespeare.

Dragony.

Furious; fiery.

He fights dragon-like, and does subdue As soon as draw his sword. Shaksp. Coriolanus.

DRA'GON'BLEED, n. f. [dragon and blood.] So called from a falle opinion of the dragon's combat with the elephant.

The dragon's head, to named a form to form, have been imagined an animal prodigious. Hill.

DRA'GON'SHEAD, n. f. A plant.

DRA'GON'TREE, n. f. A species of palm.

DRA'GON'OON, n. f. [from dragon, German, to carry.] A kind of soldier that servesifferently either on foot or horseback.

Two regiments of dragon's suffered much in the late actions.

To DRAG'ON', v. a. [from the noun.] To perfecute by abandoning a place to the rage of soldiers.

In politics I hear you're scarce, directly bent against the French. Dryden to have his free-born dragon'd into a wooden flute.

Prior.

To DRAIN, v. z. [trainer, French.]

1. To draw off gradually.

Salt water, drained through twenty vessels of earth, hath become fresh. Bacon's Natural History.

The fountain drain the water from the ground adjacent, and leave but sufficient marlades to breed mists.

Bacon.

In times of distress it drained much coin of the kingdom, to furnish us with corn from foreign parts.

Wiltshire. No less his own expense, but drained our treasures, luxury and expenses interested at home.

Albemarle.

The last emperor drained the wealth of those countries into his own coffers, without increasing his troops against France.

Swift.

2. To empty by draining gradually away what it contained.

Sinking waters, the firm land to drain, fill'd the capacious deep, and turn'd the main. Roscommon.

The royal bays a tawny wolf shall drain; Dryden.

While cruel Nero only drain'd.

The mortal Spaniard's ebbing veins, by rude wash, and black as age.

How darkly thoughtless is his rage! Price. Had the world lath'd from its entire, those embers must have been drained of all their fluids.

Clytie.

3. To make quite dry.

When wine is to be bottled, with your bottlers, but do not drain them. Swift's Direc. to the Butler.

DRAIN, n. f. [from the verb.] The channel through which liquids are gradually drawn; a watercourse; a sink.

If your drain be deep, that you fear cistern falling into the ground. Milton's Hyperdody.

Why should I tell of ponds and streams.

What carpets we met with for our pains? Swift.

DRAKE, n. f. [of uncertain etymology.]

1. The male of the duck.

The duck should hide her eggs from the drakes, who will seek them if he finds them. Milton's Hyperbory.

2. [from draco, dragon, Latin.] A small piece of artillery.

Two or three shots, made at them by a couple of dracos, made them stagger. Carew.

DRA'M, n. f. [from drachm, drachm, Latin.]

1. In weight the eighth part of an ounce.

The trial being made betwixt lead and lead, weighing severally seven drams in the air, the balance in the water weigheth only four drams and forty-one grains, and abouteth of the weight in the air two drams and nineteen grains: the balance kept the same deep in the water. Bacon.

2. A small quantity, in a kind of proverbial fent.

One loving hour.

For many years of bowre can dience.

A dram of sweet is worth a pound of sour. Fairy Queen.

No dram of judgment with thy force as just & Thy body is of pity, and thy mind. Dryden, Fable.

3. Such a quantity of distilled spirit as is usually drank at once.

I should do this, and that with no raft potion, but with a sizzling draught, that should not work melancholy like phial. Shakespe. Winter's Tale.

Every drop of brandy, every pot of ale that you drink, Baflhe your character. Swift's.

4. Spirit; distilled liquors.

A fourth fez, by merrier manners known, A model to the maid that slips alone.

From the strong fastidious if it thus get free. Another Darby, Ward shall find it in this Peace.

To DRAPE, v. n. [from the noun.] In low language, to drink draughts; to drink distilled spirits.

DRA'NA, n. f. [drama.]

1. A poem accomodated to action; a poem in which the action is not related, but represented; and in which therefore such rules are to be observed as make the representation probable.

Many rules of imitating nature Aristotle's drew from Homer, which he fitted to the drama; furnishing himself also with observations from the theatre, when it is put under the care of Epidaur, Furies, and Sophocles.

DRA'MATICAL, adj. [from drama.] Represented; by representation.

DRA'MATIST, n. f. [from drama.]

The author of dramatick compositions.

The whole theatre reins with the prates of the great dramatist, and the wonderful art and order of the composition. Burnet's Roy. Hist.

DRA'KE, [the preterite of drink.]

To DRAPE, v. n. [drap, French; draper, low Latin.]

1. To make cloth.

It was rare for prices by statutes and this act did not prescribe prices, but shined them not to exceed a rate, that the weather might draw accordingly as he might affect it.

2. To jeer, or satirize. [dropper, French.]

It is used in this sense by the innovator Temple, whom nobody has imitated.

DRA'PER, n. f. [from Drake.] One who sells cloth.

A piece of cloth in a draper's shop be variously fold'd, it will appear of differing colours. Boylston Coll.

The draper and mercer may measure here. Hovel.

DRA'PERY, n. f. [dropere, French.]

1. Clothwork; the trade of making cloth; woollen manufacture.

He made statutes for the maintenance of draperies, and the keeping of wools within the realm. Bacon's Henry VII.

The reverend clergy should set an example, by containing themselves, and wearing gowns, and other habiliments, of Irish drapery.

2. Cloth; stuffs of wool.

The Bulls and Frogs had served the lord Stowe with drapery, which was worth many years.

A bullock's skin from John Bull.

3. The dress of a picture or nature.

Poets are allowed the same liberty in their descriptions and comparisons, as painters in their draperies and caparisons. Pope.

DRA'PET, n. f. [from drap.]

Cloth, covering. Not in use.

Thence they brought into a fleeting half, Whereto were many tables fill'd dirip'd,

And
DRAUGHT. n. [from draw].

1. The act of drinking.
   They hung up one of their horses, and drank it all at a draught; which is likely well done, for it did not hold half a pint. —Gulliver's Travels.

2. A quantity of liquor drunk at once. He had once continued about nine days without drinking, and he might have continued longer, if by deceiving himself one night with hard study, he had not had some inclination to take a small draught. —Dryden.

3. Liquor drank for pleasure. It was a draught for Juno when the banquet was over, I would not taste thy troublesome offer. Milton.

4. The act of drawing or pulling carriages. A general custom of using oars for all sorts of draughts, would be perhaps the greatest improvement. —Temple.

5. The quality of being drawn. It was a white light and much sweetness in the butt and draught for most uses, and of the easiest draught. —Temple.

6. Reproduction by picture. Her pencil drew white or her soul designed, and she the happy draught farthest the image in her mind. —Suckling.

7. Definition; sketch; outline. A good definition is but the first rate draught of virtue; but the following strokes are from the wither. —Swift.

8. A picture drawn. Whereas in other creatures we have but the trace of his footsteps, in man we have the draught of his hands; in him were united all the scattered perfections of the creature. —Swift.

9. The act of sweeping with a net. Upon the draughts a power, not one fish was left, but two pigs grew to a casket of silver. —Haller.

10. The quantity of fibers taken by one draughting the net. He drew on his pipe, and call his net, which brought him a very great draught. —L'Estrange.

11. The act of flooding with the bow. Jeffery of Boullion, at one draught of his bow, flooding against David's tower in Jerusalem, breached three tiers of birds with small altars. —Candide's Remains.

12. Diversion in war; the act of disturbing the main design; perhaps sudden attack. I perceive the manner of your handling, at the first, by his sudden draughts drew me onto the enemy, when he looketh not for you. —Sp zeit. Spain.

13. Forces drawn off from the main army; a detachment. Such a draught of force would lessen the number of those that might otherwise be employed. —Addison.

14. A pin; a drain. Whatever entreaty in at the mouth goeth into the belly, and is cast out into the draughts. —Shakespeare.

15. The depth which a vessel draws, or sinks into the water. With manly sticke, her paws of mighty strength, Deep in her draught, and walketh in her length. —Dryden.

DRAUGHT HOUSE. n. [draught and house.] A house in which filth is depurated. And they brake down the house of Baal, and brake down the house of the Lord, and made it a draught-house. —2 Kings.

DRAUGHT. v. a. pret. drew; part. p. draught. [began, Saxon.]

1. To pull along; not to carry. Then shall all Israel bring ropes to that city, and we will draw it into the river. —2 Sam.

2. To pull forcibly; to pluck. He could not draw the danger out of his belly. —Judges, ii. 12.

3. To bring by violence; to drag. Who doth not even supply you, and draw you before the judgment-seat? —James, i. 6.

4. To raise out of a deep place. They drew up Jeremiah with cords, and took him up out of the dungeon. —Jer. xxxviii. 13.

5. To suck. He hath drawn thee dry. —Eccles. xiii. 7.

6. To attract; to call towards itself. We see that fall, laid to a cut finger, hexeth it; so it is drawn at, and it draws blood, as well as blood does itself. —Bacon.

7. To drive; to turn or defile the milk at last it can be generated. —Wilhelm von Tannen.

8. To procure as an agent cause. When he finds the hardship of slavery outweigh the value of life, "tis in his power, by reducing his master, to draw on himself death. —Litch.

9. To produce, or bring, as an efficient cause. When the fountain of mankind did draw corruption, and God's truth, by sin. —Sir J. Da.

10. To draw out with predestination: eye, and lead At will the manchild and the woman child.

11. As the magnetic hard iron draws. —Milton. All eyes you draw, and with the eyes the heart. —Of the pumice stone, the greatest part. —Dryden.

12. To inhale. Thus I call'd, and dray'd I know not whence, from where I first drew air, and first beheld this happy light. —Milton's Paradise Lost. While near the Lucina was his death, I drew the fulness air, and gage for breath,

13. You taste the cooling breeze. —Addison or Italy. Why drew Mars'field's good bishop power breath, When nature flied him, and each gale was death? —Pope.

14. To take from anything containing or holding. They drew out the staves of the ark. —2 Chron.

15. To take off the spit or broacher. The reaf.

16. To take from a case.

17. To take from the floor. We will our youth lead on to higher fields, And draw no swords but what are sanctified. —Shak.

18. To take broach out of the oven. And the joint pairs boards into ovens after the batch is drawn. —Mortimer's Husbandry.

19. To unloose or slide back curtains.

20. To close or spread curtains.

21. To draw a sudden picture.

22. To extract. Herbs draw a weak juice, and have a soft stalk.

23. To procure as an agent cause. When he finds the hardship of slavery outweigh the value of life, "tis in his power, by reducing his master, to draw on himself death. —Litch.

24. To produce, or bring, as an efficient cause. When the fountain of mankind did draw corruption, and God's truth, by sin. —Sir J. Da.

25. To extract. Herbs draw a weak juice, and have a soft stalk. —Batson.

26. To procure as an agent cause. When he finds the hardship of slavery outweigh the value of life, "tis in his power, by reducing his master, to draw on himself death. —Litch.

27. To produce, or bring, as an efficient cause. When the fountain of mankind did draw corruption, and God's truth, by sin. —Sir J. Da.

28. To procure as an agent cause. When he finds the hardship of slavery outweigh the value of life, "tis in his power, by reducing his master, to draw on himself death. —Litch.
DRA

20. To convey secretly or gradually.
The lies in wait draw themselves along.

21. To contrast; to lengthen; to spin.

22. To utter languidly.
The brand, amid the flaming fuel thrown, or drew, or tumbled to draw; a dying grom.

23. To derive; to have from some original cause or donor.
Shall freeborn men, in humble awe, Submit to servile shame;
Who from content and custom draw
The same right to be ruled by law,
Which kings pretended to reign?

24. To deduce as from postulates.
From the events and revolutions of these governorships, are drawn the usual instructions of princes and statesmen.

25. To imply; to produce as a consequent inference.
What shows the force of the inference, but a view of all the intermediate ideas that draw in the conclusion, or proposition inferred?

26. To allures; to entice.
I'll call them to the trumpet's sound,
As by the strength of their illusion
Shall draw him on to his confusion.

27. To lead as a motive.
Your way is shorter;
My purposes do draw me much about.

28. To persuade to follow.
I draw this gallant head of war,
And call thee thine spirits from the world
To outlook conquer.

29. To induce; to persuade.
The English lords did ally themselves with the Irish, and drew them in to dwell among them, and let their children be fostered by them. Drieden. Their beauty is not more apt to move force to draw or deter their imitation than discourses.

30. To win; to gain:

This seems a fate deserving, and must draw me. That which my father loses. Shaksp. King Lear.

31. To receive; to take up; as, to draw money from the funds.
For thy thousand thousand ducats here is fix.

32. To extort; to force.
Do all objects, and so well express'd,
Draw gills from veins, and draw from the grom's breath.

33. To wreak; to disfrail.
I wish that both you and others would cease from drawing the felicities to your fantastical and absurd fancies.

34. To compose; to form in writing; used of formulary or juridical writings.
In the mean time I will draw a bill of properties, such as our play wants. Shakspere. Clas. Women.

35. To withdraw from judicial notice.
Go, wish thy face, and draw thy actions: come, thou must be in this humour with me. Shak.

36. To evict; to embowel.
In private draw your poultry, clean your trips, And from your ears, thy foolish抢劫ing wits.

37. To convey a criminal to execution on a fledge.
To draw in. To apply to any purpose by distortion or violence.

38. To draw in. To apply to any purpose.
A diput, where every little straw is laid hold on, and every thing that can be drawn in any way, to give colour to the argument, is advanced with subtlety.

39. To represent by picture, or in fancy.
I do arm myself
To welcome the elevation of the time;
Which cannot look with me as well.

40. To draw out.
To draw the whole world expecting who should reign,
After this carnal, o'er the conqueror's head.

41. To draw in. To contract; to pull back.
Now, sorting mubs, draw in the flowing streams;
Leave the clear streams whyle for funny plains. Gay.

42. To draw up. To inveigle; to entice.
Have they invented means to win
The woman, and make them draw in

DRA

The men, as Indians with a female
Tame elephant inveigle the male? Hudibras.
It was the profane spirit of faithless michtants
That drew me in, and deceived them. Swet.

To draw off. To extract by diffillation.

Authors, who have thus drawn off the spirits of their thoughts, should lie still for some time, till their minds have gathered fresh strength, and by reading, reflection, and meditation, laid in a new stock of elegancies, sentiments, and images of nature.

To draw out by a vent.
Step your vessel, and have a little vent-hole stopped with a gill, which never allowing to be called out till you draw off a great quantity. Mart. Halsp.

To draw down; to abstrain.
It draws men's minds off from the buttercups of party.

To draw out. To occasion; to invite.
Under colour of war, which either his negligence draws on, or his practices procure, he levied a Heywards.

To draw on. To caufe; to bring by degrees.
The examination of the sibble matter would draw on the consideration of the nice controvers.

47. To draw on. To caufe; to bring by degrees.
The examination of the sibble matter would draw on the consideration of the nice controvers.

48. To draw over. To rise in a full.
I took a recided oil of vitreous and by degrees mixed with its essential oil of womanhood, to draw over with water in a limbeck. Boyle on Colours.

49. To draw out. To persuade to return; to induce to change a party.
One of differing sentiments would have drawn Luther over to his party. Aubrey.

50. To draw out. To protract; to lengthen.
He must not only die the death.

51. To draw out. To beat out, as is done to hot iron.
Ruster a piece of iron out, or, as workmen call it, dronk out, till it comes to his batch. Male.

52. To draw out. To beat out, as is done to hot iron.
Ruster a piece of iron out, or, as workmen call it, dronk out, till it comes to his batch. Male.

53. To draw out. To induce by motive.
Whereas it is concluded, that the retaining diverse things in the church of England, which other reformed churches have cast out, must needs be such that we do not well, unless we can shew that they have done ill; What needed this went to draw out from us an occasion of foreign churches?

54. To draw out. To call to action; to detach for service; to range.
Draw out their fill, pick man by man,
Such who dare die, and dear will fell their death.

55. To draw in. To range.
Let him strike his superior offices, that the next time he is draw out, the challenges may be pos'd.

56. To draw up. To form in order of battle.
So Moley-Zeldan found us
Drawn up in battle, to receive the charge. Dryden.

57. To draw up. To form in writing; to compose in a formulary manner.
To make a sketch, or a more perfect model of a pit-
To draw n. f. [from the verb.]
1. The act of drawing.
2. The lot or chance drawn.

Drawback. n. f. [draw and back.] Money paid back for ready payment, or any other reason.

Drawbridge. n. f. [draw and bridge.]
A bridge made to be lifted up, to hinder or admit communication at pleasure.

Drawner. n. f. [from draw.]
1. One employed in procuring water from the well.
2. One whose business is to draw liquors from the cafe.

Draws. n. f. [from draw.]
1. From the bottom of the water, or the drawer of of thin water.
2. Whole businesse is to draw liquors from the cafe.

Draws, v. t. [from draw.]
Stand in some eye, room, while I question my pantry drawer to what end he gave me the fig.

Shakespeare's Henry IV.

Let the drawer to be ready with wine and fresh glasses.

Let the wafters have eyes, though their tongues must be hid in the bottom of the drawer. Shakespear.

I and my father, are not free to go about and make the drawers abroad, and my father and I know not to be provoked. Tasso.

That which has the power of attraction.

Love is a flame, and therefore we say beauty is attractive, because physicians observe that fire is a great drawer. Swift.

A box in a cave, out of which it is drawn at pleasure.

There may be other and different intelligent beings, of whose faculties he has as little knowledge, or apprehension, as a worm, that up in one drawer of a cabinet, hath of the sense or understanding of a man. Tickell.

We will supposse the China dish taken off, and a drawer of medals furnishing their room. Addison.

[In the plural.]
The lower part of a man's dress.

The Materie hardens the bodies of their children, by making them go stark naked, without Shirt or drawers, till they are ten years old. Locke.

Drawing. n. f. [from draw.]
Delineation, representation.

They have not a form from their fleas they shall take, and of one beauty many blunders make. Pope.

Drawingroom. n. f. [from draw and room.]
1. The room in which company assembles at court.

What you heard of the worst spoken of you in the drawing-room was not true; for the sayings of princes are generally as ill related as the sayings of wits. Pope.

2. The company assembled there.

Drama. n. f. [participle from draw.]
An actor was drawn together out of a thousand horses. Clarendon.

So lofty was the pile, a Parthenian bow, with violent drawn, must put the shaft below. Dryden.

1. Equal; where each party takes his own stake.

If we make a drama game of it, or procure but moderate advantage, every British heart must tremble. Addison.

2. With sword drawn.

What, art thou drawn among those heartless hinds? Shakespeare.

3. Open; put aside, or unclosed.

A curtain drawn in presence of our view.

Drama's Tyranny Live.

4. Evicered.

There is no more faith in thee than in a stoned grue; no more truth in thee than in a drama. Dryden.

5. Induced as from some motive.

The Irish will better be drawn to the English, than the English to the Irish government. Swift.

If this friendship was drawn together by fear on both sides, it was not like to be more durable than was the fear. Hazaraud.

Dravwel. n. f. [draw and wolf.]
A deep well; a spring of which water is drawn by a long cord.

The first concoct, tending to a watch, was adrawwel; the people of old were wont only to let down a pitcher with a handcord, for as much as they could draw from the well. Johnson.

To draw. v. o. [from draw.]
To utter anything in a flowing, drizzling way.

Then mount the clerks, and in one lazy tone Through the long heavy page draw on. Pope.

DRAY. n. f. [brae, Sax.] The DRAYCART. n. car on which beer is carried.

Let him be brought into the field of election upon his dray, and I will meet him there in a triumphant chariot. Addison.

When dray bound high, then never croft, behind, When huckling yest is blown with winds of trade. Gay.

Drayhorse. n. f. [draw and horse.]
A horse which draws a dray.

This truth is illustrated by a difference on the nature of the elephant and the draybeast. Tassilo.

Drayman. n. f. [draw and man.]
One that attends a dray or cart.

A brace of draymen bid God speed him well, and had the tribute of his fupple knee. Shakespear.

Haste not cobblers, draymen, and mechanics governed as well as preached? Nay, have not they by preaching come to govern? South.

Dra'pleugh. n. f. [draw and plough.]
A plough of a particular kind.

The drapleugh is the best plough in winter for minty clays. Prior's Hayfaled.

Drazel. n. f. [perhaps corrupted from drafal, the foam or dross of human nature; or from draffe, French, a whore.]
A low, mean, worthless wretch.

As the devil uses witches, to be their ruler for a space. Spen.

That, when the time's expired, the drasels For ever may become his vassals. Hudibras.

Dread. n. f. [braeb, Saxon.]
1. Fear; terror; affright; horror either felt or impressed.

Think'st thou that duty shall have dread to speak, When pow'r to flatt'ry blows? To plainness his honour Is bound, when majesty to folly falls. Shakespeare's King Lear.

Let not thy dread make me afraid. Yet.

Was ever any wicked man free from the thongs of a guilty conscience, from the secret dread of divine displeasure, and of the vengeance of another world? Prior.

If our fears can be awakened with the dread of evil, he has armed his laws with the terror of dread. Pope.

2. Habitual fear; awe.

The fear of you, and the dread of you, shall be upon every breast of the earth. Gen. ix. 2

3. The person or thing feared; the cause of fear.

Let him be your dread. Isaiah.

To thee, of all our good the sacred springs. To thee, our dearst dread; to thee, our father king. Prior.

Dread. adj. [braeb, Saxon.]
1. Terrible; frightful.
DRE

That ever this tongue of mine,
That bade the sentence of dread banishment
On your' proud man, should take it off again
With words of truth! Shakespeare's Richard II.
Dread was the mountain he was parted from.
So should a martenslook, be to dread, you grim.
Shakespeare.

To be oppos'd against the warring winds;
To stand against the deep dread bolted thunders.
Shakespeare.

Terrible felt the rebel host,
When, coming towards them, so dread they saw
The heart of the mountain opened two't. Miln.

1. Awful; venerable in the highest degree.
Thus, attended gloriously from heav'.
Shalt in the sky appear, and from thence send
The tumbling archangels to proclaim
Thy dread tribunal.
Herw colle of Paradise Low.

From this decent
Celestial virtues rising, will appear
More glorious and more dread than from no fall.

This seems to be the meaning of that Contradicted phrase, dread majesty. Some
Of the old acts of parliament are said in
The preface to be mutumdfessi regis,
Our dreadful sovereigns.

To DREAD. v. a. [from the noun.] To fear in an excccive degree.
This may decide that which terrifies others, and Which yet all, even those who most dread dread, may in a little time encounter.

To DREAD. v. n. To be in fear.
Dread not, neither be afraid of them. Douet. 1. 2.

DREAD. n. f. [from dread.] One that Lives in fear.
I have confounded much of my play towards the dreadful popery. Swift.

DREADFUL. adj. [dread and full.]
1. Terrible; frightful; formidable.
The rigid interdiction which refuses
Yet dreadful in its miasma.

The full nights,
Accompanied with damps and dreadful gloom.
Milton.

Thy love, fill 'rm'd with hate,
Is dreadful as thy hate.
Greville.

2. Awful; venerable.
How dreadful is this place! Gent.

DREADFULNESS. n. f. [from dreadful.]
Terrible beauty; frightful.
It may justify fear for matter of extreme terror to the wicked, whether they regard the dreadfulness of the day in which they shall be tried, or the quality of the judge by whom they are to be used.

Dreadfully, adv. [from dreadful.]
Terribly; frightfully.
Not sharp revenge, nor hell itself, can find
A fiercer torment than a guilty mind,
Which day and night doth dreadfully concern,
Condemns the wretch, and fills the charge renew'd.
Dryden.

DREADLESS. adj. [from dread.] Fearless;
unsurprised; intrepid; unwhipt;
unsaddened; free from terror.
Dreadful, first he blaz'd that I from declare;
It was complant'd, that thou hadst done great tort Unto an aged woman. Fairy Queen.
All night the dreadfuls' angel, unpursu'd,
Through round's wide champaign held his station.
Milton.

DREADLESSNESS. n. f. [from dreadfulness.] Fearlessness, intrepidity; undismayedness.

2. Immeurable, to whom danger then was a cause of dreadfulness, all the composition of its elements being nothing but fear, with swiftness of delight.
Sidney.

DREAM. n. f. [dream. Dutch.]
This word is derived by Merle Cuff, with
Vol. 1.

more ingenuity than truth, from ἑραμανα τον θυσαν, the comedy of life; dreams being, as plays are, a representation of something which does not really happen.
This comedy of Thranus has enlarged by quoting an epigram:

Σοφον λαμανη
τον θυσαν,
τον θυσαν,
τον θυσαν.
(Alca.)

1. A phantasm of sleep; the thoughts of a sleeping man.
We eat our meat in fear, and sleep
In the affliction of those terrible dreams
That use us nightly. Shakespeare's Macbeth.
In dreams they feaful spirits proceed;
Or, slip'sw课外, labour to fonte distasteful
Dryden.

Great dreams hand ready to restore
The pleasing slumber of all you saw before. Dryden.

2. An idle fancy; a wild conceit;
A groundless suspicion.
Let him keep
A hundred knights, who will not on'ty dream
Each hour, each fancy, each complaint, alike;
He may regard his cogitations. Shaksp. K. Lear.

To DREAM. v. n. To dream, or dreamt, of.
[from the noun.]
1. To have the representation of something in sleep.
Dreams have always of old ideas, with them
The outward fames are flipp'd, not suggested by any external objects, or known occasion, nor under the rule or conduct of the understanding.
 Lump. I dreamed that I was conveyed to a wide and boundless plain.
Tatler.

2. It has of before the noun.
I have long dreamed of such a kind of man,
But, being awake, I do despise my dream.
Shak.

Dream of encounters 'twixt thine self and me;
We have been down together in my deep,
Unbuckling helms, filling each other's throat,
And with'd half dead with pestilence.
Shak. Coriol.

3. To think; to imagine.
These boys know little they are sons to th' king,
Nor Cymbeline dreams that they are alive. Shak.
He never has of the dulge, nor thought
That first orb more than a transient cloud.
Bunyan's Travels.
He little dreamed how night he was to ease,
Till trench'rous fortune caught him in the snare.
Dryden.

4. To think idly.
They dream on in a constant course of reading,
but not digesting.
Lolch.

I began to dream of nothing less than the immutability of my work.
Smith.

5. To be sluggish; to idle.
Why does Anthony dream out his hours,
And tempts not life for a noble day? Dryden.

To DREAM. v. a. To see in a dream.
The Macedon, by force, was
Was caught to dream in herbs for Pusley. Dryden.
At length in deep's their bodies they compose,
And dream the future light, and early rosy.

DREAMER. n. f. [from dream.]
1. One who has dreams; one who has fancies in his sleep.
The vision faded, and vanished from his sight.
The dreamer wak'n'd in a mortal fright.
Dryden.

If our dreamer please to try whether, the glowing heat of a glass furnace be barely a wandering imagination in the dreamer's man's fancy, by putting his head into it, he may perhaps be wak'n'd in a certainty.
Lamb.

2. An idle fanciful man; a visionary.

Some men he imagines me
With telling of the wool's dom and the ant,
Of dreamer Merito, and his prophecies. Shaksp.

3. A mope; a man lost in wild imagination;
A reverie.
The man of fence his meat devours,
But only clothes the peel and flower;
And he must be an idle dreamer.
Who leaves the pie and gnaws the dreamer. Prior.

4. A sluggish; an idler.

DREAMLESS. adj. [from dream.] Without dreams.

The forges of Mount Atlas, in Barbary,
Were reported to be both nameless and dreamless.
Camden's Remains.

DREAMER. n. f. Dread; terror.
The ill-fated owl, death's dreadful messenger.
The hoarse night raven, trump of doleful death.
Spen.

DREAMER. adj. [bequeath, Saxon, dreary.]
Mournful; dismal; sorrowful.

In urns and alters round,
A dream and dying found
Alight's the flames at their service quaint.

DREAMHEAD. n. f. [from dreamy.] Horrour; dreadfulness; a word now no longer in use.

A whisper, shortly from the shape of womaned,
Such as she was when Dallus the swoon'd,
She grew to hideous shape of dreamishness,
Plung'd with grief of folly late repented.
Spen.

DREAMMENT. n. f. [from dreamy.]
1. Sorrow; dismalness; melancholy.
I catch the winds and waters to him;
Your doleful dreamer. Spen. s Epitaphienum.

2. Horrour; dread; terror. This word is now obsolete.

Almighty Jove, in wrathful mood,
To work the guilt of mortal sins is bent;
Hurls forth his thundering dust with deadly fond,
Inroll'd in flames and smouldering dreameis.
Fairy Queen.

DREARY. adj. [bequeat, Saxon.]
1. Sorrowful; disfressful.
The meeter of death, the ghastly owl,
With dreamy thicks did also yield;
And hungry wolves continuallly did howl.
At her abhorred face, to horror and to foul.

2. Gloomy; dismal; horrid.
Of course they went through dreary shades, that led
Along the vast dominions of the dead.
Dryden.

Town, forests, hews, and men promiscous
drawn'd,
With one great death deform the dreary ground.
Prior.

3. This word is scarcely used but in poetic diction.

DREDGE. n. f. [To draw, in Fouchier, is to delay;
perhaps a net so often dropped may be called from this.]
A kind of net.

For other they have a peculiar dredge; a thick, fishing net, fashioned to three fells of iron, and drawn at the boat's stern, gathering whatever ever it meeteth lying in the bottom.
Curran.

To DREDGE. v. n. [from the noun.] To gather with a dredge.

The odours dredged in the Lyne find a welcome acceptance.
Curran.

DREDGER. n. f. [from dredge.] One who fitches with a dredge.

DREGGINESS. n. f. [from dreggy.] Fullness of dregs or lees; foulness; muddiness; feculence.

DREGGISHE. adj. [from dreg.] Foul with lees; feculent.

To give a strong taste to this dreggish liquor,
they fill in an incredible deal of brown or hop,

4 E whereby whereby small beer is rendered equal in mischief to from, Shakespeare in "Coriolanus."

dress; suffusion of dress; muddy; feulent.

Their numerous veins, such is the curious frame,
Receive the pure infusing streams;
But no corrupt or dryg parts admit
To form the blood or feel the limbs move.
Blackmore.

Ripe grapes being moderately pressed, their juice may, without much dryg matter, be figur'd
Boyle.

DREGS. n. f. [bearcpen, Saxon; dressigan, Ilandick.]

1. The sediment of liquors; the lees; the grains; the feculence.
Finn would make him author of the wine,
If for the dryg or other reasons blame.
Daven.. They often tread destruction's horrid path,
And drink the drags of the revenge's wrath.
Sandys.
We from the dryg of life think to derive
What the first spirtly running could not give.
Dryden.

Such run on poets in a raging vein,
Even to the dryg and fumeing of the brain.
Pope.

2. Any thing by which purity is corrupted.
The king by this journey purged a little the drag and leaven of the northern people, that were before in so great affections towards Bacon.

3. Drogs; sweepings; refuse.
Heaven's favourite thou, for better fates design'd
Then we're the dryg and rubbish of mankind.
Dryd. What difference we must be under whether God will regard our fasting, when we have nothing to offer him but the dryg and refuse of life, the days of leaching and fast, and the years in which we have no play at all.
Bage.

To DREF, a. v. [see DRAIN.] To empty.
The fame with drain; spent differently
perhaps by chance.
She in the juice of her lady's fecrets; 'tis but setting her mill a going, and I can draw her of them all.
'Tis drain'd and emptied of its poison now.
A cordial Souther.

DRECHET. v. a. [paramcet, Saxon.]
1. To wash; to soak; to steep.
Our garments being as they were drenched in the sea, held notwithstanding their freshness and gleam.
Shakespeare.
To-day deep thoughts learn me with to drench in mirth, that after no repeating drawls.
L'Homme.
Now we are dress'd, and the food refir'd;
Their moisture has already drench'd the plain.
Dryden.

2. To fatigue with drink or moisture: in an ill senfe.
In finish steep
Their drenched nature lies, as in a death.
Shakespeare's Macbeth.
Too oft, alas! has mutual hatred drenched my blood.
Our friends in nature's blood.
Philes.

3. To defy by violence.
If any of your cattle are infected, specially let both fiek and well blood, and drench them.
Mariner's Huchardy.

DRENCH. n. f. [from the verb.]
1. A draught; a fivell; by way of aborrence or content.
Let such be this, if the serey drench
Of that formidable lake beanna not shift.
That in our proper motion we ascend.
Milton.
2. Physick for a brate.
This is a pot or drink prepared for a sick horrible, and composed of several drugs in a liquid form.
Harry, says he, how many half thou think'st to day? Upon my word here's a drin. k., says he; and another, fourteen, an hour after.
Shak. Hen. IV.

A drinck of wine has with fucces been unr'd,
And through a horn the genet juwe in't.
Dryden.

3. Physick that must be given by violence.
Their counsels are more like a drench that must be poured down, than a drop which must be leisurly drank if I liked it.
King Charles.

4. A channel of water.
DRENCHER. n. f. [from drench.]
1. One that dops or drees any thing.
Drench.
2. One that gives physick by force.
Drench.
DRENT, participle. Probably corrupted from drenching, to make a proverbial rhyme to drench, or burn, a
What is it he saith, when I the present see
In danger rather to be drench than fiend?
Fairy Queen.

To DRESS. v. a. [dreffr, French.]
1. To clothe; to invest with clothes.
The first regard
He made was, was like his brothers to be dres'd.
And, as his birth required, above the rest.
Dryden.
2. To clothe pompously or elegantly. It is used with up and out to enforce it.
Look upon pleasures not upon that side that in next the fun, as where they look heauntously;
so that it comes towards you to be enjoyed;
for then they paint and smile, and dres them up in tiulfe, and glass gems, and counterfeited imagery.
French.
Few admist the native red and white,
Till poets dres'd them up to charm the sight.
Dryden.

Lilla Paolina wore, in jewels, when dres'd out,
the value of three hundred twenty-tw Lund nine hundred and fourteen pounds thirteen thirlings and four-pence.
Arden.

3. To adorn; to deck; to embellish; to furnish.
When she was in her room in the middle of the houfe, handomely dres'd up, for the commodi-fiers to fit in.
Clarendon.
Skill is used in dresing up with power for all the splendid satisfactions can add to it.
Locke.
The mind loves its natural refift of real truth, and is reconciled insensibly to any thing that are dres't up into any fain appearance of it.
Locke.

4. To cover a wound with medicaments.
In time of any fickness another chirurgeon dres'd her.
W'tman.

5. To curry; to rub; a term of the fable.
Our infirmities are fo many, that we are forced to dres and trend horfes and affay, that they may help our noife.
Taylor.
Three hundred h Andres, in high flables fed, Stood ready, faining all, and (most heartily drif' it drift.

Dryd. f de.

Driend. f. [from drefs.] A fixed
Well mouth'd well manag'd, which himfelf did dres.
His aid in war, his ornament in peace.
Dryden.

7. To reify; to adjourn.
Adam: well may we labour to dref this
This garden; fill to tent plants, herb, and flow'r.
Edik.

Well must the groud be dres'd, and better
dres'd,
New fall to make, and meliorate the soil.
Dryden.

8. To prepare for any purpoce.
In Oriday: they dres their father with roots of torment, instead of back.
Mariner's Huchardy.

9. To trim; to fit any thing for ready use.
When he dres'd the lamps he flipt burn in-cent.
Elyas.

When you dres your young hopes, cut away roots or fogs.
Mariner's Huchardy.

10. To prepare viuets for the table.
Thus the voluptuous youth, bred up to
dres
For his fat grandfons fome divifion of the
In feeding his tutor with fUCCESS,
An heir apparent of the gumorous race.
Dryden.

DRESS. n. f. [from the verb.]
1. Clothes; garment; habit.
Dresses laugh'd at in our forefathers wardrobe rooms or picture, when, by the circuina of time and vanity, they are brought about, we think becoming.
Government of the Tongue
A robe obfene was o'er his shoulders thrown,
A dres by fates and furies worn alway.
Pope's Statuts.

2. Splendid clothes; habit of ceremony.
Full dres creates dignity, augments confcuence, and keeps at distance an encroach'rer.
Clariu.

3. The skill of adjuving dres.
The man of pleasure, dres, and gallantry.
Pope.

DRES'SER. n. f. [from dres'.]
1. One employed in putting on the clothes and adorning the perfon of another.
She hurries all her hand-maids to the task;
Her head alone will twenty dres's att.

2. One employed in regulating, trim-ing, or adjuving any thing.
He unt the dres's of his vineyard. Behold, these three years I comeicking fruit on this fig-tree, and find none.

3. The bench in a kitchen on which meat is dres'd for the prepared for the table.
'Tis burnt, and so is all the meat:
What dogs are thefe? Where is the rafial cook?
How durt you, villains? bring it from the dres's,
And serve it thus.
Shak. a magic dres's in her hand she had,
On which full many a tender meal she made.

When you take down driers, clip a dozen upon the dres's.
Swift's Directions to the Cook.

DRESS'ING. n. f. [from dres'.] The application made to a fore.
The second day after we took off the dres'sings,
and found an eschar made by the caterick.
Wolmen in Tournay.

DRESS'ING-ROOM. n. f. [dres's and rooms.]
The room in which cloths are put on.
Lain boots might be found every day in his dress-rlmg-room, if it were carefully searched.
Swift.

D'REST, f. f. [from dres'.]
In flowery breaths the royal virgin dres't
His burning hoar, and kindly cloath'd his Addition.

To D'RE, v. a. [contrasted from dribble.
To crop; to cut off; to decilate.
A cant word.

Merchants gains come short of half the mart;
For he who drives his bargains a dres's a good
Dryden.

To D'RIBLE, v. n. [This word seems to have come from drop by successive alterations, such as are usual in living languages; drop, drip, dipple, drible, from then drive and driueller. Drip may indeed be the original word, from the Danish dipp.]
1. To fall in drops.
Simulacres predilect on the surface owe their form to the drenching of water that paffed over it.
Woodward in Ffis, a.
A drenching, difficulty, and a momentary suppreffion of urine, may be caused by the stone's shutting up the orifice of the bladder.
Anatomy in Animals.

2. To fall weakly and flowly.
Believe not the drenching durt of love
Can place a complete form to.
Shak. a to flaver a child or idiot.

To D'RIBLE, v. a. To throw down in drops.
Let the cook follow with a ladle full of soup,
and drible all the way up stairs.
Swift's Rev'd to Surman.

D'RELLET.
To Drink

1. To swallow: applied to liquors.
He had eaten no bread, nor drank any water, three days and three nights.  Sam. xxi. 12.
We have drunk our water for money.  Lam. viii. 4.

2. To fuck up; to slobber.
Set rows of asparagus with flowing them,
And let the purple violets drink the dream.  Dryden.

3. To take in by any inlet; to hear; to see.
My ears have yet not drunk a hundred words
Of that tongue's utterings, yet I know the sound.  Shakespeare.

Thither write, my queen;
And with mine eyes I'll drink the words you send,
Though they be made of gall.  Shakespeare.
Themselves? I set acts of gods, and heroes old.
What ancient bands in hall and bow'rs have told,
Attemper'd to the lyre, your voice employ;
Such the pleasant ear will drink with pleasant joy.  Pope.

I drink delicious passion from thy eyes.  Pope.

4. To act upon drinking.
Come, we have a hot venison pasty to dinner:
Come, my gentle grey, I hope we shall drink down all unkindnesses.  Shakespeare.

He will drown his health and his courage in his belly; and, after all his drunkens, trophies, at length,
Drank down himself too.  Swift.

5. To make drunk.
Benumbed was drinking himself drunk in the pavilions.  1 Kings.

6. It is used with the intensive particles off, up, and in. Of, to note a single act of drinking.
One man gives another a cup of poison, a thing so terrible as death; but at the same time he tells him that it is a cordial, and so he drinks it off, and dies.  Swift.

7. Up, to note that the whole is drunk.
Alexander, after he had drunk up a cup of fourteen pints, was going to take another.  Aristotle on Cynics.

8. In, to enforce the sense: usually of animating things.
The body being reduced nearer unto the earth, and emptied, became more porous and readily drink in water.  Brown's Vapours.

DRI

Tell what could drill and perforate the pole,
And to the attractive rays adapt their holes.  Blackmore.

3. To make a hole.
When a hole is drilled in a piece of metal, they hold the drill-bow in their right hand, but when they turn small work, they hold the drill-bow in their left hand.  Mason.

4. To delay; to put off: in low phrase; corrupted, I believe, from drrasteled.
She had robbed him out of his youth: she drilled him on to five-and-fifty, and now will play him in his old age.  Addison.

5. To draw from step to step: a low phrase.
When by such instructions they have once gotten within him, and are able to drill him on from one level to another, by the same arts they corrupt and quench him.  Swift.

6. To drain; to draw lowly.
Drill'd through the fancy fratum every way.
The waters with the fancy fratum rise.  Thomson.

7. To form to arms; to teach the military exercise.
An old cant word.
The role appears'd drawn up and drill'd.
Ready to charge them in the field.  illiad.

DRILL. n. f. [from the verb.]

1. An infringement with which holes are bored. It is a point prefixed hard against the thing bored, and turned round with a bow and string.
The way of tempering steel to make gravers, drills, and mechanical instruments, we have taught artificers.  Boys.

Drills are used for the making such holes as punches will not serve for; as a piece of work that has already its shape, and must have a hole made in it.  Mason.

2. An ape; a baboon.
Shall the difference of hair be a mark of a different internal species? distinction between a chattering and a drilling, when they agree in shape and want of reason?  Locke.

3. A small drilling brook. This I have found no where else, and suspect it should be rill.
Springs through the pleasant meadows pour their drills.
Which snake-like glide between the bordering hills.  Swayne.

To DRINK. v. n. preter. drank, or drunk; past, pasted, drunk, or drunken. [Spavana, Saxon.]

1. To swallow liquors; to quench thirst.
Here, between the armies,
Let's drink together friendly, and embrace.  Shakespeare.

She said, drink, and I will give thy camels drink also; to I drank, and she made the camels drink also.  Gen. xiv. 46.

He drank of the wine.  Gen. xi. 23.

When delights is the only end, and rests itself, and dwells there; then eating and drinking is not a feasting of God, but an inordinate action.  Taylor's Rule of Living Holy.

2. To feast; to be entertained with liquors.
We came to fight you. — For my part, I am sure it is turned to a drinking.  Shakespeare's Antony and Cleopatra.

3. To drink to excess; to be an habitual drunkard. A colloquial phrase.

4. To drink to.
To salute in drinking; to invite to drink by drinking first.
I take your princely word for those redresses.
I give it you, and will maintain my word; And thereupon I drink unto your grace.  Shakespeare.

5. To drink to.
To wish well in the act of taking the cup.

Give me some wine; all full!
I drink to the general joy of the whole table,
And to our dear friend Banquo, whom we miss.  Shakespeare.

I'll drink to screen Bardolph, and to all the valour amongst London.  Shakespeare.

6. To DRINK. v. a.

1. To swallow: applied to liquors.
He had eaten no bread, nor drank any water, three days and three nights.  Sam. xxi. 12.
We have drunk our water for money.  Lam. viii. 4.

2. To fuck up; to slobber.
Set rows of asparagus with flowing them,
And let the purple violets drink the dream.  Dryden.

3. To take in by any inlet; to hear; to see.
My ears have yet not drunk a hundred words
Of that tongue's utterings, yet I know the sound.  Shakespeare.

Thither write, my queen;
And with mine eyes I'll drink the words you send,
Though they be made of gall.  Shakespeare.
Themselves? I set acts of gods, and heroes old.
What ancient bands in hall and bow'rs have told,
Attemper'd to the lyre, your voice employ;
Such the pleasant ear will drink with pleasant joy.  Pope.

I drink delicious passion from thy eyes.  Pope.

4. To act upon drinking.
Come, we have a hot venison pasty to dinner:
Come, my gentle grey, I hope we shall drink down all unkindnesses.  Shakespeare.

He will drown his health and his courage in his belly; and, after all his drunkens, trophies, at length,
Drank down himself too.  Swift.

5. To make drunk.
Benumbed was drinking himself drunk in the pavilions.  1 Kings.

6. It is used with the intensive particles off, up, and in. Of, to note a single act of drinking.
One man gives another a cup of poison, a thing so terrible as death; but at the same time he tells him that it is a cordial, and so he drinks it off, and dies.  Swift.

7. Up, to note that the whole is drunk.
Alexander, after he had drunk up a cup of fourteen pints, was going to take another.  Aristotle on Cynics.

8. In, to enforce the sense: usually of animating things.
The body being reduced nearer unto the earth, and emptied, became more porous and readily drink in water.  Brown's Vapours.

DRI

Liquor to be swallowed: opposed to meat.

When God made choice to rear
His mighty champion, strong above compare,
Whole drink will only from the liquid brook!  Milton.

2. Liquor of any particular kind.
We will give you rare and deep sleep.
Shakespeare's Winter's Tale.

The juice of fruits are either water or drinke.
I reckon among the water all the fruits out of which drink is expressed, as the grape, the apple, and the pear.  Harvey.

O madman, to think unf of strengthened wine,
And strongen drinks, our chief support of health!  Milton.

Theo, when the alliteratedark of time's complete,
Are more commended than the labor'd drink!  Philips.

Amongst

DRI

To make a hole.
When a hole is drilled in a piece of metal, they hold the drill-bow in their right hand, but when they turn small work, they hold the drill-bow in their left hand.  Mason.

4. To drink to.
To salute in drinking; to invite to drink by drinking first.
I take your princely word for those redresses.
I give it you, and will maintain my word; And thereupon I drink unto your grace.  Shakespeare.
To drip. v. n. [drippers, Dutch.] 1. To fall in drops. 2. To have drops falling from it. 3. To be wet with, or covered with, a thin film of liquid. Swift.

DRIFFING, n. f. [from drip.] The fat which hogsweives gather from root meat. Shows all their secrets of soulekeeping. A great deal of work. Swift.

DRIPPING PAN, n. f. [drip and pan.] The pan in which the fat of root meat is caught. When the cook turns her back, throw smoking coals into the dripping pan. Swift.

DRIFFLE, adv. [from drip.] This word is used somewhere by Fairways for weak, or rare, drips, float.

To drive. v. a. 1. To produce motion in any thing by violence: as, the hammer drives the nail. 2. To force along by impetuous preulire. He builds a bridge, who never drives a pile. Pope. On鸵ults helments theory, Shiel's paid on half, and makes drive man along. Pope.

3. To expel by force from any place: with from. Drivers from his native land to foreign grounds. He with a genious rage refutes his wound. Dryden's Virgil.

His omnium flight the victors sail, Bums braid ours, and swallows Squadron drive. Pope.

4. To fend by force to any place with to. Time drives the winds from field to field. When rivers rage and rocks grow cold. Shaksp. Fate has driven 'em all

5. To chuse; to hunt. To drive the deer with bound and horn. Earl Percy took his way. Chevy Chas.

6. To force or urge in any direction. He flood and measured the earth he beheld, and drove afunder the nations. Hab. iii. 6.

7. To impel to greater speed. Such which the apple affected, till they had driven one of their corpuscles to the ceil, against whom they found in not the world to object, having only that his name was Targit. Hooker.

8. To guide and regulate a carriage. He took off her chariot wheels, that they drove them them by. Ex. xvi. 25.

9. To convey animals; to make animals march along under guidance. There find a herd of felters, wandering o'er. The neighboring hill, and drive 'em to the thore. Addison.

10. To clear any place by forcing away what is in it. We come not with design of wasteful prey, To drive the country, force the swains away. Dryd.

11. To force; to compel. For the metre fake, some in him sometime driven away, which require stricter placing in plain prose. Addison.

12. To hurry on inconsiderately. Most miserable if such unfellish fuss make them drive: on their time by the periods of sin and death. Taylor.

13. To disref: to frighten. This kind of speech is in the manner of depre- rate men fast driven. Spoiler's State of Ireland.

14. To urge by violence, not kindness. He taught the gospel rather than the law, and for'd him self to drive, but to draw to. Dryden.

15. To impel by influence of passion. I draw my gutter from his mad humour of love to living humour of madness. Shak. As you like it. Difficulties, which, though of a thousand angels, K. Charles, Lord Gogginion, being master of temper, and the most profound dilution, knew too well how to lead him into a mistake, and then drive him into choice. Addison. It is better to marry than to burn, says St. Paul; where we may see what driven men into a conjugal life: a little burning pushes or more powerfully than greater pleasures in prospect. Locke.

16. To urge; to press to a conclusion. The experiment of work that thineeth in the dark, we have diligently driven and pursued; the rather for that, of all things that give light here below, it is the most darkly, and hath least appa- rent motion. Barne's Natural History. We have thus the proper notions of the fore- elements, and both them and their qualities driven up and resolved into their most damp principles. Dryden on Buls.

To drive the argument farther, let us inquire into the obvious design of this divine architect. Cbee, on the Principles.

The design of these orators was to drive home particular point, either the condemnation or acquittal. Swift.

17. To carry on; to keep in motion. As a farmer cannot husband his ground so well, if he set at a great rent; so the merchant cannot drive his trade so well, if he set at great ofury. Bacon.

To DRIVE out. To expel. To scatter, and make myself and many of both houseloud of their places. K. Charles. As soon as they heard the name of Rosseti, they forthwith drove out their governors, and received the Turks into the town. Kent's History.

To Drive, v. n. 1. To go as impelled by any external agent. The needle endures to conform unto the current; but, being dissuaded, drives that way where the greater and powerfull part of the earth is drove. The needle's Pilgrim Errors.

Love, first to one, fill faze at anchor rides, And dares the fury of the winds and tides; But lifting once that hold, to the wide ocean born, Drives away at will, to every wave a breeze. Dryd. Nor with the rising wind would vainly Drive: But left the helm, and let the velsl drive. Dryden's Eneid.

2. To ruth with violence. Fierce Boreas drives against his flying falls, And rent the sheaths. Dryden's Eneid. Near as he draws, thick barbarions of smoke With gloomy pillars cover all the place; Nor light the least incendiary. Shakespeare By sparks that drive against his forced face. Dryd.

Then with so swiftly aneb the flood drove back- ward, It lift from underneath the icy herd. Dryden's All for Love. The bees drive out upon each other's backs, T'imbros their hives in claffers. Dryd. Din Schaff. While thus he birthed.

Peribous' dart drove on, and nail'd him to the wood. Dryden. As a ship, which winds and waves fulfill, Now with the current, now with the gale, She sells a double force, by turns obey Th' imperious tempest, and th' impudent seas. Shakespeare.

The wolves escaaped away, however, as hard as they could drive. L'Estrange. Thick as autumnal leaves, or driving sand, The moving squadrone blacken all the strand. Pope's Idiad.

3. To pass in a carriage. There is a litter ready: lay him in 't And drive toward Dover. Shaksp. King Lear. Th' flaming chariot-wheels, that shoke Heaven's everlasting frame, while o'er the necks Thou drivest of warring angels disfar'd. Milton.

4. To tend to; to consider as the scope and ultimate design. Authors driue at these, as the highest elegance, which are but the friguidites of wit. Bacon.

We cannot widely mistake his discourse, when we have found out the point he drives at. Locke. They look no further than his before than the next line, where it will inevitably follow, that they can drive to no certain point, but ramble from one subject to another. Dryden.

We have done our work; and are come within view of the end that we have before in driving. Addison on the War.

5. To aim: to strike at with fury. Four vagues in buckram let drive at me. Shakspere's Henry IV. At
DRY. n. [from dry.]

1. The perforin or inflammation which gives any motion by violence.

2. One who drives beasts.

3. One who drives a carriage.

Not the fierce drive, with more fury lends
The bounding fah, and, ere the stroke intreats
Love in the wheels his panting body binds. Dryas Virg.

To DRI'ZZLE. v. a. [dri'fle,n. German, to shed dew.] To shed in small flow drops, as winter rains.

When the sun sets, the air doth dri=izzle dew. Spenser.

In softening wintry d'izzled snow,
And all the conduits of my blood freeze up,
Yet hath my night of life some memory. Shakespeare.

To DRI'ZZLZ. v. n. To fall in short flow drops. And dri=izzling drops, that often do round
The frene=st hair, and, ere the stroke intreats
Love in the wheels his panting body binds. Dryas Virg.

To DRI'ZZLE. v. n. To drive, to shed, as rain.

The bee which makes no honey, and is therefore driven out by the relt.
The fact=ed judge, with his fair=ly hum.

To DRO. n. f. [droen, Sax.] The neighboring mountains, by reason of their height, are more exposed to the dews and d'izzling rains than any of the adjacent parts. Addison in Trufy.

DROZZLY. adj. [from dri=izzle.] Shedding small rain.

This during winter's d'izzling reigns be done.
'Till the new rain receives the ex=tinguished sun. Dryden's Virgil.

DROIL. n. f. [by Junius understood a contradiction of dri=zzle.] A drone; a flag.

To DROIL. v. n. To work flaggishly and slowly; to plod.

Let such wit be slain, born to base vocation.
Drudge in the world, and for their living d'izzle,
Which have no wit to live without toil. Spenser.

Droozle does contrast and narrow our faculities, to know which to apprehend and which things in which we are conversant: the d'izzling prattling scarp peace thinks there is any world beyond the neighboring markets. Government of the Tongue.

DROILL. n. f. [dri'zle, French.] One whole buffalo that is raise mirth by petty tricks; a joker; a buffoon; a jackpaddling.

As he was running home in all haste, a droll takes him up by the way. L'Estrange.

Why, how now, Andrew! cries his brother droll
To-day's conveyance, methinks, is something dull. Prior.

Demurely, dear droll! retires east
An with our follies gluts the heighten'd mirth. Prior.

A farce; something exhibited to raise mirth.

Some as yolly fame exists now,
For lofty limes in Smithfield droll. Swift.

To DROIL. v. n. [dri'zle, Fr.] To jeer; to play the buffoon.

Such auglit designs as inspire your inquiries,
Usped to be disclosed among fantastic flocks, that have only wit enough to make others and themselves ridiculous.

Glouver.

Men that will not reason into their fences,
May yet be laughed or droll'd into them. L'Estrange.

Let virtuous infule and droll on,
Yet what shall be able to droll away nature. Swift.

Drollery. n. f. [from droll.] Idle jokes; buffoonery.

They hang between heaven and hell, borrow the christians faith, and the atheists drollery upon it.
government of the Tongue.

DRO'MEDARY. n. f. [dromedaris, ItaL.] A foart of camel so called from dromedaries, because it is said to travel a hundred miles a day.

Dromedaries are smaller than common camels, slenderer, and more nimble; and are of two kinds: one larger, with two small bunks, covered with hair, on its back; the other leifer, with one hairy eminence, and more frequently called camel: both are capable of great fatigue. Their hair is soft and shiny; they have no fangs and foreteeth, nor horn upon their feet, which are only covered with a fleshy skin; and they are about four feet and a half high, from the ground to the top of their breasts. Carver.

Straw for the horses and dromedaries brought they unto the place.

1 Kings.

Moles, after these camels and dromedaries,
And d'izzled them with a whitewash of o. Milton.

DRONE. n. f. [broen, Sax.] The lazy drone, and d'izzled among with a whitewash of o. Milton.

DRONE. n. f. [broen, Sax.] The bee which makes no honey, and is therefore driven out by the relt.
The fact=ed judge, with his fair=ly hum.

Delivering 0̇r to executors pale
The lazy yawning drone. ShakSp. Henry V.

Luxurious kings are to their people long;
They live, like drones, upon the publick cult.

All, with united force, combine to d'izzle.

The lazy drones from the laborious hive. Dryden's Virgil.
wine, being overpowered by so vast a quantity of water, will be turned into it; he speaks very improbably.

...comparing... &c.

2. Diamond hanging in the ear.

The drops to thee, Brillante, we confess; And, Momentilla, let the watch be thine. Pape.

DROPS.

1. To pour in drops or single globules. His heaviness shall drop down deep. Desp. xxxiii. 28.

2. To let fall from a higher place. Other s or chimney tops and turrets row, And drop their anchors on the heads below. Dryden.

3. To drop to go; to dismiss from the hand, or the possession. With bresle's power check him from my sight, And bid my will avouch it yet I must not. St. John himself will scarce forbear. To his bite and drop a tear. Swift.

4. To utter slightly or casually. Not by thy words against the house of Isaac. Amos.

5. To insert indirectly, or by way of description. St. Paul's epistles contain nothing but points of Christian instruction, amongst which he seldom falls to drop in the great and distinguishing doctrines of our holy religion. Scott.

6. To insert or intermit life. Where the seal is unmanly or immoral, we ought to doubt their hope, or rather never entertain them. Collier on Dafis.

...in their favour, they suddenly spurn the pursuit. Swift's Story.

7. To quit a matter. I have beant the hoil till I have worn out these flows in your service, and not one penny left me to buy more; so that you must even excuse me if I drop you here. E. J. Extra.

8. To let go a dependant, or companion, without farther association. She drifed him on to five-and-fifty, and will drop him in his old age, if she can find her account in another plan. They have no sooner fetched themsevles up to the fashion of the polite world, but the town has acted them. Mention either of the kings of Spain or Poland, and he talks notably; but if you go out of the Gazette, you drop him. Addison.

9. To furnish to vanish, or come to nothing. Thus was the fame of our Saviour perpetuated by the perpetuity of the marks; which would indue that tradition, account of him to after-ages and redify it, if, by passing through several generations, it might drop away that was material. Quaint, as those fashion, always declined from those of quality to the middle fort, and thence to the vulgar, where they are dropped and vanish. Swift.

10. To bedrop; to specdle; to varigate, with spots, Variss flilla corua guttis, or springing, with quick glance, Shew to the sun their wavy coats, dapp'd with gold. Milton.

DROPOV. n. u. 1. To fall in drops, or single globules. The quality of the soul is not brain; It dapples as the gentle rain from heaven. Upon the place beneath. Shak. Merchant of Venice.

2. To let drops fall; to discharge itself in drops. Heavens dropped at the presence of God. Ps. lxviii. 8.

...of my drooping clay I lay, The cruel, nation, covetous of prey, Stain'd with my blood th' unholpious coak, Beneath a rock he fight'd alone, And cold Lycus's wept from every dropping stone. Dryden.

3. To fall; to come from a higher place. Philosophers conjecture that you dropped from the moon, or one of the stars. Gulliver's Travels.

In every revolution, approaching nearer and nearer to the sun, this comet must at last drop into the sun's body. C locality.

4. To fall spontaneously. May so thy thoughts, till, like ripe fruit, thou drop into thy mother's lap; or be with cafe. Gave, not hardly pluck'd. Milton.

5. To fall in death; to die suddenly. That in the dold of blows your son might drop. Shakespeare.

6. To die. None say Seneca, so from recollets us to the thoughts of our own death, as the prospect of one friend after another dropping round us. Dryd. to Pope.

7. To sink into silence; to vanish; to come to nothing; a familar pharce. Virgil's friends thought fit to let this incident of Helen go. Addison's Tracts. I heard of threats occasioned by my verses; I sent to acquaint them where I was to be found, and to set them up. Pope.

8. To come unexpectedly. Either you come not here, or, as you grace, some old acquaintance, drop into the place. Careless and qualmis, with a yawning face.

He could never make any figure in company, but by giving diligence at his entry; and therefore takes care to drop in when he thinks you are just seated. Spectator, No. 448.

9. To fall short of a mark. Often in drops or overshoots by the disproportions of distance or application. Collier.

DROPPING. n. f. [from drop.]

1. That which falls in drops. Thrifty wench ferapes kitchen-Ruff, And bussing, the droppings and the small of waiting candies. Daven.

2. That which drops when the continuous storm ceases. Strain out the last dull droppings of your senile, And rhyme with all the rage of importance. Pope.

DROPLET. n. f. A little drop. Those shed in us our human griefs, Scour'd our brink's flow, and thieved our dappled, which Fromiggard nature fall. Shakespeare's Timon.

DROPSQUE. n. f. [drop and squan.] Sprawled into the shape of drops. Woolfs.

DROPSWORT. n. f. [drop and wort.] A plant of various species.

DROPSICAL. adj. [from dropisy.] Diseased with a dropisy; hydrophelial; tending to a dropisy.

The diet of nephritic and dropetical persons ought to be such as is opposite to, and subdueth, the allkefent nature of the falls in the forum of the blood. Arbuthnot in Amens.

DROPSY. n. f. [hydrpos. Latin; whence anciently hydrosy, thence dropisy, drop-ff.] A collection of water in the body, from too lax a tone of the solids, whereby digestion is weakened, and all the parts flushed with fluxency.

...in a species of dropisy, is an extravagance of water lodged in the cells of the membrana adipsa. Stara.

DROSS. n. f. [broth, Saxon.]

1. The recrement or dulpnament of metals. Some found'd the draft from that the moral came, Some flirr'd the molten ore with indiet great, And every one old twinkle, and every one did sweat.

...that mixture of a little draft contain the chough to deprive behov'd of to much gold, rather than learn how, by art and judgment, to make leason of the metal from the other. Hunter.

2. Ruff; incrustation upon metal. An emperor, bid under a crust of dropsy, after cleaning, has appeared with all his titles fresh and bright. Addison.

...leavings; sweepings; any thing remaining after the removal of the better part; drogs; feculence; corruption.

Fair proud, now tell me why should fair be proud, Sith all world's glory is but draft unclean; And in the shadow of death till I find smooth, However now thereof ye little ween? Spec.

That most divine light only thineth on those minds which are purged from all worldly dags and honorless vanities. Relig.

All treasures and all gain esem as dropsy, And dignities and power, all but the highest. Mil.

Such precepts exceedingly diffuse us to piety and religion, by purifying our souls from the dropsy and fitch of seclusdel delights. Til.

DROSINESS. n. f. [from drophy.] Foulers; feculence; ruff.

The furnace of affliction refines us from earthly droffs, and softens us for the impregn of God's grace. Bra. DROSSY. adj. [from drafts.]

1. Full of scorious or recrementious parts; full of drogs. So both the fire the droggy gold refine. Dioscy. For, by the fire, they omit not many droggy and corious parts, but whatsoever they had received either from earth or leadstone. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

2. Worthles; foul; feculent. Your intention hold.

As fire these drophs rhymes to purify, Or as elixir to change them into gold. Dioscy.

DROSTHEL. n. f. [corrupted perhaps from drestchel. To drestchel, in Chaucer, is to idle, to delay. Droch, in Friack, is delay.] An idole wench, a flagguard. In Scottish it is the same. Brown.

DROVE. n. f. [from drive.]

1. A body or number of cattle: generally used of oxen or black cattle. They brought to their nations many droves of cattle; and within a few days were brought out of the country two thousand muntons. Hayward, that learned is unqualified with our modern droves. Brown.

2. A number of sheep driven. To an herd of oxen we regularly oppose, not a drove, but a flock, of sheep.

A drove of sheep, or an herd of oxen, may be pluralized.
managed by any noise or cry which the drivers shall acquaint them to.

III. Any collection of animals.

The fowds and fweat, with all their merry dross.

Now to the moon in waving morrice move.

Milton.

4. A crowd; a tumult.

But if to fame alone thou dost pretend,

The mifer will his empyrean lands,

Set wide with doors, adorn'd with plated bars.

Where drivers, as a city-gate may pass.

Dryden's Jaword.

DRow'v'n, part, from drove. Not now used.

This is thought indeed;

Had we done at first, we had drove them home.

With clouts about their heads.

Shakespeare.

Dro'v'er, n. [from drowe.] One that fats oxen for sale, and drives them to market.

The prince hath got your hero.

—I with him joy of her.

Why, that's spoken like an honest drower, so they tell bullocks.

Shak. Much ado about Nothing. The drower, who's fellow drower meets.

In narrow paiffages of winding streets.

Dryd. Junw.

DROUGHT. n. [byzoboe, Saxon.]

1. Dry weather; want of rain.

O earth, I will befriend thee more with rain

Than youthful April shall with all his flowers;

In summer's drouth I'll drop upon thee still.

Shak. And yet dry summer's heat, and the sun's fierce rays,

That to the garnering earth its corn fo rare is Shakespeare'sitmap.

To fouthe the Persian bay,

And inaccessible th' Arabian drouth.

Milton. As torrents in the drouth of summer fail,

So perish'd man from death shall never rise.

Sandsy. Their fea, their drouth, having no water to Gain upon the gather'd cloud's for rain.

Dryd. Upon a flower, after a drouth, earthworms and Land-fails innumerable come out of their lurking-places.

Bay.

2. Thirst; want of drink.

Hicarcas, pin'd with hunger and with drouth.

Milton.

One, whose drouth

Yet fears alike 'twixt, his eyes the current stream,

What liquid murmurs heard new thirst exults.

Milton.

DROUGHTINESS. n. [from droughy.] The state of wanting rain.

DROUGHTY. adj. [from droughy.]

1. Wanting rain; sultry.

That a camel, so patient of long thirst, should be bred in such drouth and parched countries, where it is of such eminent use for travelling over dry and sandy deserts where no water is to be had, must be acknowledged an act of providence and benignity.

Ray on Creation.

2. Thirsty; dry with thirst.

If for any years

Exhibit no fertility, alas! thou must

With tasteless water wash thy drouthy throat.

Philips.

To Drown. v. n. [from drown, below.] Orphaned, Skinner; from pursuance, Sax. Mr. Lyce.

1. To suffocate in water.

They would from drower those that refused to fain down the popular stream.

King Charles.

When of God's image only he found

Scarcely from the weary grave, and had

From his sons drownd.

Thrace.

2. To overwhelm in water.

Of fo much as it needs

To dew the fervorous flow'rs, and drown the woods.

Shakespeare.

DROGGY.

1. Idleness; indolence; inactivity.

It filleth out well, to slack off your drowginess.

For it seemed to be the trumpet of the base

Bac'tan's Holy War.

Drow'wished. n. f. Sleepiness; inclination to sleep. Obsolete.

The royal virgin shook off drowstiness

And rising forth of her softer bower,

Look'd for her knight, and bid him happy day.

Dryden.

Dro'wy. adj. [from drowe.]

1. Sleepy; heavy with sleep; lethargick.

Drowsy am I, and yet can rarely sleep.

Sidney. Men are drowsy, and desirous to sleep, before the face of an ague, and do use to walk and wriggle.

Bacon's Natural History.

The flowers, call'd out of their bed,

Sleep and raise up their drowsy heads.

Chawelland.

Drunkens at last and drowsy, they depart

Each to his house.

Dryden.

2. Heavy; lulling; causing sleep.

Sir Guym, mindful of his vows yest'night,

Uprose from drowsy couch.

Fair Qum.

While thus she rested, on her arm rec'd

The heavy willows waving with the wind,

And feather'd quills that warbled in the shade,

And ruffling streams that through the meadow

Dray'd.

In drowsy murmurs lull'd the gentle maid.

Add.

3. Stupid; dull.

Those inconstancies a body would think,

Even our drowsy, with all his drowsiness training,

Could never have been capable of.

Astorbur.

To DRUB. v. a. [druber, to kill, Danibh.]

To thieve; to beat; to bang; to thump;

To thwack; to cudgel. A word of contempt.

He that is valiant, and darts fight,

Through drougy, can no honour by'ts.

Hudibras.

The little chief had been fondly drunked with a good honest cudgel.

Le Frenche.

Though the bread be not mine, if it had been the least weight in weighter.

I should have had a 'rapped Luise.

Drub. n. f. [from the verb.] A thump; a knock; a blow.

The blows and drows I have receiv'd

Have bru'd my body, and beroa's

My limbs of strength.

Hudibras.

By setting an unfortunate mark on their followers,

They have expos'd them to innumerable drows and contusions.

Asthon. To DRUDGE. v. n. [brecan, to vex, Sax. drougten, to care, Datch.] To labour in mean offices; to toil without honour or dignity; to work hard; to flave.

And to crack'd fiddle, and hoarse labour.

Iniquity, did drougten and labour.

Hudibras.

The poor drowgty little: we must learn to watch

Our labours late, and early morning.

Mail winter frosts; then, cold and fed with sparrings

Rife to our toils, and drudge away the day.

Ornery.

Advantages obtained by industry, directed by philosophy, can never be expeted from drugging ignorance.

Glavecle.

Soon he came to court,

Preferring his hire his drowgty to the gate,

To drudge, draw water, and to rung-wait.

Dryd.

I made no such bargain with you, to live always drujoyng.

Dryden's Dedication, Add. This is an age, in which drowgrying!

One little fingle hour of love is more.

Granville.

Drudge. n. f. [from the verb.] One employed in mean labour; a drowgty; one doomed to serve.

To conclude, this drudge of the devil, this divine,

He flies above and laughs the while

At they, eren't his drudge, to execute

What's in his wrath shall bid. Miltons Par. L.f.

And riled with our flave.

Our captive, at the publick mill our drudge,

And don't thou, at our schooling and command,

Dispute thy owning. Miltons Agasivus.
4. A drudge. This seems the meaning here.

He (from his first sight proceeded
Through sweet degrees: that this brief world affords,
To each as many as the passive dregs of life
Freely commissary. Shakespeare.

To DRUG. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To season with ingredients, commonly medicinal.

The suspected groans
Do mock their charge with lies. - I've drugged
Their roasts, that death and nature do contend about them. Shakespeare.

2. To tincture with something offensive.

Of their essence;
Hunger and thirst-commanding; I've drugged as oft
With hostile dainties, with their jaws
With foot and fenders filled. Milton's Par. Lost.

Dru'get, n. f. A flight kind of woollen stuff.

In drugg'd drue, of thirteen pieces a yard, for Philip's son amidst his Persian guard. Swift.

Dru'gist. n. f. [from drug.] One who sells physical drugs.

Common mixture we bought at the druggist's. Boyle.

Dru'cifter, v. n. [from drug.] One who sells physical simples.

Common oil of turpentine I bought at the druggist's. Boyle.

Dru'nken, adj. [from drink.]
1. Intoxicated with strong liquor; inebriated.

This was the more when, falling on the guard,
Drunken up in rank and file, they flung apparel
Of flaming arms to make a short essay;
Then fallen to be drunken, the business of the day.

Drunken. We generally conclude that man drunken, who Takes pains to be thought sober. Spottiswoode.

2. Drenched or faturated with moisture.

I will make mine arrows drunk with blood. Dryden.

Drun'kard. m. f. [from drunk.] Drunk.

On giving excessive use of strong liquors; one addicted to habitual ebriety.

Some blood drunk on me would brighten opinion
Of my more frequent endeavours. I've seen drunkards
Do more than this in sport. Shakespeare. King Lear.

Drunken men imagine every thing turneth round: they imagine that things come upon them; they fee not well things far off: these things that they fee near hand, they fee out of their place, and sometimes they fee things double. Bacon.

2. Given to habitual ebriety.

Saturated with moisture.

Then let the earth be drunken with your blood. Shakespeare.

4. Done in a state of inebriation.

When your carriages, or your waiting valets,
Have done a drunken slumber, and defined
The precious image of your delight;
You straitly are on your knees for pardon, pardon. Shakespeare.

We should for honour take
The drunken quarters of a rake. Swift.

Drun'klenly, adv. [from drunken.] In a drunken manner.

My blood already, like the pelican,
Half thou turn out, and drunkenly cannot.'

Dru'kennes. n. f. [from drunken.]

1. Intoxication with strong liquor.

Every going off from our natural and common temper, and our usual severity of behaviour, is a degree of drunkenness. Taylor's Rule of Lying Holy.

2. Habitual ebriety.

The Lascaronians trained up their children to hate drunkenness, by bringing a drunken man into their company. world.

3. Intoxication or inebriation of any kind; disorder of the faculties.

Passion is the drunkenness of the mind, and therefore in its present workings not controllable by reason. Spenser.

D.R Y. adj. [brv; Saxon.]
1. Arid; not wet; not moist.
'The pure be a little wet on the inside, it will make a differing found from the same pipe dry.

When God said,
Begeter'd now, ye water under heaven,
Into one place, and let dry land appear!
Milton.

So, if you have, the sun,
From clear to cloudy, from hot to cold,
And dry to moist.

2. Not rainy.
At March and a May portend a wholesome summer, if there be a showing April between.

The weather, we agreed, was too dry for the season.

3. Not succulent; not juicy.
I will drain him dry as hay:
Dry shall neither night nor day.
Hang upon his jowls cold.
He shall live a man food;
Shakespeare, Much Ado.

4. Being without tears.
Dry mourning will decays more deadly bring:
As a north wind blown with a shaft forward spring:
Give forward vent, and let the fancies go.
Dryden.

5. Thirsty a-thirst.
So dry he was for sway.
Shakespeare, Timon.

As we should take that our life in writing may be neither dry nor empty, we should look in the same way to writing or wishing with fast-like descrip- tions: either is a vice.

Bunyan.

It remains to treat concerning ornaments within or without the fabric; a piece not so dry as the nearer contemplation of proportions and therefore I hope therein somewhat to refresh both the reader and myself.
Watts's Articulate.

Thy fire burns by heat, is an empty dry return to the question, and braves us all ignorance.
Gay.

It is a dry table, with little or nothing in it.

Authority and friendship work upon some, dry and sober reason works upon others.

L'Estrange.

To clear up this theory, I was willing to try some dry facilitiers with which the schools are filled.

careless.

These epithets will become dry, and more assentable of ornament.

Pope.

7. Hard; severe. [Dryly ancienly for| endure; dry, Scotch.

The rain was given to men, but kept ever royal chere in his house; the other would ask of those that had been at the table, if they were never a stout or dry blow given them.

Baron's Enquiry.

That fire burns by heat, is an empty dry return to the question, and braves us all ignorance.
Gay.

It is a dry table, with little or nothing in it.

Authority and friendship work upon some, dry and sober reason works upon others.

L'Estrange.

To clear up this theory, I was willing to try some dry facilitiers with which the schools are filled.

careless.

These epithets will become dry, and more assentable of ornament.

Pope.

8. Sight.

Sight: to be dry, of rock: of coral: cold.

Dryed beh't Adam could not, but wept.

Dryly.

1. Without moisture.

2. Coldly; frigidly; without affection.

The archaic, curious to himself how dryly the king had been used by his council, did strive to recover the kings situation.

Pope's Essay V.

Would thus, to honour and present suits climb, be hold in milite. how some mighty crimes:

Whose dangers, death, or, be death of unto him.

For virtue is but dry plait's, and flares.

Dryden's Journal.

3. Jejunely: barrenly; without ornament or embellishment.

Some dryness, within invention's aid, D餘yld write receipts how poems may be made.

Paper.

Dryness. w. s. [from dry.]

1. Want of moisture: siccity.

The Africans are conceived to be particularly parched and afflicted by the sun, by dryness of the soil; from water and distressed of water.

Brown's Vducer Earths.

Such was the disparity which did first disperse: Form, order, beauty, through the universe.

While dryness, moisture, colored might radiate,

All that we have, and that we are, fabled.

Dryden.

To dry, v. n.

1. To free from moisture; to assay: to exhaust.

The earth was wet, if you were so contented, or till there, Kats, twice burnt and dried away.

Heat dried bodies that do easily sapere, as parchement, leaves, roots, and clay: and to each time was dry.

Bacon.

Flowers, if they be dried in the shade, or dried in the hot sun, a small time, keep both.

Bacon.

The ordinary streams are dry:

In the leaves, the cause of the father of the flock, who, dying, his face upon the neighbouring rock.

Dryden.

2. To exhale moisture.

When great were no more, or grief and rage were one.

Within her soul: at least two rage arose.

Vol. I.

Which, burning upwards in sarcile, dries.

The rays that good considering in her eyes.

Dryden.

3. To wipe away moisture.

Then she with her right the wanton the riper.

See, ye your left returning.

Dryden.

T'}-tid, All alone

The widow's life in mourning.

Dry'd up her tears.

Dryade's Allusion.

4. To search with thirst.

Their honourable men are famished, and their multitude dries up with thirst.

Dryden's Allusion.

5. To drain; to exhaust.

Heus Ely'sis in an evil hour.

Drain an imperishable bowl, and thought itself in exaltation in rigorously steep.

Impregnate: him death's iron steep steeped.

Dryden.

6. To dry up. To deprive totally of moisture; to take all moisture away.

The water of the sea, which formerly covered it, was in time exhaled and dry'd up by the sun.

Wordsworth.

To dry, v. m. To grow dry; to lose moisture: to be drained of its moisture.

Dry to the death; that which has the quality of want of moisture.

The ill effects of drinking are relieved by this plant, which is a great dryer and opener, especially by perspiration.

Pope.

Dry'd up. [dry and eye.]

Without tears; without weeping.

Night: with what the heart of rock could long:

Dry'd up behold'd Adam could not, but wept.

Dryden's Journal.

Dryly. adv. [from dry.]

1. Without moisture.

2. Coldly; frigidly; without affection.

The archaic, curious to himself how dryly the king had been used by his council, did strive to recover the kings situation.

Pope's Essay V.

Would thus, to honour and present suits climb, be hold in milite. how some mighty crimes:

Whose dangers, death, or, be death of unto him.

For virtue is but dry plait's, and flares.

Dryden's Journal.

3. Jejunely: barrenly; without ornament or embellishment.

Some dryness, within invention's aid, D餘yld write receipts how poems may be made.

Paper.

Dryness. w. s. [from dry.]

1. Want of moisture: siccity.

The Africans are conceived to be particularly parched and afflicted by the sun, by dryness of the soil; from water and distressed of water.

Brown's Vducer Earths.

Such was the disparity which did first disperse: Form, order, beauty, through the universe.

While dryness, moisture, colored might radiate,

All that we have, and that we are, fabled.

Dryden.

To dry, v. n.

1. To free from moisture; to assay: to exhaust.

The earth was wet, if you were so contented,

Or till there, Kats, twice burnt and dried away.

Heat dried bodies that do easily sapere, as parchement, leaves, roots, and clay: and to each time was dry.

Bacon.

Flowers, if they be dried in the shade, or dried in the hot sun, a small time, keep both.

Bacon.

The ordinary streams are dry:

In the leaves, the cause of the father of the flock, who, dying, his face upon the neighbouring rock.

Dryden.

2. To exhale moisture.

When great were no more, or grief and rage were one.

Within her soul: at least two rage arose.

Vol. I.

Which, burning upwards in sarcile, dries.

The rays that good considering in her eyes.

Dryden.

3. To wipe away moisture.

Then she with her right the wanton the riper.

See, ye your left returning.

Dryden.

T'}-tid, All alone

The widow's life in mourning.

Dry'd up her tears.

Dryade's Allusion.

4. To search with thirst.

Their honourable men are famished, and their multitude dries up with thirst.

Dryden's Allusion.

5. To drain; to exhaust.

Heus Ely'sis in an evil hour.

Drain an imperishable bowl, and thought itself in exaltation in rigorously steep.

Impregnate: him death's iron steep steeped.

Dryden.

6. To dry up. To deprive totally of moisture; to take all moisture away.

The water of the sea, which formerly covered it, was in time exhaled and dry'd up by the sun.

Wordsworth.

To dry, v. m. To grow dry; to lose moisture: to be drained of its moisture.

Dry to the death; that which has the quality of want of moisture.

The ill effects of drinking are relieved by this plant, which is a great dryer and opener, especially by perspiration.

Pope.

Dry'd up. [dry and eye.]

Without tears; without weeping.

Night: with what the heart of rock could long:

Dry'd up behold'd Adam could not, but wept.

Dryden's Journal.

Dryly. adv. [from dry.]

1. Without moisture.

2. Coldly; frigidly; without affection.

The archaic, curious to himself how dryly the king had been used by his council, did strive to recover the kings situation.

Pope's Essay V.

Would thus, to honour and present suits climb, be hold in milite. how some mighty crimes:

Whose dangers, death, or, be death of unto him.

For virtue is but dry plait's, and flares.

Dryden's Journal.

3. Jejunely: barrenly; without ornament or embellishment.

Some dryness, within invention's aid, D餘yld write receipts how poems may be made.

Paper.

Dryness. w. s. [from dry.]

1. Want of moisture: siccity.

The Africans are conceived to be particularly parched and afflicted by the sun, by dryness of the soil; from water and distressed of water.

Brown's Vducer Earths.

Such was the disparity which did first disperse: Form, order, beauty, through the universe.

While dryness, moisture, colored might radiate,

All that we have, and that we are, fabled.

Dryden.

The manor supplies an oil for the incision of the bones and ligaments in the articulations, and particularly of the ligaments, preserving them from dryness and rigidity, and keeping them supple and flexible.

Roy on the Chymis.

Is the face ever likely to be involved in the fun, or to be emptied by buckets? Why then must we fancy this impossible dryness, and then, upon that fictitious account, bullfinch natural.

Dryden.

2. Want of succulence.

If he 'ill'd

His visage with his voluptuousness,

Full torrid and unwieldly.

Call on him for 't.

Shakespeare, Antony and Cleop.

The differences of mucous flesh depend upon the hardness, tenderness, moisture, or dryness of the fiber.

Aristotle.
DUC.

Thee demoniacks let me dub
With the same of legion club.
Soul's,
As light as duck's a man of worth;
Venus shall give him form, and Anthe birth. Page.

DUB, n. f. [from the verb.] A blow; a knock.

As skilful coopers hoop their tubs
With as much dexterity.

DUBIOUSLY, adv. [from dubious.] A thing doubtful.

A word not used.

Men often swallow falsities for truths, doubts for certainties, falsities for possibilities, and possibilities for certainties. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

DUBIOUSLY, adj. [dubious, Lat.] Doubtful; uncertain; without any determination.

DUBIOUSLY, adv. [dubious.] Uncertain; that of which the truth is not fully known.

No quick reply to dubious questions made.

We also call it a dubious or doubtful proposition, when there are no arguments on either side.

Watts's Logic.

3. Nor plain; not clear.

Satan with left toll, and now with ease,
Waits on the calmer wave, by dubious light. Milton.

4. Having the event uncertain.

His utmost pow'r with adverse pow'r oppos'd,
In dubious battle, on the plains of heav'n. Milton.

DUBIOUSLY. n. f. [from dubious.]

Uncertainty; doubtfulness.

She speaks with dubious, not with the certainty of a Latin. Brome.

DUBITABLE, adj. [dubious, Lat.] Doubtful; uncertain; what may be doubted.

DUBITATION, n. f. [dubitation, Latin.]
The act of doubting; doubt.

—Many of the ancients denied the antipodes; but the experience of our enlarged navigation can now set them beyond all dubitations. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

Dubititation be called a negative perception; that is, when I perceive that I see not what I would see.

Duc.

DUCAL, adj. [from duke.] Pertaining to, or the office of, a ducal coronet.

DUCAT, n. f. [from duke.]

A coin struck by dukers; in silver, valued at about four shillings and six pence; in gold, at nine shillings and six pence.

I cannot inutile raise up the grafs
Of full three thousand dukats. Shakespeare.

There was one that died in debt; it was reported, where his creditors were, that he was dead one fold, he laid carried five hundred dukats of mine into the other world. Bacon.

Duck.

Duck, n. f. (ants, ducks, to dip, Dut.)

1. A water fowl, small and tame.

The ducks, that heard the proclamation cried, and fear'd a prosecution might better,
Full twenty mile from town their voyage take,
Gone, with others of the liquid lakes. Dryden.

Grebe, if you find your load subject to turn ducks into it.

Mirabeau's History.

2. A word of endearment, or fondness.

Will you buy any tape, or lace for your cap,
My dainty duck, my dear duck? Shak. What's Your Name?

3. A declaration of the head; so called from the frequent action of a duck in the water.

Back, shepherds, back; enough your play
Two next sunbeams holy day;
Mirth and cheerfulness are but the due reward of innocence of soul. Abel's Divine Dialogue. Abraham's, or instead of bliss, is rather bitter in its effect than otherwise, according to the Sacred Writs. There is a respect due to mankind, which should be felt by all the wise to protect innocent multitudes.

2. Proper; fit; appropriate.

Properly to be called, is to be given in due season, and in due manner, and not to be called, is to be called in a manner not fit for the thing called.

3. Exact; without deviation.

You might be able to decide, by the due process of law, to what extent the act is lawful, and what shall be the extent of the damages.

4. Consequent to; occasioned by, or affected by.

Proper, not usual, is to be used, in accordance with the usual practice, and not as usual.

5. The motion of the due time, the due place, and the due manner, are the due things.

Act, by the due time, and in the due place, and in the due manner, and not by the due time, and in the due place, and in the due manner.

DUE, n. s. [from the adjective.]

1. That which belongs to one; that which may be justly claimed.

My due from thee is my due, and my due from thee is my due. Shakespeare.

The son of Duncan, from whom this tyrant holds the due of birth, is the son of Duncan, from whom this tyrant holds the due of birth. Shakespeare's Macbeth.

2. Full, complete.

The full of honor to the full of honor. Shakespeare's Othello.

3. Take this pardon, not as given by you, but as my merit and my beauty due. Dryden.

No popular assembly ever knew, or pretended, what was due to them. Southey.

4. Right; just title.

The key of this infernal pit by due. And the command of heaven, all-powerful king, I keep. Milton's Paradise Lost.

5. Whatever custom or law requires to be done.

Befied, by, you would yield, or yield by, or any other due, and none but ye. Milton.

They pay the dead annual dues. Dryden.

6. Custom; tribute; exactions; legal or customary perquisites.

In respect of the due duty due that are paid at many other parts, this especially retains the name of free.

To DUE, v. n. s. [from the noun.]

To pay as due; perhaps for endear. It is perhaps only in this single passage, proper to give the spirit of their prose. That I thy enemy due thee within. Shakespeare.

DUEs.T.L. n. s. (duellum, Latin.) A combat between two; a single fight.

In many armies, if the matter should be tried by duels between two champions, the victor should go on due virtue, and yet, if it be tried by the guns, go on the other side. Sec. 8. Dizknot not of your right. As of a dought or the local wounds. Of head or heart. Shakespeare's Paradise Lost.

That I that wrong'd you, I say thy life have fought. Was not more justly fought. Walter.
DULL adj. [dull, Welsh; bole, Saxon; del, nad, Dutch.]
1. Stupid; dolthit; blockish; unapprehenfive; indolent; flow of understanding. Such is their evil hap to play upon dull spirited men.
He that has learned as wit by nature, nor attains to the profanest of gross brevity, or comes of a very dull kindred.
Sometimes this perception, in some kind of dull, is more observable than the sense; so that the sense is but a dull thing in comparison of it.
Every man, even the dullish, is thinking more than the most eloquent can teach him to utter.
2. Blunt; obtuse.
Meeting with Time, Slack things, said I.
The fity is dull; when it is for blame.
3. Unready; awkward.
Gymnasia a great while flood still, with a kind of dull amazement, looking atest upon her.
O help thou my weak wit, and sharpen my dull tongue.
Memory is so necessary to all conditions of life, that we are not to fear it should grow dull for want of exercise; if exercise would make it stronger.
Lucre.
4. Hebated; not quick.
This people’s heart is waxed gross, and their ears are dull of hearing.
The princes of Germany had but a dull fear of the greatness of Spain, upon a general apprehension; now that fear is sharpened and pointed.
5. Sad; melancholy.
6. Sluggish; heavy; flow of motion.
Thenceforward the waters waxed dull and flow,
And all that drunk thereof did faint and forbear grow.
7. Grofs; clowdy; vile.
She excels each mortal thing
Upon the dull earth dwelling.
Shaksp. Two Gentlemen of Verona.
8. Not exhilarating; not delightful; as : to make dizziness dull sunk.
9. Not bright; : as, the mirrour, it dull, the fire is dull.
I’ll not be made a sort and dull-eyed fool.
To break the head, relent, and flyb, and yield
To Christian intercessors.
Shaksp. Merchant of Venice.
10. Drowsy; floppy.
11. Dull. v. a. [from the adjective.]
1. To flupify; to infuriate.
So was the dulled with all, that we could come near to hear her speeches, and yet not perceive the hurt to her language, nor her lamentation.
Sidney.
Those drugs the bar
Will flupify and dull the sense awiile.
Shaksp. Cymbeline.
2. To blunt; to obtuse.
Borrowing dulls the edge of industry.
Shaksp.
This entrance of the battle did that the courage of the Spaniards, though it dulled their swords.

To add to this, the more; to weaken.
Nothing hath more dulled the wits, or taken away the will of children from learning, than care in making of Latin.
3. To add; to make melancholy.
4. To hebetate; to weaken.
Now forced to overlook with beakish tears,
The troublesome noise did dull their dainty ears.
Shaksp.
5. To damp; to clog.

Dullness.
They spoke not a word:
But like dull statues, or unbreathing stones,
Star’d each on other.
Shaksp. Richard III.

DUMP.
1. Mute; incapable of speech.

DUMPLING n. f. [from dump, heavy.]
A sort of pudding.

Dumb.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.

Dum.
DUN

DUN, adj. [Saxon.] 1. A colour partaking of brown and black. We are not to expect a fair and full white, such as is that of paper, but some dusky of colour, for to the nature of brown there is a mixture of light and darkness, or of white and black, that is, a grey, or dun, or ruff brown. Næsson's Olfich. 2. Dark; gloomy. Corne. thick night. And still the dun smoke of hell. Shak. He then survey'd... Hell and the gulph between, and Satan there Carried him to the wall of heaven on this... In the dun's fulness. Milton's Paradise Lost. 7. DUN. v. a. [Saxon, to clainm.] To claim a debt with vehemence and importunity.

Passer of thy luck, and bow'r of thy billy; they'll never sleep alone again. I shall be disturbing this every day. When thou dost' thy parents, seldom they, Without their least presence. Dryd. Juv. Remember what the world is. Swift.

DUN. n. f. [from the verb.] A clamorous, importunate, troublesome creditor. Thus, while my gentle minutes lose love, When thou dost'st my gentle part, a dun, A horrible monster I haste by gods and men. To my eternal acced, ascend. Phillips. It gives your eyes to be pilled by the grieve by some rascal dun-bit, the foremost in my bills. Addison's John Bull.

DUNCE. n. f. [A word of uncertain etymology; perhaps from Dumn, Dutch, stupid.] A dollard; a dot; a thick-skulled, a stupid, indocile animal. Dunces, the bull. I once allowed. To tickle, on thy flow, the thick-skulled crow. Dryd. Was Ephphates' great dance to imagine a thing, inadvertent in itself, should be directly opposite to the law of God. Swift. I never knew this town without dancing and who had itt not enough to give rise to some new wood. Swift.

DUNG. n. f. [Saxon.] The excretion of animals used to feed the ground. For dung, all excrements are the residue and perversions of nourishments. Bacon's Nat. Hist. I judge the likeliest way to be the perforation of the body of the tree in several places, one above the other, and the filling of the holes with dung, mingled with the medicine; and the watering of those slums of dung with fillets of an infusion of those plants in dung, and made to be used in three or four days. Bacon's Natural History. For when from herds the pure part must be won, From gods by killing, this is better done By piling dung than by the fire. Dryd. He soon would learn to think like me. And blest his ravish'd eye to see Such order from confusion sprung. Such gods a humbling from dung. Swift.

To DUNG. v. a. [from the noun.] To manure with dung.

Dung was of old, that dungs of grounds when the wind bloweth, and in the decrease of the wind doth help them. Bacon's Nat. Hist. There, as his dream foretold, a cart he found That carried compost forth to dung the ground. Drydyan.

DUR'GEO'N. n. f. [from dungion, the tower in which prisoners were kept. Occasionally strong words are in time called dungaeus.] A close prison: generally spoke of a prison dark or subterraneous. Then up he took the lumbered fenestrae coarse, And, ere it had out the his swoon awake, His to the cable brought with bawdy force. And in a dungion deep him three without remorse. Swift.

DUR. To DUR', v. a. [from the noun.] To trick; to cheat. The th' is a bigot keep, a genius cut; Falchion through petty, and dullish with wit. Pope. DU'PLE, adj. [pluris, Latin.] Double; one repeated.

Du'PLICATE. v. a. [from the verb.] Duplication proportion to the square of the ratio. This, in a rank of geometrical proportions, the first term to the third is said to be in a duplicate proportion of the first to the second, or as its square to the square of the commensurate. Glasscote.

2. To fold together. Du'PLICATE. v. a. [from the verb.] Duplication proportion to the square of the ratio. Duplication proportion to the square of the ratio. This, in a rank of geometrical proportions, the first term to the third is said to be in a duplicate proportion of the first to the second, or as its square to the square of the commensurate. Glasscote.

2. The act of doubling. What great pains hath been taken concerning the manufacture of a circle, and the duplication of a cube, and some other questions of this nature, DURABILIT'TY, n. f. [durabilis, Latin.] The power of lasting; continuance; endurance. Stories, that in dignity of nature inferior unto plants, yet exceed them in firmness of structure, or durability of being. Hester. Our times upon the earth have neither certainty durability. Hest. 3. DURABLE, adj. [durabilis, Latin.] 1. Lasting; having the quality of long continuance. The bones of his body may compare to the hard rocks and stones, and therefore strong and durable. Nature's 0cft. Wk.

DURABLENESS. n. f. [from durable.] Power of lasting; duration. The different consistence and durability of the coins whereby they confide, are more or less. A bad poet, if he cannot become immortal by the goodness of his verse, may by the durability of the metal that supports it.

Du'RA'BLY adv. [from durable.] In a lasting manner. There indeed he found his fame flourishing, his monuments engraven in marble, and yet more durably in men’s memories.

Du'rance. n. f. [from durance; law French.] 1. Imprisonment; the custody or power of a jailor; a prison.

The Duke and Helen of thy noble thoughts, Is in base durance and contemptious pris’ns:
Hast thither by mechanic dirty hands. — Shakespeare.

A poor, innocent, forlorn stranger, languishing in durance, upon the false accusations of a living, insolent, whoring woman. — South.

There’s neither iron nor gore, Portcullis, heavy doors, nor bolts, nor grate;
And yet men durance there abide,
In dungeons twice three inches wide. — Hals.

Notwithstanding the warning and example before me, I commit myself to lasting durance. — Congreve’s Old Bachelor.

2. Endurance; continuance; duration.

A doubtful word. Sick nature at that instant trembled round,
And mother earth’s life felt as the felt the wound:
Oh, what a vision was this new made shape!
How far more mighty than heaven’s love, hell’s hate! — Dryden.

Dura'tion. n. f. [durate; Latin.] 1. A sort of distance or length, the idea which we get not, from the permanent parts of space, but from the fleeting and perpetually varying parts of succession. Locke.

2. Power of continuance.

Duration is a circumstance so essential to happiness, that if we conceived it possible for the joys of heaven itself to pass us in an instant, we should find ourselves not much concerned for the attainment of them. — Riggs.

3. Length of continuance.

Arbitrary, by greatness of action, does not only mean it should be great in its nature, but also in its duration; that it should have a due length in it. — Addison’s Spectator.

7 to DURE. v. n. [dura; Latin.] To last; to continue; to endure.

The delights and pleasures of the world are most pleasing while they dure. — Raleigh’s History.

DUR'eful. adj. [from endure and full.] Lasting; of long continuance; durable. Not in use. The dureful task, whose top is not yet met, is long ere it conceives the kindling fire.

But when it is once dast born, it dast divide
Great heals, and make its fame to hav’n apostles. — Spencer.

DUR’ESSE. n.f. [French; hardship, severity.]

1. Imprisonment; constraint; confinement.

2. [In law.] A plea used, by way of exception, by him who, being cast into prison at a man’s suit, or otherwise by threats, beating, &c. hardly used, feels any bond to him during his imprisonment. This the law holds as invalid, and supposes to be confined. — Fuller.

Dur’ing, prep. [This word is rather participial from dure; as, during life, during date, continuance. It means merely the number of the name.]

To tenderness to, with, or toward. Dusk from the firmness of the lower clay, therefore commit myself to covered. There being a tender gilt in the middle, there should be a circlet to keep up the further. — Addison on Ancient Medals.

DUSK. v. n. [dusky; Dutch; dusky; dim; dark; dimly; darkly.]

1. Tending to darkness; obscure; not luminous.

Here lies the dusky tomb of Mortimer, Childe with ambition of the meaner sort. — Shakespeare.

There these winds and dusky valleys hide and

Dusky adj. [from dust; dusky; Dutch.]

1. Tending to blackness; dark-coloured; not clear; not bright. They did plot
The means that dusky Dis my daughter got. — Se. Alc.

It is not green, but of a dusky brown colour. — When love in dusky clouds involves the skies,
And the sainted crescent shoots its bright eye through.

2. Tending to blackness; dark-coloured; not clear; not bright. The surface is of a dusky yellow colour. — Woodward.

By mixing such powders, we are not to expect a strong and full white, such as that of paper; but some dusky ochreous one, such as might arise from a mixture of light and darkness, or from white and black that is, grey, or dun, or roller. — Newton’s Opticks.

3. Gloomy; sad; intellectually clouded.

While he continues in life, this dusky tomb of horror, this melancholy prospect of final perdition, will frequently occur to his fancy. — Addison’s Spectator.

Unnatural, a dusky melancholy spirit.

As ever full’d the fair face of light,
Dusky; to dark new scenes.

DUSK. v. n. [dusky; Dutch; dusky; dim; dark; dimly; darkly;

1. Earth or other matter reduced to fine particles.

The dusky should have ascended to the roof of heaven,
And rais’d by your people tunes. — Shakespeare’s Antony and Cleopatra.

Dusk helps the fruitfulness of trees, informing as they cast dust upon them; that powdering, when a flower comes, makes a falling to the trees, being earth and water finely dissoned. — Bacon’s Natural History.

2. The grave; the state of dissolution.

The spirits, learning, physics, mutt.

All follow this, and come to dust. — Shakespeare’s Othello.

Thou out of the ground wal’st taken, know thy birth!
For dust thou art, and shalt to dust return. — Aldous.

3. A mean and rejected estate.

God raiseth up the poor out of the dust, to set them among princes. — 1 Sam. 1. 5.

Dust v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To free from dust.

To sprinkle with dust.

Dustman. n.s. [dust and man.]

One whose employment is to carry away the dust.

The dustman’s coat offends thy clothes and eyes.

When through the street a cloud of ashes flies.

DUSKY adj. [from dust; dusky; Dutch.]

1. Filled with dust; clouted with dust. All our yesterday’s have lighted foot.

The way to dusty death. — Shakespeare.

Arms and the dusty shield his admir,

And often strange in some new are. — Dryden.

2. Covered
DU T

2. Covered or scattered with dust. Even Drudgery or dirty clothes; As at the car less of dirty boots. The palace does how do the Swift's Summer.

D U T C H E S S , n. s. [ducessa, French.] 1. The lady of a duke. The duke of Cornwall, and Regan his duchess, will be here. Shakespeare's King Lear. Addison on Italy. Swift's

D U T C H Y - C O U R T , n. s. A court wherein all matters appertaining to the duchy of Lancaster are decided by the decree of the chancellor of that court. Gowell.

D U T T E O U S , adj. [from dut.] 1. Obedient; obligious; respectful to those who have natural or legal authority. Great Arangorbe did ducal care express, And duchess not too far his great force. Dryden.

D U T I F U L , adj. [duty and full.] 1. Obedient; submissive to natural or legal superiors; reverent. She died in an extreme old age, without pain, under the care of the duchess of that county. Swift's to Pope.

2. Expressive of respect; giving token of reverence; respectful; reverential. There was the kis the ground, and thank the trees, bles the air, and do dutiful reverence to every thing the thought old accompanied her at her forth meeting. Sidney.

D U T I F U L L Y , adv. [from dutiful.] 1. Obediently; submissively.

2. Reverently; respectfully. His daughter Philothea he found at that time dutifully watching by her mother, and while only watching her. Sidney. With his joyous, nimble wing, Flew dutifully back again, And made an humble chapel for the king. Swift's.

D U T I F U L N E S S , n. f. [from dutiful.] 1. Obedience; submission to just authority.

2. Reverence; respect. It is a strange kind of civility, and an evil duchess. It is, to friends and relations, to suffer them to be with them without reproof or medicine, rather than to seem unmannerly to a great master. Taylor's Rule of Loving Godly.

D U T Y , n. [from dux.] 1. That to which a man is bound by any natural or legal obligation bound. When ye shall have done all those things which are commanded you, ye are unworthy servants. We have done that which was our duty to do.

2. Acts or forbearances required by religion or morality. In this fens it has a plural. Good my lord, You have begot me, bred me, lov'd me: I return'd duchess back, as are right first; Ouey you, love you, and most honour you. Shakespeare's.

All our duties in due order, because in all our duties we have the Divine assistance, and remember that you are bound to do all those duties, for the doing of which you have prayed for the Divine assistance. Taylor's Devotions.

3. Obedience or submission due to parents, governors, or superiors; loyalty; piety to parents. I thinke that dutiful shall have a dreed to speak. When pow'r to flat'try bows? To plainness honour Is bound, when majestly to folly falls. Shakespeare's King Lear.

God's party will appear first, and the king's not greater; it is not probable, that those have to submit of duty to him that had none to God. Dryden of Pyry.

4. Act of reverence or respect. They both awoke, Did duty to their lady as became. Fairy Legends.

5. The busines of a soldier on guard. The regiment did duty there punctually. Clare, whole.

6. The busines of war, service. The night came and sever'd them, all parties being tired with the duty of the duty. Clare, whole. See how the madmen bleed! Behold the guls, with which their matches, love, rewards their pains! For seven long years, on duty every day, Let I their obedience, and their mony's pay! Dryden.

7. Tax; import; custom; toll. All the wines make their way through several dutys and taxes, before they reach the port. Addison.

Such shekels as they now flew, were the old ones in which duty was to be paid to their law. Addington on Coin.

D W A R F , m. / [breci, Saxox; dwerf, Dutch.] 1. A man below the common size of men. Get you gone, you dwerf! You minimus, of hind-rank, kno-grist made. Shakespeare's Such dwerfes were some kind of spea. Brevon, They, but now who fear? In bigness to surpass earth's giant sons, Now less than fillet dwerfes, in narrow room Throng numberless. Addison's Paradise Lost.

2. Any animal or plant below its natural bulk.

In a delicate plantation of trees, all well grow'd; fair, and smooth, one dwerf was knotty and crooked, and the reft had it in derision. L'Eapr. Saw off the stock in a smooth place; and for more that itabent, cut them within four fifts of the ground. Martin.

3. An attendant on a lady or knight in romances.

The champion floor, Erminia disconsolate from her course brave, And to the dwerf whilst his needs she gave. Spenser.

4. It is used often by botanists in composition; as dwarf, dwarf-elder, dwarf-honey-suckle.

D W A R F - F I S H , adj. [from dwerf.] Below the natural bulk; low; small; little; petty; aplicable. Their dwerf fish pages were As cherubins, all gilt. Shakespeare's Henry VIII.

And you are gog no high in his esteem, Because I am to dwerf, and to low! Shakespeare's

This unhand fasciaccia, and boccius, dwerf, The king doth like zit, and it is well prepar'd: To whip this dwerf was, these pigmy arms, From out of the circle of his territories. Schiller's King John.

A thicket close beside the grave there flood, With bristles and brambles chock'd, and dwarfish wood. Dryden.

We should have left oak and elmes, and the other tall and lofty fans of the forest, and have found nothing but dwerf thorns, and creeping roots, and defpicable mushrooms. Bentley.

D W A R F P I L L Y , adj. [from dwerf.] Dwarfish.

D W A R F S H I N E S S , n. f. [from dwerf.] Minuteness of figure; littlenes.

'Tis no wonder that science hath not outgrown the dwerf'shins of its primitive figure, and that the intellectual world is but a miniature of the original sphere. Glumville's Beest.

To D W A U L E . w. a. [bapelan, Saxon, to wander; duwelen, Dutch.] To be delirious: a provincial word mentioned by Juinus.

To D W E L L . w. n. preterite dwell, dwelt; dwelt at. [dauila, old Teutonic, is stay, delay; duelia, I handick, to stay, to stand still.]

1. To inhabit; to live in a place; to reside; to have habitation.

If they brother that dweilith by thee be waxen poor, and be fold unto thee, thou shalt not compel him to serve as a bond-servant. Lev. xxi. 39.

He shall dwell alone, without the camp shall his habitation be. Lev. xii. 46.

John Haywood and Sir Thomas More, in the parish wherein I was born, dwelt and had peculiar; Why are you dwelt, lady? Why do you frown? Here dwell to frown, or anger; from these gates Sorrow flies far. Milton.

2. To live in any form of habitation.

Abraham journeyed in the land of promise as in a strange country, dwelling in tabernacles. Heb. xii. 9.

3. To be in any state or condition.

'Tis fitter to be that which we defir, Than by destruction dwell in doubtful joy. Shak.
4. To be suspended with attention; to hang upon with care or fondness.

He in great passion all this while did dwell;
More busying his quick'ry eyes her face to view,
That his dull ears to hear what the dull tell.

Spenser.

The attentive queen
Dwell on his accept.

Smith's Fools, and Hipplid.

Thus was that face, on which I dwell with joy,
Ere Greece assembled Sestos to Troy,

Dryden.

5. To continue long speaking.

He preach'd the joys of heav'n, and pains of hell,
And warn'd theinner with becoming zeal;
But on eternal mercy lov'd to dwell.

Dryden's God forsook.

We have dwel'd pretty long on the confidences of space and duration.

Locke.

Those who defend our negotiators, dwell upon their zeal and patience.

Swift.

7. To dwell. v. t. To inhabit. Not used.

I saw and heard; for we sometimes
Who dwell'd this wild, constrain'd by want, come forth
To town or village nigh.

Milton's Par. Reg. ann.

Dweller. n. s. [from dwell.] An inhabitant; one that lives in any place.

"The houses that keep'd up, did of necessity enforce a dweller, and the proportion of land for occupation being kept up, did of necessity enforce that dweller not to be beggar or cobbler, but a man of some fortune.

Bacon's Henry VII.

Their cries soon waken all the dwellers near;
Now murmuring noises ride in every street.

Dryden.

Dwelling. n. s. [from dwell.]

I. Habitation; place of residence; abode.

His dwelling is low in a valley green.

Under the foot of Raurac momole hors. Fairy Queen.

Hazor shall be a dwelling for dragons, and a desolation for ever.

John xix. 33.

If he have several dwellings, let him fortify them so, that what he wanteth in one he may find in the other.

Bacon.

God will assemble
To visit all the dwellings of just men, Delighted.

All dwellings else
Flood overwhelm'd, and them with all their pomp
Deep under water roll'd; sea cover'd and o'ermise.

Milton's Paradise Lost.

The living few, and frequent funerals, then
Proclaim'd thy wrath on this forsaken place;
And now thyself, who are return'd again,
Thy searching judgments to their dwellings trace.

Dryden.

The force of fire ascended first on high,
And took its dwelling in the vaulted sky.

Dryden's Devil.

2. State of life; mode of living.

My dwelling shall be with the beasts of the field.

Daniel.

Dwelling-house, n. s. [from dwell and house.]

The house at which one lives.

A person ought always to be cited at the place of his dwelling-house, which he has in respect of his habitation and usual residence; and not at the house which he has in respect of his estate, or the place of his birth.

Addison's Rambler.

Dwelling-place, n. s. [from dwell and place.]

The place of residence.

People do often change their dwelling-places, and some must die, whilst others do grow up into strength.

Spenser.

To Dwindle. v. n. [epinon, Saxon.]

1. To shrink; to lose bulk; to grow little.

Thy dwindled legs seem crawling to the grave.

Dryden.

Proper names, when familiarized in English, dwindle to monosyllables; whereas in other languages they receive a longer turn, by the addition of a new syllable.

Addison.

Our drooping days are dwindled down to nought.

Their period finish'd as 'twas well begun.

Thomson.

2. To degenerate; to sink.

'Tis now dwindled down to light Judy Buff.

Norris.

If there have been such a gradual diminution of the generative faculty of the earth, that the habit dwindled from noble animals to puny mice and insects, why was there not the like decay in the production of vegetables? Surely.

He found the expected council was dwindling into a convulsed, a packed assembly of Italian bishops, not a free convention of fathers.

Addison.

Afterburn.

Religious societies, though begun with excellent intentions, are found to have dwindled into fatal clubs.

Swift.

3. To wear away; to lose health; to grow feeble.

Weary few months nine times nine,
Shall he dwindles, peak, and pine.

Chapman's Mother.

We see, that some small part of the foot being injured by a wrench or a blow, the whole leg or thigh thereby looses its strenght and nourishment, and dwindles away.

Leech.

Dys.

Physicians, with their milky cheer,
The love-fick maid and dwindling beef repair.

Gas.

4. To fall away; to be diminished; to moulder off.

Under Grenville, there were only five hundred foot and three hundred horses left, the rest were dwindled away.

Cotton.

Dye. See Die.

Dying. The participle of die.

1. Expiring; giving up the ghost.

2. Ting'ing; giving a new colour.

Dysanth. n. s. [Dy'santh.] Government: sovereignty.

Some account him fabulous, because he carries up the Egyptian dyestuffs, before the Flood, yes, and long before the creation. Hall's Origin of Mankind.

Greece was divided into several dyestuffs which our author has enumerated under their respective princes.

Page.

Dy'scraic. n. s. [Dy'scraic.] An unequal mixture of elements in the blood or nervous juice; a distemperance, when some humour or quality abounds in the body.

Died. In this pithy dying of blood, we must vomit off the plunis, and purge upon interniments.

Place in the Homeri.

Dysentery, n. s. [Dysenter, French, from Dysenteria.] A loocons, wherein very ill humours flow off by blood, and are also sometimes attended with blood.

Died.

From an unusual inconstancy of the weather, and perpetual changes of the wind from east to west, proceed epidermis-dysenteries. Arbuth. on Arb.

Dyspæsy. n. s. [Dy'spæsy.] A difficulty of digestion, or bad fermentation in the stomach or guts.

Died.

Dysphonia. n. s. [Dysphonia.] A difficulty in speaking, occasioned by an ill disposition of the organs.

Died.

Dysphœsa. n. s. [Dysphœsa.] A difficulty of breathing; straitness of breath.

Died.

Dysuria. n. s. [Dysuria.] A difficulty in making urine.

Hurney.
E A D

EAG\n
EAGER. adj. [eager, Saxton; aigre, French].
1. Struck with desire; ardently withihing; keenly desirous; vehement in desire; hotly longing.
   Of action eager, and intent of thought.
   The chief your honourable dangeringers.
   Dryden's Oidt.
   Eager to read the feats. Atahies came. Dryden's. (fEn.
   With joy the ambitious youth his master heard.
   And eager, for the journey, too prepared.
   He leaves the world beneath, him to survey.
   To praise the chariot, and to give the day.
   Dryden.
   Love intangible, and eager on his bliss.
   Smasher of other words.
   Addison's. Oidt.
   2. It is used sometimes with of, sometimes with for, sometimes with on or after before the thing fought.

3. Hot of disposition; vehement; ardent; impetuous.
   As apt to quicken the spirits as toallay that which is too eager.
   Homer.
   Nor do the eager. clamours of disputants yield more relief to eclipsed truth, than did the founding blast of old to the labouring moon.
   Glanville's. Scipio.
   Imperfect zeal is hot and eager, without knowledge.
   Eager his tone, and ardent were his eyes. Dryden.
   A man, charged with a crime of which he thinks himself innocent, is apt to be too eager in his own defence.
   Addison's. Cato.

4. Quick; busy; easily put in action.
   His Numbers. genius.
   Is well disposed to mischief, were he prompt.
   And eager, that it must not be snatched. Addis. Cato.

5. Sharp; flower; acid.
   With a sudden vigour it doth posset
   And curb, like eager droppings in milks.
   Backly and wholesome blood.
   Shaks. Hamlet.

6. Keen; severe; biting.
   The fire bites throughly it is very cold.
   —It is a nipping and an eager air.
   Shaks. Hamlet.
   The fields shinketh, but the bone redeth, where by the cold became more eager.
   Ovid's. Natural History.

7. Brittle; inflexible; not ductile. A cant word of artisans.
   Cold will be sometimes so eager, as artists call it, as it will as little endure the hammer's blow as glass.
   Ovid. (f

EXGERLY, adv. [from eager.

1. With great ardor of desirw; with impetuosity of inclination.
   To the holy was how fait and eagerly did men go, when the print perfumed them that whatever died in that expedition was a martyr to Saint. How eagerly he flew, when Europe's fate
   Did for the food of future actions wait.
   Stepeny.

2. Ardent; hotly.
   Brutus gave the word too early.
   Who having some advantage on Octavius,
   Took it too eagerly; his followers fell as spoil.
   Whilt we by Anthony were all confesse.

   Abundance of rain froze to eagerness as it fell, that it formed the depth of winter and a huddled mass been came in.
   Eagerly, ad.

EAGRENESS. n. s. [from eager.

1. Keenness of desirw; arour of inclination.
   She knew her distance, and did judge for me.
   Making my eagerness with her restraint. Shaks.

EAGRE. adj. [eager, Saxton; aigre, French].

EAGLE. n. s. [aigle, French; aquila, Latin; ailer, Erle].
1. A bird of prey, which, as it is reported, renews its age when it grows old. It is also said not to drink at all, like other birds with sharp claws. It is given out, that when an eagle fees its young so well grown as to venture upon flying, it hovers over their nest, and excites them to imitate it, and take their flight; and when it fees them weary, or fearful, it takes them upon its back. Eagles are said to be extremely sharp-fitted, and, when they take flight, spring perpendicularly upward, with their eyes steadily fixed upon the sun.
   Calmet.

   —Draw forth the monstros of the abyss profound,
   Or fetch th' aerial eagle to the ground.

2. The standard of the ancient Romans.
   Art's filled followed with its eagle. Pope.

EAGLE-EYED. adj. [from eagle and eyed.

Sharp-fitted like an eagle.
   As he was quick and periscopic, so he was inwardly eagle-eyed, and varied in the humours of his subjects.
   Evelyn.

   Every one is eagle-eyed to see
   Another's faults and his deformity.
   Dryden.

EAGLE-EYED. n. s. [eagle and speed.

Swiftness like that of an eagle.
   Aptom, with eagle eye'd the cut the sky
   Instant invisible to mortal eye.
   Pope.

EAGLESTONE. n. s. [A tone said to be found at the entrance of the holes in which the eagles make their nests, and affirmed to have a particular virtue in defending the eagle's nest from thunder.

   —Culpeper.
EAR

It must have great virtues and effects in accelerating or rendering delivery; so that, if tied to the arm of a woman with child, it prevents abortion; and if to the leg, it promotes delivery. On such idle and imaginary virtues was raised all the credit which this famous doli possessed for many ages.

If you drop the holes of a hawk's bell it will make no ring, but a flat noise or rattle; and so do the uten, or egglins, which hath a little likeness in it.

Eagle, n. s. [from eagle.] A young eagle.

This treatise of his sons did the king express in an embodiment, wherein was an eagle with three eagles tyrrant, whose wing was open, and the fourth pecking at one of her eyes.

EAGLE, n. s. [argos, in Runick, is the ocean; eggar, in Inlandick, is to agitate, or take up.] A tide swelling above another tide, observable in the river Severn.

For as one eagle rides in triumph over the tide, the tyrant palatins, how and stir, did in extremes appear, and flash'd upon the soul with equal force. Dryden.

EARLY, adj. [earl, Saxon; earl, Dutch.]

1. The whole organ of audition or hearing.
2. That part of the ear that stands prominent.
3. Power of judging of harmony; the sense of hearing.
4. The head; or the person; in familiar language.
5. The scarlike force was now weakened, the city broken down about their ears, and most of them wounded. Better parts over an affidavit from one found, than draw the whole herd about a man's ears.
6. The highest part of a man; the top.
7. The privilege of being readily and kindly heard; favour.

Affluus was earnest suitors to Dionysus for some grant, which would give no ear to his suit; Affluus fell at his feet, and then Dionysus granted all. They being told there was small hope of ease, were willing at the first to give an ear. To any thing that founded liberty, if on a pilgrimage, or near a thimble, he gain his peace's ear, or lose his own. Pope.

Dilpofition to like or dislike what is heard; judgment; opinion; taste.

He laid his face shelter, and in fewer words, according to the flight and ear of their times. Dryden.

EARLY, adj. [earl, Saxon; earl, Dutch.]

1. Having ears, or organs of hearing.
2. Having ears, or ripe corn.
3. The cover of the three ear's field.
EARL, n. s. [earl, Saxon; earl, Dutch.]

A title of nobility, anciently the highest of this nation, now the third.

Thanes and kinmen.

Henceforth be earl, the first that ever Scotland had. Dryden.

EARL-MASTERS, n. s. [earl and masterful.]

He that has chief care of military solemnities.

The marching troops through Athens take their way.

The great earl of marshall orders their array. Dryden.

EARELDOM. n. s. [from earl.] The seigniory of an earl; the title and dignity of an earl.

The duke of Clarence having married the heir of the earl of Ulster, and by her having all the earldom of Ulster, carefully went about redressing evils. Spenser's Irishness.

When I am king, claim thou of me the earldom of Hereford. Shak's Richard III.

EARLINES. n. s. [from early.] Quickness of any action with respect to something else: as, earliness in the morning, the act of rising soon with respect to the fun; earliness of growth, the act of growing up soon in comparison with other things of the same kind.

The next morning we, having driven with the fun's earliness, were beyond the profession of the highest turrets. Sidney.

The goodness of the crop is great gain, if the goodness of the earliness of coming up, Bacon.

EARLY. adj. [earl, Saxon, before.] Soon with respect to something else; as, in the morning, with respect to the fun; in time, with respect to creation; in the season, in comparison with other products.

Skeptics. One of the tiniest wits of the body, Menaced for death: the weakest kind of fruit Drops earliness to the ground, and so let me. Shak's Fug'.

It is a curiosity to have several fruits upon one tree, and the mate when some of them come early, and some come late. Bacon's Natural History.

God made all the world, that he might be worshipped in some parts of the world; and therefore, in the first and most earl, in the church, was earliness, that he might have such places erected to his honour! Swift.

The things, forgetting ev'ry care and pain, Their early fruit and milk-white turtle bring. Pope.

Sickness is earliness old age: it teaches us difference in our earthly state, and inspires us with thoughts of a future.
EAR

One would have thought you had been half in earthen. Ad.

2. [Earmuffs, pane, Danish; arm; French.] Pledge; handlest; first fruits; token of something of the fame kind in futurity. The apotes term it the handest or earnest of that which it promises to the Master. Which leader shall the doubtful, victorious by faith. And give an earnest of the war's success. Which it may be looked upon as a pledge and earnest of quiet and peace. The meritice received, great as they were, earnefts and pledges of greater.

3. The money which is given in token that a bargain is ratified. You can't comfort against our persons. Join'd with an enemy proclaim'd, and from his coffer Receiv'd the golden earnefts of our death. Shakespeare. Pay back the earnest penny receiv'd from Satan, and fling his away. "Decay of Pitty.

EA^rnestly. adv. [from earnest.]

1. Warmly; affectionately; zealously; importantly; intently. When earneftly they seek Such proof, confirm'd courage began to fail. Milton. Shame is a blemish of the human soul, which every man most earneftly dreads. South. Earnestly he spoke the goodnews and power of an all-mighty and almighty God. Smirabinet.

2. Eagerly; defirously. Why to earneftly seek you to put up that letter? Shakespeare.

My soul, more earneftly release'd, Will outstrip her's; as bullets flown before, A latter bullet may o'ertake, the powder being more. Donne.

EA^rnestness. n. f. [from earnest.]

1. Earnenefs; warmth; vehemence; impetuosity.

Often with a solemn earneasfs,
More than, indeed belong'd to such a trifle, He begirt me to sfil this.
Shakespeare's Othello. Acidity and confidence doth in both these great effects, as a man may doubt, that, besides the deadly darts and earneasfs, and perturbing and impertinence, there should be some secret binding, and footing of other men's spirits to such persons. Bacon's Natural History. Museus was overaw'd; his fond complaints Have so much earneasll and passion in them. I hear him with a secret kind of horror, And tremble at his vehement of temper. Addison's Cato.

2. Solecism; zeal; seriousness.

There never was a charge maintained with such a show of gravity and earneasfs, which had a flater foundation to support it. Addison.

3. Solitude; ease; intemperance.

With overbearing, and earneasll of finishing, their pieces, they often did them more harm than good. Dryden.

EAT. n. f. [from ear, to plow.] A plowed field. Not now in use. First use is made with cracking flames to burn the fluffy blade. May's Virg.

EARTH. n. f. [from ear, to plow.] Made of earth; made of clay.

Abbot's remove.

Green earthen pots, bladders, and muddy seeds Were thinly scatter'd. Shakespeare. As a violin was digging the ground by padas, he found an urn, or earthen pot, in which there was another urn, and in this letter a lamp clearly burning. Wilkins.

The most brittle water-container was used among the Egyptians, who, or Strabo fayth, would hold sometimes in the boats made of earthern ware. Arckoums on Cym.

EARTHFLAX. n. f. [earth and flax.] A kind of fibrous fossil.

Of English tale, the earthen flax is called pilifer, or parge; the flax, earthflax, or fraxman's hair. Woodward.

EATHINESS. n. f. [from earth.] The quality of containing earth; grofness.

EATHHLLING. n. f. [from earth.] An inhabitant of the earth; a man.
1. Habitat of the earth; a mortal; a poor frail creature.

2. Controlling; the soul of God, that flame which he raised for a small time, semeth magnetic.

Drummond.

Earthly, adj. [from earth.]

1. Not heavenly; vile; mean; forbid.

But I in this world, where to do harm
Is often-trod; to do good, sometime
Accompanied dangerous folly.

Shakespeare, Muchob.

When faith and love, which parted from thee
Had ripened thus, right full to dwell with God,
Might thereby resign this earthly load.

Of this call is all the world.

Milton.

2. Belonging only to our present state; not spiritual.

Our common necessities, and the lack which we have, as well as ghastly are of earthly favours, is in kind easily known.

Hooker.

You have scarce time
To deal from spiritual leaven a brief span,
To keep yourself from audit.

Shakespeare, Henry VIII.

It must be our solemn business and endeavour, at fit season, to turn the stream of our thoughts from earthly towards divine objects.

Atterbury.

3. Natural; not moral.

Great grace that old man to him given had,
For God he often saw, from heaven bright.
All were his earthly eyes even both blind and bad.

Sudden he view'd in, quite of all her art,
An earthly lover lurking at her heart.

Pope.

4. Any thing in the world; a female hyperbole.

Oh, if we dance all night, and dress all day,
I heard the small, or chassé's old dance did.
Who would not form what household cares produce!
Or who would learn one earthly thing of life?

Earthnut, n. f. [earth and nut.]. A pig-nut; a root in shape and size like a nut.

When there are earthnuts in several patches, though the roots lie deep in the ground, and the fitches be dead, the fitches will by their root only where they grow.

Roy.

Earthquake, n. f. [earth and quake.]

'Tis certain a gleam, heat, or fire being in any part of the earth swiftly, by some accidental gust or obstruction in the passages through which it used to be gone, and that part of the earth naturally assembled in greater quantity into one place, creates a great ratheration and instancence of the waste of the absys, putting it into very great commotions and making the earth a trembling, expanded from the face of the absys, occasions that agitation and conclusion which we call an earthquakes.

These tremors were like an earthquake, making the very foundations of all, than nothing in the world hath more of horror.

King Charles.

It was his youth, his valor, or facet.

These might perhaps be found in other men.

'Twas that respect, that aweful homage paid me;

That fearful love which trembled in his eyes,

And that fierce eye which he bequeathed his soul.

Dryden.

The country, by reason of its vast caverns

And subterraneous fires, has been miserably torn by earthquakes, so that the whole face of it is

Addison on Italy.

Earthshaking, adj. [earth and shake.]

Having power to shake the earth, or to raise earthquakes.

By the earthshaking Neptune's mane,

And Tethys great javelin cast.

Milton.

Now by the earthshaking frame earthshaking pow'r,

Fort's daughter Pallas watch'd the faring hour;

Such was the wind's last fraction

And hush'd the blitling breathes of the fiery, Pope.

Earthworm, n. f. [earth and worm.]

1. A worm bred under ground.

Worms are found in snow commonly like earth-worm, and therefore it is not unlike that it may likewise pot forth plants. Recent Natural History.

Upon a flower, after a drought, earthworms and earthinsects innumerable come out of their lurking places.

of.

2. A mean forbid wretch.

Thy vain content, dull earthworm, care,

I won't for refuge Styx.

Shakespeare.

Earthly, adj. [from earth.]

1. Consisting of earth.

Long may the world abide in Richard's lot to sit,

And join his Richard in an earthen pit.

Shakespeare.

Lamps are inflamed by the admission of new air.

When the cypresses are open, and the earth is in a fever embryon of the world's Woe! Woe! Woe! Woe! Woe!

All water, especial what that is, is termed with matter, light in comparison of the common earthen terrine.

2. Composed or partaking of earth; ter-rene.

To survey his dead and earthy image,

What were it but to make my sorrow greater.

Shakespeare.

Him I had pronounced, he, O indignity!

Subjected to his service angel-wings,

And framing ministrals to watch and tend.

Their earthen gods in the Paradize Effi.

3. Inhabiting the earth; terrestrial.

These earthy spirits black and exsence are;

I tell you other Gods of form more fair.

Dryden.

4. Relating to earth.

Mine is a shrunken, in a watry fup;

And in an earthly, the dark dungeon rhine.

Dryden.

5. Not mental; gross; not refined.

Teach us; dear creature, how to think and speak;

Lay open to my ear, my great secrets,

Smother'd in errors, feeble, shallow, weak,

The folded meaning of your words declar.

Shakespeare.

No is my fame

So earthy, as it is by the full material force

Of eyes, or lips, or cheeks.

Donnans’s Suply.

Ease, n. f. [ease and fall.]

Quiet; pessable; fit for rep.

I say a black; suspicious, threatening cloud,

That will encounter with our glorious sun.

Dryden.

He is at his easy”.

Henry VI.

Ease’s, m. s. [from ease.

1. Affluence; support; relief from expenses.

He has the advantage of a free lodging, and some other benefactions.

Dryden.

2. [In law.] A service that one neighbour has of another by charter or prescription, without profit; as a way through his ground, a fence, or such like.

Cotel.

Easilly, adv. [from easy.]

1. Without difficulty.

Sounds more facility, and at great distance; but they require a medium well disposed, and their transition is easily fledged.

Bacon’s Nat. Hist.

She asked the reason of his woe;

She’d, but with an air and manner That made it easily foreseen.

She fear’d too much to know.

Prior.

2. Without pain; without disturbance; in tranquility.

It is not to bid defiance to all mankind to condon-their universal opinions and deliberations, it is instead of palling your life as well and easily, you resolve to joke as it is and miserable as you can

Temple.

3. Readily; without reluctance.

I can easily resign to others the praise of your illustrious family.

Dryden’s Delc. to State of Am.

Not soon forget, the efficacy of...

And much she suffis, as the much believes.

Prior.

Easiness, m. s. [from easy.

1. Freedom from difficulty.

Believe me, friends, loud tumults are not laid.

With half the easiness that they are rair.

Bird Johnson.

Easiness and difficulty are relative terms, and retain to some power; and a thing may be difficult to a weak man, which yet may be easy to the same peron, when aided with a greater strength.

Tilling.

The meaning easiness of Pindarick verle has made it, easy, but it has not been considered.

Dryden.

You left a companion which was a half shriveled.

And for whole easiness I utmost grieve.

Dryden.

This plea, under a colour of friendship to religion, is made to it by the easiness of the objections, it offers.

Regis.

2. Flexibility; compliance; readiness; not opposition; or reluctance.

His yielding unto them in one thing might hap-en, they in another, but the like easiness of would extending farther unto them...

Hiller.

Sinc.
Since the custom of iffafe to alter and change laws is evil, no doubt but bear a tolerable for it is better to rest on a dangerous remedy.

Give to him, and he shall but laugh at your effa.s, and live his life, but, when you have done, look after your own. This is the crafty way to secure, loosely is to lay the foundation of it early in liberty, and in effa.s to part with others whatever they have or like. Verses on a writing-

1. Freedom from constraint; no effort; not freedom.

"Affable and mystick thoughts you must express with guilty care, but shining effa.s for much better brighter through the doom."

4. Right; tranquility; ease; freedom from pain.

I think the reason I have allowed such a great interest in that coin and effa.s I enjoy when asleep.

EAST. m. [Pers. Saxon; late Effa.s.

1. The quarter where the sun rises, opposite to the West.

2. The regions in the eastern parts of the world.

3. would not be the villain that thou thoughtest.

EASTLING, adj. [from Effa.s].

1. A native of some country eastward to another.

The heathenish, public and sa.ing Easling, that spake Irish, and swarming Easlings.

2. A species of waterfowl.

EASTERY, adj. [from Effa.s].

1. Coming from the parts toward the East.

When the effa.s winds or breezes are kept off by some high mountains from the valleys, whereby the descending mists, doth become the unhurtful.

2. Lying towards the East.

These give us a view of the most easily, southernly, and eastern parts of England.

3. Looking towards the East.

Water to he clear, clear, without the least tinge, drawn from springs with an effa.s abhorrance.

EASTERN, adj. [from Effa.s].

1. Dwelling or found in the East; oriental.

Like eastern king's lady that he keep, RYI, that he keep. RYI,.

2. Lying or being towards the East.

The eastern end of the ridge rises up in precipices.

3. Going towards the East.

A step at a time has carried me in either her eastern or western shores, or even in places affixed from the mouth to know her longitude, or by which whole I was going eastward or westward as can easily be known in any clear day or night; much he is gone northward or southward.

4. Looking towards the East.

ALL angels catch.

Eastward, adv. [East- and toward].

Towards the East.

This the way which performs in motion further than the sun, getting it from the east, appears when the sun is east.

What shall we do, or where direct each flight?

2. To consume; to correct.

Eastward, adv. [East- and toward].

Towards the East.

This the way which performs in motion further than the sun, getting it from the east, appears when the sun is east.

What shall we do, or where direct each flight?

2. To consume; to correct.

Eastward, adv. [East- and toward].

Towards the East.

This the way which performs in motion further than the sun, getting it from the east, appears when the sun is east.

What shall we do, or where direct each flight?

2. To consume; to correct.
houe where provisions are sold ready dressed.
An hungry traveller laid into an eating-house for his dinner.

From s. e. Saxon. The edges of the roof which overhang the house.

Every night he comes
With mussick of all sorts, and fongs compos'd
To her unworthines: it nothing feals.
To cheer him from his cares: for he perifhts.
As if his life lay on't.

Shakesp. All's well that ends well.

This read in his book, like Winter's drops.

From caves of reeds. Shakesp. Temp. 1. If in the beginning of Winter the drops of the caves of houses come more slowly down than they used, it portends a hard Winter.

Under'd with a flower still,
When the gulf hath blown his fill,
Finding on the rustling leaves,
With minute drops from off the trees.

The ticks hang down from the caves of houses.

Woodward.

To Caves-drop. n. a. [cover and drop.]

To catch what comes from the caves, in Traps, through the leaves, under windows.

Caves-dropper. n. s. [cover and drop.] A
Listener under windows; an inaudible listener.

Under our tents I'll play the caves dropper.

To hear if any mean do shrink from me.

Shakesp.

ECCLES. n. s. [ebba, epbdob, Saxon; ebb, Fr.]

1. The reflux of the tide towards the sea.

opposed to flow.

The clear sun on his wide watry glads
Gaz'd her, and of the truth wave lawnly grew.

As after thists; which made their burning think
From flaming lake to quaking eddies, that shall
With soft foot towards the deep.

Hither the feet at stated times retort,
And those the sudden winds into port;
Then with a gentle edd retire again,
And render back their cargo to the main.

Addison on Italy.

2. Decline; decay; waste.

You have finished all the war, and brought all things to that low eddy which you speak of.

Spenser on Ireland.

This side of man's life, after so many ups and declines, ever runneth with a perpetual eddy and falling stream, but never floweth again.

Raleights History.

Thus all the treasure of our flowing years,
Our eddy of life for ever takes away.

Rymer's.

The greatest age for poetry was that of Augustus Cæsar, yet painting was then at its lowest edd and Prints still declinable.

Dyer.

Near my apartment I kept a princely
That his hourly eddy of life may fee.

What is it he apries too?
Is it not this?
To fend the flow remain,
His last poor eddy of blood in your defence.

Addison's Cato.

To EBB. e. n. [from the noun.]

1. To flow back towards the sea: opposed to flow.

' Though my tide of blood
Had prou'dly flow'd in vanity till now,
Now it doth turn and eddy back to the sea.

Shakesp. Tempest.

From thence the tide of fortune left their bowers,
And ebb'd much faster than it flow'd before.

Dryden's En.

2. To decline; to decay; to waste.

Well, I am standing water:
I'll teach you how to flow.

Do so: to edd
Hereditary flux inflects me.

Shakesp. Tempest.

For ever lovely stream, for ever stay!

Mallofr.

EEN. n. s. [eben, Latin.] A hard,
Ebon. black, valuable wood.

Which admits a fine gloss,
yxph, who pined into a found for love of Narellus.
The pleasant myrtle may teach th' unfortunate Echelos.
In the shades he found the renowned name of a goddess.

2. The return or repercussion of any found.
The found, filling great spaces in arched lanes, cannot be guided; therefore there hath not been any means to make artificial robins. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

3. The found returned.
Babbling Echo mocks the sounds,
Replying highly to the well-brand'ed horn,
As if a double hunt were heard at once. Shaksp.
With what hunt?
The sounds shall make the wellin answer them,
And thrice thrill robins from their hollow earth.
Shakespeare.
O woods, O mountains, hills, locks, dales and bowers!
With other echo late I taught your shades
To answer, and refund far other song! Milton.
To you I morn, to thee the dead I sing:
The woods shall answer, and the echo ring.
Pope.
'Tis not enough no harpstrings gives silence;
The sound must emit an echo to the scene. Pope.

Eccho. u. t. v. r. u. t.
To refund; to give the repercussion of a voice.
At the parting
All the church echo'd. Shaksp. 'Twas seeing of the shrines.
Through rocks and ravens, sakes the name of Della founds.
Della echo'd, and echoing rock rebounds. Pope.
To be founded back.
Hark, how the found diffuses blam'd Rome!
Shake her proud hills, and rolls from dome to dome!
Her mist'd princes hear the echoing noise,
And, Alcione, dreads thy wrath and awful voice.
Bl. Amore.

Eccho. u. t. v. r. u. t.
To send back a voice;
To return what has been uttered.
Our seaports do but echo the same note.
Decimal of Poetry.
With peals of shouts the Tyrians prattle the song;
Those peals are echo'd by the Trojan throng.

Explaination:

The act of clearing up an affair by verbal expropriation.
The relation of the Graces in the discovery of the index.
Clarendon.

Excl. u. t. v. r. s. [French.]
Splendour; show; glory.
Jufire. Not English.
Nothing more contributes to the variety, surprise, and eclat of Homer's battles, than that artificial manner of giving his heroes to each other.
 Pope's Essay on Homer.

Eclatick adj. [exalted-] Selecting; chusing at will.
Cicer was of the eclatick seat, and chose out of each such position at came nearest truth.
Watts in the Mind.

Eclatoma. n. s. [ex and alxan.] A form of medicine made by the incorporation of oils with syrups, and which is to be taken upon a liquorice stick. Quincy.

Eclip. n. s. [excliptic-] A term used in the sciences, and applied to any object that appears to be eclipsed by any other. Ussher.

Eclipses. n. s. [excliptic-] A term used in the sciences, and applied to any object that appears to be eclipsed by any other. Ussher.

1. An obscuration of the luminaries of heaven; the sun is eclipsed by the in-tervention of the moon; the moon by the sun; or the moon by the earth. The word originally signifies departure from the place, to which Milton alludes.

Signs of yeow.
Silver'd in the moon's eclipse. Shaksp. Macbeth.
Over planets-Russian, track'd thy path.
Then suffer'd.
Milton's Paradise Lost.

So though the sun victorious be,
And from a dark eclipse let free,

The influence, which we fondly fear.
Afflicts our thoughts the following year. Weller.
An eclipse of the sun is when the atmosphere of the earth, between the sun and the moon, hides the light of the sun from falling upon and being reflected by the moon: if the light of the sun is kept from the earth by the dark region of the moon, there is a total eclipse; if from a part only, it is a partial one.
Locke.

Darkness; obscurity.
All the poverties of our fathers suffers a partial eclipse of spiritual life.
Revelst's H'ift. Experience we have of the vanity of human glory, in our eclipses and eclogues. King Charles.

1. To darken a luminous body.
Let the eclipsed moon her throne regain. Sandys.
Now if the earth were flat the dark'd moon Would seem to all eclips'd as well as one. G lofty.
2. To extinguish; to put out.
Then here I take my leave of thee, false son: Born to eclipse thy life this afternoon. Shaksp. Henry VI.

3. To cloud; to obscur.
They had been taken more of common greatness, however now eclips'd with fortune. Sidney.

Prize him to his father:
Let the prince's story
Seem to eclipse, and call a cloud on him. Denham's Soply.

Let other men write his polished fate
Of conquer'd nations tell, and kings reel'd o'er;
But mine shall form of his eclipse's state,
Which, like the sun's more wonder does afford. Dryden.

He descended from his father, and eclipsed his divine Majesty with a veil of flam.
Galaxy's Sermon.

4. To disgrace.
She said the king, that her husband was eclips'd in Ireland by the no-countenance his majesty had shewed towards him.
Clarendon.

Another proud heart doth himself enup'd
All power, and us eclips'd. Milton: Ene. Lat.

Ecliptick. u. s. [excliptic-] A great circle of the sphere, supposed to be drawn through the middle of the Zodiack, and making an angle with the Equinoctial, in the points of Aries and Libra, of 23° 51'. which is the sun's griesest declination. This is by some called via falsa, or the way of the sun, because the sun, in his annual motion, never deviates from this line. This line is drawn on the globe: but in the new astronomy the Ecliptick is that path among the fixed stars, which the earth appears to describe to an eye placed in the sun, as in its annual motion it runs around the sun from Wint to Est. If you suppose this circle to be divided into twelve equal parts, they will be the twelve signs.
Harr. Harris.

All stars that have their distance from the Ecliptick northwards not more than twenty-three degrees and a half, may, in progression of time, have declination southward, and lie under the Ecliptick. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

The terraqueous globe had the same size and position, in eclips'd. Eclipted of the sun, that it now hath: its axis was not parallel to that of the Ecliptick, but inclined in like manner as it is at present. Woodward's Natural History.
You must conccive an oblong island, which passing through the centre of the sun and the earth, extends itself on all sides as far as the firmament: this plane is called the Ecliptick, and in this the centre of the earth is perpetually carried, without any deviation. Bentley.

Ecliptick adj. Described by the ecliptick line.
1. Excessive joy; rapture.

2. Excessive grief or anxiety. This is not now used.

3. Enthusiasm; excessive elevation and absorption of the mind.

4. Avidity; rapaciousness; elevated beyond the usual bounds of nature.

5. Madness; distraction. This sense is not now in use.

6. Living; rapturous. Elevated beyond the usual bounds of nature.

7. A thin or cut part of a blade.

8. A narrow part rising from a broader.

9. Sharpness of mind; proper disposition for action or operation; intenseness of desire.

10. To give Pencelli one employs his flettens; One grasps a Cercop in eftacated dreams. Pope.

11. To tend to external objects. This sense is, I think, only to be found once, though agreeable enough to the derivation.

12. To rise to the highest degree of joy.

13. To bring the top of the flakes with some small long edges on each side. metre's foot.

14. They are edges of teeth.

15. To furnish with an edge.

16. To sharpen; to enable to cut.

17. To give the object its edges; to edge her champion's sword, and urge my men.

18. To edge.

19. To set forward beyond a line.

20. To put forward a point.

21. A narrow face.

22. Edges.

23. Edges.

24. Edges.

25. Edges.

27. Edges.

29. Edges.

30. Edges.

31. Edges.

32. Edges.

33. Edges.

34. Edges.

35. Edges.

36. Edges.

37. Edges.

38. Edges.

40. Edges.

41. Edges.

42. Edges.

43. Edges.

44. Edges.

45. Edges.

46. Edges.

47. Edges.

48. Edges.

49. Edges.

50. Edges.

51. Edges.

52. Edges.

53. Edges.

54. Edges.

55. Edges.

56. Edges.

57. Edges.

58. Edges.

59. Edges.

60. Edges.
2. Republication; generally with some re-ification or correcting.

These are of the second edition. Shaksp.
The last edition of our redemption is in our ituractions of God's image on the n of nature in a second and Fate edition.

South. I do not se a life as he who published the last work of Baker. The Code, composed by himself, was to be the text of the first edition, and the forth in a few Add. The editor.

To EDUCATE. v. a. [educare, Latin.] To educate; to bring up; to instruct youth.

their young education all their care employ.

The nature, the virtue of the parent is, if

And make provision for the future State. Dryd. Virg.

Education was worke, in proportion to the grandeur of the parent's mind; if any one of the

The

with

All nations have agreed in the necessity of a strict education, which confuted in the obligation of addition, by a mistake of the type editors. Pape's Notes on Shaksp.

DIFFICULTY.

1. Admiration of the qualities of a woman, softness, unmanly delicacy, mean submision.

2. Indecency, loose pleasure.

3. Admiration of the qualities of a woman, softness, unmanly delicacy, mean submision.

4. Indecency, loose pleasure.

5. Admiration of the qualities of a woman, softness, unmanly delicacy, mean submision.

6. Indecency, loose pleasure.

7. Admiration of the qualities of a woman, softness, unmanly delicacy, mean submision.

8. Indecency, loose pleasure.

9. Admiration of the qualities of a woman, softness, unmanly delicacy, mean submision.

10. Indecency, loose pleasure.

11. Admiration of the qualities of a woman, softness, unmanly delicacy, mean submision.

12. Indecency, loose pleasure.

13. Admiration of the qualities of a woman, softness, unmanly delicacy, mean submision.

15. Admiration of the qualities of a woman, softness, unmanly delicacy, mean submision.

17. Admiration of the qualities of a woman, softness, unmanly delicacy, mean submision.

18. Indecency, loose pleasure.
EFF

Two white spiny incrustations, with effusores clear in form of thorns, the breaking out of Woodward.
3. [In phylek.] The breaking out of some humours in the skin, in diaffemors called exanthemous; as in the measles, and the like. Quincke.

To effuse, v. o. (effusus, Lat.) The beginning in the coins, and formeth to an effus APR of the serum of the blood.

EFFUSE'nt. adj. (effusus, Lat.)
Shooting out in form of flowers.
Yellow effusive spiny incrustations on flores.

EFFUSE. n. s. (effusus, Latin.) That which issueth from some other principle.
Effusores readers might effusly increase. Milton.
These effusions are not the accession of the air upon the collision of two hard bodies, but rather the inflammable effusores discharged from the bodies collidet. Brown.

From the bright effusus of his head
They borrow that reflected light,
With which the last lamp they feed,
While beams dispel the damps of evening eight.

EFFU'VIA. n. s. [from effusus, Latin.]

EFFU'VÌUM. Tho' small particles which are continually flying off from bodies; the fulbility of which appears from the water of a broken glass, being together, to produce very sensible effects, without any sensible diminution of the body from whence it arise. Quincke.

If the earth were an electricity, and the air but the effusum thereof, we might believe that from attraction, and by effusion, bodies tended to the earth.

Neither the earth's diurnal revolution upon its axis, or any magnet effusus of the earth, nor the fire, or atmosphere which envelopeth the earth, can produce gravity. Westward.

If these effusores, which do upward tend,
Because 'twas heavy than the air, ascend;
Why do they ever from their height retreat,
And why return to their central seat? Blackm.

EFFUX. n. s. (effusus, Latin.)
1. The act of flowing out.
Through the copious efflux of matter through the orifice of a deep ulcer, he was reduced to a skeleton. Harvey.

2. Effusion; flow.
I give some of man's piety, after receiving of the faith, was the telling and centering their profession. Hammond.

3. That which flows from something else;
emulation.
Termineth, summer! Thomson's Summer.
Of all material beings, first and last! Bliss.

4. The act of flowing out more properly effusion, and that which flows more properly
efflux.
To the Lord. vi. v. us. (effusus, Latin.)
To run out; to flow away. This is not often in use.

Five thousand and seven centuries of years
are effusus since the creation. Boyle's Scept. Law.

EFFUSION. n. s. (effusus, Latin.)
1. The act of flowing out.
By effusion and attraction bodies tend towards the earth. Brown.

2. That which flows out; effluvium; emanation.
There are some light effusores from spirit to spirit, when men are one with another; as from body to body. Bacon.

To EFFUSE. v. o. (effusus, French.)
1. To force; to break through by violence.
In all that has to be seen,
But huge great iron cliets and coasts strong,

EFFUSIONS. n. s. (effusus, Latin.)
All bare'd with double bonds, that ne'er could wrest
Then to effuse by violence or wrong. Fairy Queen.

2. To force; to ravish; to violate by force.
Then gan her beauty fine as brightest joy,
And burst his beauteous heart's effusus her chastity.

3. To strain; to exert with effort or vehemence. This work is now not used.

The palmer left his ear unto the noise,
To whom it was impertinent to be inquired;
Again he made another charge of effusus,
That bad him come in haste. Spenser.

To EFFUSE. v. s. (effusus, Latin.)
To make in any certain manner; to shape;
To fation.
Merciful and gracious, thou gavest us being,
Raffing us from nothing, and effusus as from its own image.

EFFUSION. n. s. [from effusus, Latin.]
The act of fashioning or giving form to.
Nature begins to fet upon her work of effusion.

They pretend to solve phenomena, and to give an account of the production and effusus of the universe.

Effort. n. s. (effort, French.) Struggle; strain; vehement action; laborious endeavour.
If this having gained victors, we have made the same effusus as if we had left them, France could not have withheld us.

The first sects, which was in the State of the War.
Though the same firm, with all diffusive eyes,
Blush in the robe, and in the diamond blaze.
We prize the strongest effusus of his pure.
And always fet set above the flowers. Pope.

EFFUSUS. n. s. (effusus, Latin.)
The act of digging up from the ground; de-terration.
He set apart annual sums for the recovery of manuscripts the effusus of coins, and the procuring of mamanuscripts.

EFFUSABLE. adj. (effusus, French.)
Dreadful; frightful; terrible. A word not used.

Perilous symptoms declare nothing a proportional effusus of their sensible nature but adequate cases. Harvey.

EFFUSION, n. s. (effusus, Latin.)
1. The act of flowing out.
Through the copious efflux of matter through the orifice of a deep ulcer, he was reduced to a skeleton. Harvey.

2. Effusion; flow.
I give some of man's piety, after receiving of the faith, was the telling and centering their profession. Hammond.

3. That which flows from something else;
emulation.
Termineth, summer! Thomson's Summer.
Of all material beings, first and last! Bliss.

4. The act of flowing out more properly
effusion, and that which flows more properly
efflux.
To the Lord. vi. v. us. (effusus, Latin.)
To run out; to flow away. This is not often in use.

Five thousand and seven centuries of years
are effusus since the creation. Boyle's Scept. Law.

EFFUSION. n. s. (effusus, Latin.)
1. The act of flowing out.
By effusion and attraction bodies tend towards
the earth. Brown.

2. That which flows out; effluvium; ema-
nation.
There are some light effusores from spirit to spirit, when men are one with another; as from body to body. Bacon.

To EFFUSE. v. o. (effusus, French.)
1. To force; to break through by violence.
In all that has to be seen,
But huge great iron cliets and coasts strong,
the conjunction of two words of the same meaning.

In their head effusions placed Englishmen, who purchased all their lands.

Spenser's State of Ireland.

the reposing of the which now draw their

ill.

But in haste to see that silver brooch.

Spenser.

The Germans deadly hated the Turks, whereas it was to be thought that new wars flourished on the effervescent.

Knol!l's History.

Effusions, Of sweet heart mine, my love repay.

And all the year shall be holiday.

Gne Pgh.

E. G. [exempli gratia]. To the case of an instance or example.

Ect. n.s. [See Æger.] An impetuous or irregular flood or tide.

From the peculiar disposition of the earth at the bottom, wherein quick actions are made, many while these evers and flows in seas charabees and rivers; as it observable about Trent and Humber in England.

Brown's Pulver Errors.

To Ect. v. a. [ergo, Latin.] To throw out food at the natural vents.

Divers creatures sleep all the Winter; as the bee, the hedge-hog, the bat, and the bee: these all was there when they sleep, and ergo not. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

Ect.ion, n.s. [ergis, Lat.] The act of eating the digested food at the natural vents.

The animal foot or spirits manage as well their spontaneous actions as the natural or involuntary exertions of digestion, breath, and circulation.

Hain't Origin of Mind.

Egg, n.s. [egg, Saxton; ooyg, Erse.]

1. That which is laid by feathered and fome other animals, from which their young is produced.

An egg was found having lain many years at the bottom of a mire, where the earth had somewhat effervescent it; and this egg was come to the hardness of a stone, and the colours of the white and yellow perfect.

Egg is perhaps the highest, most nourishing, and card of animal food, and most indigestible.

Arbuton.

2. The spawn or sperm of other creatures.

Therefore think him as the serpent's egg.

Which hatch'd, would, as his kind, grow mischief.

Egged of each different kind.

In its own egg, chron'd by the solar rays,

Organs involv'd and latent life displays.

Blackmore.

3. Any thing fashioned in the shape of an egg.

There was taken a great glass bubble with a long neck, such as chemists are wont to call a philosophical egg.

Bye.

To Egg. v. a. [eggia, to incite, Inlandick; eggan, Sax.] To incite; to incitate; to provoke to action; for this, edge is,

I think, sometimes ignorantly used.

Study becomes pleasant to him who is pursuing his genius, and whose ardour of inclination egg him forward, and carrieth him through every obstacle.

Derby's Psyche-Teraphy.

Eglantine, n.s. [eglantier, French.] A species of rose; sweet-brier.

Over-canopied with luminous woodbine,

With sweet mulk roxes, and with eglantier.

Shaks.

Shakspeare used in any works that he flanders,

Out-sweeten't not thy breath.

Saxon.

Scent away with eglantines were spread.

A hedge about the fields, a covering over them.

Dwyd.

Egg, n.s. [egg; ege, Lat.] The fault committed in writing by the frequent repetition of the word egg or I; too frequent mention of a man's self in writing or conversation.

The most violent egality which I have met with, in the course of last reading, is that of Cardinal Wolsey's, who in his letters & speeches, 1 and my king. Spectator.

Egost. n.s. [from egg.] One that is always repeating the word eg or I, a talker of himself.

A tribe of Egolls, for whom I have alway a mental aversion, are the authors of memoirs, who are never mentioned in any works but their own.

Spelt.

To Egostize. v. n. [from egg.] To talk much of one's self.

Egregious, adj. [ergregious, Lat.]

1. Eminent; remarkable; extraordinary.

He might be able to adorn this present age, and furnish himself to the records of egressions exploits both of art and war.

More against Attila,

One to empor be.

Egregious prince; whose manifold childhood shew'd His mingled passions, and parented joy.

Phillips.

An egressious and pregnant instance how far virtue in particular perhaps is worthier regard.

Astron. His John Bull.

Egregiously, adv. [from egregius.] Eminently; shamefully.

Make the Moor thank me, love me, and reward me.

For making him egregiously an aff.

And praeter his proper, which to many Even to madness.

Shakespeare's Othello.

He discovered that, besides the extravagance of every article, he had been egregiously cheated.

Arbuton's John Bull.

Egress. n.s. [egressus, Lat.] The power or act of going out of any place; departure.

Gates of burning ambition,

Bart's own efforts, the force, through the

Which amid. Milton.

This water would have been locked up within the earth, and its egress utterly debared, had the strata of tone and marble remained continuous.

Woodwards's Nat. Hist.

Egressio, n.s. [egressio, Lat.] The act of going out.

The vast number of troops is experienced in the swarms; their tumultuous manner of issuing out of their tribes, and the perpetual egress, which seemed without end, are imaged in the bees pouring out.

Pope.

Efgst. v. n. [fug, French; perhaps from aegis, four.] A species of cherry.

The bosom, the mind, the whole life more to white, is sweeter than the red: but the egression is more light.

Bacon.

To Eject. v. a. [eject, Lat.]

To throw; to flout; to dart out.

Being rooted futile way in the thing, nothing near to deeply as the quills of fowls, they are the more egressio.

Grew's Musesan.

The mighty magnet from the more dar's

This thought a portable force, through the parts, its active rays ejected, tincture, Irradiate all the wide circumference.

Blackmore.

Ejaction, n.s. [from ejaculate.]

1. The act of dartin or throwing out.

There fore must to be acknowledged, in the act of every, an ejaculation or irradiation of the eye.

Bacon's Essays.

There is to be observed, in those ejaculations which will not easily incorporate, what the effects are; as the ebullition, the precipitation to the bottom, the ejaculation towards the top, the expulsion in the middle, and the like.

Bacon.

2. A short prayer dartin out occasionally, without solemn retirement.

In your dressing let there be ejaculations fitted to the several actions of dressing; as at washing your hands, pray God to cleanse your soul from fin.

Taylor's Guide to Devotion.

Ejacularly, adj. [from ejaculate.]
next in order to the seventeenth; twice ninth.

In the eighteen th year of Iobam, died Ioban. 1 Kings.

Eightfold. adj. [right and fold. 1 Eight times the number or quantity.

Eightly. adv. [from eight.] In the eighthly, living creatures have voluntary motion, which plants have not. Bacon. Natural History.

Eighth. adj. [from eigth.] The next in order to the seventh-ninth; eight tenth.

Some balances are so exact as to be finnely turned with the eigthteenth part of a grain.

Shakespeare Othello.

Eighly. adj. [eight and ten.] Eight times ten; fourscore.

Eighty odd years of sorrow have I seen,
And each hour's joy wak'd a week of weep.
Shakespeare.

Among all other climacterics three are most remarkable; that is, seven times seven, or forty-nine; nine times nine, or eighty-one; and eight times nine, or seventy-two, which is conceived to carry with it the most considerable fatality.

Bynum's Pallad.

Eiglne. adj. [seine, Fr. [law.] Denotes the eldest or first born. Here it signifies unalienable, as being entailed.

It happeneth not seldom, that to avoid the yearly oath, for averment of the continuance of some estate for life, which is clog, and is not subject to forfeiture for the natural incapacity after his death, it is offered for a pardon unobtain'd before the time; in which case, some mitigation of the utmost value and dignity is desired.

Etsc. n. f. [capill, Sax.] Vinegar, vinegar; any acid. An old word.

Call it thy kind
How thou refinest Christ, as with sawe pollewe,
If those pale thy face; remember these words.

Either. pron. [either, Sax; author, Scottish.]

Which either of the two; whether one or the other.

Legatus flutus both.

Of both it is flatter'd; but he neither loves,
Nor either cares for him. Shakespeare, Ant. and Cleopat. So like to arms these champion were, That as they were a very pair.
So that a man would almost swear,
That either had been either. Drayton's Nymph. Going made a fast friendship with either, either of them believing he could deceive the other. Chaucer.
I do not ask whether bodies do so exit, that the motion of one body cannot really be without the motion of another; to determine this either way, is to beg the question for or against a vacuum. Locke.

Each; both.

In the processes of natural beings, there form seem to be creatures placed, as it were, on the confines of several provinces, and participating sometimes of either.

Hale.

Seven times the fun either tropick twixt;
The Winter band's, and the Spring region's;
Dryden's Virgils.

3. It is used sometines of more than two; any one of a certain number.

4. Any of an indeterminate number, as in the following passage:

Henry VIII. Francis I. and Charles V. were fo great; they were so renowned; a feeling might be gotten by either of the three, but that the other two would let the balance of Europe upright again. Bacon.
1. The next joint or curvature of the arm below the shoulder.

2. Any flexure or angle.

3. To be at the elbow: to be near; to be at hand.

4. Eld. n. s. [elbow and chair.]

A chair with arms to support the elbows.

Swan and elbowchair, in the opera of Dunciad, has done upon the English stage with good success.

ELBOWCHAIR, n. s. [elbow and chair.]

5. To pull with the elbow.

One elbow hims his joints in the theatre.

Dryden, the Irishman.

6. To pull; to drive to a distance; to encroach upon.

It troubled and stretched out.

And elbow all the kingdoms round about. Dryden.

7. To elbow, v. n. To jut out in angles.

ELD. n. s. [saxon; old; scotch.]

1. Old age; decrepitude.

Her heart with joy unsought. St. Wulf.

2. Old persons; perfons worn out with years.

ELDER. adj. The comparative of ed, now corrupted to ed. [elb, caleb, saxon, ed, scotch.]

Surpassing another in years; survivor; having the privileges of primogeniture: opposed to younger.

They bring the composition of younger daughters concerning themselves in attitu to their elder sisters.

Hooker.

ELDERLY. adj. [From elder.]

1. Seniority; primogeniture.

The world, while it had fearcice of people, underwet no other dominion than paternal and elder.

Raleigh.

2. Prebendary; ecclesiastical senor; kirk; feign.

That controversy sprang up between Bera and Praun, about the matter of communications; whether there ought to be in all churches an elder, having power to communicate, and one of that of eldership to be of necessity certain chosent out from amongst the laity.

Hooker, Preface.

ELDEST. adj. The superlative of ed, now chosent to ed. [elb, elbont, caleb, saxon.]

1. The eldest; that has the right of primogeniture.

We will establish our estate upon our elder Malemon, whom we name hereafter. The prince of Cumberram. Shakspere, Macbeth.

The nudder's and her eldest daughter's grace. Dryden.

It seems had brud him to prolong her space.

2. The person that has lived most years.

Eldly parents signifies either the eldest men and women that have had children, or those who have long lived. Locke.
1. Regularly or bestowed by election or choice.

2. Exerting the power of choice.

Electively, adv. [from elect.] by choice; with preference of one to another. The word is of ancient origin, and should have such an influence upon the spirits, as to drive them into those muses; I am not subtle enough to divine. They work not electively, or upon proposing to themselves an end of their operations.

Electoral, n. s. [from elect.] having the dignity of an elector.

Electorate, n. s. [from elect.] The territory of an elector.

Electrical, n. s. [electrum, Lat.] 1. Amber; which, having the quality when warmed by friction of attracting bodies, gave to one species of attraction the name of electricity, and to the bodies that so attract the epithet electric.

2. A mixed metal; change silver plate or vessel into the compound stuff, being a kind of silver electrum, and turn the reef into coin.

Electrical, adj. [from electric] See Electre.

Electre. A property in some bodies, whereby, when rubbed as paper to as grow warm, they draw little bits of paper, or such like substances to them.

Electry, n. s. [electrus, Lat.] 1. A mournful song.

2. A funeral song.

Electus, n. m. [elementum, Lat.] 1. The first or constituent principle of any thing.

2. The four elements, usually so called, earth, air, water, of which our world is composed. When it is fed alone, element commonly means the air.

Elegance. 1. A composition of gardeners which are altogether Norman, and which lead to the beautiful wildness of nature, without the noise of elegancies of art.

Elegant, adj. [elegant, Lat.] 1. Pleasing by minute beauties.

2. Fine; not coarse; not gross.

3. Fond, with care and elegant with ease.

Elegantly, adv. [from elegant.] 1. In such a manner as to please.

2. Nently; nicely; with minute beauty; with pleasing propriety.

3. Observe the point cleanly and elegantly, and in part gravity and in part excellency.

Elegy, n. s. [elegans, Lat.] 1. Used in Elogees.

2. Pertaining to elegies.

3. Mournful; sorrowful.
To Voitnt. a.

The elephant hath joints, but not for courtesy; his legs are for necessity, not flexure.

2. Ivory; the teeth of elephants.

High'er o'er the gate, in elephant and gold,
The crowd shall Caesar's Indian war behold.

Dryden's Vigil.
ELL

[Text content is not clearly visible or legible, hence unable to extract meaningful natural text.]
ELU'S·ORY. adj. [from elude.] Tending to elude; tending to deceive; fraudulent, deceitful; fallacious.

It may be feared they are but Parthian shots, ambuscade retreats, and elusory vicissitude.

 Borrow. Pulga·r Error.

To ELU'SE. v. a. [elus, Latin.] To wash off.

The more oily any spirit is, the more pernicious; because it is harder to be expelled by the blood.

Borrow. Succ.

To ELU'SER. v. a. [eludre, Latin.] To drink out; or drain out.

The pressure of the air upon the lungs is much less than it has been computed by some; but still it is something, and the alteration of one tenth of its force upon the lungs may make some difference in illustrating the blood as it passes through the lungs.

duarth on Air.

ELY'SIAN. adj. [elys, Latin.] Pertaining to Elysium; pleasant; deliciously soft and soothing; exceedingly delightful.

The river of life, through midst of heaven.

Rolls o'th' Ely' sian flowers her amber stream.

Milton.

ELY' SIUM. n. s. [Latin.] The place assigned by the heathens to happy souls; any place exquisitely pleasant.

To have thee with thy lips to thee my mouth, So shouldst thou either turn my lying soul,

Or I should breathe it into thy body.

And then it's to sweet Elysium.

Skat. Hen. VI.

EM. A contradiiction of them.

Men after long elus农业 diets waxd fat, and.

almost new.

All dying of the consumption, die elusated and lethful.

Bacon.

EMACIATION. n. s. [emaciat, Latin.]

To waste to deprive of height.

Men after long emacial diets waxd fat, and almost new.

Bacon.

EMACULATION. n. s. [emacativo, Latin.]

The act of freeing any thing from spots or fouleens.

Diff.

EMANANT. adj. [emanant, Lat.] Iffing from something else.

The first act of the divine nature, relating to the world; and his administration thereof, is an emanant act; the most wise cound and purpose of Almighty God terminate in those two great transient or emanant acts or works, the work of creation and providence.

Hale's Origin of Mankind.

To EMANATE. v. n. [emans, Latin.] To issue or flow from something else.

EMANATION. n. s. [emanatio, Latin.]

1. The act of issuing or proceeding from any other substance.

Artihood said, that it threatened by connoted reflexu and emanation from God, the infinite and eternal nature of the light fluxes from the sun.

Smith.

2. That which issues from another substance; an efflux; effluvium.

The experience of those profitable and excellent emanations from God, may be, and commonly are, the foundation of our sciences.

Another way of attraction is delivered by a teamous emanation, or continued effluence, which, after some distance, extrudes itself into the gypsies, Turks, and vile coifters, which pour at length into their former dimensions.

Smith.
EMB

Such were the features of her heavenly face;
Her lips were form'd, with such harmonious grace;
So soft was her face, as the whole Harmonious to immortality.

Emancipation. [from emancipate, Lat.,
To set free from servitude; to relieve from slavery.
Ordinary in opinions holds the dominion in the chains of error, without hope of emancipation. Clareveille's Strophes.

To Embarrass. n. a. (embarrass, Span.)
A prohibition to pass; in commerce, a stop put to trade.
He knew that the subfeds of Flanders drew so great commodity from the trade of England, as by embargo they would soon wax weary of Perkin. Bacon's Henry VII.

After an embargo of our trading vessels in the rivers of Bouxhees, and other points of sovereign affront, there did succeed the action of Rhenia. Pepyn. I was not much concerned, in my own particular, for the embargo, which was wrought upon us. Dryd.

To Embark. v. a. (embarquer, French.)
1. To put on shipboard.
Of mankind, so numerous, All left, in one small bottom swam embark'd.
Clarendon.
2. To engage another in any affair.
To Embarrass, v. a. [embarraser, Fr.]
To perplex; to diffus; to entangle.
I saw my friend a little emibarrased, and turned away.

Embankment. n. f. [from embank.]
To engage in any affair.

To Embank. v. a. [embank, French.]
1. To make up into a bundle.
2. To bind up; to inclose.
Below her head she did somewhat twine,
And her straight legs most bravely were embank'd.
In golden buckstis of softly cordain. Fairy Queens.

To Embalm. v. a. [embaumer, French; embalsmer, Span.] To impregnate a body with aromatics, that it may refit putrefaction.
Embalm me, then lay me forth; although unqueen'd, yet like A queen, and daughter to a king, into me. Shakespeare.

I would shew future times What you were, and teach them t'urge towards such: Verbe embolis virtus, and toms or thrones of thymes, Preserve frail tranitory fame as much As spice doth bodies from corruption save. Dryden.

Muse; at that name thy纳入 sorrow shut; Those tears eternal that embalm the dead. Pope.

Embalm. n. l. [from embalm.] One that practises the art of embalming and preserving bodies.
The Romans were not so good embalmers as the Egyptians, so the body was tenderly confirmed. Bacon's Natural History.
EMB

 affidavit of those that underwrote the art of speaking are not the art of speaking well. Lecks.
 That which was once the most beautiful spot of Italy, covered with palaces, embellished by emperors, and celebrate by poets, has since nothing to Adorn in Italy.

 EMBLISHMENT. n. f. [from emblish.] - Ornaments: adventitious beauty: decoration:
 adjectives, any thing that conveys the power of pleasing.
 Cultivate the wild incitement of
 With adduction, discipline, and liberal arts,
 The embellishments of life. Addison's Cat.
 Appurtenances, vitiés, and intercourses of all kinds between those who are engaged in the traffic, are the frequent and familiar embellishments of the legends of the Roman church. Atherbury.

 EMBRING. n. f. The ember days. A word used by old antiquaries, now obsolete.
 For caster good in many ways,
 Keep emb'ren'g well, and falling days;
 What law commands, we ought to obey,
 For Friday, Saturday, and Wednesday.
 Toller.

 EMBRERS. n. f. without a flagellar [emph, Sat.]
 Emberweek; ember, fork, abend, hot ashes or cinders. Hot cinders: ashes not yet extinguished.
 Take hot cinders, and put them about a bottle filled with new beer, almost to the very neck: let the bottle be well stop'd, let it fly out: and continu'd times renewing the cinders every day for the space of a ten days.

 EMBRSTER. n. f. [from emphrser.] - A globe of fiery phænix inscind
 With bright emblem and horrid arms. Milton

 EMBLIS. n. f. [W. Ems.] - Inlay; enam'd; any thing inflected into the body of another.

 2. An occult representation; an illusive picture: a typical designation.
 She had all the royal makings of a queen,
 The rod, and bird of peace, and all such elements.
 Lord Byron, Henry VIII.
 If you shew your bane in your emblem, thou shall see what that country is naturally to the beast.

 Emblematic.

 1. Comprising an emblem; allusive; occult;
 representatively.
 In the well fam'd modest
 With emblematical edifice and order,
 Thou'dt see where 'twas on battlements should rise,
 Where gates should open, or where walls should close.

 2. Dealing in emblems; using emblems.
 By tongue andudder to our friends explain.
 What does your emblematical worth mean. Prior.

 Emblematical. adj. [from emblem.] - In the manner of emblems; allusive;
 occult representation.
 Others have spoken emblematically and hieroglyphically, as to the Egyptians and the phoenix was the hieroglyphick of the sun. Swift.

 Emblematis. n. f. [from emblem.] - Writers or inventors of emblems.
 Those lines are full maintained by symbolical

 Emblemist. n. f. (inpheemist.) -
 1. Interconnection; injection of days or years to produce regularity and equation of time.
 The civil constitutions of the year were after different manner in several nations; some using

 EMB's year, but in diverse fashions; and some follow the moon, finding out emblems or equinoxes, even to the addition of whole months, or to make as many as they could. Cheyns of Time.

 The time inflected; intercalary time.

 Emblus. n. f. [efable.] - Any thing inflected and acting in another, as the sucker in a pump.

 Our members make a fort of an hydraulic engi nee, in which a chemical liquor reeling blood, is driven through elastic channels by an emblem,
 like the heart. Arbernoun.

 To EMBROSS. v. a. [from buss, a protuberance, French.] - To form with protuberances; to cover with something rising into lumps or bunces.

 Tither hath made his everlasting mansion
 Upon the beauteous verge of the salt flood;
 Which once a-day, with his emiss'd breath,
 The turbulent surge that cover. Shak. Trom.

 The art be a tile,
 A plague fore, or embossed carbuncles.
 In my corrupted blood.
 Shak. King Lear.

 And shall all his flesh emboss,
 And all his people.

 All crowd in heaps, as at a night-amain.
 The bees drive out each other's backs,
 To emboss their hive in clusters. Dryd. Don. Shaksf.

 To engrave with relief, or rising work.
 Then o'er the lofty gate his emblem'd.
 Andr. 's death, and offering to his ghost.

 [from emboss, French, to inclose in a box.] - To inclose; to include; to cover.

 The knight his thrallish spear again alley'd
 In his brain'd-plated body to emboss,
 Den.yr. John the day, as the did weep and walk,
 A knight her met, in mighty arms embossed.

 [from emboss, French, to inclose in a thicket.

 Like that self-begetter bird,
 In th' Arabian woods embossed.
 Milton's Agenor.

 5. To hunt hard.
 When a deer is hard run, and foams at the mouth, he is said to be embo'd: a dog also, when he is strained with hard running, ecipically upon hard ground, will have his knees swelled, and then he is said to be embossed, from buss, French, a tumour.

 EMBRUSH. v. a. [from buss, French, to brush, French.] - To brush off, to smooth, to polish, to scrape off dirt from anything.

 Oh, he is more mad
 Than Thalmas for his shield; the boar of Thessaly
 Was never to emboss.
 Shak. Lear.

 And thou must emboss him; you shall see his fall to-night.

 EMBRUSEMENT. n. f. [from emboss.] -
 1. Any thing standing out from the rust; junceum.
 I with all, in the very middle, a fair mount, with three attic and alleys, enough for four to walk a-breast; which I would have to be perfect circles, without any bulwarks or embasures.
 Bacon's Essays.

 2. Relief; rising work.
 They are at a loss about the word prescise;
 some fancy it expresses only the great embossment of the others believe it hung the helmet in alto relieve.
 Addis on Italy.

 To EMBRUSE. v. a. [healisse, French.] - To to include in bottles; to bottle.

 Sirom, firriment fruit.
 Embossed, king as Pharamond Troy
 Withold the Greeks' endures
 Philips.

 To EMBROCH. v. a. [from becoro.] - To cataract; to deprive of the entrails; to excoriate.

 The schools.
 Embossed of the schools, have left off
 The danger to infect. Shak.

 Embossed will I thee by and by;
 Till then, in blood, by noble blood.
 Shak. Henry IV.
An apertare in the wall, through which the cannon is pointed; battlement.

To EMBRACE, v. a. [from brew.] To decorate; to embellish; to deck; to grace; to adorn. Not now in use.

So, both agree their bodies to engrave;
The great eye turn to the sky, and,
And, with fat Cyprus, feemly it embrace. Dryden.

To EMBRACE, v. a. [from embrace.] To rub any part disfigured with medicinal liquors.

1. The act of rubbing any part disfigured with medicinal liquors.

2. The lotion with which any disfigured part is walled or embossed.

We endeavoured to ease by diffusive and emollient carbuncles, and emulsions of various sorts. Wifeman's Surgery.

To EMBROIDER, v. a. [broder, French.] To border with ornaments; to decorate with figured work; to diversify with needlework; to adorn a ground with raised figures of needlework.

Such an accumulation of favours is like a kind of embroidering, or lifting of one favour upon another.

Embro'der'd with flowers it had flood,
That became a garden of a world.

Warton.

To EMBROIDERER, n. f. [from embroider.] One that adorns clothes with needlework.

Blue silk and purple, the work of the embroiderer, Eceif.

EMBROIDERY, n. f. [from embroider.]

1. Figures raised upon a ground; variegated needlework.

Write,
In embro'der'd tuffs, flow'rn purp'fed, blue and white,
Like sapphire, pearl, in rich embro'dery,
Buckled below fair knight'shood's beaming knee.

Shaksf.

Laces and embroideries are more costly than either warm or coldly. Pope.

2. Variegation; diversity of colours.

If the natural embroidery of the meadows were help'd and improve'd by art, a man might make a pretty landscape of his own poetries.

Spencer, No. 444.

To EMBRO'IL, v. a. [broiller, French.] To disturb; to confuse; to distress; to throw into confusion; to involve in troubles by disaffection and discord.

I had on poison, defign, or preparation to embroil any kingdom in a civil war. King Charles.

Rumour next, and chance,
And tumult and confusion, all embroil'd,
And diversify'd with a thousand various mirths. Milton.

When she found her venom spread to far,
The royal house embroil'd in civil war,
Rais'd on her duky wings the cleaves the flocks.

Dryden.

9. To perplex; to entangle.

The Christian antiques at Rome, though, of a frether date, are so embroil'd with fable and legend, that one receives but little satisfaction.

Ifaëf. or Addicion on Italy.

10. To perplex; to entangle.

The Christian antiquities at Rome, though of a frether date, are so embroil'd with fable and legend, that one receives but little satisfaction.

Ifaëf. or Addicion on Italy.

10. To perplex; to entangle.

The Christian antiquities at Rome, though of a frether date, are so embroil'd with fable and legend, that one receives but little satisfaction.

Ifaëf. or Addicion on Italy.

10. To perplex; to entangle.
EME

which made the lays emerge more obliquely out of the second refracting sphere of the prism, the image soon became an inch or two longer, or more. Newton's Opticks.

3. To rise; to mount from a state, of depressio, or obscurity; to rise into view. Deform-

a d

And shining stars defend to fable night. Dryd. Fab. And when, from dew laden emerging bright, Aurora breaks the light with orient light, Let each deplor his dead. Pope's Odyssey.

Then from ancient gloom emerge'd. Thomson's Summer.

A rising world.

EMERGENCY. n. s. [from emerge.]

1. The act of rising out of any fluid by which it is covered.

We have read of a tyrant, who tried to prevent the emergence of murdered bodies. Browne's Vulgar Errors.

2. The act of rising or starting into view.

The emergency of colours, upon coalition of the particles of such bodies, as were neither of them of the colour of that mixture whereas they are ingredients, is very well worth our attentive observation. Boyle on Colours.

The white colour of all refracted light, at its very first emergence, where it appears as white as before its incidence, is compounded of various colours. Newton's Opticks.

3. Any sudden occasion; unexpected catually.

Most of our rarities have been found out by easful emergency, and have been the works of time and chance rather than of philosophy. Censure's Sceptics.

4. Preparing necessity; exigence. A fent not proper.

In any case of emergency, he would employ the whole wealth of his empire, which he had amassed together, in his fabulous annals. Addison's Freecider.

EMERGENCY. adj. [from emerge.]

Rising out of that which overwhells or obscures it.

Love made my emergent fortune once more look. Above the main, which now shall his the thames. Ben Jonson.

Immediately the mountains huge appear

Emergent, and their broad bare backs unheavn. Milton.

Rising into view, or notice, or honour.

The man that is once hated, both his good and his evil deeds oppresses him; he is not easily emergence, Ben Jonson.

Proceeding or rising from any thing.

The belief holds a fatality, and a fixed unalterable course of events; but then they hold alo, that they fell out by necessity emergent from and inherent in the things themselves, which God himself could not alter. South.

Sudden; unexpectedly casual.

All the lords declared, that upon any emergent occasion, they would mount their searts upon their horses, and instantaneously dizziness. Emerson.

EMERGEO. n. s. [corrupted by ignorant

EMERGEO. ] pronunciation from hemorhoids, awseeping. ] Painful swellings of the hemorrhoidal veins; piles.

He destroyed them and smote them with emerods, 1 Sam. 21.

EMERSION. n. s. [from emerg.] The time when a star, having been obscurc

ed by its too near approach to the sun, appears again.

This time was in the heliacal emergon, when it becomes at greatest distance from the sun. Emerson's Vulgar Errors.

EMERY. n. s. [jarnyl, Lat. smend, Fr.] Emery is an iron ore, confiderably rich. It is found in the island of Guernsey, in Tufcany, and many parts of Germany. It has a near relation to the magnet. The lapidaries cut the ordinary gems on their wheels by sprinkling the wetted powdered over them; but it will not cut diamonds. It is useful in cleaning and polishing steel.

EMETICAL. adj. [from emetic.]

Having the EMETICAL quality of provoking vomits.

Various are the temperaments and operations of herbs; some purgative, some emetic, and some laxative. Hale.

EMETICALLY. adv. [from emetic.] In such a manner as to provoke to vomit. It has been complained of, that preparations of silver have produced violent vomits; whereas we have not observed duly refined silver to work emetically, even in women and girls. Boyle.

EMICTION. n. s. [emictiat, Lat.] Sparkling; flying off in small particles, as spigot liquors.

Iron, in as forts, will fall into effulution with noise and emiction, as also a crust and fumid exhalation. Brown.

EMICTION. s. [from emiction, Lat.] Urine; what is voided by the urinary passages.

Gravel and stone grind away the flesh, and effuse the blood apparent in a fungine emiction. Harvey on Consumptions.

To EMIGRATE. v. a. [emigrate, Lat.] To remove from one place to another.

EMIGRATION. n. s. [from emigrate.] Change of habitation; removal from one place to another.

We find the originals of many kingdoms either by victories, or by emigrations, or innate conmotions. Ray on the Creation.

EMINENCE. n. s. [eminutia, Lat.] 1. Loftsiness; height.

2. Summit; highest part.

Mountains shound with different vegetables, every verteu or emininc affording new kinds. Ray on the Creation.

EMINENCY. s. [from eminet.] A part rising above the rest.

They must be smooth, almost imperceptible to the touch, and without either eminence or cavities. Gla dstone's Delineator.

4. A place where one is exposed to general notice.

A farty or libel on one of the common stamps, neer meets with that reception as what is aimed at a person whose merit places him in eminence, and gives him a more conspicuous figure. Addison's Spectator.

EXALTATION; confpicuoufness; state of being exposed to view; reputation; celebrity; fame; preferment; greatness.

You've too a woman's heart, which ever yet Affected eminence, wealth, sovereignty. Shaksp. Henry VIII.

Alterations are attributed to the powerful effent under princes, where the eminence of one enobles the reft. He deferv'd no such return. From me, whom heercated what I was, In that bright eminence; and with his good Unpraised once. Milton's Paradise Lost.

Where men cannot arrive to any eminence of effaye, yet religion makes a comphensation, by teaching content. Thfe two were men of eminency of learning as well as of eminency. Addison's Critics.

Shaking the floors. Swift.

Supreme degree.

Whatever pure thou in the body enjoy'd, And pure thou wert created, we enjoy In eminence. Milton's Paradise Lost.

Notice; distinction.

Let not remembrance still apply to Banquo, Prevent him eminence both with eye and tongue. Shaksp.

A title given to cardinals. Shaksp.
Round about her work the id! empaie.
With a fair border wrought of sunny bow'er. Spen fer.
Keep yourselves in breath,
And when I have the drier found,
Empale him with your weapon round about. Shak.
They have empal'd within a sodiack.
The first-born, fun, and keep twelve signes awake
To wash him with the Grief and Crab comfort
And fright him back. Donne.

Thank my charms,
I now empale he in my arms.
Cleveland.
Imperfected, empal'd with circling fire.
Yet unform'd.
Milton's Par. Los. Per.

4. To put to death by staking on a spike.

Who can behold, refuse to be empal'd?
His skin fixed on, and resolved yet alive? Southern.
Let them each be broken on the rack;
Then, with what life remains, empal'd and left
To write in his own blood the bloody tale. Addition.
Nay, I don't believe they will be contented with hanging; they talk of empaing, or breaking on the wheel.
Arbuthnot.

EMPAINE NEE, n.s. [from pare; Fr.]
The writing or entering the names of a jury into a parchment schedule, or roll of paper, by the sheriff, which he has summoned to appear for the performance of such public service as juryes are employed in.
Cowper.

Who can expect upright verdicts from such packed, corrupt juries &c. be not allowed to make exceptions against this incompetent empaln? Decay of Piety.

To EMPAINE, v. a. [from the noun.]
To summon to serve on a jury. A law term.
I shall not need to empaln a jury of moralists or divines, every man's own breed sufficiently instructing him. Government of the Tongue.

EMPALLANCE, n.s. [from parler, Fr.]
It signifies, in common law, a definite or peremptory demand of the public, the judge, that the whole matter be laid to rest; and it is sometimes used for the conference of a jury in the cause committed to them.

EMPALM, n. s. [emphal.n.]
A powder to correct the bad tent of the body.

To EMPALL, v. a. [from faison.]
To move with paffion; to affect strongly; to throw off from equanimity.
Until my eyes strange things presented were,
Pifuring that which I mind empal'd
That yet those thoughts empaln me full near, Spen fer.
So, frounding, moving, or to heigh upgrow.
The temper all empal'd & thereon, Milton.

To EMPALL. v. a. [from people.]
To form into a people or community.
He wonder'd much, and 'gan enquire
What stately building durft so high extend
Her lofty tower runs, and what unknown nation there empalned were?
Spen fer.

EMPERESS, n.s. [from emper, now written empire.]
1. A woman investied with imperial power.
Long, long, may you on earth our empress reign.
Ere you in heaven a glorious angel stand. Davie's.
2. The queen of an emperour.
Livinia will I make my empress.
Rome's royal mistis, malvis of my heart.
Shak.

EMPEROUR, n.s. [from emperor; French; imperator, Lat.]
A monarch of title and dignity superior to a king: as, the emperour of Germany.
Charles the emperour.
Under whose lee the queen his sun.
Makes visitation. Shaksp. Henry VIII.

EMPERY, n.s. [emper, French; imperium, Latin.]
Empire; sovereignty; dominion. A word out of use.

A lady
So fair, and sudden to an emperour,
Would make the great'rt king double.
Shaksp.

Take on your charge
And kindly government of this your land;
Not as protectors, {xward, substitutes,
But as succedually from blood to blood,
To yours, born your emperour, your own. Shaksp.

EMPHASIS, n.s. [emphazis, emphazas.]
A remarkable stress laid upon a word or sentence; particular force impressed by syll. or pronunciation.

Oh, that brave Cesar!
Be chock'd with such other emphases, Shaksp.

Empathy nozth must so much regard the time as a certain grandeur, whereby some feature, pellable, word or sentence is rendered more remarkable than the rest, by a more vigorous pronunciation, and a longer stay upon it.

These the questions have force and emphases, if they be understood of the antediluvian earth. Burnet's To.

EMPHATIC.' adj. [emaphat.] 1. Forceful; strong; striking.
Where he endeavours to diffuse from carnivorous appetites, how emphatical is his reasoning! Garrick.

In proper and emphatic terms thou didst paint the brave Cesar's face, Shaksp. Arbuthnot's John Bell. 2. Striking the flight.
It is commonly granted, that emphatical colours are light itself modified by refractions. Boyle on Col.

EMPHATICALLY, adv. [from emphatical.]
Strongly; forcibly; in a striking manner. How emphatically and eloquently do you ever do what proclaim the truth that I have been speaking of? South.

EMPHASIS, n.s. [emphazis, emphazas.]
Empathy is a light lofty humour, easily yielding to the pressure of the finger, sitting again in the instant you take it off. Wilm. Emerson.

EMPHASIS, n.s. [emphazis, emphazas.]
Holy; puffed up flooded; sown.
The signs of a sanguine are these: the inflammation letter its redness, and becomes drowsie and livid; the tendences of the skin goes off, and feels to the touch flabby or emphysemous; and velicates, filled with ficer of different colours, spread all over it. Shaksp. Shakespeare.

To EMPHERE, v. a. [from pierce.] To pierce into; to enter into by violent appulse.
The weapon bright, Taking advantage of his open jaw, Ran through his mouth with so improbable might, That deep empir'd this darksome hollow maw. Spens.

EMPHIGHT, preterite and part. From To sight; or pitch. [See Pitch.] Set; fixed; fullened.
But he was wary, and ere it empight.
In the meaner mark, advanced his hold atween. Spens.

EMPIRE, n. s. [empire, French; imperium Latin.]
1. Imperial power; supreme dominion; sovereign command.
Afford, ye fair ones, who is judgment fit,
Your ancient empire o'er love and wit, Rowe.
2. The region over which dominion is extended.
A section extended over vast tracts of land, and numbers of people, arrives in time at the ancient name of kingdom, or modern of empire. Temple.

Sexus Tomples.
Hath the presence, emfay, and command The empire of the sea. Shaksp. Act. and Cleop.

3. Command over any thing.
EMPRICK. n.s. [emprik.] This word seems to have been pronounced empick by EMP

by Milton, and empirick by Dryden. Milton’s pronunciation is to be preferred. A trier; an experiencer; such perfons as have no true education in, or knowledge of, anything but ventrare upon hearsay and observation only. Quinley.

The name of Hippocrates was more ofﬁcial to perfume such men as Galen, than to move a ﬂy empiricks.

That every plant might receive a name; according to the deﬁces it caurs, was the wish of Paracelius; a way more likely to multiply empiricks than herbalists. Such an avocation and contum for all manner of innovators, as physicians are apt to have for empiricks, or lawyers for pettifore.

The little writer, empirics, is of that sort, according to his word; to each disease the chance remedies: The learn’d in school, whence science frist began, Studies with care the anatomy of man. Dryden.

EMP. adj. [from the noun.]

1. Verfed in experiments.

Of ﬂy, the empirick alchymist can, or holds enough, to turn salt into gold. Milton.

2. Known only by experience; pratiﬁed only by rote, without rational grounds. The most sovereign preﬁgure in Galen is but empirick to this prudent. Shakespeare.

3. An empirick, or one of such art, is a man of art or practice, who has not the education, or the knowledge, of a philosopher, but has a great store of practice; and has been serv’d so long. handsome. Empirickly.

EMPICALLY. adv. [from empiric.]

1. Experimentally; according to experience. We shall empirically and sensibly deduce the causes of blackness from originals, by which we generally observe things distinguated. Brown’s Phil. Enr.

2. Without rational grounds; charlatanically, in the manner of quacks.

EMPICISM. n. s. [from empiric.] Dependence on experience without knowledge or art; quackery.

EMPILASTER. n. s. [Empiaster.] This word is now always pronounced, and generally written plaster. An application to a sore of an oليمious or viscous fululence, spread upon cloth. See PLASTER.

All the perfons applied to the breasts, ought to have a hole for the nipples. Wifeman’s Surgery.

To EMPILASTER. v. a. [from the noun.]

To cover with a plaster. They must be cut out to the quick, and the fora empiricks, or the great Mercurian, for the purpose. Empiastic.

adj. [from empirick.] Vifious; glutinous; ﬁt to be applied as a plaster.

Refin, by its emplastic quality, mixed with oil of oﬀer, perfects the conjuction. Wifeman’s Surgeon.

Empiastic applications are not fuelent to defend a wound from the air. Architellon on Air.

To EMPLAID. v. a. [from plead. To in- dic; to prefer a charge against; to accuse. To terrify and torture them, their tyrannous emplaites, and to make their emplaites serve to their end, and thereby subject them to prison, and thereby confuse them with nothing. Wyncoll.

Amply thought thunders the immediate voice of Jupiter, and empiaized them of impetity that referred to it natural causality. Glaunow’s Serfs.

Since none of the living villages dare emplait, and the magistrate of the lands. Dryden.

EMPLOY. v. a. [employer, French.]

1. To busy; to keep at work; to exercise. It is used both as agent; as, the king employed the minister; or cause, as, the publick employ’d the minister.

For thire, at least, in compass of the year, Tylers and such employ the ﬂax and hemp into yarn. To turn the wheel. Dryden’s Virgil.
EMP

Let thy nimble feet
Tread tumbid circles, which may always meet
In point to him; and figures to express
The grace of him, of the great empr. Benjonson.

2. A female invested with imperial dignity; a female sovereign.

Empresses of this fair world, resplendent Eve! Milton.
Yet, London, empress of the northern clime,
In high estate thou greatly didst expire. Dryden.
Within the vaults they lye, from heaven receiv'd her birth!
Her beams transmitted to the subject earth;
Yet this great emper. of the human soul,
Does only with imagin'd power controul.
For, if restless passion, by rebellions sway,
Compels the weak unfit luster. Prior.

Empire's, &c. [empire, French.] Attempt of danger; undertaking of hazard; enterprise.

Noble minds of yours, allied were
In prize puruit of chivalrous empire. Fairy Queen.
A double compass must you make,
If you achieve resolv'd by this empire.
Fierce faces threat'ning wars;
Giants of mighty bone, and bold emprise.
Milton. Thus, till the sun had travell'd half the sin
A Machado born the bold emprise:
Emptier, &c. [from empty.] One that empties; one that makes any place void by taking away what it contained.
The empi'rers have empti'd them out, and married their vine-branched. Natum, ii. 2.

1. Absence of plenteous; insomnity.
Where cities floor, well fenc'd, and numerous, desolation reigns
And empires dismay'd, void, unhlood'd;
The night men's eyes, and might beneath.
Philips.

2. The state of being empty.
His coffers found
With holow poverty and empliance. Shakespeare.
And gold fishes, vanity contains;
Nor could another in your room have been.
Except an empti'sad had come between. Dryden.
The ordinary air in which we live and repose, is of so thin a composition, that it contains hundred and forty-nine parts of its dimensions are mere emptinesses and nothing; and the remaining one only, molten and real substance. Bentley.

4. Want of substance or solidify.
He, which castes the graces and the loves to take up their habitation in the hardest marble and to submit in the emptiness of light and shadow.
Dryden's Deferency, Pref.

5. Unfatisfactoriness; inability to fill up the desires.
O frail child of human things,
Now to your cot your emptiness we know. Dryden.
From the judgment about the worth or emptiness of things here, according as they are or are not of use, in relation to what is to come after. Aitneyburg.

6. Vacuity of head; want of knowledge.
Eternal causes his emptiness betray,
As hollow dreams run dinning all the way. Pope.

Emption. n. s. [emptio, Latin.]
The act of purchasing; a purchase.

There is a dispute among the lawyers, whether Glaucon his exchanging his golden armory with the brass one of Elydson, was empliation or empliation.

EMPTY. adj. [empy, Saxon.]
1. Void; having nothing in it; not full.
I did never know to fill a voice issue from empy head, but he is truly the empti'ntd speak makes the greatest found.
The put was empti', there was no water in it. Gen. 1:2.
Way to the reliefs to fill, and you empy one to fill the other, and you empy nothing by dist:
full remains one velly empti'. Burns.

2. Evacuated; no longer full.
Himself he frees by secret means unseen,
Empliation, in empy head; self ezempted clean. Sprag.

3. Devoid; unfurnished.
Vol. I.
ENF
Good actions still must be maintain'd with good,
As bodies nourish'd with reflecting food.
Dye'd
2. Read: define or depreding another;
content; contention; discord.
What madmen's rules in brainick men,
When for so flight and frivolous a cause,
Such fouls emulated all arise.
Discouraging the base, Shakespeare,
Emularion, n. [from emulate.] Inclined to emulation; rivalling; disposed to,
A competitor.

Emulator, n. [from emulate.] A rival; a

2. Emulgent adj. [emugeus, Latin.] To

1. Rivalling: engaged in competition.

What the Gault or Moor could not effect,
Not emulating Carthage, with their length of spine,
Shall be the work of one. Ben Jonson's Carolina.
She is in perpetual disaffection, or actual enmity with her, but always emulated and薮eful of her,

2. Devisor of superiority; devisor to rise above another; devisors of any excellence possessed by another; with of the object of emulation.

By strength
They measure all; of other excellence
Not emulgent, nor care who they excels.
By fair rewards our noble youth we raise
To emulous merit, and to thirst of praise.
Prior.
Good Howel, emulgent of the Great Art, Prior.

3. Facedious; contentious;
Whose glorious deeds, but in the fields of late,
Made emulgent millions 'mongst the gods themselves,
And drave great Mars to passion. Shakespeare.
Emulation, j. [from emulan, Latin.] With desire of excelling or outgoing another.
So tempt them, and emulgent vie
To bribe a voice, that emulsors would not buy. Gracc.
Emulsion, n. [emulsion, Latin.] A form of medicine, by bruising oily fluids and kernels, and pouring out their substances with some liquor,
that thereby becomes milky.
Quincy.
The aliments is diversify'd by an operation terming that of making an emulsion; in which operation the oily parts of our, and feeds, by bruising ground in a marble mortar, and gradually mixed with some water liquor, or dissolved into a sweet, thick, turbid, milky liquor, renambling the chyle is.
Emunctories, n. [emunctorium, Latin.] Those parts of the body where any thing excrementitious is separated and collected, to be in readiness for ejection. Quincy.

To Enamoured, v. [from enamell.] To

1. To inflame to variegate with colours, fixed by fire.
Milt. I, also, sh.
Frame and enamelled plate, and drink in glass? Donne.

ENG
See Pat with books, with fruits Pomana crow'd;
Here blushing Flora paints the enamell'd ground.
 Pope.
I bequeath to the Earl of Orsey the enamell'd
Giver plates, to distinshish horsie by. Swifts.
2. To lay upon another body as to vary it.
Higher than that, a circling row
Of goodliest trees, laden with the fairest fruit,
Bloms, and fruits, and flowers, as Appeard with gay enamell'd colours mix'd. Milton.
To Enamell, v. n. To prattice the use of enamel.

Though it were booth to colour or enamel upon the glades of turquoise, yet to glut the tubes of them may render them more acceptable to the users, without leaving the clearness of the object. Byl.

1. Anything enamelled, or variegate with colours, fixed by fire.
Down from her eyes welled the pearls round,
Upon the bright enamel of her face;
Such honey drops on flowering flowers are found,
When Phebus holds the crimson mom in chase.
Fairfack.

There are various sorts of coloured glasses, plates, enamells and fustious glasses. Woodward's Natural History.

The fabulance is to gain in other things.

To Enameller, n. [from enamel.] One that prattice the art of enamelling.

To Enamour, v. a. [Amour, French.] To

1. To enamour with; to make fond:
with of before the the thing or person loved.
Afflication is enamour'd of thy parts,
And thou wouldst be so Enamour'd.
Shake.

My Oberon! what visions have I seen!
I thought I was enamour'd of an afs. Shakespeare.
You are very near my brother in his love, he is enamour'd of Shakespeare.

Or should the, confident,
As sitting queen ader on beauty's throne,
Defend'd with all her winsome charms begirt,
'To Enamour, n. [enamour, Latin.] Explanation. exposition. Dict.

Earthethritis. n. [yen and defus.] The injurious of one bone into another to form a joint.
Earthethris is where a good round head enter's into a cavity, whether it be a croupi, or pronouci.
as that of os coxa, receiving the head of the os femorii; or glean, which is more shallow, as in the scapula, where it receives the humerus.
Wiffman.

Enanation. n. [enate, Latin.] The act of swimming out; escape by swimming.

To Enamour. v. a. [from cage.] To

1. To fill up in a cage; to coop up; to confine.
He suffer'd his kindam March,
Who is, if every owner were right
Indeed, his king was so escape in Wales,
'cause there with ommon to lie torreface.

Like Bajazet ename'd, the shepherd's troth,
And yet, his own fair, that hair of Donne.
To Enamor, n. [from camp.] To pitch tents; to fit down for a time in a march;
To settle a temporary habitation.

He enump'd at the mount of God, Exod. xiii. 5.
The French knew how to make war with the Biglup.
Englisli, by not putting things to the hazard of a battle, but wearing them by long sieges of towns, and strong fortified encampings.

EncaMCipit. v. a. To form an army into a regular camp; to order to encamp.

The people were encamped against Gibboniennes.

Kings.

EncaMpanMent. n. f. [from encamp.]

1. The act of encamping, or pitching tents.
2. A camp; tents pitched in order.

Their enemies served to improve them in their encampments.

Some encampments are built on the heights of ground.

Bevan.

One of Addiott's most formidable fortifications.

The fortification of South Sydney.

Knees.

The fortification of Bowers.

Encli'ticks.

2. To enclose; to hide as in a cave.

Do not encircle yourself, but mark the other's, the gibes, and notable foams, that dwell in every region of his face.

For I will make him tell the tale anew.

Shakes.

Encinte. n. f. [French.] Inclosure; ground inclosed with a fortification.

A military term not yet naturalised.

To Enchaine. v. a. [enchain, French.]

To enrobe; to irritate; to provoke.

The wind-shake'd surge, with high and monstrous main,

Seems to call water on the burning bear,

I never did like molestation view.

This Shakespeare's Orbello.

To Enclain. v. a. [enclain, French.]

To fasten with a chain; to hold in chains; to bind; to hold in bondage.

What should I do! while here I was enchain'd,

No glimpse of godlike liberty remain'd.

Dryden.

To link together; to concataculate.

The one contradicts and enchains his words, speaking prettily and short; the other delights in long-branch'd accents.

Howel.

To Enchant. v. a. [enchance, French.]

1. To give efficacy to any thing by fongs of enchantment.

And now about the caudron sing,

Like elves and fairies in a ring,

Enchanting all that you put in.

Shakespeare.

Too dear I prize'd a fair enchanting face;

And bathe with this enchant'd juice her hair.

That door where no admittance now is found,

But where my soul is ever roaming round,

Granville.

2. To indulge by charms or spells.

A wine cup, where charm'd circle,

Where all his spirits for ever should be enchain'd.

Sidney.

John thinks them all enchain'd: he requires if Nick had not given them some intoxicating potion.

Arbuth

3. To delight in a high degree.

One whom the music of his own vain song

Doth ravish like enchanting harmony.

Shakespeare.

Too dear I prize'd a fair enchanting face;

Beauty unchain'd is beauty in disgrace.

Pope.

EnchaMntr. n. f. [enchant, French.]

A magician; a sorcerer; one who has spirits or demons at his command; one who has the power of charms and spells.

Such phantoms; such apparitions, are enchantresses which men applaud in themselves, conjured up by the magic of a strong imagination, and only seen within that circle in which the enchantress stands.

Dryden.

Glied, by valour and stratagems, put to death tyrants, enchanters, monsters, and knaves.

Spell.

A man, that black enchanters, whole-dire arts.

Endow'd our knights, and broke our virgin hearts.

Guion.

Enchantingly. adv. [from enchant.]

With the force of enchantment. It is improperly used in a passive sense in the following passage.

He's gentle; never should, and yet learned; full of noble devices; all of us enchantingly below.

Shakespeare.

EnchaMnlement. n. f. [enchantment, French.]

1. Magical charms; spells; incantation; sorcery.

The Turks thought that tempest was brought upon them by the charms and enchantments of the English.

Kesler.

2. Irresistible influence; overpowering delight.

Warmth of fancy will carry the loadest and most universal applause, which holds the heart of a reader with a force which nothing but the knowledge of the French can expel.

Pope.

EnchaMntress. n. f. [enchantress, French.]

1. A sorceress; a woman versed in magical arts.

Yet am I here to incite in any other body so as to be held fast, but not concealed.

Like polit'd ivy, beautiful to behold;

Or Parian marble, when enchant'd in gold.

Dryden.

2. To adjoin to, and enclose, in an enclosure.

Which, in their natural situation, shine like jewels enchant'd in gold, look, when transposed into nests, as if let in lead.

Fenton.

3. To adjoin by raifed or embossed work.

When was Shrewsbury's head more quickly cur'd?

Or look'd the earth more green upon the world?

Or nature's cradle more enchant'd and pur'd?

Ben Johnson.

EnchaMnson. n. f. [enchanson, old law French; Caupe; occasion.

Skinner.

Cowley.

Bartholomew.

Corts, gild'd his, well mow'd site; I shou'd to tell

The songs enchant'd that me kither led.

Fairy Queen.

To Encircle. v. a. [from circle.]

To surround; to inclose; to encircle in a ring or circle; to enring.

That thrangest guelt the Paphian realms obey,

A royal demesne it was; a fine estate.

Pope.

Beneath a sculptur'd arch he its enchant'd;

The peers engraving, form an awful round.

Pope.

Encirclet. n. f. [from circle.]

A circle; a ring.

In whose enchiplet if ye gaze,

Your eyes may tread a lover's maze.

Sidney.

EncaMntics. n. f. [enchantment, French.]

Particles which throw back the accent upon the foregoing syllable.

To Encluse. v. a. [enclose, French.]

1. To part from things or grounds common by a fence.

The protector cau'd the proclamation to be fet forth against enclosures, commanding that who had enclosed lands,acci'dent to lie open, should lay them open again.

Haywood.

As much land as a man tills, and can use the product of, so much he by his labour encloses from the common.

Encluse. v. a. [enclose, French.]

1. To fence the land, the usual way is with a barb, set with quick.

Morgan's Husbandry.

2. To environ; to encircle; to surround; to encompass; to shut in between other things; to include.

The firce now a betty, and an ox, and a jafer: they shall be set in gold in their enclosures.

Ex. xxviii. 10.
FIVE TURF; MARCUS,

Have I sought with thee; too often hast thou bete me:
And wouldst do so, I think, should we encounter.

To be a stranger as Shakspeare's Cordial,

1. To engage; to fight; haste with before the thing.

Our war
Will turn into a peaceful comic spot.

When ladies crave to be encounter'd with. Shaks.

Both the wings of his feet had begun to encounter
With the Christians. Knolles's Hist. of the Turks.

Those who have the most dread of death, must be content to encounter with it, whether they will or no.

2. To meet face to face.

3. To come together by chance.

ENCOUNTERER, n.f. [from encounter.]

1. Opponent; antagonist; enemy.

The lion will not kick with his feet, but he will strike such a stroke with his tail, that he will break the back of his encounter with it. More.

The doctrines of the reform have kept the field against all encounterers.

2. One that loves to accost others. An old term.

3. See, these encounters? some of tongue,

They give a coaling welcome ere it comes;

And wide upon their thoughts. Every idle

To every idle meeting. Shaks. Troilus and Cressida.

To ENCOURAGE. v. a. [encourager French.]

1. To animate; to incite to any thing. They encourage themselves in an evil matter,

2. To give courage to; to support the spirits; to inspire; to embolden.

Kinds of mistick encourage men, and make them warlike, or make them soft and effeminate. Bacon.

I would encourage the rebels, I would urge the Protestant loyalty. King Charles.

3. To raise confidence; to make confident.

I doubt not but there are ways to be found, to all that are in the world, and that the judicious Hooke encourages me to stay. Locke.

ENCOURAGEMENT. n.f. [from encounter.]

1. Incitement to any action or practice; incentive.

2. Encoragement of.

Such strength of heart

Thy could not tame a给予; nor small Encouragement, Godolphin, wife and jul. Philips.

3. Favour; contenance; support.

For when he dies, farewell all honour, bounty.

All generous encouragement of arts. Orrery's Orphans.

The rewards of laying down their lives against an established religion, because those who have no religion will profane themselves of that which has the encouragement of the law. Rigeaux.

ENCOURAGING, n.f. [from encourage.]

One that supplies incitements to any thing; a lover.

Live then, thou great encourager of arts,

Live ever in our thankful hearts. Dryden.

As the pope is a matter of polite letters, and a great encouragement of that Rome; these arts are immediately under the encouragement of the prince. Addison.

To ENCOURAGE. v. a. [accourager from a cour, a hook, French.]

1. To make invasions upon the right of another; to oppress another into another men's possessions to draw them away.

Those Irish captains of counties have encroached upon the queen's freeholders and tenants. Spenser.

2. To advance gradually and by stealth upon that to which one has no right: with or before the subject.

This hour and time if for the near care, I grow too wise,

And do encounter upon death's side. Herbert.

Telephone, let loose from under ground,

Before her death's face and allight.

And every moment flies to the fight,

Affairing to the sides, encroaching on the light. Dryd. To ENCOURAGER. v. n.

1. To creep on gradually without right.

The superstition that riches voluntarily, and by degrees implant itself with the rites, even of every divine service, done to the true God, must be considered as a creeping and encroaching evil.

Th' encroaching ill you early should oppose

Blister'd, its worse, and by indulgence grows. Dryd.

2. To pass bounds.

They fainted for the serpent, whom they called Ophiom, with Eurynome, the wide Encroaching Eve perhaps, had first the rule. Of High Olympos.

Milton's Paradise Lost.

Their cures with hedges are destroyed on the round.

Excuseth the encroaching cattle from th'gyround. Dryd.

ENCROACHER, n.f. [from encroach.]

1. One who feizes the possession of another by gradual and silent means.

The hold encroachers on the deep,

Gain by degrees huge tracts of land.

'Till Nepunse, with one general sweep,

Turns all again to barren farms. Swift.

2. One who makes progress in any gradual advance beyond his rights.

Full drest creates dignity, augments confidencis, and keeps at distance an encourager.

Encroachment. n.f. [from encroach.]

1. An unlawful gathering in upon another man. For example: if two men's grounds lie together, one that proffes too far upon the other; or if a tenant owe tw illings rent-fervice to the lord, and the lord takes three: to the Spencers encroached to themselves royal power and authority.

Cowl.

But this usurper his encroachment proud,

Stays not on man; to God his tow'r intends

And defiance. Milton's Paradise Lost.

If it be a man's known principle to depart from his right, ill men will make unjust encroachments upon him.

Atturby.

2. To advance into the territories or rights of another.

As a man had a right to all he could employ his labour upon, so he had no temptation to labour for more than he could make ufeful: this left no room for controversy about the title, nor for encroachment on the right of others.

Locke.

The ancient Romans made many encroachments on the sea, and laid to foundations of their houses within the very borders of it.

Addison on Italy.

The people, since the death of Solomon, had already made great encroachments.

Swift.

To ENCOURAGE, n.f. [encourager, French.]

1. To clog; to load; to impede.

We have, by this many years experience, found that exceeding great good, not encumbered with any notable incumbrance.

Hake.

Encumber'd with his witt, without defence. Dryd.

2. To entangle; to embarrass; to obftruct.

The verbal copier is encumbr'd with so many difficulties at once, that he can never distinguish himself. Dryd.

The god awak'd,

And thrice in vain he shook his wing,

Encumbr'd in the thickening fire. Prior.

3. To load with debts; as, his estate is cumbr'd and mortgageed.

ENCUMBRANCE. n.f. [from encumber.]

1. Clog; load; impediment.

Philosophers agreed in despising riches at all, considering them as unnecessary encumbrances of life.

Hake.

Deal limits are an encumbrance to the body, instead of being of use to it. Addison's Freethinker.

2. Excessiveness; useless addition.

Strip from the branching Alps their pine load,

The huge encumbrance of horrid weeds. Tho'fam.

3. Burthen upon an estate.

To END

ENDARM. n. s. [from endarter.]
1. The cause of love; means by which any thing is endear- ed.
2. The state of being endear- ed; the state of being loved.
Is not the separate property of a thing the great cause of its endearment among all mankind? South.
When a man shall have done all that he can to make his friend, and emptied his purse to create endearment between them, he may, in the end, be forced to write vanity and frustration. South.
ENDA VOUR, n. s. [endeavour, French; endevour.]Labour directed to some certain end; effort to make or to avoid.
My studied purpos- es went
Beyond all man's endeavours. Shaksp. Henry VIII.
He made his endear- ments,
Shaksp. Here their appointment we may both discover,
And look on their endear- ments. Shaksp. Am. and Cle.
A letter is an invitation of an author to be an endearment of a lover to write like one who has written before him on the same subject.
Dy- dryn. In the midst of a forceful game with more passion, endear- ment, and application, and therefore often succeed. Temple.
She could not make the leaf endear- ment towards the comprehending of any thing that has vital and anergetic parts.
Such an affiance as will quicken men's endeavours for the obtaining of a letter good, ought to advantage men more powerfully in the pursuit of that which is infinitely greater. Ticklson.
This is the hinge on which turns the liberty of intellectual beings, in their conduct; after- ward, and steady pro- curement of, true felicity. Locke.
ENTEndeavour, v. n. [from the noun.]
To labour at a certain pur- pose; to work for a certain end. It has commonly after before the thing.
I could with that mere of our country cloyed endeavour after a hand- some addition. Addis- on.
Of old, the- se meet rewards who can excel;
And thence were prais'd, the- se but endear- ment well.
Pope.
ENDavour, v. n. [endeavour.] To attempt; to strive.
To pray', repine, and obedience due,
Though but endear- ment with sincere intent,
May not like the flow, mine ear not thine. Mil- it.
ENDA VOUER, n. s. [from endear- ment.]
One who labours to a certain end.
He appears an humble end- ear- ment, and speaks honestly to no purpose. Rynm. The Tragedy.
ENDG OON, n. s. [endeavour.] A plain figure of eleven fés and angles.
ENDM IAL. adj. [endeavour.] Peculiar to ENDM I N.ECk. n. [endeavour.] A dife- a- cing proceeding from some cause peculiar to the country where it reigns; such as the free- dom to the nor-cern nates.
We may bring a consummation under the notion of a pendent vine endem- ical, or rather a vertic- al disease, to England.
Harvey.
Solan- ced, from the fre- quency of the plants springing up in any place, could gather what en- dem- ical disease the inhabitants were subject to. Ray.
An endem- ical disease is what is common to the people of the country.
A dis- ease which has been a plague to endem- ical Egypt, is its invasion and going off at certain seasons. Arbo- nutin.
ENDER. v. n. [from denticula.] To make free; to endear- ence.
To endear- ame those things which have been beautified and enriched out of other tongues by en- dearing and endearing strange words. Camden.
To ENDICT. v. n. [endeavour, French; diceum. Latin.]
1. To charge any man by a written ac- cusaation before a court of justice; as, he was endear-ted for felony. It is often written index.
2. To draw up; to compose; to write.
How shall Fibbert into me endear- me shum, he can write. Gray.
Hear words, the endear- ed; useful rules, indices.
To repeat and when we indulge our fights! Pope.
END ETS v. n. [ceptenda.]
To compose.
Your battles hereafter shall endear- me,
And draw the image of our deeds in light. Waller.
END EMENT, n. s. [from end.]
A END EMENT, a bill or declaration made in form of law, for the benefit of the commonwealth; or an accusation for some offence exhibited unto jurors, and by their verdict found to be true, before an of-censor can have power to punish the same offence.
Cow- el.
Is it necessary that the species of the crime be de-declared or defined in the articles, which our English lawyers call an indictment or information. Ayly-gh.
We never draw any indictment at all against them,
but think commendable even of them. Locke.
The language and all may be cancelled in the court of heaven, and yet the indictment run on in the court of conscience.
South.
Attend the court, and then shall briefly find
In that one place the manners of mankind;
The little phren, then return again,
Call thyself a wretch, and, if thou dar'st, complain.
Dryden.
EN DIVE, n. s. [endower, French; intender, Latin.] A plant.
Endow, or lussory, is of several sorts; as the white, the green, and the cured.
ENDLESS. adj. [from end.]
1. Having no end; being without conclu-ion or diminution.
Nothing was more end- less than the common method of comparing eminent writers by an oppo-nition of various passages in them. Pope.
2. Infinite in longitudinal extent.
A river, to- ward his mouth, is end- less to do,
To such as seek a longer course. The Tragedy.
3. Infinite in duration; perpetual.
Some of the heathens, how cur- ious forever in fear;
In fancy and in acts of all their works, our be- a- crum, and outward ceremonies, could very once endeavour to reframe herein the church's care for the end- less good of their children.
Hooker.
But after labours long, and God delay,"
Brings them to final peace, and happy el- di- l- geno. Spencer.
All our glory extinct, and happy state,
Here flow's- us' end- less mercy! Milton.
4. Incepfant; continual.
All the plains and frits in my realm,
Shall in proportion find her end- less praise.
Shaksp. Each playing Blast shall end- less lives below,
And felt Belinda's blush for ever. Pope.
ENDLESSLY. adv. [from endless.]
1. Incefpantly; perpetually.
The soul, though it has made a fine entry of grace to all those who humbly seek, yet it is where engages that it shall importantly and endlessly renew its affections on those who have often regarded it. Dry- dey of Par- tney.
2. Without termination of length.
ENDLESSNESS. n. s. [from endless.]
1. Extension without limit.
2. Perpetuity; end- less duration.
3. The quality of being round without an end.
The Tropic circles have
Yes, and those small ones, which the poles en- grave,
All the same roundness, evenness, and all
The endles- sness of the Equinoctial. Delume.
To ENDURE, v. n. [from enduart.] To make free; to endear- ence.
A French gentleman speaking with an English of the law- fulke, the English said that was meant of the women themselves, not of male claiming by words. The French said, do you think I find that gles?
The English answered, Look on the backside of the record of the law fulke, and there you will find endour. Bacon's Apology.
Your most excellent letters endouer this super-fer- iption, To the king who hath the fun for his helmet. Howell.
All the letters I can find of yours I have fastened in a foil cover, and the rest in bundles endur-ent. Swift in Pope.
2. To cover on the back. This is not used.
Charles, or elephants, endur- ed with- out woe.
Milton's Paradise Regained.
ENDORSE, n. s. [from endorse.]
1. Superfeription; writing on the back.
2. Ratification.
The endorse- ment of supreme delight,
Write by a friend, and with his blood. Her- bert.
To ENDOW, v. n. [endorse, Latin; endow-emer, French.]
1. To enrich with a portion. He shall freely endow- her to be his wife. Exe- cuta.
2. To supply with any external goods.
An alms-house I intend to endow very handsome- ly for a dozen sparerunaced balemen. Addis- on.
3. To enrich with any excellence.
I at first with two fair gifts
Created him endow'd; with happy gifts
And immor- tal- ity. Pope.
This other fervor but to counterfeit woe.
Milton.
Among those who are the most richly endowed by nature, and accomplished by their own industry, how few are there whose virtues are not exceed'd! Addison.
God did never command us to believe, nor his ministers to preach, any doctrine contrary to the reason he hath pleased to endow us with. Swift.
4. To be the fortune of any one.
I do not think
So fair an outward, and such ful- wnnth,
Endow a man but him. Shakespeare's Cymbeline.
To ENDOW, y. t. [from endow.]"
End.

Ende'd with royal virtues as thou art, Might'st thou expel this minister from thy throne? Milton.

Whatever other knowledge a man may be endowed withal, he is but an ignorant person who does not know God, the author of his being. Tilton.

There is no Christian pastor with a power thereby, he is enabled to resist and conquer temptations. Tilton.

---

2. In the following passage it seems incorrectly printed for endure.

Their endurance of all evils, of pain, and death. Spenser's Ireland.

---

2. Patience; sufferance. A great thing of small One can create; and in what place but Thrive under evil, and work safe out of pain. Through labour and endurance. Milton.

Their fortitude was most admirable in their presence and endurance of all evils, of pain, and of death.

3. State of suffering. I would fain know whether men take a rational for their patience, or pretend it for the sake of the endurance of their higher faculties, but only out of the protection of the lower. Davies on Ireland.

The enemy thinks of safety three times thoughtless men for the next moment. Addington on the War.

Any one who regards another with malignity loves his friend. Kent in Tis' the Law.

One that dislikes.

He that doth despise his enemies, ought to be looked on as an enemy to truth and knowledge. Locke.

Bold is the critic, who dares prove These their honest friends to love; and Bolden he who dares prove That they were enemies to war. Prior.

---

5. In [Theology.]* The fiend; the devil. Defined as from the danger of the enemy.* Common Prayer.

---

1. To bear; to sustain; to support unbroken. The harden's of bodies is caused chiefly by the injuriousness of the spirits, and their impurity with the tangible particles, which make them not only hard, but fragile, and left enduring of prefire. Bacon.

Both were of shining steel, and wrought to force. As might the frokes of two such arms endure. Dryd.

2. To bear with patience. So dear I love him, that with all him death. I could endure; without him, live no life, Milton.

The gout haunts us all; the rich, the nice and the lazy, who grow to endure much, because they can endure little.

By the same torture thou art condemned, and must endure our law. *Shakespeare's Cymbeline.

This is one of such fongs as they thought necessary for the enduring of the plague, they destroyed all the rest. Knowle's Stitch.

3. To undergo; to sustain. I w thistoe die, yet dare not death endure. Dryd.

4. To suffer. The deer endure the worm but eight months, and is complete at six years. Brown's Vulg. Err.

---

To Endure. v. n.

1. To last; to remain; to continue. Labour not for the meat which perisheth, but for that meat which endureth unto everlasting life. John.

Doth the crown endure to generation? Prov. 6.

By being able to repeat measures of time, or span of stated length of duration in our minds, we can imagine duration, where nothing does really endure ever so long.

A charm that shall age endure.

The mind beneficent and pure. Aesop.

---

2. To brook; to bear; to admit. For how can I endure to see the evil that shall come unto my people? Or how can I endure the deftruction of my kindred? Ezra v. 6.

Our great English lords could not endure that any kingdom should be preferred itself, which; than the others; they could hardly endure that the crown of England should have any power over them.

Devise.

---

Endur'ance, n.

1. One that can bear or endure; suffers; sufferer; sufferer.
Enforce, v. a. [enforce, French.] 1. To give strength to; to strengthen; to support. 2. To make or gain by force. The little lute, enforcing various ways, Mildly the arch of his disordered fight. Did fail to ground. Sometimes with little bans, sometimes with their gray's, Enforce their charity. Shakespeare's King Lear. 3. To put in act by violence. Enforced as far as he could Enforce from the old Assyrian kings. Shaks. 4. To instigate; to provoke; to urge on; to animate. Fear gave her wings, and rage enforced my flight Through the wide deeps of Fairy Queen. If you knew to whom you shew this honour, I knew you would be proud of the work, Than customary, bounty can enforce you. Shaks. 5. To urge with energy. Which laws in all revokes case we must allow, That lack of means enforce you not to evil. Shaks. A just disdain conceived by that queen, that so wicket a rebel should prevail against her, did move and shou'd enforce her to bend over that mighty army. Enforce to v. a. To prove; to evince; to shew beyond contradiction. Which laws in all revokes case we must allow, That lack of means enforce you not to evil. Shaks. A just disdain conceived by that queen, that so wicket a rebel should prevail against her, did move and shou'd enforce her to bend over that mighty army. 6. To compel; to constrain. From every door with force I will allow, That lack of means enforce you not to evil. Shaks. And his old hate to you. Shakespeare. Cariblana, the recoilest with him, by enforcing the ill con. Equation of his refuel to take the office, which would be interpreted to his dislike of the court. Clarendon. 7. To prefs with a charge. Little used. In this point charge him home, that he afflicts Tyrannick pow'r! If he evades us, Enforce him with the eyes of the people, And that the gods on the Annizes Was never distributed. Shakespeare, Cariblana. 8. To v. o. To prove; to evince; to shew beyond contradiction. Which laws in all revokes case we must allow, That lack of means enforce you not to evil. Shaks. A just disdain conceived by that queen, that so wicket a rebel should prevail against her, did move and shou'd enforce her to bend over that mighty army. Enforce. n. f. [from force.] Power; strength. Not used. He now devises thee charlie to finge fight, As a petty enterprise of small enforce. Milton. Enforceably, adv. [from enforce.] By violence; not voluntarily; not spontaneously; not of right. If thou didst put this few'crow habit on, To extatify thy pride, 'twere well, but thou Dost it enforceably thou'dt courtier be, Went thou not beggar. Shakespeare's Timon of Athens. Enforcement. n. f. [from enforce.] 1. An act of violence; compulsion; force offered. Confess two, hers, and by what rough enforcement, You get it from her. Shakespeare. 2. Motion against; these enforcements, may easily matter or resist them. Raleigh's History. 3. Sanction; that gives force to a law. The rewards and punishments of another life, which the Almighty has established as the enforcement times of this law, are of weight enough to determine the choice. Locke. 4. Motive of conviction; urgent evidence. The personal defeat of God himself, and his affront on his holiness to his divinity, was an enforcement beyond all the methods of wisdom that were ever made use of in the world. Hammond. 5. Prejg exigence. Not by the Law, but by God. The leisure and enforcement of the time, Forbids to dwell on. Shakespeare, Rich. III. To Enthusiasm. n. a. [from enthusiasm.] Compeller; one who elicits by violence. When a man adds a cylinder or roller down an hill, 'tis certain that the man is the violent en- forceer of the full motion of it. Hammond. Envoiul'dred, adj. [from auri, French.] Mixed with lightning. Ophel. Hearten'd by his presence, and what cries, With few envoiul'dred'nd' and kissing fire, The hell-bred beast rush forth to the skies. - Shakespeare. To Enthusiastic. n. a. [from enthusiastic.] 1. To admit to the privileges of a freeman. The English colonies, and some of the trifles of the French, enfranchised special charities were admitted to the benefits of the laws. Davie. Romulus was the natural parent of all those people that were the first inhabitants of Rome, or of those that were after incorporated and enfranchised into that name, city, or government. Hale. 2. To fet free from slavery. Men, bearing wine, come from drinking healths to a draught at a meal; and, lastly, to discontinue altogether: but if a man have the fortitude and resolution to enfranchise himself at once, that is the best way to settle his interest. If they won a battle, prisoners became slaves, and continued so in their generations, unless enfranchised by their masters. Temple. 3. To free or release from captivity. The Franks. Did hold his eyes look in her crystal books. Belike, that now the hath enfranchis'd them, Upon some other name for fealty. Shakespeare. 4. To denizen; to enfranchise. These words have been enfranchised amongst us. W. To Engage. v. o. 1. To conflict; to fight. Upon advertisement of the Scots army, the earl of Holland was sent with a body to meet and engage them. Clarend. 2. To embark in any busines; to enfranchise in any party. 'Tis not indeed my talent to engage In latter trifies, or to dwell my page With wind and noise. Dryden's Pl. 3. To engage; v. o. [from engage, engage, French.] 1. The act of engaging, impounding, or making liable to a debt. 2. Obligation by contract. We have, in excess, exceeded our engagement. Clarendon. 3. Adherence to a party or cause; partiality. This practice may be obvious to any who impartially, and without engagement, is at the pains to examine. Swift. 4. Employment of the attention. Play, either by our too constant or too long engagement in it, becomes like an employment or profession. Rutter. 5. Fight; conflict; battle. A word very poetical. Our army, led by valiant Torrissmond, is now in hot engagement with the Moors. Dryden, Encour'd by despair, or obstinate To fall like men in what is most dishonour, Feeble engagement, meeting glorious fate On the firm land. Philips. 6. Obligation; motive. This is the greatest engagement not to forfeit an opportunity. Macrobius. To Engag'd, v. a. [from goal.] To imprison; to confine. Within my mouth you have engag'd my tongue, Deeply penetr'd with'd my teeth and lips. Shakespeare. To Engage in, v. a. [from gardin.] To protect by a garison. Neptune with a guard doth engagement her strongly. Hor. To Engender. v. o. [from engender, French.] 1. To begot between different sexes. This natural love is engendered between left and idleness. 2. To produce; to form. Oh nature thou, who of the self-dame matter, Water'd thy proud child, arrogate man iniquity. Engender'd the black bond and elder blue. Shakespeare. Sidney. Even if fools do other fools begot; 'Tis by themselves, or by the body's part; 'Tis by themselves, what doth their work well, But they might souls engender ev'ry hour? Davie. 3. To excite; to cause; to produce. Say, can you fail? Your lothamcs are too young, And assistance engag'd? Shakespeare. The presence of a king engenders love Amongst his subjects and his loyal friends. Shakespeare.
1. To swallow up. It is now little used in any sense.
2. To turn or twist; to give a figure.
3. To glut; to pamper.
4. To engraft; to transplant.
5. To give; to pay; to spend.
6. To engrave; to etch; to cut; to incise.

England. n. f. [engraver, French; engraving, Italian.]
1. Any mechanical complication, in which various movements and parts concur to one effect.
2. A military machine.
3. A round, shaped, and formed thing; a statue, a picture, etc.
4. A round, shaped, and formed thing; a statue, a picture, etc.
5. Any means used to bring to pass, or to effect. Usually in an ill sense.
6. A round, shaped, and formed thing; a statue, a picture, etc.
7. A round, shaped, and formed thing; a statue, a picture, etc.
8. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
9. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
10. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
11. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
12. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
13. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
14. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
15. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
16. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
17. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
18. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
19. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
20. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
21. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
22. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
23. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
24. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
25. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
26. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
27. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
28. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
29. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
30. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
31. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
32. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
33. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
34. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
35. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
36. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
37. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
38. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
39. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
40. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
41. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
42. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
43. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
44. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
45. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
46. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
47. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
48. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
49. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
50. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
51. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
52. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
53. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
54. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
55. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
56. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
57. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
58. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
59. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
60. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
61. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
62. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
63. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
64. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
65. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
66. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
67. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
68. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
69. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
70. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
71. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
72. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
73. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
74. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
75. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
76. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
77. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
78. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
79. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
80. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
81. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
82. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
83. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
84. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
85. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
86. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
87. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
88. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
89. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
90. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
91. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
92. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
93. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
94. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
95. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
96. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
97. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
98. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
99. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
100. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
101. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
102. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
103. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
104. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
105. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
106. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
107. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
108. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
109. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
110. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
111. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
112. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
113. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
114. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
115. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
116. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
117. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
118. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
119. To engrave; to cut; to incise.
120. To engrave; to cut; to incise.

England.
Both of them high at once their hands embrace, and both at once their huge bows down did fly.

2. To raise; to advance; to heighten in price.

The desire of money is everywhere the same; its want varies very little, but as its greater scarcity enhances its price, and increases the scramble.

3. What is it but the appearance of what that enhances the value of plenty? L'Estrange.

The remembrance of the difficulties we now undergo, will contribute to enhance our pleasure.

4. To aggravate; to increase from bad to worse.

To believe or pretend that whatever our hearts incline to the will of God within us, is the principle of willing that hath led in the children of disobedience, enhanced and improved with circumstances of greater importance than the most assumable horridnesses were guilty of.

Hammond.

The relation which those children bore to the priesthood, contributed to enhance their guilt, and increase their punishment by liberal expatriation.

Enlargement. n.f. [from enlargement.]

1. Encrease; augmentation of value.

Their yearly rents are not improved, the landlords making no less gain by fines than by enhancement of rents.

Lucan.

2. Aggravation; increase of ill.

Jocular flanders have, from the lightness of the temptation, an enhancement of guilt.

ENIGMA. n.f. [enigma, Lat. enigmac.] A riddle; an obscure question; a position expressed in remote and ambiguous terms.

The dark enigma will allow a meaning; which, if well understood, from surmise will free the god's command. Dryd.

A custom amongst the ancients of proposing an enigma at festivals, and adjudging a reward to him that solved it.

Pope.

ENIGMATICAL. adj. [from enigma.]

1. Obsolete; ambiguously or darkly expressed.

Your answer, sir, is enigmatical. Shaksp.

Enigmatical deliveries comprehend useful vestiges, but being most of them intellectually obtuse, they have been misunderstood by most fools.

Brown's Vulgar Errors.

Whilst they affect enigmatical obscurity, they abuse the mysteries of their divulged proceedings. Repl.

Anathema gives infallible of the enigmatical propositions in use at Athens, and of the forgeries and rewards upon the contrary or confession. Brown's Notes on the Odyssey.

2. Cloudy; obscurely conceived or apprehended.

Faith here is the attoll to these things which come to us by hearing, and are so believed by adherence, or dark enigmatical knowledge, but hereafter are free or known demonstratively. Hammond.

ENIGMATICALLY. adv. [from enigma.] In a sense different from that which the words in their familiar acceptation imply. Homer speaks enigmatically, and intended that these mothers are merely the erection of poetry.

Bronte.

ENIGMATICIST. n.f. [from enigma.] One who deals in obfuscate andambiguous matters; maker of riddles.

I may deal more intelligently with my reader than the above mentioned enigmatic has done, I shall prefix him with a key to my riddle. Addison.

To ENJOIN. v. a. [enjoindre, French.] To direct; to order; to prescribe. It is more authoritative than direct, and less imperative than commend.

To fall the aged old man,
I would bend under any heavy weight
That he'll enjoy me to. Shaksp. Much Ads.

Enoch and philosophers, and such as do continually enjoin themselves. Bacon's Natural History.

It endeavours to secure every man's interest, by enjoining that truth and fidelity be inviolably preserved.

Tillotson.

ENJOINER. n.f. [from enjoin.] One who gives injunctions.

Diict.

ENJOYNENT. n.f. [from enjoin.] Direction; command.

Critical truths or acts made by publick enjoinment, whereby determination might be fettled bey day debate. Brown's Vulgar Errors.

To ENJOY, v. a. [jouir, French.]

1. To feel or perceive with pleasure; to have a pleasing fene of; to be delighted with.

I could enjoy the pans of death, and fame in agony. Addis: Catso.

2. To obtain possession or fruition of.

Edward the last, in whom it pleased God, righteous and just, to let England see what a blesing fes and iniuity would not fuffer it to enjoy. Hooker.

He, who, enjoy
Plate's elyfium, leap'd into the sea,
Crombousit.

En:joyer. n.f. [from enjoy.]

1. One that has fruition or possession.

Milton's Paradise Lost.

3. To police; to gladden; to exhilarate; to glad; to delight. This fene is usual with the reciprocal pronoun, and is derived from enjoin.

Creatures are made to enjoy themselves, as well as to serve us.

When a man shall, with a sober, sedate, diabolical rancour, look upon and enjoy himself in the light of his neighbours' far and trade, can he please the imagination of any appetite in nature? South.

To ENJOY, v. a. To live in happiness.

Then I shall be no more! And Adam, wedded to another Eve, Shall live with her enjoining, I extinct.

Milton.

ENJOYER. n.f. [from enjoy.] One that has fruition or possession.

Dio.

ENJOYNMENT. n.f. [from enjoy.] Pleasure; happiness; fruition.

His hopes and expectations are bigger than his enjoyments. Tillotson.

To ENDURE. v. a. [from endure.]

1. To set on fire; to inflame; to put in a flame.

Edmund, endure all the sparks of nature To quit the world to King Lear.

2. To enrobe passions; to set the soul into a flame.

Your hand
Give sign for me to leave you: so I did,
Fearing to excite, of whose ardor
Which seem'd too much endur'd. Shakespeare.

3. To incite to any act or hope.

Do you not hope your children shall be kings,
When those who gave the reign of Cawder to me,
Promis'd no less to them?

That, trusted home,
Might yet endur'd you unto the crown. Shaksp.

To ENLARGE. v. a. [enlargir, French.]

1. To make greater in quantity or appearance.

The wall, in height and effect like glasses,
Which o'er each object calling various dyes,
Sent them forth, and others multiplies.

Pope.

2. To encrease any thing in magnitude; to extend.

Where there is something both lafing and scarce, and so valuable to be hoarded up, there men will not be apt to enlarge their posessions of land.

Lucy.

3. To encrease by representation; to magnify to exaggeration.

4. To dilate; to expand.

O ye Corinthians, our mouth is open unto you, our heart is enlarged. 2 Cor. vi. 11.

5. To set free from limitation.

Though the appear honest to me, yet at other places

ENLARGE. v. a. [from enlarge.]

1. To illuminate; to supply with light; to enlighten.

We sit from the full with those on age pari,
Enlight the other, and shall warm the pale. Pipp.

To ENLIGHTEN. v. a. [from light.]

1. To illuminate; to supply with light. God will enlighten my darkness. Psalms.

As the sun shineth to the whole world, so there is no faith but this one published, the brightness, whose...
He who performs his duty in a station of great power, must needs incur the utter enmity of many, and the almighty disfavour of more. Attorney.

To ENMABLE, v. a. [from marbe]. To turn to marble; to harden. Obsolete.

Their dying to delay,

They do not enbrace the proud heart of her,

That shall embrace them all,

To ENPRISE, v. a. [from fierce]. To transfix,

I am for mine employer, with his heart,

To ENRICH, v. a. [from rich].

A figure of nine angles.

ENNATICAL, adj. [from]. Ennatical days, are every ninth day of a sickness; and ennatical years, every ninth year of one's life.

To ENNOBLE, v. a. [from nobility].

To raise from commonalty to nobility.

Many fair promotions,

Are given daily to emble the

That scarce some two days since were worth a noble.

To dignify; to adorn;

To exalt; to raise.

God raised up the spirit of this great person, and ennobled his courage and conduct with the entire overthrow of this mighty host.

What can ennable, or, dotes, or ennable about all the blood of the illustrious Pope.

To elevate; to magnify;

None so lovely, sweet and fair,

Or do emblazon.

To make famous or illustrious.

The Spaniards could not as invaders land in Ireland, but only enbled some of the coasts thereof with filipwrecks.

ENRAGEMENT, n. f. [from enraged].

The act of raising to the rank of nobility.

He added, during parliament, to his former creation, the enenagement or advancement in nobility of a few others.

Exaltation; elevation; dignity.

The eternal wisdom enriched us with all enenagement, fitable to the measures of an untrained goodness.

ENRATATION, n. f. [from enrate].

The act of enrage.

Solution of a difficulty.

ENRITY, n. f. [from enrate].

Deviation from rule; irregularity.

Deviation from right; depravity; corruption.

We shall speak of the particular abuses and enratations of the government. Spenser's First of Ireland.

That this law will be always sufficient to bridge or restrain enratity, no man can warrant.

Here are many little enratities in the world, which our preachers would be very glad to see removed; but at the same time dare not meddle with them, for fear of betraying the dignity of the pulpit.

Atrocious crime; flagitious villany; crimes exceeding the common measure.

In this sense it has a plural.

It is not a bare speculation that kings may run into enratities; the practice may be proved by example.

Swift.

ENOIGNOUS, adj. [from enrate, Latin].

1. Irregular; out of rule; not regulated by any flaten measure.

Wallowing, unwieldy, ennoigne in their gait.

Milton.

ENO

Heaven.

Wanted's, as her prime; and paid at Wills both fancies, pouring forth more sweets.

Wild above rule, or arts, enignous blifs.

Milton.

2. Execrative; beyond the limits of a regular figure.

The enigmatic part of the light in the circumference were held points, ought to be considered in shorter telescopes than longer, because the shorter transmits light to the eye.

3. Disorder; confused.

I shall find time

From this enigmatic point, seek to give

Ladies their remedies.

Shakespeare's King Lear.

4. Wicked beyond the common measure.

Who in the sphere he flung mantis,

Far from the red, and solitary reigns,

A form enigmatic! Far unlike the race

Of human birth, in nature, or in face.

Pope's Ody.

ENOGRAGUALLY, adv. [from enrate]. Beyond measure.

One who could ever expound a notion so enigmatic and wondrous, as that at which the world was framed by chance.

Woodward.

ENMAGNITY, n. f. [from enrate]. Immeasurable excess.

Then those who have no opportunity to examine our faith, see the enigmatic and unknown, but what who were to be mistaken and deceived by the disciples?

Devy of Pity.

ENOUG, adj. [xenon, Saxon; gannob, Gothic; gomney, Dux.]

It is not easy to determine whether this word be an adjectival or adverb; perhaps, when it is joined with a substantive, it is an adjective, of which sense is the plural. In other situations, it stands as an adverb except that, after the verb To know, or To be, either expressed or understood, it may be accounted a substantive. It is pronounced as if it were written emagyn.

In a sufficient measure; so as may satisfy; so as may fassice.

Why would it go with, one content they cry. When thou hast good enough, and Emily? Dyes.

When there was not room enough for their bodies, they by consent separated, and enlarged their palaces.

Lukes.

ENOUG, n. s.

1. Something sufficient in greatness or excellence.

'Tis enough for me to have endeavored the union of my country, whilst I continued in public employment.

The indulgence and enjoyment we have, sufficient for our present happiness, we desire not to venture the change, being content, and that is enough. Lukes.

Enough for me that to the inflining train.

Find in these fields I fong the silent trains. Pope.

I will not quarrel with the present age: it has done enough for me, in making and keeping you two my stage.

2. Something equal to a man's powers or faculties.

Some great defects and main errors in his nature, customs, and proceedings, he had enough to do to lose himself, with a thousand little industries and useless.

Baco.
ERS

The physician is to enquire where the party hath taken cold or overcame.

To ERNEST. v. a. [enrich, French,]

1. To make wealthy, or to make opulent.

The king will enricb him with great riches and will give him his daughter. 1 Sam. xvi. 25.

Henry is able to enrich his queen.

And not so to enrich the earth. Shakespeare.

Great and glorious Roman queen of the earth, So far removed, and with the spoils enriched Of nations. Milton, Paradise Regained.

Those are so unhappy as to rob others, without enriching themselves.

Descant.

2. To make; to make fruitfully.

See the sweet breaks in silver maize every Enricb'd meadows, and thop their deep Blackmore.

3. To rare; to supply with augmentation of any thing defirable.

There is not any one among them that could ever enrich his own understanding with any certain truth, or ever quickly therin.

ERNESTMENT. n. s. [from enrich,]

1. Augmentation of wealth.

2. Amplification; improvement by addition.

I have procured a translation of that book into the general language, not without great and ample additions, and explanatory notes. Shakespeare

It is a salt hindrance to the enter of our understandings, if we spend too much of our time and pains among infinities and intractable. Watt.

To ERNEST. v. a. [from riche.]

To form or to enrich their studies or ridges.

He had a thousand notes, Horn walk'd and walk'd like the enriched sea.

It was some bend. Shakespeare's King Lear.

To ERNEST. v. a. [from ring.]

To bind round, or to encircle.

Enricb'd the barly huggers of the elm. Shakespeare.

To ERNEST. v. a. [from riche.]

To ripen; to mature; to bring to perfection.

The Summer, how it enrich'd the year.

And Autumn, what our golden harvest were. Dante.

To ERNEST. v. a. [from riche.]

To dree; to clothe; to habit; to invest.

Her mother hath intended,

That quail in green, the shaft be looke enrich'd,

With ribbons pendant, flaring 'bout her head. Shak.

To ERNEST. v. a. [enrich, French.]

1. To insert in a roll, lit, or register.

There be enrol'd amongst the king's forces about thirty thousand men of the Jews. 1 Sam. x. 38.

We are fairly enrich'd in this heavenly family as servants, and as foals. Spratt.

The champains, all of high degree,

Who knowledge have, and desire to know,

Throng'd to enrich the holy.

The names of others, not their own enrich'd. Dry.

Men's, an ever-honour'd name of old,

High in Ultra's faithfull enrich'd. Pope's Odyss.

Heroes and braves of old.

By honour only were enrich'd.

Among their brethren of the skies.

To which, the queen, enrich'd all things, finds.

Swift.

2. To record; to leave in writing.

He favour conic to your subscription.

His oath enrich'd in the parliament, Law.

Laws, which none the less shall enrich.

Left them enrich'd as the soul of the spirit within Shall on the heart engrave. Milton's Paradise Lost.

To ERNEST. v. a. [from enrich.]

To form; to enrich their studies or ridges.

From his infernal furnace both be throw.

Huge flames, which almost all the heaven's light,

Enrich'd in dulcimer strings and brimstone light. Fair Queen.

ERNEST. v. a. [enrich, French.]

He that makes the greatest registers.

Enrolment. n. s. [from enrich.]

Register; in which anything is recorded; record.

The king himself caufed to be enrolled, and testified by a necessary publick; and delivered the enolments, with his own hands, to the Bishop of Salf.

To ERNEST. v. a. [from rest.]

To fix by the root; to implant deep.

He cannot so precisely weard this land,

As his milidssor present occasion:

His locks are so to enrich his friends.

That, shuffling to unfix an enemy,

He both unfasten and shake a friend. Shakespeare.

To ERNEST. v. a. [from round.]

To environ; to surround; to encircle; to inclose.

Upon his royal face, there is no note

How dread an army hath enrosted him. Shakespeare.

ERNEST. n. f. [Latin.]

1. Any being or existence.

2. [In chemistry.]

Some things that are pretended to contain all the qualities or virtues of the ingredients they are drawn from in a little room.

ENSEMBL. n. s. [encom, Italian.]

Example; pattern; subject of imitation.

This orthography is now justly disused.

Such life should be the honour of your light;

Such death, the last example of your night. Spener.

You and me for me with the Pope's light. Phil. ii. 17.

Such as would be willing to make use of our ensemple to do the same thing, where there is not the same necessity, may not be able to touch our practice and judgement.

To ENSEMBL. v. a. [from the noun.]

To exemplify; to shew by example; to give us a copy.

I have followed all the ancient poets historical:

first, Homer, who, in the performance of Agamemnon, exemplified a good governor and virtuous man.

Spener.

To ENSEMBL. v. a. [sanguin, Latin; ensemblanger, French.]

To linear with gene; to suffice with blood.

With cruel torture you do not unjoin, With carcase and arms, the ensemblave'd field Defeted.

ENSEMBL. n. s. [from schedule.]

To infer in a schedule or writing.

You must buy that peace

With full accord to all our just demands.

Enr'd, Enr'd, Enr'd, Enr'd, Enr'd, Enr'd, Enr'd, Enr'd,

Henry V.

To ENSEMBL. v. a. [from scarce.]

To cover as with a fort; to encase. Hamner.

I myself sometimes, hiding mine honour in my necessity, and faint to flirne, to hedge, and to lurch;

And yet your rage will encourage your rage, your cat-mountain looks under the fiercer of your ho-bour. Shakespeare.

She shall not fee me, I will en force me behind the arms. Shakespeare, 's Henry V.

We make stiles of terrors, encolouring ourselves in seeming knowledge.

A fort of en cold to enforce.

Abiity and ignorance.

This he courageously invend,

And having enter'd, barricado'd,

Enc'd himself into his house.

As could be, underneath a table.

To ENSEMBL. v. a. [from scarce.

To cover up; to ena'ope by a seam or juncture.

A name engraved in the revetted of the temple, one day, and views, and with his hand on his thigh, Camper.

To ENSEMBL. v. a. [from fear.]

To caute-

rife; to flanch or top with fire.

Engra thy fertile and conceivings womb.

Let it no more bringe out ungrateful man. Shakespeare.

To ENSEMBL. v. a. [from field.]

To shield; to cover, to proteff.

The black marks.

Pradus an enfielded beauty, ten times louder

Than beauty could display. Shakespeare.

To ENSEMBL. v. a. [from frother.]

To en-
ens

enclave in a chest or cabinet; to preserve and secure as a thing sacred.

A phrenis, gag'd by a fad, a that fole bird, When to enquire his reliev in the fun's Bright temple, to Egyptian Thesus, bid, Milton, he for's com. With pious care a monkey to enquire. Tat's war. Pair fortune next, with looks fretten and kind, Radea twine ten enquire, a admir. Addit. Enforms adj. [enfornis, Latin.] Having the shape of a fowrd, as the xiphid-pides en or end cartilage.

Ensign. n. f. [enfign, French.]
1. The flag or standard of a regiment. Hang up your ensign, let your drums be still.
2. Any signal to assemble. He will lift up an ensign to the nations from far.
3. Badge; or mark of distinction, rank, or office. Princes that fly, their freeps left behind, Contempt or pity, where they travel, find; The ensign of our powr's about us bear, And ev'ry land pays tribute to the fair. Wrier. The marks or ensigns of virtues contribute, by their sobbless, to the ornament of the figures, as the decorous belonging to the liberal arts, to war, or sacrifice.
4. The officer of foot who carries the flag. [Formerly written ancient.]

Ensignbearer. n. f. [enfign and bear.] He that carries the flag; the ensign.

If it be true that the giant ever made war against heaven, he had been a fine ensignbearer for any common pavy. Sidney.

To Enslave. v. a. [from slave.]
1. To reduce to servitude; to deprive of liberty. He is conquer'd also, and enslav'd by war, Shall, with their freedom lost, their virtue lose. Milton.

To do this! I, whom you once thought brave, To fill my country, and my king enslav'd! Dryden. Long draughts of pest from monstrous limbs enslav'd He reeks, and falling fills the spurious cave. Dryden. And, when they were best, the most enslav'd, Those who in their understanding. Locke. While the balance of power is equally held, the ambition of private men gives neither danger nor fear, nor can possibly enslave their countrymen. Locke.

2. To make over to another as his slave or bondman. No man can make another man his slave, unless he hath first enslav'd himself to life and death, the lowest part of life, that he may command their passions, and you are freer than the Parthian king. Taylor's Rule of living billy. The more virtuously any man lives, and the less he is envious, the more ready he is to entertain the principles of religion. Tillotson.

A man, not having the power of his own life, cannot be oppressed, or his own enslave himself to any war, nor put himself under the absolute arbitrary power of another, to take away life when he pleases. Locke.

Enslavement. n. f. [from enslave.] The state of servitude; slavery; absolute subjection.

The children of Israel, according to their method of fining, after mercedes, and thereupon returning two forth enslavement to their enemies, had now palled seven years in cruel faylony. Shall.

ens

Enslaver. n. f. [from enslave.] He that reduces others to a state of servitude.

What indignation in her mind, Against enslavers of mankind! Swift.

To Ensure, v. a. [enfuir, French.] To follow; to pursue.

Flee evil, and do good; seek peace, and enslave it. 1 Cor. Prayer.

But now these Epicures begin to smile, And say, my definition is more false than true; And that I fondly do myself beguile, While those who contend I enslave. Dryden.

To ensure, v. a. 1. To follow as a consequence to premisses. Let this be granted, and it shall hereupon plainly ensue, that the light of true philosophy shining in the world, all other light of nature is as the sun in each fort drowned, that now we need it not. Hooker.
2. To succeed in a train of events, or course of time. The man was noble, But with his half attempt he wiped it out. Defray'd he his country, and his name remains To the ensuing age abhor'd. Shakespeare.

Bishops are placed by collision of the king, without any precedent election or confirmation ensufng. Haywod.

Of worse deeds worse sufferings must ensue. Milt. With moral heat and other final passion; What wars, what wounds, what slaughter shall ensue! Dryden.

Impute not then thoseills which may ensue To me, but those who with incontinent minds Pursue my life. Rowe's Ambitious Stepmother. Then grave Clarissa gracefully ware her fan; Since ensa'd, and thus the nymph began. Pope.

Ensurance. n. f. [from ensure.] 1. Exemption, protection, or security, obtained by the payment of a certain sum. The sum paid for security.

Ensurer. n. f. [from ensurance.] He who undertakes to exempt from hazard. The vain enouchers of life, And who can most perform, and promise least: E'en Short and Hobert, for lack of unequall title. Dryden.

To Ensure. v. a. [from sure, assure, French.]
1. To ascertain; to make certain; to secure. It is easy to ensure, by succeeding ages, but how to ensure peace for any term of years is difficult enough. Swift.

2. To exempt anything from hazard by paying a certain sum, on condition of being reimbursed for miscarriage. To promise or reimburse the chance of any miscarriage for a certain reward stipulated. A mendicant contracted with a country fellow for a quantity of corn, to ensure his sheep for that year. L'Estrange.

Ensurer. n. f. [from ensure.] One who makes contracts of ensurance; one who for a certain sum exempts any thing from hazard.

Entablature. n. f. [from table.] The Entablature. architrave, frieze, and cornice of a pillar, being in effect the extremity of the flooring, which is either supported by pillars, or by a wall, if there be no columns. Harris.

Entail. n. f. [stadium, talius. from the French. entail, cut, fromuder, to cut.]
1. The estate entailed or settled, with regard to the rule of its descent.

2. The rule of descend settled for any estate.

Engravers work; inlay. Obsolete. Well it appeared to have been of old work or rich en influence, and curious mold. Woven with tassels and wild imagery. Fairy Queen.

To Entrall. v. a. [taller, to cut; entailleur, French.]
1. To settle the descent of any estate, so that it cannot be by any subsequent possessor bequeathed at pleasure.

The crown to thee and to thy heirs for ever. Shak.

Bad Richard unconsciously refeng't the throne, A present how much more than his own! The title fadd entall'd, had Richard had a son. Dryden.

2. To fix unalterably upon any person or thing.
None ever had a privilege of infallibility entailed to all he said. Digby on Bedivere.

The interminable and unjust transmists their bodies infinite times, and destines their children, and enails a secret curse upon their elates. Tilson.

To cut. Obsolete. In the following passage it is neuter.

The mortal steel, delightedly entall'd, Deep in their shells, quite through the iron walls, That a large purple stream adown their glaume falls. Fairy Queen.

To Entangle. v. a. [from tangle.] To tangle; to subjugate; to subdue.

It's not your inky black, or your black silk hair, Your buple eyebrows, and your cheek of cream, That enans my spirits to your worship. Shaksp.

To Entangle. n. a. [A word of uncertain etymology.]
1. To wrap or inflame with something not easily extensible, as a net; or something adhesive, as bitres.

2. To lose in multiplied involutions; as in a labyrinth.

3. To twirl, or confuse in such a manner as that a separation cannot easily be made; to make an entangled knot.

4. To involve in difficulties; to embarrass; to perplex.

Now all abours, Mars what it does, yea very force entangles itself with strength. Shakespeare's Ant. and Cleop. He knew not how to wrestle with desperate contingencies, so as to be entangled in such. Cnr. adon.

5. To puzzle; to bewilderv.

The duke, being questioned, neither held silence as might, nor wholly denied it, but entangling himself in his doubtful tale. Haywod.

I suppose a great part of the difficulties that perplex men's thoughts, and entangle their understandings, would be easily resolved. Locke.

6. To ensnare by captious questions or artful talk.

The Pharisees took counsel how they might entangle him in his talk. Matt. xxi. 15. 7. To entangle with a variety of cares.

No man that warreth entangleth himself with the affairs of this life. 2 Tim. iv. 4. 2. To multiply the intricacies or difficulties of a work.

Entranglement. n. f. [from entangle.] The situation of any thing intricate or adhesive.

2. Perplexity; puzzle.

The most improved spirits are frequently caught in the entanglements of a tenacious involution. Glanville's Synops.

There will be no greater entanglements, touching the notion of God and his providence. Mait.

It is in fence against the entanglements of equivocal words, and the arts now of sophistry, that this doctrine have been multiplied. Le br.

Entangler. n. f. [from entangle.] One that entangles.

To Enter. v. a. [enter, French.]
1. To go or come into any place.
2. With the multitude of my redem'd, Shall.
To "Enter". v. n. [from enter.]-

to come in; to go in.

1. To come in; to go in;

2. To be fleshly to go and to enter to poffefs the land.

3. Other creature here,

Bash, bird, infect, or worm; duft enter once.

4. To penetrate mentally; to make intellectual entrance.

5. He is particularly pleased with Livy for his manner of describing events and with Sallust for his entering into eternal principles of action. Addiian.

6. They were not capable of entering into the numerous conceruing springs of action.

7. To engage in.

8. The French king hath often entered on several expensive projects, on purpose to dissipate wealth.

9. Gentlemen did not care to enter intoibus till after their morning draught.

10. To be initiated in.

O play and dance, that those who live well

Enter'd to fair, should turn aside!

As soon as they once entered into a taste of pleasure, politeness, and magnificence, they fell into a thousand violences, confusions, and uproarious divisions. Addiian.

11. Enter'nce. n. s. [enter and deal.] -

Reciprocal transations. Obfolute.

For he is pratt'ld well in policy, and theft doth his courting most apply: To learn the entemce or princes strange, To mark th' intent of countens, and the change Of flates. Hubber's Tale.

12. Ente'ring. v. s. [from enter.]

Entrance; passage into a place.

13. It old wait, to that there is no house, no entering in.

Iphib.

14. To Enterance. v. a. [entererfor, French.]

To internax; to interchange.

This lady walked outright, 'till the might see her enter into a fine close barber: it was of trees, with danger branches till they have been distinguished. Grant.

15. To Ente'race. w. a. [enterer, Latin.]

A rupture from the bowels preffing through or dilating the peritoneum, so as to fall down into the groin. The remedy in such cases, is chiefly by trusses and bolters.

16. Quinxy.

If the intestine only is fallen, it becomes an entrectes if the omentum or epiploon, epiplocele; and if both, enteroplocele.

17. Ente'roneal. n. s. [grave and opus.]

The anatomical account of the bowels and internal parts.

18. Ente'rphalos. n. s. [liverg and ego-]

An unbilical or navel rupture.

19. Ente'rpalace. n. s. [entr and palis, French.]

Parley; mutual talk; conference.

Before the ente'rpalace the Scots discharged against the English, not without breach of the laws of the field.

20. Ente'rade. n. s. [entre and pled.]

The defcufion of a point incidentally falling out, before the principal caufe can take end.

For example: two several persons, being found heirs to land by two several officers in one county, the king is brought in doubt whether livery ought to be made before livery be made to either, they must enterplead; that is, try themselves between who is the right heir.

21. Enterprife. v. s. [entreprise, French.]

An undertaking of hazard; an arduous attempt.

Now is the time to execute mine enterprife to the definition of the common.

Jude, ii. 5.

What on Warwick to this enterprife. Shakes.

The day approach'd, when fortune should decide

This important enterprife, and give the bride.

Dyd.

22. To Enterpriser. v. n. [from the noun.]

1. To undertake; to attempt; to effay.

Nor shall I to the work this enterpricer.

2. To be willing, but afford thee equal aid. Milton.

Princes were only chiefs of these assemblies, by whose conduits and authority the great armes were resolved and enterprised.

Tempe.

An epic poem, or the heroic action of some great commander, enterprised for the common good and honour of their country, and executed happily, may be as well written now, as it was of old by the heathens.

Dyd.

3. To enterpriser. v. n. [entreprise, French.]

A man of enterprize; one who undertakes great things; one who engages himfelf in important and dangerous designs.

They commonly prove great enterprizers with happy success.

Hayward on Edward VI.

23. To ENTERTAIN. v. a. [entertain, Fren.]

1. To converse with; to talk with.

His head was so well flored a magazine, that nothing could persuade him to undertake any in one.

Laskc.

2. To treat at the table.

You shall find an apartment fitted up for you; and shall be every day entertained with beef or mutton of my own feeding. Addiian.

3. To receive hospitably.

Be not forgetful to entertain strangers; for thereby some have entertained angels unawares. Hez. viii. 2.

Heavenly geny everlasting genies, To entertain my vows of thanks and praise. Shakes.

4. To keep in one's favours.

How many men would you require to the furnishing of which this you take in hand? And how long space would you have them entertained.

Spencers. Ireland.

You, Sir, I entertain one for my hundred; only I do not like the fummons of your face.

Shak. King Lear.

5. I weep and sigh, and, leaving to his service, follow you.

So pleased am I enterpriser in this S.

Shakes. Cymbeline.

5. To refer in the mind.

This pafspo God can entertain us towards us.

Decay of Piety.

6. To please; to amuse; to divert.

David entertain'd him with the meditations of God's law, not his hidden decrees or counsels.

Decay of Piety.

They were capable of entertaining themselves on a thousand subjects, without running into the common topics.

Addiian.

The history of the Royal Society shews how well philosophy becomes the progrefs of knowledge is as entertaining as that of arms.

Foner on the Clifftick.

In gardens, art can only reduce the beauties of nature to a figure which the common eye may better take in, and is therefore more entertain'd.

Pope's Pufa. i.

7. To admit with satisfaction.

Reason can never permit the mind to entertain probability in opposition to knowledge and certainty.

Locke.

ENTHUSIASM, n. f. [Greek θυσίασμα].
1. A vain belief of private revelation; a vain confidence of divine favour or communication.

Enthusiasm is founded neither on reason nor divine revelation, but rises from the consists of a warmed or overheating brain.

2. Heat of imagination; violence of passion; confidence of opinion.

3. Elevation of fancy; exaltation of ideas.
   In imagination, every height and life of poetry, which, by a kind of enthusiasm, or extraordinary emotion of soul, makes it seem to us that we behold things which the poet paints.
   Dryden.

ENTHUSIAST, n. [from entusiasme].
1. One who in vain imagines a private revelation; one who has a vain confidence of his intercourse with God.

Let an enthusiat be principiated that he or his teacher is inspired, and aided by an immediate communication of the prophetic Spirit, and you in vain bring the evidence of clear reasons against his doctrine.

2. One of a hot imagination, or violent passions.

Chaucer seems to have been of an arrogant turn, and an entusiast in poetry. Pope's Pref. to the II.

3. One of elevated fancy, or exalted ideas.
   At last divine Cecilia came, into the view of his imagination, the finest enthuasme from her sacred face, Enlarg'd the former narrow bounds, and added length to felonious souls,
   With nature's mother-wit, and art unknown before.
   Dryden.

ENTHUSIASTICAL. adj. [from enthusiastic].
1. Perfused of some communication with the deities.

He presented not to any graphic enthusiastic repute, or imitable unaccountable transports of devotion.

2. Vehemently hot in any cause.

3. Elevated in fancy; exalted in ideas.

An enthuasitick or propheticke byle, by reason of the eagerness of the fancie, does not allow itself the even thread of discourse.

At last fulfilled,

To raptures and enthuasme heat,
We feel the present Duty.

Thomson.

ENTHUSIMEMNE. n. f. [from entusiasme].
An argument containing only an antecedent and consequent proposition; a syllogism which the major proposition is suppressed, and only the minor and confequence produced in words.

Playing much upon the simple or inductive argumentation, to induce their entusiastis unto the people, they take up popular conceits.

Brown.

What is an entusiast, guite Comhar? Why an entusiastick orraig Crambe, is the major which is indeed married to the minor, but the marriage is kept secret.

 Arbuthnot and Pope.

ENTICE. v. a. [from entice].
1. To allure; to attract; to draw by blandishments or hopes of something sinful or destructive.

The readiest way to entangle the mind with false doctrine, is First to enter the will to wanton living.

Albion's Schoolmaste.

If a man entice a maid that is betrothed, he shall for ever have her to his wife.

Ex. xxi. 26.

So let the young man, with enchanting sound,
   Enticing all to listen, and be drawn in.

Graville.

ENTICEMENT, n. f. [from entice].
1. The allure or tempting to ill.
   Suggests that he who is not willing to God, or that which he finds not of the good of the church endures every where open contempt.

And here to every thirsty wanderer

ENTIRE, adv. [from entire].
1. In the whole; without division.

Euphrytous, running, finketh partly into the lakes of Chaldaea, and falls not entirely into the Persian sea.

Raleigh.

2. Completely; fully.

How shall 't be, and all that he had made
   View'd, and his influences were all entirely good.

Milton.

Chyle may be said to be a vegetable juice in the stomach and intestines; as it passeth into the labe-ral it goes to the animal, and when it has circulated often with the blood, it is entirely so.

Addison.

General content entirely altered the whole frame of their generous and active love.

Swift.

3. With firm adherence; faithfully.

Which when his generall lady saw from far,

Great woe and sorrow did her soul affly,
   As weening at the end of the way:

And 'st to highbly, and entirely pray.

Fairly Queen.

ENTIRENESS, n. f. [from entire].
1. Totality; completeness; fulnes.

In an arch, each sangle stone, which, if severed from the rest, would be perhaps defensible, is sufficiently found by the entier stile of the whole fabric, of which it is a part.

Boyle.

2. Honestly; integrity.

To ENTITLER, v. a. [entitler, French].
1. To grace or dignify with a title or honorable appellation.

To give a title or discriminated appellation.

3. To supererogate, or prefix as a title.

Besides the Scripture, the books which they call ecclesiastical were thought not unworthy to be brought into publick audience, and with that name they entitled the books which we term. Apopackages.

Hooker.

Next favourable thou,

Who highly thus to entitle me vouchsaf'd

Far other name deserving.

Milton's Paradise Lost.

3. How ready zeal for party is to entitle Christianity to their designs, and to charge atheism on those who will not submit.

Locke.

We have been entitiled, and have had our names prefixed at length to whole volumes of mean productions.

Swift.

4. To give a claim to any thing.

But, we defended our own face line
   Entitled to your heart's, and rises divine.

Dryden's Virgil.

God diffus'd the martyr and confessor without the triall saintes and seers, not only to entitle many to the rewards of actius which they had never the opportunity of performing.

Addison.

He entitled himself to the continuance of the divine poision and goodnes, by humiliation and prayer.

Atterbury.

Hardly even is the pious infant fatered; thus difficult is that duty, by which alone he can be reconciled to his Creator, and entitiled to the mercies of the gospel.

Rogers.

5. To grant a thing as claimed by a title.

This is to entitle God's care here and to what we please.

Locke.

ENTITY, n. f. [entitl, low Latin.]
1. Something which really is; a real being.

Dear hope, earth's lowly and heaven's debt;

The entity of things that are not yet;

Subtlest, but foulst being.

Crawfor.

Fortune is no real entity, nor physical existence, but a mere relative figuration.

Bentley.

His entity and opinion.

Hodrucks.

The souls of defunct bodies fly.

2. A particular specifie of being.

All emitters of air, though small and light, give an entity of sound, which we call crackling, puffing; as in a bay felt and bay leaves, call into the fire.

Bacon.

God's decrees of salvation and damnation, both

Romish and Reformed, affix to men's particular entity, absolutely considered, without any respect to demonomous.

Hammond's Fundamentals.

To ENTICE. v. a. [from toil.] To enmarch;
   to entangle; to bring into toils or nets.

He cut off their land-forests from their ships, and enticed both their navy and their camp with a greater power than theirs, both by sea and land.

Bacon.

To ENTOMB, v. a. [from tomb.] To put into a tomb; to bury.

Procussions were first begun for the interring of holy martyrs, and the visiting of those places where they were entombed.

Hooker.

The cry went on for thee, and yet it may again,

If thou wouldst entomb thyself alive.

A cake they reputation in a tent.

Shakespeare.

They within the beast's vault worm,

The choice and flower of all their troops entomb'd.

Donn.

ENTRAIN, n. f. without a singular. [en-trainer, Fr. entrain.]
1. The incontinent; the inward parts; the guts.

What, hath thy fiery heart so parlour'd thine entrails;

That not a tear can fall?

Shakespeare, Henry VI.
E
The bone

it

T

T<I

The internal parts.
A precious ring that lightens all

Sunk down, and

And

Tlie earth hath

To

1

Wounded

Icfs for

no

marble than for io\d. Beit-jfcnfon.
a. [itttrakiare, Italian.]

To

A Made little wicker baiket.

Whence

are you,

is

To

feveral wayi.

And all

The

3.

men and women

tlie

They have their exits

Sbakefpeare.
entrealeJ oi him, and Rebecca his Gen
xxv. 1 1
wi fe conceived
It were a fruitlefs attempt to appeafe a power, whom no prayers could cntteat, no repentance reRogtrs.
concile.

The Lord was

.

paflltge merely by which avenue.

plifyers;

a place

is Hhakefp.

are the entered;

And

all

My

To

5.

them

:

The

6.

aft

of taking poffcffion

of an office

thing.

St. Augulline in the rff/rdwc of one of his fcrmons, aukes

The Hakewellon Providence.

a kind of apology.
earl of Holland we have had occafion to mention before in the tiill entrance upon this difcourfe.

Clarendon.

To Entra'nce. v.

n.

{from tratrcf ; Iranfe,

Latin, to pafs over;
to pafs for a time from one region to
another.]
I. To put into a trance; to withdraw the foul wholly to other regions, while the boily appears to lie in a ilead flecp.
Z. To put into an extafy ; to make infenfib!e of prefent objefts.

French, from

/raw/Iii,

Willi delight I wa> entranced,

mi carried fo far

I

A

Is all this

We
1.

Tatter,
kept in order by the fiiuation.
aft of entrance ; ingrefs.
Bathing and anointing give a relaxation or «mollition ; and the mixture of oil and water is belter than either of them alone, becaufe water entercth better into the pores, and oil after entry foftenetli Bacon's Natural Hijlor^. better.
The lake of Conftance is formed by the enrry of AddifM.
the Uhine.
By the entry of tJie chyle and air into the blood,
by the lafleals, the animal may again revive.
Arhmknut on Alimen:s,

The

The
The

3.

4.

Not

VL

Shakrfp.

To make

Not ufed;

a petition.

To

To iiiwrap;

1.

Entre'atance.

»./. [from «//fM/.] Petition; entreaty; follicitation. Notufed.

Nor was their juft petition long deny'd.

heard,

Fahjax.

ENTRtATV.

Petin. J. [from entreat.'\ tion; prayer; follicitation; fupplication requell.

If niy weak orator

Cm

ficm his mother win the duke of Yori{>
Anon exped him here; but if (he b«

Obdurate ta entrmiies.

Cod

forbid

<v.

a. [errvelofer,

French

]

to cover; to inveft withforac

integument.
To cover; to hide; to furround.
The beft and wholelom'ft fpirits of the night

2.

en.

Sbakefp. Meaf.for Mcaf.
velop you, good provoft.
cloud of fmokc envelops either holt.
And all at once the combatai.ts are loft
Darkling ihcy join adverfe, and fhock unfeen,
Courfers wiih courfere juftiiig, men with men. DryJ.
It is but to approach nearer, and that mift thaC enveloped iliem will remove.
Nod^uraal (hades
Tfiis world envelop, and th' inclement air
Philips.
Pcrfuades men to repel benu.nbing frolls.

A

3.

To

line; to cover on the infide.
His iron coat, all overgrown wiih tuft.
Was underneath enveloped with gold,
Fairy ^ueen,
Daik'ned with filthy duft.

n.f. [French.] A wrapper;
an outward cafe ; an integument; a cover.

ENFELO'PE.
Send

ihcfc to paper-fpating

And, when

No

entreated Sot them, as valiant men.
Knolles,

made ihcy might be any folve; to clear; to difentangle. Diet,

To Enve'lop.

pain of perpetual Jifpleafurr, neither to fpeak of him, entreat for him, or any way Sbakefpeare.
fuftain liim.

Tijcfc twn entreatance

Bacan,

into

The day being come, he made his entry : he wis man of middle Itature and age, and comely. Bacm.
To Enu'bilate. 1'. a. [e and nubile, LaDili.
tin.]
To clear from clouds.
To Enu'cleatb. f. a, \ertiicleo, Latin.]

They charged me, on

'I'hc Janizaries

of taking poffcffion of any cllaie.
of regiftering or fetting down city.

in ufe.

The moft admirable myftery of nature is the turningof iron, touched with the lo;idftonc, toward the North-pole, of which I (lull have farther occafi.in Uakeviill.
to entreat.
3.

aft

A notary made an entry of this aft.
The ac^ of entering puWickly

5.

f. n,

to difcourfe.

aft

in writing.

Mac.
;

Dryd.
curious eyes of thy invited friend ?
proceeded through the enrry, and were ne-

The

muft entrtat the time alone.

entertain; to receive.

treat

hurry made

On this account, becaufe thou art afraid
A dirty hull or entry fhould offend.

a Notufed.

to amufe.

thv-m.

To know

the reforts and falls of main of it; Kke
a houfe that hath convenient llairs and entries, but Bacon.
never a fair room.
ftiait long entry to the temple led.
Blind with high walls, and horror over head. Diyi, are that bufinefs, that cannot fink into the

Not ufcti.
offer a treaty orcorapaft.
Alexander was the firft that entreated peace with 2.

Moriimer.

French.]
paffage by which any one enters a houfe.

fome there

To

1.

entrance of this king to his reign,
never was king either more loving, or better beljved.
Hayw. Ed'M. VI.

The beginning of any 20.

Prior.

fhield 1 ihould diftutb devotion.

ToEntrk'at.

or dignity.
From the tirft

J,

The

I .

Proferuino this hight.
thereof a filver feat.
With a thick arbour goodly overdight.
In which (he often us'd, from open heat, Hcrfcif to (hroud, and plcafures to eiureat. Fairy S>^

Locke.

they wa:il their liberty.

lord,

French.] Small plates

chard ufed in pottages and entremets.
«./. [frovn enttr ; entree,

E'ntry.

The garden of
And in ihomidll

4. Initiation ; commencement.
This is that which, at firft <»/«»« baulks and tools

vii.

cjfcinfenlibly produc'd delight.

— God

!

5. Intelkftual ingrcfs; knowledge.
He that travelleth a country before he hath fome entrance into the language, g'leth to fchool, and not Bacon's EJfays. to travel.

Ecclef. fir

To entertain;

4.

ways that lead

difmal yet to fenfe
More terrible at th' entrance than within. Milton.
Let this, and every other anxious thought.
At th' entrance of my thrclhjld be forgot. Dryjtn.

grim cave,

him

truly, entreaf

John, proteft my lady here ?
Entreat her not the worlc in that 1 pray
Sbakrfpeare'i Henry
You ufe lier well.
Well I. entreated her, who «cll deierv'd callM
her for (he always ferv'd :
I often ;
Ufe made her j-erfon eafy to my fight.

Muft you, r

Chards of beet are plants of white beet tranfplanted, producing great tops, which, in the midlf, hive a large white main Ihoot, which is rile true ill.

worketh

fervant

rot evil.

...»

Many his or ufe well or

Whereas thy

He charged them to keep the paffages of the liiUy country ; for by them there was an entrance into JuMlh.
JuJea.
Palladio did conclude, that the principal entrance was never to be regulated by any certain dimcnfvini, H otton.
but by the dignity of the mailer.

To

To treat

3.

and their entrances.

to folicit ;
Lord for his wife.
Gen. XXXV. 21.
prevail upon by folicitation.
;

I have a wife, whom 1 proteH, I love;
would the were in heaven, lb (he could
Entreat fome pow'r to change this curriih Jew.

Sbak.

All the world's a llage.

n.

1

Sbakefftare.

That we do make our enlraiKe

To

2.

fure to find guefe.

I

viii.

French.]
to importune.

a. \traeter,

Ifaac entreated the

he aft of entering.
The reafon, that I gather, he is mad.
Is a mad tale he toIJ to-day at dinner,
Of his own door being (hut againll his entrance.
Better far,

EcclrJ.

petition

n.f.

between the main difhes.

ce(rarily

injurious perfon lies in wait to entrap thee in

To

the holy privilege
Sbakefpeare' s Richard Ilf.

fsniVuary.

fet

entrap

thy words.

"^1

2.

\o take advantage of.

An

1

South,

[from tmf.'l

to catch in a trap or fnare.
eyes, how ye do ftare

;

To Entre'at. v.

his head, that he gives entrance to fuch companions
Sbakefpeare.
Pmv, get you out.
Where diligence opens the door of the underltand-

Of ENTliBME'TS.

The man mollwary,inhsr whelming lap. Fairy S^u.
He fought to entrap me by iutdligence. Sbakijp.

the porter his eyes in ing, and impartially keeps it, truth botii an entrance and a welcome too.

enfnare

a.

Misfortune waits advantage

3.

Has

fir ?

We (liouU infringe rmramV.

involve unexpcftedly in difEcuIties or diftrefles ; to entangle.

Spenfn's Protba!,

E'ntrance. ft./, [entrattt, French.]
The power of entering into a place.
1 became

To

2.

of fine twigs, enlrailed curioufly,

In which they gather'd flowers.

his fpirits

Henceforth too ralhly on that guileful net;
In which, if ever eyti entraffed are.
Out of her bands ye by no means (hall get. Spenfer.
Th; fraud of England, not the force of France,
Hath now entraft the noble-minded Talbot. Sbak.

To Entra'il. v.

mingle; to interweave; todivcrfify.
Over him, art ftri»ing to compare
Wi h nature, did an arbor green difpred,
Framed of wanton ivy, Bow'ring fair.
Through which the fragr.int eglantine did fpread,
His pricking arms entrail'ii with rofes red. Fairy Q^.

Spfnfer.
enforc'd to clofe his eyes.

Take heed mine

being now.

j

To

fo ravilh'd

I

To Entra'p. f.

loft

ribs, as entrails

fou ended

ftood cntranc'd,

Locke.

Moft of her

forry that

with her heav'nly note, and had no room for thought
But all o'erpowxr'd with ecftafy of Wifi,
Dryden.
Was in a plcafing dream of paradife.

the hole,

that lay fo long hid in 3ie dark entrails of America.

all

am

I

Milton.
I

And fhews the ragged entrails of this pit. Sbalrfp.
He had brought to light but little ot that Irealure,

that

Adam, iww

Drydtn.

feaft.

m fcoti.

Bacon' t Nat. llifi.
1 tear that harden'd heart from out her brcaft,
Which with her entrails makes my hungry hounds a s.

E N V

E N T
from myfelf,

are all without bones; tkvt that a fometimei found in the heart of a (lag.

nlrnUt

letter

Could

lie fit*

fop e

to write,

with An envelope give him more

To Enve'nom.

Svift.

delight.

I.

[iiom venom.
To tinge with poifon; topoifon; to impregnate with venom. It is never ufed of the perfon to whom poifon is given, but of tue draught, meat, or inftrument
by which it is conveyed.
The treacherous iiiftrument is in thy hand,
-v.

a.

'\

Sbtkefpeare,
Uiibalcd and envensm'd.
Alcide?, from Occhalia crown'd
With con*|ueft, feltth' etnfenom'd rohc, and tore,

TUro'

paiii,

up by the tgou Thelfaliaa pines.

Milt.

Not


ENGLISH

1. To make odious. Othello.

2. To make odious. Othello.

3. To make odious. Othello.

4. To make odious. Othello.

5. To make odious. Othello.

6. To make odious. Othello.

7. To make odious. Othello.

8. To make odious. Othello.

10. To make odious. Othello.

11. To make odious. Othello.

12. To make odious. Othello.

15. To make odious. Othello.

17. To make odious. Othello.

18. To make odious. Othello.

20. To make odious. Othello.

22. To make odious. Othello.

23. To make odious. Othello.

24. To make odious. Othello.

25. To make odious. Othello.

27. To make odious. Othello.

29. To make odious. Othello.

30. To make odious. Othello.

31. To make odious. Othello.

32. To make odious. Othello.

33. To make odious. Othello.

34. To make odious. Othello.

35. To make odious. Othello.

36. To make odious. Othello.

37. To make odious. Othello.

38. To make odious. Othello.

39. To make odious. Othello.

40. To make odious. Othello.

41. To make odious. Othello.

42. To make odious. Othello.

43. To make odious. Othello.

44. To make odious. Othello.

45. To make odious. Othello.

46. To make odious. Othello.

47. To make odious. Othello.

48. To make odious. Othello.

49. To make odious. Othello.

50. To make odious. Othello.

51. To make odious. Othello.

52. To make odious. Othello.

53. To make odious. Othello.

54. To make odious. Othello.

55. To make odious. Othello.

56. To make odious. Othello.

57. To make odious. Othello.

58. To make odious. Othello.

59. To make odious. Othello.

60. To make odious. Othello.

61. To make odious. Othello.

62. To make odious. Othello.

63. To make odious. Othello.

64. To make odious. Othello.

65. To make odious. Othello.

66. To make odious. Othello.

67. To make odious. Othello.

68. To make odious. Othello.

69. To make odious. Othello.

70. To make odious. Othello.

71. To make odious. Othello.

72. To make odious. Othello.

73. To make odious. Othello.

74. To make odious. Othello.

75. To make odious. Othello.

76. To make odious. Othello.

77. To make odious. Othello.

78. To make odious. Othello.

79. To make odious. Othello.

80. To make odious. Othello.

81. To make odious. Othello.

82. To make odious. Othello.

83. To make odious. Othello.

84. To make odious. Othello.

85. To make odious. Othello.

86. To make odious. Othello.

87. To make odious. Othello.

88. To make odious. Othello.

89. To make odious. Othello.

90. To make odious. Othello.

91. To make odious. Othello.

92. To make odious. Othello.

93. To make odious. Othello.

94. To make odious. Othello.

95. To make odious. Othello.

96. To make odious. Othello.

97. To make odious. Othello.

98. To make odious. Othello.

99. To make odious. Othello.

100. To make odious. Othello.
EPIHEMOR-DROM-WORM. n. f. [from \( \pi \varepsilon \pi \iota \varepsilon \mu \varepsilon \rho \omicron \mu o\) and \( \tau \omicron \omega \mu \alpha \gamma \omega \).] A sort of worm that lives but a day.

Swammerdam observes of the epihemor-dromus-worms, that their food is clay, and that they make their cells of the same.

EPIHGLY. n. f. (Hebrew) A sort of ornament worn by the Hebrew priests. That worm by the high priest was richly composed of gold, blue, purple, crimson, and twisted cotton; and upon the part which came over his two shoulders were two large precious stones, upon which were engraved the names of the twelve tribes of Israel, upon each stone fix names. Where the ephod crowned the high priest's breast, was a square ornament, called the breast-plate, in which twelve precious stones were set, with the names of the twelve tribes of Israel engraved on them, one on each stone. The ephods worn by the other priests were of plain linen. Calmet.

He made the ephod of gold, blue, and purple, and scarlet, and fine twined linen.

array'd with, not saw.

As are those pearls of morning dew, which hang on herbs and flowers. Sandy.

EPICH. adj. [epichus]. (Latin.) Narrative; comprising narrations, not acted, but rehearsed. It is usually supposing the heroick, or to contain one great action achieved by a hero.

Holmes, whose name shall live in epic song, while music numbers, or while verse has feet. Dryd.

The epic poem is more for the manhood, and the tragedy for the passions. Dryd.

From morality they formed that kind of poem and fable which we call epic. Green.

EPICTH. n. f. [ephod]. An ephod, a robe worn upon a religious, or a public occasion. Porst.

A robe hung with the breast-plate of the ephod; a mantle, or a cincture, containing the names of the twelve tribes of Israel. Gen. xxxix. 2.

EPICTH. n. f. [epichucus]. (Latin.) Narrative; comprising narrations, not acted, but rehearsed. poet-chick. It is usually supposing the heroick, or to contain one great action achieved by a hero.

Holmes, whose name shall live in epic song, while music numbers, or while verse has feet. Dryd.

The epic poem is more for the manhood, and the tragedy for the passions. Dryd.

From morality they formed that kind of poem and fable which we call epic. Green.

EPICOUMEN. n. f. [from \( \varepsilon \pi \iota \kappa o \mu e \omicron \gamma e\) and \( \nu \omicron \).] An ephod, a robe worn upon a religious, or a public occasion. Porst.

A robe hung with the breast-plate of the ephod; a mantle, or a cincture, containing the names of the twelve tribes of Israel. Gen. xxxix. 2.

EPICTH. n. f. [epichucus]. (Latin.) Narrative; comprising narrations, not acted, but rehearsed. poet-chick. It is usually supposing the heroick, or to contain one great action achieved by a hero.

Holmes, whose name shall live in epic song, while music numbers, or while verse has feet. Dryd.

The epic poem is more for the manhood, and the tragedy for the passions. Dryd.

From morality they formed that kind of poem and fable which we call epic. Green.

EPICTH. n. f. [epichucus]. (Latin.) Narrative; comprising narrations, not acted, but rehearsed. poet-chick. It is usually supposing the heroick, or to contain one great action achieved by a hero.

Holmes, whose name shall live in epic song, while music numbers, or while verse has feet. Dryd.

The epic poem is more for the manhood, and the tragedy for the passions. Dryd.

From morality they formed that kind of poem and fable which we call epic. Green.

EPICTH. n. f. [epichucus]. (Latin.) Narrative; comprising narrations, not acted, but rehearsed. poet-chick. It is usually supposing the heroick, or to contain one great action achieved by a hero.

Holmes, whose name shall live in epic song, while music numbers, or while verse has feet. Dryd.

The epic poem is more for the manhood, and the tragedy for the passions. Dryd.

From morality they formed that kind of poem and fable which we call epic. Green.

EPICTH. n. f. [epichucus]. (Latin.) Narrative; comprising narrations, not acted, but rehearsed. poet-chick. It is usually supposing the heroick, or to contain one great action achieved by a hero.

Holmes, whose name shall live in epic song, while music numbers, or while verse has feet. Dryd.

The epic poem is more for the manhood, and the tragedy for the passions. Dryd.

From morality they formed that kind of poem and fable which we call epic. Green.

EPICTH. n. f. [epichucus]. (Latin.) Narrative; comprising narrations, not acted, but rehearsed. poet-chick. It is usually supposing the heroick, or to contain one great action achieved by a hero.

Holmes, whose name shall live in epic song, while music numbers, or while verse has feet. Dryd.
EQU

For the celestial bodies the equality and constancy of their motions argue them ordained by

God.
The equality of the temperature of the air reduced the Atlantick lary. Arcturus on Air.

EQUABLE. adj. [equabiliti, Latin.] Equal to itself; even. uniform in respect to form, motion, or temperature.

We shall have the right body of a planet to be an equal and round, as a globule of glass represents it; to be everywhere smooth and equal; and plain as equatorial fields. Astronomy.

Nothing abates of the equal motion of it, neither too swift nor too slow: for too quick a motion produces an alkaline, and too slow has a mercurial effect. Astronomy.

EQUALLY. adv. [from equal.] Uniformly; in the same tenor; evenly; equally to itself.

If bodies move equally in concentric circles, and the figures of their peripheries times be as the cubes of their distances from the common centre, their centripetal forces will be reciprocally as the squares of the distances. Cleyton.

EQUAL. adj. [equalis, Latin.]

1. Like another in bulk, excellence, or any other quality that admits comparison; neither greater nor less; neither worse nor better.

If thou be among great men, make not thyself equal with them. Eccles.

May join us; equal pair, to equal love. Milton.

Although there were no man to take notice of it, every triangle would contain three angles equal to two right angles. Hall.

2. Adequate to any purpose.
The score trusted not their own numbers as equal to the English. Churston.

Even; universal.

He laughs at vulgar cares and fears;
At their vain triumphs, and their vain tears;
An equal temper in his mind he found,
When fortune flatter'd him, and when the frowns flew. Dryden.

Think not of me, perhaps my equal mind
May learn to bear the fate the gods allot me. Smith.

In full proportion.

It is not permitted me to make my commendation equal to your praise. Dryden's Fad. Dedication.

5. Impartial; neutral.

Each to his proper fortune must fall;
Equal and meekness I look on all; one
Kings, and Stags, and Men, and all,
And both shall draw the lots their fates decreed.
Dryden's Aes.

6. Indifferent.

They who are not disposed to receive them, may let them alone, or reject them; it is equal to me.

Cleyton's Phil. Fins.

7. Equitable; advantageous alike to both parties.

He submitted himself, and swore to all equal conditions. Mac.

8. Being upon the same terms.

They made the married, orphans, widows, yea and the aged also, equal in spoils with themselves.
Mac.

EQUAL. n.f. [from the adjective.]

1. One not inferior or superior to another.

He is enamoured on Hero: I defy you, diffuse him from her; she is no equal for his birth.

He would make them all equal to the citizens of Rome. Mac. x. 13.

Those who were once his equals, envy and defame him; because they now see him their superior; and those who were once his superiors, because they look upon him as their equal.

Toil thou, therefore, to thy native land,
My plighted vow I gave: I have received
Each word with truth, with pleasure each believ'd:
The mutual contract was to bear 'rconnay.' Prior.

2. One of the same age.

EQUANIMOUS. adj. [equanimis, Lat.]
Even; not dejected; not elated.

EQUATION. n.f. [equrare, Lat.]
The investigation of a mean proportion collected from the extremities of excess and defect, to apply it to the whole.

We are to find out the extremities on both sides, and from and between them the middle daily motions of the sun along the ecliptick; and to frame tables of equations of natural days, to be applied to the mean motion by addition or subtraction, as in the case shall require.

Holder on Time.

By an argument taken from the equations of the times of the eclipse of Jupiter's satellites, it follows that light is propagated in time, spending in its passage from the sun to us about seven minutes of time.

Newton's Opticks.

EQUATION. [In algebra.] Is an expression of the same quantity in two dissimilar terms, but of equal value; as 2z = z + f.

Diz.

EQUATION. [In astronomy.] The differbene between the time marked out by the sun's apparent motion, and the time that is measured by its real or middle motion; according to which clocks and watches ought to be adjusted.

Diz.

EQUATOR. n.f. [equator, Lat.]
The equator on the earth, or equinoctial in the heavens, is a great circle, whose poles are the poles of the world. It divides the globe into two equal parts, the northern and southern hemispheres.

It passes through the east and west points of the horizon; and at the meridian is raised as much above the horizon as is the complement of the latitude of the place.

Whenever the sun comes to this circle, it makes equal days and nights all round the globe, because he then rides due east and due west, which he doth at no other time of the year.

Harriss.

By reason of the convexity of the earth, the eye of man, under the equator, cannot discover both the poles: neither would the eye, under the poles, discover the sun in the equator. Brown's Vid. Err.

On the other side, the equator therof is long,
and still remaining undiscover'd. Ray on the Creation.
Rocks rich to gems; and mountains big with mifer,
That on the high equinoctial rise.

Whence many a burning stream antipodes play.

Dibdin.

EQUATORIAL. adj. [from equator.] Peretaining to the equator; taken at the equaator.

The planets have spherical figures, and obli-guities of their equatorial to their eclipsic places.

Cleyton.

EQUESTRIAN. adj. [equestris, Latin.]

1. Being on horseback.

An equesrian lady appeared upon the plain.

Spellator.

2. Skilled in horsemanship.

3. Belonging to the second rank in Rome.

EQUERRY. n.f. [equerri, Dutch.] Master of the horse.

EQUICKERIAL. adj. [equerrius, and erus, Latin.]

1. Having legs of an equal length.

2. Having the legs of an equal length, and longer than the base; isosceles.

An equilateral triangle goes upon a certain proportion of length and breadth, Digby on the triangle.

We successfully draw in from angle to angle an till seven equilateral triangles be described. Digby on

EQUIDISTANT.
EQUIDISTANT. adj. [equal and distant, Latin.] At the same distance.

EQUINOCTIAL. adj. [from equinoctial.]

In the direction of the equinoctial.

EQUINOX. n.f. [equinox and max., Lat.] 1. The times in which the sun enters into the first point of Aries and Libra or, for them, appearing exactly under the equinoctial, he makes our days and nights equal. He doth twice a year, about the 21st of March and 21st of September, which therefore are called the vernal and autumnal equinoxes. Harris. It almost not heliacally about the equatorial equal.

Brown.

EQUINOXIAL. n.f. [equinoctial, and max., Lat.] 1. The times in which the sun enters into the first point of Aries and Libra or, for them, appearing exactly under the equinoctial, he makes our days and nights equal. He doth twice a year, about the 21st of March and 21st of September, which therefore are called the vernal and autumnal equinoxes. Harris. It almost not heliacally about the equatorial equal.

Brown.

To EQUIP. v. a. [from equipage.]

1. To furnish for a horseman or cavalier.
2. To furnish; to accoutre; to dress out.

The country are led alway in the following the town, and equipped in a ridiculous habit, when they fancy themselves in the height of the mode. Addison.

EQUIPAGE. n.f. [equipage, French.]

1. Furniture for a horseman.
2. Carriage of a state; vehicle.

Winged spirits, and chariots wing'd,
From th' armory of God; where fand of old,
Myriads, between two brakes mane-grown to the height to fifty and forty, but that nothing new. No more than usual equipage blew.

Brown.

EQUIPAGE. n.f. [equipage, French.]

1. The act of dressing in equipage; not determined either way.

The will of man, in the state of innocence, had an entire freedom, a perfect equipage and indifference to either part of the contraction, to hand or to part. Stukeley.

EQUIPMENT. n.f. [from equip.] 1. The act of equipping or accounting.
2. Accoutrement; equipage.

EQUIPAGE. n.f. [equipage, French.]

1. Weight; equilibration; equality of force.

In the temperate zone of our life there are few bodies at such an equipage of honours; but that the pre-eminence of some one indiñphs the spirits.

Brown.

EQUIPAGE. n.f. [equipage, Latin.] Equality of force or power.

EQUIPAGE. adj. [equipallate, Lat.]

Having equal power or force; equivalent.

As the design is made of equipages, even in matter of blood.

Brown.

EQUIPAGE. n.f. [equipage and ponderant, Latin.] Being of the same weight.

The beholding man must make their equi-distant to the water.

Ray on the Creation.

A column of air, of any given diameter, is equi-power to a column of quicksilver of between twenty-nine and thirty little height.

Locke.

EQUIPAGE. n.f. [equipage and ponderant, Latin.] To weigh equal to any thing.

The heaviness of any weight doth increase proinportion to the distance of one pound A at D, will equipage unto two pounds at B, if the distance A D is double unto A B.

EQUIPAGE. n.f. [equipage and ponderant, Latin.] Equilibrate; equal on either part.

Not in use.

The Scythians effected an indifferent equipage, or neutrality, as the only means to their averts.

Gay's Stanzas.

EQUIPAGE. n.f. [equitable, French.] 1. Just; due to justice.
2. Loving justice; candid; impartial; as, an equitable judge.

EQUIPAGE. adj. [from equitable.]

Justice; right; honestly.

Foul subordination is predominant.

And equity exalt'd your highness' land.

Shaksp.

Christy found both the private benefit of men and the public peace, enforcing all justice and equity.

Tuffrello.

2. Impartiality.

Liking their own somewhat better than other men, even because they are their own, must in equity allow us to be like unto them in this af-

Hooke.

3. [Law.] The rules of decision observed by the court of Chanery, as different from the literal maxims of law.

EQUIPAGE. n.f. [equus and -valere.]

Must the ferment of God be allowed that which he nightly prays for shall be granted? Yet, either formally by way of equity, or something else.

Hammond.

That there is any equipage or parity of worth between the gods and our war-brothers, and the good we hope for from God, all good Protestant do deny.

Smirke.

Civil causes are equivalent unto criminal causes, but this equivalency only respects the careful and diligent admission of proofs.

Addis's Parergon.

EQUIPAGE. n.f. [from the noun.]

To equipage; to be equal-to.

Whether the translation of five foote did not exceed Adam's fault, or whether the possibility of his reason did not equalise the facility of her induction, we shall refer to schoolmen.

Brown.

EQUIPAGE. adj. [equipate and valere, Latin.]

1. Equal in value.
The winds to breathe, the winter winds to morn, And strain to murmur, ere I cease to love. Pope.

flow'd ere the wounded season. Dryden.

Flow'd ere the wounded season. From [Ere and Long.] Before a long time had elapsed. Nec longam tempe.

The anger already began to paint revenge in many colours, ere he had not only gotten pity but pardon. The wild horse having ensnared with the flags, came to a man to despise aid, who mounted upon his back, and following the flag, ere long flew him.

Nothing is lasting that is feigned: it will have another face than it had ere long. But Janet,

They swum in joy, Ere long to faint at last to sink up, for which The world ere long a world of tears must weep. Milton.

I saw two false doves billing and ere long. Will take the reed. Dryden, Virgil.

It pleases me to think, that I know so small a portion of the works of the Creator, and with them and printed, they creep up and down on the surface of this globe, shall ere long shoot away with the swiftness of imagination, and trace the scenery of nature's operations. Schiller.

Ere rev. adv. [from ere and now.] Before this time. Ah, gentle soldiers, some short time allow. My father has repented him ere long. Dryden,

Had the word eternally been, science had been brought to perfection long ago. For Dry of Phry. To ERECT. W. a. [erecta, Latin.] To erect a straight line; to place perpendicularly to the horizon.

To Erect a Perpendicular. To croft one line by another at right angles.

To raise; to build. Happier walls expect. Which, wand'ring long, at last thou shalt erect. Dryden, Vigil.

There are many monumentalcilli to beneficial to the republic. Additions to Italian.

To establish anew; to settle. Great difference there is between their proceedings, who erect a new commonwealth which is to have neither regiment nor religion the same that was, and theirs who only reform a decayed state. Hester, He fells twenty, two distinct nations to be erected out of the first monarchy under different governments. Raleigh.

To elevate; to exalt. I, who am a party, am not to erect myself into a judge. Dryden, Fables. Perseus.

I am far from pretending infallibility: that would be to erect myself into an apostle. Locke.

All the little framers after some fall upon him, and have recourse to their own invention, rather than suffer him to erect himself into an author with impunity. Additions.

To mime consequences from premises. From fallacious foundations and misapprehended mediums, men erect conclusions no way inferrible from the premises. Brown's Fulger Erratics.

Men being too hasty to erect to themsevles general notions and illgrounded theories, find themselves deceived in their flack of knowledge. Brown.

Malone raise this proposition, of feting all things in God, upon their ruin. Locke.

7. To animate: not to deprive: to encourage. Why ERR

2. Irregular; changeable.

They are incompatible with a slimy matter, cough, thick of breath, and an erratical fever. Harvy.

ERRATICA]LLY, adv. [from erratical or erra-titum] Without rule; without any established method or order.

There is an endless generation erratically, different from each other, but in specific and

ERR. n.f. [spur.] Sniffed up the noose with the frightening. We see fogs or biting breezes, faceing power, and other powders or liquors, which the physicians call erubesc, put into the nose to drive phlegm from the head. Paracelsus.

ERRONEOUS. adj. [from erra, Latin.]

1. Wandering; unsettled.

They roam

Erroneous and disconcert, themselves

Acused, and their chief imprisoned, of military change.

This circle, by being placed here, lumped upon the erroneous light, which otherwise would have disposition Newton.

Unblam'd abundance crown'd the royal board,

What time this done never her prudent lord;

Who now, to be raven's decoy, is down'd to morn,

Pope.

2. Irregular; wandering from the right road.

If the veins, instead of breaking, yield, it subjects the person to all the inconveniences of erroneous circulation; the blood flows into the veins deputed to carry serum or lymph.

Archimedes on Alimens.

3. Mistaken; misled by error.

There art far from deceiving the innocent with the guilty, and the erroneous with the malicious.

King Charles.

There is the erroneous as well as the rightly informed, the South.

4. Mistaken; not conformable to truth;

physically false.

Their whole counsel is condemned, as having either proceeded from the blindness of those times, or from negligence, or from desire of honour and glory.

or from an erroneous opinion that such things might be for a while.

Hooke.

A wonderful erroneous observation that walketh about, is commonly received, contrary to all the true account of time and experience.

Bacon.

The phenomena of light have been hitherto explored without error; and the breakings of the rays, which is an erroneous supposition,

Newton's Optics.

ERRONIOUSLY, adv. [from erroneous.] By mishap; not rightly.

The most of the greatest are considerably persuaded, that it is the will of God to have those things done which they fancy.

Hook.

I could not discover the leality of this sentence;

but conceived, it perhaps erroneous, rather to be rigorous than gentle.

Gilliver.

ERRONEOUSNESS. n.f. [from erroneous.] Physical falsehood; inconformity to truth.

The phenomena may be explained by this theft; the head boweth not; the truth, together with the erroneousness of our.

Boyle.

ERROR. n.f. [error, Latin.]

1. Mistake; involuntary deviation from truth.

Error is a mistake of our judgment givmng ascent to things which is not true.

Locke.

Oh, hateful error, melancholy's child!

Why dost thou then to the apt thoughts of men,

The things that are right.

Shakespeare.

2. A blunder; an act or affiction in which a mistake is committed.

In religion,

What damned error, though some barer brow

Will bide it.

Shakespeare's Merchant of Venice.

He look'd like nature errant, as the mind and body were not of a piece designed.

But made for two, and by mistake in one were joind.'

Dryden.

3. Raving excitation; irregular course.

What brought you living to the Stygian flat?

Drive'n by the winds and errors of the sea,

Or did you fear your lion's drow? Dryden.

4. [In theology.] Sin.

Blood he offered for himself, and for the errors of the people.

Heb. xii. 11.

5. [In law, more especially in our common law.] An error in pleading, or in the process; and the writ, which is brought for remedy of this oversight, is called a writ of error, which lies to redress falle judgment given in any court of record.

Cowell.

Ers, or Bitter Vetb. n.f. [quin-a cola amarara.] A plant.

Ers. adv. [erf, German; erse, Saxon.]

1. First.

Six kings, if knight thou be,

Abandoned this forlorned place at erst.

For fear of further harm, I counsel thee.

Spenzer.

2. At first; in the beginning.

- Fame that is high, forth to the air,

Seem'd erst to lavish and profuse.

We may justly now accuse

Of distraction from her praise.

Military.

3. Once; as a signal now to low deceased,

As erst in higheft, behold him.

Military.

He taught us erst the helere's tail to view.

Gay.

4. Formerly; long ago.

The future, and thus, for ever, they be,

Were defin'd erst, nor can by fate's decree

Be now cut off.

Prior.

5. Before; till then; till now.

Open mine eyes,

Dim erst; dilated spirits, simpler heart.

Military.

The Rhodians, who, he thought themselves at great variety, were now overtaxed, with a fuch milit.

Chief.

ERUBESCENCE. n.f. [rubescence, Latin.]

ERUBESCENCY. n. [tint.] The act of growing red; redness.

ERUBESCENT. adj. [erubesci, Latin.] Reddish; somewhate red; inclining to red-

ness.

To ERUC'T. v. a. [eructo, Latin.] To belch; to break wind from the stomach.

Eru.'er. n.f. [from eructo.]

1. The act of belching.

2. Beleh; the matter veuted from the stomach.

The signs of the functions of the intumesce, being depraved, are erudition, either with the stomach, wind, inordinate, or feald.

Archimedes.

3. Any sudden burst of wind or matter.

Thermis; are hot spites or fiery erudition;

such as burst forth of the earth during earthquakes.

Ironsides.

ERUDITION. n.f. [erudite, Latin.] Learning; knowledge obtained by study and instruction.

Fam'd by thy tutor, and thy parts of nature;

Thrice fam'd beyond all erudition.

Shaks.

The Poet, having a good erudition, having been placed at study in Cambridge very young.

Sutton.

To your experience in late affair, you have also joined no vulgar erudition,

Which all you modesty is not able to conceal; so to understand explicitly the delicates of Horace, is a height to which few of our noblest have arrived.

Dryden.

Some peculiarities in learning in their university erudition, fill their sermones with philosophical terms.

Swift.

ERUGINOUS. adj. [eruginosus, Latin.] Partaking of the subfinence and nature of copper.

Copper is a rough and acrimonious kind of metal drawn out of ferrous and eruginous earths, partaking chiefly of iron and copper; the blue of copper, the green of iron.

Bever.
To endeavour all we can either to elude or divert them.

Had David died sooner, how much trouble had he spared, which by ill temper was endured in the reign of his son,

2. To pass unobserved by one.

Men are blinded with ignorance and error, many things may escape them, in many they may be deceived.

To fill the fame, although their airy change.

All but a quick poetick flight of genius.

Basham.

The reader finds out these beauties of propriety in thought and writing, which eluded him in the tumult and hurry of credulity, and taking up times.

To escape. n. To fly; to get out of danger; to avoid punishment or harm.

Bennadad, the king of Syria, escaped on horseback.

Chronicles.

They eluded all safe to land.

Escape thy life; look not behind thee, neither stay thy foot in all the plain of Bashan, lest thou be consumed.

Gen.

Whose pleasant God shall escape from her, but the same shall be taken by him.

Eccl. viii. 16.

He might put on a hat, a medlar, and a kerchief, and so escape.

Basham.

Most virtuous villains had extraordinary escapes out of such dangers as have encroached them, and which have seemed inevitable.

Addison.

2. Excorium; falsely.

That made an escape, not so much to seek our own, as to be rid of that which afflicted us.

Denham.

He enjoyed neither his escape nor his honour long; for he was hewn in pieces.

Hayward.

Many of these virtues had extraordinary escapes out of such dangers as have encroached them, and which have seemed inevitable.

Addison.

3. In law. Violent or privy evasion out of some lawful restraint. For example, if the sheriff, upon a capias directed unto him, takes a person and endeavours to carry him to goal, and he in the way, either by violence or by flight, breaks from him, this is called an escape.

Cowell.

To elude. v. n. [from esceâte. old French.]

To fly; to avoid; than; to decline. A word almost obblige.

She was like a young lion, who coming in the wind of the hunters, doth not know whether it is a thing to be or to be eschewed.

Sidney.

Solus est, which this change of weather view,

Change the our minds, and former lives amended.

The old year's sins forspat let us eschew.

And by the faults with which we did offend.

Spenz.

He who obliterates destruction shall eschew;

A wife man knows both when and what to do.

S.

Of virtue and vice, men are universally to practhe the one, and eschew the other.

Atty.

Eschew'n, n. f. The skill of the family, the picture of the eschew armorial.

Englishmen are a French word, from the Latin sectare, leather; and hence come to our English word buckler, lepe in the old Saxonenignifying leather, and back or buck a back or flag; of whom Rames, quitted close together with horn or bird wood, the antient Britons made their shields.

There be now, for martial encouragement, some degrees and orders of chivalry and some remembrance perhaps upon the eschewmen.

We will pass over the escheats of the tribes of Israel, as they are usually described in the maps of Carus.

Brown.

Escour. n. f. [escur, French.] Convoy; guard from place to place.
The value of a nature were more unknown to me than it is, that I might believe his existence, without meditating at all with it's effects.

Bacon's Natural Dialogues.

He wrote the nature of things upon their names: he could view effects in themselves, and read forms without the comment of their respective properties.

South.

2. Formal existence: that which makes any thing to be what it is.

The visible church of Jesus is one in outward profession of those who believe in him, and are obedient to his laws.

Harbor.

In such conditions have I found, with such a darkness and heaviness of mind, that I might have been persuaded to have relinquishe my very essence.

Sidney.

As far as gods, and hear in essence, can perish.

Milton's Paradise Lost.

5. Species of existent being.

Here be four of your as differing as the four elements; and yet you are friends; as for Euphues, he is a baser creature, and without patron he may be the leath essence.

Euphues.

6. Con立志 subsistence.

For spirits when they please, Can either exsist alone, or hath a body, and are subject to all events.

Euphues.

7. The cause of existence. This fease is not power.

It is the Genus, and I leave to be, If I be not by her fair influence.

Foster's, Blaun's, cherin's, kept alive.

Shakespeare

8. [in medicine.] The chief properties or virtues of any simple, or composition collected in a narrow compass.

Perfume; odour; scent.

Our humble province is to search the fair; To save the power from too rude a gale, Nor let it imprison it's essence, &c.

Perfume; to perfume; to scent.

The husband rants, from morning to night, at effended sons and tardy courtiers.

Achilles's诗格.

ESSENTIAL. adj. [essential, Latin.]

1. Necessary to the constitution or essence of anything.

The discipline of our church, although it be not an essential part of our religion, should not be rashly altered, as the very substance of our religion will be injured in it.

Bacon.

From that original of doing good, that is essential to the infinite being of our Creator, we have an excellent capacity of transformation.

Euphues.

This power cannot be innate and essential to matters; and if it be not essential, it is consequently most manifestly it could never serve to us, unless it was formed and fitted into it by an imaginary and uinate power.

Ben.
EST

on which the whole weight of the matter turns.

And if each systen in gradation rolls,
Aside effential to th' amazing whole,
The last connexion but one, and that Only, but the whole must fall. Pope.

2. Important in the highest degree; principal.

Judgment's more essential to a general,
Than courage.

3. Pure, highly rectified; subtly elaborated;
Extracted so as to contain all the Virtues of its elemental parts contrived
Into a narrow compass.
The juice of the fruit is an essential oil or balm,
Defiled by nature to preserve the fear from corruption.

Essential, n. f.

1. Existence; being.
His utmost aim to the height engrafted,
Will either confound us, or reduce
To nothing.

2. Nature; first or constituent principles.
The plague of sin has even altered his nature,
And eaten into his vices. South.

3. The chief point; that which is in any Respect of great importance.

Essential idea, [v. laetalt, Latin.]

By the constitution of nature, really;
According to the true state of things.

That he loves himself,
Hath not essentially, but by circumstance.

The name of virtue.

Dryden.

Body and spirit are essentially divided, though not Locality distant.

Glasse.

All fin essentially, and must be mortal.
South.

Knowledge is that which, next to virtue, truly
And essentially raises one man above another.

Addison's Guardian.

Essuing, n. f. [of the French essuir, esseruius.

1. He who has his presence forborn or ex¬
cuted upon any just cause; as sickne.

2. Allegement of an excuse for him that is Summoned, or sought for, to appear and
Answer to a legal action, or to perform
Due to a court-baron, upon just cause of Abatement.

3. Excuse; exception.
From every work he challenged effuir,
Facing cornet face of it; to betrayed.
His life he led in lawless estate.

To Establish, v. a. [etabilir, French.]

1. To make firm; to fix unalterably.
He may establish thee to-day for a people unto King of their kind.

Dean.

I will establish my covenant with him for ever.

Isa. xxxv. 9.

The Normans never obtained this kingdom by Such a right of conquest, as did or might alter the

2. To settle in any privilege or possession;
To confirm.
Soon after the rebellion broke out, the Presbyterian
Faction was established in all its forms by an ordnance
Of the lords and commons.

Swift.

3. To make firm; to ratify.
Every vow, and every binding oath to afflict the Soul, her husband may establish or, her husband
May make it valid.

Numbers.

4. To fix or settle in an opinion.
So were the churches established in the faith.

Acts, xvi. 5.

5. To form or model.
Appointed in what manner his family should be Establislied.

Clarendon.

6. To found; to build firmly; to fix im¬
moreably.
A fence not in use.
For he hath founded it upon the face, and established
It upon the flood.

P. xli. 12.

7. To make a settlement of any inheritance.
A fence not in use.
We will establish our estate upon
Our eldest son, Malcolm, whom we name hereafter.
The prince of Cumberland.

Shakes. Market.

Establishisher, n. f. [from establish.
He who establishes.

1. Reverence the holy fathers as divine establishments.

Real, of. Dish.

Establishment, n. f. [from establish.

1. Settlement; fixed state.
All happy peace, and godly government,
Is founded in these fixed establishments.
Fair Queen.

2. Confirmation of something already done;
Ratification.
He had not the soft power by way of recognition
Of right; as, on the other side, he avoided to have it by
New laws; but chose rather a kind of middle way,
By way of establishments.

Hooker.

3. Settled regulation; form; model of a government or family.
Now come into general reformation, and bring to that establishment by which all men should be contained
According to the form.

Boyle.

4. Foundation; fundamental principle;
Settled law.
The sacred order to which you belong, and even
That establishment on which you subsist, have often been Triumphed at.

Atterbury.

5. Allowance; income; salary.
His excellency, who had the sole disposal of
The emperors revenue, might gradually lessen your Establishment.

Swift.

6. Settled or final rat.
Whilst we set up our hopes and establishments here,
We do not seriously consider that God has provided
Another place for us.

W. Wake.

Estate, n. f. [of estate, French.]

1. The general interest; the business of the Government; the publick.
In this sense it is now commonly written state.

Many times the things added to judgment may
Be manum & taxum, when the reason and consequences
Thereof may reach to point of estate; I call matters of State not only the parts of sovereignty, but what Forever introduced any great alteration, or dangerous
Precedent, or concerneth manifestly any great portion
Or part of the publick.

Bacon's Essays.

2. Condition of life, with regard to prosperity
Or adversity.
Thanks to giddy chance.
She can rise headlong from our high estate.
Dryden.

3. Condition of an establishment in general.
Truth and certainty are not all secured by innate Principles; but men are in the same uncertain,
Floating state with as without them.

Locke.

4. Fortune; possession; generally meant of Possessions in kind, or realities.
She accused us to the king, though we went about to overthrow him in his own estate.
Shadwell.

Go, miser! gas for lucy fell thy soul.

Truck wares for, and trudge from pole to pole,
That man may fly, when thou art dead and gone.

See what a will estate he left his son?
Dryden, Pers.

5. Rank, quality.
Who hath not heard of the greatness of your estate? When men say, that your estate is much Exceeded with that sweet unifying of all Beauties.

Sidney.

6. A person of high rank. This felse is Disfigured.
She is a Dutchess, a great estate.
Latimer.

Here, on his birth-day, made a supper to his lords,
Captains, and chief states of Gallas.

Mark, vi. 21.

To Estate, v. a. [from the noun.
To settle as a fortune.
Why hast thou queen

Shan' n done my master

—A contract of true love to celebrate,
And some donation freely to the
On the black liver,

Shakes. Timon.
3. Valuation; alignment of proportional value; comparative judgment. The only way to come to a true estimate upon the evils between a publick and a private life, is to try both.
Estrangement. Outward actions can never give a just estimate of us, since there are many perfections of a man which are not visible in actions.

Additional Estimation. m. f. [from estimate.]
1. The act of adjusting proportional value.
2. Calculation; computation.
3. Opinion; judgement.
4. Esteem; regard; honour.

Estrangement. m. f. [from estrange.] Alienation; distance; removal; voluntary abdication.
Deprives, by a long estrangement from better things, come at length perfectly to loath, and fly off from them.

Estranged. m. f. [from estrange.]
1. Alienated, departed, estranged.
2. To withdraw or withhold. We must estrange our belief from everything which is not clearly and distinctly evidenced.

Eternal. adj. [from eternus.]
1. Without beginning or end.
2. Without limit; infinite.

Eternalize. v. a. [from eternal.]
To make eternal.

Eternally. adv. [from eternal.]
1. Without beginning or end.
2. Unchangeably; invariably.

That which is morally good, or evil, at any time, or E "Te in any case, must be also eternally and unchangedly so, with relation to that time and to that case. South.

3. Perpetually; without intermission.
   Bear me, some god, to Baj's gentile tears.
   Or cover me in Umbria's greenest reeds.
   With parts of the earth's audacious deserts,
   And all the furrows laud their pride. Addison.
ETERNAL. adj. [eternal, Latin.] Eternal; perpetual; endless. The Cyclops' massive fall
On Mars his indomitable, had for his own course. Shak's.
ETERNITY. n. s. [Eternities, Latin.] 1. Duration without beginning or end.
   In this ground his precious root
   Still lives, which, when weak time shall pour out
   Its only fruit, and all its commoner.
   Dancing an endless round, again shall rise. Crab's.
   Thy immortal rhyme
   Makes this one short point of time.
   To fill up half the orb of round Eternity, Cowly.
   By repeating the idea of any length of duration which we have in our minds, with all the endless addition of number, we come by the idea of eternity. Locke.
2. Duration without end.
   Beyond is all abyss,
   Eternity, whose end no eye can reach! Milton.
   Eternity is a dreamless thought,
   Through what variety of untried being,
   Through what new sciences and changes must we pafs! Barrow's Plague.
To ETERNIZE. v. a. [eternize, Latin.] 1. To make endless; to perpetuate.
   I with two fair gifts
   Created him endow'd; with happiness,
   And immortality; then, truly last,
   This other 'ereb but to eternize woe. Milton.
2. To make for ever famous; to immortalize.
   Mankind by all means seeking to eternize himself,
   And his own fame, 'twas so; he is near his end, both
   By fames and writings. Sidney.
   And well befriends all knights of noble name,
   That covet in th' immortal book of fame
   To be eternized, that he may haunt. Fairy Queen.
   I might relate of thousands, and their names
   Eternize here on earth; but those elect
   Angels, contented with their fame in heav'n
   Seek not the praise of men. Milton's Paradise Lost.
   The four great monarchies have been celebrated by the writings of many famous men, who have extolled them; and thereby themselves.
   Both of them are set on fire by the great actions of heroes, and both endeavour to eternize them. Dryden's Dunciad.
3. Greek seems to have accented the first syllable.
   Hence came its name, in that the grateful Jove
   Hath eternia'd the glory of his love. Creeby's Martyr.
ETHER. n. s. [ether, Latin.
1. An element more fine and subtle than air; air refined or sublimed. If any should suppose that ether, like our air, may contain particules which endeavour to recede from one another; for I do not know that this ether is; and that its particles are exceedingly smaller than those of air, and more than those of light the exceeding fineness of its particles may contribute to the greatness of the force by which those particules may recede from one another. Newton.
   The parts of other bodies are held together by the external preasure of the ether, and can have no other conceivable cau's of their cohesion and union. Locke.
2. The matter of the highest regions above,
   Where fields of light and liquid ether flow,
   Furg'd from the pond'rous dregs of earth below. Dryden.
ETHERIAl. adj. [from ether.] 1. Formed of ether.
   Man feels men when I prets th' etherial plains. Dryden.
2. Celestial; heavenly.

ETY. Go heavenly guilt, ethereal messages,
   Sent from whose good enkindling I adore. Milton.
   Thrones and imperial pow'rs, offspring of Heaven, Ethereal virtues! Such as she, being in good part freed from the entanglements of sense and body, are employed, like the spirits above, in contemplating the Divine
   Will in the works of nature; a kind of anticipation of the ethereal happiness and employments of Glorinville.
   Vafi chain of being, which from God began.
   Ethereal. n. [from ether.] Formed of ether; heavenly.
   Behold the bright surface
   Of this ethereal mould, whereon we stand. Milton.
   ETHICAL. adj. [ethical.] Moral; treating on morality.
   Ethically. adj. [from ethical.] According to the doctrines of morality.
   My subject leads me not to discourse ethically, but Christianly of the fruits of the tongue.
   -Government of the Tongue.
   ETHICK. adj. [ethical.] Moral; delivering precepts of morality.
   In the part he entitled part of his works Ethick Epistles.
   ETHICKS. n. s. [without the singular.
   Ehon, the doctrine of morality; a system of morality.
   For all of moral virtues, she was all
   That ethics speak of virtues cardinal. Donne.
   I will never let politicks against ethics; for true ethics are but as a handmaid to divinity and religion.
   Bacon.
   Peritus professes the steeple philosophy; the most genorous among all the sects who have given rules of ethics.
   If the atheists would live up to the ethics of Epicureanism, they would make few or no precepts from the Christian religion.
   Bentley.
   ETHICKS. n. s. [ethical.] Heathen; Pagan; not Jewish; not Christian.
   So contemned as the ethick world durft not offer him, is the peculiar infolence of degenerated Christians.
   Gov. of the Tongue.
   I shall begin with the agreement of priests,
   whether Jewish or ethick, with the Sacred Writings.
   Grevo.
   ETHICKS. n. s. Heathens; not Jews; not Christians.
   This character of the ethick was then the same Cain, the son of Adam. Raleigh's History.
   ETHICAL. adj. [ethical and ethick.]
   Treating of morality.
   ETILOGICAL. n. s. [etiologish.] An account of the causes of any thing; generally of a dieterem.
   I have not particulars enough to enable me to enter into the etiology of this dieterem. Arbtihum.
   ETILOGICAL. adj. [from etiology.] Relating to etymology; relating to the derivation of words.
   Exeque this concisely, this etiological observation. Locke.
   ETIOLOGIST. n. s. [from etiology.] One who searches out the original of words; one who throw the derivation of words from their original.
   ETILOGY. n. s. [etymology, Lat. etymon and ethick.]
   1. The decent or derivation of a word from its original; the deduction of formations from the root of the word; the analysis of compound words into primitives.
   Confusion is generally taken for any universal diminution or colleviation of the body which acceptation its etymology implies. Locke.
   Exeque this concisely, this etiological observation. Locke.
   ETILOGY. n. s. [etymology, Lat. etymon and ethick.]
   1. The decent or derivation of a word from its original; the deduction of formations from the root of the word; the analysis of compound words into primitives.
   Confusion is generally taken for any universal diminution or colleviation of the body which acceptation its etymology implies. Locke.
   Exeque this concisely, this etiological observation. Locke.

EVA. To make void; to evacuate; to nullify; to annul.
   The defect, though it would not evacuate a marriage, after cohabitation and actual consummation; yet it was enough to make void a contracted bond.
   -Henry VII.
   If the prophets recorded of the Messiah are not fulfilled in Jesus of Nazareth, it is impollible to know when a prophecy is fulfilled, and when not, in any thing or person whatsoever, which would utiliy evacuate the use of them. South.

EVA'CULATE. v. a. [eucate, Latin.] To make empty; to clear.
   There is no good way of prevention but by evacuating.
   and emptying the church. Hooker.
   We tried by this; but it would manifest its gradity in so thin a medium, as we could make in our receiver, by evacuating it. Boyle.

EVA'CULATE. v. a. [eucate, Latin.] To make void; to evacuate; to nullify; to annul.
   The defect, though it would not evacuate a marriage, after cohabitation and actual consummation; yet it was enough to make void a contracted bond.
   -Henry VII.
   If the prophets recorded of the Messiah are not fulfilled in Jesus of Nazareth, it is impollible to know when a prophecy is fulfilled, and when not, in any thing or person whatsoever, which would utiliy evacuate the use of them. South.

EVA'CULATE. v. a. [eucate, Latin.] To make empty; to clear.
   There is no good way of prevention but by evacuating.
   and emptying the church. Hooker.
   We tried by this; but it would manifest its gradity in so thin a medium, as we could make in our receiver, by evacuating it. Boyle.

EVA'CULATE. v. a. [eucate, Latin.] To make void; to evacuate; to nullify; to annul.
   The defect, though it would not evacuate a marriage, after cohabitation and actual consummation; yet it was enough to make void a contracted bond.
   -Henry VII.
   If the prophets recorded of the Messiah are not fulfilled in Jesus of Nazareth, it is impollible to know when a prophecy is fulfilled, and when not, in any thing or person whatsoever, which would utiliy evacuate the use of them. South.

EVA'CULATE. v. a. [eucate, Latin.] To make empty; to clear.
   There is no good way of prevention but by evacuating.
   and emptying the church. Hooker.
   We tried by this; but it would manifest its gradity in so thin a medium, as we could make in our receiver, by evacuating it. Boyle.

EVA'CULATE. v. a. [eucate, Latin.] To make void; to evacuate; to nullify; to annul.
   The defect, though it would not evacuate a marriage, after cohabitation and actual consummation; yet it was enough to make void a contracted bond.
   -Henry VII.
   If the prophets recorded of the Messiah are not fulfilled in Jesus of Nazareth, it is impollible to know when a prophecy is fulfilled, and when not, in any thing or person whatsoever, which would utiliy evacuate the use of them. South.
E V A

E A V.

To avoid; to decline by flight or flighting.

V A E.

Isadore's State of Innocence.

3. To escape or clude by gofphilly.

I can't imagine how the argument overthrows all that he brings to evade the testimonies of the fathers.

4. To escape as insensible or unconquerable, as too great or too subtle to be seized or subdued.

If we have been how a contingent even baffles man's knowledge, and evades his power.

5. To evade, a. n. [evade, Latin.] The act of wandering; excursion; ramble; deviation.

It is not now used with from.

His wisdom, by often evading peril, was turned rather into a deity to deliver himself from dangers, than into a providence to prevent it.

6. To evade or escape, a. n. [evade, Latin.] Vanishing; imperceptible; levelling beyond the perception of the senses.

The canal grew still smaller and deader, so as that the evanescent solid and fluid will change.

7. To evade or evade, a. v. [evade, Latin.] To diffuse in fumes or vapours.

Such cold powders as are aromatic, their virtues lie in those parts which are of themselves volatile and easy.

8. To evade or evade, a. v. [evade, Latin.] To drive away in fumes or vapours; to waft in the gaseous spirit.

Poetry is of so fabulous a spirit, that in the pouring out of one language into another it will evaporate.

9. To evade or evade, a. v. [evade, Latin.] To drive away in fumes; to disperse in vapours.

If we compute that prodigious mass of water daily thrown into the sea from all the rivers, we should then know how much is perpetually evaporated, and call upon the continents to supply their insensible fumes.

10. To evade or evade, a. v. [evade, Latin.] To give vent to; to let out in ebullition, or fallaces.

My lord of Essex evaporated his thoughts in a fountain before the queen.

11. To evade or evade, a. v. [evade, Latin.] The promulgation of the blessed gospel.

This was the land fabled from iniquity, through the apostolical and miraculous evangelium.

12. To evade or evade, a. v. [evade, Latin.] To spread over, to cover.

Theodoric's Spring.

13. The promulgation of the blessed gospel.

E V E.

E V E.

To subvert: philosophy: artifice: artful means of eluding or escaping.

We are too well acquainted with those answers: but his reasons, when'd they fit with them, cannot satisfy our apprehensions.

For I observe all my obstinate vain, and resolutely, though through maze, I lead him to my own conclusion.

1. Practicing evadence: elusive.

Evadus, a spectator of the theatricals, An evader of the fly request.

2. Containing an evadence, artificiously: elusively honest.

E V A N E X T.

E V A N E X T.

To evaporate.

1. Of giving thanks; the sacramental act in which the death of our Redeemer is commemorated with a thankful remembrance; the sacrament of the Lord's supper.

It would not be amiss to put it into the evanistical part of our daily devotions: we praise thee, O God, for all days and seasons,

E T A S T.

E T A S T.

Relating to the sacrament of the supper of the Lord.

E V A N G E L I S T.

E V A N G E L I S T.

A formulary of prayers.

E V A N G E L I S T.

An agreeable well proportioned mixture of qualities, whereby a body is said to be in a good state of health.

E V E.

E V E.

1. The clove of the day; the latter part of the day; the interval between bright light and darkness.

They, like so many Alexanders, have in these parts from morn till even sought, and theirs their swords for lack of argument.

When the sun's orb both even and morée is bright,

E V E.

1. In the context.

On Summer even by hasted stream,

E V E.

2. The vigil of fast to be observed before an holiday.

In this frenzy only is used, not even.

Let the immediate preceding day be kept as the even to this great fast.

E V E.

1. Level; not rugged; not unequal; smooth and opposed to rough.

To see a baggar's brat in frock,

E V E.

2. The present face of Rome is much more even and level than it was formerly.

The superficies of such plates are not even, but have many cavities and swellings, which, how shallow fallow forever, do a little vary the thickness of the plaste.
EVE
EVE

Newton's Opticks.

e. Uniform: equal to itself. Which, having such a gentil wifl'se fide, Would scatter all the spices on the stream, And, in a word, yea even now worth this, And with nothing further.

Shakspere's Marthel.

f. Right level with parallel to.

That the net may be even to the middel of the altar.

Exod.

And shall lay thee even with the ground.

Luke, vii. 44.

4. Not having inclination any way; nor leaning to any side.

He was

A noble servant to them; but he could not carry his honour even. Shakspere's Coriandrum.

5. Not having any part higher or lower than the other.

When Alexander demanded of one what was the first feat of his empire, he laid a day hide before him, and defined to let his foot on one side thereof; which being done, all the other parts of the hide did rise up; but when he did let his foot in the middle, all the other parts lay flat and even.

David.

6. Equal on both sides; fair; not favouring either.

I am not

Henceforth be earth.

7. Without any thing owed, either good or ill; out of debt.

We reckon with your severall loves, And make us even with your hate.

Shakspere's Macbeth.

I will be even with thee, doubt it not. Shakf.

I do confesse.

The blind lad's cow's white he inhabites there; But the ewe with him nevertheless.

Suckling.

In taking revenge, a man is but even with his enemy, but in palling it over, he is superior.

Evelyn's Effays.

Even reckoning makes lading friends; and the way to make reckonings even is to make them often.

South.

The publick is always even with an author which has not a just defence for them: the contempt is reciprocated.

Addison.

The true reason of this Boog's doctrine was to be even with the magistrates, who stood against them; and they resolved at any rate to be against him.

Afterbury.

8. Calm; not subject to elevation or depression; not uncertain.

Defers compos'd affections ever ev'n,

Team that delight, and fights that wait to heaven.

Pope.

9. Capable to be divided into equal parts; not odd.

Let him tell me whether the number of the flies be even or odd. Taylor's Rule of living hope.

What verity there is in that mortal conceit in the later division of man by event and odd, subdividing the odd right unto the side, and even unto the left.

Brown's Salisbury Kerrs.

To Even. v. a. [from the noun.]

1. To make even.

2. To make out of debt; to put in a state in which he good or ill is fully repaid.

Nothing can, I hope, content my fool.

Till I am evened with him wise for wife. Shakf.

3. To level; to make level.

This temple Xerxes evened with the wall, which Alexander is fall far above.

Kerel.

Bear, roll, and now chapers-walks and excavations for new the ground is supple, and it will even all the time.

Evelyn.

To Even. v. a. To be equal to. To be even disposed.

A like strange observation takes place here as at Stonger, that a revolving numbered nothing.

Leaves the Carron.

EVEN. adv. [often contrasted to ev'n.]

A word of strong affection; verify.

Even allowed those Gods profus'd the coasts, Spepey. Thou wait a felder.

Bacon's Advise to Wittyker.

EVEN. n. [from even.]

Even to Cato's wish; not fierce, and terrible Only in brokes. Shakspere's Marthel.

Dang'rous rocks, Which, having such a gentil wifel'se fide, Would scatter all the spices on the stream, And, in a word, yea even now worth this, And with nothing further.

Shakspere's Marthel.

It is not without the good man ventures; after this life, if there be no God, he it as well as the bad; but if there be a God, is infinitely better, even as much as unfable able and eternal happyness is better than extreme and endless man's misery.

Tilson.

He might even as well have employed his time, as some princes have done, in catching moles.

After.

2. Notwithstanding it was thought to do that. All I can lay of those being lies, I know they were bad enough to please even when I wrote them.

Dryden.

3. Likewise; not only fo, but also.

The motions of all those things might affect more of messe of times, if we could number them; but most of those motions are not evident, and the great lights are sufficient, and force also to measure every the motions of those other.

Holden.

Here all their rage, and ev'n their murmurs cease, And facred hience reign, and universal peace.

Pope.

4. So much as.

Books goe some turn to our thoughts that company does to our conversation, without finding our memories, or making us even fenible of the change.

Swift.

5. A word of exposition in which a secret comparison is implied; as, even the great, is the great like the mean.

Nor death itself can wholly whast your thins, But long contrasted fifth ev'n in the soul remains.

Dryden.

I have made several discoveries which appear, even to those who are versed in critical learning. Addison's Spectator.

6. A term of consideration.

Since you refus'd the notion, and corrected the malignity, I shall even let it pass. Collier.

EVENHANDED. adj. [even and band.] Impartial; equitable.

Evenhanded justice Returns the ingredients of our poltish'd chalice To our own lips. Shakspere's Marthel.

EVENING. n. [even, Saxox; avowed, Dutch.] The clofe of the day; the beginning of night.

I shall fall Like a bright exhalation in the evening, And no man fixe more than Turksh. Henry VIII.

The devil is now more laborious than ever, the long day of mankind drawing towards an evening, and the world's tragedy time nears an end.

Dryden.

Mean time the sun descended from the skies, And the bright ev'ning flar began to rise. Dryden.

It was the sacred rule among the Pythagoreans, that they should every evening retire, run over the actions and affairs of the day. Watts on the Mind.

EVENLY. adv. [from even.]

1. Equally; uniformly; in an equipoise.

In an infinite chaos nothing could be formed; no particular compound by mutual attraction; for every one there must have infinite mass round it, and therefore must rest for ever, being equally balanced by infinite attractions.

Beatty.

2. Levelly; without affection.

A path cleanliv'd, evenly and smoothly paved; not overturned and wasty, but of a pretty ground condition. Watson.

3. Without inclination to either side; in a posture parallel on the horizon; horizontally.

The upper face of the sea is known to be level by nature, and evenly distant from the centre, and waxes deeper and deeper the farther one taketh from the shore.

Bronzeur.

EVENLY. adv. [from evening.

1. At any time.

Men know by this time, if ev'n they will know, whether it be good or evil which hath been so long retent.

Hogger.

If thou hast that, which I have greater reason to believe now than ev'n, I mean valorus, this might thee in.

Shakspere.

You serve a m feter who is as free from the novy of friends, as ev're any king was.

Bacon.
EVE

Opening again, he lays his claim To hail the profit half the fame. Prior
The taller had been full in the family once, since the attainer of the great Duke of Suffolk. Addision in Italy.
8. EVE A. Any: [as ever, that is, even so or each is each one, all.] This word is still retained in the Scottish dialect.

I am old, I am old. -I love thee better than I love ever a fiery young boy of them all. Shakespeare's Henry IV.

9. It is often contracted into 'er. It is much used in contraction in the sense of above all, evergreen, green throughout the year; everdying, enduring without end; it is added almost arbitrarily to neutral parts and adjectives, and will be sufficiently explained by the following instances:

EVERBLUSHING, adj. [ever and blossoming.] Boiling up with perpetual murmurs. Fervent, still'd out of her breath. That everdying heart, that everdying bow.

EVERBURNS. adj. [ever and burning.] Unextinguished. His tail was fretted out in wood, rouseth. That to the house of heavenly gods it rau; And with expanded strength, The everburning lamps from thence it brought. Specier.

Torture without end. Still urges, and a fiery deluge fed. With everburning sulphur unconsum'd Milton. Ever'dying. adj. [ever and dying.] Eternal; enduring without end. Our souls, piercing through the impocity of flesh, behold the circle of heaven is begining to contemplate the everdying glory and term'less joy. Raleigh.

EVERGREEN, adj. [ever and green.] Verdant throughout the year. There will I hold him. A monument, and plant it round with statute. Of laurel, evergreen, and branching palm. Milton. The jurer, when in greater plente than can be exhausted by the sun, renders the word evergreen. Arisconus An Allmeti.

EVERGREEN. n. f. A plant that retains its verdure through all the seasons. Some of the hardiest evergreens may be transplanted, especially if the weather be mild and temperate. I find you are against filling an English garden with evergreens. Addison's Spectator.

EVERHONoured, adj. [ever and honored.] Always held in honour or esteem. Mentes an everhonour'd name, of old High in Ulysses' social life enrol'd. Pope's Odyssey.

EVERLASTING. adj. [ever and lasting.] 1. Lasting or enduring without end; perpetual; immortal; eternal. Whether we shall meet again, I know not. Therefore out everlasting fast held we: For ever, and for ever, farewell, Caflins. Shakespeare.

The everlasting life, both of body and soul, in that future state, whether in bliss or woe, hath been added. Hammond.

And what a trifle is a moment's breath, Laid in the scale with everlasting death! Denham.

2. It is used as past as well as future eternity, though not so properly. Everlasting. n. f. Eternity; eternal duration whether past or future. From everlasting to everlasting thou art God.

Psalm xx. 2.

We are in God through the knowledge which is of us, and the love which is borne towards us, from everlasting.

Isherker.

EVERLASTINGLY, adv. [from everlasting.] Eternally; without end. I'll hate him everlastingly. That blame me be of comfort any more. Shakespeare.

Many have made themselves everlastingly ridiculous. Swift.

EVERLASTINGNESS. n. f. [from everlasting.] Eternity; perpetuity; an indefinite duration. Nothing would make me sooner confess, That this world had an everlastingness. Than to consider that a year is run Since both this lower world's and the fun's fun. Dryden.

EVERLIVING. adj. [ever and living.] Living without end; immortal; eternal; inceffant.

It is not from hence the way, that leadeath right To that most glorious house, thatGliffareth bright With burning thars and everliving sire. Fairy Queen. In that he is man, he received life from the Father, as from the fountain of that everliving Deity. Hooker.

God's justice in the one, and his goodness in the other, is exercis'd for evermore, as the everliving subjects of his reward and punishment. Raleigh.

The infit of human bounty and inculca can be the effect of no thing else than the wisdom and skill of a powerful everliving agent. Newton.

EVERMORE, adv. [ever more.] Always; eternally. Most seems an explicable accident, added, unless it be explained originally from this time: as, evermore, always, henceforward; but this sense has not been strictly preferred.

It govern'd was, and guided evermore, Through wisdom of a matron grave and hoare. Faery Queen.

Sparks by nature evermore aspires, Which makes them now to such a highness flee. Bentley.

Religion prefers those pleasures which flow from the presence of God for evermore, infinitely before the tranitory pleasures of this world. Tilton.

EVEROPEN, adj. [ever and open.] Never closed; not at any time shut. God is the great eye of the world, always watching over our actions, and has an everopen ear to all our words. Taylor.

EVERPleasing, adj. [ever and pleasing.] Delighting at all times; never ceasing to give pleasure. The everplesing Pamela was content to urge a little tarder for me. Sidney.

Forcing Sheria's everplesing thore, The winds to Marathous the virgin bore, everplesing thy noble and ancient. Pope.

To EVER. v. a. [ever, Latin.] To overthrow; to subvert; to destroy. Not used.

The foundation of this principle is totally evervled by the ingenious commentator upon immortal, being lettered. Evertul.

To Evert. v. a. [evert, Latin.] To destroy; to overthrow. A proc is valid, if the jurisdiction of the judge is not yet evered and overthrown. Aslif.

EVERWATCHFUL, adj. [ever and watchful.] Always vigilant.

Place it at the helm he fat, and mark'd the skies, Nor close'd in sleep his everwatchful eyes. Pope. Very. adj. in old language everich, that is ever each; except sole, Saxox.

1. Each one of all. Every has therefore no plural significacion. He projected unto God, their necessities, and they or their requests for relief in every of them. Every.

The King madeth this ordinance, that every twelve years there should be sent forth two ships. Bacon.
EVI

The virtue and force of every thing, is thereby allied. - Hammond's Fundamentals.

Aristotle has long since observed, how unreasonable it is to expect the same kind of proof for every thing, which we have for some things. - Tilloston.

Every one, that has an idea of a foot, finds that he can repeat that idea, and, joining it to the former, makes that idea of a foot in more fullness. - Locke.

From pole to pole the thunder roars about; and broken lightnings flash from every cloud. - Pope.

1. everywhere. In all places; in each place.

2. The sublimes of the body of Christ was not everywhere seen, nor did it everywhere suffice death; everywhere it could not be obtained: it is not everywhere put, being elevated into heaven. - Hooker.

If I feed my unprofitable soul, how is it profitable to keep him from vice, which is everywhere do in fullness? - Locke.

'Tis no where to be found, at every where. - Pope.

every young. adj. [Saxon and Ang.]. Not subject to old age, or decaying; undecaying.

joy every where, unsaitd with pain or fear.

fill the wide circle of the eternal year. - Pope's Odyssey.

Every proper. n. s. [more and dropper].

This same method, as well as the following, is common to Jews and Pagans, who believe a house to be in the night to listen.

What makes you listening there? Get farther off; I preach not to thee, thou wicked every dropper. - Dryden's Spanish Tr蘅er.

Do but think how becoming your disposition is to be disgusted like a flake, and every dropper, under every woman's windows. - Dryden's Don, John.

Every estate. w. a. [Goy-jets, Lat.]. To search out. - Dryden.

Eug. n. s. [This word is so written by most writers; but since the original 13 SaxoM or Welsh yeow, more favours the older orthography of yeow, I have referred it thereto.] A tree.

At the first stretch of both his hands he drew, and almost join'd the horns of the tough eagle. - Pope.

EVICTION. w. a. [exeque, Latin.]

1. To dispossess of by a judicial course.

The law of England would speedily evict them out of their possession, and therefore they hold it the best policy to carry off the yeke of English law.

Davies on Ireland.

2. To take away by sentence of law.

His lands were evicted from him. - K. Jemile.

3. To prove; to evict. Little used.

This servile fluid has never been heard that homed in live animals by the fefts, however afflicted; nor its members evicted by any cogent experiment, Cyme.

EVICTION. n. f. [from evict.]

1. Dispossession or deprivation by a definitive sentence of a court of judicature.

If any of the parties be laid aside under pretence of arbitration, and the other party doth cautiously put the part at common law, yet the preterit court will set all the kings, and no relief had in eviction or dispossession.

2. Proof; evidence; certain testimony.

A plurality of voices carries the question, in all our disputes, rather than an expedient for peace than an eviction of the right.

EVIDENCE. n. f. [French.]

1. The state of being evict; clearness; indubitable certainty; notoriety.

2. Testimony; proof.

3. Evidence. The delivery of the evidence of the purchase unto Baruch.

Yet unreasonable it is to expect the same kind of proof and evidence for every thing, which we have for some things. - Tilloston.

Cato major, who had borne all the great offices, has left us an evidence, under his own hand, that he was veried in country affairs. - Locke.

They bear evidence to a history in defiance of vol. I.

Christianity, the truth of which history was their motive to embrace Christianity. - Addison.

3. Witness; one that gives evidence. In this sense it is sometimes plural, as, the evidence were favorable or sometimes regularly augmented, as evidences.

To wear he saw three inches through a door. - Dryden's Æneid.

There are bosom friends, which they must needs allow of as proper evidence; even the mighty volumes of visible nature, and the everlasting tables of righteousness. - Bentley.

To evidence. w. a. [from the noun.]

1. To prove; to evidence.

The horses must be evidenced by good testimonies to have been bred in Ireland. - Temple.

If they be principal & free of themselves, they need nothing to evidence them. - Temple.

These things the Christian religion requires, as might be evidenced from texts. - Tilloston.

2. To shew, to make discover.

To shew on earth hath he professed, which thy looks, Milton's Paradise Lost.

Although the same truths be elicited and explicated by the compass of animals, yet they are more clearly evidenced in the composition of man. - Hume's Origin of Mankind.

EVIDENT. adj. [French.]. Plain; apparent; notorious.

It is evident, that in the general frame of nature, that things most manifest unto senses have prove oblation unto the understanding. - Brown's Vulg. Err. They are incapable of making conquests upon their neighbours, which is evident to all that know their condition.

Children minded not what was said, when it was evident to them that no attention was sufficient. - Luke.

EVIDENTLY. adv. [from evident.]. Apparent; certainly; undeniably.

Laying their eggs, they evidently prove the cause of all effects of love. - Prior.

The printing private letters is the worst sort of betraying conversation, as it evidently has the most ill consequences. - Pope.

EVIDENT. [v. y. g.], SaxoM, ered. Dutch.]

1. Having bad qualities of any kind; not good.

He hath brought up an evil name upon a virgin. - Deut.

An evil disface causeth evil in his soul, and now that he lieth, he shall rise up against him. - Psalms.

The good figs are good, and the evil very evil, that cannot be eaten they are for evil. - Jeremiah.

Wicked; bad; corrupt.

Is thine eye evil, because I am good? - Art.

The imagination of man's heart is evil from his youth. - Gen.

3. Unhappy; miserable; calamitous.

And the officers did see that they were in evicition. - Exodus.

All the days of the afflicted are evil. - Proverbs.

4. Mischievous; destructive; ravencous.

It is his foul's cost; in evil heath hath desoured him. - Genesis.

EVI. n. f. [generally contracted to ill.]

1. Wickedness, a crime.

2. Not in the rigidons.

Of horrid hell can come no move damn'd.

In evil to top Mabehth: Shakespeare's Mabehth.

2. Injury; mischief.

Whatsoever evil go for good, evil shall depart not from his house. - Samuel.

Let thine enemies, and they that seek evil to thee, do.

3. Misfortune; calamity.

The fear of the Lord is full of evil. - Ecclesiastes.

4. Misfortune; calamity.

Shall we receive good at the hand of God, and shall we not receive evil? - Job.

A greatest man foundeth the evil, and hideth himself. - Prov.
And therefore was law given them to receive their natural piety.

Milton's Paradise Lost.

That religion, teaching a future state of souls, is a probability; and that its contrary cannot, with equal probability, be maintained.

The greater absurdities are, the more strongly they evince the falsity of that supposition from whence they flow.

Acta.

Evincently. adv. [from evinci, to evince.] Capable of proof; demonstrable.

Implanted intuitions in brutes are in themselves highly reasonable and sufficient to their ends, and evincible by true reason to be such.

Hate.

Evincibly. adv. [from evincive.] In such a manner as to force conviction.

To deprive of manhood; to emasculate.

To eviscerate. v. a. [exuviere, Latin.] To open itself; to disembowel; to draw to deprive of the entrails; to search within the entrails.

Eviscitated. adj. [exuvitatus, Latin.] Avoidable; that may be escaped or flurnned.

Of divers things evil, all being not eviscitable, we take one which none, having only in case of so great usefulness may be taken.

Evish. v. a. [eviscitate, Latin.] To avoid; to shun; to escape.

To evish. v. a. To shun.

In the doth evisculate and shun.

A thousand irrigulous curled hours.

Which forced marriage would have brought upon her.

Shakespeare.

Evitation. n. f. [from eviscate.] The act of avoiding.

In all bodies there is an appetite of union and evitation, of fusion or contiguity, of union and separation, according as the forces of contiguity or separation are the stronger.

Evisceration. n. f. [evisceratum, Latin.] External in a limited sense; of duration not infinitely but indefinitely long.

Evicitation. n. f. [evicipiticipat, Low Latin.] Duration not indefinitely, but indefinitely long.

Evolute. n. f. [evoluteus.] A coil.

Many brave young minds have oftentimes, through bearing the prais'd and famous elegies of worthy men, been lured up to affect the like commendations.

Spenzer on Ireland.

If some men's appetites find more melody in diversity than in the harmony of the angelic quires; yet even those fond mis's be affected with holy,

Percy of Death.

Evunch. n. f. [evonus.] One that is cultivated or emaciated.

He hath gathered the common wealth, and made

Shakespeare. Henry VI.

It hath been observed by the ancients, that much of Venus doth dim the light; and yet evunches, which are unable to generate, are nevertheless also inoffensive.

Bacon's Nat. Hist.

So charmed you were, you could'st awhile to cot

On continent gird'd in an evunch's throat.

Pepys.

To Evesuchate. v. a. To make an evunch.

There were an impossible art to ennuchate or castrate themselves.

Brown's Vulgar Errors.

Evocation. n. f. [evocation, Latin.] The act of calling out.

Would truth dispense, we could be content with all that knowledge were, but rememberance, that intellectual acquisition were but reminiscimental evocation.

Brown.

Instead of a decent into hell, it seems rather a conjuring up, or an evocation of the dead from hell.

Notes on Ossory.

Evolution. n. f. [evoluere, Latin.] The act of flying away.

Evolved. n. f. [evolvo, Latin.] To unfold; to differtaginate.

The animal foul once expands and evolvoes itself in its full orb and extent than the human soul.

Hate.

This little active principle, as the body inclosed,
EXA

EXA

EXA

EXA

EXA

EXAMINATION, n. f. [from exam.] 1. The act of raising on high. 2. Elevation to power, dignity, or excellence.

The act of raising to power, dignity, or excellence.

EXAMINATION, n. f. [from examinat.] The act of examining by questions, or experiment; accurate disquisition.

I have brought him forth, that, after examination had, I might have something to write. Acts xlv. 26.

EXAMINER, n. f. [Latin.] An examiner; an enquirer.

An inference, not of power to pronounce a serious examination, Brown's Vulgar Errors. 75 EXAMINE, v. a. [from examine.] To try a person accused or suspected by interrogators.

Let them examine themselves whether they repent them (2 Cor. vii. 10.)

Alas, &c. 29.

Different men leaving out or getting in several false ideas, according to their various examination, Delhi, or variation of the subject, have different effects.

Lick. 14.

EXAMINATION, n. f. [from examinat.] The act of examining by questions, or experiment; accurate disquisition.

I have brought him forth, that, after examination had, I might have something to write. Acts xlv. 26.

EXAMINER, n. f. [Latin.] An examiner; an enquirer.

An inference, not of power to pronounce a serious examination, Brown's Vulgar Errors. 75 EXAMINE, v. a. [from examine.] To try a person accused or suspected by interrogators.

Let them examine themselves whether they repent them (2 Cor. vii. 10.)

Alas, &c. 29.

Different men leaving out or getting in several false ideas, according to their various examination, Delhi, or variation of the subject, have different effects.

Lick. 14.
EXA

EXAGNIOUS. adj. [exangius, Latin.] Having no blood; formed with animal juices, not fanguineous.

EXAMINATE. adj. [examinatus, Latin.]
1. Lifeless; dead.
2. Spiritless; depressed.

EXAMINATION, n. f. [from examine.]
1. Deprivation of life.
2. Antecedents, &c.

EXAMINATION, n. f. [examinatia.]
2. Ulcerous; effusive, eruptive.

EXAHERMATIA. n. f. [exaehermatia.]
2. Ulcerous; effusive, eruptive.

EXALTATION. n. f. [exaltare, Latin.]
1. To draw out.
2. To exalt; to raise.

EXAL'TATION, n. f. [exaltare.]
1. Act of drawing out; exaltation.

EXCABITUS. adj. [exabatus, Latin.]
1. Manual act of writing; the manner of manual writing.

EXCITATION. n. f. [excitare, Latin.]
1. The act of cutting into hollows.

EXCITATORY. n. f. [excitare, Latin.]
1. To provoke; to impel.

EXCITATION. n. f. [excitare.]
1. To cause to become excited.
2. To provoke; to impel.

EXCITABLE. adj. [exitable, Latin.]
1. Aggravated, malignant representation.

EXCITABLE. adj. [exitable, Latin.]
1. Aggravated, malignant representation.

EXCITATION. n. f. [exactiva.]
1. To exceed; to go beyond;
2. To exceed; to go beyond.

EXCITABLE. adj. [exitable, Latin.]
1. To exceed; to go beyond;
2. To exceed; to go beyond.

EXCITATION. n. f. [exactiva.]
1. To exceed, to go beyond;
2. To exceed, to go beyond.

EXCITABLE. adj. [exitable, Latin.]
1. To exceed; to go beyond;
2. To exceed; to go beyond.

EXCITATION. n. f. [exactiva.]
1. To exceed; to go beyond;
2. To exceed; to go beyond.

EXCITABLE. adj. [exitable, Latin.]
1. To exceed; to go beyond;
2. To exceed; to go beyond.
EXC

The forum of the blood affords, by distillation, an exceeding limpid water, neither acid nor astringent.
Arbutus

EXCEEDingly, adv. [from exceeding.] To a great degree; greatly; very much.
They cried out more exceedingly, Cut off, them.

He screamed exceedingly. —Comm. xvii. 50.
The Earl of Surrery, lieutenant of Ireland, was much feared of the king's enemies, and exceedingly beloved of his subjects. Day's Ireland.
Precious stones look exceedingly well, when they are set in those places which we would make to come out of the picture. Dryden.

Is not this medium exceedingly more subtle than the air, and exceedingly more elastic and active?
Newton's Opticks.

Te EXCEL. w. u. [excellit, Lat.] To outgo in good qualities; to surpass.
Venus her myrtle, Phoebus his bay;
Tea both excel where you vouchsafe to praise.
Waller.

How her heart's, how patience vast,
Thy father's bloom and death may tell.
Exceeding others, these were great;
Thou greater still, must thee excel.
Prior.

Te EXCEL. w. u. m. To have good qualities in a great degree; to be eminent; to be great in.
Then to Silvia let us draw,
That Silvia is excelling.
Reuben, unbeatable as water, thou shalt not exceed.
Gen. xli. 56.

It is not only in order of nature for him to govern, that is the more intelligible; but there is no less required, courage and learning. And, above all, he might stand good abstinence from injuries to fit him to govern a perplexed business. Some men, some nations, excel in the one ability, some in the other.
Company are to be avoided that are good for nothing; those to be sought and frequented that excel in some quality or other.
Temple.

He match'd their beauties where they most excel:
Of love, honour, beauty, and of arms as well.
Dryden.
Let those teach others, who themselves excel;
And confine freely, who have written well. Pope.

EXCELSITY, m.t. [excellence, French; Excellency, Italian.
1. The state of abounding in any good qua-
2. Dignity; high rank in existence.
It is not wonderful, that base defiles should be loathed and hated in men of their own excellence, as to make them willing that their faults should be like the souls of beasts, mortal and contemptible with their bodies.
Hosier.

2. Dignity; high rank in existence.
It is not wonderful, that base defiles should be loathed and hated in men of their own excellence,
as to make them willing that their faults should be like the souls of beasts, mortal and contemptible with their bodies.
Hosier.

The state of exceeding in any thing.
I have enough men of parts and conduct, foolish heard any one commanded for having an excellence in music.
Locke.

That in which one excels.
The criticisms have been made to discover beauty and excellency than their faults and imperfections.
Addison.

Purity; goodness.
She loves him with that excellence,
That is the truest ornament of her excellence.
Shakespeare.

A title of honour. It is now usually appplied to generals of an army, ambassadors, and governors.
They humbly flew unto your excellency.
The whole piece concluded of Shakespeare.
Excellent adj. [excellent, Latin.]
1. Of great virtue; of great worth; of great dignity.
Arts and sciences are excellent, in order to certain ends.
Taylor.

Eminent in any good quality. He is excellent in power and in judgment.

EXCELLENTLY, adv. [from excellent.]
1. Well; in a high degree.
He determined that mass would excel, because he was made with hands, as he excellently declared.
Brown's Fiji. Errors.

That was excellently observed, says I, when I read a pulling in an author, where his opinions agree with mine.
Swift.

2. To an eminent degree.
Comedy is both excellently instructive and exceedingly pleasant; fault lathers in reformation;
and humour reflects faculty, so as to render it ridiculous.
Dryden.

To EXCEP'T, w. u. [exceptio, Latin.]
1. To leave out, and specify as left out of a general precept, or position.
But what is not, and is not put under him, it is manifest, that he is excepted which did put all things under him.
Cor.

Adam, behold
Th' effects, how the original crime hath wrought
To some to spring from thee, who never touch'd
Th' excepted tree.
Milton's Paradise Lost.

To EXCEP'T, w. u. [to object; to make objection; to except a thing.]
A succession which our author could not except against.
Locke.

EXCEPT, prep. [from the verb. This word, long taken as a preposition or conjunction, is originally the participle pas-tive of the verb; which, like most others, had for its participle two terminations, except and excepted; All except one is all one excepted. Except may likewise be, according to the Tewtonick idiom, the imperative mood: all except one; that is, all but one, which you must except.
1. Exclusively of; without inclusion of.
Richard except, those whom we fight against,
Had rather we have us than him they follow.
Shakespeare.

God and his Son except,
Nought valued he nor fear'd.
Milton.

2. Unless; if it be not so that.
It is necessary to know our duty, because 'tis necessary for us to do it; and it is impossible to do it, except we know it.
Tillotson.

EXCEPTING, prep. [from except, and
EXCEPTION.]
With that inclusion of; with exception.
An imperfect. May I not live without control and awe, Exceating till the letter of the law! Dryden's Per People come into the world in Turkey the same way they fall from the state of being the royal family, get they but little by it. Cullerl in Dulz.ing.

EXCEPTION. n.f. [from except, exception.
Latin.]
1. Exclusion from the things comprehended in a precept, or position; exclusion of any person from a general law.
When God removed this charter of man's free-reign over the creatures to Noah and his family, we find no exception at all; but that Chast load was as fitted with this right as any of his brethren.
South.

Let the money be raised on land, with an exception to some of the more barren parts, that might be taken.
Adson.

2. It should have from before the rule or law to which the exception refers; but it is sometimes inaccurately used with to.

Pleads in exception to all general rules,
Your tale of follies, with your form of fools. Pope.

3. Things excepted or specified in.
Every act of parliament was not previous to what it enacted; unless those two, by which the Earl of Stafford and Sir John Fenwick left their hands may be excepted.
Swift.
Who first taught fools enslav'd, and realms undone,
The erroneous faith of many made for one;
That proud exception to all nature's laws,
'T invent the world and counterwork its course. Pope.

EXCEPTIONABLE, adj. [from exception.]
Liable to objection.
The only piece of pleasantry in Milton is where the evil spirits rally the angels upon the success of their endeavor; this passage I look upon to be the most exceptionable in the whole poem.
Addison.

EXCEPTIONAL, adj. [from except, and
EXCEPTION.]
They are so superstitious, happy, treasured, fierce, and excitable, that they are not only the image of the true character of friendship, but become the very fosses of society.
Barclay.

EXCEPTIVE, adj. [from except, and
EXCEPTION.]
Including an exception.
An exception proposition will make complex syngrams, as none but physicians came to the conclusion, the nurse is no physician, therefore the name not to be excepted. Thus we conclude.
Bacon.

EXCEPTIONLESS, adj. [from except, and
EXCEPTION.]
Cannot object; cannot except; cannot expect or neglecting all exception; general; universal. This is not in use.
Forgive my general and exceptionless ruffian,
Perpetual founder gods! I do proclaim Othello.

EXCEPTOR, n.f. [from except, and
EXCEPTION.]
Objection; one that makes exceptions.

The exceptor makes a reflection upon the impropriety of those exceptions.
Barnet.

To EXCERN. w. u. a. [exceptus, Latin.]
To strain out; to separate or emit by strainer, and to find out by exception.
That which is dead, or which is excoriated, hath antipathy with the same thing when it is site and found, and with those parts which do except.
Bacon's Nat. Hist.
An unguent or sap prepared, with an opium, venerated
Ray on the Creation.

EXCEPTION, n.f. [exceptus, Latin.]
1. The act of gleaning; selecting.

The thing gleaned or selected.
That which has been consumed his works, having some few exceptions.
Raleigh.

EXCESS, n.f. [excessus, Latin.]
1. More than enough; faulty superfluity.

Amongst the hens of three excesses and super-fluities, there is stiped the want of a principal part of duty.
Heater.

Goodness

EXC

Toodolf answers to the theological virtues; charity, and交友, and each word and phrase. The whole power of in excels, caused the angels to fall; the desire of knowledge in excess caused man to fall, but in chastity there is no excess, neither can angel or man, come in danger by it.

Browne's Difcovery.

Members are crooked or distorted, or disproportionate the rest, either in excess or defect. Key.

2. Exuberance; state of exceeding; comparative excess, or paint. Leaks.

Exuberance. [n. f. from the verb.]

1. The act of giving and receiving reciprocally.

Then they parted, with exchange of harms;

Much blood the moundsers fall, and their teeth

Walter.

2. They lead their corn, they make exchanges;

they are always ready to serve one another. Addison.

3. The world is maintained by intercourse and the whole course of nature is a great exchange, in which one good turn is, and ought to be, the stated price of another.

4. The form or act of transferring, properly by bills or notes.

I have bills for money by exchange,

From Florence, and must here deliver them. Shaksp.

5. The balance of the money of different nations.

He was skilled in the exchange beyond facts, and in all the circumstances and practices thereof.

Hayward on Edward VI.

6. The thing given in return for something received.

If one appear to prove upon thy person

Thy briny, main, and many treason,

There's my pledge: I'll prove it on thy heart,

There's more than meet, I know: what in that world I is

That names me traitor, villain-like be he. Shaksp.

Spent all I have, only give me so much time in exchange of it. Shaksp. Merry Wives of Windsor.

It may defend the silver coin go for more than its value in all things to be bought; but just so much as the denomination was raised, just so much less of commodity had the buyer in exchange for it.

Lecks.

If blood you feel, I will my own reign:

O spare her life, and in exchange take mine.

Dryden's Inf. Emp.

7. The thing received in return for something given.

The infer and love which was paid you by all,

who had the happiness to know you, was a wife exchange for the honours of the court. Dryden.

8. The place where the merchants meet to negociate their affairs; place of sale.

He that sigs the same words sometimes in one,

and sometimes in another significat, ought to pass, in the schools for a fair a man, as he does in the market and exchange, who sells several things under the same name.

Locke.

No thing, no place is strange,

While his fair bosom is the world's exchange.

Dryden.

EXCHANGE. n. f. [from exchange.] One who practizes exchange.

While bullion may be had for a small price more than the weight of our current cash, these exchanges generally chose rather to buy bullion than risk of melting down our coin, which is criminal by the law.

S. W.

EXCHATE. n. f. See Exchate.

He by my rhinks thinks to make them great.

To make one great by others lies is bad exchate.

Spenfrin.

EXCHEATER. n. f. See Exchate.

These earls and dukes appointed their special officers as sheriffs, admiral, receiver, havener, custome, burgess, esquire, receiver, comptroller, governor, ex-chate, feodary, auditor, and clerk of the market.

Carew.

EXCHÆKER. n. f. [exchequer, Norman French; schatuarium, low Latin, from schat, a treasure; German; The ex-chate, to which these brought all their revenues belonging and paying of money. It is also a court of record, wherein all causes touching the revenues of the crown are handled.

Harris.

I will be cheater to them both, and they shall be excheaters to me.

Shakespeare.

Are excheat, and the exchequer's empty, Danham.

Clipped money will pass whilst the king's bankers and at least the exchequer takes it.

Locke.

EXCELE, n. f. [acc. Dutch; excalam, Latin.] A hateful tax levied upon commodities, and adjudged not by the common judges of property, but wretched bodied by those to whom excuse is paid.

The people should pay a rattle tax for their thief, and an excuse for every thing which they should not.

Hayward.

Ambitious now to take excuse

Of a more fragrant paradise.

Clavellad.

Excis. With hundred rows of teeth, the thief excises,

And on all trades like Caffarwa the seeds. Marvin.

Hire broad houfes, and oppres the poor.

By fam'd excis. VInd Translation

T. Excite. n. a. [from the noun.] To levy excuse upon a person or thing.

In South-sea days, not happier when form'd

The lord of thousands, than if now excis'd. Pope.

Exciseman, n. f. [excise and man.] An officer who infects commodities, and rates the tax excise.

Excis'n, n. f. [excise, Latin.] Excitation; distraction; ruin; the act of cutting off;

the flate of being cut off.

Pride is one of the fatal instruments of care.

Dryy. Pyle.

Such conquerors are the instruments of wretchedness on these nations that have filled up the measure of inequality, and are grown ripe for excis'ton. Atterbury.

EXCITATION. n. f. [from excite, to excite, Latin.] 1. The act of exciting, or putting into motion.

All putrefactions come from the ambient body, either by ingress of the ambient body into the body

putrefied, or by excitation and fallication of the body putrefied, by the body ambient. Baurou.

2. The act of roaring or awakening.

The original of doubtful and spiritual ideas may be owing to sensitation and reflection, the recollection and fresh excitation of them to other occasions.

Hodg. Logic.

EXCITE. v. t. [excite, Latin.] 1. To roast; to animate; to stir up; to encourage.

The Lacedemonians were more excite to desire of honour with the excellent verfs of the poet

Tirannus, than with all the exhortations of their captains.

That kind of posy which excite to virtue, the greatest of men, is of greatest use to human kind.

Spenfrin's Ireland.

2. To put in motion; to awaken; to raise.

The motive by which one is stirred up, animated,
or put in action.

It stand I then.

That have a father killed, a mother flain'd,

Excitements of my reason and my blood,

And let all sleep.

Shakespeare.

EXCITE. n. f. [from excite.] 1. One that stirs up others, or puts them in motion.

They never punished the delinquency of the multitudes and their exciters.

King Charles.

2. The cause by which any thing is raised or put in motion.

Hope is the grand excite of industry.

Decay of Plea.
EXCLAMATION, n. f. [exclamatio, Latin.]
1. To cry out with vehemence; to make an outcry; to cry out querulously and outrageous.
2. A loud or joyous expression.
3. The act of exclaiming.
4. A loud expression.
5. To express in an exclamation.

EXCLUDER, n. f. [from exclam.] 1. A person who excludes.
2. A thing that excludes.

EXCLUSION, n. f. [from exclam.] 1. The act of shutting out or denying admission.
2. The state of being shut out or excluded.

EXCLUSIVE, adj. [from exclam.] 1. Excluding.
2. Exclusively.

EXCOMMUNICATION, n. f. [from excommuni-.
1. An ecclesiastical interdict; exclusion from the fellowship of the church.
2. To excommunicate a person.

EXCORIATION, n. f. [from excori-.
1. The act of stripping off the skin.
2. Tostrip off the skin.

EXCRETORY, adj. [from excreta.]
1. Pertaining to the excretion of waste products.
2. Pertaining to the excretory system.

EXCREMENS, n. f. [from excreta.]
1. Excreta.
2. Excrementitious matter.

EXCREMENT, n. f. [from excreta.]
1. Excrement.
2. Excreta.

EXCREMEN, n. f. [from excreta.]
1. Excrement.
2. Excreta.

EXCREMENTAL, adj. [from excrement.]
1. Pertaining to excrement.
2. Containing or consisting of excrement.

EXCREMENT, n. f. [from excrement.]
1. A deposit of excrement.
2. A deposit of excreta.

EXCREMENTOUS, adj. [from excrement.]
1. Containing excrement.
2. Containing excreta.

EXCRUCIATING, adj. [from excruciation.
1. Severe and excruciating.
2. Severe and excruciating.

EXCRUCIATION, n. f. [from excruciation.
1. A state of severe and excruciating pain.
2. A state of severe and excruciating pain.

EXCULPATE, v. t. [exculpate, Latin.]
1. To clear from blame or guilt.
2. To absolve from blame or guilt.

EXCULPATION, n. f. [from exculpate.
1. A defense or justification.
2. A defense or justification.

EXCULPATORY, adj. [from exculpate.
1. Pertaining to exculpate.
2. Pertaining to exculpate.

EXCUPT, v. t. [exculpate, Latin.]
To clear up; to make clear.

EXCURSION, n. f. [from excursion.
1. A trip or journey.
2. A trip or journey.

EXCURSIONAL, adj. [from excursion.
1. Pertaining to excursion.
2. Pertaining to excursion.

EXCURSIONIST, n. f. [from excursion.
1. A person who makes excursions.
2. A person who makes excursions.

EXCURSIONAL, adj. [from excursion.
1. Pertaining to excursion.
2. Pertaining to excursion.

EXCURSION, n. f. [from excursion.
1. A trip or journey.
2. A trip or journey.

EXCURSIONIST, n. f. [from excursion.
1. A person who makes excursions.
2. A person who makes excursions.

EXCURSIONAL, adj. [from excursion.
1. Pertaining to excursion.
2. Pertaining to excursion.

EXCURSIONIST, n. f. [from excursion.
1. A person who makes excursions.
2. A person who makes excursions.

EXCURSIONAL, adj. [from excursion.
1. Pertaining to excursion.
2. Pertaining to excursion.

EXCURSIONIST, n. f. [from excursion.
1. A person who makes excursions.
2. A person who makes excursions.

EXCURSIONAL, adj. [from excursion.
1. Pertaining to excursion.
2. Pertaining to excursion.

EXCURSIONIST, n. f. [from excursion.
1. A person who makes excursions.
2. A person who makes excursions.

EXCURSIONAL, adj. [from excursion.
1. Pertaining to excursion.
2. Pertaining to excursion.

EXCURSIONIST, n. f. [from excursion.
1. A person who makes excursions.
2. A person who makes excursions.

EXCURSIONAL, adj. [from excursion.
1. Pertaining to excursion.
2. Pertaining to excursion.

EXCURSIONIST, n. f. [from excursion.
1. A person who makes excursions.
2. A person who makes excursions.

EXCURSIONAL, adj. [from excursion.
1. Pertaining to excursion.
2. Pertaining to excursion.

EXCURSIONIST, n. f. [from excursion.
1. A person who makes excursions.
2. A person who makes excursions.

EXCURSIONAL, adj. [from excursion.
1. Pertaining to excursion.
2. Pertaining to excursion.

EXCURSIONIST, n. f. [from excursion.
1. A person who makes excursions.
2. A person who makes excursions.

EXCURSIONAL, adj. [from excursion.
1. Pertaining to excursion.
2. Pertaining to excursion.
matter excreted from the body; offensive or offensive to the body.

The excrescentious moisture pustic in birds through a fever and more delicate flavor than in birds.

Toil of the mind destroys health, by attracting the spirit from the talk of conversation to the brain; while others are conversing with them cloudless and excrescentious vapors.

Harvey.

The lungs are the grand exsanguinatory of the body; and the main end of respiration is continually to make a fluid, and to excrete an excrescentious fluid out of the mass of blood.

Woodward.

An animal fluid in no ways excrescentious, mild, elaborated, and nutrition. Aubachot on Animals.

Excrescence. n. s. [excrescens, L.]

Excrement. n. s. [excrescens, L.]

Excrecence. n. f. [excrecens, L.]

Sometimes growing out of another without use, and contrary to the common order of production; preternatural production.

All beyond this is monstrous, tis out of nature, tis an excrescence, and not a living part of poetry. Dryden.

We have little more than the excrescences of the Spanish monarchy. Addison on the War.

They are the excrescences of our souls; which, like our body, has a lot; horrid or becoming, as we cut or let them grow. Taylor.

Tumors and excrescences of plants, out of which generally diffusely a vein or a worm, are at first, made such infects which wound the tender buds. Bently.

Excrescent, adj. [excrescent, L.]

That which grows out of another with preternatural superfluity.

Exurge the whole, or leap the excrescent parts of all, our veins have erected artes.

Then see how little the remaining fuel, which ferc'd the path, and mulct the times to come. Pope.

Excrescence, n. f. [excrecens, L.]

1. Separation of animal substance; ejecting somewhat quite out of the body, as of no further use, which is called excrescence.

Quincy.

The symptoms of the excrescence of the bile vitiated are a yellowish skin, white head faces, foolish appetite, and inviolat out.

Aubachot on Animals.

2. The thing excrescent. The moss from apple-trees is better than an excrescence. Bacon.

Excrescive, adj. [excrescit, L.]

Having the power of separating and ejecting excrescences.

A diminution of the body happens by the excrescive faculty, excising and evacuating more than necessary. Harvey or Catesby.

Excrementary, adj. [from excruxing.]

Having the quality of separating and ejecting superfluous parts.

Excruciation, n. f.

The instrument of excrescence.

Excrescences of the body are nothing but tender blisters of the stumps, deriving an appropriated juice from the blood. Catesby.

Excrescible, adj. [from excrescens.]

Liable to torment. Ditto.

To excruciating, t. a. [excruciatus, L.]

To torture; to torment.

And here my heart long time excrescent.

Amphictyon leaves I read all that night. Chapman.

Leave them, as long as they keep their hardnesses and impatient hearts, to those gnawing and exsanguinating tears, those whips of the Divine Nemesis, that excrecous evanesce even athanasia the mind. Bently.

Excration, n. s. [excassate, L.]

The act of watching all night. Ditto.

To excutiate, t. a. [ex and captus, L.]

To clear from the imputation of a fault. Ditto.

Excrescence. n. s. [excrescens, L.]

The act of watching all night.

Ditto.

To excutiate, t. a. [ex and captus, L.]

To clear from the imputation of a fault.

Bently.

Excursus, n. s. [excursus, L.]

To pass beyond limits; A word not used.

His disfigure was an affright, oft excursing to an orphantia; so his friends, in all his joints to his luggage. Harvy.

Excursion. n. s. [excursus, French; excursion, Latin.]

1. The act of deviating from the flated or destined path; a ramble.

The mule whole early voice thoufand to sing,

Preferr'd her heights, and prund't her tender wing;

Her guide now left, no more attempts to ride, But in low numbers short excursions tries. Pope.

2. An expedition into some distant part.

The mule is off. It is an excrescence beyond the utmost expansion of matter, and makes excrescence into that incomprehensible.

Locke.

3. Progredion beyond fixed limits.

The cause of the flows that excretae of the seashore, into the extremes of cold and heat, are very obscure.

Arbuthnot on Air.

4. Digression; ramble from a subject.

Expect not that I should barge for this excrescence, If I shall give the common, to inoff the bleelight of Christ in heaven.

Boyle.

I am too weary to allow myself any excretae from the main design.

Excursus, t. s. [from excursion, Latin.]

Rambling; wandering; deviating.

But why to far excursion, when at hand

Fair-handed Spring unbids every grace! Thomson.

Excursable, adj. [from excursion.]

Pardonable; that for which some excuse or apology may be admitted. Excusableness, n. s. [from excursable.]

Pardonableness; capability to be excused.

It is not only those of the excretae that finds satisfaction, to procure the ensuing consolation. Boyle.

Excusation, n. f. [from excursus.]

Excuse; plea; apology.

Pretices, excusations, and other speeces of refection he beacouse, though they proceed, to process of modestly, they are bravery. Bacon's Essays.

Goodness to be admired, that it related not his argument in the punishment of his excretae.

Excusatory, adj. [from excursion.]

Pleading excuse; apologatistic; making apology.

To excusatile, t. a. [ex, Latin.]

1. To extenuate by apology.

Bad men excuse their faults, good men will leave unpardoned.

Ben Jonson.

He acts the third crime that defends the first.

2. To disengage from an obligation; remit attendance.

I have bought a piece of ground, and I must needs go and fetch it; I pray thee have me excused, Luke.

I and attended throughout that whole journey, which he was not obliged to do, and no doubt would have been obliged for it. Clarendon.

3. To remit; not to exact; as, to excuse a forfeiture.

4. To weaken or mollify obligation to any thing; to obtain remission.

Nor could the real danger of leaving their dwellings to go up to the temple, excuse their journey. Soub.

5. To pardon by allowing an apology.

O those, whose turn art, excuse the force.

These men have us'd; and O before out cruel! Addison.

Excusant, n. s. [from excursion.]

Without page than Addison's remains. Pope.

5. To throw off imputation by a feigned apology.

Think you that we excuse ourselev toward you? 2 Cor. xi.

7. To justify; to vindicate. This fence is rare.

Excusing or else excusing one another. Rom.

Excuse n. s. [from the verb. The last syllable of the verb is the founded as if written excus, of that, with the vowel of the noun found.

1. Plea offered in extenuation; apology. I was fet upon by some of your servants; whom because I have in my just defense, I came to make my excuse to you. Sidney.

Be gone, I will not hear thy vain excuse; But, as thou lov'th thy life, make speech from hence. Shakespeare.

As good forces admits no examination, so the contrary allows of no excuse, how reasonable or just forever. Raleigh.

I find out some excuse or other for remaining good deaths, 'till our intended recrudescence is cut off. Addision.

2. The act of excusing or apologizing.

Heaven put it in thy mind to take it hence, That those might it's the more thy father's love, Pleading to wisely in excuse of it. Shak., Henry IV.

3. Cause for which one is excused.

Let no vain hope have base. When in sear for such ill poets are without excuse. Reforming Nothing but love this patience could produce; And I allow your rage that kind excuse. Dryden.

Excusless, adj. [from excuse.]

That for which no excuse or apology can be given. The voluntary enlaving myself is excusless.

Decay of Piety.

Excusor, n. s. [from excuse.]

1. One who pleads for another.

In vain would his excuse endeavor to palliate his inomities by imputing them to madness. Swift.

2. One who forgives another.

To excussus, t. a. [excusus, L.]

To feize and detain by law.

The person of a man ought not, by the civil law to possess for a long time the goods and effects that has been first excusus. Aylliffe's Pariament.

Excussio, n. f. [excussus, L.]

Seizure by law.

If upon an excuse there are not goods to satisfy the judgment his body may be attached. Aylliffe.

Excusable adj. [excussable, L.]

Hateful; detestable; accursed; abominable.

For us to change that which he hath established, they hold it excusable pride and presumption. Hooker.

Of the visible church of Jesus Christ there may be, in itself of their outward protection; who, in regard of their inward disposition, are most worthly both hateful in the sight of God himself, and in the eyes of the founder of the visible church more excusable. Hooker.

Give sentence on this excusible wretch, That hast been breeder of thise dire events. Shak.

When Excusible, after an affright.

Through lies, and vrounds, and fears, they fore'd their way. Dryden.

Excusably, adv. [from excuseable.] Cursedly; abominably.

His soul about; his excusably bad; But if they will take it; and if they will mad! Dry.

To excusate, t. a. [excusor, L.]

To curfe; to imprecate ill upon; to abominate.

Extinction of some tyranny, by the indignation of a people, makes way for some form contrary to that which they lastly excusated and detested. Temple.

Excusation.
EXECUTION. n.f. [from execute.] Curie; imprecation.

Mischance and sorrow go along with you,
And threefold vengeance bend upon your steps!
Because you did the execution. Shaksp.

For this we may thank Adam! but his thanks
Shall be the execution. Milton's Paradise Lost.

[Poem continued at another devil, did first on the ground in tokens of execution. Stillingfleet.

EXECUTED, v.t. [exece, Latin.] To cut out; to cut away.

Were it not for the effusion of blood which would follow, the liver might not only be excised, but its office supplied by the fleshy and other parts.

EXECUTION, n.f. [from execute.] The act of cutting out. See EXECUT.

EXECUTE, v. t. [execrare, Latin.]

1. To perform; to practice.

Against all the gods of Egypt I will execute judgment. Exod.

He calls in the balance the remonster of a reward to such as shall execute, and of punishment to such as shall neglect their commission. Acts.

2. To put in act; to do what is planned or determined. Proverbs.

Men may not disable laws, but are bound for ever to use and execute those which God hath declared.

The government here is so regularly disposed, that it always executes itself. Swift.

And never punishment of death against a friend, and had it executed too. Locke.

3. To put to death, according to form of justice; to punish capitally. Romans.

Fifteens was executed under him, or differed into foreign service, for a pretty show of excommunicating. Pope.

Sir William Bremingham was executed for treason. Daven.

O Tyburn, couldst thou reason and dispute,
Couldst thou but judge as an executor,
Often wouldst thou change the felon's doom.
And traits from him chief justice in his room. Dryden.

To put to death; to kill.

The treacherous Babtides wound my peace,
Which with my bare fist I would execute.

If now had hastens, Shakespeare. Henry Vi.

EXECUTER, n.f. [from execute.]

1. He that performs or executes any thing.

My sweet missis,
Weres when the fees me works, and say such blesse.

Ah, how like executors, Shakespeare.

Soprophors and Euniphters, in their most beautiful pieces, are impartial executors of justic justice. Dug.

2. He that is intrusted to perform the will of a testator. In this sense the accent is on the second syllable.

Let's chose executer, and talk of wills,
And yet no fret: for when can we be wise? Shak.

EXECUTOR, n.f. [from execute.]

1. An executory, one who puts others to death. Diffused.

The fall of judgment with his lofty head,Delivers 'er to executors fate.

The lazy yawning drone. Shakespeare's Henry IV.

EXECUTING, n.f. [from execute.]

The office of him that is appointed to perform the will of the defunct.

For the setting up, as well as executing it he works, by which man seemeth to think to be just, although they be not. Bacon.

EXECUTION, n.f. [from execute.]

1. Performance; practice.

When things are come to the execution, there is no lesser comparable. Bacon's Essays.

EXECUTIVE, n.f. [from execute.]

The Roman emperors were possibled of the whole legions at the pleasure of the people. Addison.

Habees, confound the execution of the public power, though all well intented states have ever been subject to different [from execute.]

EXECUTIVE, adj. [from execute.]

1. Active; not deliberative; not legislative; having the power to put in act the laws.

The Roman emperors were possibled of the whole legions at the pleasure of the people. Addison.

Habees, confound the execution of the public power, though all well intented states have ever been subject to different [from execute.]

EXECUTIVE, n.f. [from execute.]

A woman intrusted to perform the will of the testator.

He did, after the death of the earl, buy of his executor, the remainder of the term. Bacon.

EXECUTISIS, n.f. [executisus.] An explanation.

EXECUTICIAL, adj. [executisal.] Explanatory; expository.

We have here and there interposed some critical and exegetical notes, fit for learners to know, and not unfit for some teachers to read. Walker.

EXECUTARIAL, m.f. [executorial, Latin.] A pattern; an example to be imitated. The idea and exemplar of the world was first in God. Bishops. They began at a known body, a barbarous weight whereof is therefore called a grand; which, being multiplied to seruples, drachmes, ounces, and pounds, to such a height, that they happen to be taken, are fixed by authority, and exemplar of them publicly kept. Holder. If he intends to murder his prince, as Cromwell did, he must persuade him that he resolves nothing but his safety, as the fame grand exemplar hypocrisy did before. South.

EXECUTATORY, adj. [from exemplar.]

Philips. Of Phoebus.

EXECUTATORYLY, adv. [from exemplar.]

1. In such a manner as deferves imitation.

How is he exemplary loyal in a high exact obedience. Hengel.

2. In such a manner as may warn others.

Some he punisht exemplarily in this world, that we might from thence have a tale or glimmer of his future justice. Hooksett.

If he had that common house, whilst their champions, were exemplarily punished, their jurisdiction would probably in a short time be the same as the world. South.

EXECUTATIONAL, n.f. [from exemplar.]

State of flandling as a pattern to be copied.

In Scripture we find several titles given to Christ, which import his exemplar, as of a prince and a captain, a mether and a guide. Tholomew.

EXECUTARY, adj. [from exemplar.]

1. Such as may deferve to be proposed to imitation, whether persons or things.

The archbishops and bishops have the government of the church: be not you the means to prefer any to their places; but our church is established in its laws and worth: their lives and dignities ought to be exemplary of all, that their names may be remembered and adored. Bacon.

EXECUTATION, n.f. [from exemplar.]

1. All these were exemplary in the conduct of their lives, religion would receive much encouragement. Swift.

EXECUTION, n.f. [from execute.]

1. Such as may attract notice and imitation.

Awakening, therefore, as who long had dream'd;
MUCH of my women and their gods, atm'd,
From this as of exemplary vice.

Retire'd, as some might did my thoughts, to rise,

When any duty is fallen under a general disn like, and equals, in such a case the most visible and exalted performance is necessary: this is the execution of the sentence.

EXEMPLE, n.f. [from exemplar.]

A copy; a transcript.

An ambassador of Scotland demanded an exemplification of the articles of peace. Hayward.

A law of vice as such, a delighting in for its own sake, is in imitation to a more exemplification of the malice of the devil.

To EXEMPLIFY, v. t. a. [from exemplar.]

1. To illustrate by example.

This might be exemplifid even by heads of rites and ceremonies, more particular in the greater part of the Christian world. Hooksett.

Our author has exemplified his precepts in the very precepts themselves. Spinoza.

A late may be exemplified by pictures, characters, and examples. Pope.

EXECUTION, n.f. [from execute.]

A
EXERCISES, n. s. [exercitium, Latin.]

1. Labor of the body; labour considered as conducive to the cure or prevention of diseases.

2. Something done for amusement.

3. Habitual action by which the body is formed to gracefulness, air, and gentleness.

4. Preparatory practice in order to skill.

5. Use; actual application of any thing.

6. Practice; outward performance.

7. Employment.

8. Talk; that which one is appointed to perform.

9. Act of divine worship, whether public or private.

To EXERT, v. a. [exercitare, Latin.]

To use with an effort; to use with ardour and vehemence.

To exert; to push to an effort. With the reciprocal pronoun.
To EXHAUST. v. a. 1. To drain; to diminish; to deprive by draining.

Single men be many times more charitable, because their means are less exhausted.

Bacon.

2. To draw out totally; to draw 'till nothing is left.

Though he knowledge they have left us be worth our study, yet they exhausted not all its treasures: they left a great deal for the industry and sagacity of after-ages.

Wycherley.

To EXHASTE. n. f. [from exhaught.] The act of drawing or draining.

Exhaustless. adj. [from exhaust.] Not to be emplotted; not to be all drawn off; inexhaustible.

Of heat and light, what everthing dors Brought from the suns exhausht gold stores, Through golden immersion of intervening air. Enrich the earth, and every los repair. Blackmore.

To EXHIBIT. v. a. [exhibit, Latin.] 1. To offer to view or use; to offer or propose in a formal or public manner.

If you commit acts of injustice, they should exhibit their petitions in the street. Shenck.

He suffered his attorney-general to exhibit a charge of high treason against the earl. Clarendon.

2. To show; to display.

One of an unfortunate constitution is perpetually exhibiting a miserable example of the weakness of mind and body.

Pope.

Exhibiter. n. f. [from exhibit.] He that offers any thing, as a petition or charge, in a public manner.

He is so indifferent, or rather varying more upon our part, Than cheering the exhibitors against us. Shaksp.

Exhibition. n. f. [from exhibit.] The act of exhibiting; display; setting forth.

What are all mechanism works, but the sensible exhibition of mathematicals demonstratious? Grew.

To EXHALE. v. a. [exhalo, Latin.] 1. To send or draw out in vapours or fumes.

You light is not daylight, I know it well! It is some movement that the fast exhales.

Shaksfp.

To be so this night a torch-bearer. Shaksp.

I flattered myself with the hopes that the vapour had not quite cleared away the temple.

Dryden.

2. To draw out.

See, dear Henry's wounds Open their congealdmouths, and bleed afresh! Rhyth, blush, thou lamp of foul deformity; For thy sake pleasure that this blood-dealing. From cold and empty veins, where no blood dwells! Shaksfp.

Exhalemn. n. f. [from exhale.] Matter exhaled; vapour.

No wrinkled amber, although it send forth a gusts and corporal exhalations, he found a long time деfensive upwards the exacted fccles.

Brown.

To EXHAUST. v. a. 1. To drain; to diminish; to deprive by draining.

Single men be many times more charitable, because their means are less exhausted. Bacon.

2. To draw out totally; to draw 'till nothing is left.

Though he knowledge they have left us be worth our study, yet they exhausted not all its treasures: they left a great deal for the industry and sagacity of after-ages.

Wycherley.

Exhaustless. adj. [from exhaught.] Not to be emplotted; not to be all drawn off; inexhaustible.

Of heat and light, what everthing dors Brought from the suns exhausht gold stores, Through golden immersion of intervening air. Enrich the earth, and every los repair. Blackmore.

Exhibit. v. a. [exhibit, Latin.] 1. To offer to view or use; to offer or propose in a formal or public manner.

If you commit acts of injustice, they should exhibit their petitions in the street. Shenck.

He suffered his attorney-general to exhibit a charge of high treason against the earl. Clarendon.

2. To show; to display.

One of an unfortunate constitution is perpetually exhibiting a miserable example of the weakness of mind and body.

Pope.

Exhibiter. n. f. [from exhibit.] He that offers any thing, as a petition or charge, in a public manner.

He is so indifferent, or rather varying more upon our part, Than cheering the exhibitors against us. Shaksp.

Exhibition. n. f. [from exhibit.] The act of exhibiting; display; setting forth.

What are all mechanism works, but the sensible exhibition of mathematicals demonstratious? Grew.

Exhalation. n. f. [from exhale.] The act of exhaling or sending out in vapours; abstraction.

The state of boiling; tumultuous heat; effervescence; ebullition.

Sapber in is operation a cold body: physicians and chymists give it in fevers, to allay the inward evaporation of the blood and humour.

Shaksfp.

Exhalation. n. f. [from exhalo.] The state of being, or finding yourself to be, in a corrupt bone from the found part. A term of chirurgery.

Our work went on successfully, the bone exhalating from the edges. Wycherley's Surgery.

Exhalative. adj. [from exhalo.] That which has the power of procuring exhalation.

Drew the bone with the milder exhalatives, till the burnt bone is call off. Wycherley's Surgery.

Exhalable. adj. [from exhale.] That which may be evaporated or exhaled.

No natural exhalation in the sky. No scope of nature, no cuttaneous vapours. But they would pluck away its natural cause, And call them morts, prodigies, and signs.

Shakespeare.

Moving in so high a sphere, and with so rigorous a lade, he must needs, as the fans, raise many visible exhalations; which, condens'd by a popular odium, are capable to cast a cloud upon the brightest merit and integrity.

A fabric huge Role like an exhalation, with the sound Of dulcet symphonies and voices sweet. Milton.

Milton.

Of a earth be often seen, where there being quantities of exhalations within those mines, or cavernous passages, that are capable of raising flames, inflammation.

Burn.

The growing twurs like exhalation rise, And the huge column leaves into the skies. Pope.

To EXHALE. v. a. [exhalo, Latin.] 1. To send or draw out in vapours or fumes.

You light is not daylight, I know it well! It is some movement that the fast exhale.

Shakespeare.

To be so this night a torch-bearer. Shakespeare.

I flattered myself with the hopes that the vapour had not quite cleared away the temple. Dryden.

Fear freezes minds; but love, like heat; Exhales the foulsublime to seek her native seat. Dryden.

2. To draw out.

See, dear Henry's wounds Open their congeald mouths, and bleed afresh! Rhythm, blush, thou lamp of foul deformity; For thy sake pleasure that this blood-dealing. From cold and empty veins, where no blood dwells! Shakespeare.

Exhalation. n. f. [from exhale.] Matter exhaled; vapour.

No wrinkled amber, although it send forth a gusts and corporal exhalations, he found a long time defensive upwards the exacted fccles. Brown.
EXO

that they will grasp at all, and can form no scheme

EXORCIST, n. [exorcist, Latin.] To deviate ; to go out of the EXORCIST, n. f. [exorcist, Latin.] To adjure ; to adjure by some holy name.

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] The form of

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body

EXORCISM, n. s. [exorcism, Latin.] A body
EXP.

EXPECTATION. n. f. [expectatio, Latin.]
1. The act of expecting.

The trees
Should have borne men, and expectation fainted,
Longaing for what it had not.
Shaksp.

That are within the note of expectation,
Already are [th'] court.
Shaksp.

Its expectation makes a bleeding dear.
Cong.

2. The state of expecting either with hope of fear.

Live in a constant and serious expectation of that day, when we must appear before the Judge of heaven and earth.
Rogers’s Serm.

3. Gift or quality of any good to come.

My soul, wait thou only upon God; for my expectation is from him.
B. .

4. The object of happy expectation; the Messiah expected.

Now clear I understand.
What oft my steadfast humours have search’d in vain,
Why our great expectation should be call’d
The Seed of woman.
Milton’s Paradise Lost.

5. A state in which something excellent is expected from you.

How free it will be for you, born to be a great prince,
and of so rare not expectation but proof,
To divert your thoughts from the way of goodness.
Sidney.

You first came home
From travel with such hopes as made you look’d on
By all men’s eyes, a youth of expectation.
Please’d with your growing virtue I receiv’d you.
Grau.

EXPECTER. n. f. [from expect.]
1. One who has hopes of something.

There are not great expecters under your administration, according to the period of government.
Swift.

2. One who waits for another.

Signify this loving Interview
To the expectors of our Trojan part.
B. .

To EXPECTORATE. v. a. [see and pellet. Latin.] To ejeft from the breast.
Excrementitious humours are expelld by a cough after a cold or an asthma.
Harvey.

Morbific matter is either attened as to be returned into the channels, or expelld by coughing.
Harvey.

EXPECTORATION. n. f. [from expectorate.]
1. The act of discharging from the breast.

2. That discharge which is made by coughing, as bringing up phlegm, or any thing that obtrudes the vesels of the lungs, and irritates the brain.
With water, vinegar, and honey, in pleurises and infammations of the lungs, hemispheres, for promoting expectoration. Arbuthnot in Allmick.

EXPECTORATIVE. adj. [from expectorate.]
Having the quality of promoting expectoration.
Symps and other expectoratives, in coughs, must more particularly occasion greater coughs.
Harvey.

EXPECTATORY. n. f. [from expectant.]
1. Finnes; propriety; suitableness to an end.

Solemn dedication of things set apart for Divine Worship, could never have been universally practis’d, and not right prais’d; and therefore the high expediency and great use of such praifes.
Swift.

2. It is used in Shakespeare for expediency;
adventure; or attempt.

Let me hear
What ye would have our council do decree
In forwarding this desperate purpose.
B. .

3. It is also used by Shakespeare for expidition;
hefe; dispatch.

I shall break
The cause of our expidition to the queen,
And get her leave to part.
Shaksp.

EXP.

Eight tall ships, three thousand men of war,
Are making lither with all due expediency.
Shaksp. R. II.

EXPEDIENT, adj. [expeditus, Latin.]
1. Proper; fit; convenient; suitable.

All things are not expedient: in things indifferent there is a choice; they are not always equally expedient.
Hooke.

When men live as if there were no God, it becomes expedient in their estimation to think nothing of religion; and then they endeavour to persuade themselves to Wiltifon.

2. In Shakespeare, quick; expeditious.

Whose life I have flaid, have given him time
To land his legions all as soon as I:
His marches are expedient to this town.
Shaksp.

EXPEDIENTLY. adv. [from expedient.]
1. Speedy; quick; soon done: as, an expedient march.

2. Nimble; quick; swift; acting with ceterity: as, an expedient runner.

EXPEDIOUSLY. adv. [from expedient.]
1. Expeditiously; nimbly; with celerity.

EXPEL. v. a. [expellere, Latin.]
1. To drive out; to force away.

The Lord your God shall expel them from before you, and drive them from your sight.
Jef. xlix. 5.

2. To banish; to drive from the place of residence.

Arms and the man I long, who foreverl by fate,
And haughty Juno’s unrelenting hate.
Expe’d and sail’d I left the Trojan shore.
Dryden.

4. To reject; to refuse.

And would you trample on friendship expel,
Myself would offer to t’ accompany
In this adventurous chaste journey:
Hobbes.

5. To keep off; to exclude; to keep out.

Since the did neglect her looking-glass,
And threw her fun expelling mask away,
The air hath forc’d the roles in her cheeks,
And pinch’d the lily colour of her face.
Shaksp.

Oh that earth which kept the world in awe
Would patch a wall, expel the winter’s flame.
Shakspere.

EXPELLER. n. f. [from expel.] One that expels or drives away.

To Expel, v. a. [expellas, Latin.] To lay out; to expel.

If my death might make this land happy,
I would expel it with all willingness.
Shaksp.

The king of England waited the French king’s country, and thereby caused him to expel such masses as adhered the debt.
Ibyward.

The publick burthens, though they be a good reason for our not expelling so much in charity, yet will not justify us in giving nothing.
Addison.

EXPENSE. n. f. [expensum, Latin.] Cost; charges; money expended.

Hence comes that wild and vast expenses,
That hath endord’d Rome’s virtue chesne,
Which simple poverty first made.
Ben Jonson.

A dead-purposed withivious expense,
Much conf, more care, and most magnificence.
Dryden.

Such provision made, that a country should not want down upon us with a mighty power, afford a supply every where suitable to the necessities and expense of each climate.
Woodwards.

I can fee no reason by which we are obliged to make expense.
Swift.

EXPENSIVE. adj. [expensif, and full.] Costly; chargeable; expensive.

No part of structure is either more expensive than windows or more ruinous.
Watt’s Architecture.

EXPENSLESS. adj. [from expen.s.] Without cost.

A physician may save any army by this frugal and expensive means only.
Milton as Education.

What
EXP

What health promotes, and gives uneasy peace,
Is all expense, and more with ease. Blackm.

EXPENSIVE. adj. [from expense.]
1. Given to expense; extravagant; luxurious.

This and inordinate men are friendly to the established government, as the idle and expensive are dangerous. Temple.

2. Cowardly; requiring expense, as expensive drees; an expensive journey.

EXPENSIVELY, adv. [from expensive.]
With great expense; great charge.

Adam I: by bad experiment I know,
How little weight with thee my words can find. Milton.

EXPEND.

'Till his full man's mind was ignorant of nothing but of sin; or, at least, it rested in the nothing without the fruit of the experiment. South's Sermons.

When we are searching out the nature or properties of any being by various methods of trial, this sort of observation is called experimentum. Bacon.

To EXPERIMENT. v. a. [from the noun.]
1. To try; to search out by trial. Francisco Redi experimented that no putrid flesh will if infected, if all infected be carefully kept from it, produce any. Ray on the Crem.

2. To know by experience.

When the succession of ideas cease, our perception of duration ceases with it, which every one experiences. Locke.

EXPERIMENTAL. adj. [from experiment.]
1. Pertaining to experiment.

2. Built upon experiment; formed by observation.

The experimental testimony of Gallus is most considerable of any, which beheld the comets thereof. Clarendon's History of Flanders.

3. Known by experiment or trial.

We have no other evidence of universal impenetrability, but signifies a large experiment, without an experiment. Newton.

There are so far from being subfertent to atheists, the data of all sorts of experiment in their audacious attempts, that they rather afford an experimental confirmation of the universal deluge. Bentley's Sermons.

EXPERIMENTALLY, adv. [from experiment.]
By experiment; by trial; by experiment; by observation.

The miscarriage being sometimes universal, has made us impart what we have experimentally learned, and our own observations and reflection. Milton.

While the man is under the influence of animation, he is willing to assume those fines which he now experimentally finds attended with such bitter consequences. Roger's Sermons.

EXPERIMENTER. n. f. [from experiment.]
One who makes experiment.

Galileus and Mosevius, two expert experimenters, do think they find this verity by their experiments; but freely the contrary is to be done. Digby.

EXPERT. adj. [expertus, Latin.]
1. Skilful; adroit; intelligent.

Now we will take some order in the town, Placing therein some expert officers. Shakespeare.

Again fairly in the day.
On Floridem's expert breeder;
When the rising fish constrain,
And by conquering speaks her praise. Prior.

2. Ready; dexterous.

The meanest sculptor in th' Italian square.
Can imitate in braies the nail, and hair;
Expert in thighs, and a cunning fool,
Able he parts the parts, but not dispose the whole. Dryden.

They have not the good luck to be perfectly knowing
In the forms of fyllogism, or expert in mode and figure. Locke.

3. Skillful by practice or experience.

fence is rare.
Expert men can execute, and judge of particular, one piece; but the general counsel, and the plots and machinations of affairs, come both from those that are learned.

4. It is used by Pope with of before the object of skill, generally with in.

The fallacious bloom,
Expert of the untried, in debate,
Longchamps of Heaven to guard thy hourly state. Pope's Odyssey.

EXPERTLY, adv. [from expert.]
In a skilful, ready, and dexterous manner.

EXPERIMENTATION. n. f. [from experiment.]
Skill; readiness; dexterity.

What his reputation, what his value, honesty, and experiments in war. Shakespeare.

This array, for the expediency and value of the soldiers, was thought sufficient to have met the greatest army of the Turks. Kneller's History.

EXPATRIATE. v. a. [from expatriate.]
1. To annul the guilt of a crime by subsequent acts of piety; to atone for.

Strong and able petly souls, in true pienience, impartially compel to expatriate their crimes by their unifying labours in f mUltiit and to hopeful a work.

For the curse of this dis ease a humble, fritious, heartly repentance is the only physic; not to expel the guilt of it, but to qualify us to partake of the benefit of Christ's atonement. Ray.

2. To avert the threats of prodigies.

3. To make reparation for.

The treacher obliged himself to expatriate the injury, to procure some declaration to that purpose, under his majesty's commission to the King Charles.

The more they have hitherto embossed their parts, the more they endeavour to expatriate that unprofitableness by a more careful management for the future. Addison.

EXPIATION. n. f. [from expiate.]
1. The act of expiating or atoning for any crime.

2. The means by which we atone for crimes; atonement.

Low can disower fin, but not remove, Save by one's expiation expiation weak.
The blood of bulls and goats. Milton.

The former part of this poem is but a due expiation for my not serving my king and country in it. Dryden.

Let a man's innocence be what it will, let his virtues rise to the highest pitch of perfection, there will be still in him so many secret fairs, to many hidden frailties, for so many an infant, of ignorance, pawning, and prejudice, so many unguarded words and thoughts, that without the advantage of such an expiation and atonement, as Christianity has revealed to us, it is impossible he should be saved. Addison.

3. Practices by which the threats of ominous prodigies were averted.

'Upon the birth of such monsters, the Gracians and Romans did use divers forts of expiation, and to go about their principal cities with many solemn ceremonies and sacrifices.

The most frequent was.
EXPIATORY. adj. [from expiate.]
Having the power of expiation or atonement.

His voluntary deaths for others prevailled with God, and had the force of an expiatory sacrifice. Hooker.

EXPONENTIAL. n. f. [from expiat.]
Robbery; the act of committing wlice upon land to the loss of the heir.

EXPERSION. n. f. [from expir.]
That act of respiration which thwarts the air out of the lungs, and contrains the cavity of the breath.

Quinity.

In all expiration the motion is outward, and therefore rather driven away the voice than drawn back. Boizen's Latin.

Of an inhalation of the diaphram, the first moments are a violent fever, and a most exquisite pain increases upon insuffation; by which it is distinguished from a pleurisy, in which the greatest pain is in expiration. Aubertin on Diet.

2. The last emission of breath; death.

We have heard him breathe the groan of respiration. Kambler.

3. Evaporation; act of fuming out.

4. Vapour; matter expired.

Words of this fort resemble the wind in fury and impetuousness, in transitiveness and sudden expiration. Decay of Piety.

Climate is warmer than open air; as the cause of cold is an expiration from the earth, which in open places is stronger. Bacon's Nat. Hist. II.

2. The
The definition of any thing to which life is figuratively ascribed.
To lascivious of its expiration we darkened the room, and in vain endeavoured to discover any spark of fire.

6. The consumption of any limited time.
To fill the expiration of your mouth,
You will return and journey with my father,
Defiling half your train, come then to me.

This he did in a fortnight after the expiration of the treaty of Utrecht.

To EXPLAIN. v. a. [explorare. Latin.]
1. To breathe out.
To love his body from the forthing fire,
Which he from hellish extralud did expire.

To EXPLAIN. v. a. [explefum, compound
Somj. matter,
'Siuift.
A added
To EXPLAIN. v. a. [explorare. Latin.]
1. To unfold; to expand.
They explicate the leaves, and rison food
For the fall of labourers of the mulberry wood.

2. To explain; to clear; to interpret.
They do not understand but that part of Christian philosophy which explications the secret nature of this divine sacrament.

To EXPLAINATION. n. f. [from explicate.]
The act of opening; unfolding or expanding.

3. The act of explaining; interpretation; explication.
The church preaches, first publishing by way of technology, the things of men to one another.
Shall or shuch a purchase.

To EXPLAINATORY. a. [from explicate.]
Hence the fable of an ox.

To)(.—

To EXPELLER. n. f. [from expulere.]
An aider; one who drives out an object or thing with open contempt.

To EXPULION. n. f. [from expulere.]
A design accomplished; an achievement; a successful attempt.

To EXPLODE. v. a. [explodere. Latin.]
To explain, to disclosing; to make clear.

To EXPLODE. v. a. [explodere. Latin.]
To explain, to disclose; to make clear.

To EXPLOSION. n. f. [from explodere.]
A design accomplished; an achievement; a successful attempt.

To EXPLANATI? n. a. [explorare.]
To search; examination.

To EXPLANATION. n. f. [from explain.]
The act of explaining; interpretation.

To EXPLANATORY. adj. [from explain.]
Containing explanation.

That the printer given me notice, I would have printed the names and write explanatory notes.

Swift.
EXPLOREMENT. n./ [from explore.] Search; trial.

The frustrated search of Porta, upon the exploration of many, could scarce find one. Brown.

EXPOSITION. n./ [from explode.] The act of driving out anything with noise and violence.

Those parts which abound with flrats of dones, or masole, making the strongest opposition, are the most furiously shattered, an event observable not only in this, but all other expositions whatever, if they are properly used.

To gunpowder the charcoal and sulphur eafily take fire, and set fire to the nitre; and the spirit of the nitre being thereby rati cated into vapour, ruffles out with the expanfion, in a manner that the vapors of water ruffs of an escorial: the sulphur also, being volatile, is converted into vapours, and augments the explufion. Neufuaus Vap. 7.

With expanfion Vap.

The thunder raifes his tremendous voice. Thomson.

EXPLOSIVE. adj./ [from explode.] Driving out with noise and violence.

These minerals conftitu in the earth a kind of natural gunpowder, which takes fire; and by the affifiance of its explosive power renders the rock fcorer.

Woodward.

EXPONENT. n./ [from exponent.] The exponent or proportion between any two numbers or quantities is the exponent when the antecedent is divided by the consequent: thus 4 is the exponent of the ratio which thirty is to forty; and it is a rank of numbers in arithmetical proportion, beginning from o, and passed over a rank of numbers in geometrical proportion, are called the exponents: and in this is founded the reason and demonftration of logarithms, for a division and subtraction of these exponents answers to multiplication and division in the geometrical numbers.

Harrington.

EXPERTIAL. adj./ [from exponent.] Exponential curves are such parts both of the nature of algebraic and transcendental ones. The parts of the former, because they conflict with a finite number of terms though these terms themselves are indeterminate; and they are in some measure transcendental, because they cannot be algebratically conjoined.

Harrington.

To EXPERT, v. a. [experts, Latin.] To carry out a country, generally in the way of traffic.

Glorious followers train beasts for want of fancy, and export honour from a man, and make him a sort of written in every grave.

Edward III. by his encouragement of trade, turned the scale too much in favour of English merchants than, by the import of trade taken in his time, the exported commodities amounted to two hundred ninety-four thousand pounds, and the import to thirty-eight thousand. Addif. Frech.

Great ships brought from the Indies precious wood, and exported pears and rubies. Arab. Stat.

EXPORT. n./ [from the verb.] Commodity carried out in traffic.

EXPORTATION. n./ [from export.] The act or practice of carrying out commodities into other countries.

The cause of a kingdom's thriving is fruitfulness of flow of produce, not only for the consumers, but for exportation into other countries.

Exporters. n./ [from export.] He that carries our commodities, in opposition to the importer, who brings them in.

Money will be melted down, or carried away in both, the silver, whether the pieces of each species be the law of the land.

To EXPOSE. v. a. [expose, exposition, Lat. exposere, French.] 1. To lay open; to make liable.

Like Philean Pomp

Expos'd they find the marble's feel

Then thou may'st make the superfus't to them.

And flew Heaven's light.

Shakespeare's King Lear. Vol. 1.

Who here

Will envy whom the higheft place expof'd

Foremoft in fand against the Thunderer's aim.

Milton.

To pass the ripen period of his age.

Adding his part upon a crowded stage,

To telling tales of joy, and endless care

To open dangers, and to scarce fmalms.

Prior.

To put in danger of any thing.

But till he held his purpose to depart;

Far as he faw her equal to his life,

He would not to the laft expofe his wife. Dryden.

3. To lay open; to make bare; to put in a state of being open, clear, and evident.

Then joyful birds frequent the lonely groves,

And beftia, by nature strong, renew their love;

Then folds the blades of burn'd corn dillife.

And when the many western blow.

Earth to the breath her bosom dyes expof'd. Dryden.

4. To lay open, to censure or ridicule; to throw in such a state as brings contempt.

Like Horace, you only expofe the fables of men, without arraigning their veices. Dryden, from. Duke.

Tully has just expof'd a precept, that a man should live with his friend in fuch a manner that he should become his enemy, it should not be in his power to hurt him. Addison's Spectator.

A fool might once himfelf alone expof'd.

Now one in verse makes many more in prose. Pope.

Your very own in fuch a furious alikely, you are at once expof'd and plundered. Pope.

5. To lay open to examination.

Those who feel truth only, freely expofe their principles to the test, and are pleased to have them examined.

Lack.

6. To put in danger.

The expofing himfelf notably did change the fortune of the day, when his troops began to give ground.

Clarendon.

7. To call out to chance.

A father, unnaturally carelful of his child, gives him to another man, and he again expofes him: a third man taking him, breaks up and provides for him as his own.

Helps and aiding on a woman's tones,

To be expof'd or read as the may pleafe,

Feel her negligent, and pine for her discredit.

Prior.

8. To censure; to treat with difpreaf. A colloquial abufe of the word.

A little wit is equally capable of expofing a beauty, and of abusing a fault. Addison's Spectator.

EXPOSITION. n./ [from exponent.]

1. The situation in which any thing is placed with respect to the fun or air.

Water he chufes clear, light, without tafte or smell; drawn from springs with an eafily expofition.

The divifion of expofition of the feveral kind of fubfcance in this country, whereby fome receive the rays of the fun fooner, and others later, will occafion great irregularity as to the time of hiving. Ardcin.

2. Explanation; interpretation; [from expound, exposive, Latin.]

My lord of York, it better then'd you with.

When that your flock, adorned by the bell

Environed you, to bear with reverses.

With expofition on the holy texts. Shak. Hen. IV.

You are a worthy judge;

You know her, your old relation

Hath been most founfd.

Shakef, Merch. of Ven, I have sometimes very boldly made fuch expofition of my author, as no commentator will forgive me.

3. A mirth-moving jest.

Which, according to conftant expofition,

Delivers in fuch a manner, that it may as well be the idea of a monftrous fplendid

This by Caphurnaum's dam is fignified.

And this way you have well expoun'd it. Shak.

He expounded unto them in all the Scriptures the things concerning himfelf. Luke, xxiv. 45.

That right holy father, as in matters of faith they are not to make two but religiously expounded it; so in matters of ecclesiatical government, they did not create provinces, but ordered the countries they then had.

4. To examine; to lay open; a Latin term.

He expounded both his pockets.

And found a watch with rings and latches. Halib. Exponent. n./ [from expound.]

Interpretor.
The power of expression, or representation by words.

A word has all the expression that words can give: it was here that Virgil strained hand to outdo Lucretius.

Expressly, adj. [from expres]. In direct terms; plainly; not by implication; not generally.

It doth not follow, that of necessity we shall fail, unless we expressely set down in Scripture, or else plainly thereby to be gathered.

Express宲y, adv. [from expres]. Conclusively; the set of taking by assent.

The representation of Virtue he could never accomplish.

Said.
EXPULSION. n.f. [expiicat, Latin.] To drive out; to expel; to force away. [For ever should they be expelled from France.]

There were expulsions of animadversions, where., by we might strike out great numbers of hidden, quiet, and undervalued things, which, with more safety attempt their reasons.

EXQUISITE. adj. [exquisset, Latin.] Fabfert; excellent; consummate; complete.

His absolute excellence they imitate by tending unto that which small exsquisite in every particular.

Why should the rate be troubled with this medleth, charge of keeping and maintaining to great extent in farce, cutting mouths? Adam and Eve, before the fall, were different species; and none but a poet of the most unfounded judgment, and the most exquifite judgment, could have firft their conversion and behavir to their rate of innocence.

The pleasures of fene are probably enlightened by being placed in the pursit or defign in the use of them.

EXQUISE, f. [from expulfe.] A saving out; an extinguition; an effufion.

They were made to be extinguished by expulfind to the ftrikes of the ear, and to the Italian verb expellar.

Exchange me for a goat, and I will teach thee the fensations of my fould, to urge expellate and blown fomewhile.

EXPUFFATION. n.f. [expufla, Latin.] A blast working underneath.

Of relativity, the moft degree is when it will fly away without returning; the next is when it will fly upon the helm, by a kind of exhaustion, without vapouring.

EXPU SESSION. n.f. [expuflas, Latin.] A blast working underneath.

That part of the teeth which is exceed above the gum is asked, and not involved with that f敏感 membrane called plethom, where the other bones are covered.

If a body have part of it extend, and part of it immersed in fluid, to which both the immeafure, and equal in fluid to that part, equal part shall be equal in gravity to the whole.

2. Publick; not suppressed.

The drift of the continued weekly bills of morta, or charity, begins the twenty-ninth of December, 1661.

EXPLICATIVE. adj. [explicare, See EXPTA.

EXPLANATION. n.f. [explanare, Latin.] To explain; to difpafs; to make known; to unfold in the face of the firft, the moft exquifite and fervile.

The poetry of opera is generally as exquifite as the music is good.

EXQUISENESS. n.f. [from exquifite.] Nicety; perfection.

We find in the ingenious defcriptions of the two places, that are fo exactly flat and smooth, that no air at all can come between them; and experience has informed us, that it is extremely difficult to procure from our ordinary tradesman either plates or masks for making as approaching such an exquifite.

EXCRIPT. n.f. [excripium, Latin.] A copy; a writing copied from another.

EXCIANT. adj. [from exciate.] Drying; having the power to dry.

Some are moderately moist and requisite to be treated with medicines of the like nature, as fishy parts; others dry in themselves, yet require exciation, to make them fit for such uses.

To EXCIication, n.f. [exciare, Latin.] To dry.

If in a diffolution of fiold a fiaporation of parts be made by precipitation, or exratio, the exceding powder acquires not unto the touch.

Great heats and droughts excipate and make the moisture and vegetative nature of the earth.

EXICACIA, n.f. [from excipere.] The act of drying.

That which is converted, by excipation, or evaporation of humidity, will be reduced by humiliation; as earth, die, and clay.

EXCICTION. n.f. [from excipere.] A discharge of fibula by fpitting.

The act of fucking out, or dripping out, without immediate contact of the power of fucking with the thing fucked.

If you open the valve, and force up the facker, after this full expiration, you will drive out almost a gallon of fwater.

Bacon.

EXPUFFATION. n.f. [expufla, Latin.] A weiting out; an extinguition; an effufion.

They were made to be extinguished by expulfind to the ftrikes of the ear, and to the Italian verb expellar.

Exchange me for a goat, and I will teach thee the fensations of my fould, to urge expellate and blown fomewhile.

EXPUFFATION. n.f. [expuflas, Latin.] A blast working underneath.

Of relativity, the moft degree is when it will fly away without returning; the next is when it will fly upon the helm, by a kind of exhaustion, without vapouring.

Bacon.

EXPU SESSION. n.f. [expuflas, Latin.] A blast working underneath.

That part of the teeth which is exceed above the gum is asked, and not involved with that f敏感 membrane called plethom, where the other bones are covered.

If a body have part of it extend, and part of it immersed in fluid, to which both the immeafure, and equal in fluid to that part, equal part shall be equal in gravity to the whole.

2. Publick; not suppressed.

The drift of the continued weekly bills of morta, or charity, begins the twenty-ninth of December, 1661.

EXPLANATION. n.f. [explanare, Latin.] To explain; to difpafs; to make known; to unfold in the face of the firft, the moft exquifite and fervile.

The poetry of opera is generally as exquifite as the music is good.

EXQUISENESS. n.f. [from exquifite.] Nicety; perfection.

We find in the ingenious defcriptions of the two places, that are fo exactly flat and smooth, that no air at all can come between them; and experience has informed us, that it is extremely difficult to procure from our ordinary tradesman either plates or masks for making as approaching such an exquifite.

EXCRIPT. n.f. [excripium, Latin.] A copy; a writing copied from another.

EXCIANT. adj. [from exciate.] Drying; having the power to dry.

Some are moderately moist and requisite to be treated with medicines of the like nature, as fishy parts; others dry in themselves, yet require exciation, to make them fit for such uses.

To EXCIication, n.f. [exciare, Latin.] To dry.

If in a diffolution of fiold a fiaporation of parts be made by precipitation, or exratio, the exceding powder acquires not unto the touch.

Great heats and droughts excipate and make the moisture and vegetative nature of the earth.

EXICACIA, n.f. [from excipere.] The act of drying.

That which is converted, by excipation, or evaporation of humidity, will be reduced by humiliation; as earth, die, and clay.

EXCICTION. n.f. [from excipere.] A discharge of fibula by fpitting.

The act of fucking out, or dripping out, without immediate contact of the power of fucking with the thing fucked.
EXT

тин.] Uttered or performed without premeditation; suddenly.

This custom was begun by the spouters out of an ambition of exhibiting their extraordinary ability of speaking upon any subject. More's Divine Dialogues. They who confess to as many diffusers or extemporaneous as possible.

They write in to a diminutive manner, with such frequent interludes, that they are hardly able to go without perpetual hesitations, or extempores.
Swift. Extent.

Extent. ext. [ex tempore, Latin.]

1. Without premeditation; suddenly; readily; without any previous care or preparation.

You may do it extemporaneously, or it is but playing. Shakespeare.

Nothing great is to be ventured upon without preparation; but above all, how faithful it is to engage extemporaneously, where the concern is eternity! South.

But thou no mark at which to bend thy bow! Or, like a boy, portell the carrion-crow with pellets and with stones from tree to tree. A fruitless task, and liveth not the extempora? Dryden.

2. It is sometimes used as an adjective, but very improperly.

I have known a woman branch out into a long extemporization upon a petition. South's Sermons.

To EXTEND. v. a. [extendi, Latin.]

1. To stretch out towards any part.

See the figure of his lifeless friend, and his old stirr, his helpless hand. Dryden: Should 'riving God's altar a vile image stands. beheld his features, and extended his hands. Pope.

2. To amplify; opposed to contract.

It is unanswerable in any use to what liberty they lift in their own manner of writing; but the controlling and extending the lines and tens of others would extend the extemporus. South's Sermons.

To EXTEND, v. a. [extend, Latin.]

1. To stretch out towards any part.

Hath thou no mark at which to bend thy bow? Or, like a boy, portell the carrion-crow with pellets and with stones from tree to tree. A fruitless task, and liveth not the extempora? Dryden.

2. To amplify; opposed to contract.

It is unanswerable in any use to what liberty they lift in their own manner of writing; but the controlling and extending the lines and tens of others would extend the extemporaneous faculty is never more out of its element than in the pulpit; though even here, it is much more executable in a sermon than in a prayer. South's Sermons.

To EXTEND. v. a. [extendi, Latin.]

1. To stretch out towards any part.

Hath thou no mark at which to bend thy bow? Or, like a boy, portell the carrion-crow with pellets and with stones from tree to tree. A fruitless task, and liveth not the extempora? Dryden.

2. To amplify; opposed to contract.

It is unanswerable in any use to what liberty they lift in their own manner of writing; but the controlling and extending the lines and tens of others would extend the extemporaneous faculty is never more out of its element than in the pulpit; though even here, it is much more executable in a sermon than in a prayer. South's Sermons.

To EXTEND, v. a. [extendi, Latin.]

1. To stretch out towards any part.

Hath thou no mark at which to bend thy bow? Or, like a boy, portell the carrion-crow with pellets and with stones from tree to tree. A fruitless task, and liveth not the extempora? Dryden.

2. To amplify; opposed to contract.

It is unanswerable in any use to what liberty they lift in their own manner of writing; but the controlling and extending the lines and tens of others would extend the extemporaneous faculty is never more out of its element than in the pulpit; though even here, it is much more executable in a sermon than in a prayer. South's Sermons.

To EXTEND, v. a. [extendi, Latin.]

1. To stretch out towards any part.

Hath thou no mark at which to bend thy bow? Or, like a boy, portell the carrion-crow with pellets and with stones from tree to tree. A fruitless task, and liveth not the extempora? Dryden.

2. To amplify; opposed to contract.

It is unanswerable in any use to what liberty they lift in their own manner of writing; but the controlling and extending the lines and tens of others would extend the extemporaneous faculty is never more out of its element than in the pulpit; though even here, it is much more executable in a sermon than in a prayer. South's Sermons.
The race of all things here is to exterminate and turn things to be more pneumatical and rare, and not to retrograde from pneumatical to that which is dense.

Extermination, n. f. [from exterminate.]
1. The act of representing things less ill than they are; contrary to aggravation; palliation.
2. Mitigation; alleviation of punishment.
When we are to judge, the kindred inquiry is what decree of charity we can allude in extermination of punishment.
3. A loss of lumpness, or a general decay of the muscular flesh of the whole body. Quirky.

A third sort of marasmus is an extermination of the body, caused through an imperfect heat and dryness of the parts. Harvey.

Exterior, adj. [exterior, Lat.]
1. Outward; external; not intrinsically.
2. What is most, and what life, virtue unyield'd
3. Alone, without exterior help sustain'd.
4. Millen.
5. Sircock and common lovers behold exterior beauties, as children and astronomers consider Galilei's optic glass.
Boyle.
6. Being blackened and moribund, are words used by those who, together with the thing they denominate, imply also something else separate and exterior to the existence of that thing.
Locke.

Extirpation, n. v. [from exterminate.]
1. To root out; to tear up; to drive away; to abolish; to destroy.
2. Unlucky vices, on which the exterminating lot happens.

Alexander left Greek colonies in the Indies; but they were exterminated by Sardanapalus.

Archimedes in Coitus.

This discovery alone is sufficient, if the vices of men did not capitulate their reason, to expel and exterminate rank atheism out of the world. Beattie.

Extermination, n. f. [from exterminate.]
1. Destruction; excision.
2. The question is, what are the means to be used, whether to displating and extermination of people?
Bacon.

Exterminator, n. f. [exterminator, Lat.]
1. The person or instrument by which any thing is destroyed.

Extirpate, v. a. [from exterminate.]
To exterminate; to destroy. Not used.

If you do sorrow at my grief in love,
By giving love, your sorrow and my grief.

Wear both exterminate. Shakespeare. The day like it.

Extern, adj. [externum, Lat.]
1. External; outward; visible.
When my outward action doth demonstrate

The native act and figure of my heart

It is my life; but, one hour after,
But I will wear my heart upon my sleeve.
For daws to peck at. Shakespeare. Othello.

2. Without itself; not inherent; not intrinsic; not depending on itself.
When two bodies are perished one against another, the rare body not being to attain division to the dense, and being not permitted to retire back, by reason of the contrary impelling the parts of the rare body must be forced by Boyle's icy law.

External. adj. [externum, Lat.]
1. Outward; not proceeding from itself; operating or acting from without; opposed to internal.
We come to be affured that there is such a being, either by an internal impulsion of the nature of God upon our minds, or else by such external and visible effects as our reason tells us must be attributed to some cause, and which we cannot attrib.
EXT

1. To draw by force; to force away; to wrest; to wring from one.

2. To gain by violence or oppression.

3. To take from something of which the thing taken was a part.

4. To draw out of any containing body or cavity.

5. The fulness extraordinary; the chief parts drawn from any thing.

6. Extraction; defect; not used.

7. To extract; to make extractions; to extract from one.

8. To force by which any thing is unjustly taken away.

9. To draw out of something.

10. To draw from extractions; to draw from extractions.

11. To draw out of any thing of which the thing taken was a part.

12. To draw out of any containing body or cavity.

13. To take from something of which the thing taken was a part.

14. To draw out of any containing body or cavity.

15. The fulness extraordinary; the chief parts drawn from any thing.

16. Extraction; defect; not used.

17. To extract; to make extractions; to extract from one.

18. To force by which any thing is unjustly taken away.

19. To draw out of something.

20. To draw out of any containing body or cavity.

21. The fulness extraordinary; the chief parts drawn from any thing.

22. Extraction; defect; not used.

23. To extract; to make extractions; to extract from one.

24. To force by which any thing is unjustly taken away.

25. To draw out of something.

26. To draw out of any containing body or cavity.

27. The fulness extraordinary; the chief parts drawn from any thing.

28. Extraction; defect; not used.

29. To extract; to make extractions; to extract from one.

30. To force by which any thing is unjustly taken away.

31. To draw out of something.

32. To draw out of any containing body or cavity.

33. The fulness extraordinary; the chief parts drawn from any thing.

34. Extraction; defect; not used.

35. To extract; to make extractions; to extract from one.

36. To force by which any thing is unjustly taken away.
EXT
only a colloquial barbarism, used for the sake of pronunciation. Extraordinarily.
I ran over their cabinets of models, but don't remember much with any things in it to be extraordinary rare.

Extraordinary, adj. [extra and parroch, Latin.] Not comprehended within any parish.

Extravagant, adj. [extra and pro vincia, Latin.] Not within the same province; not within the jurisdiction of the same province. An extravagont station is not valid, ultra duos diarios, above two days journey; nor is a citation valid that contains many conditions manifestly unreasonable.

Extra, adj. [extra and regular., Latin.] Not comprehended within a rule.
His providence is extravagant, and produces strange things beyond common rules, and he led Israel through a sea, and made a rock pour forth water.

Taylor's Rule of lively.

Extravagancy, n. f. [extravagant, Latin.]
1. Excursion or folly beyond preferred lim.
2. Have troubled you too far with this extravagance: I shall make no delay to recall myself into the road again.

3. Irregularity; wildness.

4. Outrage; violence; outrageous vehemence.

5. The same severity, the same violence, by the wild fury and extravagancy of their own passions; have put their bodies into a combustion, and by furring up their rage against others, have armed this honour against them.

6. Unnatural wanton; bombast.
Some verified of my own Maturin and Almazor, cry vengeance upon me for their extravagances.

7. Wafse; vain and superfluous expense.
She was so expensive, that the income of three dukes was not enough to supply her extravagances.

8. Wandering out of his bounds. This is the prudential fence, but not now in use.

As his warning.
The extravagant and erring spirit bles.
To his confine. Shakes. Hamlet.

9. Reeling beyond just limits or preferred methods
I dare not ask for what you would not grant.

But wits, madam, are extravagant;

If they are not bound with things possible;
I may with more than I presume to tell.

10. Not comprehended in any thing.
Twenty confessions of pope John XXII. are raised the extravagants; for that they were written in no order or method, vagant extra corpus coli.
themini carmin. Asijles Bayes.

11. Irregular; wild.

For. For once, they seem'd
Somewhat extravagant, and wild. Milton's Par. Lest.

There appears something noble, wild and extravagant, in great numbers; intimates more beautiful than rum and polishing. Add. On.

New ideas employed my fancy all night, and composed a wild extravagant dream. Add. On.

12. Waffeal; prodigal; vainly expensively.

There have more men, who has nothing else to recommend him but a false generosity, is often more beloved than a person of a more much admired character, to be laborious, and to use them with this particular care.

Extravagant, n. f. One who is confined in no general rule or definition.
We pay or laugh at these fresh extravagances.

Extraordinary.

There are certain extravagants among people of all ages and professions. L'Estrange.

Extra, adv. [from extravagant.]
1. In an extravagant manner; wildly.
Her passion was extravagantly new;
But mine is much the most extravagant.
Dryden.

2. In an extravagant degree.
Some are found to praise our authors, and others as hastily and extravagantly contradict his admirers.

3. Expensively; luxuriously; wastefully; profusely.

Extravagant, n. f. [from extravagant.]
Excess; excursion beyond limits.

To extravaguate n. a. [extra and vapor, Latin.] To wander out of limits. Dict.

Extravagated, n. f. [from extravagated.]
The act of forcing, or state of being forced out of the proper containing vessel.

The vicious matter, which lies like leather upon the extravasated blood of pleurast people, may be dissipated by due degree, with Artus's on All.

Extravasation, n. f. [from extravagated.]
The act of forcing, or state of being forced out of the proper containing vessel.

Allament, too violent, obstructing the glands, and by its acrimony corroding the small vessels of the loops, after a rupture and extravasation of blood, easily produces an idea.

Abraham's in his study.

Extravagant, n. f. [extra and nana, Latin.]
Let out of the veins.

That there is a magnetick way of curing wounds, by anointing the weapon; and that the wound is effected in like manner, as is the extravasated blood by the sympathetical medicine, as to matter of fact, is with circumstances of good evidence asserted.

Glasse's Seraph.

Extravasation.

n. f. [extra and excavra, Latin.]
The act of throwing out of the state of being thrown out.

Nor does there intervene heat to afford them any colour to proceed that there is made an extravasation of the substances, or of any of the two other fungous principles.

Dryden.

Extra, adj. [extra and regular.] Let out of the veins.

Tale thy tongue detect thy babbin heart Shaks.

EXTREME, n. f. [extremus, Latin.]
1. The utmost point; the highest degree.
He that will take away extreme heat by fettng the body in extremity of cold, shall undoubtedly remove the disease; but together with it the disease too.

Should any one be cruel and uncharitable to this extremity, yet this would not prove that proprety gave any authority.

2. Extravagant; the parts most remote from the middle.
In its proper colour it is inclining to white, excepting the extremities or tops of the wing feathers, which are black.

Dryden's Dunciad.

3. 'Tis the points in the utmost degree of opposition, or at the utmost distance from each other.
It's a man of that strange composition, Made up of all the worst extremities.

Of youth and age.

Dunciad's Sophr.

4. Remotest parts; parts at the greatest distance.
They first fleets out of the Red Sea to the extremities of Ethiopia, and imported quantities of precious goods.

Arab. Peter.

5. Violence of passion.

Why should not the same laws take good effect on that people, being prepared by the sound and brought under by extremity.

Dryden.

With equal measure the mild moderate.

Th'thing extremities of their outrage.

If I knew no colour for my extremities, let me be understood to mean no colour for no circumstance.

6. The utmost violence, tirgour, or distress.

Why should not the same laws take good effect on that people, being prepared by the sound and brought under by extremity.

Dryden.

With equal measure the mild moderate.

And yields her to extremity of time. Faire Queen.

He promised, if they should be defeged, to remove them before they should be reduced to extremity.

Clarendon.

It should be never exposed to the extremity of war, as to fall into the hands of savage friends.

Clarendon.

Hawk.

L with.
EXU

I with peace, and any terms prefer.

Before the fall extramural war. Dryd. Ind. Emp.

7. The most aggravat'd fault.

It had been as if a fforest leaf, after farts, the extremity of foul odour, or rather the judgment that is fallen upon dramatic writers. Dryd. Prof. Clem.

To EXTRICATE, v. a. [extricis, Latin.] To disembarrass; to set free; to get any one in a difficult situation; to disentangle.

We run into great difficulties about free created agents, which reason cannot well extricate itself out of. Locke.

There are reliefs to nature, as they give us an opportunity of extricating herself from her oppressions, and recovering the several tenses and springs of her veils.

EXTRICATION, n. s. [from extricate.] The act of disengaging or disentangling; disentanglement.

Cruel fates a body not properly seat, but such as predominates in brine; and it does not appear, that this acid spirit did as such pre-exist in the air, and yet whence it was extricated, so that we may suppose its air has been made rather by transmutation than extrication.

Boyle.

EXTRINSICAL. adj. [extrinseca Latin.] External; outward; not intimately belonging; not intrinsic.

It is commonly written fo, but analogy requires extrinsic.

A body cannot move, unless it be moved by some extrinsic agent; absurd it is to think that a body, by a quality, in it, can work upon itself. Experiments.

Outward objects, that are extrinsic to the mind; and its own operations, proceeding from powers in it, or proper to it, which, when reflected on by itself, become also objects of its contemplation, are the original of all knowledge.

Locke.

EXTRINSICALLY. adv. [from extrinsic.]

From without.

If to supposse the soul a distinct substance from the body, and extrinsically adventitious, be an error, almost all the world has been mistaken. Glanville.

EXTRINSICK. adj. [extrinseca Latin.]

Outward; external.

When they cannot make the main fort, they try if they can possess themselves of the outworks, raise some prejudice against his most extrinseca adherents.

Gouvernement of the Town. Extrinsic modes are such as arise from something that is not in the subject or substance itself; but it is a manner of being which some substances attach itself to whatever thing external or foreign to the subject; as, this globe lies within two yards of the wall; this man is beloved or hated. Watts.

To EXTRACT. v. a. [extra, extraham, Latin.] To build; to raise; to form into a structure.

EXTRACTOR. n. s. [from extrate.] A builder; a fabricator; a contriver.

To EXTRUDE. v. a. [extrude, Latin.] To thrust off; to drive off; to push out with violence.

If in any part of the continent they found the fettles, they concluded that the sea had been extruded off by the wind. Woodward's Nat. Hist.

EXTRUSSION. n. s. [extrusus, Latin.] The act of extruding or driving out.

They supposse the channel of the sea formed, and mountains and caverns, by a violent depression of the earth, and an extrusion and elevation of others. Burnet.

EXTRUSSION. n. s. [ex du tuber, Latin.] Knobs, or parts protruding; parts that rise from the rest of the body.

The gong takes all the irregularities or extrusions that lie fastened from the axis of the work. Maxwell's Med. Exer.

EXUBERANCE. n. s. [exuberatio, Latin.] Overgrowth; superfluous shoots; useless abundance; luxuriance.

Men effect the overgrowing of all the exuberant parts, and all the promise of the fruitful and comfitulous character. Locke.

Though he expatiates on the fame thoughts in different words, yet in his families that exuberant ever is avoided. Gärch.

EXUBERANT. adj. [exubranus, Latin.]

1. Growing with superfluous shoots; overabundant; superfluously plentiful; luxuriant.

Another Flock there of bold fat hens, Plays o'er the fields, and shows off, with golden hand Exuberantings.

Thomson's Spring.

His families have been thought too exuberant, and full of circumstances. Pope's Preface to the Iliad.

2. Abounding in the utmost degree; luxurious.

Such innocents as such unceaseful wisdom, and such exuberant goodness, as may justly ravish us to an amazement, rather than a bare admiration.

Boyle's Scrapbook's Love.

A part of that exuberant devotion, with which the whole assembly rallied and animadverted one another, catches a reader at the greatest distance of time. Addison's Freeland.

EXUBERANTLY. adv. [from exuberant.]

Abundantly; to a superfluous degree.

A considerable quality of the vegetable matter may be brought to exuberate; to abound to the highest degree.

Boyle's Scrapbook's Love.

EXUCCUS. adj. [exsectus, Latin.] Without juice; dry.

This is to be effect ed not only in the plant yet growing, but in that which is brought exuclidean and dry unto us. Brown.

EXUDATION. n. s. [from exude, Latin.]

1. The act of emitting in sweat; the act of emitting moisture through the pores.

The humour sometimes arise by a general exudation out of the cuts. Hifman's Surgeon.

2. The matter issuing by sweat from any body.

The gum of trees, shining and clear, is but a draining of the juice of the tree through the wood and heart of it, and through the joints, and rock rubies, and such other kinds of jewels, which are yet more refleendent than gums, are the fine exudations of bone. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

If it hath more dew at noon than in the morning, then it is certain that it is an exudation of the herb. Bacon.

Cockswraffle, or woodwaxen, that famious frothy dew, or exudation, or both, is found especially in the seamen of the Mediterranean. Brown.

To EXUDATE. v. n. [exuda, Latin.] To make exude.

To EXUD SCALE; to issue out by sweat.

Some perforations in the part itself, though which the humour included doth exude, may be observed in such as are frets. Brown's Vouge Evo.

The juice of the flowers, are, first, the exprested juice; secondly, a volatile oil, wherein the smell of the plant and the taste of the juice coming from all flowers, the bitter not excepted. Avendun.

To EXUDATE. v. a. To force out, or to exude. To throw out, as by sweat. Brown.

To EXUCERATE. v. a. [excuterato, Latin.]

1. To make fore with an ulcer; to affect with a running or eating sore.

By contempers, applied to any part of the body, touch the bladder and exuderate, if they fly they go on long. Bacon.

That the saliva hath a virtue of macerating bodies, appears by these effects in taking away warts, sometimes exudating the jaws, and rotting the teeth. Ray on the Creation.

The flagrant forum turning scronious, exuderate, and contusses the bowels. A Treatise on Diet.

1. To affect; to corrode; to exude.

EYE

Thoughts, my tormentor, art'd with deadly things, Melt in my joyous spring; my exuberant parts Exscurve, exuberate, and raise Dire inflammation, which no cooling herb Or medicinal liquor can allay. Milton's Agnifery.

EXUCLERATION, n. s. [from exulcerate.]

1. The beginning erosion, which wears away the putrefaction and forms an ulcer.

Quinque.

2. Exacerbat; corroboration.

This exulceration of mind made him apt to take all occasions of contradiction and labor.

EXUCRATOR, adj. [from exulcerate.]

Having a tendency to caufe ulcers.

To EXULT. v. n. [exult, Latin.] To rejoice above measure; to triumph; to be in high exaltation of gladsness.

The whole world did feem to exult that it had occasion of pouring out its grief to be blessing a people. Hooker.

Who might be your mother, That you inflame, exult, and rail, at once Over the worse; ad Shakespeare your like do you.

EXULTANCE, n. s. [from exult, Latin.] Transport; joy; triumph; gladness; exultation.

We have great cause of exultance and joy, God's service being the most perfect freedom. Gro. Temper.

EXULTATION, n. s. [exultans, Latin. Joy; triumph; rapture; delight.

Good effects may grow in each of the people towards other, in them all towards their pastor, and in their pastor towards every one of them; between them daily and interchangeably pacts, in the hearing of God himself, and in the presence of his holy angels, to many heavenly acclamations, exultations, provocations, petitions.

Devotion informs Men with sentiments of religious gratitude, and fills their hearts with inward transports of joy and exultation. Addison's Freeland.

To EXUNDATE. v. n. [exudate, Latin.] To overflow.

EXUDEATION. n. s. [from exudate, Latin.] Overflow; abundance.

It is more worthy the Deity to attribute the creation of the world to the exu'dation and overflowing of his transcendent and infinite goodnesses. Roy.

EXPERABLE. adj. [experabilis, Latin.] Correspondable; superable; vicinable.

EXPERIENCE, n. s. [experirius, Latin.] Overbalance; greater proportion.

Rome hath left variation than London; and on the West side of Rome are seated France, Spain, and Germany, who fire on the forger, and maintain the vigour of the Eastern parts. Brown.

To EXUSCULATE. v. a. [exsalvis, Latin.] To fit it up; to rouze.

EXUSION. n. s. [exsibilis, Latin.] The act of burning up; consumption by fire.

EXUS/A. n. s. [Lat.] Cast skins; cast fields; whatever is thrown off, or fled by animals.

They appear to be only the skin or exu'ise, rather than entire bodies of fifties. Woodward.

EXUS. n. s. [exuid, Latin.] A young hawk just taken from the nest, not able to prepare for itself.

Hannur. An aery of children, little eyas, that cry out. Shakespeare.

EXUSKETUS. n. s. A young hawk maliciously marked hawk of the muket kind. Hannur.

Here comes little Robin.-How now, my eyasmuskeet; what news with you? Shakespeare.

EYEL, n. s. obsolete plural uryes, now eyes. [anglo-english]
EYE
[Ang., Gothic; eaj., Saxon; eej., Dutch; er., Scotch; plur. eres.]

1. The organ of vision; the medium of the sense of sight.

Good rich John 23 you have one eye upon my follies, and the other of your own. I may pass with a refractor off the earth. Shakespeare.

Though clouds enwrapt, upon our watery eyes. Shaks.

That most pure spirit of sense, behold itself. Not going from itself, but ever oppled, Shaks.

He kept him as the apple of his eye. Dea. maxil. to.

As long looking against the sun or fire hasting the eye by distraction; so curious printing in small volumes, and writing of little hands, do the eye by contraction. Dryden.

His own presidence did the crown surpass.

Thus did the rapt spectator.

2. Sight; ocular knowledge.

Who hath bewitched thee, that you should not obey the truth, before whose eye Jesus Christ hath been evidently set forth? Gal. iii. 16.

3. Look, see; survey.

Till thy eye may in the morning's eye.

'Tis but the pale reflex of Cynthia's brow. Shaks.

4. Front; face.

To publish this worthy noble.

Her forehead with her eyes. Shaks.

A pollute of direct opposition, where one thing is in the same line with another.

Now pass'd, on either side, they mimicly take both strife to intercept and guide the wind; but not in the fountain they went back.

To finish all the deaths they left behind. Dryden.

5. Aspect; regard.

Having an eye to a number of rites and orders in the church of England, as marrying with the same, Sunday church-ordered, dignities, and callings, for which they found no commandment in the holy Scripture, they thought by the one only choice of an action to have cut them off.

As in Scripture a number of laws, particular and public, being in force, may not by any law of man be violated; we are, in making laws, to have them.

The man that is tender among you, and very delicate, his eye shall not be evil towards his brother.

He that hath a bountiful eye shall be blessed.

None should be put into either of those compositions, with an eye of favour to their persons, to give them the advantage of circumstance or reputation in the places where they live.

These are intricate difficulties arising from the test itself, as the peculiarities sometimes are the gifts, but has been also been looked upon with as evil eyes at earthquakes. Wordsworth's Nat. Hist.

'Pressing performances have been justly applauded for their wit, which have been written with an eye to this predominant humour of the town.

Addison.

We were the most obedient creatures in the world, when we found our duty, and kept a steady eye on the end for which we were formed. Swift.

In this disposal of my father, I have had an eye to being a wir, and provided that the bridegroom be a man of found judgment. Field.

Bookellers mention the aspect the authors they have printed, and consequently have an eye to their own advantage. Addison.

7. Notice; observation; vigilance; watch.

Not mickle must have an eye to the place where, and to the men amongst them. Sidney.

His Majesty hath call his eye upon you, as ind.

Vol. I.

ing you to be such as you should be, or hoping to make you to be such as he would have you to be.

If the English had driven the frivulous into the countries, where they might have an eye and observation upon them, the truth hath been effectually kept in order. Bacon.

Speaker has followed both Virgil and Theocritus in the charms which he employs for curing Aritomathis's love; but he had also our poet's Cretes in his eye. Dryden.

Misbegotten confidence, and do not try;

But they, and ever keep in are your eye. -Dryden.

After this foolishly he kept a little eye upon him:

This method of teaching children by a repeated practice, under the eye and direction of the tutor, till they have got the habit of doing well, has many advantages. Locke.

8. Opinion made by observation.

She told her husband she was determined to be so bold a eye but his. Shaks.

...Shaks.

The eye of the form of the church of Rome.

Like one of two contending in a prize.

That think beheld some sign in people. Shaks.

And I was as far from meditating as a rain, and was in the eye of the world, from having any preparations for one. Dryden.

Though he in all the people's eyes greyer. Davenant.

You greater appear'd in his retreat. Dunbar.

9. Sight; view, the place in which anything may be seen.

There shall be practise of this and not remain.

Hear sweetest sounds, and play with thimble.

And be, in eye of every ancient.

Worthly by youth and obdience of birth. Shaks.

10. Any thing formed like an eye.

We fee colours like the eye (a peacock's feather), the psyche of other eyes on contrary ways, which looks to the other wise. Newton.

11. Any small perforation.

This Azar has not so much wit as will cut the eye of his own Caddah. Shaks.

Does not our Saviour himself speak of the Impossible difficulty which they are in men's passage to heaven? Do not they make the narrow way much narrower, and make an eye great which leads to life in the straitness of a needle's eye? South.

12. A small catch into which a hook goes.

These parts, if they cohore to one another but by catch, and then they are so distractedly, and put into motion by any external body, as they could, if they were by little hooks and eyes, or other kind of fastenings entangled in one another.

Boyle.

Prune and cut off all your vine shoots to the very root, have one or two of the shoots, to be left with three or four of them. Evelyn's Kats.

The ground indeed is tawny.

With an eye of green in it Shakespeare's Tempest.

Red with the eye of blue makes a purple. Shaks.

The eyes of your understanding being enlightened.

Eph. i.

A gift dith blind, the eye of the wise.

16. To EYE. a. a. [from the nouns] To watch; to keep in view; to observe; to look on; to gaze on.

When they are left in garrison, they are better hide their outcasts than when they are in camp, where they are continually seen by most of men. Speight on Ireland.

Full many a laby

I've eyes with heat scalded.

Shaks. Tempest.

The kitchen Makan pins

Her richest lock came "bout her rocky neck,

Climbing the walls to see him. Shaks. Coriolan.

And the shepherdess, who first saw Modest as morning, when the cloudy eyes

Bald dead thus hail prettiest, adventuous Ege,

And peril great pravok he, who thus than didst'
EYE

Philips,

Pope

Doyle

Aitken's

Eye.

Eye see, eye, eye.

A thing through which light may enter;

Any small perforation for a face to go through.

Sitting the back and fingers of a glove, I made

Eye holes to draw it with.

Wyman's Surgery.

Eyelids. m. s. [eyelids, French, a little eye.] A hole through which light may enter; any small perforation for a face to go through.

Mark when the smiles with amiable cheer,

And tell me wherein ye like it!

When on each eyelid twenty do appear

An hundred graces as in shade to fix.

Spenser's Sonn.

On my eyelid is the shadow of death.

Joyce, xvi. 16.

Fetch me that flower; the herb I owed thee once.

Bacon's Natural History.

At length, the crackling noise and dreadful blaze.

Call'd up some wailing lover to the chase.

Shakespeare.

The Turks have a black powder, made of a mineral called alcohol, which with a fine long pencil they lay under their eyelids, which doth colour black, whereby the white of the eye is set off more white.

Rabelais.

Near all, the crackling noise and dreadful blaze.

Call'd up some wailing lover to the chase.

Shakespeare.

These are the eyes of a man's face,

That yield the peer the fame.

Herrick.

The eye does not see, but the mind.

Milton's Lycidas.

To know wherein the sheep are, not.

Shakespeare.

EYEBALL. n. s. [eye and ball.] The stone of the eye.

EYEBROW. m. s. [eye and brow.] Something offensive to the right.

EYEWIGHT. m. s. [eye and weight.] A servant that works only while watched.

EYEWITNESS. n. s. [eye and witness.] A servant that works only while watched.

EYEWATCH. m. s. [eye and watch.] A servant that works only while watched.

Eye-shot. m. s. [eye and shot.] Sight; glance; view.

I must not think of sharing the booty before I am free from danger, and out of eyeshot from the other window.

Dryden.

I have preserved many a young man from her eyeshot by this means.

Spectator.

Eyewitness. m. s. [eye and witness.] The sight of the eye.

The Lord hath recompenced me according to my eleancens in his eyesight.

2 Sam.
vicious Evelyn's
Wilkin
n. [from the noun.]

1. To feign; to write not truth but fiction. That Saturn's sons rec'd the three-fold reign Of heav'n, of ocean, and deep hell beneath, Of tireless motion rul'd, Prior.

Priam now the tales which falsifying poets tell, That warlike cunning still desires to row!

In Marbury's camp the goddess knows to dwell. Prior.

2. To tell falsehoods; to lie; a familiar use.
He f adder not: I hear the enemy. Shaks. Hen. VI.

To F a b u l e. v. n. [from fabula,] a dealer in fiction; a writer of feigned stories.
To F a b R i C A T E. v. a. [fabricator, Latin.]

1. To build; to construct.
2. To forge; to devise falsely. This fene is counterfeit among the Scythian lenders, for when they suspect a paper to be forged, they say it is fabricate.

F a b r i c a t i o n. n. f. [from fabricate.] The act of building; construction.

This fabrication of the human body is the immediate work of a vital principle, that formeth the first rudiments of the human nature. Hale.

F a b r i c k. n. f. [fabrica, Latin.]

1. A building; an edifice.
There must be an exquisite care to place the columns, set in several stories, most precisely one over another, that to the solid mass belong; to the solid, and the vacancies to the vacancies, as well for beauty as strength of the fabricat. Warton.

2. Any system or compages of matter; any body formed by the conjunction of different parts.
Still wilt you think it strange, that all the parts of this great fabric charge?

To F a b r i c c a t e. v. a. [from the noun.] To build; to construct.
Show what laws of life
The cheeks inhabitants observe, and how Fabric'd their mansions.

F a b u l i s t. n. [fabulis, French.] A writer of fables. Quitting the fabul and the fabulists, be copies Bocca-ciel.
Our bard's fabul and deals in fiction. Gavrl.

F a b u l o u s. adj. [fabulosity, Latin.] Fabulcs of feigned stories; fabulous invention.

In their fabulosity they report, that they had observations for twenty thousand years.

A f a b u l o u s. adj. [fabulosity, Latin.] Feign'd; full of fables, invented tales.
A person terrified with the imagination of spirits, is more reasonable than one who thinks the appearance of spirits fabulous and groundless. Addison.

F a b u l o u s l y. adv. [from fabulous.] In fiction; in a fabulous manner.
There are many things fabulous delivered, and are not to be accepted as truths. Brown's Vulgar. Err.
To FACILITATE, etc. [facilitar, French].
To make easy, to free from difficulty, to clear from impediments.
Choice of the like sort and best prepared metal for the vessel will facilitate the work.
Bacon.
They renewed their assault two or three days together, and planted canvas to facilitate their passage, where they did skirmish, but they felt the valour of the enemy in the attempt.
Though perspective cannot be called a certain rule of far less importance, it was once commonly used in painting, and the same rules are to be applied in perspective as in painting.
What produceth a quantity of animal spirits, necessarily facilitates the animal and natural motions.
A war on the side of Italy would cause a great diversion of the French forces, and facilitate the progress of our arms in Spain. Swift.
Facilitar, n. f. [facilitar, French; facilitate, Latin].
1. Readiness to be performed; freedom from difficulty.
Yet reason faith, reason should have ability To hold these wady things in such proportion. As men may have, provided men are judicious. Pinty could not be derived from this to a more commodious buxins by any motive of profit or facility. Radigues.
A sort upon the Turks is more worthy than upon any other Gentiles, both in point of religion and in point of honour: thus facility and hope of success might invite some other choice.
2. The faculty of forming a dexterity.
They who have studied have not only learned many excellent things, but also have acquired a great facility of profiting themselves by reading good authors and speculating in the light of their own understanding. The facility which we get of doing things, by a custom of doing, makes them often pass us without observation.
Virtuous dexterity; easiness to be perfused to good or bad; ready compliance.
Facility is worse than bribery; for bribes come more and more and more, but if importance or idle respect lead a man, he shall never be so bribed. Bacon.
It is a great error to take facility for good nature, tenderness without discretion, is no better than a more perdurable folly. L'Estrange.
4. Facultes of decease; complaisance; confedence; affability; facility and kindness itself to the man of business with difficulty and reluctancy; but offers himself to the wants of a friend with facility, and all the mistakes and miscarriages of wisdom.
Facunus, adj. [corrupted by Shakespeare from facunus; facinor, facinus, Latin]. Wicked; furious.
To stress, to very strain, that is the brief and the tedious of it; and he of a most furious spirit, that will not acknowledge it. Shakespeare.
Facunus, m. f. [from To face]. An ornamental covering; that which is put on the outside of any thing by way of decoration.
These offices and dignities were but the feelings and fancies of his greatness. Warton.
FAI

Where the credit and money fail, barren alike must do.
1. To be extinct; to cease; to be no longer produced.
Help, Lord, for the godly man ceases; for the faithful fail from among the children of men.

Whether such virtue spent of old now fail'd
More angels to create.

2. To cease; to perish; to be lost.
By the faith of both
And this imperial fabric cannot fall.

For Titan, by the mighty loss disapp'd,
Among the heavens th'immortal fail'd display'd.

3. To die; to lose life.
Had the king in his last sickness fail'd,
Their heads should have gone off.
Shaks. H. VIII.
Both he that helpeth shall fail, and he that is holier shall fall down, and they shall all fail together.

4. To sink; to be born down; to come to an end.
Neither will be always wroth; for the spirit should fall before nor rise:
If. lv. 16.
His works, which in our fall,
For us created, needs with us must fail.
Dependest me.

5. To decay; to decline; to languish.
Let none henceforth seek needless cause to prey
The faith they owe; when earnestly they seek
Such proof, conclude, they then begin to fall.
Milt.

6. To mis; not to produce its effect.
Confider of deformity not as a sign, which is descriptive,
But as a cause which seldom failth in the functions.
Bacon.

All these pleasant regions, whose exalt
Hath this kindred hero, and this re-ascent.
Milton.
This fail was first of all the other kind's misfortunes,
And, five times try'd, has never fail'd of taking.
Dryden.

A persuasion that we shall overcome all difficulties that we meet with in the sciences, and fail them, if we carry us through them
Locke.

He does not remember whether every grain came up or not, but he thinks that very few fail'd.
Milton's设有in.

7. To mis; not to succeed in a deluge; to miscarry.
I am rigged, by oath, if I fail
Of the right cathedral, never in my life

To woos a man in a way of marriage.
Shaks.
At least our generous hath fail'd, which thought
All like himself rebellious.

Milton.
In difficulties of state, the trite reason of failing proceeds from failings in the administration.

Eloge.

8. To be deficient in duty.
Or nature fail'd in me, and left some part
Not proof enough both objects to subsist.

Endeavor to fulfill God's command, and not to cast
As often as you fail of it, and to hope for pardon of him.
Milton.

9. To fail; v. n.
To defer; not to continue to assiult or supply; to disappoint.

The ship was now left alone, as proud lords be when fortune faileth them.
Sydney.
So half thou owest with glee thine honour Blast;
But little may such guilt now actually
If wounded fortune and fortune do not much fail.
Speyer.

There shall be signs in the sun, and the moon, and the stars, men's hearts failing them for terror,
Luk. xxxi. 26.

No could the mud defend
Her face, for fail not thou who she implores.
Milton.
I laugh, when those who at the beard are hold
And vent'n, that if such fail they, shrink and fear.
Milton.

FAI

The pictures drawn in their minds are laid in failing colours, and, if not sometimes refreshed, vanish and disappear.

Narcissus' change to the vain girlish showers,
Who trusts to beauty, trusts the failing role.
Gay.
To fail v. n. To wear away; to reduce to languor; to deprive of freshness or vigour; to wither.
This is a man, old, wrinkled, faded, withered;
And not a maiden, as thus lay'st thou be it.
Shaks.
His palms, tho' under weights they did not list,
Still thrst'd; so Winter could his laurels fade.
Dry.
Reteft anxiety, forlorn despair,
And all the faded family of care.
Garth's Diopyst.

To FUDGE v. n. [figuratively, Saxon; fuglen; fugger, German]

1. To suit; to fit; to have one part confluent with another.
How will this fudge? my master loves her dearly.
And l, poor monster, fond as much on him.
And she, mistaken, gave to do on me.
Shaks.

2. To agree; not to quarrel; to live in amity.
When they thrst'd they never fudge'd.
But only by the ears engag'd;
That dogs that sniff at a bone,
And play together; but none.
Hudibras.

3. To succeed; to hit.
The fox had a fudge; and when he saw it would not fudge, away goes he presently.
L'Épranga.

4. This is a mean word not now used, unlesst perhaps in ludicrous and low compositions.

FACÉS. n. f. [Latin.] Exterments; fettlings after dissipation and infatuation.
Quinty.
To FAG. v. a. [figgare, Latin.] To grow weary; to faint with weariness.
Crexihand with his force till the Italian began to fag, and then brought him to the ground.
Mackenzie.

FAGÆND. n. f. [from fag and end.]

1. The end of a web of cloth, generally made of coarser materials.

2. The refuse, or meaner part of any thing.

In the world's fagend Fargxur.
When they are in the worth of their way, and bat in the fagend of benefactors, they are apt to look not kindly upon those who go before them.
Collin.

FAGOT. n. f. [fagare, Welsh and Armeek.] fages, French.

1. A bundle of ficks bound together for the fire.

About the pife of fages, ficks and hay.
The bellow raised the newly-kindled flame.
Fairfax.

2. Spot for no fages, let thee be know.

Place pitchy barrels on the fatal flame.
Shaks.
Millet or fages have been the rewards of different person, according as they pronounced the confederate cygnets or not.
Husts on the Mind.

3. A bundle of ficks for any purpose.

The Black Prince fild a ditch with fages as successfully as the generals of our armies do it with adze.
Addison.

4. A soldier numbered in the mutter-roll, but not really existing.
To FÆGOR. v. a. [from the noun.] To tug up; to bundle together.
He was too warm on picking work to dwell,
But faged his notions as they fell.
And if they thym'd and ratt'd, all was well, Dyrd.
To FAIL. v. n. [failer, French; fail, Welli. Pezzen.]

1. To be deficient; to cease from former plenty; to fall short; not to be equal to demand or use.

The waters fail from the sea, and the food decayed with and decline.
W. xvi. 11.

Wherefore should not strength and might.

2. Fail there where virtue fails, or weakest prove
Where boldness, though in sight unconquerable, Milt.
FAIN

FAINT. adv. [from the adjective.] Gladly; very deftroyly; according to earnest wishes.
1. Now I would give a thousand forlooghs of fen for an aree of barren ground; I would die a dry death. Shakespeare.
2. Why would'st thou urge me to confus a flame
I long have stifled, and would fain conceal. Addison.
3. Fain would I Raphael's godlike art rehearse,
And shew the immaterial labour in my verse. Addison.
4. These pictures would Fain have a law enacted to lay all men's rights and privileges upon the same level. Swifts.
5. To faint, v. n. [from the noun.] To be faint to perform fondly;
Fainter than fift in his fainting eye,
Wole fopach he counts facility. Spenser on Love.
6. To Fain. v. n. [faint, French.]
1. To decay; to wear or waste away quickly.
2. To lose the animal functions; to sink motionless and senseless.
3. To grow fceeble; to decline in force or courage.
7. Faint heart never won fair lady.
Our faint Egyptians pray for Antony.
8. Faintly, adv. [from faint.] With bent knees in a flight degree, incipient debility.
9. Faintly. n. s. [from faint.] Cowardice; timorous souls; want of courage.
10. Faintly. adv. [from faint.] With bent knees in a flight degree, incipient debility.
11. To faintly. v. n. [from fade.] Timorous; feebly-minded.
12. Faintly. adv. [from faint.]
1. Feeably; languidly.
2. Not in bright colours.
3. Without force of representation.
4. Without strength of body.
5. With his lord's tongue he faintly licks his prey.
6. Not viciously; not actively.
7. Without the sense of English, like pale ghosts, Faintly believe us one hour in a month. Shaksp.
8. Timourously; with dejection; without force.
9. Lach was the ape, though prattled to adventure.
10. Faintly the falt goes into his work to enter. Hub. Tart.
11. Faintly now declines the fainter life;
So he is more tormented than his life. DunAW.
12. Languor; feebleness; want of strength.
13. If the prince of the lights of heaven, which now as a giant doth turn his universal courts, should through a languishing faintness begin to flound. Hub.
14. The greatest miracle is any violence of pain, but from a general languishing and faintness of spirits, which made him think nothing the worse of the, careful thought.
15. Inactivity; want of vigour.
16. This evil proceeds rather from the unkindness of the country, or of faintness in following and effect-
Virtuous and invincible every man must be,
Few in the extreme, but all in the degree;
The rogue and rascal by fits is fair and wise,
And ev'n the beast, by fits, what they despise.

11. Open; direct.
For still, methought, the fag not far away
At last I found her fair and meanly dressed,
Close by my side she sat, and fair in fight,
Fulfil a line, against her opposite.

12. Gentle; mild; not compulsory.
All the lords came in, and, being by fair means Wrought therein, acknowledged King Henry.
Sponser on Ireland.

For to reduce her by main force,
In saw in vain, her beauty, her worth, woe.
Hollibone.

13. Mild; not severe.
Not only doth they degrade or, or remit to Life a land, which were a fair dilution;
But through them lower than the meanest exist them.

14. Pleading; civil.
Good sir, why do you thart, and seem to fear
Things that do bound for fair?
Shake.

When fair words; and good counsel will not prevail upon us, we must be frighted into our duty.
L'Estrange.

15. Equitable; not jurifid.
His doings in fair.
That day I am, and shall to duty return.
Milton.

Herby, upon the edge of yeader coppice,
A band where you may make the fairest woods,
Shak.

I looked for the fair land, surveyed the fair
And took away a doreous oines of blood.
Wychima.

17. Liberal; not narrow.
He through his virtue was a feast from greediness,
As through his fair livelihood, far from necessities.
Carew.

FAIRLY. adv. [from fair.]
1. Beautifully; as, a city fairly situate.
2. Commodiously; conveniently; suitably for any purpose or design.

Waiting till willing winds their sails supply,
Within a shining town they long abide.
Fairly situate on a haven's side.
Dryden.

3. Honestly; justly; without theft; without fraud; not fouly.
There is due from the judge to the advocate some consideration and grading where causes are fairly pleaded.

To the first advantages we may fairly lay claim;
I wish we had as good a title to the latter.
Addison, of the church of which his opinion that the freedom of a nation consists in an absolute unlotted legislative power, whereby the whole body of the people are fairly represented in an executive daily limited.
Swift.

4. Ingeniously; plainly; openly.
The stage how loosely does Artaxerxes,
Who fairly puts all characters to bail;
Page.

5. Candidly; without finifhing interpretations.
As I interpret fairly your design.

So look not with fewer eyes on mine.
Dryden.

6. Without violence to right reason.
Where I have enlarged them, I believe the fairest crime would not attach that these privileges are wholly mine; but that either they are secretly in the poet, or may be fairly deduced from him.
Dryden.

This nutrificial juice being a subtile liquor, fraste obtainable by a human body, the forum of the blood is fairly substitut'd in its place.
Arbuthnot in Moscow.

7. Without blot.
Here is th' indiction of the good land
Hunting.
Which in a set hand fairly is engross'd.
Shak.

8. Completely; without any deficiency.
All this they fairly overname, by reason of the continual presence of their king.
Spinous state of life.
Let them play it is grody done; so it be fairly done.
Shak.

Our love is not so great, Hertfordish, but we may blow our sails together.
Shak.

FAIRNESS. n. s. [from fair.]
1. Beauty; elegance of form.
That which made her fairest much the father was that she was but an ev'n the fairest mind, full of wit, and a wit which delighted more to judge itself than to show itself.
Sidney.

2. Honesty; candour; ingenuity.
Gentlemen may be somewhats of widsome, but little of goodness or fair design in way.

FAIRLY SPOKEN. adv. [from fair and speak.]
Bland and civil in language and address.
Arats, a prelate in the church of Alexandrisa, a liberally and a generous fallopian man, but still contented that we should be as well for him in honour, whose superior he thought himself in defery, because though easy and volume none confi

FAIRY. n. s. [fairy].

So prrepe.] Saxon; for French
FAI

NOW minutely reviews upwards his faithfulness;
Thio he commands more only in command,
Nothing in love.
Shakespeare's Measure

FAITHFUL. adj. [from faith.] Honest; courteous.
A word not in use.

THO. would the regal
Of any truth, virtue, or worth in thee,
Make thy words of Shakespeare's K. Lear.

FAITHF. adj. [faith and fall.]

1. Firm in adherence to the truth of religion.

2. Of truth; fidelity; loyal; true to the allegiance or duty professed.
I have this day received a traitor's judgement, and by that name must die; yet, here's bearer witness, And, if I have a confidence, let it be stuck me.
Even as the herb falls, if it be not severed.
So spake the Seraph Abdiel, faithful loud:
Among the faithful, faithful only be. Milton.

3. Honest; upright; without fraud.
My servant Mates is faithful in all mine house.

4. Observant of compact or promise; true to his contract; sincere; veracious.
Well I know him:

5. Of honest character; morally good.
And faithful to his word. Dryden's Don Sebastian

6. With firm belief in religion.

7. With strict adherence to duty and allegiance.

His noble grace would have some pity
Upon my wretched women, that so long
Have follow'd both my fortunes faithfully. Shak.

Without failure of performance; honest;

Exactly; exactly.
If my wound'd breast thou drop a tear,
Think for a while my breast that would did bear;
And faithfully my left doth fail;
I am the faithful father's will. Dryden.

5. With earnest professions; with strong promises.
For his own part he did faithfully promise to be still in the king's power. Bacon's Henry VII.

6. Honesty; without fraud, trick, or ambigutiy.
They suppose the nature of things to be truly and faithfully informed by their names, and therupon believe as they hear, and practise as they believe.

7. In Shakespeare, according to Mr. Warburton, fervently; perhaps rather confusedly; steadily.
If his occasions were not virtuous,
I should not urge it half so faithfully. Shak.

FAITHLESSNESS. n. f. [from faithful.]

1. Honesty; veracity.

2. For there is no faithfulness in your mouth; your inward thoughts are wickedness.
Falsify, lie.
The bals, that knits together and supports all compactness, is truth and faithfulness.

3. Adherence to duty; loyalty.

The faithfulness continues in your blood, which animated one of your noble ancestors to sacrifice his life in the quarrel of his sovereign. Dryden.

FAITHLESS. adj. [from faith.]

1. Without belief in the revealed truths of religion; unconverted.

2. What then? would that faithfulness continue in your blood, which animated one of your noble ancestors to sacrifice his life in the quarrel of his sovereign.

Unles she doth it under this execrc,
That is to say, to faithfulness. Shak.

FAL

1. Perfidious; dissoloy; not true to duty, profecion, promise, or allegiance.
Both
Fell by our errants, by those men we fold most;
A molt unsubstantial, a faithful jervise.
Shak.

Abdiel, faithful found.
Among the faithful. Milton's Par. Lost.

FAITHLESSN. n. f. [from faithfulness.]

1. Treachery; perfidy.

2. Unbelief as to revealed religion.

FAITH. n. f. [faith, faithfulness, flat.]
A bound; a method, a mean fellow; a poltroon.
An old word now obsolete.

To Philemon, false faith, Philemon,
I eat to pay, that I so dearly bought.
Fairy Queen.

And now we're meeting, I was call'd.
By rail false faith, Fairy Queen.

FAKE. n. f. [Among feamen.] A coil of rope.

Harrist

FALSCAIDE. n. f. [from falk, falkis, Latin.]
Hooked; bent like a reaping hook or scythe.
The enlightened part of the moon appears in the form of a sickle, or reaping hook, which is white therefrom, from the opposition of the planets, or from the new moon to the full; but from full to a new again, the enlightened part appears gibbous, and the dark falcsad.

FALSOATION. n. f. [falkis, Latin.] Crookedness; form like that of a reaper's hook.
The locusts have anten. or long horns before, with a long falcatage or capitated tail behind. Brown.

FALCHOIS. n. f. [enfis falcatis; in French, finchon.] A short crooked sword; a cy-

FALCON. n. f. [fchoullon, French; falces; falco, Italian; falcs, Latin.] Crude,
A roso falcatis five adance, from the falcated or crooked bill.

1. A hawk trained for sport.

At Venus' bird, the white, Swift, lovely done,
O happy dove that art compar'd to her.

2. A sort of gun; whose diameter at the bore is five inches and a quarter, weight seven hundred and fifty pounds, length seven foot, load two pounds and a quarter, shut two inches and a half diameter, and two pounds and a half weight.

FALCNER. n. f. [falconer, French.] One who breeds and trains hawks; one who follows the sport of fowling with hawks.

Hat! Reome, hail! O for a falconer's voice.
To lure this ruffel gentle back again. Shakespeare.

The Universal remedy was swelling of puddlestone, in imitation of falconers curing hawks.

I have learned of a falconer never to feed up a hawk when I would have him fly. Dryd., Don. Scipic.
A falconer.
To promise to "Adi" give Saffraar. Swift.

To become Dryden's, "To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.

To Peste, sp.* Calo. Dryden._ To hs to £//. but the Clarendon.
61. To Fall under. To be ranged with; to be reckoned with.
No man can know for certain that great events, however general, can affect the Georgics, which fall under that class of poetry which consists in giving plain instructions to the reader. - Addison in the Georgics.

62. To Fall upon. To attack; to invade; to assault.
A thunder falling upon their gallies, hid them with a cloud and deadly light. - Keats, "Isabella and the potter.

63. To Fall upon. To attempt.
I do not intend to fall upon nice philosophical definitions about the nature of time. - Holder.

64. To Fall upon. To rush against.
At the same time, the thunders burst upon the whole species, we are falling upon one another. - Addison.

65. Fal] is one of those general words of which it is very difficult to ascribe or to find any particular signification. It retains in most of its senses its primary or primitive meaning, and implies either literally or figuratively defect, violence, or succedaneum. In many of its senses it is opposed to rise; but in others there is no counterpart or correlative.

To Fall in a. 1. To drop; to fall.
He was gone in the barn, think on me. And add thy edgelord, despair and die. - Shack.
If that the earth could seem with woman's tears, Each drop, the falls, would prove a crocodile. - Shack.
And when I wander your hand, the like, To Fall it on Gonzalo. - Shakespeare's Tempest.
I am willing to fall this argument: 'tis free for every man to write or not to write in verse, as he thinks it is or is not his talent, or as he imagines the audience will receive it.

2. To sink; to depress: the contrary to raise.
If a man would endeavour to raise or fall his voice, fall by half notes, like the flaps of a lute, or by whole notes alone without halts, as far as he could, he will not be able to frame his voice upon it. - Becken's Natural Hist.

3. To diminish; to let sink; to oppose to raise.
Upon Letting inter in to per cent, you fall the price of your native commodities, or let the trade of ree prevent the high price. - Locke.

4. To run; to bring forth.
This then conceiving, did in yeasting time Fall party-coloured limbs, and these Jacob's. - Shakespeare.

FALL. n. s. [from the verb.]
1. The act of dropping from on high. High o'er their heads a mouldering rock is pinn'd, That detail'd fall, and thunders at ever sight. - Dryden.
The beef of tumbling from an erect posture. - Shakespeare. I saw him run after a piled butterfly: and when he caught it, he let it go again, and after it again; and over and over he comes, up and again, and caught in again, or whether till he confounded him, or how it was, he did let his teeth, and so terrified. - Shakespeare.

3. The violence suffered in dropping from on high.
My son coming into his marriage-chamber, happened to have a fall, and died. - 2 Esdr. 6, v.
Spirit of wine, mingled with common water, if the fall be broken, by means of a stop, or other wise, flieteth above and overse as it if were water out again, as will doth. - Bacon's Illy. Rem.

FALL. n. s. 1. A fall or fall may take away my reason. Locke.
Some were by the falls they got by keeping upon the ground.

2. Death; overthrow; destruction incurred.
Wall his fall. - Shakespeare.
Whom I myself strike, down. Shakespeare's Blank.
Our father's friend is seized of the wound, and for a spoil, and had a great fall before our enemies. - Judith, viii. 9.

3. Rain; Dissolution.
Plato's late theme of such a multitude, whose flight has brought the reach'd and hard debossed above the height: Now shall thou stand, though hard, or fire, or earth, or more fierce than they, thy fall confine. - Dryden.

4. Downfall; loss of greatness; destruction from eminence; degradation; fate of being depopulated from a high station; plume from happiness or greatness into misery or meanesse, or from virtue to corruption. In a sene like this we say the fall of man, and the fall of angels.

5. Declension of greatness, power, or dominion.
Till the empire came to be settled in Charles the Great, the fall of the Roman eminence, dominion concerning with other universal evils, caused those times to be days of much affliction and trouble throughout the world. - Hooker.

6. Diminution; decrease of value.
That the improvement of Ireland is the principal cause why our lands in purchase rise not, as naturally they should, with the fall of our interest, appears evidently from the effect the fall of interest had upon houses in London. - Child.

9. Declination or diminution of sound; cadence; close of musick.
That strain again; it had a dying fall; O, it came o'er me, like the seeth South That breathes upon a bank of violets, Stealing and giving odours. - Shakespeare. Twelfth Night.
How swiftly did they float upon the waves of silence, through the empty, vaulted night, at everyfall, smoothing the raven down. - Of darkness 'till it fall'd! Milton.

10. Declivity; steep decay.
Waters when beat upon the shore, or strained, at the falls of bridges, or dashed against themselves by winds, give a nailing noise. - Bacon's Nat. Hist.

11. Caratac; cascade; ruff of water down a steep place.
There will we sit upon the rocks, and see the swans feed their food's By shallow rivers, to whose falls

12. The act of selling or cutting down; as, the fall of timber. FALLACIOUS. adj. [fallac, Latin; fallaci; French.
1. Producing mistake; speculative. It is never said of men, but of writings, propositions, or things.

2. Deceitful; mocking expectation.
The fore of that madrigal, That with exalting vapour bland About their spirits had play'd, and in instant Maim'd, or else had exhal'd. - Milton's Par. Lost.

3. Perplex; fatum; fallacy.
Milton's philosophy infers Fallacius hope. Fallacious.

FALLACIOUSLY. adv. [from fallacious.]
Sophistically; with purpose to deceive; with unfound reasoning.

FALLACIOUSNESS, n. s. [from fallacious.]
Pendency to deceive; inconclusiveness. Fallacies are not to be encouraged to others, as to promote not to oppose any pen that shall fallacious, refuse us. - Brown.

We have been how fallaciously the author has stated the cause, by supposing that nothing but unlimited mercy, or unlimited punishment, are the methods that can be made use of. - Addison.

FALLACY, n. s. [from fallible.] Liable to be deceived; uncertainty; possibility of error.

Fallacy is a great deal of fallibility in the testimony of men; yet some things we may be almost as certain of, as that the sun will shine, or that five twenties make an hundred. - Whate.

FALLIBLE, adj. [falla, Lat.]
Liable to error; such as may be deceived.

Do not flatter your resolution with hopes that are fallacious, tomorrow you may have cause to repent. He that creates himself, thousand folds of little hope, uncertain in the promise, fallaciously in the event, and depending upon a thousand circumstances, often flatters his expectations.

Our intellectual or rational powers need some assistance, because they are so frail and fallible in the nature of things. - Sir Taylor.

FALLING. n. s. [from fall.] Indentings.
Falling in. n. s. [fall.] opposed to prominence.

It shows the nose and eyebrows, with the several prominences and fallings in of the features, much more distinctly than any other kind of figure. - Addi.

FALLING-SICKNESS. n. s. [fall and sick-ness.] The epilepsy; a disease in which
The patient is without any warning deprived at once of his senses, and falls down.

Did Caesar swoon?—He fell down in the marketplace, and foam'd at mouth, and was speechless:—he hath the falling sickness.

The dogfighter is good against the falling sickness.

Lulled.

FALLOW. adj. [palope, Saxon.]
1. Pale red, or pale yellow.
How does your fallow greyhound, sir?—Shakespeare.
2. Not luxuriant; blighted.

Shakespeare, "Henry V.
3. Plowed, but not sowed; plowed as prepared for a second sowing.

Her predecessors, in their courses of government, did by turns, he was call'd up on the ground; and he found it, yea, it became quicky overgrown with weeds.

Thackeray's "Percy Ford.
4. Unplowed; uncultivated.

Men, here is the dower, and rank fumitory, both root upon.

Shakespeare, "Henry V.
5. Unoccupied; neglected; slighted.

Shall faints in civil blooded wallow.

Of plants, and that the cause lie fallow? Holidate.

FALLOW, n. f. [from the adjective.]
1. Ground plowed in order to be plowed again.

The plowing of fallow is a benefit to land.

Mortimer.
2. Ground lying at rest.

Within an ancient forest simple verge,
There stood a tawdry but a healthful dwelling place.

Shakespeare, "Winter's Tale."

And in fallow meads, meads, and pastures tarn,
A little garden, and a limpid brook,
By nature's own contrivance the fens di'pos'd.

Rover.

FALLOW, n. f. [from fallow.] Barr

rennes; an exemption from bearing fruit.

Like one, who, in her third wilderness, doth profess.

Herself a mind, to retire from

Shakespeare, "Winter's Tale,"

FALSE, adj. [falsus, Latin; fain; fauf, French.]
1. Not morally true; expressing that which is not thought.

Innocence shall make

Falso, accidens bina, and tyrannus

Tribule at patience.

Stacepu, Winter's Tale.

There are false sitters among men, L'Estrange.

2. Not physically true; conceiving that which does not exist.

Of every mortal man affinities for true?

Which truth hath in all ages been derived

As bottom here, he cover'd it ever so finely.

David, "B best,"

Of so many poets which antiquity is in a picture: the feelings and action of a large are all unnatural, and the manner false, that is, incoherent, with the chamber of modern life.

Dryden.

3. Sudden, and insupportable proneness.

Falseness. M. D. [from false.]
1. Want of truth; want of veracity.

An ass of fraud; he was the first

That pratis'd the falsest under family flaws.

Milton.

All prais'd they were in lists; all things else set a life reduced to practice, and false.

M. D. Halfway from words to things. Drayton.
2. Want of honesty; treachery; deceitful.

Perjury.

Nothing was, but that they shape,

Like his, and colour serpentine, may flow

Thy inward frauds, to warn all creatures from thee.

Herrick.
3. Falsehood.

M. D. [from false.]
1. Falsehood.

In your account, it is to be considered false.

Falsely.

2. Counterfeit; impolite.

For no falsehood can endure

Touch of celestial temper, but returns

Of force to its own kind.

Falsely.

3. Contrarily to truth; not truly.

Simpson and Levi spoke not falsely but indiscreetly, nay hypocritically, shot, inure, and religiosa.

One of Tongue.

Simpson and Levi spoke not falsely but indiscreetly, nay hypocritically, shot, inure, and religiosa.

In their own.

4. Perfidiously; treacherously; deceitfully.

Such as are, treated ill and upbraided falsely find out an intimate friend that will hear their complaints, and endeavour to soothe their secret resentment.

Falsehoods, Epictetus.

1. Contrary to truth.

2. Want of veracity; violation of promise.

Suppose the reverse of virtue were solemly enacted, and the practice of fraud and rapine, and perjury and falsehoods to a man's word, and all vice were called good, and all that which we now call vice gain the reputation of virtue, and that which we now call virtue grow evil to human nature.

Falsehoods, Epictetus.

3. Duplicity; deceit; double dealing.

Perjury is opposed to hypocrisy and insincerity, and all falsehoods or fainctons of intentions, especially to hypocrisy.

Milton.

4. Treachery; perfidy; traitrour.

King Richard might create a perfect guilt.

That great Northumberland, thence to him,
Would e't that feed grew to a greater falsehood. Shak.

The prince is an in danger of being betrayed by the falsehoods, and cheated by the avowal of such a servant.

Roger.

FALSE, n. f. [from false.] A deceiver; an impostor. Now obsolete.

Such red had the kid for he would be aware of

Of craft coloured with hypocrisy;

And such ends, perjury, does all them remain,

That of such falsehoods friendship been,

Pope.

FALSE, adj. [falsity, French; falsifex, from falsify.] Liable to be counterfeited or corrupted.

FALSIFICATION. n. f. [falsification, French; falsify.]
FAL

A liar; one that contrives falsehoods.

Balders are naturally falsifiers, and the people, of all others that put their means the world about.

Falsity, v. a. [falsifier, French.]

1. To counterfeit; to forge; to produce something for that which in reality it is not.

We cannot excuse that church, which through corrupt translations of scripture, delivereth, instead of divine speeches, anything to prevent unto that which God speaketh; or, through falsified additions, presenteth the first-born upon the pasch table, which is in truth no scripture.

The Irish bards use to forge and falsify every thing as will, to profit or dissemble any man. (Spenker.

Falsity, c. [false, French.

2. To confute; to prove false.

Our Saviour's prophecy standeth good in the definition of the temple, and the disputation of the Jewish ecclesiastics, when Jews and Pagans desired all their endeavours, under Julian the apostate, to baffle and falsify the prediction. (Addison.

Falsity, c.

3. To violate; to break by falsehood.

It shall be thy work, thou fhameful works which is in thy power to make, to make thyself to be thy faith falsified, and his bed deserted. Sidney.

He suddenly falsified his faith, and villainously few Seymurs the king, as he was bathing himself, mourning nothing less than the falsification of the pirrte.

This perpetuated treachery to all the other patient ingredients of the crime; 'twas the falsifying the king. (Drye of Deity.

Falsity, c.

4. To pierce; to run through.

His crest is raffled away, his ample shield falsify'd, and round with jamb's till'd. Dryden.

The word falsify, says Mr. Dryden, is only used by the friends quarreled at the word falsify'd, as an innovation in our language. The fact is confessed; nor I remember not to have read it in any English as the term is now used. It can be found in Sir Thomas More's Queen Faery. But suppose it be not there; why am I forbidden to borrow from the Italian, a polished language, the word which is wanting in my native tongue? Horace has given it a rule for writing words: it grace fostante especially when other words are joined with them which explain the sense. I used the word falsify'd, in that place, to mean that the shield of Tyrus was not of proof against the spears and javelins of the Trojan, which had pierced it through and through in many places. The words were so familiar to this new one, makes my meaning plain: Moi foi Falsé d'Ambrai avec perfécion, Ches par Ils falleis en effen croyant. Arnaud, cant. xxix.

Falsify cannot otherwise be turned than by falsify'd: for his shield was falsified, is not English. I might indeed have conversed myself with saying his shield was veroified, and bored, and stuck with javelins. Dryden.

Dryden, with all this effort, was not able to naturalize the new formation, which I have never seen copied, except once by some obscure nameless writer, and which indeed deserves not to be received.

Falsify, v. n. To tell lies; to violate truth.

We have given, that it is absolutely and universally unlawful to lie and falsify. South.

Falsity, c. [false, Latin.]

Neither are they able to speak through those errors, wherein they are so decorously fenile, that they may understand, by the whole fabric, of which they love moving under God's truth.

Can you on him such falsify obliques?

Arnaud.

Probability does not make any abrogation, either in the truth or falsity of things, but only imports a different degree of their certainties or appearance to the mind of each individual.

2. A lie; an error; a false assertion or opinion.

That Dathanias grieft from the Pyrenian hills, that the earth is high towards the north, are op-

FAM

1. Well known; brought into knowledge by frequent practice or custom.

See not how the Scripture could be possibly made familiar unto all, unless far more should be read in the people's hearing than by a sermon can be opened.

Let us chafe such noble counsellors, that war, or peace, or both at once, may be as things acquainted and familiar to us. Shaksp.

Our sweet Receipt and cure of every consumption: Familiar to our eyes! Milton's Paradise Lost.

One idea which is familiar to the mind, conected with others which are now and strange, will bring the new ideas evidently to light. Pope.

Well acquainted with; accustomed; habituated by custom.

Of chang'd long, and to the place conform'd in temper and nature, will receive Familiar the free heat, and void of pain. Milton.

The seeler at first let in particular ideas; and the mind, by degrees, growing familiar with some of them, they are lodged in the memory, and names got to them. Locke.

He was amazed how so impotent and groveling an idea as, I could entertain in such human ideas, and so familiar a manner, as to appear wholly unmoved at all the terrors of blood and detraction.

Goldsmith's Travels.

Patient permitted the falsely-playing liar, to become wiser by our true teats inflect. Pope.

Common; frequent.

To a wrong hypothesis may be reduced the errors that may be occasioned by a true hypothesis, but not rightly understood: there is nothing more mischievous than this. Locke.

3. Easy; unconfined.

He encompasses

His moffs, and Speech its familiar stones, Addison.

2. Too nearly acquainted.

A poor man found a priest familiar with his wife, and because he spake it abroad, and could not prove it, the priest fed him for delatation. Camden.

FAMILIARITY, n. f. [familiarité, French; from familiar.]

1. An intimate; one long acquainted.

The king is a noble gentleman, and my familiar Shakespeare.

When he finds himself avoided and neglected by his familiar, this affects him. (Addison.

2. A demon supposed to attend at call.

Love is familiar; there is no evil angel but love. Shakespeare

FAMILY, n. f. [família, Latin; Pépier, Dorick.]

1. Celebrity; renown.

The house to be builded for the Lord must be exceeding maginal, of fame and of glory through all countries. (Luther.

2. Report; rumour.

We have heard the fame of him, and all that he did was marvelous to us. Jaffa.

I will shew what are true fames. Bacon.

FAMED. adj. [from fame.] Renowned; celebrated; much talked of.

His fam'd for mildness, peace, and pity. Shaks. He purge to keep the Christian god.

Avoiding schism, he more fam'd abroad. (Steele.) Since Pheginian scribes made unfalse the road. Dryd. (Admitth a familiar, for his learning and wisdom; but corrected to Christianity.

FAMELESS. adj. [from fam'd.] Having no fame; without renown. Not in use.

Then ter res; famifera, love the fields and woods, The fruitful water's vale and running brooks. May.

FAMULAR. adj. [familiaris, Latin.]

1. Domestick; relating to a family. They are the fames creepe, and are the same family. (Shaks.)

2. Affable; not formal; easy in conversation.

Be thee familiar, but by no means vulgar. Shaks.

Be not too familiar with Peirs; for he mistakes his favours for much, that he sweares thou art many. Shaks.

FAMILIARLY, adv. [from familiar.]

1. Unceremoniously; with freedom like that of long acquaintance.

Because that I familiarly sometimes Drut you for my false, and chat with you, Volpone will not tell upon my love, Shaksp.

He talks to familiarly of John of Gaunt as if he had been sworn brother to him; and I'll be sworn he had once been to the thing of it, and then he broke his head. Shaksp.

The governor came to us, and, after question, fai-
Bacon.

FAM.-LIE. [families, French.] In a family way: domestically.

Deirdre mortals, whom the great
Chief for companions tete-a-tete;
Whose at their dinners, en famille,
Get to leave it when you will.

Swift.

FAMILY, n. s. [families, Latin; families, French.]

To those who live in the same house; household.

The night made little impression on myself: but I cannot forgive my whole family; for my wife prevailed on me to take something.

Swift.

To FAMISH, n. v. [from fama, Latin; fami/; old French.]

1. To kill with hunger; to starve; to defrey by want of food.

What did he marry me to famishe me? Shakespeare.

'The pains of famishe Tantalus he feel, And Sisyphus, that labours up the hill

Dryden.

The rolling rock in vain and curst Ixion's wheel.

Dryden.

To FAMISH, n. v. To die of hunger; to suffer extreme hunger.

You are all reduced rather to die than to famish.

Dryden.

FAMISHMENT, n. s. [from famished.]

The pain of hunger; want of food.

Apicius, thou'dtst't on thy gut below
Full ninety millions a year, when this feast was a

Tristram休'd the sights to thee; which thou,

Fearing to suffer thirst and famishment,
In poision'd portion drank it. Hacket on Provost.

FAMOUST, n. s. [from famust.] Renown; celebrity.

FAMOUSLY, adv. [famous, Latin; famous, French; famous, English.]

1. Renowned; celebrated; much talked of and praised.

Henry the Fifth, too famous to live long.

Shakespeare.

When they had executed judgment upon her.

Pope.

Pray you was but famous for counterfeiting all these things; as earthen pitchers, a scullery, roguies by the score, and forge stumbling in the mews; whereas he was famous for Rapinfusht.

On Stage in London.

I shall be nam'd among the famosest.

Of women, flags of my celebrated.

Swift.

With great religion, with great celebration.

This land was famously enriched with politick grave counsel; then the king

Shakespeare.

Had various allies to protect his grace.

Times looking as things spoken of and believed, and worthy to be recorded and read.

Gower's Cof.

FAMOUSNESS. n. s. [from famous.] Celebri- ty; great fame.

Fam. m. s. famus, Latin.

1. An instrument used by ladies to move the air and cool themselves.

With fears, and dangers, and double change of bravery,

With amber bracelets, beads, with all this bravery,

Shakespeare.

Flavia, the leath and fleshly toy
Can with restlefs arm employ.

In other hands the fan would prove An engine of small force in love;

But the, with such air and motion,

Not to be told or fealdly seen,

Directs its wonted motions.

That it would move more than Cyparis's bow,

Give coolness to the matched dame,

To every other breath a fame.

Gay.

The modest fan was lifted up no more,

And Virginia fans have appear.

Dryden.

2. Anything spread out like a woman's fan into a triangle with a broad base.

As a peacock and crane were in company, the peacock spread his tail, and challenged the other to show him such a fan of feathers.

Dryden.

3. The instrument by which the chaff is blown away when corn is winnowed.

[Venus, French.]

Flax, flour, rawflour, and rake, with a fan that is strong.

Aliens shall eat clean provender, winnowed with the thistle and with the fan.

If. xxx. 14.

In the wind and tempest of fortune's frown,

Dissolved, with a broad and powerful arm.

Pulling at all, winnows the light away.

Shakespeare.

For the cleaning of corn is commonly used either a wicker-fan, or a fan with wills. Marmion's Hugh.

Any thing by which the air is moved; wing.

The prisoner with a firing from prison broke;

Then stretched his feather'd fan with all his might.

And to the neighbor maple wind's his flight.

Dryden.

An instrument to raise the fire.

Nature workseth in us all a love to our own counsels: the contradiction of others is a fan to inflame that love.

Hooker.

To Fan. m. v. a.

1. To cool or recreate with a fan.

She was famed into fumes by her slaves. Syl.
To FANCY. v. t. [from the noun.] To imagine; to believe without being able to prove.

Te FANCY. v. t. [from the noun.] To imagine; to believe without being able to prove.

FAN. n. A light tuft of a feather, or of hair, or of any soft substance, used for cooling the face, or for warming, or for不到的 whether or not it can be inferred from the context. The second option is the correct use of the word "fan" in this context.
2. Subtilizing only in the fancy; imaginary

Shakespeare's Macbeth.

3. Unreal; apparent only: having the nature of phantoms which only assume visible forms occasionally.

Shakespeare's Macbeth.

4. Uncertain; undistinguishable.

Shakespeare's Macbeth.

5. Whimsical: fanciful; capricious; lunatic; indulgent of one's own imagination.

Shakespeare's Macbeth.

6. We are apt to think your medallists a little fantastical in the different prices they fix upon their coins, without any regard to the metal of which they are composed. Addit.

Shakespeare's Macbeth.

7. To a great distance progressively.

Shakespeare's Macbeth.

8. To a great height; magnificent.

Shakespeare's Macbeth.

9. To a certain point; to a certain degree.

Shakespeare's Macbeth.

10. Far off; at a great distance.

Shakespeare's Macbeth.

11. Far off; at a great distance.

Shakespeare's Macbeth.
1. F AR is often used in composition as, far-reaching, far-fetching.

2. Footnote: A deep stratum. A ludicrous word.

3. He hath been, as it were, in all their politick far-fetchers.

4. And from their Coptick pratt, Kirchen.

5. Found out this myxtick way to jest us. Hudibras.

6. The far side running the king. Shakespeare.

7. FARE, n. f. [from the verb, or from farcer, French, to mock.] A dramatic representation written without regularity, and stuffed with wild and ludicrous conceits.

8. There is yet a lower sort of poetry and painting, which is out of nature for a farce is that in poetry that grotesque is in a picture: the persons and actions of a farce are all unnatural, and the manners false, that is, inconsistent with the characters of mankind: grotesque painting is the just responsibility of this.

9. What should be great, you turn to farce. Prior.

10. They object against it as a farce, because the irregularity of the plot should answer to the extravagance of the characters, which they say this piece wants, and therefore is no farce.

11. FARCICAL. adj. [from farce.] Belonging to a farce, appropriated to a farce.

12. They deny that this jest should be farcical, because they are actually in nature.

13. FARENTH, adj. [from farce, French.] The leprosy of horses. It is probably curable by impunity.

14. FAREWELL, adv. [this word is originally the imperative of the verb farewell, or fare you well; set felix, abi in bonum rem, these fit nobi; but in time it became familiarized to an absolute farewell, it is used both by those who go and those who remain left.]

15. The parting compliment; adieu.

16. Farewell, king: this thus thou wilt appear;

17. Freedom lives hence, and banishment is here. Shakespeare.

18. Farewell, I shall not give thee to thy

19. Farewell. FARE, v. a. [farcio, Latin; farcire, French.]

20. To flow; to fill with mingled ingredients.

21. Wrestling is a pastime which either the Cornishmen, or from Corinna, their first preceded

22. The first book of Christian religion should not be forced with school points and private tutors.

23. By Sanderson.

24. To extend; to walk out.

25. 'Tis not the balm, the c集体经济, and the hall;

26. But the staid, the crowns imperial,

27. The enterprize's red of gold and pearl.

28. By farcer, French, to mock.

29. A dramatic representation written without regularity, and stuffed with wild and ludicrous conceits.

30. There is yet a lower sort of poetry and painting, which is out of nature for a farce is that in poetry that grotesque is in a picture: the persons and actions of a farce are all unnatural, and the manners false, that is, inconsistent with the characters of mankind: grotesque painting is the just responsibility of this.

31. What should be great, you turn to farce. Prior.

32. They object against it as a farce, because the irregularity of the plot should answer to the extravagance of the characters, which they say this piece wants, and therefore is no farce.

33. Belonging to a farce, appropriated to a farce.

34. They deny that this jest should be farcical, because they are actually in nature.

35. The leprosy of horses. It is probably curable by impunity.

36. This word is originally the imperative of the verb farewell, or fare you well; set felix, abi in bonum rem, these fit nobi; but in time it became familiarized to an absolute farewell, it is used both by those who go and those who remain left.

37. The parting compliment; adieu.

38. Farewell, king: this thus thou wilt appear;

40. Farewell, I shall not give thee to thy

41. Farewell. FARE, v. a. [farcio, Latin; farcire, French.]

42. To flow; to fill with mingled ingredients.

43. Wrestling is a pastime which either the Cornishmen, or from Corinna, their first preceded

44. The first book of Christian religion should not be forced with school points and private tutors.

45. By Sanderson.
FAR

See how the morning opens her golden gates, and takes her farewell of the glorious sun. Shak.
For though the morning be pleas’d with farewell sweets, Extend his evening beam, the fields revive,
The birds their notes renew, and bleating herds attend their joys, that hill and valley ring.
Million.
I took my last farewell.
As on this very spot of earth I fell.
Dryden.
Before I take my farewell of this subject, I shall advise the author for the future to speak less meaning.
Addison.

2. It is sometimes used as an adjective; lacking;

- A single vigorous writer, who has taken their leave of the public in farewell papers, will not give up the work, but intends to appear again, though perhaps under another form, and with a different title.

FARMAIL. adj. [from farma, Latin.] Mealy; taunting like meal or flower of corn.

The propitious food of the vegetable kingdom for mankind is taken from the farinaceous or mealy seeds of some culmiferous plants: as oats, barley, wheat, rice, maize, patish, and millet.
Arckewall on Aliments.

FARM. n. [from ferm, French; pœnum, provision, Saxon.]

1. Ground let to a tenant; ground cultivated by another man upon condition of paying part of the profit to the owner or landlord.

2. The rate of lands let to the culture of tenants. The lands of Ireland do not use to set out their land in farm, for term of years, to their tenants; but only from year to year, and some during pleasure. Spenser on Ireland.

3. To cultivate land.

To FARM. v. a. [from farms.] To let out to tenants at a certain rent. We are enfreed to farm our royal palm.
The revenue whereof shall furnish us for our affairs in hands. Shakespeare's Richard II.

2. To take at a certain rate.

They received of the bankers scant twenty shillings for thirty, which the Earl of Cornwall farmed for Claude's Remaines.

3. To cultivate land.

FARMER. n. s. [from ferm, French; or from farm.]

1. One who cultivates hired ground.

2. One who cultivates ground, whether his own or another's.

Nothing of greater prejudice to the farmer than the drudging of his land with cattle larger than it will bear. Marston's Epinody.

FASTMOST. n. s. [uperative of far.] Most dilatent; remotest.
A spacious cave, within its farmost part, Which bearest, labed, and furnished art, Through the hills hollow sides. Dryden's AEn.

FAUNES. n. s. [from far.] Distance; remoteness.

Their nearest on all quarters to the enemy, and their farms from timely fowrour by their friends, hasting to the commanders to call forth the utmost number of able hands to fight. Curew.

FARRAGO. n. s. [from Farrago, Lat.] Formed of different materials.

Being a confusion of knaves and fools, and a farragous concourse of random conditions, tennerly, it is but natural if their determinations be monstrous, and many ways inconsistent with truth.
Brown's Pilgrims Errors.

FARRAGO. n. s. [Latin.] A mass formed confusedly of several ingredients; a medley.

FARRIER. n. s. [farrier, French; or farri, Latin.]

1. A hollow of horses.

The truest hardship is some particular belong to farriers, saddlers, horse-trades, and other trademen. Digby.

2. One who professes the medicine of horses.

If you are a piece of a farrier, as every honest groom ought to be, get fock, or strong beer to rub your horse.
Swift.

To FARRIER. v. u. [from the noun.] To practice playfick or chirurgery on the feet.

There are many pretenders to the art of farriery and cowloosing, yet many of them are very ignorant.
Martins.

FARROW. n. s. [pepa, Saxon.] A litter of pigs.

Four in bow's blood that hath litter'd
Her nine farrow. Shakespeare's Macbeth.

To FARROW. v. a. To bring a litter of young pigs.

It is used only of pigs.

Some ready to farrow this time of the year. Tyrrell.

The foal, although multiparous, yet being biferous, and only cloven-hoofed, is farrowed with open eyes, as other biferous animals. Brown.

Ev'ry horse, without cumbrous ophirous womb, As fair and easy to the sow that car'd a lion. Dryden.
The thirty pigs at one large litter farrow'd, Dryden.

FART. n. s. [pepa, Saxon.] Wind from behind.

Love is the fart
Of every heart;
It pain's a man when'ts kept close;
And others doth offend, when'ts let lose.
Swell'd.

To FART. v. a. [from the noun.] To break wind behind.

As when a gun discharge.
Although the bore be ne'er so large, Before the flame from muzzle burst, Soft at the breech it flutters first;
So from my lord his passion blown, He farted first and then he broke.
Swift.

FA'FATHER. adv. [This word is now generally considered as the comparative degree of fart; but by no analogy can far make fartest. It is therefore probable, that the ancient orthography was nearer the truth, and that we ought to write farther and farthest, from forth, farther, farthest, porion, porion, Saxon; the s and u, by resemblance of sound, being first confounded in speech, and afterwards in books.] At a greater distance; to a greater distance; more remotely; beyond; moreover.

We make a perfect judgment of good pictures, when compared with one another, besides rules, there is farther required a long conversation with the bell pieces.
Dyer's Dysfpray.
The intent were themselves with the opinions, fudions, and fthings of their country, without looking any farther.
Lukes.

FA'THER. adj. [supposed from far, more probably from forth, and to be written farther.] More remote.
Let me be a farther truth, that without lies of gratitude, I have a particular inclination to honour you.

1. Longer; tending to greater distance.

Before our farther way the fallop shell.
Henceforth set on high the golden gough. Dryden.

FA'THERANCE. n. s. [more properly furtherance from farther.] Encouragement; promotion.

That was the foundation of the learning I have, and of all the fartherance that I have obtained.
Astol's Schoolemaster.

FAS

FARTHERMORE. adv. [more properly farthermore.] Besides; over and above; likewise.

Farthermore the leaves, the boughs, and boughs of those trees, by so much exceed all other plants, as the greatest men of power and worldly ability surpass the meanest.
Caligary's History.

To FARTHER. v. a. [more properly To farther.] To promote; to facilitate; to advance.

He had farrior'd and hindered the taking of the town.
Dryden.

FA'THIST. adv. [more properly further.] See FARTHER.

1. At the greatest distance.

2. To the greatest distance.

FA'THEST. adj. Most distant; remotest.
Yet it must be noted; that the greatest part of the world are they which are farthest from perfection.

FA'THING. n. s. [proeoxily, Saxon, from proper, four, that is, the fourth of a penny.]

1. The fourth of a penny; the smallest English coin.

A farthing is the least denomination or fraction of a penny in England and Irish.

The coin of all things we tell it hard in, Would not aul a single farthing.
Prior.

You are no obliged to take money not of gold or silver; not the balancie or farriings of England.
Swift.

2. Copper money.

The parth find, 'tis true; but our churchwardens find on the silver, and give us the far-riings. Usher.

FA'TTHINGALE. n. s. [This word has much exercised the etymology of Skinner, who at first seem to determine that it is derived from verta garde; if he had considered what vert signifies in Dutch, he might have found the true origin.

A hoop; a circle of whalebone used to spread the petticock to a wide circumference.

With gilken coats, and caps, and golden rings, With ruffs, and ruffs, and farthingales and things.
Shakespeare.

Tell me, What compacts will you wear your farthingales?
Shakespeare.

Arbour wore in hall;
Round table, like a farthingale.

Some will have it that it portends the downfall of the French kings; and obverts, that the farthingale appeared in England a little before the ruin of the Spanish monarchy.
Addison.

She seems a medley of all ages.
With a huge farthingale to swell her fullness, flout.
A new commode, a tock and a rush. Swift.

FA'TTHINGESWORTH. n. s. [farthing and word.] As much as is sold for a farthing.

They are thy outfiders; I hardly ever tell them a farthingworth of anything.
Arckewall.

FA'TCES. n. s. [Latin.] Rods anciently carried before the confuls as a mark of their authority.

The duke beheld, like Scipio, with disdain.
That Carthage, which he ruin'd, rife once more; and shook aloft the fames of the main.

To fright those slaves with what they felt before.
Dryden.

FASCIA.
Examine how the fashionable praises of the world can be reconciled to this important doctrine of our religion.

Reg. 2. Made according to the mode. Rich, fashionable rob'd her perf. deck. Pendants her ears, and pearls adorn her neck. Dyd.

3. Obscure of the mode. Time is like a fashionable holl, that highly ba. his particu. guilt by this hand, But with his arms outstretchd, as he would fly, Grasps in the corner, welcome ever families, Shaksp.

4. Having rank above the vulgar, and low nobility. FASHIONABLE. n. [from fashion. Modish elegance, such appearance as is according to the present custom.

Why should they not continue to value themselves for this outside fashionablest of the tailor or tremen's making, when their parents have to early instructed them to do? Shaksp.

5. Fashionably. adv. [from fashionable. In a manner conformable to custom; with mode elegance.

He must at length die dully of old age at home, when here he might go fashionably and genetly have been doctored or fluxed into another world. South.

FASHIONET, n. [from fashionable. A follower of the mode; a top; a coxcomb. Dict.
FAS

Of dangers and adversities, and pain,
Enforced from fate's promptest signal call.
Milton.

2. Strong; impregnable.
England, by report of the chronicles, was indefatigably besieged with rovers and outlaws; which, lurking in woods and fall places, used often to break forth, to ravage and spoil.
Speck’s History.

3. Fixed; adhering; not removable.
Lodovico, with the breaking in of the horsemen, was driven into a marsh; where, after the horsemen, having almost overcome the dog, had done the utmost, he yielded himself.
Kantale.

A man in a boat, whoisks at a rope that’s fast to a ship, looks as if he resolved to draw the ship to Temple.

4. Deep; found.
I have seen her ride from her bed, take paper, fold it, feel it, and again return to her bed; yet all this while in a most fast sleep.
Shakespeare; Marlowe.

5. Firm in adherence.
Quick wits be in deire new-fangled; in purpose, unconstant; light to promise any thing, ready to forget every thing, both benefit and injury; and thereby neither fast to friend, nor fearful to foe.
Albinus’s Scholiast.

Achilles.

6. [from fasteth, Weilh, quick.] Speedily; quick; twifit. It may be doubted whether this fenfe be not always adverbial.
This work goeth fast on, and prospereth.
Barret.

7. Fast and lofe. Uncertain; variable; inconstant; deceitful.
A tofe of faire pearl, which now hides, now hidden by the hair did, as it were, play at fast and loose each other, giving and receiving richts.
Sidney.

If the perceiver by his outward cheere, That any would have his tale by word,
Sometimes the heard him, sometimes hop their ear,
And play fast and loose the live-long day.
Fayifax.

The folly and wickednes of men, that think to play fast and loose with God Almighty.
Swift.

If they cober, yet by the east conflict with other atoms they might be separated again; and to on in an eternal viceile of fast and loose, without ever consojuring into the confequent beds.
Bentley.

FAST. adv.
1. Firmly; immoveably.
bind the boy, which you shall find with me, fast to the chair.
Shakespeare; King John.

[fast in the sense of myself have eaten not.]
Hapyly when they have fodd me faft asleep.
Shak.

2. Clofely; nearly. In this fenfe it is united with some other word, as by or before.
Barberoff left fourteen galleys in the lake, but the tacking, falls, oars, and ordinance he had laid up in the caflle by fast.
Knelle.

Stilo’s book that fowled
Fast the orpe of Grace,
Milton’s Paradise Lost.
Letting supplies be in her fancy seen,
And lowly meads, and vales of cheerful green;
And in the midt of deathless groves
Swellen with sin.
And smiling hopes fefd by,
And just beyond ’em ever-laughing loves.
Dryden.
Fast by the throne of Jamie lamely relifted.
Rank and with his line,
And fefi’s bleed him once tare’d Edward deep.
Pop.

3. Swiftly; nimby.
I would give a thousand pound I could run as fast as thou can it.
Shakespeare’s Henry IV.

There from a spring of blood to fast,
From those deep wounds, as all enmity the face.
Dudz.

FAST

The beniscind marks the fowest comte has gone,
As clocks run fast when most lend is on.
Pop.
You are to look upon me as one going fast out of the world.
Swift.

4. Frequently.
Being tried only with a promise, he gave full credit to that promise, and still gave evidence of his fidelity as fast as occasions were offered.
Pratt, Curteis.

To fasten. v. a. [from fast.]
1. To make fast; to make firm; to fix immoveably.
A mantle coming under her right arm, and covering most of that side, had no fomenting on the left of her.
Sidney.

Moes raised the Tabernacle, and fastened his sockets.
Exodus.

2. To hold together; to cement; to link.
She had all magnetick force alone.
Drayton.

To draw and fasten funded parts in one.
Donn.

In the sea-coast of India there is no iron, which flies not like a bird into those mountains, and therefore their ships are fastened with wood.
Brown.

3. To affix; to conjoin.
The words Whye.
Swift.

To fasten in thought, that they have courage;
But ‘tis not fo.
Shakespeare; Julius Caesar.

4. To stamp; to impress; to fix.
Thinking by this face,
Swift.

To fasten in thought, that they have courage;
But ‘tis not fo.
Shakespeare; Julius Caesar.

5. To unite incoparably.
Their opporppers have changed the scene, and comcon the opinions in their true shape, upon which they could not so well fasten their disgrace.
Dryden.

To lay on with strength.
Could be falled fast, or make a thrift, when not suffer’d to be reach’d?
Dryden’s Ann’s Director.

To fasten. v. n.
To fix himself.

This puciety of blood may be observed in other sorts of lizards, in frogs, and other fishes and therefore an horfe-deech will hardly fally upon a fith.
Brown’s Vultur Errors.

He falled on his neck; and bellow’d out.
As he had born heaven.
Swift.

The wrong judgment that millend us, and makes the will fallys on the worfe fide, lies in mfper-
Swift.

Fastingen. n. f. [from fasten.]
One that makes fast.

Fastingen. n. f. [from fasten.] He who abounds from food.
Ainfraught.

Fastinghanded. adj. [fast and hand.] Avricious; clofeshode; clofeshed; covetous.
The king being fasthanded, and both to part with a second dowry, prevailed with the prince to be contra&ted with the Prince’s Catharine. Bacon.

Fastingidiosity. n. f. [from fastidious.] Diffidainfulness; contemptuousnes.
Swift.

Fastingious. adj. [fastidious.] Latin; fastidieux, fastidiose, French.] Proud; haughty; Dizt.

Fasting. n. f. [see Saxon.]
Fullefly fump; fefly: the contrary to lean.

When gods have hot backs, what shall poor men do? For me, I am here a Windso flag, and the faffe, I think, I’ll forth.
Shakespeare.

Let them, my wifes,
Swift.

Appoint a meeting with this old fast fellow, Shakespere.
’Tis a fine thing to be fast and smooth.
L’Estrange.

Spare diet and labour will keep concentrations, where this disposition is the strongest, from being fast; you may see in an army twenty thousand foldi-
Swift.

Gros; [fast, French.]
We’re hurrying down.

This lubrique and adultrate age,
Nay, added for solutions of our own,
’Tis increase the dreaming ordines of the stage.
Dry.

Dull.
O fuft in whom no blysly fire is found,
Fastingial foar-growling as the ground.
Dryd.

Wealthy; rich.
Some are alledged to law, not on the contemplation of equity, but on the promising and pleasing thoughts of heritious terms, fat contentious, and showing facts.
Sax.

They were terrible alarms to perons grown fat and wealthy by a long and successful impertume.
Swift.

A fat benefit is that which doth abound with an estate and revenues, that a man may expound a great deal in delicacies of eating and drinking.
Swift.

Fasting. n. f.
An oily and sulphurous part of the blood; deposited in the cells of the membrane adiposa, from the innumerable little galls which are spred amongst them.
The fat is to be found immediately under the skin, in most parts of the body.
There are two sorts of fat; one yellow, soft, and lax, cally melted; another firm, white, brittle, and not so easily melted, called fuet or tallow. Some reek on the marrow of the bones for a third part of fat.
Quain.

In this omen the strongest and hardest genera-
1. Decree of fate. By a strange fatality men suffer their placing to be drawn into the stream of the present vogue.

2. Mortality: destructively, even to death. The frame is transparent stone and earth. Those who fell to the self same youth go to it. So fatally decreed he had not been. While he the bondage, not his face, had been. Denham.

3. Tendency to danger, tendency to some great or hazardous event. Seven times seven, or forty-nine, times nine, or eighty-one, and seven times nine, or the year forty-three, is conceived to carry with it the most considerable fatality.

4. Fatally, adv. [from fate].

5. Fatality, n. s. [from fate].

6. Fatal, adj. [fatalis, Latin; fatal; French.]

7. Fatally, adv. [from fate].

8. Fatality, n. s. [fatalis, Latin; fatal; French.]

9. Fatally, adv. [from fate].

10. To adopt a composition. Men of wit, only fathers what be will, stent.

11. To supply with a father of certain qualities. I am no father than my fate.
To Fatherless. /7/.

FATHERLESS. adj. [from father.] Wanting a father; destitute of a father. He shall not inherit any widow, or fatherless child, Ex. xx. 24.

O father's left, how wilt thou comfort me, 2 Kings, 19:3.

FATHERLY. adj. [from father.] Paternal; like a father; tender; protecting; careful; more than one parent to one's daughter, Wordsworth, The Excursion.

And by that fatherly and kindly power That you have in her, bid her answer truly, Shall. The part which delivers the soul, I owe to the pure and fatherly protection of our moment in the fathering subject. Dryden.

FATHERLY. adv. In the manner of a father. Thus Adam, fatherly dispenses.

O execrable thing to aspire Above his brother! Milton.

FATHOM. n. f. [from, Saxon.] 1. A measure of length, containing six foot, or two yards; the space to which a man can extend both arms. The extent of this fathom, or distance between the extremity of the fingers of either hand widely expanded, is equal unto the space between the sole of the foot and crown. Browne.

The armful spread across a straight line, measured from the end of the long finger on one hand, to that of the other, a measure equal to the fathom, is named a fathom, Holder.

2. It is the usual measure applied to the depth of the sea; when the line for founding is called the fathom line. Dives into the bottom of the deep, Where fathom line could never touch the ground. Shakespeare's Henry IV.

Reach; penetration; depth of contrivance; compass of thought. Another of his father, whom they have none To lead their business. Shakespeare's Othello.

To Fathom. v. a. [from the noun.] 1. To encompass with the arms extended or encircling. To reach; to matter. Leave, leave in fathom such high points as their; Nor be ambitious, the time to please. Dryden.

To stand; to try with respect to the depth. 'tis too strong for weak heads to try the heights and fathom the depths of his flights. Milton.

Our depths who fathom.

4. To penetrate into; to find the bottom or utmost extent. as: I cannot fathom his design.

FATHOMLESS. adj. [from fathom.]

FAT. v. a. 1. To feed; to make fleshy; to plump with fat. Frequent blood-breathing, in small quantities, often increases the force of the organs of digestion, and fatifies and increases the distemper. Arbuthnot.

To Fatten. v. a. [from fat.] 1. To feed; to make fleshy; to plump with fat.

FATTEN. v. a. [from fat.] 2. To make fruitful. Towns of Stiff and Lattis, Lib. Londinensis.

To FATTEN. v. a. [from fat.] 3. To feed grossly; to increase.

FATIGABLE. adj. [fatiguer, Latin.] Easily fatigued; susceptible of weariness.

To Fatigue, v. a. [fatiguer, Latin.] To weary; to fatigue; to tire; to exhaust with labour; to oppress with fatigues.

Now in use.

Fatigued. adj. [fatiguer, Latin.] Exhausted; fatigued; tired.

Fatigued. v. a. [fatiguer, French; fatigue, Latin.] 1. Weariness; fatigue.

2. The cause of weariness; labour; toil.

The great Scipio bought honours to his youth, and endured the fatigues with which he purchased them. L'Esquintre.

The man who struggles in the fight, Parlant, left armed, as though he were a knight. Prior.

Fatigued. adj. [fat and kidney.] Fat: by way of reproach or contempt.

Peace, ye fatigued! would have what a brawling don't thou keep. Shakespeare's Henry IV.

Fatigued. n. f. [from fat.] That which gives fatigues.

The wind was well, on which that philosopher bestowed the eponym of father of the earth. Arbuthnot.

FATNESS. n. f. [from fat.] 1. The quality of being fat, plump, or full-fed.

2. Fat; grease; fulness of flesh.

And by his side rode loathsome gluttony, Deformed creature, on a filthy twice; His belly upborne with luxury, and eke with fatness swollen were his eyes, Fairy Queen.

3. Unctuous or greasy matter.

Earth and water, mingled by the help of the sun, gather a numerous fatness, Bacon's Nat. Hist.

4. Olesognoufes; filmesines; unctuosines. But the olive-tree fed unto them; Should I leave my fatness wherewith by me they honour God and man, and go to be promoted over the west judges? By reason of the fatnesses and brunettes of the ground, Egypt did not produce metals, wood, pitch, and some fomes. Arbuthnot.

5. Fertility; fruitfulness.

God give thee of the dew of heavens, and the fatness of the earth, and plenty of corn and wine. Gen. xxiii. 28.

6. That which caues fertility.

When round The clouds drew fatines, in the middle sky, The dew suspendes fluid, and left unmoit The extreame glebe. Philips.

FATTY. adj. [from fat.]

Uncutious; oleaginous; greasy; partaking of the nature of fat.

The like cloud, if oily or fatty, will not discharge, not because it flicketh faster; but because air preyeth upon water, and flame and fire upon oil. Bacon's Natural History, The general.

And thirsty cucumber, when they receive Th' approaching olive, with refection fly Her fatty berries, and with tendrils creep. Dryden, Denying contact. Philips.

The common symptoms of the murrain of scurvy, are, a false taint in the spittle, and a diarrhœa uterine, sometimes with a fatty substance like butter thin thin skin, and opip.

Faucet. n. f. [from, fress, French; saucier, Latin.] The pipe infused into a vessel to give rent to the liquor, and flapped up by a peg or spigot. It is sometimes improperly written joffett.

You were out a good wholesome forenoon in hearing a caufe
FAV

When her judgment was to be justified in knowing faults by his first tokens, the want was like a young fawn, who coming in the wind of the hunters, does not know whether it be a thing or no to be offended.

Sidney.

2. Delinquency; actual offences.

The inhabitants will not take it in evil part, that the faults of their people hereon is laid open.

Dyer.

FAULTLESS. adj. [from faults]. Exempt from fault; perfect; completely excellent.

Where for our sake he faults is suffered pain, there Where he died, and where he lived again.

Dyer.

Whoever thinks a faults piece to see, thinks what ne'er was, nor, in or out there'll be.

Pope.

FAULTLY. adv. [faulty, French, from faults.]

1. Guilty of a fault; blamable; criminal; not innocent.

The king doth speak as one which is faultily, a Sam. Can thus.

Dryden.

2. Wrong; erroneous.

The form of policy by them set down for perpetual, is in this respect, faulty in uniting, some things which in Scripture art of that nature, as, namely, the difference that ought to be of posterity, when they grow to any great multitude; faulty in requiring a thing to be done, which is of perpetual necessity by the law of God; which in truth is nothing else; faulty also in urging some things by Scripture mutable, as their lay faders.

Herrick.

3. Defective; bad in any respect; not fit for the use intended.

By accident of a faulty helmet that Parker had on, he was cuffed in the mouth at the first course, so that he dined not, it is recorded by VIL.

R. F.

7. FAVOUR ou a. [favour, Latin.]

1. To support; to regard with kindnes; to be propitious to; to countenance.

Of all the race of fowler-winged fies Was none more favourable, nor more fair, Whilft Heaven had favour his felicities,

Than Clesion, the eldren son and heir.

Of Mudecar.

The Cove gods that arm'd the throne of Troy, May favour Tamara the queen of Shabi. Men favour women, Bacon's Natural History. Fortune to favoured him, that the town at his fall coming forward shone.

Coleridge.

The good Aenes as I call'd; a name, While fortune favour'd, not unknown to fame.

Dryden.

Oh happy youth! and favour'd of the deities! Distinguished care of guardian deities. Pope's Odyssey.

2. To affit with advantages or conveniences.

No one place about it is weaker than another, to favour an enemy in his approaches. Addison.

3. To resemble in feature.

The porter owned that the gentleman favoured his matter. Spectator.

4. To conduct to; to contribute.

FAVOUR. n. [favour, Latin; favour, Fr.]

1. Consequence; kindnes; Kind regard; propitious aspect; with of before the favouer.

It pleased your majesty to turn your looks Offavour from myself, and all our house. Shaksp.

The child Samuel was in favour, both with the Lord and also with me. 1 Sam.

They got not the land by their own sword; but thy right hand and thine arm; and the light of thy countenance, because thou hast favour unto them. Ex. 33:11

His dreadful navy, and his lovely mind, Gave him the fear and favour of mankind. Waller.

This favour, which was employed on a more deserving subject, had been an efficit of justice in your nature; but, as placed on me, is only charity.

Dryden's Aurenguzza. Preface.

4. Support; defence; vindication; inclination to favour; with of before the thing favoured.

The pleasures which their Scripture,iration to religion, are of a kind very different from those in favour of which they are here alleged. Roger.

At play, among the gods, you can all up to, find our hopes and wishes engaged on a sudden in favour of one side more than another.

Sidney.

They were invited from all parts for the use of kings, priests, and men. In short, the favour of learning was the honour and mode of the age.

Temple.

Kindness granted; benevolence shown. All favours and protection by them; all offices and places of importance were subject to his favours.

Sidney.

The race is not to the swift, nor yet favour to men of quick.

O, my royal master! The gods in favour to you, made you cruel. Philips.

Lenity; childhood; mitigation of punishment.

I could not discover the lewd and favour'd of this sentences, but conceived it rather to be rigorous than gentle.

Swift.

Leave; good will; pardon.

Give me no favour; may all blessings from Henceforth.

With things forgot. Shakespeare.

Let us enter into open act.,

With such wounds, 'tis to be conjectured.

The conditions of these arms would be. H. F. Johnson.

Come down, said Reynard, let us treat of peace. A peace, with all my soul, said Chancileer.

Swift.

Blasphemy, Sir, but, which sins are.

That which comes in favour at the court.

Dryden.

Object of favour; petition or thing favoured.

All these his words work, but chiefly man, His chief delight and favour; him, for whom Our bodies make the green, and walk. Milton.

7. Something given by a lady to be worn.

And every one his lovelet will advance Unto his sexual mistress, which they'll know By favour several which they did bow. Shaksp.

It is received that it helpeith to continue love, if one wear the half of the party beloved; and perhaps a glove, or other like favour, may as well do.

Bacon.

A blue riband tied round the sword-arm, I conceive to be the remains of that custom of wearing a blue riband, which is observed on such occasions of old. Spectator.

8. Any thing worn with the arm.

Here, Fluellen, wear thou this favour for me, and dicker it in thy cap.

Shaksp., Henry VI.

9. Feature; countenance. It is now little used.

That is only fairable, in laying a fault compleatly upon a faulty favour, setting forth both in unfishlish.

Swift.

Young thoust her, thine eye

Hath had upon some favour that it loves. Shaksp.

Dishair thy favour with an unjust head. Shaksp.

There's no goodness in thy face: is Antony

Be free and healthful, why to taste a favour

To trumpet high things and low. Shaksp., and Chas.

Yet well I remember

The favours of these men: were they not mine?

Did not sometime or other, in my time

A youth of fine favour and shape. Bacon.

By their virtuous behaviour they compensate the hardous of their favour, and by the pulchritude of the dress make up what is wanting to the beauty of their bodies.

Swift.

FAVOURABLE. adj. [favourable, French; favorabili, Latin.]

Kind; propitious; sification.

Let favourable ear to our requets. Shaksp., K. IV, iii.

2. Pallasiten; tender; averse from confusion.

None can have the favourable thought.

Shaksp.

3. Conductive to; contributing to; a proprieties.

People are multiplied in a country; by the temper of
of the climate, favourable to generation, health, and long life.

1. Accommodate; convenient. Many good officers were willing to try there, as a place favourable for the making of money.

2. Beautiful; well-favoured; well-featured. Of all the race of finer-witted men, which composed the army, was none more favour'd, nor more fair, than Clarius the efted fan and heir of Macrilli.

Favourableness. n.f. [from favourable.]

Kindness; benignity.

Favourably adv. [from favourable.] Kindly; with favour, with tenderness, with kind regard. Touching actions of common life, there is not any defence more favourably heard than there is which altogether intently for themselves, that they did not as accurately condemn them. She goes about seeking such as are worthy of her, and thence herself favourably unto them in the midst of the fight.

The violent will condemn the character of Absalom, as either too favourably or too hardly drawn.

We are naturally inclined to think favourably of such we love.

Favour'd, participial adj. [from favour.]

1. Regarded with kindness.

2. [From favour: the noun.] Featured. Always conjointed with well or ill.

Of her three bred
A thousand young ones, which the daily fed;
Sucking upon her polished dagger, each one
Of shining shape, yet all ill-favoured. Fairy Queen.
The ill-favoured and lean-kneed fawn did eat up the seven well-favoured and fat geese.

Favourably. adv. [from favourable.] Always joined with well or ill, in a fair or foul way; with good or bad appearance.

Favourer. n. [from favour.] One who favours; one who regards with kindness or tenderness; a well-wisher; a friend.

If we should uplift them with religions, as they do us with superfluities, the answer which they hereafter make to them, let them also consider these.

Do I not know you for a favourer?

Of this new bed? ye are not sound, Sibb, Iam. V.H.

Shakespeare.

Conspire their friends they had, labour for more, solicit all reputed favourers. Daniel's Civil War.

All the favourers of magick were most profet and bitter enemies to the Christian religion. Addison.

Favourite. n.f. [favourit, favourite; French; favousa, Italian.]

1. A person or thing beloved; one regarded with favour; anything in which pleasure is taken; that which is regarded with particular approbation or affection.

Every particular matter in criticism has its favourite exponent, its author, Adoniar's history. So fathers speak, perfunctory speech and mild;

Their face express to the favourite child, Pope.

2. One chosen as a companion by a superior; a mean wretch whole whole buffoons is by any means to please.

And fairs and punishments paid him, all offices and places of importance were distributed to his favourites. Sidney.

I was an Italian gentleman, who, by my favours, had killed a favourite of the prince of that country, was purblindly, so cruelly, that in no place but by favour or corruption they would obtain my obedience.

Sidney.

FAW

The great man down, you mark, his favourite flies;
The poor advancer makes friends of enemies, Shakespeare.

He did her feal to the plighted power,

Not impotent of their favours, all gallant retinue, Shakespeare.

Of that goddes I have fought the fire,

And to receive the ruin which the canons make in the body of the place.

FAUROT. n.f. [Latin; favourit, French.]

Favours; countenance; supporter.

I am neither author or fosterer of any feal; I will have no man add him self to me, but if I have anything thing, I do it as true; As more,

Ben Jonson.

The new mountain in the Lucine lake, which is alleg'd, by the favourer of this opinion, as an instance in behalf of it, was not raised that,

Woolley.

FAUTRESS. n.f. [fauetrix, Latin; fautrice, French.]

A woman that favours, or thows countenances.

It made him pray, and prove

Minerva's aid; and at last the credit of Clape's might:

He comes from banishment to the favours of liberty, from the harbours to the police. Garth.

FAWN. n.f. [fawn, French, from fawn, in the old French; a child, probably from infawn, Latin.]

A young deer.

Looking like a你喜欢 that late hath lost the hind;

And seek each where, where last I saw her face,

Whole image yet I carry in my mind, Spencer.

The buck is called the first year a fawn, the second year a pricket. Shakespeare.

Love's Labour Lost.

The colt hath about four years of growth; and to the fawn, and so the calf. Haven't Natural History.

Who for thy fable feeds the wanton fawn,

For him askindle spreads the flow'ret fawn. Pope.

To FAWN. v. tr. [of uncertain original.]

Perhaps a contraction of the French faw, s, term of fondness for children.

1. To court by friding before one; as a dog.

The dog straight frawned upon his master for old knowledge.

Sidney.

Holding Corinii in the name of Ronsin. Even like a favouring grizzly. Shakespeare.

2. To court by any means. Used by animals.

Indeed thereof he kif'd her very feet,

And lick'd her fily hands with fawning tongue.

At her unworthy done with time. Fairy Queen.

Is it not strange that a rational man should worship an ex? that he should fawne upon his dog? bow himself before a cat? and adore legs and paws.

Sidney.

1. To court severely.

My love, forbear to fawne upon thy fownes;

What danger or what fcer can befal thee,

So long as Edward's thy constant friend! Shakespeare.

But vain within, and prougly popular. Dryden.

So I fawns crowned to quail, with fawney'd face, Pope.

2. To bring forth a fawn.

FAWN. n.f. A fervile grudge; low flatterer.

You will rather flaw our gentle lowts how you can frown, than fpeak a fawn upon them.

For the inheritance of their loves. Shakspere, Corinii.

Fawning. adj. [from fawn.] One that favns, one that picces fervile courtship.

By fons of obedience we have arrived at the application of fawners. Shakespeare.

Fawningly. adv. [from fawn.] In a cringing fervile way.

FAKED. adj. [from FAK.] Saxton, hair.

Hair; Now obfolute.

They could not be called fixt, which is still one with fells crinits, or cortex. Camden's Rem.

FAY. n.f. I fay, French.

1. A lady's; an elf.

And the yellow-fairied fay.

Fly after the night's feeled.

Loath to fpeak the meaner; milions.

Ye fighed and fyphtes, to thy chief five ear.

Fays, faters, gens, elces, and demonis haf.

Pope.

Their ill-favour'd genes mean nothing,

Both of their doctrine and their fay. Spencer.

EABERRY. n.f. [griaffinaria.] A goofterberry.

To BEAURE. v. n. [Gauuer ulce To feige, for to cenfure; fegov, German; to sweep; feyken, Dutch, to strike.] To whip; to chastifie, to best.

BEAKEY. n.f. [fauteau, French.] Duty due to a superior lord; fidelity to a matter; loyalty.

I am in parliament plead for his truth,

And laffing feally to the new made king,

Let my fervant's name, and pay thee fally.

Command my eldest fent, may all my fent,

As pledges of my fally and love. Shakespeare.

Henry IV.

A Man's dooing.

Diligent, breaks his hand, and firs

Against the high supremacy of Heav'n.

Milton.

Each bird and beast behold.

After, their kind: I bring them to receive

From thee their namees, and pay thee fally

Whether his dull defigbe to withdraw

Our fally from God, or to dilurb

Conflagal love. Milton's Paraphr. Lost.

EAR. n.f. [reasum, Sax, to fear; cear, Dut, feale, fife.]

1. Dread; horror; painful apprehension of danger.

Four is an unresilience of the mind, upon the thought of which we naturally feel ourselves." Locke.

Troubling fear till to fro and fro till.

And found no place where inwardly threw him might.

Milton's Parad. Lost.

For fear was upon them, because of the people of those countries. W. Fales. in-3.

What then remains? Are we deprived of all?

Milton is not with, but,</ref>

Daven,

Daven,

Foar, in general, is that passion of our nature whereby we are excited to provide for our security upon the approach of evil. Rogers.

2. Awe; dejection of mind at the presence of any peril or thing; terror implied: with of before that which imperstit.
And the fear of you, and the dread of you, shall be upon every beast, And upon all the fowl of the air, and upon all the fish that swim in the sea, that they shall not hurt thee.

Gen. x. 2.

3. Anxiety; solicitude.

The principal fear was in the holy temple.

Mai. 3: 12.

4. That which causes fear.

Thy demon, that's the spirit that keeps thee, is Noble, courageous, high, unmatchable, Where Caesar's is not; but near him, thy angel Becomes a fear, as being overworn'd.

5. The object of fear.

Except the God of Abraham and the fear of man had been with me.

Gen. xiv. 13.

6. Something hung up to scare deer by its color or odor.

If he bleat from the noise of the fear shall fall into the pit, and be come out of the midst of the pit shall be taken in the future.

Ps. xiv. 18.

FEAR, n. s. [zora, Saxon.] A companion.

Obsolecet.

But fair Clarissa to a lovely fear Was linked, and by him had many pledges dear.

Fair. Quarterly.

To FEAR, a. [zoro, Saxon.]

1. To dread; to consider with apprehensions of terror; to be afraid of.

Now for my life, Horatio fears his widow. Then never trust me if I be afraid.

Shaksp. To be the fear of the Lord, since fear opposes strength.

Givers, in your weakness, strength upon your fee.

Shakespeare's Richard II.

There shall rise up a kingdom, and it shall be feared above all the kingdoms before it.

2 Esdr. xii. 13.

When I view the beauties of thy face, I fear not death, nor dangers, nor disgrace.

Dryden.

2. To fright; to terrify; to make afraid.

The inhabitants, being feared with the Spaniards landing and burning, fled from their dwellings.

Carrero.

We must not make a fearerow of the lion. Setting it up for the birds of prey.

Shaksp. Some, fitting on the hatches, would fear there, with hideous gazing, to fear away fear.

Dryden.

To FEAR, a. [zoro, Saxon.]

1. To live in horror; to be afraid.

Well you may fear too far.

—Safer than truth too far.

Let me still take away the arms I fear, Nor fear the arms be harm'd.

Shaksp. If any fear be here, if any fear

Leads for his person an ill report;

If any harm be, the heart outweighs bad life.

Shaksp.

2. To be anxious.

Then let the greedy merchant fear.

For his ill-gotten gain; And pray to god that will not hear, While the debating widows and billows bear His wealth into the main.

Dryden's Homer.

See, pious king, with different fires, Thy Braggling Albion's bullion turn'd, So much the fears for William's life, That Mary's late the dare not mourn.

Prior.

1. Timorous; timid; easily made afraid.

Hate gently, and not fearful.

Shaksp. Then that are of a fearfulheart.

Hutchins.

2. Afraid. It has of before the object of fear.

The Irish are more fearful to offend the law than the English.

Debates on Ireland. I have made my heroine fearful of death, which neither Cassandra nor Cleopatra would have been.

Dryden.

3. Awful; to be revered.

Who is like thee? glorious in holiness, fearful in praises!

Exod. xx. 11.

4. Terrible; dreadful; frightful; impressing fear.

Neither felt to friend, nor fearful to foe.

Against such monsters God maintained his own, by fearful execution or extraordinary judgment upon them.

What God did command touching Canaan, concerned not us any other wise than as a fearful judgment of his just displeasure.

Homer.

All torment, trouble, wonder, and amazement.

Thribbins here; some bravely power guide us.

Of our this fearful country.

Shaksp. It is a fearful thing to fall into the hands of the living God.

Heb. ix. 33.

Lay down by those pleasures the fearful and dangerous thoughts of lightning, the horrible and frequent earthquakes, and then there will be found noComparison.

Ralph.

This is the natural fruit of sin, and the present revenge which it takes upon wrongs, besides that fearful punishment which shall be inflicted on them in another life.

Tilisfar.

FEARFULLY, adv. [from fearful.]

1. Timorously; in fear.

In such a night.

Did Thine fearful eye stript the dew,

And saw the lion's shadow.

Shaksp.

2. Terrify; dreadfully.

There's it iscll, whole blood and bending head Looks fearfully on the confined deep.

Shaksp.

FEARFULNESS, n. s. [from fearful.]

1. Timorousness; habitual timidity.

Fear not death; nor dangers, nor disgrace.

Shaksp.

2. State of being afraid; awe; dread.

It is credible that the acknowledgment of our own unworthiness, our postured fearfulness to ask any thing, otherwise than only for his sake to whom God can deny nothing, that this should be noted for a necessary argument.

Hume.

A third thing that makes a government justly despised, is fearfulness of, and mean compliances with, bold popular offenders.

Stark.

FEARLESSLY, adv. [from fearless.]

With out retour; inutility.

"Tu master of the greatest abstinence to observe the stupid, yet common boldness of men, who so fearfully expose themselves to this most formidable peril.

Dyer.

FEARLESSNESS, n. s. [from fearless.]

Exemption from fear; intrepidity; courage; boldness.

He gave instances of an invincible courage, and fearlessness in danger.

Clarendon.

FEARLESS, adj. [from fearless.]

Free from fear; intrepid; courageous; bold, with of before the subject.

From the ground the fearless doth arise,

And walketh forth without culpation of fear.

Fair. Quarterly.

The flaming sally, fearless, though alone

Encounters' round with focus, thus answer'd bold.

Milton.

A nation, whose distinguishing character it is to be more fearful of death than danger from anything else.

Temple.

FEASIBILITY, n. s. [from feasible.]

1. Practicability.

Men often fallow fables for truths, dubiosities for certainties, poverties for possessions, and things impossible for possibilities.

Brown's A Vultur Ererupt.

FEASIBLE, adj. [feasible. French.]

Practicable; such as may be effected; such as may be done.

We conclude many things impossibilities, which yet are easy, as Cervantes's Surper.

Things are feasable in themselves; e'tis the external wisdom of God would never have advised, and much less have commanded them.

Stoic.

FEASIBLY, adv. [from feasible.]

Practicably.

FEAST, n. s. [feaster, French; festin, Latin.]

1. An entertainment of the table; a sumptuous treat of great numbers.

Here's our chief guest. If he had been forgotten,

It had been as gap in our great feast.

Shaksp.

Phillis's birth day he made a feast among his servants.

Shaksp.

The lady of the feast is her lady. And made the lady of the feast her guest.

Wode.

When in a bowie caled on the plain, With sudden feats ordain'd, and large for either train.

Dryden.

2. An anniversary day of rejoicing either on a civil or religious occasion. Opposed to a fast.

This day is call'd the feast of Catharine.

Shaksp.

3. Something delicious to the palate.

Many people would, with revelry, give the grining of an hungry belly to those dishes which are a feather to others.

Locke.

To FEAST, v. n. [from the noun.]

To eat sumptuously; to eat together on a day of joy.

Richard and Northumberland, great friends,

Did feast together.

Shaksp.

The humour finds, indeed; but our church-doctors

Feast on the silver, and give us the serings.

Dryden.

To FEAST, v. a.

1. To entertain sumptuously; to entertain magnificently.

He was entertained and feasted by the king with feasts and cromes.

The Farmer's Husband

2. To delight; to pamper; to gratify luxuriously.

All these are our all, nature's excellence,

Whose tail or smell can blest the feasted feasts.

Dryden.

FEASTER, n. s. [from feast.]

1. One that fares deliciously.

Those feasters could speak of great and many excellencies in matter.

Taylor.

2. One that entertaineth magnificently.

FEASTFUL, adj. [fast and full.]

1. Festive; joyful.

The vingins also that on feastful days

Vitured him with flowers, only bewailing

His lot unfortunate in martial choice,

From whence captivity and lots of eyes.

Milton.

Thou, when the bridgeroom with his feasting friend,

Pals to blifie at the mid-hour of night.

Hail gait'd thy entrance, virgin wife and pure.

Milton.

2. Luxurious; riotous.

The tutor train.

Who brood his palace, and with lawlesse power

His herdard and feasters in such caces down.

Pope.

FEASTRIER, n. s. [fast and rite.]

Custom observed in entertainments.

His hospitable gate,

Unbarm'd to all, esists a numerous train

Of daily guests; whose heart with plenty crown'd,

Revises the feastness old.

Philips.

FEAT, n. s. [fait, French.]

1. Act; deed; action; exploit.

Frolick's his name, renowned for

For his bold feats, and hard and valiant courage;

Full off approved in many a critical war.

Fair. Quarterly.

That Tarquin's fell he met,

And struck him on the knee, in that day's feats,

When he might visit the woman in the close.

He prov'd the best man's th' field.

Shaksp.

Our soldiers are men of strong hearts for action, and perform such feats as they are not able to express.

Addison's Spectator.

2. A trick; an artful, fictive, or ludicrous performance.

The joints are more supple to all feats of activity and to the skill in youth than in age.

Rame.

FEAT adj. [fait, bien fait, French; hand dealt at appareil.]

1. Ready; skilful; ingenious.

Never master had

A page to kind, so dutens, dilettant;

So under his occasion, true.

C.
Shakespeare's "The Winter's Tale"

2. It is now only used in irony and contempt. That fact man at controversy. Stilling fleet.

That fact man at controversy. Stilling fleet.

Look how well my garments fit upon me, Much slower than before. Shakespeare's "Winter's Tale."

4. Feathery and [from feathers].

Neatly; neatly. Not in use.

The tender falks on high. Smooth.

FATHER, n. f. [father, Sax.] Father, German.

1. The plume of birds. Look, as I blow this feather from my face. Shakespeare's "Henry VI."

The brave eagle does with sorrow for the forest wasted, and that lofty tree Which holds her nest, about to be overthrown. Before the feathers of her young are grown. She will not leave them, nor the nest cast away. But bears them boldly on her wings away. While. Walder. Walking man in the high precaste corner of his eye with his finge, and turns his eye away from his finger, he will see a circle of colours like those in a rainbow. Neatly. I am bright as an angel, and light as a feather. Swift.

2. Kind; nature; species, from the proverbial expression, "birds of a feather;" that is, of a species.

Clipped and the brought Northumberland, And of their feathers many more proud birds. Have wrought the early-melting kind as wax. Also, of Shakespeare's "Henry VI."

I am not of that feather to shake off. My friend who he must needs me. Shakespeare.

3. An ornament; an empty title.

[Upon a horse.] A fort of natural fizing of hair, which, in some places, rises above the lying hair, and there makes a figure refombling the tip of Fierre's Dice.

To dress in feathers. To dress in feathers. To fit with feathers.

To dress in feathers.

To dress in feathers. To dress in feathers.

To tread as a cock.

Dame Partlet was the sovereign of his heart, Adored in love, exulting in his joy. He fed him a hundred times away.

To enrich; to adorn; to exalt.

They think not to say, that the kings regard not to plume his nobility and peoples, to father himself. "Henry VII."

To enrich; to adorn; to exalt.

They think not to say, that the kings regard not to plume his nobility and peoples, to father himself. "Henry VII."

To enrich; to adorn; to exalt.

They think not to say, that the kings regard not to plume his nobility and peoples, to father himself. "Henry VII."

To enrich; to adorn; to exalt.

They think not to say, that the kings regard not to plume his nobility and peoples, to father himself. "Henry VII."

To enrich; to adorn; to exalt.

They think not to say, that the kings regard not to plume his nobility and peoples, to father himself. "Henry VII."

To enrich; to adorn; to exalt.

They think not to say, that the kings regard not to plume his nobility and peoples, to father himself. "Henry VII."

To enrich; to adorn; to exalt.

They think not to say, that the kings regard not to plume his nobility and peoples, to father himself. "Henry VII."

To enrich; to adorn; to exalt.

They think not to say, that the kings regard not to plume his nobility and peoples, to father himself. "Henry VII."

To enrich; to adorn; to exalt.

They think not to say, that the kings regard not to plume his nobility and peoples, to father himself. "Henry VII."

To enrich; to adorn; to exalt.

They think not to say, that the kings regard not to plume his nobility and peoples, to father himself. "Henry VII."

To enrich; to adorn; to exalt.

They think not to say, that the kings regard not to plume his nobility and peoples, to father himself. "Henry VII."

To enrich; to adorn; to exalt.

They think not to say, that the kings regard not to plume his nobility and peoples, to father himself. "Henry VII."

To enrich; to adorn; to exalt.

They think not to say, that the kings regard not to plume his nobility and peoples, to father himself. "Henry VII."

To enrich; to adorn; to exalt.

They think not to say, that the kings regard not to plume his nobility and peoples, to father himself. "Henry VII."

To enrich; to adorn; to exalt.

They think not to say, that the kings regard not to plume his nobility and peoples, to father himself. "Henry VII."

To enrich; to adorn; to exalt.

They think not to say, that the kings regard not to plume his nobility and peoples, to father himself. "Henry VII."

To enrich; to adorn; to exalt.

They think not to say, that the kings regard not to plume his nobility and peoples, to father himself. "Henry VII."

To enrich; to adorn; to exalt.

They think not to say, that the kings regard not to plume his nobility and peoples, to father himself. "Henry VII."

To enrich; to adorn; to exalt.

They think not to say, that the kings regard not to plume his nobility and peoples, to father himself. "Henry VII."

To enrich; to adorn; to exalt.

They think not to say, that the kings regard not to plume his nobility and peoples, to father himself. "Henry VII."

To enrich; to adorn; to exalt.

They think not to say, that the kings regard not to plume his nobility and peoples, to father himself. "Henry VII."

To enrich; to adorn; to exalt.

They think not to say, that the kings regard not to plume his nobility and peoples, to father himself. "Henry VII."

To enrich; to adorn; to exalt.

They think not to say, that the kings regard not to plume his nobility and peoples, to father himself. "Henry VII."

To enrich; to adorn; to exalt.

They think not to say, that the kings regard not to plume his nobility and peoples, to father himself. "Henry VII."

To enrich; to adorn; to exalt.

They think not to say, that the kings regard not to plume his nobility and peoples, to father himself. "Henry VII."

To enrich; to adorn; to exalt.

They think not to say, that the kings regard not to plume his nobility and peoples, to father himself. "Henry VII."

To enrich; to adorn; to exalt.

They think not to say, that the kings regard not to plume his nobility and peoples, to father himself. "Henry VII."

To enrich; to adorn; to exalt.
heirs for ever; fee-tail is that whereas we are feized to us and our heirs, with limitation; that is, the heirs of our body. And fee-tail is either general or special; general is where land is given to a man, and the heirs of his body; fee-tail special, is that where a man and his wife are feied of land to them and the heirs of their two bodies.

2. Property; peculiar.
What concerns they? The general cause; or is it a free-gift? Due to some free-birth? Shakespeare.
3. Reward; gratification; recom pense.
There be the ways by which, without reward, Living is in course begotten, though full hard: For nothing there is created without a free. Hubber. Not helping, death's my fee; but if I help, what do you promise me? Shakespeare.
4. Payments occasionally claimed by persons in office.
Now that God and friends Have turn'd my captive state to liberty, At our engagement what are these fees? Shakespeare.
5. Reward paid to physicians or lawyers. He does not refuse doing a good office for a man, because he cannot get a free. Addis.
6. Portion; pittance; share. Ovibole.
In pruning and trimming all manner of trees, Referre to each cattle their proper fees. Taffer. FEE'FARM. n. [fee and farm.] Tenure by which lands are held from a superior lord.

John surrendered his kingdom to the pope, and took them back again, to hold in feoffment; which brought him into such hatred, as all his lifetime after he was polluted with fear. Den.

To FEE. v. a. from the noun.
1. To reward; to pay.
No man for the fun, no man purchases the ficht, nor ens or he walks by it. South.
Wash the dog in time; for when within The dropluves, and extend the skin, In vain his helmet the patient curest, And fees the doctor; but too late is wife. Dryden.
2. To hire; to buy, to procure. I have long loved her, and ingross opportunities to meet her; fed every light occasion, that could not indignly give me fight of her. Shaksp.
3. To keep in hire. There's not a thing of them but in his house I have a forecast fee. Shaksp. Macheath.

FEEBLE. adj. [feble, French.] Weak; debilitated; sickly; infirm; without strength of body or mind.
The man carried all the fible upon after to Je.

Richard.
Command him at once of a faithful friend, But feeble are the flocks I can fend. Dryden.
I have to excuse my fawning wages; My spirits feeble, and my pains are strong. Dryden.

We carry the image of God in us, a rational and immortal soul, and though there be feeble and fible, yet we aspire after eternal happiness, and finally expect a great exaltation of all our natural powers. Bacon.

Browne.

They are a crouch that helps the weak and supports the fible, but retards the strong. Smith.

To FEE'BLE. v. a. from the noun. To weaken; to enfeeble; to deprive of strength or power. Not in use.

Or, in a castle resolved high and sanguine, By lawful engines and instantaneous lights.
To well & Pope

Pope's

Shakepear's

Shakepear's

Shakespeare

Shakespeare

Shakespeare

Shakespeare

Shakespeare

Shakespeare

Shakespeare

Shakespeare

Shakespeare

Shakespeare

Shakespeare

Shakespeare

Shakespeare

Shakespeare

Shakespeare

Shakespeare

Lyonet

FELICTATE.

Felicitate, French. felicity, Lat.

To make happy.

I professe.

My self an enemy to all other joys; and I am alone felicite...

In your dear highest love's.
What a glorious entertainment and pleasure would fall and felicitate his spirit, if he could grasp all in his heart.

2. To congratulate. They might proceed unto forms of speeches, felicitating the good, or depriving the evil to Boswell.

FELICITATION. n. s. [French, from feliciter.] Congratulation. Ditto.

FELICIOUS. adj. [felix, Late.] Happy. Ditto.

FELICITOUSLY. adv. [from felicitor.] Happily. Ditto.

FELICIVAS. n. s. [felicitas, Latin; felicit.] Happines; prosperity; blissfulness; blestness. Ditto.

FELIX. adj. [Felix.] Happy; prosperous; thriving. Ditto.

FELIX. adv. [felicis, Late.] Happily. Ditto.

FELINE. adj. [feline, Latin.] Like a cat; pertaining to a cat. Even as in the beast; from which he differs principally in his teeth, which are canine, and in his tail, while the lion has a long taper. Gram.

FELL. adj. [pelle, Saxon.]

1. Cruel; barbarous; inhuman. It seemed fury, discord, madness fell.

2. Savage; ravenous; bloody. That darkness I might into a hell, and my delight, like a fell and cruel hound, E'er since pursue me. Shakespeare. Twelfth Night.

3. Silent. I know thee, loves I love at the raging main, Murderous the wrath that stains thy black place. Pope.

4. Scouring all the taming arts of man. The keen hyena, fell of the fell. Thomson.

FELL. n. s. [pelle, Saxon.] The skin; the hide. Not used.

FELL, thine, these eyes. The gougers shall devour them, death and fell. Ere they shall make us weep. Shakespeare.

The time has been my enemies would have could to me my very life in a fell sort of hair.

Would at a dismal treasire route and tire. Shakespeare. To FELL. n. a. [fellen, German.]

1. To knock down; to bring to the ground. Villain, band, or I'll fell thee down. Shakespeare.

Up and down he travailed his ground;

Nowwards a falling blow, nowwards again. Daniel.

Taking the small end of his musket in his hand, he struck him on the head with the stock, and fell him. Raleigh.

His fall, for the present, struck an earthquake into all sides, nor was the sugar he intended to believe he was fell.

On their whole holt I flew

Unarmed, and with a trivial weapon fell'd

Their choicest youth, they only half his seed.

Million.

2. It seems improperly joined with down or along.

With which he faire he drove he'd fell'd him down, And cleat the circle of his golden crown. Dryden.

I fell'd along a man of bearded face. His limbs all cover'd with a shining case. Dryden.

3. To fell down; to cut down.

There would he fell a firmer that would fell

Bergens of woods, which he did lastly fell, Habb.
FE\L

My fellow-labourers have committed me to perform in their behalf this office of dedication. Dryden, Phil. Ded.

FELLO\SERVANT. n. f. One that has the same master.

Nor let us think we are beasts of the earth, than of our fellow-servants; and inquire zealously into the ways of God with them. Milton.

Fair fellow-servant! may your gentle ear prove more propitious to my lighted case than the bright darts of verger. Swift.

Their fathers and yours were fellow-servants to the same heavenly master while they lived; nor is that relation dissolved by their death, but might still flourish among your children. Arnebury.

FELLO\Soldier. n. f. One who fights under the same commander. An endearing appellation used by officers to their men.

Come, fellow-soldier, make thy proclamation. Epaphroditus, my brother and companion in labour, and fellow-soldier. Phil. ii. 25.

FELLO\STUDENT. n. f. One who studies in a company with another, in the same class, under the same master.

I pray thee do not make me, fellow-student, Shakespeare's Hamlet.

If you have no fellow-student at hand, tell it over with your acquaintance. Walpurgis's Logick.

FELLO\SUBJECT. n. f. One who lives under the same government.

The bleeding condition of their fellow-subjects was a feverish in the balance with their private ends. Swift.

FELLO\SUFFERER. n. f. One who shares in the same evils; one who partakes the same sufferings with another.

How happy was it for those poor creatures, that your grace was made their fellow-sufferer? and how glorious for you, that you chose to suffer rather than to resolve? Dryden.

We in some manner share the necessities of the poor at the same time that we relieve them, and make ourselves not only their patrons but fellow-sufferers. Addison's Spectator.

FELLO\WRITER. n. f. One who writes at the same time, or on the same subject.

Since they cannot raise themselves to the repetition of their fellow-writers, they must fix it to their own pitch, if they would keep them in a level with them. Addison.

FELLO\FEELING. n. f. [Fellow and feeling.]

1. Sympathy. It is a high degree of humanity not to have a fellow-feeling of the misfortune of my brother. L'Estrange.

2. Combination; joint interest; commonly in an ill sense. Even your milkwoman and your nursemaid have a fellow-feeling. Act. I. b. 1. 2. Acton's handbook.

FELLO\LIKE. adj. [Fellow and like.]

Fellowly. Like a companion; on equal terms; companionable.

All which good parts he grafted with a good fellow-feeling, kind, and respectful carriage. Carew.

This kind for another to make an exchange with fellowly neighbourhood their mutual interest is irk.

FELLO\SHIP. n. f. [from fellow.]

1. Companionhip; comfort; society.

The hour is come that tell what he would have
But knead and build up hands for fellowship. Shakespeare.

FELLO\ISH. n. f. [from fellow.]

Of amaranth, chalice, fountain, or spring, By th' waters of life, where'er they fall In fellowship of joy, the fons of light Hasted. Milton's Paradise Lost.

There be no man but God parts excellent things into his portion, but for the common good for men are made for society and mutual fellowship. Coligny's Servants.

God having designed man for a sociable creature, made him at once an individual, and under the necessity to have fellowship with some of his own kind, but furnished him also with language, which was to be the great instrument and commen

2. Association; confederacy; combination.

We would not die in this man's company that fears his fellowship to die with us. Dryden.

They have the kind word, but not always, even as they are men, although they have never any settled fellowship, never any formal agreement amongst them. Hooker.

Most of the other Christian princes were drawn into the fellowship of that war. Kallof.

4. Partnership; joint interest. Landers acquainted, now I feel by proof. Swift.

That fellowship in pain divides not harm, Nor lighten'st aught each man's peculiar good. Dryden.

Parable Required.

O love! thou dearly dost thy power maintain, And will not bear a rival in thy reigns. Tyrants and thou all fellowship disdain. Dryden.

6. Frequency of intercourse; social pleasure.

In a great town friends are fatigued, so that there is not that fellowship which is in his neighbours. Swift.

7. Fines and fondness for fealty entertainments, with good prefixed. He had by his executive good fellowship, which was grateful to all the company, made himself popular with them, and his conversation acceptable. Addison.

8. An establishment in the college, with share in its revenue. Concludes, having, by extreme parsimony, laboured thirty pounds out of a bagful fellowship, went to sixpence, and the rest. Locke.

9. [In arithmetick. That rule of plural proportion whereby we balance accounts, depending between divers persons, having put together a general tok, so that they may every man have his proportional gain, or suit them his proportional part of loss.

FELLY. adj. [from fell.]

Cruelly; inhumanly; fangably; barbarously.

Fair to every friend and unkind; as a tyrant, that with g cladiness Hants after blood, when he by chance doth find A feeble beast doth fell him superbly. Spenser.

FELLO\DE. n. f. [In law.] He that committed felony by murdering himself. Fellon.

FELLO\ON. n. f. [from fellow.]

1. One who has committed a capital crime. I apprehend thee for a fellow here. Shakespeare.

The wild tap, Chaos! even amid the holy noisy, and made to blend, Like jove, where they did talk and strull, and died. Dryden.

2. A whittow; a tumour formed between the bone and its intervening membrane, very painful. The malignant paronychia is that which is commonly called a fellow. Witsens. Surgery.

FELLO\ON. adj. Cruel; traitorously; inhuman.

Ay me! what thing on earth, that all things breed, Might be the cause of so impatient grief? What sorrow, or what fowl with fellow done? Hath stirred up to much mischievous delight! Spenser.

Then bids prepare thee hospitable treat, Vain means of love to veil the fellow here. Pope.

FELLO\NIOUS. adj. [from felon.] Wicked; traitorous; villainous; malignant; perfidious; defraudful.

This man conceived the duke's death; but what was the motive of that felonious conception in the clouds. W. W.

O thriftless night! Why should't thou, but for some felonious end, In thy dark lantnorn thus close up the bars? That nature hang in heaven, and fill'd the lamps with everlasting oil, to give due light To the midst and lonely traveller. Milton.

In that felonious heart through venom fires, It does but touch thy flesh and dyes. Dryden.

FELLY\MELY. n. f. [from fellow.] In a fellowly way.

FELLY\ONIOUS. adj. [from felon.] Wicked.

Not used.

I am like for desparate dote to die, Through fellowious force of mine enemy. Spenser.

FELLO\ON. n. f. [felon, French; felonia, low Latin; from felon.] A crime denounced capital by the law; an enormous crime.

I will make it felony to drink small beer. Shakespeare's Henry VI.

FELT. The pretense of felt, which see.

FELT. n. f. [prel, Saxon.]

1. Cloth made of wool united without weaving. It was a delicate fraternage to have A troop of hoose with felt. Shakesp. King Lear.

2. A hide or skin.

To know whether theop are found or not see that the felt be loose. Mather's Husbandry.

FELLY. n. f. [from the noun.] To unite without weaving.

The same wolf one man felt into a hat, another weaves into cloth, another into kirtle. Hall.

FELLY. n. f. [from felt.] To clot together like felt.

His felted locks, that on his bosom fell, On rugged mountains biers and thorns resemble. Spenser.

FELLY\CA. n. f. [felon, Fr. felon,h. Amb.] A small open boat with fix oars. Diet.

FEMALE. n. f. [femelle, French; femella, Latin.] A sex; one of the sex which brings young; not male.

God created man in his own image, male and female he created them. Gen. i. 27.

He is of the seed of the head, whether it be m. le or female, he shall offer it without hemith. Lev.

Men, more divine, Indul'd with intellectual soul and soul, Are happy to their females, and their lords. Shakesp.

FEMALE. adj.

1. Not male.

Female of sex it items. Milton.

Swarming nettles appear'd The female bee, that feeds her husband drone. Milton.

2. Not masculine; belonging to a female.

Other arts, perhaps, With their attendant moons thou wilt decry. Communicating male and female light; Which two great rays animate the world. Milton.

Add what wants.

In female sex, the more to draw his love. Milton. He freplied not to eat Against his better knowlege, but desirest, But fondly overcome with female charm. Milton. So everlast with without feminine, The tassel and doublets of the fair warrior queen. Dryden.

3. FEMALE Rhymes. Double rhymes so called because in French, from which the term is taken, they end in f or of feminine. These rhymes are female.
To FENCE. v. a.
1. To incolect; to secure by an inclofure or hedge.
2. To guard against; to act on the defensive.
3. To fight according to art, by obviating blows as well as giving.
FENCING. n. f. [from fence.]
Without inclofure; open.
FENCIBLE. adj. [from fence.]
Capable of fencing.
FENCING MASTER. n. f. [fence and master.]
One who teaches the science of defence, or the use of weapons.
FENCING SCHOOL. n. f. [fence and school.]
A place in which the use of weapons is taught.

FEN

Wet creoks of heat is but a fable,
We know the torrid zone is now found habitable.

Cowl.
The female rheymes are in use with the Italian in every line, with the Spanish promiscuously, and with the French alternately, as strange to the Algers, the Pucelle, or any of their later poems.

FEME CEVERT. n. f. [French.]
A married woman; who is also said to be under covert baron.

Blown.

FEMINITY. n. f. [from feminum, Latin.]
Feminine.

1. Of the sex that brings young; female.
2. Soft; tender; delicate.

Heavily's form.
Agile, brisk, and feminine.
Milton.

3. Effeminate; emasculated; wanting manliness.
Nimia was no man of war at all, but stogiere feminins, and subject to ease and delicacy.

Raleigh's History.

FEMININE. n. f. A she; one of the sex that brings young; female.
Of why did God create at left
This novelty on earth, this fair defect
Of nature! And not fill the world with once
With men, as angels, without feminam? Milton.

PFORHAL. adj. [femoralis, Latin.] Belonging to the thigh.
The largest crooked needle should be used in taking up the fences, and ambuscades in amputation.

FEN. n. f. [pen. Sax. searrow, Dutch.]
A marsh; low flat and moist ground; a moor; a bog.

Mexico is a city that stands in the midst of a great marsh or fen. Abbot's Description of the World.

Along.

1. Like to a lonely dragon, that his fen
Makes fear to talk of more than seen. Shak.
The surface is black as one.

Woodward.

2. To them out of their parents view.
At a great distance, it is to expose to the greatest danger of their whole life, when they have the leaf of or bury and guard the young against the fen.

Let us bear this awful corps to Caesar,
And lay it in his sight, that it may stand
A fence between us and the victor's wrath.

Addison.

FENCE. n. f. [from defence.]
1. Guard; security; outwork; defence.
That proved not fence enough to the reputation of their oppressors.

There's no fence against inundations, earthquakes, or hurricanes.

L'Home.

To put them out of their parents view.
At a great distance, it is to expose to the greatest danger of their whole life, when they have the leaf of or bury and guard the young against the fen.

Let us bear this awful corps to Caesar,
And lay it in his sight, that it may stand
A fence between us and the victor's wrath.

Addison.

FENCIBLE. adj. [from fence.]
Open.
FENCING. n. f. Capable of fencing.
FENCING MASTER. n. f. fence and master.
One who teaches the science of defence, or the use of weapons.
FENCING SCHOOL. n. f. fence and school.
A place in which the use of weapons is taught.

If a man be to prepare his son for duell, I had rather mine should be a good wrestler than an ordinary fencer, which is the most a gentleman can attain to.

Dryden.

FENC-CRICKET. n. f. [cricketa].
An insect that digs itself holes in the ground.

To FEND. v. a. [from defend.]
To keep off; to shut out.

Spread with straw the bedding of thy fold.
With form beneath to fend the bitter cold.

Dryden.

To FEND. v. n. To dispute; to shift off a charge.
The dexterous management of terms, and being able to fend and prove with poise, a great part of his learning; but it is learning distinct from knowledge.

Lacy.

FENDRE. n. f. [from fend.]
1. An iron plate laid before the fire to hinder coals that fall from rolling forward to the floor.

2. Any thing laid or hung at the side of a ship to keep off violence.

FENNEL. n. f. [fennelcum, Latin.]
A plant of strong scent.

A very sweet bower, more pleasant for me Than smell of fenicent fennel, or the tests Of eke, or ake, stopping with milk at e'e.

Milton.

FENNELFLOWER. n. f. [magnelia]. A plant.

FENNELGIAN. n. f. [fennela]. A plant.

FENNY. adj. [from fen.]
1. Marshy; boggy; moorish.

Driving in of pikes was used for tone or brick houres, and that only where the ground proves fenge or moor.

Milton.

The hungry crocodile, and hissing snake.

Lawk in the troubl'd stream and sly snake.

Peter.

2. Inhabiting the marsh.

Fifled of a fenny skake.

In the caustic boll of fen, Shakespeare's King Lear.

FENNYSTONES. n. f. A plant.

FENSCUCKED. adj. [fen and suck].
Sucked out of marshes.

Infect her beauty.

You fenfucked fogs, drawn by the powerful fun.

Shakespeare's King Lear.

FEOD. n. f. [fodero, low Latin.]
Fod. tenue.

FEODAL. adj. [feodal, French from fodero.]
Held from another.

FEODARY. n. f. [from fodoom, Latin.]
One who holds his estate under the tenure of fuit and service to a superior lord.

Hooper.

To FEODFE. v. a. [fodero, French from fodero.]
To put in possession; to invest with right.

FEODFE. n. f. [feodatus, Latin; feffor, French.]
One put in possession.

The late end of Defmon, before his breaking for feoffes and tenures, is the last to feoff in truth, in hope to have cut off all the majesty from the dukes of his lands.

Steffor.

FEODDER. n. f. [seffator, low Latin.]
Who gives possession of any thing.

See Poertment.

FEORTMENT. n. f. [sefformentum, Latin.]
The art of granting possession,

Any
FER

Any gift or grant of any thing, called, lands, or other immovable things, to another in fee simple, that is, to him and his heirs forever, by the delivery of one of the things given; when it is in writing, it is called a deed of feoffment; and in every feastment the giver is called the feoffor, and he that receiveth by virtue thereof the feoffee, feoffee. The proper difference between a feoffor and a donor is, that the feoffee gives in fee simple, the donor in fee-toll.

FERACITY. n. f. [feracitas, Latin.] Fruitfulness; fertility. Decrease.

FERAL. adj. [ferali, Latin.] Funereal; deadly.

FERATION. n. f. [ferationis, Latin.] The act of keeping holiday; censorship from work.

As though there were any feration in nature, this festival is commonly termed the physicians vacation.

FERRINE. adj. [ferinus, Latin.] Wild; savage.

The only difficulty is toughening those ferrine, wilder, and unamenable heads; as, bones, tygers, sheriff.

FERRINESNESS. n. f. [from ferine.] Barbarity; savageness; wildness.

A fierce and nectarous kind of life, a conversation with those that were fallen into a barbarous habit of life, would form the next generation to barbarism and ferinesness.

FERITY. n. f. [feritas, Latin.] Barbarity; cruelty; wildness; savageness.

He reduced him from the most object and fluid ferity to his senses, and to other reason.

Woodward's Natural History.

To FERMENT. v. a. [fermento, Latin; fermenter, Fr.] To exalt or rarify by intemperate motion of parts.

Ye from a fountain, while youths ferment your pure spirits swell the fertility flood; blood, now range the hills, the thickest woods bestow. Wind the full horn, spread the waving net.

To FERMET. v. n. To have the parts put into intemperate motion.

FERMENT. n. f. [ferment, French; fermentation, Latin.] 1. That which causes intemperate motion. The ferment puts ferments into a fever upon ingregation, and all the animal humourous which are putrifying ferments. Feyer.

2. Intemperate motion; tumult. Subdue and cool the ferment of desire. Roger.

FERMENTABLE. adj. [from ferment.] Capable of fermention.

FERMENTATIVE. adj. [from ferment.] Having the power to cause fermentation. Not used.

Cucumber, being waterfull, fill the veins with crude and windy ferroleult, that contain little fat or spirit, and debilitate the vital acidity and fermentative faculty of the stomach.

Brown.

FERMENTATION. n. f. [fermentatio, Latin.] A flow motion of the intemperate particles of a mixt body, arising usually from the operation of some active acid matter, which rarifies, excites, and subtilizes the soft and sulphureous particles; as when lemon or yel rarifies, lightens, and ferments the earthy matter. Fermentation differs much from that usually called ebullition or effervescence, which is a violent boiling and strugling between an acid and an alkalii, when mixed together.

Herriot.

The juice of grapes, after fermentation, will yield a spirtuous liquor.

Of the thing given, when it is in writing, it is called a deed of feoffment; and in every feoffment the giver is called the feoffor, and he that receiveth by virtue thereof the feoffee, feoffee. The proper difference between a feoffor and a donor is, that the feoffee gives in fee simple, the donor in fee-toll.

FERMENTATIVE. adj. [from ferment.] Causing fermentation; having the power to cause fermentation.

Animalic spirits destroy by their fermentative heat.

FERMENTATION. n. f. [ferment, French.] A plant. The leaves are furnished with a number of small pinnules, dentated on the edges, and cut close one by another on slender stipes. On the back of these pinnules are produced the feoffes, small and extremely numerous. These are in a fowl, excredy decocted for the tickets in children.

Hill.

Black was the dew, thick with boozch it floated, herewith and ferment, and interlace with therewith; Few of the humans feet or tracks of beasts were heard. Dryden.

There are great varieties of fern in different parts of the world; but they are seldom cultivated in gardens.

Miller.

FERMENT. n. f. [from form.] Overgrown with fern.

The herd suff'd, did late repair To fern heathys, and to their fenon-lake. Dryden.

FEROCIOUS. adj. [ferox, Latin; ferocious, French.] Savage; fierce.

Smaller role in profusion of med. Shaking the horrors of his ample bosom, and each instrument feature grim with once. Pope.

Ravenous; rapacious.

The hour, that becometh a prey unto man, unto beasts and foulness of the air, is fruitful even unto corruption; but the lion and ferocious animal kitch young ones but feldmon, and but one at a time.

Bacon's Essays.

FEROCITY. n. f. [ferocius, Latin; ferocity, French, from feroucous.] Savage; wildness; feroceness.

An uncommon ferocity in my countenance, with the remarkable snarl of my nose, and extent of my mouth, have procured me the name of lion.

Admiral.

Urn's untouch'd, as were they Inhabitable, full of ferocity. Philip's Bruton.

FERROUS. adj. [ferreus, Latin.] Irony; of iron.

In the body of glass there is no ferrous or magnetical nature.

Brown's Register.

FERREIT. n. f. [fared, Welsh; fere, French; ferret, Dutch; ferre, Latin.] 1. A kind of rat with red eyes and a long front, used to catch rabbits. They are said to have been brought hither from Africa.

With what an eager appetency she looked, having threatening not only in her ferret eyes, but while the spok, her nose seemed to threaten her chin.

Sidney.

Cicero.

Looks with such ferret and such fiery eyes As we have seen him. Shakespeare's Julius Caesar.

Costumes are taken either by ferrets or purse-nets.

Meisterlin.

2. A kind of narrow woollen tape.

FERRET. v. a. [from the noun.] To drive out of lurking places, as the ferret drives the coney.

The Archbishop had ferreted him out of all his holds.

Hevin.

FERRETER. n. f. [from ferret.] One that hunts another in his privacies.

FERREAGE. n. f. [from ferry.] The fare paid at a ferry.

FERREUS. adj. [ferreus, French; ferritious, Latin.] Partaking of the particles and qualities of iron.

They are cold, hot, purgative, diuretic, ferrous, salines, petroleums, and bismuthious. Ray.

FERROUS. n. f. [from ferrum, iron, Latin.] An iron ting put round any thing to keep it from cracking.

The fingers ends are strengthened with nails, so we fortify the ends of our flaves or forks with iron loops. Ray.

FERRY. v. a. [ferryman, to pass; Saxon; falsor, German, a passage. Stiller imagines that this whole family of words may be deduced from the Latin navis. I do not love Latin originals; but if such must be fought, may not these words be more naturally derived from ferry, to be carried?] To carry over in a boat.

Cymcoles heard and saw. He loudly called to such as were abroad, The little bark unto the shore to draw, And him to ferry over that deep ford. Fairy Queen.

FERRY. v. a. [from the verb, and FERRYBOAT, boat, on.]

1. A vessel of carriage; a vessel in which goods or passengers are carried over water.

By this time was the worthy Gouyon brought unto the other side of that wide strand, Where he was rowing, and for passage fought: Him needed not long call, the hoop to hand Her ferry brought. Fairy Queen.

Bring them with imagin'd speed Unto the Tragedy, to the common ferry Which trades to Venice. Shakespeare.

A ferry boat to carry over the king's household.

XV. xix. 2. I went down to the river Brent in the ordinary ferry.

Addison.

3. The passage over which the ferry boat paffes.

FERRYMAN. n. f. [ferry and min.] One who keeps a ferry; one who for hire transports goods and passengers over the water.

I path, melancholy, the melancholy path, With that grim ferryman which prents write of, Unto the kingdom of perpetual night. Shakespeare.

The common ferryman of Egypt, that waited over the dead bodies from Memphis, was made by the Greeks the ferryman of hell, and solemn stories railed after him.

Brown.

The greedy ferryman of hell deny'd

Ferus entrance, 'till he knew his guide. Reston.

FERTILIZATION. Common terminations are the same as in English an army; coming from the Saxon word wifid.

Gibbus.

FERTILE. adj. [fertile, French; fertile, Latin.] 1. Fruitful; abundant; plentiful.

I had hope of Venice,

As firmly as I hope for fertile England. Shakespeare.

I have had a large, a fair, and a pleasant field to fertile, that it has given me two baskets in a Session. Dryden.

I ask whether in the uncontaminated waste of America, a thousand acres yield as many conveniences of life as ten acres of equally fertile land do in Denmark. Locke.

View the wide earth adorn'd with hills and woods, Rich in her herds; and fertile by her floods.

Blackmore.

2. With of before the thing produced.

The earth is fertile of all kind of grasse. Camden.
This happy country is extremely fertile, as of those above, to likewit of its productions under ground.

Windsor.

Fertility. n.f. [from fertile.] Fruitfulness; fecundity.

To fertilize. v.t. [from fertile.] To fertilize; to make fruitful or productive. Not in use.

A cock will in one day fertilize the whole race-corn or cluster of eggs not excluded in many woods and small hamlets. Brown.

Fertility. n.f. [fertilis, Latin.] Fecundity; abundance; fruitfulness; plentitude.

I will go root away
The bosom needs, that without profit funk
The suite's fertility from wholesome bowe. Woodward.

Fertilitie. v.t. [fertilis, Latin.] To fertilize; to make fruitful; to make productive; to fecundate.

Rain-water carries along with it a sort of terrifying spirit that fertilizes the land, as being proper for the formation of vegetables. Woodward.

FERTILITY. v.t. [from fertile.] To make fruitful; to make plenteous; to make productive; to fecundate.

Raim-borne
To Fertile. v.t. [from fertile.] To fertilize; to make fruitful; to make fertile; to make fertile the land.

FERTIF. adj. [from fertile.] Fertile; fruitful; plenitudinous; abundantly.

FERNENCY. n.f. [fervent, Latin.]
1. Heat of mind; ardent; eagerness.

Your dinner
Did hang a fish in his hook, which he
With fervency drew up. Shakespeare.

2. Pious ardour; flame of devotion; zeal.

Heave we on all fides loft most of our first fervency towards God. Hooker, Dedication.

There must be zeal and fervency in him which propheeth for the reft they fulks and informations, which they by their joyful acclemation must refulve. Hooker.

When you pray, let it be with attention, fervency and with perseverance. Wake.

FÉRVENT. adj. [fervent, Latin; fervent, French.]
1. Hot; boiling.

The fountain
Bubbling ware did ever so lustilly wade
Ne euer would through fervent summer fade. Spenser.

From the phlegmatic humour, the proper alloy of servent blood, will flow a future quietude and serenity. Wotton.

2. Hot in temper; vehement.

They that are more fervent to dispute, be not always the most able to state the truth. Hooker.

3. Ardent in piety; warm in zeal; flaming with devotion.

This man being fervent in the spirit, taught diligently the things of the Lord. Acts, iii, 23.

Spare not, but speak the fervent angel, that his zeal
None seconded, as out of reason judged. Or fanguin and raffle. Milton's Paradise Lost.

Let all enter into the mystical points of theology be caried on with fervent petitions to God, that he would dispose their minds to direct all their acts to the promotion of a good life. South.

FÉRVENTLY. adv. [from fervent.]
1. Eagerly; vehemently;

She calleth the charge of her fervent apply
With guilty malice and instrument-tool. Dryden, ii, 3.

2. With pius ardour; with holy zeal.

Epaphras faithful you, labouring fervently for you in prayers, Col. iv, 13.

He sware not how or what he sware, so he suffer Vol. i.

well, and be the friend of Christ; nor where nor when he suffer, so he may do it frequently, fervently, and acceptably. Taylor.

FERVID. adj. [servidus, Latin.]
1. Hot; burning; boiling.

Two fervent eagles, servid. Virgil.

2. Eager; zealous.

FERVIDITY. n.f. [from servid.] Ardor of mind; zeal; piety. Servid.

As to the healing of Machus's ear, in the account of the love of God in all its acts of mercy, it was a kind of injury done to him by the servid of St. Peter, who knew not what spirit he was of. Bentley.

FERULA. n.f. [ferula, Latin.] A kind of plant with which young robbers are beaten in the hand; so named because anciently the stalks of fenem were used for this purpose.

This differ as much as the rod and fever.

Shakespeare, Coriol.

To FERULE. v.t. To chastise with the ferula.

FERILE. n.f. [servov, Latin; servere, French.]
1. Heat; warmth.

Were it an uneaasible truth that an effectual servere proceeded from this star, yet would not the fame determine the opinion. Bacon.

Lake bright Aurora, whose regal ray
Foretells the servere of ensuing day.

And warns the shepherd with his (ocks retreat.

Twenty shades of servere to the threatened heart. Haller.

Three silver drops, like morning dew,
Foretell the servere of the day.

So from one cloud soothless we way, And hallow'd by servere of the day, Pope.

2. Heat of mind; zeal.

Obscurus mutus must needs be enthralled that which all had held for the space of many ages, without praise or great merit; or in the eyes of impartial men appear sufficient to cleave them from all blame of such proceedings, it is in servere of zeal they had removed such faults. Hooker.

Highly defect hath belittled her;
Or, wing'd with servere of her love, Biet's from To her did she'd Pothamias. Shakespeare's Cymbell.

3. Ardour of piety.

There was a servere of Loyatto, in a few ages more, jewels of the greatest value in Europe, in the devotion of its princes continues in its present servere. Addison.

FESCO. n.f. [resco, Dutch; siff, Fr.]
A small wire by which those who teach to read point out the letters.

Teach him an alphabet upon his fingers, marking the points of his fingers of his left hand both on the inside to signify some letters, when any of them is pointed at by the fore finger of the right hand, or by any kind of servere. Holder.

Teach them how many passions ought to insover:
For such are small thinkers, that can never be releas'd, and since they need will judge the poet's art,
Point them with servere to each minding part. Dryd.

FÉRBS. n.f. A kind of base gaine.

Do not stiile or poor value to low,
Or care to be servile to the poor. May.

FÉRSE. n.f. [in heraldry.]

The fesse is so called of the Latin word fas, a bond or girdle, polishing the third part of the escutcheon over the middle of it; if you must call them bars, if with the field there be left odd piece, as seven or nine, then you must name the fesse, and say two bars; if equal, as for, eight, or ten, you must name the fesse, or of, nine, or eight, at the king of Hungary bears argent and purpl, barry of eight. Fess baken Blazoning.

Te FEYSTER. v.t. [fesse, in Hapsarian, a dwelling corrupted, fannes.] To rinkle; to corrupt; to grow vulgar.
wreath or garland of flowers, or leaves

As we speak of strains, or fudgelions divided, lightly

To FETCH. [v. a. To fetch; to go and bring.

W w not in use.

T He get home with thy friend, make ready to fetch;

The sooner the sooner carriage to get. To fetch.

Or he will be able the more to fetch. Brown.

A little by did him still attend, Faery Queen.

And they fetche Uther out of Egypt to Jezolau-

And him, as he did with the wand. Fy. xx. 34.

FETTER. [v. n.] [suppose from fett, French, a part or portion.] A piece. Not in use.

The bottom clear

Now laid with many a fit

Of feed, peal, create the bath'd ther there

Was no gray cloud. Dryden.

To FETCH. [v. a. preter. fetched; anciently fetched, unless it rather came from To Fetch. [pecan, peetan, Saxon.]

1. To go and bring.

They'd devis'd a mean.

How he did not attend to it, and with a clock ladder fetch her down. Shaksp.

We will take men to fetch victuals for the people.

To go to the flock, and fetch me from thence two kid

Go to the flock, and fetch me from thence two kid and the unweiling Scotch, to fetch their dooms.

Haller.

Draw forth the monsters of th' abyss profound,

Of fetch'd th' aerial egle to the ground.

Pope.

2. To derive; to draw.

On, you nobled English,

Whole blood is fetch'd from fathers of war-proof.

Shakespeare.

3. To strike at a distance.

The condition of weapons, and their improvements are the fleelions of our war, for that outstrips the danger, as it is seen in ordinance and munckets. Bacon.

4. To bring to any state by some powerful operation.

As we see their great and sudden efflux in fetch'd men again, when they knew. Bacon.

At Rome any of those arts immediately thrives, under the encouragement of the prince, and may be fetch'd up to its perfection in ten or a dozen years, which is the work of an age or two in other countries.

Addison on Italy.

5. To draw within any confinement or pro-bition.

General terms may sufficiently convey to the people what our intentions are, and yet not fetch us within the compass of the ordinance. Sanderson.

6. To produce by some kind of force.

They used, if there were secret excellence among them, would fetch it out, and give it fair opportunities to advance itself by.

Millan.

An human soul without education is like marble in the quarry; may be the want of one of its beauties will kill the skill of the polish.fetter s et the co members.

Adelson's Spellman.

7. To perform: it is applied to motion or cause.

I'll fetch a turn about the garden, playing

The poems of bard adlections; though the king

Hath charg'd you should not speak together. Shak.

And all the world's grey day nightly, I fetch my sound

Over the sound.

To come to that place they must fetch a compass three miles on the south, which hand through a wood.

Addison's History.

8. To perform with fulness or violence.

Note a wild and wanted herd,

Or race of youthful and unhandled colts,

Fretting mad bounds, bellowing and loudly bellowing.

Shakespeare.

The fox fetched a hundred and a hundred leaps at a delicious cluster of grapes. L. Lyttle.

Tell to the dearer bluee young lady who for her beauty by the small-pox, the fetches a deep fig.

Addison.

9. To reach; to arrive at; to come to.

Mean time sew our ships, and straight we fetch

The friends like; a spleenless wind so fetches.

Her wings to waft us, and to upd'rest our soul. Chapman.

If earth, indulgent of herself, fetch'd day

Traveling Ked up in their part and piece.

From the sun's beam, meet night; her other part

Still luminous by her ray. Milton's Paradise Lost.

The hare laid himself down, and took a nap; for, says he, I can fetch up the torrent when I please. Shaks.

10. To obtain as its price.

During such a flight, the silver in the coin will never fetch as much as the firmer in bullion.

Lux. On Ferreux. v. n. To move with a quick return.

Like a shifted wind unto a sill,

It makes the course of thoughts to fetch about.

Shakespeare.

FETTER. [v. n.] [from the verb.] A fetter by which any thing is indirectly formed; by which one thing fecures intermixed and intended is done; a trick; an artifice.

A curious neighbour is easy to find,

His kinsman and others are seldom behind him;

His fetch is to flatter, to get what he can;

His purpose once gotten, a pin for thee then.

Shaw's Thrown.

If it is a fetch of wit;

You laying that up which makes any fun,

As 'twere a thing a little older it 'd working.

Shaks. Hamilt.

But Siderephel, as full of tricks

As every man is of his proper.

Straight call about to over-reach

Th' unwary conqueror with a fetch. Hudibras.

With this fetch be laugh'd at the trick he had plaid him. Still.

The fox had a fetch in't;

L'Espr. From the thieving and thieves

Thou dost suspe'ts, and watches;

Queat Mat, thou seem't me to

That Alma is a mere machine. Prier.

FETCHER. [n. s.] [from fetch.] One that fetches any thing.

FETTID, adj. [fettis, Latin; fettal, Fr.] Stinking; rank; having a smell strong and offensive.

Most petrifications are of an odious small; for they smelt either fetid or mousy, Batburn.

In the most severe orders of the church of Rome, those who prate abstention, feel after it fetid hot crudities.

Plague, first or child of Nemesis divine,

Defends from Ethiopia's polli'd woods,

From Rude Cain's and with fetid held.

Thomson.

FETIDNESS, [n. s. [from fettid. The quality of fleming.

FETLOCK, n. f. [feet and lock.] A tuft of hair that grows behind the pattern joint of many horses; horses of a low price have scarce any such tuft. Farriere's Dict.

Their wounded feet.

Fettlock and lock, and with wild rage

Yeet our armed heels at their dead masters.

Shakespeare. Hen. V.

White were the fetlocks of his feet before,

And on his front a black boot. A Dryden.

FETTER, n. f. [fetter, Latin.] A link; a fetter; a strong and offensive smell.

The fletter may discover itself by sweat and human.

Brown.

When the symptoms are attended with a fetter of any kind, such as a disease will be cured by assiduous fulness, and none better than whey. Arbuth.

FETTER. n. f. It is commonly used in the plural fetters. [from feet; pettice, Saxox.] Chains for the feet; chains by which something is bound.

Dodscre unto foals is as fetters on the feet; and like manacles on the right hand. Elyf. xiv. 19.

Drawing after me the chains and fetters where

I have been tied. I have by other men's errors failed.

Pallions too fierce to be in fetters bound,

And nature fleshes him like enclosed ground, Dryd.

The wretch in double fetter bound;

Your potent mercy may release. Prior.

Pleasure arode in those very parts of his leg that forth before had been so much paint'd by the fetter.

Addison.

I thought her pride

Had broke your fetters, and afflard your freedom.

A. Philips.

Fetter strong madness in a foolish thread;

Charm ax with air, and spin with words.

That a man chide his servant because he doth not come, yet knows that the servant is chained and fetter'd, so as he cannot move? Bembam.

A chain which man to fetter man his masters.

By strike imposed, by fear obey'd. Prior.

To FETTER, v. n. [a cant word from feet.] To do dull busines; to pliy the hands without labour.

When your master is most busy in company, come in and pretend so fettar about the room; and if he chases, say thou he thought the bell.

Swift.

FETAL. n. s. [fetis, Latin.] Any animal in embrio; any thing yet in the womb; any thing unborn.

That paradoxe of Hipocrates some learned physiicians have of late revived, that the fetus requires in the womb.

Feud. n. s. [seeb, ennion, Saxox.] Quarrel; contention; opposition; war.

Though men would find such mortal fends in the tharing of their public interest. Hudibras.

In former ages it was a policy of France to extort, and cherish intollable feuds and discord in Great

Addison.

Sicilian mount.

Our guilty wars, and earth's remote regions

Lie half unpeopled by the feuds of Rome. Addison.

FEUDAL. adj. [feudalis, late Latin.] Pertainning to fees, or tenures, by which lands are held of a superior lord.

FEUDAL. n. s. A dependance; something held by tenure; a fee; a feu.

Waite, that was not always the feudal territory of England, having been governed by a prince of their own, had laws entirely strange to the laws of England.

Hale.

FEUDATORY, n. s. [from feudal.] One who holds not in chief, but by some conditional tenure from a superiour.

The duke of Parma was tempted to be true to that enterprise, by so few promise than; to behold a feudary, or beneficiary king of England, under the feignery in chief of the pope, and the protection of Rome. Bacon.

FEVER. n. s. [fever, French; ferire, Lat.] A disease in which the body is violently heated, and the pulse quickened, or in which heat and cold prevail by turns. It is sometimes continual, sometimes intermittent.

Think it thou the fever fever will go out: With
With titles blown from adulteration.

It will give place to flexure and low bending!

—Skotia, Henry V.

Duncan is in his grave;

After life’s fruitful favors he sleeps well.

—Skotia.

Should not a lingering fever be cemented to Because long in a fever to infect the soil.

—Dryden.

He had never dreamed in his life; 'till all had the fever he was then newly recovered.

—Locke.

2. Pæver, v. a. (from the noun.) To put in a fever.

The white hand of a lady fevereth.

Shake to look out.

—Skotia. Ant. and Cleop.

Her blood all fever’d, and with a furious Lewis, Shakes to her heart’s delay.

—Dryden.

Feverish, n. f. (from fever.) A flight fever; facricula.

A light feverish, or an old quartan age, is not a sufficient excuse for non appearance.

—Avic. and Sall.

Feverfew, n. f. (from fever.) A plant.

Common feverfew is the first seed in the land, and is found wild in many parts of England. Miller.

Feverish, adj. (from fever.)

1. Diseased with a fever.

To other maladies befits and odd times, and feverish nature burns in her own fire. Cresech.

When an animal that gives flesh turns feverish, that is, its jade more alkaline, the milk turns from its native genuine white to yellow.

The President of Aliment. Arbuthnot.

2. Tending to fever.

A feverish disorder disabled me.

Steele to Pope.

3. Uncertain; inconsistient; now hot, now cold.

We tossed and turn about our feverish will.

When all our soul must dance by ill-lying will;

For all the happiness mankind can gain,

Is not in pleasure, but in cell pain. Dryden.

Hot; burning.

And now four days the sun had seen our worst.

Four nights! moon beheld th’ incensate fire;

It seemed as if the stars more ditchly rode, and further from the feverish North retire. Dryden.

Feverishness, n. f. (from feverish.)

A flight disorder of the feverish kind.

Feverous, adj. (feverous, French; from fever.)

1. Troubled with a fever or ague.

Remember the feverous shake, as if the world

Were feverous, and old trembled.

—Shakespeare; Coriol.

2. Having the nature of a fever.

All feverous kinds.

Contrusions, epilepsies, fierce asthma.

—Milton.

3. Having to produce feverous diseases.

It has been noted by the ancients, that southern winds, blowing much, without rain, do cause a feverous disunion of the years; but with rain not.

—Seeal’s Naturalist.

Feverish, adj. (from feverish.) Diseased with a fever.

O Rome, thy head

It down’d in sleep, and all thy body fevev’y.

Feuellage, n. f. [French.] A bunch or row of leaves.

Of Homer’s head! I include the outline, that you

May determine whether you would have it so large,

Or reduce it so small as to make room for feuellage in heaven round the oval.

—Jesu to Pope.

Feuellemont, n. f. [French.] The colour of a faded leaf, corrupted common to pholmes.

Feukeeper, n. f. A dogkeeper; perhaps the captain of the kennel.

Few, adj. [Fero, props, Saxon; fia, Danish.]

1. Not many; not in a great number.

We are left but few of many.

So much the third of honour fires the blood;

So many would be great, for yet be good.

For who would virtue for herself regard,

Or wed without the portion of reward?

On Winter seas we few, no sailors behold,

Than few, and then few, at first in the fold.

—Dryden.

Mow have fever or more simple ideas from without,

According as the objects they converse with

Are good or evil.

—Locke.

The fever still you name, you wrong the mind.

Bond is but one, but Harpax is a fire.

—Pope.

Party is the madness of many, for the gain of a few.

—Swift.

The imagination of a poet is a thing so nice and delicate, that it is no easy matter to find our images capable of giving pleasure to one of the few, who, in any age have come up to this character.

—Churche to Pope.

2. Sometimes elliptically; not many words.

To answer both allegations at once, the very substance of that they contain is few but this.

—Hooker.

So having said, he thus to Eve in fevev.

Say, woman, what is this which thou hast done?

The firm resolve I here in few disclose.

—Pope.

Fewer, n. f. [few, French.] Combustible matter; materials for keeping fire; as firewood, coal.

If a spark of error have thus far prevailed, falling even where the wood was green, and farthest off from any inclination unto furious attempts, must not the general thoughts of the interior, whole minds are

As dry fewel, apt beforehand to tumults, foetidities, and bores?

—Hooker. Dedication.

Others may give the fewel or the fire.

But they the breath, that makes the flame, inspire.

—Dekker.

A known quantity of fewel, all kindled at once, would cause water to boil, which being lighted gradually would never be able to do.

—Bellamy Storm.

To fevel, v. a. (from the noun.) To feed with fewel.

Never, alas! the dreadful name.

That fewel is a word, going.

—Cowley.

Fewness, n. f. (from few.)

1. Paucity; smallness of number.

These, by reason of their feweness, I could not distinguish from the numbers with whom they are embodied.

—Steele to Fry.

2. Paucity of words; brevity; conciseness.

Fewer and truth, thus: truth.

—Shakespeare.

To fev. v. a. [vexed, Dutch.] To cleanse a ditch of mud.

Such mudded travel and ditches in the field,

Or better to drive in.

By fowling and eating that must upon beasts,

Commodities many the husbandman reaps. Tuffier.

Fib. m. f. [A cant word among children.]

A lie; a falsehood.

Defy his fib or fiblicity in vain.

The citizen at his dirty work again.

—Pope.

I often lie,

Since Harvey’s self has told more fibs than I. Pope.

To fer, v. a. (from the noun.) To lie; to tell lies; to speak falsely.

If you have any mark, whereby one may know when you fib, and when you speak truth, you had best tell it.

—Arbuthnot.

Fiber, m. f. (from fab.) A teller of lies.

Fible m. f. [fibre, fr. fibre, Latin.]

1. A small thread or string; the first constituting part of bodies.

Now filling stems the thirty plants receive.

And feed their fibres with reviving dew.

Pope.

2. A fibre in phylic, an animal thread, of which fibres are soft, flexible, and a little chillic; and others are either hollow, like small pipes, or unrigorous and full of little cells, as the nervous and feby fibres; others are more solid, flexible, and with a strong chillicity or spring, as the umbonnans and cardiligious fibres, and a third sort are hard and flexible, as the fibers of the bones. Some so very small as not to be easily perceived; and others so big as to be plainly seen; and most of them appear to be composed of still smaller fibres: these fibres first constitute the substance of the bones, cartilages, ligaments, membranes, nerves, veins, arteries, and muscles.

Quinci.

My heart sinks; while I hear him speak.

And every facetten’d fibre drops its hold.

Like nature tenting down the springs of life.

The name of father awes me still.

Dryden.

Fib. [from fib.] A small fibre or string.

The musciles consist of a number of fibres, and each fibre of an incredible number of little fibres bound together, and divided into little cells.

Churche’s Phil. Prive.

Fibrous, adj. [from fœreux, French; from fibre.] Composed of fibres or flamin.

The difference between bodies fibrous and bodies vitious is plain, for all wood and tow, and cotton and silk, have a great deal of fibrous. Bacon.

I saw Peters’ arms employ’d around.

A well-grown oak, to root it from the ground; and that way and that he wrenched the fibrous bands.

The trunk was like a fashful man’s hand.

The fibrous and solid parts of plants past walter’d through the intellines.

Arbuthnot in Alim.

Fibula. n. f. [Latin.]

The outer and leffter bone of the leg, much smaller than the fibula; it lies on the outside of the leg; and its upper end, which is not so high as the knee, receives the lateral knob of the upper end of the fibula into a small finus, which it has in its inner side. Its lower end is received into the small finus of the fibula, and then it extends into a large process, which forms the outer ankle.

Quinci.

Fickle. adj. [leicol, Saxon.]

1. Changeable; inconsistient; irrel胄t; wavering; unsteady; mutable; changeful; without steady adherence.

Remember this, in France amongst a fickle wavering nation.

A pave, whose easy bondr’d pride

Dwells in the fickle grace of her he follows.

—Shak.

The fickle pensmen of Mongrel head.

—Milt.

They know how fickle common lovers are;

Their arts and vows how counthfylly belie’d;

For few there are but have been once deceiv’d.

Dryden.

We in vain the fickle sex pursue,

Who change the constant lover for the new. Prior.

2. Not fixed; subject to vicillitude.

He would be both.

Us to abilit, left the adversary

Triumph, and say, fickle their state, whom God

Most favour’d.

—Milton’s Par. Lost.

Fickle m. f. [fibre, French.] Inconstancy; uncertainty; unreadiness.

Neither her great worthines, nor now, following for her, could feter his ficklehes; but, after his marriage-day, he had taken to wife that lascars of whom he complained.

—Sidney.

Beware of fraud, beware of ficklehes.

In choice and change of thy dear loved dame.

Fairly Queni.

I am a felder, and unapt to keep.

Or to excel in fortune’s ficklehes.

Skotia.

A fallibility of temporal ought to be checked, when it dispenses men to wander from one scheme of government to another, so that such a ficlehes cannot be attended with fatal consequences.

—Addison.

Whether out of ficklehes or design I can’t tell, I found that what he liked one day she disliked another.

—Addison.
FIELDFARE. n. f. [filda and fair, to wander in the fields; tarda pilaris, a bird.

Winter birds, as woodcocks and fieldfares, if they come early out of the northern countries, with us in the cold winters. Bacon.

FIELDMARSHAL. n. f. [field and marshal.] Commander of the army in the field.

FIELDMOUSE. n. f. [field and mouse; niet-dalo.] A mouse that burrows in banks, and makes her house with various apartments.

The fieldmouse builds her garner underground. Dryden.

Fieldmice are apt to gnaw their roots, and kill them in hard winters. Morton's Husbandry.

FIELDOFFICER. n. f. [field and officer.] An officer whose command in the field extends to a whole regiment: as the colonel, lieutenant-colonel, and major.

FIELDPIECE. adj. [field and piece.] Small cannon used in battles, but not in sieges. The buff plating his fieldpiece upon the hill, did from thence grievously alarm the defenders. Knickerbocker.

FIEND. n. f. [pens, prono, Saxon, a foe.] 1. An enemy; the great enemy of mankind; Satan; the devil.

Tom is followed by the foot stool. Shakespeare.

2. Any infernal being.

What now, had I a body again, I could command all that would have to do, and Haubold could not have to do with me. B. Johnson's Cat.

The hell-bound, at ungirded with flesh and blood, Purge their porks, and feed their wanton flocks. The food remounts his courier. Dryden.

Dame woman! woman! when to ill thy mind
In the hall call on no faster hand. Pope.

FIerce. adj. [for French, fere, Latin.] 1. Savage; ravenous; easily enraged.

Thou hast me as a fierce lion. Job.

2. Vehemence of rage; eager of mischief.

Definition enters in the treacherous weed, And venal daughters, fierce locust on the blood. Pope.

Tyran fierce, that unrelenting die.

With that the god, whose earthquakes rock the earths.

Fierce to Phœnæa the vast profound. Pope.

3. Violent; outrageous; vehemence.

Curst be their anger, for it was fierce; and their wrath, that was not gentle. Gen. xxxi. 7.

4. Pallionate; angry; furious.

This fierce abridgment
Has to it circumstantial branchlets, which Distinguish should be rich in. Swift. Symbolik.

A man brings his brand to his pate to force few positions whose evidence his hat never estimated. Juvenal.

5. Strong; forcible; violent with celerity.

The things, though to great, are drawn as if by winds; yet they are turned about with a very small helm.

Isa. ix. 2.

Fiercely. adv. [from fierce.] Violently; furiously.

Baleful plain, and both fides fiercely fought. Shak.

The defended forts, fiercely assailed by their enemies before, and beaten with the great ordinance behind, were in a desperate condition. Grotius.

The nose, very cold, irritates the face, and makes it burn more fiercely, as fire burnseth in furnace. Bacon.

Fierceness. n.f. [from fierce.]

1. Fercity; savageness.

The defect of heat which gives fierceness to our natures, may contribute to the roughness of our language. Swift.

2. Easeness for blood; fury.

Suddenly there came out of a wood a most enraged lion, with a fierce roar not far from him, of little let fun. Sidney.

5. Violence; outrageous passion.

His pride and brutish ferocity I abhor; But form and dignity of nature, more dryden.

Vehement; haughty force. Dryden.

FYRIFARCIAS. n. f. [In law.] A judicial writ, that lies at all times within the year and day, for him that has recovered in an action of debt or damages, to the sheriff, to command him to levy the debt, or the damages of his goods, against whom the suit was had. Copeland.

Fieriness. n. f. [from fury.]

1. Hot qualities; heat; acrimony.

The athen's, by their heat, their ferocity, and their dryness, belong to the element of earth. Boyle.

2. Heat of temper; intellectual ardour.

The Italians, notwithstanding these natural feel- ments of temper, affect always to appear sober and sedate. Addison.

FYR. adj. [from fire.]

1. Conflagration of fire.

Scarcely had Phoebus in the glorious east Yet harden'd his fierce footeed team, Ne rear'd above the earth his flaming chariot, When the last deadly fmoke aloft did seem. Dryden.

I know, thou'st rather Follow thine enemy in a fiery gulf Than Saturday in a bower.

2. Hot like fire.

Hath thy fiery heart to parch'd thy entrails, That not a tear can fall for Rutland's death? Shak.

3. Vehemence; ardor; active.

Thy fiery expedition be my wings, Jove's Mercury, and my号r in the skies. Shak.

I drew this gallant head of was,
And mod'd these fiery spirits from the world,
To outlook conquest, and to win renown
Even in the jaws of danger and of death. Shakespeare.

4. Passionate; outrageous; eagerly provoked.

You know the fiery quality of the duke,
How unmoveable, and fast is he
In his own course. Shak.

5. Firebrained; fierce.

Thus, as I said, the duke, great Bolingbroke,
Mounted upon a hot and fiery steed. Which his aspiring rider seem'd to know,
Well drest, but young, and strong in his career. Shak.

Through Elia, and the Grecian ushers his fire.
The audacious wretch four fiery couriers drew.

6. Heated by fire.

The fassad which was made fiery doth not only cut, By reason of the sharpness which itself had, but also burns by means of that heat which it hath from fire. Hooker.

See I from the brake the whirling phénix springs,
And mounts a saluting on triumphant wings;
Said he is hot: he feels the fiery wound,
Flutter's in blood, and panting beats the ground. Pope.

FIRE. m. f. [für, French.] A pipe blown to the draught; military wind musick.

Farewell the plumed troopers, and the big war
That makes ambition virtue: oh fairewell!

Farewell the thundering drums, the ear-piercing sife.

Shakespeare.

Thus the gay victor, with fbrth Garland crown'd
There's with the sacr'd syr's cuirass'd Cato;
Through gazing crowds in solemn state proceeds.

Philipps.

FIT. adj. [pry-, cyme, Saxon.] Five and ten.

I have dreamed and slept above some thirty years and more. Shak. Tempest of the Sibyl.

FITFUL. adj. [pry-Go, Saxon.] The ordinal of fifteen; the fifth after the tenth; containing one part in fifteen.

A fitting part of either to be given, that will not be recovered by any great proportion of fire to draw up the left. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

London froth but brefs himself to parliament, although it bear the fiftieth part of the charge of the whole nation in all publick taxes and leases. Grammat. Bills of Mortality.

FITTH. adj. [from fiscal.] 1. The ordinal of five; the next to the fourth.

With smiling face you presently move,
In your fiscal seat, and rule the realm of joy. Dryd.

And, as if you were, the last were ever on me.

Dryd. Ode on the First May. 1743.

2. All the ordinals are taken elliptically for the part which they express; a fifth part; a third, a third part.

The publick shall have lost four fifths of its annual income for ever. Swift.

FITTHLY. adv. [from fiscal.] In the fifth place.

Fittily, living creatures have a more exact figure than plants. Bacon's Nat. Hist.

FITTHUM. adj. [pry-Go, Saxon.] The ordinal of fifteen.

If this medium be rarer within the sun's body than at its surface, and rather there than at the hundredth part an inch from its body, and rather there than at the end of Saturn, I fear that reason why the increase of density should stop anywhere. Newton's Opticks.

FIY. adj. [pry-, cyme, Saxon.] Five tens.

A winder's house; a house between two.

Might take off fifty looking in her eye. Shak. Judas ordains captives over thousands, hundreds, fifties, etc., five.

In the Hebrew there is a particle containing but of one letter, of which they reckoned up above fifty several significations. Locke.

FIG. n. f. fisc, Latin; fig, Spanish; fique, French.

1. A tree that bears figs.

The characters are: the flowers, which are always included in the middle of the fruit, confit of the leaf, and are male and female in the same fruit: the male are situated towards the top of the fruit; and the female, growing near the stalk, are succeeded by small hard reds: the entire fruit is, for the most part, yellow or globular, or of an oval shape, is edible, and of a sweet taste. Miller.

Fulcon on its crown a fig's green branch rises, And shoot a lesly forest to the fites. Pope's Odyssey.

Or lead me to just rewards, Embowling red'tte of the Indian fig. Thomson.

2. A luculent soft fruit; the fruit of the figtree.

It maketh fig better, if a figtree, when it begins to put forth leaves, have its top cut off. Bacon's Natural History.

Figs are great followers of acrimony. Aubin.

To Fig. n. f. a. [See FIGO.]
FIG.

FIG. NAG. n. [culex farria]. An insect of the fly kind.

FIG. FIGHT. n. [preter. figeere; part. pass.figeret, pechran, Saxon.]
1. To contend in battle; to war; to make war; to battle; to contend in arms. It is used both of armies and single combats.

2. To contend; to duel; to contend in single fight.

3. To fight; to a duel; to contend in single fight.

4. To fight again.

5. To fight again.

6. To fight again.

7. To fight again.

8. To fight again.

FIGHTER. n. s. [from figet]. Warrour; duelist.

1. Qualified for war; fit for battle.

2. Occupied by war; being the scene of war.

In fighting fields as far the spear I throw
At first the arrow from the well-drawn bow.

FIC'NT, n. s. [figumentum, Latin.]
An invention; a fiction; a dream. Upon the line grounds was raised the figment of Bruce's, a place dwelling in a city called Alcameth, the antics of these folk attracted him by hundreds. Brown.

Fictional. adj. [from figeret].

Capable of being brought to certain form, and retained in it. Thus lead is figurable, but not water.

FIC'NATELY, adv. [from figumentum].

The quality of being capable of a certain and stable form.

FIGURE. n. s. [figeret, Latin.]

1. Represented by delineation.

Incongruities have been committed by geographers in the figural resembances of several regions. Brown.

2. FIGURAL Number. Such numbers as do or may represent some geometrical figure, in relation to which they are always considered, and are either linear, superficial, or solid. Harris.

3. FIGURATIVE. adj. [figerat, Latin.]

1. Of a certain and determinate form.

Plants are all figurative and determinate, which inanimate bodies are not; for how far the spirit is able to spread and continue itself, so far the shape or figure, and then is determined. Bacon.

2. Referring any thing of a determinate form as figurous bodies retaining the forms of their influence.

The best figures may be or not be in body, in its uniformity continued.

3. SHAPE; FORM;semblance.

He hath borne himself beyond the promise of his age, doing in the figure of a lamb the feats of a lion.

4. Perfom; external form; appearance graceful or inelgant, mean, or grand.

The blue German shall the Tigris drink, End I, forking gratitude and truth, Forget the figure of that godly man. Dryden.

I was charmed with the gracefulness of his figure and delivery, as well as with his discourse. Addison.

She gives credit at first sight to the choice of either. Addison's Spectator.

5. Distinguished appearance; eminence; remarkable character.

While fortune favour'd, while his arms support
The cause, and ruled the councils of the court, I made some figure there; nor was my name Obscure, not I without my share of fame. Dryden.

The speech, I believe, was not so much designed by the knight to inform the court, as to give him a figure in my eye, and keep up his credit in the country. Addison's Spectator.

A woman shall be explained that makes a figure either as a mad, a wise, or a widow. Addison's Spectator.

Who or no they have done well to let you up for making another kind of figure, time will witness.

6. Magnificence; splendour.

If it be his chief end in it to grow rich, that he may live in figure and indulgence, and be able to retire from business to idleness and luxury, his head, as his hands, shall be as a crown of laurels. Locke.

If a statue; an image; something formed in resemblance of somewhat else.

Several statues, which seemed at a distance of the
7. Representations in painting; portraits exhibited in colours.
   In the principal figures of a picture the painter is to employ the fluxes of his art; for in them consists the beauty of the subject.
   "Dryden.
   My favourite books and pictures fell;
   Kindly throw in a little figure,
   And fix the price upon the bigger.

8. Arrangement; differentiation; modification.
The figure of a syllabolon is the proper disposition of the middle term with the parts of the question.
   "Watts's Logick.

9. A character denoting a number.
   Hearts, tongues, figures, tresses, bars, bars, poems cannot
   Think, speak, call, write, sing, number.
   His is one of the best in his country's Art, and he delights to relate his works.
   "Dryden.

10. The horoscope; the diagram of the aspects of the astrological houses.
   We do not know what is brought to pass under the guidance of fortune-telling; the works by charms, by spells, by the figures, and darkness beyond our elements.
   "Swinburne's Sonnets.

---

FIL

1. To diversify; to variegate with adventitious forms or matter.
   But this effusion of such many drops
   Savour minute drops, and make me more amaz'd
   Than had I felt the rain of Figur'd quite o'er with burning meteors.
   Shakspeare.

2. To represent by a typical or figurative resemblance.
   When sacraments are said to be vital signs of invisible grace, but the outward form is the decay of a whole age. "Bacon.
   As in accounts every figure and figures pass for real things, so in human affairs words pass for things themselves.
   "Swift's Sterne's.

---

FILM.

n. f. [This is derived by Junius and Skinner from the long heads or nuts, as corrupted from the Latin full beard or full of head. It probably had its origin in many other fruits, from some one that introduced or cultivated it;
   and is therefore corrupted from Fulbert or Filbert,
   the name of him who brought it hither.]

4. A fine hazel nut with a thin shell.
   In August comes fruit of all sorts; as plums, peaches, and pears, both the filberts, and hickories, are the main productions of all

5. To stuff a brain, such as it is indeed!
   On what else doth your worm of fancy feed?
   Yet in a filbert I have often known;
   Maggots swarms, when all the kernel's gone. "Dryden.
   There is also another kind, called the filbert of Constantinople, the leaves and fruit of which are bigger than either of the former: the beet are those of a

To FILCH. n. a. [A word of uncertain etymology. The French word filer, from which we derive it, is of very late production, and therefore cannot be its original.]

6. To steal; to filch; to pilfer;
   to pilfer; to pilage; to rob; to take by robbery.
   It is usually spoken of petty thefts.
   He shall find his wealth wonderfully enlarged by keeping his cattle in inclosures, where they shall always be safe being, that none are capable of stealing and robbing. "Spenser.

7. The champion robbers by night,
   And prowling and filching by day. "Tennyson's Idylls.
   Who steals my purse, steals trash; 'tis something:
   'nothing':
   'I was mine,' 'tis his, and has been slave to thousand.
   But he that filches from me go my good name,
   Robs me of that which not enriches
   Aim'd makes me poor indeed. "Shakespeare's Othello.
   He could diftemper cities, and forge every beed did not all sufficiently:
   Some like horse,
   some like filching wolves, others avaricious;
   "Burton on Melancholy.
   What made thee venture to betray "Hudson.
   And filch the lad's heart away. "Tennyson.
   The pilfer was formerly a hustandman, that secretly covered his goods, and filched away his master's goods. "Dryden.
   "E'en would they filch that little food away;
   While unreturn'd th'blest happy glutons prey.
   "Dryden.
   To filch the who for, alarm'd by fear.
   Who late is filch of the turkey's callow
   "Gay.

FILCHER. n. f. [From filch.]

8. A thief; a petty robber.

FILE. n. s. [File; French; filium; a thread.
   Latin.]

1. A thread. Not used.
   But let me assure the file of my narration, which this object of books, shall agreeable to my course of life, his little interrupted.
   "Hotton.

2. A line on which, papers are flung to keep them in order.
   All records, wherein there was any mention of the file-counter, should be cancelled and taken off the file.
   The petition being thus prepared, do you continually set apart an hour in a day to peruse those,
   and through them into several files, according to the subject matters.
   "Th' apothecary's train is wholly blind;
   From file to file doth the silks of their properties take;
   And may be thus letter'd: 'Be full the fight'
   "Dryden.

3. A catalogue; roll; scrip.
   Our present audiences upon the file
   To live and twenty thousand men of choice. "Shakspeare.

   Distinguish the value of the file, the flow, the fabulous. "Shakspeare.

5. A line of soldiers ranged one behind another.
   Those gods, eyes,
   That oer the files and order of the war
FIL

Have glow'd like plated Mars, row bend, now luan
Upon a rawy frost. Shakespeare's "Aut. Cleop."
So siring, on he led his radiant file.

Darting the moon.

5. [Scol. Saxon; after. Dutch.] An infrument to rub down prominences.

The rough or coarse-toothed file, if it be large, is called a rubber, and is to take off the unevenness of your work which the hammer made in the forging;
the bastard-toothed file is to take out of your work
the deep courts; or file-breaks, the rough-toothed file, taken out the rust of file breaks; or file-breaks, the bastard file made; and the smooth file is to take out these courts, or file-breaks, that the tine file may rub.

A file for the mastsacks and for the coulers.

1. Sam. xiv. 27.

The millers and armourers on paigeys ride.

Fils in their hands, and hammerers at their side.

Dyedorn.

FULLCUTTER, m. f. [file and cutter.] A maker of files.

- God-beast is a tough sort of steel; fullcutters use it to make their chisels, with which they cut their files. Euzon.

To FILE, n. v. [from sim., a thread.]
1. To fit upon or add a thread. Whence to file a bill is to offer it, in its order, to the notice of the judge.

From the day that him bill was filed he began to collect reports. Arbuth. and Pope's "Mari. Scot."

2. [From scot., Saxon.] To cut with a file.

They which would file away most from the large and make them small, offer in more or fewer terms knowledge little left. Hooker.

Let men be careful how they attempt to cure each bruise by filing or cutting off the head of such a rough. South.

3. To smooth; to polish.

His humour is lofty, his discourse peremptory, his tongue fond, and his eye ambitious. Shakespeare.

4. [From file, Saxon.] To foul; to fill;
to pollute. This sense is retained in Scotland.

For Banque's fuisse have I fill'd my mind, For them the grievous Duncan I have murder'd.
Shakespeare.

His words divinely sublimed.

Chapman's "Miles." All file'd and mang'd.

Ye FILE, n. v. [from the noun.] To march in a file, not abreast, but one behind
another.

All ran down without order or ceremony, till we drew up in good order, and fill'd off. Taylor.

Did all the greater atoms at the cell of chance fill'd all to form the poiseful ball,
And server'd him in order fill'd? Blackmore.

FILEMOT, m. f. [corrupted from jewelle motes, a dead leaf, French.] A brown or yellow-brown colour.

The colours you ought to wait for are blue or filsants, turn'd up with red. Swift.

FILER, m. f. [file.] One who files;
who uses the file in cutting metals.

FILIA, adv. A filial; French; filiaus; filiats.

Latin.

1. Pertaining to a son; befitting a son.

My mischievous proceeding may be the glory of his fillial pietie, the only reward now left for to great a man very small a glory.

From imposition of strict laws, to free
Acceptance of large grace; from servile fear
To fill'd; works of law, to works of faith. Milton.

The ingenious, by tire is the lightest image brought
Of his own fillial love, a fably pleasing thought.

Dryden.

2. Bearing the character or relation of a son.

And thus the fillial goadeth answ'ring spoke.

Milton.

Where the old myrtle her good influence sheds,
Springs of like leaf e'ret their fillial heads.

4. To grow full.

And when the parent role decay and dies,
With a remembering face the daughter buds arise.

Prior.

FILLATION, n. f. [from fill., Latin.] The relation of a son to a father; correlative to paternity.

The relation of paternity and fillation, between the first and third person, and the relation between the sacred persons of the Trinity, and the denomination thereof, must needs be eternal, because the terms of relation between whom the name of Fillation,
"Hat's Origin of Mankind."

FILING, n. f. [without a singular; from file.] Fragments rubbed off by the action of the file.

The filings of iron infused in vinegar, will, with a decantation of galls, make good ink, without any

The chippings and filings of those jewels are of more value than the whole mass of ordinary authors.

Euson.

To FILL, n. v. [pylian, Saxon.]
1. To store 'til no more can be admitted.

Fill the waterspout with water, and they fill'd them up to the brim. John, ii. 9.

In whom fill.

Infinite, not vacant space. Milton.

The celestial quires, when orient light
Exhaling from the darkness they beheld.
Birth-day of Heaven and Earth; with joy and flioud
The hollow universal orb they fill'd. Milton.

2. To store abundantly.

Be fruitful, multiply, and in the fear
And halcyon treams the waters fill.

Milton.

3. To satiate; to content.

He with his confounded eye
The glory of the world, and was fill'd
With admiration and deep mue to bear. Milton.

Nothing but the supreme and absolute Infinite can adequately fill and superabundantly satisfy the infinite desires of the human heart. Clarend.

4. To glut; to forfeit.

Thus art going to lord Timon's feast.

You to sea meet fill all knaves, and wine heat feels.

Shakespeare.

To FILL out. To pour out liquor for contenid.

To extend by something contained.

Thou only speake of him
Whom pomp and greatness first did love about.
That he wants majesty to fill them say.

Dryden.

7. To fill up. [Up is often used without much addition to the force of the verb.]

To make full.

Hope beaks from goal to goal,
And opens fill, and opens on his foe;
Filleth lengthen'd on to faith, and unconfin'd,
It pours the blists that fill's all the mind. Pope.

7. To fill up. To supply.

When the several trades and professions are supposed you will find most of those that are proper for war absolutely necessary for filling up the laborious part of life, and carrying on the undertow of the nations.)

9. To fill up. To occupy by bulk.

There would not be altogether so much water required for the land as for the sea, to raise them to an equal height; because mountains and fill's fill'd up part of that space upon the lands, and so make let's water requisite. Burnet.

10. To fill up. To engage; to employ.

Is it your law ride?
As far as will fill up the time
When this and soofer. Shakespeare's "Macbeth."

To fill, n. v.

1. To give to drink.

In the cup which the hath fill'd, fill to her double,
Rev. xviii.

We fill to th' general joy of the whole table,
And to our dear friend Banque, whom we merit.

Shakespeare.

2. To grow full.

3. To glut; to satiate.

Things that are meat and fat are most filling,
and do avile and hang more about the mouth of the stomach, and go not down to frendly.

Sanc.

4. To fill up. To grow full.

Neither the Palus Medius nor the Euxine, nor any other seas, fill'd up, or by degrees grew shallower.

Woodward.

The first stage of healing, or the discharge of matter, is by forgers called diggers, the second, or the filling up with flesh, inflammation; and the last,
or skinning over, cicatrisation.

Sharp.

FILL, n. f. [from the verb.]

1. As much as may produce complete satisfaction. Her neck fab and breaths were ever open bare,
That eye thereof her wives may suck their fill.

Fairy Quain.

But thus fainstail'd before the captive,
Who, fourth heaven pleased, had his fill of war.

Fairsax.

When ye were thirsty, did not cleave the rock,
And waters flowed out to your fill? 2 Tid. v. 32.

Mean while enjoy
Your fill, what happiness this happy state
Can comprehend, incapable of more.

Milton.

Among the true men, who through the snows
Tempting thrice, to pluck and eat my fill,
I spair not.

Milton's "Paradise Lost."

Which made me gently first remove your tears,
That to you might have room to entertain
Your fill of joy.

Denham's "Sopy."

Your barbarity may have its fill of destruction.

Pope.

2. [More properly till.] The place between the shafts of a carriage.

This mule being put in the fill of a cart, run away with the cart and timber, "Martineau's Hist."

FILLER, m. f. [from fill.]

1. Any thing that fills up room without use.

As a mee siller, to swamp a vacancy in the hemtarm, and connect the profuse to the work of Virgil.

Dried. Ed. Deist. A mixture of tender gentle thought s and fa table expreffions of forced and inextricable conicents and of needful fillers up to the reft.

Pope.

2. One whose employment is to fill vellums of carriage.

They have six diggers to four fillers, so as to keep three fillers always able to supply the fourth on Sunday.

Pope.

FILLIT, n. f. [Flet, French; fillat, Lat.]

1. A band tied round the Lead or other part.

His baileful breath inhaling, as he glides,
Now like a chain around her neck he rides;
Now like a siller, bent beforehand,
And with his circular volumes folds her hairs.

Driedon's "Mem."

She scorn'd the praiie of beauty, and the cure,
A ho=d her waddy, a siller binds her hair.

Pope.

The fleasy part of the thighe: applied commonly to veiul.

The youth approach'd the fire, and it burn'd,
On five sharp branches: rank, the roast they turn'd. The fiull'flay fill'd up the fire, and fill'd the air.

They cut in legs and fillers for the fre.

Pope.

In the flesh of fcounts, and other carcases.

The siller's flesh: thus, by chymick art
United close in every part,
In fillers sold, or cut in pieces,
Appeard to one consistence of species.

Swift.

[In architecture.] A little member which appears in the ornaments and mouldings, and is otherwise called fillet.

Harriss.

Pillars and their fillers of siller.

Exodus.

To fill it, n. v. [from the noun.]

1. To bind with a bandage or filler.

To adom with an adorn.

He made books for the fillers, and overlaid their chapters, and fillited them.

Ex. xxxiii. 25.
FIN

To filtr. v. a. [A word, fave Skinner, formed from the found. This resemblance I am not able to discover, and therefore am inclined to imagine it corrupted from fill up, by some combination of ideas which cannot be recovered.] To strike with the nail of the finger by a film or castaneous impression.

1. A young horse or mare. Not now used.

2. A mare young; opposed to a colt or young horse.

I left to Ossorn, and make him smile,
When a fat and bountiful horse beguil,
Nothing in likekens of a fable soot. Shakespeare,
As I dive my hand in my ewer, to my fined, to one of those fables which are described in the old poets.

Addison's Spectator.

FILM. m. [Fimble, Saxon.] A thin pellicle or skin.

While the silver needle did work upon the fight of his eye, to remove the film of the crystal, he never saw any thing more clear or perfect than that which he saw before.

Michael from Adam's eyes the film removed.

Which that fruit that promises it clearer sight had bred.

Millon's Parable, Lofft.

And so held up by the films of the bladder, and so kept from getting or offending it, Grannt.

There is not one literal so ridiculous as to pretend to solve the phenomena of sight, fancy, or cognition, by those fleeting superficial films of bodies. Berkeley's Sem. Rept.

He from thick films tall purge the visual ray,
And deep light sublimate eyeballs pour the day. Pope.

To FILM. v. a. [from the noun.] To cover: with a pellicle or thin skin.

It will but skin and film the ulcerous place,
Whiles rank corruption, mining all within, covet the carcass. Prior's Hurly-Burly.

FILMY. adj. [from film.] Composed of thin membranes or pellicles.

So the false spider, when her acts are speedall,
Deep ambush'd in her victim den does lie; And feels, far off, the trembling of her thread.

